LEE: Now, let us hypothesize a situation where the program of the legislature may conflict with the program of the governor. Is it your opinion that in the enforcement of that program of the governor's that the attorney general must render his opinions in the light of that program of the governor as compared with the program of the legislature?

A. TRASK: Well, I cannot conceive of a situation where a program of the governor can be carried through without the kokua of the legislature. In other words, as the delegate -- as President King has indicated, the governor's or the President's program cannot be carried out without the legislative kokua. That is the answer to that.

KING: Will Delegate Lee yield for a question?

LEE: I certainly will yield.

KING: Isn't it a fact that within the recent past several years the legislature has invariably employed very high class counsel in addition to the attorney general to help them draft legislation and advise them as to the legal angles involved?

LEE: That is correct, Mr. King. The duties of the legal counsel to the respective houses is to advise the respective houses as to the constitutionality of any legislation, as well as to draft bills for the respective legislators. On the other hand there, they might well -- the advice of the counsel for the respective houses might well conflict with the opinions of the attorney general, as we all know from this Convention that lawyers are quite often in disagreement as to the constitutionality of certain laws as well as to their respective policies.

It seems to me we must weigh the final question as to where the responsibility of the attorney general lies. That is where I have been trying to reach a conclusion in my own mind and it seems to me that not only from the statute but from the inherent duties of the office of the attorney general, it goes beyond his responsibility to the governor, his responsibility to the legislature and to the people. That is the thing that confronts me at this particular moment; and as I say, I have an open mind on this matter and I can see where there would be good reason for either system.

CROSSLEY: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question of the last speaker? Not only is it -- isn't it true that the legislature has employed counsel, their own, but isn't it incumbent upon the governor to file certain administrative bills, and doesn't he have to look to the attorney general to do that job for him? That's part one of the question. Part two of the question would go to the fact that the governor is responsible for the execution of the laws of the state and the governor doesn't go into court, the attorney general goes into the court as the agent of the governor, and, therefore, has a direct responsibility to the executive branch. Aren't both of those questions true?

LEE: I believe the speaker has just answered his own questions.

FUKUSHIMA: After listening to my fellow colleague from the fifth district, all I can say about his remarks here this morning is that the attorney general should be the tool of the governor and nothing else.

I'd like to supplement Delegate Lee's remarks this morning so that the delegates will have in their minds the nature of the duties of the attorney general besides those that were mentioned by Delegate Lee. Among other duties that were mentioned, the attorney general possesses supervisory powers over the estates of lunatics; he institutes disbarment proceedings against attorneys; he institutes quo warranto proceedings against public officers and corporations; he exercises the right of enforcing public charities; he institutes equitable proceedings for the abatement of public nuisances; and also intervenes in divorce proceedings where collusion is suspected. These are the many powers -- in fact there are many other inherent powers reposed in the attorney general. The function as being an advisor to the governor is one of the minor items as far as the attorney general is concerned. I'd like the delegates to bear that in mind when the delegates here speak of a strong executive department.

H. RICE: It seems to me that the outer islands would be best served by an appointed attorney general. The attorney general, if he was to run for office don't need to bother with the other islands at all. You'd have 70 per cent of the votes here. It seems to me that the way it's worked at the present time with the governor appointing the attorney general and the Senate confirming him, he looks to the interests of the other outer islands just as much as he does to Oahu. And I think the scheme of appointing the attorney general is to the benefit of the outer islands. And the fellow that we would want to elect is the governor, he's the boss and he should appoint the attorney general with the advice and consent of the Senate, and therefore, I'm against the election of the attorney general.

DOWSON: If a person seeks legal counsel he can choose his own attorney. The attorney general is the legal advisor of the governor and the department heads of the State. I believe the governor should be given the freedom to choose his attorney general for his legal advisor.

LAI: I am speaking in favor of the motion. I am speaking for myself as a lay citizen and speaking for thousands of citizens in this Territory who might have the same idea as I do. When we go to the polls to elect our public officials, we elect our legislators and say to them, "Get in there and set up the policies that are for the benefit of all of us." When we elect our executive officials we say to them, "Get in there and see that the policies are carried out." Now, it would be a foolish thing for me to say, "You, too, get in there and appoint your own attorney general and watch yourself." And I think as a citizen and as a voter we are all in favor of voting for an attorney general. We say to the attorney general, "You get in there and watch and see that the policies are carried out." The attorney general should be independent and free to report to the people of any wrong doing on any part of the government. He will serve as a check and balance in the three departments.

The opponents have claimed that a strong executive would be the thing for us to have here, and by appointing an attorney general we would have a strong executive. I don't think I agree to that because by having an elective attorney general, he would serve -- he would keep the executive efficiency in the highest level because of possible criticism from the attorney general. And by having appointive -- more appointive officials in the executive department, the governor can create more patronage jobs, appoint people that are not capable of filling the position.

Now the opponents also claim that by electing the attorney general you would create competition within the executive department. I think that's a very healthy position, because in manufacturing of merchandise if you have competition, you get better products; and in merchandising if you have competition, you get lower prices; and in sports if you have more teams, and better teams, that will give you better games. And the same thing with government departments. If you have more elective officials you get better running of government.

I don't agree with Mr. Rice, saying that 70 per cent of Honolulu votes here will elect the attorney general. I think you need more than that. When you have candidates, say three or four candidates, you certainly have to depend on votes from outside islands.

By having the election of the attorney general, you will have more aggressive and younger candidates to run. By appointment, you will note that the governor has a tendency to appoint people who are older and more conservative. And I think in the position of the attorney general you want some body with a lot of fire, and that's what we want. We want some younger and more aggressive element in the department.

By election of more of our public officials, I think we'll create more interest in our executive department by the people. Right now our governor and secretary of Hawaii is appointed by the President of the United States; naturally the people here would not have as much interest as we would if we have our governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general elected by the people.

NIELSEN: I want to speak in favor of the amendment because I have had the experience of serving in the last two sessions of the legislature, and I'm sorry there's not more people here that had that experience.

Now you take this loitering law. That's just one instance and I can name several. There was no question the attorney general agreed with the governor and also with the majority of the two houses. When the question was put to him directly, "Will this be constitutional?" he said, "Yes, it will be." The Supreme Court just two or three weeks ago ruled that it was unconstitutional. Now, there is no question but it was subservience. I feel that if we elect our attorney general then he will represent the people. I'm going to continue to feel that we should elect more officials, and possibly when we get down to dog catcher, we may elect one.

MAU: I can't help but refer to a statement made by the delegate from the fourth district when he was outlining the duties of the attorney general. He said that even here so many of the lawyers were in disagreement on so many questions. I would like to remark that that is one of the reasons why we have traveled at a snail's pace, because of so many disagreements and because each of the lawyers has attempted to impress upon the Convention his own viewpoint in the matter.

On this question, I believe that two philosophies of government are involved. On the one hand, the philosophy of Alexander Hamilton. He believed that government should be run by the educated people, by the intelligentia. He also believed that even as to the electorate, only those who owned property should vote. He felt it was dangerous to give any powers at all to the people. On the other hand, Jefferson believed that the government belonged to the people, that the people should have more to say in who should run and how their government should be run. I recall the other day that our distinguished delegate from the fourth district, a former attorney general, Delegate Anthony, remarked that Jefferson believed that every so often there should be a revolution in the country so that there'd be progress. I'm surprised that nobody has dubbed him a "Red" for that statement. But that is true. That was Jefferson's feelings. He felt that every so often we should search our souls and see where we're going because only through that can you have progress.

I imagine that the same argument will be made this morning as was made in prior sessions when we debated the question of election of the judiciary and of the post auditor, so he was called, and that argument is this. We are still giving the people the right to run the government because we permit the people to elect the governor, and the governor, being the representative of the people, will select all the boards and the commissions. He will also select his own attorney general. So that to a certain extent that argument is true, that the people still have a say, but only indirectly. Why should we have direct government by the people? Why should we have the people -- give the people the right to elect those who shall run their government for them, a direct say by the ballot box? I see no objection to that. If there are two conflicting philosophies in government, I certainly wouldn't follow Alexander Hamilton. Jefferson is the man even today, the man of the hour for democracy. And I ask that all those who believe in popular government, in democratic government, give thought to these things that I have mentioned.

TAVARES: I will try to be brief. I want to say this in my last talk, I hope, on this matter. I have held every job in that attorney general's office from the lowest to the highest, over a period with some spaces in between from 1927 to date. I have worked under four or five attorneys general and under four governors, and it is my opinion that the system of appointment has not prevented the attorneys general and their deputies from doing their duty when they were asked by the governor whether they could or could not do a thing. If you will look at the opinions of the attorneys general, you will find them replete with opinions that the governor can't do this or some officer can't do that.

One of my first jobs, and I was hardly dry behind the ears as the lowest deputy in that office, was to tell Governor Farrington—and he was very angry at me for doing it—that he couldn't veto a part of an item of an appropriation bill, and I had to sit there for fifteen minutes and have him bawl me out for telling him he couldn't do it, but we stuck to it because that was the law.

My opinion is that if you will look around and ask your attorneys when they start in what job they'd like to hold in this Territory best, they want to hold a deputy-ship in the attorney general's office. Why? Because the prestige of that office, as it has been administered over the last fifty years, is high enough so that they want to be -- they want the prestige of having been a deputy. And I say to you, if you will look at the list of your supreme court justices and other lawyers today, you will find that they are among many of the leading lawyers of today, the men who were in that office, all the way from Harry Irwin in Hilo down to other people here. I say the system of appointment has produced very fine lawyers and that their opinions and the advice they have given the governor has been, in my opinion, outstanding.

I feel that there has been very little of this weakness that people talk about they fear from because the governor might appoint the attorney general. I feel that those weaknesses will be just as great, if not greater, from an elective attorney general. What is an elective attorney general going to do when a whole lot of cohorts out there have lent him money or put up money for his campaign and then they get into trouble and the come and ask him, "Now look, Joe, I gave you a thousand dollars for your campaign, how about letting me off." The instances are even greater against his doing his duty where he has to run for election. And suppose just before election when he has to run again, there is presented a case which could be sensational, but he knows in his heart that there's nothing to it. Isn't he going to be tempted to bring a suit for the sensation to get himself elected? The emotional conflicts which are raised by the elective system are great enough to offset all of the disadvantages that I have heard against the appointive system.

LARSEN: I would just like to keep the record straight. I've heard constantly this idea that if you believe in the appointive system, you don't believe in popular government. It seems to me we should straighten it to the fact. The appointive system gives people more justice because responsibility is fixed and when something goes wrong, the people know who is to blame. If the governor can blame the attorney general or the attorney general blame the governor, it seems to me they have less representative government. It seems to me we've all of us shown we're interested in the people, but some of us believe that the people will get better service by the appointive system than the elective system. And it seems to me that's the problem we've got, and I'm sure we have all of us thought about it for several months, and I'd just like to gently suggest to the orators the old adage, "After the first five minutes, no opinion is changed."

CHAIRMAN: If there's no question, we'll vote on the amendment.

FUKUSHIMA: I'd like to correct a statement just made by the delegate from the fourth district, saying that if an attorney general runs for an election he may be obligated simply because a fellow gives him a thousand dollars, and he gets in trouble and he comes to the attorney general and says, "Well, Joe, how about some help now." I'll tell this delegation here that the attorney general doesn't handle criminal cases. If he does, it may be one in ten thousand. It's seldom that he does under the system that we have in the territory now, and under the system that you find in the states. He may be the chief law enforcement officer, but the actual prosecution is doled out to the prosecutors of the counties. The attorney general doesn't go to court and prosecute. It's very seldom that he does.

ANTHONY: I'd like to have an explanation to this question from the chairman of the committee. What has been the result of the experience of the elective system that has prevailed generally throughout the states? Did the committee discuss that and have any views on that question?

OKINO: The committee did not make a research to that extent.

CHAIRMAN: The question -- Are you through with your question, Delegate Anthony?

ANTHONY: I got the answer. I'd like to address the Convention.

CHAIRMAN: You may.

ANTHONY: I came to this Convention committed to the idea that we should have a strong executive who should appoint such officers as the attorney general. The way the Convention is shaping up, we are depositing more and more power in the governor, and so I have a good deal of sympathy with what has been said here this morning. I want to remind the Convention that the attorney general is the chief law officer of the State. He's not the private attorney for the governor. He advises all branches of the government. In fact, he even will act at the request of the Supreme Court, that's part of his job, to bring up proceeding at their instance. So I say there is a good deal to be said for an elective system.

But turning the thing over in my own mind, I have finally reached the conclusion, despite these arguments, that it would be a rather impossible situation for the chief executive to endeavor to carry out his program if he had an elected attorney general and who was not in sympathy with the governor's program. Now if there is a division between the attorney general and the governor, then any attorney general who is worth his salt would resign the office, tell the governor to go ahead and get somebody else. That would be a public fact of great notoriety.

One other word. We've had a pretty good record in our attorney general's office, beginning with John Ricord, such persons like W. O. Smith, Emil C. Peters, S. B. Kemp. We've had a pretty good record in the office. I think, by and large, the history of the office warrants the continuance of the present system.

MAU: Point of information. I wonder if the chairman of the committee can tell the Convention how many states elect their attorney general.

OKINO: I believe there are about 45 states.

MAU: Forty-five?

OKINO: Yes. It's on page - - you can refer to your Manual.

MAU: Thank you very much.

ARASHIRO: As I sit here and listen to the arguments I am getting more confused, and I'm going to be pretty popular kanaluaing.

Now, we have two factions here, who are one for the appointive system and one for the elective system. The appointive system to me has reasoned it out to the extent of drawing a line in trying to get efficient offices created either by the elective or the appointive system, whichever they feel is the most efficient method of creating that office. Now, the elective group tells me that under the elective system you can elect the people that the people want, and furthermore, they believe in the principle of not taking away the right of the people to elect the people that they want. We are coming to a stage to me, as they have presented to me, that we cannot delegate any authority to anybody. If that is so, then I am assuming that we must elect our janitors and right down the line, elect our school teachers and elect all people in government positions because we cannot delegate any authority to anybody, to appoint anybody.

But now, I want to sit here a little longer, and I still want to hear more argument. That is, if under the appointive system, what are the abuses and what are the faults. Under the elective system, what can be the danger if we should initiate the elective system.

DOI: From the very excellent analysis of the duties of the attorney general given this morning I gather that much of the duty of the attorney general concerns subjects other than being a legal advisor to the governor. Such being the case, I think the governor should remain independent of the - - the attorney general should remain independent of the governor as well as the legislative branch. I think it's a simple matter to allow the governor to appoint his own legal advisor and set the attorney general's department independent of both the executive and the legislative. An attorney, I believe – if I may say – is not under legal ethics to serve conflicting interests. We are, by appointing the attorney general and assigning the same duties as we know them to exist with the attorney general, placing him, as pointed out this s morning, in a position where he has conflicting duties, conflicting duties in a sense that he owes not only duties to the executive, but also the legislative branch. Also he owes duty to the people which conflicts with the executive as well as the legislative. Therefore, I believe we should elect the attorney general.

LOPER: I don't like the implication that those who vote for the appointment of the attorney general don't believe in the people. We have a typically American attitude against the all-powerful state, and for that reason we have a separation of powers between the executive, the legislative and the judicial. But I don't think that it should go as far as separation of powers within the executive branch itself or you weaken it to the place where it cannot do the job that it's supposed to do under the our American form of government. Those of us who supported the retention by the legislature of its right to appropriate money and its responsibility for raising taxes to cover such appropriations indicated by that that we believed in the people because the people elect the legislators. I shall vote for the appointment, but I do not think that that implies any lack of confidence in the people.

OKINO: When Delegate Anthony interposed that question to me as the committee chairman, I gave him a very simple and brief reply, thinking that it would answer his question. I should like to give an explanation on that point. I do not want the delegates to feel that your committee simply decided at one meeting whether or not the attorney general of the future State of Hawaii is to be appointed or elected. We had about - - at least three meetings debating on this particular question. The majority of your committee members, after considering this problem which is now before you for at least three or four meetings, and each meeting took about an hour and a half, agreed that the attorney general should be appointed by the governor of the State of Hawaii, subject to the confirmation of the Senate. Accordingly, the committee proposal did not specifically enumerate the clause that the attorney general shall be an elective officer. The committee felt that following the general language as set forth in Section 10, paragraphs one and two would suffice, would indicate that the attorney general should be appointed by the governor subject to the confirmation of the Senate.

SMITH: I just want to make one point clear. I have been for years fighting for good government in my own community and basically that was one of the reasons why I got elected as a delegate to this Convention.

Now, I want to state one thing. You've been hearing a lot about popular government. The popular government of our country is a representative government. We are based - - have a two-party system which we all enjoy. There are other factions, but mainly it's two-party. Those two parties are the ones that actually run the government for the people. And I object thoroughly to the insinuations, in fact everything when individuals have come up and made statements to the fact that we are not for the people when we vote for appointment. There was a chance here, a couple of chances where individuals were able to get up and say, "Do you trust the people? Will you be able to look them in the eye?" and when certain instances came up where they actually, under good American government, had the opportunity, there was no noise whatsoever.

Now in a two-party system, you either are Republican or you are Democrat. When the people vote for their representatives, there is a platform or principles which are followed. Irrespective whether I or any other one likes a certain party, the popular vote of the representatives shows the inclination of the trend of thought in the community and they in turn will vote for that principle which they hope the representatives will lead them. Now in order to go ahead and give the representatives complete free wheel to carry out that proposition, they have to go ahead and have people behind them. You cannot go ahead and have factions digging from the side, knocking down that policy. The opportunity for the people in voting for representatives of the people to knock down any policy is just what is happening and has happened in the past 150 years. If they don't like the principles and policies of a party and they think they should be checked, they knock 'em out. The same way we have been voting for supervisors or senators. If we don't like their policies, then we kick them out. But we're going to be going one step further down here in Hawaii, and I know that it's hard for a lot of us, even me as a layman, to imagine what is going to come up in the future. But, there's one thing, the governor has to be impartial if he wants to stay in. He has to have free reign, and I don't believe that in electing the attorney general that he will be given that absolute free reign.

Thank you.

SERIZAWA: As a layman I have listened to the arguments brought forth by both the opponents and proponents of the election of the attorney general, and it seems to me that the opponents have emphasized the fact that the governor, or the administration's policy, will be greatly hampered if the attorney general is not appointed. I heartily concur with some previous speaker who has said that if the governor wants a legal advisor he should get a private legal advisor. Now the question that I have in my mind is, is the attorney general a legal advisor or private legal advisor of the governor? I believe the delegate from Oahu, Delegate Lee, has stated in his enumeration of the duties of the attorney general that the attorney general is responsible also for -- or responsible to the people also, besides the governor, and also the legislature. I was more or less kanalua up to this time, but now I am beginning to favor election and I will support the amendment.

LAI: I just want to clarify a point that was brought up by several speakers. The point was in electing the attorney general there would be the danger of the attorney general opposing the project of the governor. I don't think I agree to that. If the projects of the governor are good, it would be foolish for the attorney general to oppose that, and if the projects are not good and not for the benefit of the people, I think it's a wise thing for the attorney general to oppose.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like very much to put the question. There have been 20 speakers.

KAWAHARA: In voting on this amendment I suppose we are going to vote on the basis of the arguments presented on the floor so far. In looking over the material in this Legislative Reference Bureau Manual I find that in the great State of Alabama the governor is elected, the lieutenant governor is elected, the state auditor is elected, the secretary of state is elected, state treasurer is elected, superintendent of education is elected, commissioner of agriculture and industry is elected, and the attorney general is also elected. In the State of Arizona the governor is elected, the secretary of state elected, state auditor elected, treasurer elected, superintendent of public instruction elected, and the attorney general is also elected. In forty-five of the states, the attorney general is elected. Four states, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, appoint the attorney general. On that basis, I think perhaps we are following some precedent by following these forty-five states in electing our attorney general.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is the amendment proposed by Delegate Fong. I believe that you're all --

APOLIONA: I have sat down here this morning and listened to the arguments pro and con for the election system. I have said last night that my mind was still open. Besides listening to the debate on the question, I have gone to the source of the question debated. When we are in doubt, we try to find the possible solutions to our doubts, and where can we find the solutions to these doubts? I have purposely not gone to any of the attorney generals of the Territory of Hawaii because they have been all appointed, but I have gone to the next class of people, your city and county attorneys, to ask for their advice. We say that experience is the best teacher. I have gone to these men who have had experience in being elected to office and to others who have been appointed to office. And those who have been elected to office have said to me, "Doc, if I am going to be elected again, you can have the job." So, therefore, my mind is set that I will oppose the amendment.

NIELSEN: I think there's one thing that we certainly should not overlook, that we're not referring to the United States, we're referring to the sovereign states, of which we intend to become one. If forty-five of those, or 93 per cent of them elect their attorney general, then we cannot say that they all elect poor attorney generals. I think that certainly forty-five out of the forty-eight electing proves that that's the policy we should follow, and that certainly is a large majority and we'll be right with the rest of them if we do.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to say that the question of the number of states has been pretty well discussed last night and today. Do you wish to speak to that point?

SMITH: I just wanted to ask the last speaker a question. New Jersey was the state that just had their Constitution amended, and so forth. They are appointed, arent' they?

NIELSEN: They are appointed, but that doesn't mean that if all the other states had Constitutional Conventions, they'd throw out the elective system. No one can kid me in that respect.

