This mobile workshop will highlight the work of private agricultural entrepreneurs and State programs and investments that are helping to transform Hawai'i's agricultural landscape and promote resilience for agriculture and Hawai'i's people for the future. The workshop may include visits to a Mililani agrivoltaic park, commercial composting operation, agricultural value-added product development center, and the Kunia Village and Agri-business Complex.

The Future for Agribusiness Development-Central O'ahu Ag Tour
9:00AM - 2:00PM

Complete Streets Bike Tour
9:00AM - 12:00PM

City and County of Honolulu's Department of Transit Services and Hawai'i Bicycling League will lead a tour to Downtown / Chinatown to see the newly added bike lanes and explore complete streets projects. Come learn about the planning, design, and construction of these projects in our urban core.

He'eia NEERS Walking Tour & Fishpond Boat Tour
9:00AM - 1:00PM

Highlight Hawai'i Institute for Marine Biology's (HIMB) "Mālama 'Āina Plan for Moku o Lo'e". It is the first planning document in the State that sets forth a plan for how an entire island will adapt to 6' sea level rise, and it is written within a framework on Native Hawaiian stewardship. Tour will start at the He'eia Pier and will include an ocean tour of the area along HIMB site at Coconut Island. Will also include a tour of the two He'eia NEERS sites in Kāne'ohe.

Exploring Deconstruction & Re-use - Re-use Hawai'i Tour & Talk Story
9:00AM - 1:00PM

This Mobile Tour and Talk Story will visit Re-use Hawai'i's newly relocated redistribution center in Salt Lake.

Reusing building materials from deconstruction is a powerful strategy for advancing resilience—environmentally, economically, and socially—especially in island contexts like Hawai'i. Together, these benefits are positioning building material reuse not just as a waste-reduction tactic, but as a cornerstone of regenerative, community-centered resilience.

Punalu'u Stream Restoration & Flood Mitigation Project
9:00AM - 3:00PM

In 2023, Kamehameha Schools completed restoration of the lower portion of the Punalu'u Stream to enhance ecological and hydrologic function of the stream, but also to help with flood control and sediment retention. This will have a long-lasting impact on the generation of farmers, kama'āina, and keiki that live, work, and play in the ahupua'a. The key takeaway from this tour will be 1) community consultation and engagement in project design and implementation 2) integrated resource management planning to achieve multiple benefits 3) place-based incorporation of traditional ecological knowledge in planning.

Did you know that the beaches of Waikīkī are the result of past coastal engineering efforts? This "highly engineered urban shoreline" is the result of a variety of activities such as beach nourishment, groins, seawalls, and other coastal engineering projects. Today, this vital economic driver of the state's visitor industry is being threatened by climate change. This collaborative walking tour between the State and the City and County of Honolulu will explore the rich history of Waikīkī beaches while also discussing current management and future proposed projects. We will visit various locations from the Queen's Beach seawall to the Fort DeRussy groin and discuss their histories, current situations, and future proposed projects.