HOLROYDE: I would just like to draw attention to the delegates here the committee report, page 3, the last paragraph:

> In a majority of states today, the governor shares his executive authority with five or six other constitutional officers for whose actions he is generally held publicly responsible, but over whom he has little control because they are either elected by popular vote or by the legislature. In the early 1920's leaders in many states realized that state administrations were badly organized and could not cope with growing state problems. As a consequence, reorganization plans were widely adopted. New Jersey, New York, and Virginia are the principle examples of states which ratified constitutional amendments needed to eliminate the long ballot of elected officials and open the way for statewide reorganization.

The last sentence,

> Your committee, following the trend, agreed that in the executive branch, there should be only two elected officials, namely, the governor and the lieutenant governor.

FONG: May I ask the gentleman a question?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

FONG: From what political treatise are you reading from?

HOLROYDE: I'm reading from the report of the committee. That question should be addressed to the committee chairman.

OKINO: Page 3 of the committee report, last paragraph.

HEEN: In considering the functions of the attorney general, if you will look at the statute, those functions are in the way of duties. It says that he shall do this. He shall advise the governor, the legislature, and heads of departments. They are all duties. And he is not a policy making official. We have to keep that in mind. When they speak about conflicts between the legislature today and the governor, what are those conflicts? The conflicts can only apply to the legal aspects with reference to any statutory enactments made. The legislature might say that, "We feel that this special enactment is valid and constitutional." The Governor will say, "I don't know whether it's so or not." The practice is for the governor to send over to the attorney general's office every enactment made by the legislature. Then the attorney general advises whether or not such an enactment is valid or invalid. Whether it suggests one side or the other makes no difference so far as the attorney general is concerned. I want to repeat that he is not a policy making official.

PORTEUS: This has been a good firecracker bill. And now rather than asking for the previous question, I wonder if we could do it -- I'd like to do it indirectly by asking for a roll call vote at this time.

SAKAKIHARA: Addressing to the motion -- in favor of the motion, I wish to state that those who will vote "no" against the motion will vote for a commission form of government and those who will vote "aye" will vote for the people's government.

SILVA: That's not true.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is ready to put the question.

SHIMAMURA: May I state that I take exception to the implication contained in the statement of one of the previous speakers that an election of the attorney general means the surrender or in effect the abrogation of the representative government. I believe that the chief legal officer of the State of Hawaii should be elected because we believe in representative government, that the people choose their chief legal officer as their legal representative. And I think we are imposing too much power in the chief executive.

CHAIRMAN: I believe any further expressions can be made by ballot. Roll call has been asked. I believe there is sufficient request. The motion before the house is the amendment. Do you wish for me to read the amendment?

DELEGATE: No.

CHAIRMAN: There are no calls for the amendment. I think it's clear enough. The Clerk will please call the roll. Use the mike, please.

Ayes, 25. Noes, 35 (Anthony, Apoliona, Ashford, Castro, Cockett, Corbett, Crossley, Dowson, Fukushima, Hayes, Heen, Holroyde, Kage, Kawakami, Kellerman, Larsen, Loper, Lyman, Ohrt, Okino, Porteus, C. Rice, H. Rice, Richards, Roberts, Sakai, Silva, Smith, Tavares, A. Trask, White, Wist, Woolaway, King, Bryan.) Absent, 3 (Mizuha, Phillips, Wirtz).

CHAIRMAN: The motion to amend is lost.

J. TRASK: I move for a recess subject to the call of the Chair.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: If there's no objection, so ordered.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come to order. The Chair would like to express appreciation of the committee in the debate on the last amendment. There were twenty-seven delegates who spoke a total of forty-three times. However, very few spoke more than twice, the majority spoke once, and I appreciate your consideration very much.

The motion before the house is the adoption of paragraph three as written, all amendments having been defeated.

Paragraph two? I'll number my paragraphs.

LOPER: There is one minor correction, I believe, that should be made in the middle of that paragraph. It's in line four where it says "unless otherwise provided by law." I think it should read, "unless otherwise provided herein or by law." I would, therefore, move an amendment to insert two words "herein or," between "provided" and "by."

CHAIRMAN: We're discussing Section 10, paragraph two of Section 10.

DELEGATE: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has been moved to paragraph two of Section 10 to include --

LOPER: I think perhaps better language would be, "otherwise provided in this Constitution or by law." But perhaps that could be left to the Style Committee.

OKINO: I should like to call the attention of Delegate Loper that that is an exact reproduction of the language as it appears in paragraph two, Article 4, New Jersey Constitution. We have considered that, I believe.

LOPER: There is in this Constitution in sections already tentatively adopted provisions other than those stated here, that is, the head of each principal department shall be a single executive unless otherwise provided by law. We have provided in this Constitution otherwise and it should be covered.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion of that amendment?

CROSSLEY: I have an amendment to the second paragraph of Section 10 and to the third paragraph. I've had my amendment distributed. It's the amendment which says "Amendment to Committee Proposal No. 22, amending Section 10, paragraphs 2 and 3," and begins:

> Each principal department shall be under the supervision of the governor. The head of each principal department shall be a single executive who shall be appointed by the governor, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, and who shall serve at the pleasure of the governor.
> For each principal department there shall be an advisory board, consisting of such members as may be provided by law.
> Whenever the law provides for the adjudication of private rights, duties or privileges by any principal department, there shall be established by law an administrative adjudication board to determine such rights, duties and privileges.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Crossley, is your amendment an amendment of the amendment that's before the house now or a substitution to the paragraph?

CROSSLEY: It's a little, I believe -- well, mine would be a substitution of the paragraphs.

HEEN: I second the amendment that was offered by Delegate Loper.

CHAIRMAN: That has been duly seconded. I'm sorry, I may not have stated so.

FONG: May I ask the delegate a question? Did you say that your amendment says that he can be removed at the pleasure of the governor?

CROSSLEY: That is correct.

FONG: Just the governor alone?

CROSSLEY: That is correct, and then the amendment continues, "For each - -"

KELLERMAN: A point of order. Don't we have before the house an amendment to one line - - the fourth line of the second paragraph?

CROSSLEY: Mr. Chairman, I'm offering a new amendment. And I have not discussed it. I haven't even read the amendment thereof.

KELLERMAN: It was my impression that Mr. Crossley's proposed amendment was a substitution for the entire paragraph and not an amendment of the amendment proposed. Wouldn't it clear the picture to vote on the amendment proposed—it's merely a matter of language—and then go into the substance of Mr. Crossley's amendment separately?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would have to rule that while it would clear the picture to do it in the manner suggested by Delegate Kellerman, the amendment proposed is a proper amendment of the amendment that is before the house. I don't think there's any doubt about that. It deletes the entire thing and substitutes something therefor.

CROSSLEY: If it will expedite it, I will hold my amendment if I can be recognized by the Chair - -

CHAIRMAN: You may.

CROSSLEY: - - when we have voted on what's before you now.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Question is Dr. Loper's amendment. All those in favor - - Would you like it stated?

DELEGATE: Who seconded the motion?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen seconded.

OKINO: May I speak to that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Okino, you may speak to the amendment.

OKINO: I believe the committee has no objection. Speaking for myself, I think it is an improvement consistent with something which will appear in the following paragraph three.

CHAIRMAN: I'd like to state the amendment for the benefit of several delegates who have asked. In the fourth line after the word "provided," insert the words "in this Constitution or," so it would read "provided in this Constitution or by law." All those in favor of the amendment will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: The only reason that I have to go into paragraph two with my amendment is because the amendment in itself combines those two paragraphs. That's why I've hesitated just a little bit about the procedure on the thing. If you'll read my amendment, it doesn't change the substance of the second paragraph one bit. However, it does combine it with the third paragraph. And I was wondering if it would be proper to go ahead and adopt that - - tentatively adopt that paragraph, if then we could move on to the third paragraph and I could offer my amendment there, which would also incorporate the first. However, if the substance of the second paragraph is changed I would then have to put my amendment in right now.

CHAIRMAN: The question it seems would be whether or not your amendment changes the substance of the paragraph, and it would be up to the members of the committee to decide.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask the proposer of this amendment the reason for the second paragraph of his amendment, that is with respect to advisory boards?

CROSSLEY: I'd be very happy to answer that. It was felt that there are two types of boards, one is an advisory board, the other would be a board with power of adjudication, that they should be separate. Now an advisory board - - In my proposal I say that all departments shall be single executive departments, and where the duties of the office are quasi-judicial or legislative that there be a board to deal with those powers. Now in the case of where there is no need for such a board, the governor may appoint an advisory board to consult with the head of the department. We have advisory boards today. At the present time we have boards that have no power of adjudication, they are simply advisory boards, and this would continue in effect what we have today. However, where we do have boards with quasi-judicial powers, such as the Utilities Commission, Board of Agriculture and Forestry in some respects, that there - - there would be an adjudication board set up for the single-headed department. And that would be what my amendment would seek to accomplish.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that further discussion of the question is out of order until we straighten out the parliamentary procedure.

WHITE: I don't have any copy of that amendment, and I don't know what they're talking about.

CHAIRMAN: Will the messenger - -

CROSSLEY: The amendment was passed out yesterday afternoon and put on every desk.

WHITE: I'd just like to ask one question just as a matter - - for the purpose of trying to clarify this. I might ask the proposer of this amendment whether that paragraph two wouldn't be directly in conflict with what we've already done in the case of the University and the Board of Education or whether he doesn't consider them principal departments?

CHAIRMAN: I would like to leave that, Delegate White, until we discuss the amendment. I would ask the committee to make up its mind how they want to take this amendment up? Do you desire to continue with paragraph two and then discuss whether the amendment is no substitution of substance?

CROSSLEY: Let's vote on paragraph two. I'll take my chances with my amendment in paragraph three.

LEE: As I understand it, your proposed amendment is in substitution of two and three, is that right? And you're now willing to vote on Section 2 [sic] before consideration of your amendment. If Section 2 [sic] passes, there'll be no necessity for considering your amendment, is that correct?

CROSSLEY: No. If Section 2 [sic] passes, my amendment does not change the substance of paragraph two; therefore, it would fit in with the amendment. It simply combines paragraphs two and three.

LEE: Well, then, wouldn't your proper—if we act on Section 2 [sic], wouldn't your proper action then later be to amend Section 3 [sic].

CROSSLEY: I believe that is true. Yes.

LEE: All right.

CHAIRMAN: I think the motion that should be made in order to do this is that we adopt paragraph two in substance with it being clearly understood that -- Would someone care to make that motion?

LEE: The motion has already been made by Delegate Loper that we -- Oh, no. I move that we adopt Section 2 [sic] -- this paragraph tentatively.

H. RICE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we tentatively adopt the substance of paragraph two.

CROSSLEY: As amended.

CHAIRMAN: As amended. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.
Paragraph three. Delegate Crossley.

FONG: Point of information. Now in adopting paragraph two, did we adopt the words "and shall serve at the pleasure of the governor"?

CROSSLEY: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: We did.

FONG: Now I'd like to have an explanation of that phrase, what does it mean?

LEE: In order to allow debate on the matter, I move that we reconsider our action.

FONG: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we reconsider our action on paragraph two. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Paragraph two is open.

FONG: I would like to ask, do the words mean this, that if the governor is dissatisfied with the department head he can tell him, "You're fired"?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Okino, would you like to answer that question please?

OKINO: Mr. Chairman, what was your question?

FONG: The words, "shall serve at the pleasure of the governor," the last sentence in paragraph two, does that mean that the governor has unrestricted power to fire him?

OKINO: Yes, that's correct. The words, "at the pleasure of the governor" has been so adjudicated. In other words, the governor would have the absolute right to dismiss anyone of his appointees.

FONG: Now what is the present situation? Has he got the unrestricted right to fire him?

OKINO: Under the present situation, under Organic Act Section 80, the consent of the Senate is required.

FONG: Then this is a modification of that power at the present time.

OKINO: That is correct. To give the governor stronger power insofar as his right to dismiss and remove any of his appointees.

FONG: Now, what protection has the public in a situation like this? Say we predicate a situation in which the governor appoints a certain individual to be public welfare director and the Senate is in session and the Senate confirms the appointment. One month afterwards he fires him and for the next two years he places another man in there. Now, could he do that under the situation?

OKINO: The governor could, under the provisions proposed by this Section 10, but the second appointment is considered as a recess appointment. There must be confirmation before he is considered a permanent appointee for that particular office. The Senate may reject his appointment when the Senate is in session.

FONG: What is the reason for giving the governor such powers?

OKINO: The idea is to strengthen the executive department so that he shall be vested with the responsibilities, so that there will be better team work and harmony insofar as the executive department is concerned.

FONG: If you did that, why do you still leave the confirmation power in the Senate? Why not eliminate that and let the governor run the whole show?

OKINO: Well, that was a compromise. A minority of the committee members felt that the Senate power of confirmation should also be taken away so the governor shall have an absolutely free hand, but the majority of the committee members felt that the Senate should retain the control, in other words, to pass judgment upon the qualifications of the appointees.

FONG: Now that we have reconsidered this passage of this paragraph, I feel again we are concentrating power in the hands of the executive to such an extent that he will build such a political machine in this territory that it is going to be difficult for the people to uproot it. Now I can forsee syndicates coming in from the mainland with millions of dollars, say half a million dollars, and pour it into the campaign of this territory and elect the governor. Now the only man that they have to concentrate upon is the governorship. By concentrating upon the governorship they will run the whole territory. And it is easily conceivable that any group with around $250,000 can easily capture the governorship by pouring that money into the political campaign. We know that the campaign in the territory is costly, that $20,000 to $30,000 probably would be the cost of campaigning for the governorship. Now what would prevent a group of individuals pouring in 50,000, 100,000 or 150,000 to capture the governorship and to control all these departments?

Again I say that we are creating here in this territory one of the most powerful machines that I know in the history of the 48 states of the United States. In no other state of the Union is the concentration of power as potent as we have here in this Constitution. We are going to give to this executive of our State of Hawaii the supreme power in everything that is going to be done in this territory. He now has the power of appointing the individuals, subject however to the confirmation of the Senate, and he can only remove these people subject to the approval of the Senate. We are now going one step further. We are saying that you can remove these individuals without the consent of the Senate.

Now I ask you, are you giving the people whom you represent the protection that they need? You have already given him the judiciary, lock, stock and barrel. He can appoint the judiciary. Now, giving him the judiciary -- giving him control of the second branch of our government, the judiciary, and having some control by the veto power over your legislature—and you need a two-thirds vote of the legislature to override his veto—and now giving him this absolute power to fire and remove the department heads, you are placing in the hands of this executive the most powerful instrument that I know of. And I can say that in no other state of the Union is there such a concentration of power, and I am opposed to this phrase in which he shall remove the department heads without the approval of the Senate.

LEE: I'm convinced of the argument made by the representative from the fifth district and offer this amendment to that paragraph. Next to the last line after the word "and" insert the words "may be removed by the governor with the approval of the Senate," in lieu of the phrase "shall serve at the pleasure of the governor."

SILVA: Second the motion.

CROSSLEY: I have no particular fight with that but I do take exception to the remarks of the speaker before the last that no state has given the chief executive such power, because they have. Nor do I agree with him that we have made this man so all-powerful, nor would I say that the people of the Territory of Hawaii could be bought any more now than they could at any other time by a half a million dollars or 250,000.

But I do think that there is validity in the principle that we should shape up responsibility to where it belongs. The chief executive is responsible for the administration of the government; he is responsible for appointing these department heads and after he has appointed them they are confirmed by the Senate. In our committee when we discussed this subject and read, not a 60 day report or a two or three months' study by anyone, but a five year study by most competent judges in the country—I do not mean that in the judicial sense, but people who are trained in the study of government—and they came up with the recommendation as a result of their study that not only should department heads serve without term, which means in simple language at the pleasure of the governor, but they should also serve without confirmation. We were voted down in the committee on that. They felt that there should be confirmation.

Now you take the analogy of running a business, the head of a department, or the head of a firm appointing his department head, and something happens in the business. The department head isn't the one who takes the responsibility as to whether or not the policy of the chief executive was carried out or even the policy of the board. It's the president of the company, and the government, whether you like it or not, isn't too much different from a business in that respect. It will not be the department head who will be taking the responsibility, it will be an elective governor.

Now I think the thing we lose sight of here is that we have been operating for the last fifty years under an appointive governor, someone who is not responsible to the people, and it makes a big difference. It takes a lot of change of thought to get the concept of a governor who is responsive to the will of the people, a man who must go before the people and say, "This is my record for the past four years. Will you elect me again on that record?" Now what you're asking him to do is going to the people and saying, "This is my record for the last four years. I don't agree with what these departments have done. I don't agree with the administration of this department but I had no power to change that department head. I had to accept that man in office because in my first judgment he was good but he didn't prove to be good, he didn't prove to be efficient, but because he had a certain amount of political backing I could not get enough votes in the Senate to remove him from office." This does not grant the chief executive a great deal more power, if any, than exists in that office today, and the chief executive is not responsible to the people.

I believe that no matter how the law is presently written today that the chief executive would have no difficulty in removing anyone from office as the offices are set up today. It was for that reason that I offered my amendment, and if this section is now going to be voted on to delete that, I would like at this time to offer my amendment which combines paragraphs two and three and which reads as follows:

> Each principal department shall be under the supervision of the governor. The head of each principal department shall be a single executive who shall be appointed by the governor, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, and who shall serve at the pleasure of the governor. For each principal department, there shall be an advisory board consisting of such members as may be provided by law. Whenever the law provides for the adjudication of private rights, duties, or privileges by any principal department, there shall be established by law an administrative adjudication board to determine such rights, duties and privileges.

OKINO: I am wondering if Delegate Crossley would not move the amendment a little later until we have decided on this very important question, whether the appointees of the governor shall be removed by the governor only with the consent or confirmation of the Senate. The amendment offered by Delegate Crossley will incorporate the third paragraph as well. It is purely a suggestion, Delegate Crossley.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that his amendment is out of order in any event. Since the movant stated previously that his amendment was in substance the same as paragraph two as now written, he would in effect move to amend the amendment proposed by Delegate Fong by deleting it, which I do not think is a proper amendment.

CROSSLEY: I would not move to amend the amendment. I would move to amend the section.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair understands by your previous statement, however, that your amendment is in substance the same as the paragraph as previously written. Therefore, if you move to amend the amendment all you are doing is deleting the amendment which is before the house.

CROSSLEY: I'm not moving to amend the amendment. I am moving to amend Sections 2 and 3 [sic].

CHAIRMAN: I still believe you are out of order.

LEE: I think -- in order to get the proper language I have just been checking the Organic Act. I would like to suggest this language instead of the language previously suggested by myself. Instead of the language, "may be removed by the governor with the approval of the Senate," use these words, "may, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, remove from office any of such executives."

CHAIRMAN: Did your second accept that?

SILVA: I'm the second. I'll accept it.

KELLERMAN: If that change has been seconded, I would like to speak in favor of the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You may.

KELLERMAN: I think it's a well recognized fact that the power over any executive is the power of removal, far greater than the original power of appointment. It seems to me that what we would face with a chief executive being removable only at the -- I mean the executives being removable only at the pleasure of the governor, you have this possibility. A governor elected under such circumstances, or possibly with such financial support as the gentleman in the fifth district has suggested, and it can happen—we've had Huey Longs in Louisiana who kept themselves in power through financial pressure and otherwise—such a governor could appoint persons who he considered and knew to be acceptable to the Senate, and the Senate would confirm those appointees. The day after the legislature adjourned such a governor could remove those appointees, and appoint an entirely new slate. Until the legislature readjourn -- reconvened in the next session he would have the means at his disposal to use public funds, as we have seen them used in our history—I'm not speaking of this State but of the United States and in other states of the country—to build up a machine not only to support himself, and his executives through himself, but to support a second legislature that might come back in with the support of his regime. It seems to me that it's giving an amazing amount of power to an executive to give him, through this chance at expending public funds through his department and his power of putting in any executive he sees fit once the legislature has adjourned, it gives him the kind of power that I don't think any community today can afford to have placed in one person.

Yes, you have the concentration of responsibility with power. Your dictator has complete power and complete responsibility. It seems to me between the extremes we must find a mean that will grant a reasonable amount of responsibility and power to one executive to make his department function, and a limitation upon the extreme of that power by granting the Senate the right to control to that degree the executive appointments. The Senate also represents the people as well as the chief executive. We have checks and balances and I believe that is one of the major checks upon the extreme power of any executive.

In the last twenty-five years the world has gone very far in the direction of a very powerful executive. We have seen it reach very bad results in a good many countries. We've seen it go very far in our own country, frankly very much opposed to my own political philosophy and that of many others here at this Convention. I don't see that there's any great . . . [word not clear] in giving the executive too much power and there is certainly a great danger because one never knows who will be elected. It can happen here as it has happened elsewhere. It seems the Constitution, the purpose of it, is to place those safeguards that may make it impossible for such an elected officer to assume the power that will make him a virtual dictator, as we have seen it in other states of the Union. I think the motion of Mr. Lee is excellent and I am very much in favor.

WHITE: I'd just like to say that the type of situation that some of these speakers have painted, where somebody is going to come in and buy the election of the governor for 500,000 or 250,000 or whatever the amount it is, if they buy the governor, they'll probably have control of the whole legislature anyway, so where is your check on it? I certainly feel that it's unsound to hold a man -- to vest executive responsibility in a man, hold him responsible for results, and then not give him the power of removal if he has somebody that's inefficient in his organization. The Senate still has the right, some control over it by not -- by having to confirm anybody that comes in subsequently. And to paint a picture where the governor is going to appoint people and have the Senate confirm him and then wait two days and then fire them all, I think is just building up a lot of imaginary things that can never develop. I am opposed to this because I agree that the governor should have the power of removal.

FONG: I would like to offer an amendment to that amendment proposed by Mr. Lee. At the end of his amendment, to add this sentence, "All such officers shall hold office for the term of the governor and until their successors are appointed and qualified unless sooner removed." This is in the words of the Organic Act except that I have added the words, "the term of the governor." The Organic Act says four years. It will place the term of the people appointed.

HEEN: May I suggest this as the form of the amendment? "Such single executive shall be nominated, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appointed by the governor, and he shall hold his office for a term to expire at the end of the term for which the governor was elected. The governor may, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, remove such single executive."

FONG: I'll accept that.

LEE: That's agreeable to the maker of the motion, Mr. Chairman.

SILVA: The second accepts that too.

KING: My feeling is that with the changes that have occurred we may be a little bit confused. I would like to suggest a short recess and have the last form of the amendment typed and made available to all the delegates. I so move, Mr. Chairman.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no objection, we'll have a five minute recess while these are prepared.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The amendment which was prepared during the recess is being distributed. I believe that before we go to lunch it will be in order to vote on this amendment.

ANTHONY: Is there a motion before the house to adopt the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: There is.

ANTHONY: Well, this is a rather serious question. I don't think that we should hurry a vote through before lunch. I would like to have the speaker from Kauai who referred to some eminent authority be given the opportunity to produce that authority. I've got one document here that's just come to my attention, the report of the -- the Connecticut report, and I think that we ought to look into this pretty carefully. Mind you, it is the federal system that the committee has reported, namely, the President can appoint his attorney general and remove him -- with the consent of the Senate and remove him anytime he wants to. Now you're going to change that system if you adopt this amendment, so I don't think it should be done hastily.

LEE: I don't think we're doing this hastily. I think we all have copies on our desk. Actually, it provides that the executive can only remove with the advice and consent of the Senate, and the appointment to expire at the end of the term to which the governor was elected. Now don't forget, we face this realistic situation before this Convention, that the attorney general is appointed by the governor of the State, and the only two elective officers are the governor and the lieutenant governor, and in order to keep the independence of these department heads, particularly the Attorney General's Department and some of the other very important departments, that there should be this clause inside of this amendment. However, if it's the wish of this committee to recess over this matter, I don't have any objection although it's pretty clear. I'm ready to vote on it.

FONG: I move that we recess to 1:30 p.m. It's only a matter of ten minutes now.

C. RICE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Before I put that motion, I'd like to ask President King if he would desire that we would rise or that we recess.

KING: Well, if some of the delegates want further time to consider this amendment, the natural thing would be to rise and sit again this afternoon. I had hoped that most of their minds were made up and we could clear this particular amendment, but Delegate Crossley has another amendment that would make this rather moot. So perhaps the best thing would be for the committee to rise, report progress and ask permission to sit again at 1:30 this afternoon.

PORTEUS: Can't we recess? We did yesterday.

KING: May I ask if the Clerk has anything on the table that might be handled? Then a recess would be in order.

CLERK: No.

KING: Then a recess would be in order.

CROSSLEY: Before you put the motion to recess, I would like to say that as far as I'm concerned I feel that I have had ample opportunity to present my arguments. I've quoted my authorities. I don't care to have a long debate. I wanted to point out that under the system that the majority of the committee adopted, the serving at the pleasure of the governor, it's more efficient. It wouldn't cost anything to fire a man. It may have some dangers. I don't agree with the dangers. I would like to point out, however, that if you take the amended language, it means that to fire a department head is going to cost you something like $25,000. You're going to have to call the Senate into special session.

But I feel that there's been ample time on that and I for one am ready to vote on the amendment. I'd like to vote on it before we go out to lunch if possible and come back in here at 1:30 and continue on with the next. This is the last amendment I have on this business. If this fails, why then that's the will of the majority. If it passes, I carry on from there.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is whether we recess or not. All those in favor -- Pardon. The motion has been withdrawn. The motion before the house is for the adoption of the amendment proposed by Delegate Lee.

C. RICE: May I have the amendment read?

[Objections from the floor.]

C. RICE: Isn't Mr. Crossley's amendment in here too?

CHAIRMAN: No.

MAU: The committee itself has not given us their views on this new amendment. I'd like to hear from them because if their report is a sound report and they cannot go for this amendment, I would like to hear how they stand.

OKINO: Well, insofar as the committee is concerned, it has already filed its report and proposal consistent with the report. Naturally, I take it that all committee members who voted for the committee proposal will vote against this amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is the amendment which has been printed.

CROSSLEY: Just one point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point, please.

CROSSLEY: I believe you remarked the other amendment has been withdrawn. My previous amendment?

CHAIRMAN: No, the amendment withdrawn --

CROSSLEY: Which amendment were you referring to?

CHAIRMAN: The motion which was withdrawn was the motion to recess.

ROBERTS: I haven't spoken on this question. I'd like just to briefly state my views. I support the recommendations of the committee which to me are sound and provide an adequate opportunity for the executive to carry out his functions. It provides for a check in terms of specific confirmation by the Senate, but gives the executive the authority to see that the work is carried out once the individual is appointed. This amendment, it seems to me, goes to the very heart of the executive power. I recognize the problem of the occasional need for care in the power of the executive. I have voted for shearing his powers on many of the propositions that have come before the house. I think on this particular section, I cannot support the amendment in this form.

I could support an amendment which would provide that, with regard to the attorney general, that such a proposal would be proper, because to me he is an individual who is concerned with three different departments. He is an individual who is concerned not only with the carrying out of his advisory capacity to the governor, he is the legal officer of the State and therefore has got to support and got to prosecute. With regard to the attorney general, I could support an amendment which would provide that you'd have to get the consent of the Senate before the attorney general is removed. But with regard to operating heads of specific departments, it seems to me that is undesirable as a matter of executive function.

ANTHONY: I would like to have one other thing clarified. We were debating the other day the proposition of having a comptroller for a long term. Now would he be subject to removal by the governor without the consent of anybody?

OKINO: Are you referring to the post auditor? The office of auditor?

ANTHONY: I guess it is auditor.

OKINO: That was already voted on. He is to be appointed by the legislature, two-thirds of each house.

ANTHONY: Would he be subject to removal?

OKINO: That is specifically provided in that section.

KELLERMAN: May I answer one point that Mr. Crossley raised, that if you want to remove -- under this proposal, if you want to remove an executive head it would cost $25,000 to do it. You would have to call a special session and pay each member of the Senate $500. That, of course, is not necessarily true. The legislative report has not reached the floor. It can be amended and I have discussed the matter with several members of the committee. It seems to us highly feasible that we introduce an amendment to provide that when the Senate is called in alone for a confirmation or removal, that they shall be paid only traveling expenses and a per diem. So that matter can well be cared for and it is not precluded at all by this amendment.

KING: I have not spoken on this amendment and since others have explained their stand, I'd like to be recognized to speak in favor of the amendment. I do not visualize any practical difficulty. The governor appoints his department heads and if he is dissatisfied with them, he will send for them and ask them to resign. Nine times out of ten or ninety-nine times out of a hundred the department head will resign. If the department head is obdurate, the governor may sideswipe him or side-step him and deal with the number two until the legislature comes into session. If it's necessary to call the Senate into session, it will be the Senate alone. There's only been once in Hawaiian history where a department head was obdurate and it took a little time to remove. But in fifty years of legislative history, that has only occurred once, so I do not visualize any practical difficulty. Delegate Ashford corrects me, it was twice. So it seems to me the question is merely one of whether the legislature, which confirms the appointment of that department head, or the Senate, shall have an opportunity to decide whether he should or should not be dismissed if he refuses to resign.

AKAU: I think we're already to go, but I just want to say one more word. If we pass this, which I think is a good idea, it will make the governor exercise a great deal of care and precaution in getting his key people for his key departments. Let's vote.

MAU: I want to clear this in my own mind and know how to vote on this question. If this amendment passes, then it is against the arguments that have been made in favor of a strong executive, and part of that argument is that the executive should have the sole power and the sole responsibility for his conduct in office. Now you bring the Senate into the picture. Where are you going to place the responsibility, giving some responsibility to the Senate to confirm and to remove? Where will we put the responsibility, put the blame, for either misconduct in office or pursuing a policy which is not agreeable to the people? You bring in the Senate. The governor says, "Why I wanted to remove this man, but the Senate refused." Are you passing the buck?

The argument also was made this morning which scares me about my theory of election of public officials. Maybe I was wrong. If you can bring into the new State of Hawaii half a million or a million dollars to elect a governor, then maybe we ought to find ways and means to appoint the governor.

I don't know whether I am in order but I'd like to move for an amendment, that we delete the amendment proposed and substitute in lieu thereof this language, "The governor shall have the power of appointment and removal of such single executive," and we bring it right down to the point whether or not you want to place responsibility, sole responsibility, of the executive branch of the government in the governor or not.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau, will you state your amendment again, please.

MAU: My amendment would delete the language suggested in this amendment and place in lieu thereof, "The governor shall have the power of appointment and removal of such single executive." Then we are four square on this argument that has been made in support of a strong executive, stating that the executive should have the sole responsibility for all of his actions. Then if the people don't like how he conducts himself in office, then they can put the finger on him. But in this way he can say, "The Senate was the one that stopped me from removing officer Jones." And then on the confirmation too, as well. I don't know why because of past tradition in this Territory, the Senate having the power of confirmation, we should pursue that if we are going to carry to a logical result this argument that has been so powerfully made, that we should place sole responsibility on one executive head of the government.

CROSSLEY: Believe me, it's an honor and privilege and a rarity when I can second the motion of the delegate from the fifth district, which I do most whole heartedly. I would say, however, that I think Delegate Roberts has raised a very good point. If you're going to consider the adoption of an amendment such as that made by Delegate Lee, that it should apply only to the office of the attorney general and perhaps to the head of the school department and that the rest should serve at the pleasure of the governor. However, I'll second the motion made by Delegate Mau.

HOLROYDE: I move we recess to 1:30.

KAGE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we recess until 1:30. You speaking to that motion, Delegate Mau?

MAU: Point of special privilege.

CHAIRMAN: You may.

MAU: If because of my action, we can't get a vote on it before lunch, I withdraw my motion.

A. TRASK: The motion of Delegate Mau has been seconded and I think that motion should be ready for us when we come back from lunch.

SILVA: He's withdrawing that motion.

A. TRASK: Are you withdrawing it, Mr. Mau?

C. RICE: The motion to recess is not debatable.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no objection, we'll declare a recess until 1:30.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Does any one know the presence of Delegate Mau, where he is? Delegate Crossley.

CROSSLEY: I understand that after he and I were together on an amendment, it was too much for him. I doubt that he'll recover this afternoon.

CHAIRMAN: The question that I raise -- Delegate Fong.

FONG: What is this getting into, the chairman of Democratic Party left wing and the chairman of the Republican Party getting together?

CHAIRMAN: The question that I raised was a serious one. He rose to a point of personal privilege just before recess and said if his motion was going to prevent a vote being taken before recess, he would withdraw it. It was on that proviso, I wanted to find out from him whether he seriously intended it to be withdrawn at that time or not.

FONG: I gather that the remark was made facetiously anyway.

A. TRASK: I think Delegate Fong is correct. I had asked that the recess be taken with a view that Delegate Mau would have his motion printed and on that suggestion he withdrew it finally.

CHAIRMAN: He did withdraw it finally? Is that your understanding? If there is no complaint, I'll rule that that motion was withdrawn.

CROSSLEY: Just to ease the Chair's mind, if it would make it any better, I'll withdraw my second, and therefore there will be no doubt. Reluctantly.

CHAIRMAN: That will be satisfactory.

The amendment before the house, in my understanding, is the one printed under the name of Delegate Lee, which is an amendment to paragraph two of Section 10 and was rather widely discussed. Is there any further discussion on this amendment? All those in favor of the amendment will say "aye." Opposed. I'll call for a division of the house. All those in favor of the amendment will please rise.

A. TRASK: Is this on the amendment of Delegate Lee?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

A. TRASK: Mr. Lee is not here. I think out of courtesy to him, I think we should defer this matter.

CHAIRMAN: The vote is being taken. I believe the delegate is well out of order.

A. TRASK: It's not concluded, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: All those opposed to the amendment will please rise.

KING: Before the vote is announced, may I say that I wanted to vote in the affirmative.

CHAIRMAN: Recognized. The motion is carried in any event. I believe the count is 26 to 17. Is that correct?

We now have paragraph two as amended before us. Any further discussion on that paragraph?

CROSSLEY: I move the adoption of paragraph two as amended.

HOLROYDE: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that paragraph two as amended be adopted. All those in favor will please say "aye." Opposed. So carried.

Paragraph three is the next order of business.

KAM: I move that paragraph three of Section 10 be tentatively approved.

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that paragraph three of Section 10 be tentatively approved. Any discussion on that motion? All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Paragraph four is before us.

KAM: I move that paragraph four of Section 10 be tentatively approved.

LAI: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that paragraph four of Section 10 be tentatively approved. Is there any discussion on that motion? All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

LAI: I move for tentative adoption of paragraph six -- five, I mean.

KAM: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that paragraph five be tentatively adopted. Is there any discussion of that motion? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

ROBERTS: I have a proposal to offer in the form of an amendment as a new section, section or paragraph six. Is this the proper time --

CHAIRMAN: Paragraph six is not before us yet.

ROBERTS: I want a paragraph in between paragraph five and paragraph six.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

ROBERTS: The amendment reads as follows. I have copies printed and they'll be distributed to the delegates, so there's no need to write it down.

> The governor shall have power to make, from time to time, such changes in the administrative structure or in the assignment of functions of administrative departments as may, in his judgment, be necessary for efficient government. Such changes shall be set forth in executive orders which shall become effective at the close of the next legislative session, unless specifically modified or disapproved by a joint resolution concurred in by two-thirds of the members to which each house is entitled.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, could you give me information as to when this amendment was passed out?

ROBERTS: It's going to be passed out now.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

KELLERMAN: I second that motion.

ROBERTS: May I speak to this? This proposal supplements the previous sections that we have adopted and gives the governor the opportunity, not to make the changes in the department, but to present a plan to the legislature which the legislature has the opportunity and power to veto. If we want to maintain efficient government, we have to on occasion review of the operations and departments in the executive branch of the government. This gives the governor the opportunity to make such studies for efficient government. It does not give him the power to put it into effect. It gives the legislature the proper and adequate power to decide that it is undesirable or unnecessary, but at least it puts the question before them as to something which the executive thinks is desirable in the efficient administration of government. I would like to have the delegates support this amendment and have it in our Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion on this question?

FONG: May I ask the introducer of this amendment a question? Do you mean that the governor by executive order may consolidate departments as he desires?

ROBERTS: No. The Constitution sets forth the procedure for the setting up of departments within a specified number. You have set that forth in a previous section of the Constitution. This merely gives him the opportunity to make recommendations to the legislature, to suggest within the framework of the Constitution how he thinks more efficient government could be obtained. If you set up your departments and he finds that one department is lopsided, he could recommend to the legislature where perhaps this function properly belongs. If you don't think so, you vote him down, but at least you've had the opportunity to examine it.

FONG: Now what I'm asking you is this, that within the framework of this Constitution, we are saying that he could have twenty departments. Now that's all we are saying about departments here. We are not naming the departments. As I understand from your amendment, you are stating that at the first session of the legislature the legislature will set forth these departments. Is that right?

ROBERTS: The proposal -- May I answer the question, Mr. Chairman? The proposal that we agreed to yesterday indicates that the reorganization would take some time, and therefore some procedure will be set forth in the article dealing with ordinances to give the legislature the opportunity to so reorganize the departments to conform to the twenty departments, as provided for in the Constitution. Once that is set up and goes into effect, it stays in effect. The legislature may from time to time create new branches or parts of that as you go through. Now a time may come when you want to review that. This merely gives the governor the opportunity to call those to the attention of the legislature and suggest that these changes be put into effect. If you do not think that they ought to be put into effect, you then tell the governor that they are not to go into effect and you veto his action. And as you notice, the executive orders that he issues do not become effective until the close of the next legislative session, which means that he cannot put it into effect until the legislature meets and has the opportunity to examine it.

FONG: As I understand it, he will be able from time to time to change the administrative structure and assign functions to the various departments. He may take the function from one department and give it to the other. Is that right?

ROBERTS: He may recommend to the legislature that such be done. He gives the -- he issues the order. The order does not become effective until the end -- the close of the next legislative session which gives the legislature the opportunity by joint resolution to veto his action. It cannot go into effect until the legislature reviews it.

FONG: It seems to me that this is a back way or a backhanded way of passing legislation. The usual way of having legislation passed is to have the House consider it and the Senate consider it and send it to the governor. If he likes it, he signs it. If he doesn't like it, he vetoes it and sends it back to the House and the legislature, and the legislature may by a two-thirds vote pass on it. Now here we have just the reverse of that. We have the governor, first, starting out as the legislative body, and have the legislative body use the veto on the governor. It doesn't sound right. You have a system by which your legislature sets up your administrative branches of the government, and then say that this branch of government shall have these functions and the other branch of government shall have the other function. Then here comes along this amendment that says that the governor may take one function and place it in the hands of the other, and if the legislature in a session does not veto the action of the governor, then it stands. Now this is a backhanded way of giving to the governor the right of legislation and gives to the legislature the right of veto. Now the right of veto lies with the governor. The right of legislation lies with the legislature. I think that this is not correct.

HEEN: The last sentence I think is entirely wrong. It says here, "Such changes shall be set forth in executive orders which shall become effective at the close of the next legislative session, unless specifically modified or disapproved." If it is modified, then it will not go into effect at all. Is that not correct, delegate from the fourth district?

ROBERTS: It seems to me that if the legislature modifies the recommendations of the governor in session, then the proviso would go into effect, just as the legislature could normally establish action in legislative session. There is nothing to prevent the legislature in session to pass such laws as they deem appropriate with regard to these departments. I might say that this language is suggested as the best language I knew of. I certainly have no pride of authorship in this. If the able senator has some additional suggestions to make, I shall be very happy to consider them.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, are you through? Delegate Loper.

LOPER: I think the desired end could be accomplished by striking out "modified or" and just say "unless specifically disapproved," because in the process of considering it, if they wish to modify it, it would then become law in the usual manner.

A. TRASK: I am opposed to this amendment for several reasons. First, in the second sentence there is nothing set forth at what time and how many days before the legislature meets that this executive order shall be made known to the legislature. Secondly, obviously, these changes are to be made and to receive the notice of the legislature. Third, there is no tangible reason as far as I can see whereby such changes, which will be included in the message by the governor to the legislature as provided in the taxation and finance provisions, that should not be ably taken care of by the governor at that time. I see no reason for this amendment because his suggested recommendations, which recommendations are piously and properly made as suggestions -- We have this powerful plenary power here under executive order which by its mere issuance will make it or have it take such a powerful positive position that you would require the legislature by an extraordinary two-thirds vote to overcome such executive order. Additionally, I see no reason why under this suggested amendment that the entire administrative structure of the departments may not be changed, because the only test which would justify the change would be for "efficient government." Now, what is efficient and what is not efficient is a problem so vital, that's why we have the legislature. What is efficient government at one time as against another time, but for the legislature to determine and not the executive.

ANTHONY: I agree with one statement of the last speaker and I am sure it was inadvertant by the draftsman of this proposed amendment. It can be cured by requiring that the executive orders be issued between legislative sessions, then the legislature would have the executive order the first day of the legislative session. Therefore I would suggest an amendment in the second sentence, "Such changes shall be set forth in executive orders to be issued between legislative sessions." In other words, insert the word "issued" or "to be issued between legislative sessions."

As to the other statement made by the last speaker and the delegate from the fifth that this is reversing the legislative process, I'm not in accord with that. This is not going to usurp the legislative process at all. This is simply saying that you've got forty or fifty substantive programs which are being carried out by various executive departments of government, and the chief executive, whose duty it is to make the executive department run, has reached after a careful study a conclusion that these departments should be consolidated. I say he makes that study, he then finally culminates the results of his study in an executive order. Full publicity is given to the executive order. It is in the hands of the legislators before they begin their deliberation and they can do anything they want with it. I call the delegates' attention to the fact that no substantive laws will be decreed by the governor. It will be simply an allocation and a rearrangement of administrative functions. I'm not so sure that I agree with the two-thirds vote in joint session, but I certainly think the principle of this proposed amendment is a good one.

ASHFORD: I move an amendment to the last sentence so that it shall read as follows—There's no second, I think, to Mr. Anthony's motion and my motion will incorporate his. "Such changes shall be set forth in executive orders to be issued between legislative sessions which shall become effective at the close of the next legislative session, to the extent in which they shall not be specifically modified, or unless they be disapproved by a joint resolution adopted by the legislature." If there is a second to that, I'd like to speak for it.

LOPER: I'd like to second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The second is recognized.

ROBERTS: We'll accept that as part of the original motion.

KELLERMAN: But I would like to ask if the movant would accept one more suggestion. "Which shall become effective at the close of the next" -- general or regular, which is our term, Mr. Heen? This would mean the next budget session also, it might mean [that] and our plan is not to have such matters, as I understand it, taken up at the budget session. It seems to me that we have to clear this so it would be at the close of the next regular legislative session.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, would you like to answer that?

KELLERMAN: Is the term "general" or "regular?

HEEN: The regular sessions are provided for in the article on the legislature and the regular sessions are divided into two types. One a budget session and the other a general session.

KELLERMAN: This would have to be -- This word would have to be "general" then. "Effective at the close of the next general legislative session."

HEEN: No, it could be at any session, whether budget, special session or regular session or general session. Any session. The sooner you get to it, why it would be better.

KELLERMAN: I withdraw my suggestion. The present language will cover it. If we want to include the possibility of this coming up at a budget session, then the present language makes that possible. I had assumed that we were trying to restrict the budget session, not to take up such matters, so that's why I raised the point. The present language would leave it open to any special, budget or general session which apparently would be acceptable to the chairman of the Legislative Committee.

HEEN: I would like to ask the delegate who is sponsoring this amendment this question. Why did he use the term "administrative departments" when in the first part of the bill you speak about departments as "executive departments" or "principal departments"? I was just wondering whether there was some intention to differentiate an administrative department from a principal department.

ROBERTS: May I answer that, Mr. Chairman? This thing was drafted long before we discussed this article. I'm certainly glad to have it conform to the others, or first part of the section of the article now before us. There was no intention to provide any other language. But this thing was drafted before this article and the language in that article was unavailable to me.

ASHFORD: I suggest, in view of the remarks calling attention to the use of the "administrative departments," that Section 10 starts, "All executive and administrative offices, departments and instrumentalities." Would it not be better to insert "such changes" -- "assignment of functions of executive or administrative departments" and use the "executive or administrative structure" in both cases to conform to the first paragraph of Section 10?

CHAIRMAN: Does the movant accept that?

ROBERTS: That's acceptable. I think we could handle that either in the Committee on Style or on the floor.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford, would you mind reading the proposed paragraph, please.

ASHFORD: (Reads amendment) "The governor shall have power to make, from time to time, such changes in the executive or administrative structure or in the assignment of functions of executive or administrative departments as may, in his judgment, be necessary for efficient government. Such changes shall be set forth in executive orders to be issued between legislative sessions which shall become effective at the close of the next legislative session to the extent in which they shall not be specifically modified, or unless they be disapproved by a joint resolution adopted by the legislature."

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

KELLERMAN: May I propose another amendment. We have set up in the Constitution under the provision on education, the Board of Education and the Board of Regents to which we have assigned certain functions. I therefore would propose a proviso at the end of the first sentence, "provided that such changes shall not be inconsistent with other provisions of this Constitution."

ROBERTS: The thought of that is acceptable. The language I think could conform to the other sections where there was no intention to modify action which we've already taken and which are going to be part of the Constitution.

HEEN: The amendment is somewhat involved, and I'd rather trust my eyes in looking at it in writing than to trust my hearing. Therefore I would suggest that that amendment be written before any further action be taken on it.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair suggest that instead of a recess, we go on to the next paragraph.

RICHARDS: May I ask one question before we go on to the next paragraph? As I understand this proposal, this amendment, the question comes up to my mind, after modification by the legislature of any of these executive orders, they might modify them to such an extent that they would not be acceptable to the governor. Under those circumstances does the governor retain his veto power or not?

ROBERTS: That was the question raised, I think first, by Senator Heen. I'd like to suggest when this article is being prepared for re-submission, redrafted form, that perhaps it might be desirable to leave the word "modified" out. If the legislature wants to take the governor's proposal and turn it down and then wants to draft one of its own in such form as it cares, it would then be regular legislation?

HOLROYDE: I move we defer action on this amendment.

PORTEUS: If people are going to take various matters into consideration in the redraft, may I point out this. As far as I can see under the Constitution, what you're going to do is leave to the legislature the determination over a period of years, perhaps four, what functions should be consolidated under what departments. Once the legislature has said this is it, and you're not leaving it to the governor in the first instance, you're reversing the situation. What you're doing is, you're giving the power of legislation to the governor with the veto in the legislature. Now if you do it the other way around, you would have it the way we start. Our concept is that the legislature will determine the grouping, it will be subject to veto by the governor. Now if that's out and you want to be consistent, then I think it's necessary to say that these orders shall not become effective unless approved by the legislature rather than disapproved. Because what you're doing there is giving, as I say, power of legislation to the governor, power of veto to the legislature. I think it's reversed.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Loper has the floor.

LOPER: I have a question to put to the former speaker, Mr. Secretary. If I followed your line of reasoning, it was that it should be stated that these would become effective if approved by the legislature. However, in Section 1 or paragraph one of Section 10, I believe we've amended it so that there would be a four year period in which to consolidate government departments, and there is no automatic provision for that to happen, if the legislature chose not to consolidate. The fact that we write it into the Constitution doesn't necessarily bring it about, because we have the reapportionment provision in the Organic Act and it has not happened. This would enable the chief executive to bring that about even if the legislature did not act during the first four years.

PORTEUS: If you say that, that's what will happen, but that's not what's said here. You want to say that if the legislature, in the ordinance that you write, does not consolidate at the end of four years the governor will have the power to do so. That's something else again. What I'm pointing out is that you are relying in the first instance on the legislature to accomplish this by law. Having accomplished something by law, you then say the governor may change this setup, but with the power of veto in the legislature. I think you've got the functions reversed.

H. RICE: I have always been against the rules and regulations by the different departments that are not presented to the legislature for their approval. Now besides those rules and regulations you are going to have executive orders. To me, this is all wrong. If the governor wants that provision, and I can see he might make some wonderful suggestions, let him put them in the form of a joint resolution to be presented to the legislature when it comes in session. Then you have them in the books and it's all right. Besides rules and regulations that govern the Board of Health, the Board of Agriculture and so forth, civil service, all of them, and a lot of other -- and now they have some in the Highway Department that the people don't know.

We've got in a jam just lately on Maui on a new law put into effect by the Territorial Highway Department on the subdivisions. The people didn't know that it was necessary to get a permit to join in the public -- the territorial highway and they practically had the project complete and then they held up. To me, a lot of this should be statutory so it's in the books and we know what it's all about.

ARASHIRO: May I ask the sponsor of this amendment to point out some specific incidents where the necessity of this amendment was proposed?

ROBERTS: I'd like to answer that question and then perhaps to touch on briefly what was said by the speaker just prior to that. The purpose of this thing is not to change what you have done before in your present proposal which puts it in the hands of the legislature to set up the twenty basic departments and their functions through a commission perhaps of study and then have the legislature act.

This thing provides -- this Constitution is not for next year or the year after. It's for a long period of time. I can very easily visualize where a whole series of functions are established in one department whether they belong there or don't belong there. You may have an individual who is interested in building up a little empire. Through pieces of legislation, he has a tremendous number of functions which have no actual relationship in terms of the efficient operation of your executive department. In other words, you have a problem. It seems to me that you've got to give the executive—and we're talking now not about the power of legislation but about the operation of the executive department which the legislature has set up—the governor isn't taking over the functions of the legislature. This merely permits him to present to the legislature a program which will provide for more efficient operation of his department, the executive department. The legislature under this thing does act, and it acts in terms of what it conceives to be proper. If they think that the governor's recommendations are out of line, all they've got to do under this proposal is to say, "No soap. We like it the way it is and that's the way it stays." There is no infringement on the power and the prerogatives of the legislature.

Now the prior speaker suggested that perhaps these executive orders that will be issued would have some force or effect. The proposal does not permit the governor to issue executive orders on reorganization. He merely issues an executive order and submits it to the legislature. If the legislature approves it or doesn't veto it, either form, then it takes power and effect, but it's got to be first by a joint resolution of the two houses. It seems to me that that provides adequate opportunity for the legislature to decide whether the executive functions are properly set up or improperly set up. If they don't think they're proper, all they've got to do is to say, "That's not a good reorganization for the executive department," and that's the end of it.

ARASHIRO: May I ask the sponsor a question? Do you think the deletion of this amendment would jeopardize the governor from sponsoring such intention through his legislation?

ROBERTS: The question of jeopardy, I think, is a very serious question. We're writing a Constitution and we're trying to make provisions for it -- provisions for the three branches of government to operate effectively and to divide those powers as we think most desirable. I think it's extremely desirable to permit the executive to present such a plan, just as it has been, for example, in the federal government now. President Truman has made various proposals to the Congress. Those that they thought desirable were accepted and those they thought undesirable were vetoed, they were thrown out. It seems to me that this calls attention to the fact that the executive should constantly keep in mind the need for efficient government which you have already recognized in the first part of your proposal. I think it's a desirable section.

CROSSLEY: I would like to speak in favor of the amendment as further amended. This in part accomplishes some other job that I had in mind when speaking earlier this morning and that is getting a more efficient department. I think that if we would lose sight of some of the arguments that have been made that this is infringement on other departments or other branches of government and keep in mind only that this is a device, a means of getting a more efficient department in itself, that this amendment would find much more support.

I wouldn't attempt to answer my colleague's question here as to jeopardy, but even if the answer were no, that wouldn't be the final answer because it's not what a person may or may not be able to do but the fact that we are trying to build a basic form of government here, a basis for government, in which we are trying to spell out everything that we can as clearly as we can, and this certainly would help the executive branch of the government to more fully participate in carrying out the very function that we have assigned to it.

A. TRASK: I would like to direct attention to two points raised here. First, what is an executive order? An executive order, as I understand, is not something that is published in the newspapers for the notoriety of even people over on Molokai to read, publication is given to an executive order by mere filing with the Office of the Secretary. That's how the Nuuanu tunnel was going to be built, whereby the city situation here, the master plan of the City and County of Honolulu was dumped without a hearing. You have an executive order issued whereby the City of Honolulu and the legislature, which for a period of about six years had endorsed the Kalihi tunnel, and you have this situation by a mere overnight executive order coming out, throwing over the work of many sincere citizens over a long period of years. I think it is wrong.

The next point. President Truman's plan for reorganization came as a result of congressional legislation over a period of many years and former President Herbert Hoover worked on that situation. To me it is not altogether proper to say that this amendment is a mere reference to the legislature whether or not they'll accept or reject the proposition. It is not that. It is what more properly the Secretary mentioned, an act which if left and not acted upon has the force and effect of law which I think is bad, which doesn't give the people the time enough to consider, debate and talk about and to see how this change would effect their own welfare.

After all, the departments are created by the legislature. Any modification of that should be left up to the legislature and the people who are affected. A person who is born on Oahu, reared on Oahu, whose interests are altogether on Oahu, would not be concerned about governmental administrative functions in Milolii, over on Molokai, over in Kauai, or over in some part on Maui.

Now, let us understand, we must give notoriety. Some places on Oahu, there are no newspapers, and certainly when an order is filed with the Secretary's Office you don't see it in the newspapers, hardly ever. And that's how Honolulu was taken for a ride, as I consider, when the master plan approved over many years was set aside by an executive order.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion of this amendment?

ARASHIRO: I'm not against this amendment, but the question in my mind is whether it should be spelled out, where at present the governor makes a recommendation to the legislature and the legislature then passes legislation by the request of the governor, and that's how it's done. Whether this should be spelled out or whether he will maintain the same authority and go through the same procedure that we have at present.

CHAIRMAN: If there are no more speakers on this subject, I'd like to know if we can put the motion before having it printed. Oh, I see, we have the printed copy. The Chair will declare about a three minute recess while the copies are passed out.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee please come to order.

ASHFORD: May I call the attention of the Committee of the Whole to the fact that the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Laws has been directed to prepare a provision in the ordinances to care for the four year interim period, and what shall happen thereafter in the consolidation of departments to bring them within the twenty - - the number of twenty included in an earlier paragraph of the section? I call this to the attention of the Committee of the Whole at this time because the language used in the draft that has so far been prepared runs somewhat to this point, but it would be strictly limited to that four-year period. May I read that.

> The requirements of consolidation, grouping of functions of government and limitations of the number of departments shall not be absolute for a period of four years after the effective date of this Constitution. During such period, the governor shall have power to make from time to time such changes in the administrative structure or the assignment of functions as may in his judgment be necessary to achieve such limitation and provide an efficient administration. Such changes shall be set forth in executive orders which shall become effective at the close of the next session of the legislature unless disapproved by a resolution adopted by the legislature. The first governor of the State shall appoint a commission to study such consolidation, grouping of functions, and limitation, and report thereon to the governor and to the legislature.

This is merely an interim provision and it provides for executive orders in that respect because if the legislature does not act, then those executive orders must take effect in order to comply with the constitutional requirements of limitation to the twenty departments.

HAYES: I'm confused and suspicious at the same time. I want to know, and I stand to be corrected, I want to know that when this, if provided - - if this amendment went through and the governor appoints this administrative manager and the legislature goes into session and creates the different departments as so provided in the Constitution, then this administrative manager comes in after we have adjourned, can he disorganize what the legislature has provided by law?

HEEN: It seems as if the delegate is looking at another amendment about the appointment of an administrator.

CHAIRMAN: Has your question been answered, Delegate Hayes? Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: I'm sorry, I can't answer that question.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion on this proposed amendment?

ROBERTS: I'd like to suggest that perhaps this proposal ought to be taken from the floor. The question doesn't seem to be fully understood on the floor, and rather than create feelings of dissatisfaction, or uncertainty or doubt or confusion, I'll withdraw the motion if the person who accepted it will do so.

ASHFORD: I'll withdraw my amendment of his amendment.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that if the motion is withdrawn to adopt the amendment, that's sufficient, unless someone else would like to make it.

HOLROYDE: I move that we tentatively approve the last paragraph of this article.

ASHFORD: I move that the last paragraph of this article be deleted and there be substituted for it a Section 11 which shall use the language of Proposal No. 6, to wit:

> No person shall be eligible for office or employment in or by the State or any of its political subdivisions other than on the teaching staff of the University unless such person shall have been a resident of Hawaii for a period of three years prior to assuming such office or employment, and no period of tenure of office in or employment by any branch of government, whether federal or local prior to the expiration of three years' residence in Hawaii, shall be construed as a part or the whole of the requirement for three years' residence.

J. TRASK: I second that motion by the delegate from Molokai.

CHAIRMAN: Is that Section 6? Of what document?

ASHFORD: That language comes from Proposal No. 6 and is a new section, Section 11 in Proposal 22 in substitution for the last paragraph of Section 10. I would like to speak to the proposal -- to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: You may.

ASHFORD: Everyone who is familiar with the operations of our territorial government knows how outrageously the three year residence provision has been evaded or flaunted. This is a constitutional provision to prevent that and to prevent it in the most effective way, because very often before the legislature or any branch of interested citizens, any group of interested citizens, catches up with the violating officers the person who has been employed has been employed for three years and has therefore established residence. Now the provisions of this proposal which was suggested as an amendment -- moved as an amendment to [Committee] Proposal No. 22 provides that no one who has been employed in violation of the section or by the federal government here shall have that period of employment construed as the necessary period of residence. This is a true protection of the three year residence requirement.

A. TRASK: I wholeheartedly agree with the movant, the delegate from Molokai. This provision has been in the books for a long time. It was fought for by my father vigorously in the depression years, 1933, and I certainly think that it should be in the Constitution permanently, not only for the benefit of those in private employ -- in public employment, but that the private employers in the territory may get wise and hire local people for local employment.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to ask the committee why they did not adopt this proposal. They evidently gave it a lot of consideration.

OKINO: If you will refer to the committee report, page number 7, paragraph number 5, you will note the following: "Proposal No. 6 relating to government office or employment has been adopted in part. No person shall be appointed an officer under the provisions of Section 10 of this committee proposal unless such person is a citizen of this State and shall have resided in the State for at least three years."

Your committee recommended that the remainder of this Proposal No. 6 be referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters for the reason that the subject matter is related to civil service laws which are now under consideration of said Committee on Miscellaneous Matters. You will note as you refer to Section 72 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii 1945, similar provision is a statutory matter, and your committee felt that that portion of Proposal No. 6 may adequately be regulated by statute.

LOPER: I would like to raise one question about the proposed amendment. If the language recommended for inclusion in Committee Proposal 22, the last paragraph of Section 10, is the exact wording of Proposal No. 6, there's no provision for bringing school teachers into the Hawaiian Islands from outside, and we have during past years had to employ from a hundred to a hundred and fifty teachers from outside of the territory each year. During the period of years, some years back, it went as high as 300 and we are still understaffed. Of course, we always give preference to local people but we do not get enough yet to fill all those positions.

CHAIRMAN: As the Chair understood the proposal, it included that. Is that correct, Delegate Ashford?

ASHFORD: That's true, the only exception is the teaching staff of the University. I was not aware that there was a shortage of teachers. I knew a lot had been brought in from the mainland and our experience was that the local teachers, the locally trained teachers were better than the malihinis.

HEEN: The paragraph as written in this Committee Proposal No. 3 refers only to officers of the State, and the employees like those who teach in the University and those who teach in the public schools are not officers, they are employees. This section is limited to the appointment of officers under the provisions of this article.

OKINO: That is correct. That is the reason why we have said that it was adopted -- a portion of the Proposal No. 6 was adopted. With reference to employees, we thought it would be a statutory matter.

ANTHONY: I think that this is a very bad amendment. What we're going to do if we adopt this amendment is to have a sort of ingrowing situation here. In other words, we can't get -- draw on the vast resources of the United States for experienced personnel in fields in which possibly we do not have proper persons to fill the jobs here.

I'll give you one specific example. You take in the courts. We have a terrific job to get a court reporter and you can go up and down this land and you can't find anybody who is a competent court reporter. The reason for it is, it's a highly skilled job. Most of the court reporters that are presently working in our courts have come from the mainland. They have had years of experience there and they have come down here.

Now, this sort of an amendment to my way of thinking is laudible in its design to protect our own people, but in reality it's going to injure us because it's going to prevent us from drawing on resources from the rest of the forty-eight states. Leave this matter to legislation. The legislature will take care of this all right. They will provide for residence requirements, but don't freeze it in the Constitution so that we can't get people outside of the territory -- outside of the State and we just would be left high and dry with no employees competent to do the work in a specific case.

SMITH: May I ask the chairman of the committee if any other state constitutions have such an article in their constitution?

OKINO: I believe not.

AKAU: I would agree with the delegate from the fourth district if he had said this ten years ago when our boys and girls perhaps were not moving along as rapidly in the fields of science and education, and sociology and law even, but I think today we are arriving at a real good pace of getting trained people from our University who have had some experience. Now, the example of a court reporter may be one of the few exceptions. There may be others. Perhaps some little clause might be added to make allowance, or practical legislation might be able to make some allowance by adding a clause. But I don't agree with the fact that we can't always find people here. If we look hard enough we can find them, teachers, workers in our pineapple experimental labs and even in the courts.

CROSSLEY: I know that the popular thing would probably be to get up here and agree that the amendment is good and that we can do what the last speaker and one of the previous speakers from the fifth district said, "Get wise to ourselves in business and hire local boys." But I wonder just how much they know about what they are talking. How many people do I hire in my companies, for instance, who are not local? I don't think they know or they wouldn't have made the statement because I am one of the coast haoles in my company, and I have been here over twenty years, and there is one other. The rest are all local. But there does come a time when you can't find local people. On the one hand you tell us to go out and build new industries, employ more people, and at the same time you condemn us if in doing such a thing we hire someone from outside the territory.

Now, what is so sacred about this territory? If we were one of the forty-eight states and had crossed a state line, there wouldn't be a great deal of attention paid to it, but because we have a body of water in between us, why that seems to make us some sort of sacred ground, regardless of whether we have qualified people or not. A court reporter is not an isolated instance. All you have to do is to start a new business here, for instance the flower business, and go out and get a trained horticulturist and see how many have qualified, see how many people have had the experience.

Now then, what should we do? Should we not build a new industry because of a restrictive clause? Should I sit in here as an employer and hear twice in fifteen minutes the condemnation that the present employers are not very wise to themselves. I would venture to say that 99.44 per cent of the employees in the pineapple industry are local, and when that industry was singled out and called by name, I took especial resentment because in my own company, in over three hundred employees there were only two who were not born in these islands.

KELLERMAN: May I point out the fact that our present Teachers' College has a capacity of one hundred teachers a year. It now does not turn out, according to our statutory requirement of certification, enough teachers to man the public schools with the vastly increasing number of children coming into the schools in the next ten years. It seems very unlikely, as a statement made to me by the dean of the Teachers' College, that they will be able to increase that number of teachers for at least eight years.

[A portion of the debates and the vote on Delegate Ashford's amendment are not on the tape. Delegate Ashford's amendment was defeated.]

CHAIRMAN: The question before the committee is the last section of Committee Proposal No. 22 as it stands. If there is no further discussion, all those in favor of this section will say "aye."

DELEGATE: Question.

MAU: Are we considering the last paragraph now?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. That's what we have been considering for the last 30 minutes, I believe.

MAU: I thought you had two or three amendments to it.

CHAIRMAN: The amendments have been lost. The amendment lost.

MAU: What are you voting on now?

CHAIRMAN: I believe the Chair might have been out of order, but I don't think so. All those in favor of the paragraph as moved will say "aye." Opposed. The last paragraph is carried.

HEEN: I move for a reconsideration of the fourth paragraph of this Section 10. I think we went through that too hurriedly.

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we reconsider paragraph four. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. All those in favor will please raise their right hand. All those opposed. Motion to reconsider is carried.

HEEN: The paragraph reads: "The governor shall grant commissions to all officers elected or appointed pursuant to this Constitution." Now the governor is elected under this Constitution. Is he to issue a commission to himself? Is that the intention of this particular paragraph?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Okino, can you answer that question?

OKINO: I'm afraid not. I don't think the committee gave any special attention to that very specific question.

LARSEN: Could I answer that? When the King of England abdicated he had to sign his own abdication.

HEEN: That was with reference to his removal but this is in connection with the election of the governor.

CHAIRMAN: Does the delegate have an amendment to propose?

HEEN: I don't think you need that paragraph at all. If an executive officer is appointed by the governor and nominated, "and by with the consent of the Senate appointed by the governor," all he has to do is to issue the commission showing what he did in the way of appointment. You don't need any constitutional provision for that. There is nothing like this in the Organic Act or, as stated by my colleague here, there is nothing like that in the Federal Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

OKINO: I might say that that particular paragraph is incorporated in some constitutions of some other states. We got that.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion.

ANTHONY: I move we delete it.

MAU: I would be in favor of that motion but I was just wondering, before that motion is put, whether the committee had considered whether or not this provision could not be carried out by the legislature itself.

OKINO: I think it could, and I don't think the committee members will too strenuously object to the deletion of that paragraph.

LARSEN: I second that, Delegate Anthony's motion.

HEEN: I move that that paragraph be deleted.

DELEGATE: Second.

PORTEUS: As I understand it, we talked on the sentence, not on the paragraph. Now the motion is to delete the paragraph. I have heard no discussion about the catch-all provision here, but if you don't provide for the manner of appointment of an officer and unless it is otherwise proposed by law, this is the way you pick them up right in here. So I would like some discussion on the second sentence before you start deleting that sentence itself. As I understand it, that second sentence is a catch-all provision. If you don't say in the Constitution how a necessary officer is selected either by appointment or election, and the legislature overlooks providing by law for his appointment or selection, then you have a provision that says what will happen.

HEEN: I withdraw my amendment that was offered by me and make this motion to amend. Amend paragraph four by deleting the first section of that paragraph -- first sentence of that paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: I believe there'll have to be one other change.

HEEN: And change the word "he" in the second sentence to "The governor."

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion? All those in favor of the motion to amend will say "aye." All those opposed, "no." The amendment is carried.

ANTHONY: Has Section 5 been adopted -- agreed upon by the Convention?

CHAIRMAN: It has.

ANTHONY: I was not here when it was --

CHAIRMAN: Did you say Section 5 or paragraph five?

ANTHONY: Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that what would be properly before the house is the adoption of paragraph four as amended.

ANTHONY: Am I out of order to address myself to that now, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Address yourself to Section 5, you mean?

ANTHONY: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: You would be unless there is a motion to reconsider.

LARSEN: I so move, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I would like to ask for the adoption of paragraph four, Section 10, as amended, first.

CROSSLEY: I so move. My colleague will second.

HOLROYDE: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: The adoption of paragraph four, Section 10 as amended has been moved. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. It is carried.

Delegate Anthony is recognized.

RICHARDS: I rise to a point of order. I should think that we should close off Section 10 and tentatively adopt Section 10 before we proceed to the discussion of other sections. I move that Section 10 be tentatively adopted.

DELEGATE: I second it.

OKINO: I rise to a point of information. Wasn't Section -- wasn't paragraph one of Section 10 deferred to consider whether or not the departments shall be limited to twenty?

CHAIRMAN: I believe it was.

OKINO: Yes, I believe that was deferred.

ASHFORD: Was it not adopted with instructions to prepare something in the ordinances that would delay its absolute effectiveness for a period of four years?

CROSSLEY: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN: If that is the understanding of the committee we'll let it go that way, as I recall it. Otherwise, I'll ask the Clerk to look back. Are there any objections?

Delegate Richard's motion is in order.

RICHARDS: I now renew my motion.

HOLROYDE: If you'll add the words "as amended," I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 10 in its entirety, as amended, be adopted. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

ANTHONY: I wasn't here when Section 5 was voted on and I wish that somebody would make a motion for reconsideration. I've got a simple suggestion to make.

J. TRASK: I so move.

SILVA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 5 of Proposal No. 22 be reconsidered. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

ANTHONY: I suggest the substitution of the word "proper" in the second line for the word "faithful." I think it carries a little different connotation. Maybe the Style Committee would feel that that was a style matter, but I think "faithful" is the appropriate word.

SILVA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the word "proper" in Sec -- I understand that the word "proper" is to be replaced by the word "faithful." All those in favor of the motion will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

OHRT: I have an amendment that will add a new section to Proposal 22.

KING: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Will you hold it, please?

KING: If Delegate -- Mr. Chairman, if Delegate Ohrt will reserve his motion, is it proper now to adopt Section 5, as amended?

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

KING: I so move.

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved that Section 5, as amended, be adopted. All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Carried.

OHRT: I have an amendment that will add a new section to [Committee] Proposal 22. I think it's been circularized and on all of the desks. It reads:

> Section 11. The governor shall appoint an administrative manager of state affairs whose term shall be indefinite at the pleasure of the governor. The governor may delegate any or all of his administrative powers to the administrative manager. The administrative manager shall be assisted by such aides as may be provided by law.

I move that that amendment be adopted.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

OHRT: Speaking to that section, I think those of us who have to administer government departments know that one of the essentials is that you have enough help around you. Now most of you are familiar with the governor's office. He sits up there in a little cubby hole, he has three or four people around him but he has about seventy-five different units that he has got to keep in touch with, and in the time he has, why it's just impossible for anyone to do that. I think that if you really want to have the Territory properly administered you have to give him the assistance.

CROSSLEY: I would like to ask Mr. Ohrt, is this creating another Bassett department?

OHRT: No, it's just to give the governor the assistants around him that he should have. I notice in the judiciary section they provided for an administrative assistant. Apparently the chief justice recognizes that he's got to have some help, and without help I don't see how the governor can run that office.

HAYES: I'd like to know what the lieutenant governor is going to do.

KAGE: May I partially answer that question? In Section 2 of [Committee] Proposal 22 it says here, "The lieutenant governor shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law." And in our report of the committee we find that, "Because the lieutenant governor has very little to do, your committee recommends that the legislature by law allocate the usual duties of the secretary, hereinabove mentioned, to the office of lieutenant governor." And I have a report here made out by the Legislative Reference Bureau and it outlines the duties of the Secretary of Hawaii and the powers of the lieutenant governor and I see that he has quite a bit to do. Government administration as is today is not a "hit or miss" affair. The governor has to do so many things that if you would like to have him do a good job, I think it's absolutely necessary that he has an administrative assistant to coordinate all of the administrative branches of the government.

MAU: I wonder if the sponsor of the motion would agree to this amendment. "The governor may delegate any or all of his administrative powers to the lieutenant governor."

OHRT: No, I don't think that would work out.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony has asked for the floor. No? Delegate Kage.

KAGE: If we were to go back to Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 22, we deleted that particular section that says "or as may be delegated to him by the governor."

J. TRASK: I am just wondering whether this amendment is not covered by the fourth paragraph in Section 10. It says, "The governor shall appoint, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, all officers for whose election or appointment provision is not otherwise made by this Constitution or by law." I personally believe that this is a statutory matter and I do not believe that it should be written in, as this fourth section in Section 10 should cover it. So I want to move at this time, Mr. Chairman -- no, I'll withdraw my motion.

FUKUSHIMA: I would like to ask Mr. Ohrt a question.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

FUKUSHIMA: If this amendment passes, would the function of the administrative manager to the governor be similar to what Mr. Bassett does for the mayor of Honolulu?

OHRT: Why, I thought that would come in, but you want to remember that the governor has a newspaper man over there at the present time. But that's not my idea of an administrative assistant. My idea of an administrative assistant is a man of the competence of say Ernest Kai who when he was over there as attorney general was doing administrative work for the governor instead of being the attorney general. That's the way it works. The governor calls in the department heads and they're brought in and taken away from their work and the governor has no one to depend on. And I think if you want to see the governor's office run properly, you better give him the help because that's one of the essentials of proper administration, that you have plenty of help.

FONG: We have already cluttered our Constitution with a lot of things, and I think that we could forego this provision in our Constitution. We have a legislature that will be able to provide for the proper help of the governor. The legislature has provided for the help of all the various departments. In other words, there are seven thousand government employees, I understand, and the legislature has provided for those employees. Now I can't see why the legislature, if the governor can prove that he needs this administrative assistance, why the legislature will not give it to him. Now the City and County mayor has shown to his supervisors that he needed an administrative assistant, and he got it. Now why shouldn't the governor be able to sell that to his legislators. I think this is purely statutory. I don't think that we should clutter our Constitution with too many of these small items.

LOPER: I'd like to speak briefly in favor of this by way of just simply asking the maker of the amendment one question. Delegate Ohrt, would you object to the change in the first line, saying "The governor may" instead of saying "The governor shall"? If you have a governor who doesn't want one, it wouldn't be unconstitutional for him to forego it.

OHRT: I would be very glad to accept that amendment. But, answering Delegate Fong, I had a great deal to do with trying to give the mayor an administrative assistant, and a public relations man is not my idea of public -- of an administrative assistant. Somebody that knows just as much about these various departments as the department head himself, or almost as much, is my idea of an administrative assistant, but public relations and all the press releases, those are very different things.

Now I don't believe that the governor should have to ask the legislature whether he can have this type of assistance. I think it's so necessary that he ought to be permitted to employ it without legislative approval. This is one little shift in there where the governor, I think, should be separate from the legislature.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Richards.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman, the legislature of course, could - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Richards was recognized, Senator.

RICHARDS: Mr. Chairman, I yield to the senator.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen.

HEEN: Under this provision the legislature can nullify the provision by making no appropriation for the compensation of the administrative manager.

OHRT: I'd be willing to take that chance because it would indicate that the Convention wanted to give the governor the help that he really needs. Now if you analyze the governor's office, how many hours has he got in a week and how much night work has he got to do? How many of these extemporaneous speeches does he have to devote some time to? I think - - according to Delegate Tavares, he said that the attorney general's office spends a great deal of time writing speeches for the governor. Now there is so much miscellaneous work going through the governor's office and if you really want him to administer the department heads, then you must give him some help.

RICHARDS: There is one question I would like to ask the attorneys here. That is, it says here in the second sentence, "The governor may delegate any or all of his administrative powers to the administrative manager." Now as far as creating the administrative manager is concerned, I can understand my cohort from the fifth district that the legislature could create such a position, but will the legislature have power to permit the governor to delegate any and all of his administrative powers witout having something in the Constitution about it? I raise that question.

ROBERTS: I'd like to - - May I have order, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee please come to order? Is that satisfactory?

ROBERTS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I'd like to speak in favor of the principles suggested by the amendment to the section now before us. We adopted in our article on the judiciary that there was need for administrative assistance and administrative help. It seems to me that there is as much urgency if not more for administrative assistance in the office of the governor. The fact that you may make no appropriation doesn't answer your question because you make no provision for appropriation in the section dealing with the judiciary.

I do have some objection to the delegation of power which we discussed yesterday. I think if we adopted the identical language which we used in the previous article dealing with the judiciary that we would accomplish the same purpose. I think there ought to be an administrative director similar to the one suggested before to serve at the pleasure of the governor. I will therefore move, Mr. Chairman, to amend the proposal - - amend the amendment to provide: "The governor shall appoint an administrative director to serve at his pleasure."

Now that language is identical with the language that we have already adopted in Section 8 of the article on the judiciary and I would suggest that as much urgency exists for having it here as exists in having it in the other section. I would therefore move that amendment.

H. RICE: I second the motion of Delegate Roberts. In the Army and the Navy you have a chief of staff, you need one in government just as much. I think this carries on the purpose of the delegate who made - - who proposed this amendment. I don't believe the governor should delegate his powers but he should have a chief of staff, he should have the assistants, an assistant manager, you might say, to go around and pick up certain information that the governor should have and get it in shape for the governor, and I think that Delegate Roberts' suggestion is a good one and I say that I'll support this Section 11 as amended.

OHRT: I'll accept the amendment.

SILVA: There's a question in my mind. I think that the word "at" should be deleted and in lieu thereof insert the word "for." Rather than "at his pleasure," the words should be "for his pleasure."

ASHFORD: I will support the latest amendment, but I wish to call the attention of the delegates to the fact that there is no comparison between the chief justice and the governor. The chief justice has thrust down his throat certain necessities of administration. The great qualifications for his office are a sound judgment and good legal scholarship. Those qualifications can exist without having any administrative ability and therefore an administrator is vital.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask the chairman of the Committee on Executive Powers and Functions a question?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

SHIMAMURA: I understand that this original proposal was considered in the committee and rejected. Is that true?

OKINO: Do you mean this amendment now offered?

SHIMAMURA: No, the original amendment offered by Delegate Ohrt. My understanding is that that was considered and rejected.

OKINO: It wasn't really rejected, but it was passed up. To be more exact, what I mean is that it was discussed but no vote was taken on it. Delegate Ohrt decided that he will furnish that to the floor by way of suggested amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any other question on the amendment? The amendment before the house now is the amendment which reads, a new section, "The governor shall appoint an administrative director to serve at his pleasure."

HEEN: Shouldn't that word "shall," shouldn't it be read "may"?

CHAIRMAN: When the section was last amended, Delegate Roberts put the word "shall" back in.

ROBERTS: I used the language which is in Section 8 of the judiciary article. The language there says, "He shall appoint an administrative director to serve at his pleasure."

SAKAKIHARA: I offer further amendment. Delete all the words "administrative" in Section 11 and insert in lieu thereof, "campaign."

CHAIRMAN: Beg your pardon?

ANTHONY: I hope that the delegates don't vote for or against this motion, this amendment, having in mind what they've done with the judiciary article. That argument has been advanced but to my way of thinking there is no comparison at all, as the delegate from Molokai said. The judges are lawyers, learned in the law. They're not supposed to take care of the typewriters and the pencils and what not, and this job is supposed to take away from the judge his administrative detail and put it in the hands of an administrator who will leave the judge free to do his judicial duties.

So let's vote on this thing on its merits, let's not confuse it with the judiciary article. I don't feel seriously one way or other about it, but I don't want the two things confused.

MAU: With all due respect to my colleague from the fifth district who is sponsoring this amendment, I think that it's purely legislative. I think Delegate Anthony ought to realize that and vote accordingly. I don't see why we should clutter up the Constitution with legislative matters.

CHAIRMAN: If it's strictly not a constitutional matter, I think we should vote on it now.

LOPER: I'd like to ask Delegate Ohrt for his opinion of Delegate Roberts' amendment.

OHRT: I have accepted Delegate Roberts' amendment. And I think the approach to this -- we've had two attorneys tell us that the attorney's department or the judiciary is quite different from the governor's. I think it depends on which side of the fence you're standing on. I see the governor as being responsible for the expenditures of some sixty-six million and unless he can cover those departments himself and show some leadership, why millions can be spent or misspent. From my point of view as a taxpayer, I think the governor is probably much more important than the judges over there.

H. RICE: Isn't the trouble that too many of our governors have been lawyers?

CHAIRMAN: I believe that the conversation is getting a little out of hand. We'll call for a vote. All those in favor of the amendment will say "aye." Opposed. I think it would be sufficient if we had a standing vote. All those in favor of the amendment will please stand.

DELEGATES: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: How many want roll call? Roll call is ordered.

KING: Point of information. May the proposed section be read again in its final form?

CHAIRMAN: As the Chair understands it, the section is: "The governor shall appoint an administrative director to to serve at his pleasure."
The Clerk will call the roll.

Ayes, 36. Noes, 14 (Anthony, Apoliona, Ashford, Cockett, Fong, Hayes, Kawahara, Lai, Nielsen, Sakai, Shimamura, St. Sure, J. Trask, Yamauchi.) Not voting, 13 (Arashiro, Dowson, Gilliland, Ihara, Kauhane, Lee, Luiz, Mizuha, Noda, Phillips, Tavares, White, Wirtz.)

CHAIRMAN: The motion is carried. The Chair will declare a short recess while we consider the latest proposal.

APOLIONA: Second the motion.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come to order?

HOLROYDE: I move for the adoption of Section 11, as amended.

WOOLAWAY: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 11, as amended, be adopted. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: This amendment that I have on my desk, is someone bringing it up?

HOLROYDE: I move the adoption of Committee Proposal 22 as amended.

FONG: I have an amendment, amendment to Committee Proposal No. 10. Add a new section to read as follows: "Treasurer. The treasurer shall be elected by the duly qualified electors of the State and shall hold office for a term of four years." I move for the adoption of the amendment.

SAKAKIHARA: Second the motion.

KING: That was an amendment to Proposal No. 10. The Committee of the Whole is still considering [Committee] Proposal No. 22.

FONG: Section 10.

CHAIRMAN: Is that an amendment to Section 10?

FONG: Oh no, this will be a -- I delete that. I want to withdraw that and add a new section to that [Committee] Proposal No. 22, reading as follows: "Treasurer: The treasurer shall be elected by the duly qualified electors of the state and shall hold office for a term of four years."

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we add another section. Has that amendment been passed around? Is there any discussion on that?

FONG: I'd like to state that I have consulted the report of the Legislative Holdover Committee [sic] on pages 189, 187, and 186, and have looked at the appendix to see which states appoint their treasurer and which states have their treasurer elected. I find that out of the forty-eight jurisdictions there is only one state which appoints their treasurer and that is the sovereign State of Virginia. I feel that the treasurer is the fiscal officer of the state, that he should be elected by the people and be free and independent of the chief executive.
I have heretofore propounded the theory that the attorney general and the auditor should be elected. I do not go as far as the others in trying to elect all the various officials of government. I feel that we should have a governor, a lieutenant governor, an attorney general, an auditor and a treasurer who should all be elected by the people. I do not propose to go any further than that. And I feel that the treasurer should be independent and free of the governor.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion of the motion? All those in favor will please say "aye." Opposed.

DELEGATES: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: Will a division of the house be sufficient? Standing vote? Roll call was demanded. How many want roll call? It is sufficient.

KING: Point of information. I would like to ask the sponsor of the last amendment. He remarked that he felt that the governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, auditor, and treasurer should all be elected, but the amendment only provides for the election of the treasurer. Is it the intention of the sponsor to propose other amendments after this one?

FONG: No, I have been defeated in all the rest except this one. The governor and the lieutenant governor have been provided for by --

CHAIRMAN: Delegate King, I feel any further discussion is out of order since the vote has already started. We're going to have a roll call. The Chair did not rule on the vote taken. The Clerk will please call the roll. There was sufficient number.

Ayes, 16. Noes, 34 (Anthony, Apoliona, Castro, Cockett, Corbett, Crossley, Doi, Fukushima, Heen, Holroyde, Kage, Kanemaru, Kellerman, Lai, Larsen, Loper, Lyman, Mau, Ohrt, Okino, Porteus, C. Rice, H. Rice, Roberts, Sakai, Sakakihara, Shimamura, Silva, Smith, A. Trask, Wist, Woolaway, Yamauchi, Bryan.) Not voting, 13 (Arashiro, Dowson, Gilliland, Hayes, Ihara, Kometani, Lee, Luiz, Mizuha, Phillips, Tavares, White, Wirtz.)

CHAIRMAN: The motion is lost.

A. TRASK: I'd like to move for reconsideration of paragraph four of Section 10 which as amended upon reconsideration reads as follows: "The governor shall appoint, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, all officers for whose election or appointment provision is not otherwise made by this Constitution or by law."

MAU: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we reconsider paragraph four—is that correct?—of Section 10.

A. TRASK: Yes, if you please.

PORTEUS: May I have some statement as to why so I can vote intelligently upon it?

A. TRASK: A provision of this type appears to be in the Federal Constitution, but I think the wording here is such that it does not state the sense of the Federal Constitution, namely, it appears to me here that the governor shall appoint without provision made by the Constitution or by law, appoint officers and so forth, only if he can induce the Senate to confirm them. Now, it seems to me that you are going to therefore expend money for officers without payment. Now I do know that the sense and the thought is that the governor shall appoint people confirmed by the Senate where there are responsibilities or duties conferred, but no provision made for their appointment. That is the sense of that particular provision, but this particular sentence, it seems to me, does not state that particular sense.

J. TRASK: Point of order. I should think that that would be sufficient cause to call for a vote on the reconsideration of the section.

CHAIRMAN: It may well be. All those in favor of the motion to reconsider will say "aye." Opposed. The section is open for reconsideration.

HEEN: I think there's one word there, two words there that should be deleted, "election of " - - "election or." If he's elected, he doesn't have to be appointed by the governor. "He shall appoint, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, all officers for whose election or appointment provision is not otherwise made by this Constitution or by law."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, perhaps if we ask the delegate who asked to reconsider this paragraph what his amendment is, it would help. Does the delegate have an amendment to offer?

A. TRASK: Not immediately, Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: Will the speaker yield for a minute, please?

A. TRASK: Yes.

ANTHONY: Mr. Trask has - - the delegate has raised a question with me during the recess and I was wondering if the delegate would not be content to leave it this way. Obviously his purpose is to make this conform to the Federal Constitution, and he has some doubt whether or not this language does it. I think that was a clear import of the section. Couldn't we get this report out and then before we vote on it, on the Committee of the Whole report, maybe we could iron out any difficulty that the delegate has with that rather than take the time to debate it at this point.

A. TRASK: Yes, with that proviso I would second the motion, and let it go at that.

CHAIRMAN: That would not be a proper motion, however.

J. TRASK: I think the proper motion would be to withdraw the motion to reconsider Section 4 - - paragraph four of Section 10. I withdraw the motion for - - I so move, Mr. Chairman, that we tentatively pass Section - - adopt Section 4 - - paragraph four of Section 10 tentatively.

CHAIRMAN: As amended?

J. TRASK: As amended.

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we again adopt paragraph four of Section 10, as amended. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

ROBERTS: Wouldn't it be sufficient if you left that thing to the Style Committee? The intent is clear. We can take care of the language on that.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that it's too late to discuss it very much further, although that is a good idea.

HOLROYDE: I move we adopt Section 10 now as amended.

CHAIRMAN: We did.

HOLROYDE: I move we adopt Committee Proposal 22 as amended.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we adopt Committee Proposal No. 22, as amended. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

J. TRASK: I move that the committee rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again so that the chairman might be able to file his report.

APOLIONA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we rise, report progress and beg leave to sit again.

KING: Will the sponsor of that motion authorize the chairman to file his written report at that time?

CHAIRMAN: I believe he did.
All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

JULY 5, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come to order.

ROBERTS: Would it be in order to obtain a five minute recess so that we can read this report?

CHAIRMAN: I think so.

ROBERTS: May I so move?

LAI: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You may. If there's no objection, a five minute recess is declared.

(RECESS)

A. TRASK: With reference to second paragraph of Section 1 of the Committee of the Whole Report No. 17, on page 2 - -

CHAIRMAN: Would you like to hold that for just a second, please.

A. TRASK: I will.

CHAIRMAN: The business before the committee this morning is the consideration of Committee of the Whole Report No. 17 with attached recommendations to the Convention, and I think in order to properly discuss this, it would be in order that we have a motion for the adoption of the report.

OHRT: I move that Committee of the Whole Report No. 17 be adopted.

HOLROYDE: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we adopt Committee of the Whole Report No. 17.

A. TRASK: It's an excellent report. I just want to call to the attention of the Convention, however, that on page 2, paragraph two on Committee of the Whole Report No. 17, the third sentence with respect to the election of the governor is this expression, "In case of a tie vote or a contested election, the selection of governor shall be determined in such manner as may be provided by law." I have taken up this matter with Judge Shimamura of the Ordinance and Continuity of Laws Committee and with Delegate Heen. The time that the State legislature will be elected will be the same election that the governor and other officers will be elected. In case there is a tie vote for the governor or a contested election, the contested election may be provided for by the Supreme Court, but with reference to a tie vote, the legislature would have at that time not made provisions in law. So I think the report should suggest that - - or the report have a notation that the continuity of laws section will make adequate provision for this tie vote. Now, H. R. 49 does not provide for any such contingency and so I would move that the report in that respect be amended and I will - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Trask, are you referring to a tie vote in case of the first election of the first governor?

A. TRASK: That is correct, and so in the discussion of Section 2, paragraph two, that consideration should be included by a sentence perhaps in the last paragraph thereof before the comment made on Section 1, of paragraph - - third paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: I ask the delegate to refer to page 3 in the middle of the page where it starts, "It was also agreed that provisions for the election of the first governor who would probably be elected at a special election would be made in the section on Ordinances and Continuity of Law." Wouldn't that cover the tie vote on the first governor?

A. TRASK: Not adequately, with the consideration in mind perhaps with respect to my other statement.

HEEN: I don't think it's necessary to amend the written report of this committee. What might be done is this. There might be a motion that it's the sense of this committee that adequate provision be made in the article on continuity of laws to take care of a tie vote.

A. TRASK: I would so move.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any second to that motion?

TAVARES: I don't want to second the motion because I don't think it's necessary at all. We have a law now which, unless we repeal it in the Constitution, it will be in effect when the Constitution goes into effect. Section 173 of our Revised Laws which says, "In case of the failure of an election by reason of the equality of votes between two or more candidates, the ties shall forthwith be decided by lot under the supervision of the Secretary of the Territory" and so forth. Now, whoever takes over the Secretary's duties will have to - - will decide the tie in that manner. There is a law providing for it which will be in effect.

CHAIRMAN: Will you hold just a minute, Delegate Trask?

DOI: On the discussion of the same question raised by Delegate Trask, it says on page 3, Committee of the Whole Report No. 17, that, "It was also agreed that provisions for the election of the first governor, who would probably be elected at a special election, would be made in the section on ordinances and continuity of law," and I think that could be extended to include ties and contested elections. So I don't think we need to amend nor to make any motion to carry over suggestions to the Committee on Continuity and Ordinances.

SHIMAMURA: At the time Delegate Trask discussed the matter with me, I asked the query whether or not there was not a section in present Revised Laws providing for tie votes, and now I discover in our Revised Laws the section adverted to by Delegate Tavares. Therefore I think it's covered since under our sections on continuity of laws with Section 1 thereunder, or Section 2 rather, provides for the continuity of all existing laws of the Territory.

A. TRASK: I wondered whether or not probably it could be said that this territorial statute contemplated the office of governor. Now, certainly we've never had any elected governor and a person may very well contest the fact if he is defeated. It's a real problem and I'd like to pose the question because I do not believe, as I told Delegate Shimamura, that this law, this territorial law did not contemplate such an office as governor.

KING: I feel that either the Revised Laws would hold or the chairman of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law can accept this discussion as a mandate to amplify the provision that he's going to bring in in accordance with the paragraph on page 3. In other words, it doesn't say explicitly that he shall provide in such a proposal for a tie, but it does say it shall provide for a special election of the governor prior to the final adoption of the Constitution. I think that Delegate Shimamura should take this discussion as instruction to include in there some provision regarding a tie vote if he doesn't want to let the Revised Laws stand, or his committee doesn't want to.

CHAIRMAN: Is that sufficient, Delegate Trask? Any further discussion on this report?

ASHFORD: On page 6 just about the middle where it refers to "increases or decreases based upon reasonable classifications so as not to constitute a discrimination against the governor or lieutenant governor as members of the applicable class," I think what was intended by the Committee of the Whole was that it should not constitute a discrimination for or against, and I, therefore, move for the insertion of the words "for or" between "discrimination" and "against."

TAVARES: I think the word "against" is broad enough to mean for or against. There's certainly no intention there of making a distinction. I think that's going a little far. A discrimination for is a discrimination against in some ways. I think that the intent is clear there. What it means is that when a law is reasonably drawn which places the governor in a reasonable classification with other members of the same class, and there is a uniform cut for the members of that class and in a proper classification, that the law will not be invalidated; and the same way with an increase, if it's a uniformity increase with relation to the same class. I think that is clear enough from the context. I have no objections to adding a few words but I really think that the intent is clear.

CHAIRMAN: There was no second to the motion to amend.

NIELSEN: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we add the words "for or" between the word "discrimination" and the word "against" in the middle of page 6 so that the intent would read "so as not to constitute a discrimination for or against the governor or lieutenant governor as members of the applicable class." Is there any further discussion?

AKAU: Isn't that really a question of style? Couldn't we leave that to the Style Committee?

CHAIRMAN: I think you'll find, Delegate Akau, that the Committee on Style does not deal with the writings of the report, just with the articles that are for inclusion into the Constitution.

AKAU: Well, discriminate means to be for or against a particular issue, it seems to me. It's very obvious that we don't need it.

ANTHONY: There's a good deal in what Delegate Akau said. The Style Committee did take that very language, "equal measure," concluded that those words were not workable, and in the article on judiciary changed it. I don't think that it's necessary for us to amend this report. If you will examine what we did with the article on the judiciary, you will find that the words "apply in equal measure" were deleted and other language was used. So I don't think it's necessary to amend this report. The intent is perfectly clear.

ASHFORD: It is my view that the intent is not perfectly clear when the committee report construes it, and the committee report construes it as "discrimination against" only.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion?

ROBERTS: I have a question on this same paragraph, on compensation.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, does it pertain to this discrimination for or against the governor?

ROBERTS: No, it does not.

CHAIRMAN: Well, let's withhold it, and let's get a vote on that. All those in favor of the motion to include the words "for or" will say "aye." Opposed. Carried. The words will be included.

ROBERTS: The language of the section as we adopted it in the Committee of the Whole previously reads that, "In no event shall the compensation be less than $18,000 or $12,000 respectively," and then three lines later it says "unless by law" it can be changed. I have a little difficulty there with the meaning. If it is to be a minimum fixed and in no event to be less than, then it seems to me that "unless by law" changes that basic thing in the section.

CHAIRMAN: I think that -- Delegate Roberts, may I interrupt you for a moment. I think it refers to the words, "and shall not be increased or decreased for the term unless by law." In other words, the minimum of $18,000. The salary might be set at 20,000 and then it might be increased or decreased from 20,000, but only by law applying equally if it's done within the term.

ROBERTS: Then you cannot change 18,000 and 12,000 in any event. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: No, that is the minimum.

ANTHONY: That is not -- that is obviously not correct. The purpose of this was to permit the governor to suffer any general cut that every other officer including judicial officers would take. The language is perfectly clear to my way of thinking.

ROBERTS: Well, I had the same recollection that this was to be a minimum fixed and then permitted to change depending upon the economic conditions in the community. If they happen to be going up or down, there would be general adjustments made for the salaries of the governor and lieutenant governor, but this language says that "in no event shall it be less than." If it says, "in no event," then you can't provide an event under which it does change. Am I wrong in the construction?

CHAIRMAN: Personally I am inclined to agree with you.

TAVARES: I think that there is reason for the delegate's feeling of doubt about this, the meaning of this sentence, but I think the history of it would make it clear that, at least as I interpret it, what it meant was that the initial salary fixed by the legislature must in no event be less than these particular amounts. However, if later there is a uniform pay cut or uniform pay increase applicable to the same class, then such pay cut or pay increase may validly be granted during the term. I think when you have in the same sentence as the words "in no event" the exception, "unless," that they do qualify the "in no event." That's the way I read it. It's a little bit awkward but I think that's what it means.

CHAIRMAN: Would it be satisfactory to Delegate Roberts if we let the Style Committee ponder that question as long as the intent is clear?

ROBERTS: I was thinking of the Style Committee because I sit there, too, and I'd like to get the expression of feeling from the Committee of the Whole. My feeling would be that the words "in no event" should be eliminated and to say that the legislature shall set the salary at 18,000 and 12,000 unless by law applying otherwise.

CHAIRMAN: I think that was the intent of the Committee of the Whole when it first came up.

ASHFORD: I think it should be made clear that it is the intent. I concur with Mr. Roberts. I think otherwise our Committee on Style might have to refer back to get the expression of the committee.

CROSSLEY: It was my understanding that these figures would apply as minimum figures, and that they could never be cut by law except where there was a general cut in all of the salaries of the territorial government. It could be raised and lowered above this figure at the will of the legislature in a term not to apply in the term of the office, however. In other words you could go to 25,000, back to 20,000 or play at any figure above these minimums, but these minimums could never be cut unless there was a general cut through all territorial salaries. Then it would apply in equal measure.

ROBERTS: May I suggest that we eliminate the difficulty by deleting the words "in no event" and adding the word "not" after "shall," so that the sentence would read: "but shall not be less than 18,000 unless by law" etc., and leave out the words "in no event."

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CROSSLEY: If you do that, what's to prevent, then, the legislature from lowering this salary by itself.

ROBERTS: The rest of the paragraph says, "unless by law applying in equal measure," so they cannot change it up or down unless it's applied generally.

ANTHONY: I'd like to speak to this motion. The Style Committee had difficulty with that language, "equal measure," and I'm suggesting to Delegate Roberts that this particular section can be handled the same way it was done in the Style Committee and in Section 3 in the article on the judiciary. This is what is now before the delegation referring to the judges' salaries. "They shall receive for their services such compensation as may be provided by law which shall not be diminished during their respective terms of office unless by general law applying to all salaried officers of the State." Now if that's the sense of the body, as I understand it is, the Style Committee can dove-tail the provision that we've already adopted in the judiciary article and correct the difficulty that Delegate Roberts has—and I can see there is some difficulty with it—and make the two sections -- coordinate the two sections. I think the intent is perfectly clear that the governor shall accept any general cut that anybody else will take.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, one question. Would that clear up the problem of the minimum being stated, which was not stated in the other article?

ANTHONY: That could be handled. You could still state the minimum and still have the same proviso for the diminution of the minimum in the event of a general decrease as a result of change in economic conditions, applicable, of course, only in the event a general law applying to all State officers is passed.

ROBERTS: That suggestion is acceptable if it is the sense of this committee. We do not have to make any amendments to the section, and I will withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: Your motion has been withdrawn. Any further discussion on this point?

ROBERTS: I'd like, however, to move that it be the sense of this committee that the expressions that we have placed on the floor would be applicable to the Committee on Style.

CHAIRMAN: You may so move.

OKINO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the sentiment of the committee as presented here this morning be put in the record for the use of the Style Committee. Is that the intent, Delegate Roberts? All those in favor of that motion, please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Are there any other discussions? If not, the Chair will put the question.

TAVARES: I have two amendments which I would like to propose for the consideration of the Convention. I must apologize to the members. I hope someone will second each one for discussion. I was unfortunately absent the afternoon when there was further discussion on these sections, and I did not bring them to the attention of the Convention. I think they're important.

Taking up the first one, the proposed amendment to Section 8 of Committee Proposal No. 22, RD 1, I move to add at the end of the section the following sentence: "The legislature may provide by general law for granting commutations and pardons by the governor before conviction and for the granting of reprieves, commutations and pardons for impeachment and for the restoration by order of the governor of civil rights lost by reason of conviction of offenses by jurisdiction other than this state."

Mr. Chairman, I'm sorry, in my haste I left the word "commutations" in the second line of my suggestion. I think it has no place. May I reread that again? My amendment is that we insert the sentence "The legislature may provide by general law for granting"—and delete from my amendment the words "commutation and,"—"for granting pardons" and so forth.

WOOLAWAY: I will second the motion.

TAVARES: The reason for my motion is this. The Convention decided not to delete the words "after conviction." I still feel that the time may come when during the stress of heavy investigations or otherwise, the legislature may feel it desirable to give the governor some power to pardon before conviction in order to assist in investigations and induce persons to testify.

Secondly, I think that impeachment should not be subject to the untrammeled power of the governor. At one of my suggestions, I believe the legislature deleted -- I mean this Convention deleted the exception on impeachment and, of course, that would allow the governor to nullify an impeachment. I think that ought to be taken care of in this way, which by implication at least—unless we amend another section or another provision—show that commutations are subject to regulation by the legislature and they should prescribe conditions under which a pardon from a -- rather, I'm sorry, impeachment, rather, would be subject to pardon by the governor only under conditions laid down by the legislature.

Finally there is a hiatus in this pardoning section which is also very serious, I think, at least for the individuals concerned. We have had situations in which a man has been convicted in a jurisdiction other than the state of a felony, and he comes here and wants to vote. Now I raised the question, and it was not decided during the argument, and I have decisions here to show that the states, that is the authorities are divided on whether a disqualification to vote and hold office for felony applies only to felonies under convictions by the courts of the state, or whether it includes felonies, convictions by other jurisdictions. They are not evenly divided. I think there are -- in one situation there are two decisions one way, and one decision the other; but it is an open question and there is a conflict on whether that applies to foreign convictions. Now I believe it should apply to foreign convictions, and this will make it clear by implication that it does. I don't see why a man convicted of murder in the Federal Court here or in the State of California should have a greater right to vote here than a man convicted of murder in our own courts. And, therefore, I think we should make it clear that it applies to convictions in all jurisdictions.

Secondly, however, if it does, does the governor's pardoning power apply to those foreign convictions? Obviously, we cannot go into that foreign jurisdiction and give a pardon under the laws of that jurisdiction, and so there is another conflict of authority on that, or rather it's rather uncertain. I think there is only one decision on the point, directly in point, which says the governor does have the power to pardon against foreign offenses. I think that's very far-fetched and I don't think we should assume that power, but we should have the power to grant restoration of civil rights notwithstanding such convictions in foreign jurisdictions, and my amendment will take care of that in accordance with law. The legislature will have prescribed the conditions under which the governor, presumably after a hearing before a board or after recommendation by the Parole Board or some other investigation, that the legislature may provide that the governor may issue an order restoring civil rights.

Now that's important for a number of reasons. For one thing, our laws are not always the same as laws of other jurisdictions, and what we call a felony is sometimes -- or rather what we call a misdemeanor here is sometimes a felony in another jurisdiction. Some jurisdictions have very barbarous penalties for very slight offenses and, therefore, if a man is convicted of that offense in another jurisdiction our governor ought to be able to restore him to civil rights if it wasn't a serious offense. It would be a misdemeanor under our laws.

The other situation, if a man is convicted in a jurisdiction that doesn't have due process of law, like some of these Iron Curtain countries, we might feel that he was unjustly convicted, but to be on the safe side he should be disqualified and then restored to his civil rights in a regular process by order of the governor after a hearing to determine whether he was given due process and so forth.

Finally, there's another situation where a country has convicted a man, perhaps properly, of a felony. The country has now been overrun and taken over by another country and nobody is in position to grant a pardon from that offense, so our governor could then restore civil rights. I think my amendment is necessary.

ANTHONY: Delegate Tavares has spoken about three very distinct things. Number one, the power of the governor to give some person his blessing before conviction. That amendment I am against. We don't want the governor going around -- A man has committed a crime, he has not been convicted. We don't want any chief executive going around and saying, "Well, Joe, it's all right with me. Here's your pardon even though you haven't -- no case has been brought against you, even though you have not been convicted." That was debated fully on the floor of this house and I am against that amendment.

The other, the second question that he poses is whether or not conviction in a foreign jurisdiction would take away a person's civil rights. By an appropriate statement in our Committee of the Whole report, we can construe this language to include that. Therefore, I think that amendment is unnecessary.

The third suggestion that he makes is that he gives the governor the power to pardon in cases of impeachment. That, I think, is simply outrageous. Here if the legislature should impeach an officer or a judge, then the governor could turn around and say, "What the legislature has done is a lot of hot air. I am going to undo it." I'm against that. Now if there is any doubt as to whether or not the governor can pardon in cases of impeachment or removal of officers by the state legislature, certainly we ought to go back to the words of the Federal Constitution and insert appropriate language in Section 8 providing an exception, "except in cases of impeachment."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, one question. Would your remarks be applicable in view of the words, "provide by general law," in the first line?

ANTHONY: They certainly would. We don't want the legislature to provide by general law. There are three distinct things that we're talking about. We don't want the legislature to provide by general law that a man can commit a crime, not be tried, not charged, and pardoned by some benign friendly executive. I'm against that. If a man commits a crime, he ought to stand trial in the criminal courts and let justice take its course. After conviction, if the governor wants to pardon him, that's the responsibility of the governor; but this idea of having by lettres de cachet some secret blessing given to a criminal whose offense has not been made public I am against.

Now as to impeachment, I don't think we should have any statute that would authorize the chief executive, in cases of impeachment, to remove the effects of the impeachment.

TAVARES: I am a little surprised at the concern expressed that the governor might violate his authority in the case of pardoning before offenses were -- before conviction, and apparently no worry at all about 999,999 cases out of a million when he pardons after conviction. If the governor is so low, if he is so poor in judgment that he would violate his discretion in pardoning before conviction, why do we trust him with the 999,999 other cases of after conviction? If he can be bought in the one case out of a million maybe, or one case out of a hundred thousand before conviction, he can certainly be bought after conviction too. So why the distinction? Why trust the governor with so much power for pardons after conviction and be so afraid to trust him with a few cases before conviction? That's number one, Mr. Chairman, and I think that answers the argument.

Number two. I wonder where the last delegate -- the delegate who last spoke was when we removed the exception for commutations [sic] in this Convention. I mentioned the fact that unless we did what other constitutions did and allowed for some kind of restoration of civil rights after impeachment, the result would be that an impeachment above all other crimes would be the kind of a case where a man never got any commutation or never got any pardon, and so unless we provided for it by special provision that we ought to have it left out. Now it was decided to leave it out. I am now coming back to tie it up a little bit more and say, but the legislature is to provide by law for the conditions under which impeachment shall be granted. Now, don't you think the legislature is to be trusted under general law not to give the governor too much leeway when they have acted? I think that they can be trusted.

I think the other, the last point I suggest has been admitted to be well taken, so that evidently at least two of my points are well taken. Either we ought to put in the exception about impeachment and then provide a method of restoring civil rights after a reasonable time and under reasonable condition or we ought to leave my amendment here and let the legislature take care of it.

MAU: I say this smiling so that the movant won't take offense at what I am calling attention to. Many times it's been said on the floor that when a certain issue has been decided that it would not be renewed. I think when we took up Section 8 before on the granting of pardons before convictions, that issue was lost and the Convention decided to give the pardoning power only after conviction.

Second, the movant has spoken the second time. The rule is that he should close the debate. Although I won't raise the question, I'm sure that he would want to talk again on the subject.

Now on the second point he raises in his amendment, if it is limited to political refugees of foreign countries, and I took it to mean that because he had that in mind in civil rights, I am in hearty accord there. However, I think that Delegate Anthony is correct. Generally the constitutional provisions read as they are in Section 8 and I don't believe there are any provisions calling for pardon for convictions in foreign jurisdictions, particularly foreign countries. So that if the committee report would cover that phase on restoration of civil rights so far as political refugees are concerned from foreign countries, I think it would cover the point.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion?

PHILLIPS: In regard to the first point that Delegate Anthony brought up, I address the Convention rather timorously because I have a feeling here that this "before conviction," I can't see how you could pardon an individual for something he hasn't done, and I assume that in the American court he hasn't done anything until he's been convicted, or at least that's what I thought. So I thought that if it was the intent of Delegate Tavares to remove charges from an individual who is being arraigned or has been indicted, then that would be a different thing entirely, and I would suggest and I would wish he would answer why he wouldn't change it to have the power to remove charges, or some similar wording. Not that I'm encouraging him to do this, but I mean in order to understand the full intent of "before conviction," which has a hidden meaning for we laymen. I might further say that if he did such a thing, or if such a thing was voted on, that it would be, to my knowledge, the first time in American history that they ever had anything like that. It's the power of the governor traditionally to pardon after conviction, but before an individual has done anything it's almost impossible for the governor to do anything about it.

CHAIRMAN: I might say, Delegate Roberts, that this -- I mean Delegate Phillips, pardon to both gentlemen—that this subject was covered quite well in debate. However, it happened that Delegate Tavares was absent on that date unavoidably and was unable to—I assume you were too, Delegate Phillips—to make himself known at that time.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak in opposition to this amendment. In the first place this was rather fully, I think, and carefully discussed on the floor of the Committee of the Whole and, as I recall, on the section dealing with "before conviction" and "after conviction" Mr. Tavares took part in the debate. It seems to me that the language that we adopted in Section 8, which left the words "after conviction" in there, was perfectly proper and perfectly sound and ought not to be removed.

On the second point, on offenses except treason and cases of impeachment, that was discussed on the floor and we deleted, as I recall, that language on the ground that we wanted to provide broader powers for the governor. In our report of the Committee of the Whole it clearly states that under its general grant of legislative powers, the legislature can enact general laws providing for immunity from prosecution where persons are compelled to testify under certain circumstances. So it seems to me that we have taken care of that problem and taken care of it adequately.

On the question of political refugees, I think a general statement in the Committee of Whole report as to our intent would cover that. I believe Section 8 as we adopted it previously ought to stand as it is.

ANTHONY: Delegate Tavares has said, "Why do we trust the governor to pardon after conviction and we don't want him to go around spreading around immunity prior to conviction?" The answer is perfectly simple. After conviction we have the notoriety of the press, a free press, and no governor would dare to exercise his pardoning powers after conviction unless he could give a suitable accounting to the people. However, if you're going to let him do it in the secrecy of his office without any publicity, without any notice to the press, before any suit has been filed, you may get a Mayor Hague in office and he may grant these immunities to his henchmen. That is the complete answer to that statement.

As to the words, I agree with Delegate Roberts this has been fully debated. I would have preferred if we'd adhered to the Federal Constitutional provision and make an exception, "except in cases of impeachment." But evidently it is the will of this body that we delete that particular section. I do want to call attention to this fact, that the judgment in cases of impeachment is very different than judgment in cases of a felony. The judgment in cases of impeachment extends only to the holding of office, present or future, any office of trust or profit under the State or the United States. In other words, it has nothing to do with the right to vote. An officer that has been impeached can still vote, his civil rights are not taken away from him, he simply may not hold office in the future. So I would favor a reinsertion of the words "except in cases of impeachment."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford, do you wish to speak? Is there any further discussion?

TAVARES: It's been mentioned that I have spoken twice. I wonder how many times that rule has been applied during this Convention. Since I am the proponent on this I am going to, unless further objection is made, assume that I will get the same courtesy that has been extended to other proponents.

In the first place, the last speaker says that there will be no notoriety. That is the very purpose of saying, "The legislature shall provide." The legislature can and should provide that when the governor does such a thing, some provision be made for reporting to the legislature or otherwise providing notoriety.

Now in this business of granting pardon before conviction, some members don't seem to realize the President of the United States has had that power for 150 odd years and the only case I've been told about where it is alleged he abused it was the Aaron Burr case, and I am not certain that all authorities agree that Aaron Burr was improperly tried. Only one instance out of 150 years isn't such bad abuse.

Secondly, the governor has had that power for 50 years. We've heard no instances of abuse by him. Now here's what can happen among other things. You have a conspiracy, perhaps of a lot of criminals, and you have one fellow willing to talk but if he's got a good lawyer he says, "Now look, unless I'm protected, I'm not going to talk." Well, the prosecuting attorney says, "I won't prosecute you." Well, if his attorney is good and tough he'll say, "Well, look here now, that's not binding on your successor or either on you. What guarantee have we got that this man will be protected if he testifies against his confederates?" So unless you can give him a pardon, he can't be made to testify and he probably won't. He'll claim his privilege against self-incrimination against all the other criminals. There is a reason for that. It can be abused but so can the pardoning power under every other situation be abused and so has it been abused.

Now as to the statement that I was here part of the argument. That is true, Mr. Chairman, but only half true. I was here in the morning up to 11 o'clock and I had to go to Maui. I was excused. I spoke to a number of members here and they have said that if I would move to reconsider, they would support me. I was not here to move to reconsider after lunch. That's my excuse, Mr. Chairman, not my justification.

Finally on the question of disqualification, is it proper even in impeachment to have a man forever disqualified from holding any office of profit or trust just because he's been impeached? The impeachment may be for reasons not at all reflecting on his integrity. It may be that he did something that the legislature didn't like, the kind of thing that we don't consider malum in se or even malum prohibitum, just some improper act that they didn't like, and so he is to be disqualified forever and ever from holding any office. If the Convention wants to do that, okay, but I think it's barbarous.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask the proponent of this amendment a question?

CHAIRMAN: You may address the Chair.

SHIMAMURA: In his opinion would a person who has been subjected to impeachment and convicted by the body impeaching him necessarily lose his civil rights? I'm wondering as to that, it's a question.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, would you care to answer that?

TAVARES: Well, isn't the right to hold office one of the civil rights? If it isn't, it's the first time I have heard of it. It certainly is a civil right, the right to hold office.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, that is not correct - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura still has the floor.

SHIMAMURA: I understand that, but I'm wondering if conviction of impeachment per se deprives a person of the right to hold office. I don't see any provision in our Constitution or anywhere else that provides for that. If I'm mistaken, I would like to be informed.

HEEN: In the legislative article, we have provision for impeachment of elected officials, impeachment charges to to be filed by the House of Representatives and the charge to be tried by the Senate. Now there is this provision in that article: "Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than through removal from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit, under the State." So certain civil rights are taken away from the person convicted in impeachment to that extent that he can never hold any office of trust or honor under the State. It seems to me only the exercise of the pardoning power will restore that right to the person convicted of impeachment.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe we've gone through this on two occasions. When the Committee of the Whole first met I was the movant of the amendment and I amended the section to delete the words "after conviction." I'm in sympathy, complete sympathy with Delegate Tavares, but since that time I've polled the delegates here and apparently that will not succeed. I only want to point out the fact that we should be a little more practical and get down to work. This is certainly a fine amendment as far as I'm concerned, and I'd like to support Delegate Tavares but I know after polling the delegates here that we have no chance, like the election of judges. I'd like the Convention to be practical about this matter. Let's get down to business and vote on it.

HEEN: I would like to ask Delegate Tavares to illustrate what type of legislation would be necessary in order to carry out the intent he has in mind here of pardoning a person before he is charged.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, would you care to answer that.

HEEN: It looks to me, it can only apply in conspiracy cases where you need the testimony of one of those involved in the conspiracy in order to get the testimony of one of them to testify against the others.

TAVARES: I don't believe it necessarily includes only conspiracy. There may be a crime committed in which, of course, conspiracy might or might not be involved, in which this person was either an accessory before the fact or an accessory after the fact and the persons could be charged either with conspiracy or with the crime itself. Ordinarily if it's murder they don't charge him with conspiracy to commit murder, they charge him with murder. I think there are a number of other instances where you can get a lesser crook to testify about the other - - the bigger crooks in a whole crime syndicate, and have him expose a great deal of the criminality there, by giving him some immunity.

Now, my idea of legislation would be this. A law could be passed stating that before the governor grants a pardon before conviction, there must be a report by the prosecuting attorney to the attorney general, and an investigation by the attorney general, and a recommendation to the governor for that matter and that such report and recommendations and the governor's action must be reported at the next succeeding legislature, or something like that to the legislature. I believe that would insure proper action and proper restrictions on the exercise of that power. Or they could provide that the parole board or some other board set up must first approve it as reasonably necessary under the circumstances before the governor could grant a pardon. The legislature could lay down all of those conditions and I think they would be your safeguard.

ANTHONY: I'd like to ask the delegate a question also.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, just a moment please, if you will.

The Chair has been pondering the question of whether this entire discussion is not out of order. Actually any amendments to the committee report would be proper. This is an amendment to the committee proposal which I think would require a reconsideration before we could actually talk on it. The Chair has been in error in allowing the debate to continue this long. I believe unless there is some appeal to that ruling - -

ANTHONY: For purposes of discussion, I'll move to reconsider that section.

TAVARES: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we reconsider Section 8 of the committee proposal, Redraft No. 1. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it.

ANTHONY: I'd like to ask the delegate at what stage in this immunity proceedings prior to conviction would the public press know that the governor is about to pardon Jelly Smith for his connection with the underworld. Just at what stage?

TAVARES: That question is as broad as the power of the legislature. At whatever stage the legislature choose to set it, that's my answer.

ANTHONY: That answer, of course, shows the inherent weakness of the amendment. Now, either Jelly Smith is going to have his pardon in his pocket or he's not going to talk. Now at what stage of the proceeding is the press going to have access to the extraordinary power of the governor to give him that thing so he can stick it in his pocket? Is it before he gets it or after he gets it? Obviously if it's before he gets it, he's not going to talk. If it's after he gets it, then all the damage has been done.

KING: Well, all I was going to say is I think the two points of view have been well explained, and the committee is ready to vote. I suggest that the question be put.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is the amendment to Section 8 proposed by Delegate Tavares. All those in favor of the amendment will say "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt and will call for a standing vote. All those in favor will please rise. All those opposed. The ayes have it by one vote.

The motion is in order for the adoption of Section 8 as amended.

HAYES: I don't know too much about these legal points that have been argued on the floor this morning, but I feel that the governor should not have that privilege of doing the things that were expressed by Governor Anthony -- I mean—I first called him Savage Anthony, now I give him a title of Governor Anthony—Delegate Anthony, and I think the points that he pointed out are most dangerous for a governor to have. That's my own expression and it's my own feeling on the matter, and therefore, I shall vote against it.

CHAIRMAN: The vote as far as that question is concerned has actually been taken.

CROSSLEY: I now move that Section 8 as amended be adopted.

TAVARES: I second that motion.

ROBERTS: I would like to speak in opposition to that.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, in speaking in opposition to this, you would infer that you have no Section 8. Is that correct?

ROBERTS: Beg your pardon?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has been adopted.

ROBERTS: That's right. I speak in opposition to adopting the motion as amended.

CHAIRMAN: That would mean that we would have no Section 8 when we finish. Is that correct?

ROBERTS: Or we then move for another section. It seems to me that this is a problem of quite vital concern, a problem that was given very serious and very careful thought by the entire group. Coming back when we are not fresh on one problem, after we had considered the entire article in its context, to take the problem in and submit an amendment and to get it through, to me does not show good sense and careful consideration. I believe that the words "before conviction" were fully and very adequately discussed before, and care taken by the entire group, and I believe we had a full vote at that time with a very few members absent. The entire delegation is not present here this morning. I would therefore suggest that this section be deleted and a new section substituted for it. I will therefore vote against the amendment.

ANTHONY: I think there is a good deal in what Delegate Roberts said. I accordingly move to defer action on this section until after the discussion is had in connection with the legislative powers and functions.

PHILLIPS: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we defer. I'll allow a discussion only on the motion to defer.

KING: I rise to speak against the motion to defer. As a matter of fact, there are very few absentees here. We have a very good attendance. There's no excuse for deferring action on this section, and if Delegate Roberts' motion is carried, then it would be in order to adopt another Section 8. We should get along with our business and report out the proposal on executive powers this forenoon promptly, so we can take up the next order of business. So I am opposed to the action to -- the motion to defer.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to speak against the action to defer, and also I'd like to say that I take exception to the remarks --

ANTHONY: I'll withdraw the motion.

FUKUSHIMA: I'd like to correct Delegate Roberts' statement that this thing was gone into very thoroughly. If you will remember, after I made the amendment the debate was only for about twenty minutes participated in only by Arthur Trask, Delegate Trask, and Delegate Tavares. It was not, as Delegate Roberts pointed out, that this was adequately debated when the thing was fresh in the delegates' minds. I don't believe half of the delegates knew that there was such a thing as "pardon before conviction" and the thing, the records will bear me out that the debate was not more than twenty minutes, participated by only three or four delegates.

KING: I'd like to speak against the motion to strike out [Section] 8. The amendment we adopted says, "The legislature may provide by general law," and then it goes on. Now, if the legislature doesn't do it, then nothing we've done today will give the governor any more power. If the legislature does grant it, it will be because the legislature after quite full consideration has considered it necessary.

On the last feature of this particular amendment, the restoration of civil rights "lost by a reason of conviction of offenses by jurisdiction other than this state," seems to be well in order, and there doesn't seem to be too much objection to that. So I'm opposed to Delegate Roberts' amendment. I feel the action of the Committee of the Whole in adopting Delegate Tavares' amendment is quite in order, and does not expose the future State of Hawaii to any unusual danger.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to question Delegate Roberts. Did you make a motion that this section be stricken, or did you threaten to make that motion?

ROBERTS: Mr. Chairman, I don't make any threats; there's no basis for making threats before this group. I merely said that if the amendment as proposed were not adopted there would be, as you pointed out, no Section 8. I then would move for the substitution of language for Section 8.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the house actually is adoption of Section 8 as amended, that's what I wanted to clear up. I want -- didn't want to accuse you of threatening.

Roll call has been asked. How many in favor of roll call? Sufficient. Those voting aye will be in favor of the adoption as amended. Those voting no will not be in favor of this section. The Clerk will please call the roll.

AKAU: Mr. Chairman, excuse me, I thought we were voting on deferring.

CHAIRMAN: The motion to defer was withdrawn.

AKAU: Oh, will you please repeat now then?

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the house is the adoption of Section 8 of Committee Proposal No. 22, RD 1, as amended. The amendment was adopted. Now the motion is the approval as amended. The Clerk will please call the roll.

Ayes, 36. Noes, 23 (Akau, Anthony, Arashiro, Ashford, Corbett, Gilliland, Hayes, Ihara, Kage, Kawahara, Kometani, Luiz, Mau, Mizuha, Nielsen, Phillips, H. Rice, Roberts, Shimamura, St. Sure, Wirtz, Yamamoto, Yamauchi). Not voting, 4 (Kawakami, Lee, Sakai, White).

CHAIRMAN: Section 8, as amended has been approved.

TAVARES: I believe -- I may be out of order. I don't know whether -- I haven't read the rules as to whether, since I wasn't present when Section 10 was voted on I believe, I can move for the reconsideration, but I would like to ask some person who voted for that section to move a reconsideration because I think a very important situation should be covered.

MAU: I move that Section 10 be reconsidered.

SAKAKIHARA: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 10 be reconsidered. Delegate Tavares, you may speak. All those in favor, please say "aye." Opposed.

TAVARES: I move to amend the fourth paragraph of Section 10, RD 1, by adding thereto at the end the following sentence, "The legislature may provide by law for the suspension or removal for cause by the governor of any officer for whose removal the consent of the Senate is required by this Constitution." May I have a second to that so I can speak on it.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been seconded.

TAVARES: I'm not bringing this up for delay. I really feel there's a situation that needs to be covered. The legislature has in the past, in spite of our Organic Act requiring consent of the governor [sic] to removal, provided that if a certain type of officer engages in political activities the governor shall remove him forthwith, and I think that there is room for such a provision. If the legislature in addition to the requirement that the Senate must consent to removal of an officer wants to give the governor the power to suspend say, or remove for causes by requiring a hearing and so forth, it seems to me the legislature ought to be given that power. I can imagine a situation where the legislature would say that if the attorney general accepts a fee, instead of waiting -- a fee for doing something that is his duty to do, instead of waiting for the Senate to convene, the governor, after hearing, shall forthwith suspend him to the next session of the Senate or remove him. Or for the legislature to say if certain types of officers engaged in political activity, the governor shall forthwith remove them, or after a hearing. It seems to me that that would not be going too far. In the Senate, which has the prerogative of consenting, if it doesn't want to give the governor that power, it can vote against the law, and thereby prevent the law from going into effect. So that it seems to me that here is a situation that isn't covered by the existing Constitution, and that gives the legislature the power to allow for those situations, special ones, where they think the governor ought to have immediate power of suspension or immediate power of removal for cause.

ANTHONY: We had a long debate about a week ago on whether or not we should concentrate all powers of the State in the governor.

CHAIRMAN: That was two weeks ago, I believe.

ANTHONY: Yes. It's not very fresh in the minds of this body at the present time. It was pointed out by those of us who favored appointed officers that there was always a check upon the powers of the executive in the form of confirmation and removal by the Senate. Now, if I could have the attention of the proponent of the motion for a moment, I'd like to proceed.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

ANTHONY: We have just adopted a section which will deposit in the governor further power, in other words the power to reprieve in advance persons who have committed crimes. That is the will of this body. Now we are going further, and we're going to say that a governor who may possibly dominate a legislature may secure the enactment of a statute which will circumvent the very thing that we did about two weeks ago, namely, will deprive the Senate of its right of advice and consent upon removal. I think that we're going entirely too far in depositing this vast power in the governor, and I'm against the amendment.

MAU: I am of the impression that the power to appoint, with that power goes the power of removal if nothing is said. If we're correct on that premise, then I don't know why this provision need to go in at all. Particularly do I address that -- this point to those who want to see a brief Constitution, a concise Constitution.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to ask Delegate Anthony whether the governor could remove someone from office immediately after the legislature went out of session if there was just cause? That's the thing that worries me a little bit.

ANTHONY: If he's been confirmed by the Senate, it requires under the -- as we've adopted this article thus far, it will require the consent of the Senate. In other words, the Senate would have to reconvene, and we debated that, I might say, in great length. That could be done very expeditiously.

A. TRASK: I am for this amendment. It would seem to me that we are not giving the governor any more power then he already has. He has nominated a person for the office of the twenty departments. Certainly the person nominated is his friend. All we need is confirmation of the Senate, and if there is just cause for his removal, I think the governor should be empowered to do so.

TAVARES: I've been asked by another delegate to explain that the word "cause" means the legislature would prescribe or could prescribe the causes for which the governor could remove, and unless the legislature passed a law expressly stating the types of causes for which the governor could remove, or that he could remove for just cause and prescribing the situation under which he could remove, the governor could not exercise such power. I don't think it's giving to the governor all that power, and I think it's assuming quite a bit to say the governor's going to dominate fifty-one representatives and twenty-five senators. He must be a pretty powerful governor to do that. I don't think he will to that extent.

CHAIRMAN: If there's no further debate, the Chair will put the question. The motion is for the adoption of the proposal to amend Section 10. All those - - HEEN: I rise to a point of information. Is this proposed amendment intended to be substituted for paragraph four of Section 10?

CHAIRMAN: It's an addition. Delegate Tavares, would you clarify the placement of this?

TAVARES: It is an addition. I don't know whether it's in the right place but the Style Committee could take care of that. But this Section 10 in other paragraphs provides that in the case of single cabinet officers, the governor must appoint with the advice and consent of the Senate, and it requires the advice and consent of the Senate to removal. Then there is another section that says as to officers or members of boards, provision for their removal shall be provided by law. Evidently we're not afraid to give the legislature power to tell the governor how to remove members of boards of principal departments, but we're afraid to pass a law giving them power to remove single executives.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: It does.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will put a question. Delegate Arashiro, did you - -

HAYES: I have a question.

ARASHIRO: Another question I wish to ask the proposer of the amendment. What are the causes that you are thinking of giving the governor the authority to remove for? What kind of causes?

TAVARES: That's pretty hard to explain, but I can think of this. Supposing it should be found—heaven forbid and I know of no such situation—that the attorney general had received a bribe. I wouldn't even want to wait till the Senate could be convened before the governor at least could suspend him, and the same would be true of any other officer. I'd want to get him out of there just as fast as I could, at least suspend him, and the legislature could so provide.

ARASHIRO: If the governor abuses this power and has the tendency of creating a political machine, then - -

TAVARES: Then all the legislature has to do is repeal the law.

CHAIRMAN: O. K. All those in favor of the amendment, please say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it.

CROSSLEY: I move the adoption of this Section 10, as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 10, as amended, be adopted. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it.

The motion before the committee is for the - - There is no motion before the committee.

CROSSLEY: If there are no further corrections, additions, deletions, or substitutions, I move that the Committee of the Whole Report No. 17 be adopted as amended and pass second reading and that we rise and report.

APOLIONA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the Committee of the Whole report be adopted as amended.

ASHFORD: One of the difficulties of that is that the explanations will no longer apply.

TAVARES: I move to amend the motion to adopt, so that it is a motion to adopt the Committee of the Whole report, as submitted, with leave to file a supplementary report incorporating and explaining the amendments approved at this hearing of the Committee of the Whole.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Crossley, will you accept that amendment, please? The amendment is accepted.

HEEN: I think what might be done is this, that the report of the Committee of the Whole be adopted recommending the passage of the committee proposal which is incorporating and attached to the Committee of the Whole report, subject to the amendments which have been made today.

KING: If Delegate Heen will make that as a motion, I'd be glad to second that if the others will withdraw their preceding motions.

HEEN: I so move, by way of an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Is that satisfactory to the various movants? All those in favor of the motion will please say "aye." Opposed. Motion is carried.

The motion before the house now in order, I think, will be to rise and report adoption of the committee report.

HOLROYDE: I so move.

SAKAKIHARA: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we rise and report adoption of the committee report. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on JUDICIARY

(Article V)

Chairman: RANDOLPH CROSSLEY

JUNE 8, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole please come to order. At ease. The Chair recognizes Mr. Anthony.

ANTHONY: For the convenience of the delegates I suggest that you have before you Standing Committee Report No. 37 in letter size, not the one that was inadvertently run off in full legal cap, so we'll all be reading from the same document. And before proceeding, there is one error in the report which I'd like to correct at this time and that is on page 4, about the middle of the paragraph entitled "Section 2," the sentence, "Only two states," that should read, "Only three states," and in the parenthesis, "Arizona, Nevada and Wyoming have a supreme court of three."

I will briefly take up the sections. As stated in the committee report, the guiding principle in the drafting of this article has been an effort on the part of your committee to erect a judiciary article which will attract the best caliber of material to the bench, and in order to do that, the problem of selection and tenure and security in office has been uppermost in the thinking of the committee.

Section 1 deposits the judicial power in the supreme court, the circuit courts and such inferior courts as the legislature may, from time to time, establish. That is an ample deposit of the judicial power. It states that there will be two constitutional courts, namely a supreme court and circuit courts, but leaves to the legislature the designation of the number of circuit judges and leaves to the legislature the creation of inferior courts, such as the police courts or district magistrates, which we now have. Similarly, the matter of jurisdiction is fully left with the legislature, that is both original jurisdiction and appellate jurisdiction.

The second section provides for a supreme court of five justices. That is a departure from the existing system, and there was some debate in the committee whether or not there was need for a court of this size. The final consideration and judgment, unanimous judgment of your committee was that a court of five is desirable. One of the reasons is an effort on the part of the draftsmen of the article to erect a supreme court that would have a minimum of disqualifications in cases that came before it.

There is this to be pointed out, however, that our present supreme court does not have too heavy a docket, some 80 or 90 cases per annum. But when we change from a Territory to a State, the supreme court will be passing final judgment on constitutional questions that arise under the State Constitution and, therefore, it is considered desirable by the committee that that be done by a court of five, instead of three as we presently have. I might point out to the members -- the delegat es that the actual expense involved is not very great because the whole judiciary department is relatively small when you compare it with other departments of government.

There are three states, as noted in the report, that have a supreme court of three. All of the rest of them have any number, varying from five to nine. New Jersey until just recently had a supreme court, I believe, it was 15. And in the early days, New York had a supreme court of like number on which there were certain lay judges.

Section 3 is the one section -- and I might state at the outset that your committee is unanimous in the recommendation of the adoption of this article except for Section 3 relative to appointment of judges. Section 3 makes the judges appointed by the governor with confirmation by the Senate.

I wish to make a correction. There was one dissent on five judges. Yamauchi thought that there should be a court of three, and so indicated on the report.

This was the chief bone of contention in your committee. The majority of the committee feel very strongly that we should have a system of appointive rather than a system of elective judges. In the first place, the idea of the judiciary is to have an independent branch of government. It is to have judges who will be independent, who will not be swayed by partisan whims, will not be swayed by the mores of the day but will interpret the law as the law should be interpreted without regard to particular political pressures which may from time to time be brought upon the judiciary. It is the balance wheel, the conservative balance wheel of our government, and therefore it is essential, your committee feels, that this should be an appointive system.

I would like to point out that every single change that has been made in regard to state constitutions has been a change away from the system of popularly elected judges, within the last 25 year. There has been an effort on the part of states to go back to the original system, come closer to the present Federal system, which is life appointment of judges by the executive. I might say, as stated in the report, that the matter of popularly elected judges came up in the Jackson Era when many states departed from the system of appointive judges and the western states, particularly, adopted the system of elections.

Now you simply do not get good judges in a popularity contest. If you were going to have your appendix taken out, you wouldn't put it up to a popular vote. What you've got to have is persons of skill, persons of integrity, persons who are good lawyers, and you don't get persons of that character offering themselves on the political stump in a political partisan campaign to run for judicial office. It is extremely distasteful to any lawyer to campaign for office -- for judicial office. I accept the correct.

The reason for it is perfectly plain. This is a lawyer's profession, and no lawyer who is worth his salt is going to stump up and down the country and say, "What a fine lawyer am I." It just isn't done. As a matter of fact we are prohibited by the canons of the American Bar Association from advertising, and certainly a political campaign is one exception and not a very nice exception.

So your committee has reached the conclusion, despite the dissent of some seven members who favor some form of an elective system, that there is no good reason that has been advanced why judges should be elected.

The minority has not filed a report. They have not stated their reasons why they favor an elective system, and I can assure the members of this Convention that all of the leaders in the field of jurisprudence favor an appointive system. So we hope that this Convention will adopt such a system.

I would like to point out one further thing, that Hawaii has enjoyed a long and rather fine tradition of an appointive system. It goes all the way back to the Constitution of 1852 under the Monarchy, the Constitution of 1865, the Constitution of 1887 and the Constitution of the Republic. As a matter of fact, we had under those great documents, we had life tenure on the supreme court or tenure during good behavior. After the adoption of the Organic Act we again retained the appointive system but for a short term. But those early Constitutions of Hawaii contained very wise provisions relating to the judiciary. And it would be a great step backward, in my judgment, if we were to go from that tradition to the tradition of partisan, politically-elected judges. As a leading authority on this subject has said, "This is an unfortunate legacy in the state judicial systems and they are trying to get away from them the best they can."

Section 4 deals with the removal of judges by the impeachment process. This follows the traditional pattern set up in the Federal Constitution. The House of Representatives makes the charge. It is then referred -- it makes the charge by a simple majority vote. It is then referred to the Senate which sits as a court under oath or affirmation and tries the case. And upon impeachment, the conviction must be with a concurrence of the members of the Senate present, two-thirds of the members of the Senate present. That doesn't mean the entire number. It means those that are present and voting. That ties in directly with a proposal that is pending before the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions.

There is one improvement upon that, we think, and that is where a judge is impeached, this article provides—and mind you, the impeachment is the charge, it is not the conviction—the judge is not permitted to exercise the powers of his office until his case has been disposed of. In other words, if the House of Representatives should charge an impeachment, that judge would no longer exercise the power of his office until the Senate had passed on his case and he was acquitted, which we think is a distinct improvement on the Federal provision.

I neglected to state one thing. In the framing of this article we have had before us as a pattern the New Jersey plan. We have incorporated into the judiciary article what we consider a wise provision of the New Jersey plan which provides that the governor must give ample notice, public notice, before sending any name to the Senate for confirmation. This would avoid any hasty action upon the part of the executive. It would avoid any arrangement between the executive and a majority of the Senate whereby we could have "midnight" judges and the public know nothing about it. In other words, there will be full publicity, full opportunity in the press and the radio and public debate to discuss the qualifications of any man before he is confirmed.

Section 5 of this proposal is likewise taken from the New Jersey Constitution. One of the ills of the judiciary system is that sometimes judges get on the bench and they are decrepit and there is no way -- nothing you can do about it, very much. This section will provide, where a judge is mentally or physically incapacitated, upon a certificate of the supreme court to that effect—now that means a majority of the supreme court and they could certify as to either the chief justice or one of the associate justices—the governor is obliged to appoint a commission of three who will examine into the matter and make their report, and upon that report, the chief executive may retire such incapacitated judge from office. We think that that is a wise safeguard against having a judge on the bench who is not able to perform his duties.

Section 6 authorizes the legislature to fix the compensation of judges and provides that it shall not be diminished during their term of office. The reason for that is to strengthen the judiciary, make it independent.

We had considerable debate in regard to the matter of pensions. Orginally the committee had in mind and discussed whether or not we should attempt to fix in the Constitution pension for full salary after a stated number of years of service or a certain proportion of it. After turning that over again and again, we decided that this was a matter of legislation and that we felt -- even though we felt strongly that it was essential there should be a pension system, we felt equally strongly that this is a matter for the legislature to decide and that is where it has been left.

Section 7 prohibits a judge from holding any office of profit under the State or the United States. That means he can't hold two jobs. It doesn't prevent, for instance, the judge from service -- a judge of the state court from serving on the Board of Regents of the University or on the Public Welfare Advisory Board or any other board on which he does not receive -- from which he does not receive compensation. There was a question that arose in the committee discussion, namely, what effect this would have upon reserve officers who would be called into active duty, and that was finally decided in favor of leaving the provision as we have drafted it, since it is important and essential that the civil power remain supreme. In other words, we feel that there is ample room by legislation or regulation in the military service to provide for that situation, and rather than to make any exception for military service, we have stated the provision as it stands.

Section 8 is a departure from the present system. We think it a wise one. The purpose of it is to make the chief justice the administrative and the responsible head of the judicial system. In other words, it puts the burden of administrating the judiciary department right on the chief justice. It provides him with an administrative arm in the form of a director who will attend to the business of the court. We think it is a very necessary and wholesome provision.

Section 9 preserves our existing system and authorizes the chief justice to make assignments of circuit judges from one circuit to another. That is a very convenient, very effective device. Witness -- there are two judges that are from here, you have seen them around this floor from time to time, Judge Wirtz and also Judge Rice, who presently from time to time are doing assignments in Honolulu, relieving the congested calendar due to congestion or absence of local judges in the First Circuit.

Section 10 is an extremely important section, and that is the section which deposits in the supreme court the rule-making power, governing practice, procedure, appeals in all of the courts. That is one of the most needed provisions that we have and the way it will work is this. The supreme court, following the pattern set by the Supreme Court of the United States, will call in a group of lawyers, have them draft rules, then there will be publication of the rules for a stated number of months, and after everybody has had his say about it, the rules will become effective. When they become effective, they will have the force and effect of law. It has the great merit of this. If there is something awkward or inconvenient in any rule, that can be called to the attention of the court and after full exploration can be promptly corrected. In other words, you don't have to wait for the next session of the legislature.

There is one other matter which the committee was divided on and that was the matter of the judicial council, and I would like—that is not included in the article—but I know that inasmuch as certain members have talked about it, I would like to briefly explain the position of both sides. I voted with the majority against the judicial council. I think my friend on my right here voted for a judicial council. The judicial council program was devised in an effort to get away from the ills of popularly elected judges. That was the reason for it. That was why the American Bar Association did not feel equal to going "whole hog" and asking for an appointive judge system, such as the Federal system, such as has been clearly, by the best writers, said to be the one desirable system, but felt that this was the easiest compromise and transition from popularly elected judges to a system in which there is an executive appointment. Now, in that regard, we're a very small community here, and there are a number of us that feel that if we have a judicial council, that possibly might deposit too much power in the members of the council, some of whom, probably a majority, would be members of the bar and thus they would have at least the accusation of seeking the appointment of a certain judge and then seeking favors at his hands when they practice before him. On the other hand, the members of the -- the other members will speak for themselves on that. It does have the merit, if you're going to have any elections, to get away from partisan elections, but since it is my hope that this Convention will not favor election, I see no need for including the judicial council.

We have examined a series of other proposals. They are all -- the disposition of them is referred to in the report. The matter of advisory opinions, which is a departure from our present system, the committee felt was inadvisable. I believe I am correct in saying that there are only three states, or four states, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, I believe, that have advisory opinions. But that has never worked very well, the simple reason being that when the legislature sends over to the supreme court a request for an opinion, naturally the legislative body or the executive can't have all the facts that are necessary for a court to render an intelligent and enlightened opinion. For that reason, the opinions of the justices in the Massachusetts courts and in the Maine courts have not proved a very workable device. In our tradition of the common law, we deal with cases and controversies. We don't deal with theoretical ideas, theoretical problems. We have a method of handling that sort of thing, what is known as a declaratory judgment statute which amply gives litigants the desired security of judicial opinion, if they have a real case.

In the matter of women on juries, we made our recommendation; that has been adopted by the Committee on Bill of Rights.

The question of the recall of judges, of course, was so foreign to the views of the committee, I believe the entire committee, that that was rejected. You'll never have an independent judiciary if you are going to have them subject to a popular election. That was the great hue and cry when Teddy Roosevelt conducted his Bull Moose campaign in 1916, I believe it was, in which he went for the recall of judges and the recall of judicial decisions, a thing that would be utterly destructive to our doctrine of separation of powers, our doctrine of the supremacy -- the co-supremacy in their respective spheres of the three departments of government. Your committee is unanimously against any such proposal.

I would be very glad to answer any questions that may be asked in regard to the proposal. Thank you, gentlemen.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Judiciary just how he would like to take up the proposal.

ANTHONY: I would like to take it up section by section, if that's agreeable to the Chair.

ASHFORD: In that regard, the attitude of one of the delegates, and perhaps more, on Section 3 will depend somewhat upon Section 4. May we not discuss those together?

ANTHONY: I have a suggestion which I think will meet the delegate's suggestion. The members will note that the committee is unanimous in every section with the exception of Section 3. We could, if the Convention and the chairman desires, we could discuss all sections but Section 3, and then come back to Section 3. Will that accomplish the purpose of the delegate?

MAU: I want to correct an impression that was given by the chairman of the committee. I believe he stated that there would be no minority report filed. That is correct. Because of the persuasive powers of the chairman, we all agreed to the sentence reading, "A minority of your committee is not in favor of Section 3 which provides for appointment of judges by the governor and confirmation by the Senate, and this minority dissents from the reasons given in the report in support of the executive appointment of the judiciary."

If I believed that a minority report would make any difference insofar as the vote goes, we would file a minority report, but it was with unanimous consent and, as I said, the persuasive powers of the chairman, that we all signed this with that provision in the report. For the --

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to ask, what pages are you reading from in the committee report, Delegate Mau?

MAU: Page 8, at the bottom, the last sentence, and it goes on to page 9. It's just a one sentence statement placing the position of the minority in this report. For the information of the Convention, I think it might be wise to state that the majority consisted of eight, as against the minority of seven. We had a committee of 15, so that it was a very close vote. For the further information of the Convention, I think it might be wise to name the delegates voting for the appointment and those against. Those in favor: Garner Anthony, Nils Tavares, William Heen, Herbert Lee, Harold Loper, Jack Mizuha, Harold Rice, Cable Wirtz. Those against: Nelson Doi, Hiram Fong, Y. Fukushima, Chuck Mau, Steere Noda, Thomas Sakakihara and T. Yamauchi.

I think that the chairman was correct that the minority agreed to place their position merely on Section 3 but a comment on Proposal 7. In this article for judiciary, all that would be sufficient would be Sections 1, 2, 3 and 10. The remainder could have been taken care of by legislative act. However, we're not making a contest about that, but that is just a comment for those who believe in a concise Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: If there's no objection, we'll take up the Committee Proposal No. 7, section by section. It's therefore in order for the adoption of -- moving to adopt Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 7.

ASHFORD: Does that mean that Section 3 will be deferred until the end?

CHAIRMAN: Section 3 will be deferred until the end.

BRYAN: I would be very happy to move for the adoption of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 7.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will be happy to recognize anyone else.

MAU: I want to call attention to the fact that this is a different team playing today.

ANTHONY: What was the motion? I didn't hear - -

CHAIRMAN: The motion was to adopt Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 7. Any discussion? All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried unanimously.
Section 2.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 7 as written.

DOWSON: I second the motion to adopt Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 7.

CHAIRMAN: Same motion, same second. Any discussion?

MIZUHA: There is one question that must be clarified. What would constitute a quorum of the supreme court?

CHAIRMAN: Would the chairman of the committee care to answer that, or Delegate Tavares?

TAVARES: I think it is a universal rule that where nothing has been stated, a quorum is always a majority, and they must always act by a majority of all the members. I don't believe that there will be any question in the court's mind about that, but we can, in the Committee of the Whole report, reinforce that by a statement that a quorum would naturally be a majority and the court would have to act by a majority of all its members.

FUKUSHIMA: I don't believe that's the correct statement of the facts. "The supreme court shall consist of a chief justice and four associate justices." There's no such thing as a quorum. A court is a court. It consists of a chief justice and four associate justices. In order for a court to be legally functioning, it has to be by five. Isn't that correct?

ANTHONY: That statement is correct.

TAVARES: I want to correct my statement, Mr. Chairman. That's correct, the first part. I meant that they would have to act by a majority.

ANTHONY: When the court acts, as stated by Delegate Tavares, it must act by a majority, not less than three. In other words, if there is a vacancy for any reason, then there has to - - then that vacancy by reason of illness or absence or whatever it is has to be filled, and the mechanics of filling it are right in the article.

MAU: Point of information. I got the impression that we were to delay consideration of Section 3.

CHAIRMAN: This is Section 2.

MAU: Oh, two, excuse me.

GILLILAND: We have at the present time a chief justice and two associate justices and apparently they haven't got enough work to do. Now in this proposed Section 2 we intend to have a chief justice and four associate justices. What in the world are they going to be doing? I'd like to know why we want four associate justices and the supreme court [chief] justice.

HAYES: I just wanted to inform the delegates here that, if I remember correctly, when one of the judges passed away—Judge Moore?—it was Cristy—that the court couldn't function until the appointment had been made. Is that correct?

MAU: I think that Mr. Gilliland's - - Delegate Gilliland's question should be answered. He stated that presently the court is constituted of a - - by a chief justice and two justices and they don't have enough to do.

CHAIRMAN: Do you wish to answer it?

MAU: Yes, I think that the true situation is this. I don't believe that there have been many, many years in which the court has caught up with its calendar. They have always been behind on their cases. And I think this is also true. Lawyers are reluctant to take an appeal to the supreme court because of the time element. It takes them quite a while to get a decision rendered, and the litigant's interest must be considered in that respect. But if you have five justices and they could process and do their work more readily and more quickly, the litigants would have better satisfaction in their courts, and I believe that that would be one of the beneficial results in having a larger supreme court.

TAVARES: One other reason, and the one which impelled me to decide in favor of five as against three, was this. At the present time with our three-judge supreme court, if an act of our legislature is declared invalid under our Organic Act or under the Federal Constitution, we have an appeal to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals and a possibility of an appeal to the United States Supreme Court. But once we become a state, any question under the State Constitution is going to be decided finally by this supreme court, and it seemed to me that I'd rather have three out of five declare a law unconstitutional than just two out of three.

ASHFORD: I think a supreme court of five is desirable for just the opposite reason stated by Delegate Mau. In other words, if you have a crowded calendar a lot of people appeal because they say, "Oh, well, that will give us another six months, or another year." And if you have a court that can keep up-to-date, the appeals will be fewer.

MIZUHA: Following up my question, is it my understanding that the supreme court cannot hear any appeal unless they have five members sitting there? There are other supreme courts in other states that hear appeals with a lesser number sitting on the court and their decision is final.

ANTHONY: The delegate's statement is correct. If you wanted to have a decision by a division of three, then an amendment would have to be made to this article to permit the court to sit in divisions of three.

MIZUHA: Maybe an amendment is in order because the criticism we hear now is that it takes so long to have an appeal decided. If we are going to assign judges every time to fill a vacancy in case of illness or absence or disqualification, it may slow up the process of appeal there in the supreme court.

TAVARES: There is a provision in this Constitution - - proposed article rather, that will take care of the situation by, as the delegate who has just spoken says, by assignment of circuit judges. Now that only takes a five minute telephone call and catching the first plane over here to hear the argument. I don't think it will hold up the writing of the opinions at all, or substantially, to do that. Undoubtedly, in most cases there will always be a full - - there will be a full court, and in those rare instances where a judge is disqualified or absent or ill, his place can be filled by circuit judges under this article just as they are filled today in similar situations, except recently, where a judge is absent and not dead.

By the way, that's been taken care of, the law has passed the Congress and is before the President to take care of that situation at the present time, where a judge of the supreme court dies.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion on this?

TAVARES: Our article will take care of that situation specifically, also.

ROBERTS: Which article is that?

TAVARES: Section 2.

CHAIRMAN: Are you through, Delegate Anthony?

TAVARES: I was just asked a question. Shall I - -

CHAIRMAN: The question wasn't addressed to the Chair and I'd appreciate it if you would recognize the Chair.

HEEN: May I address the Chair?

CHAIRMAN: I recognized Delegate Yamauchi.

YAMAUCHI: In the discussion that has been held here, I have signed this report favoring - - I mean against the number of judges, that is the number of associate justices, and I believe from the standpoint of the element of cost as well as to the area that we have comparable to many of the states, and also for the reason that the number of cases that are being held in the supreme court at the present time, and also for that reason that the case stated in this report in regard to Justice Cristy's appointment, I think that could be taken care of by this section at the present time, and therefore I would like to amend Section 2 to read as follows: "The supreme court shall consist of the chief justice and not less then two associate justices."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that amendment? Delegate Heen, you are recognized.

HEEN: What I wanted to say was this. In reference to the question of quorum, the provision in our Organic Act does not say anything at all about a quorum. It simply says this:

> That the supreme court shall consist of a chief justice and two associate justices, who shall be citizens of the Territory of Hawaii and shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, and may be removed by the President: Provided, however, that in case of the disqualification or absence of any justice thereof, in any cause pending before the court, on the trial and determination of said cause his place shall be filled as provided by law.

Now, with the absence of any provision relating to quorum, the supreme court of the Territory of Hawaii has rendered a decision by a majority of two and that has been the practice right along. However, the court must be a full court at all times in order to hear a case, and that's taken care of in this particular provision in Section 2. The second section of Section 2 reads - - or rather the second sentence, "When necessary, the chief justice shall assign a judge or judges of the circuit court to serve temporarily on the supreme court."

OHRT: I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee a question. I'd like to know, from all that I've been hearing here, whether or not the fixing of three or five is not statutory and should not be left to the legislature.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize the chairman of the committee.

ANTHONY: The Federal Constitution does not provide for the number of judges on the Supreme Court of the United States. It provides for a Supreme Court. The court originally started off, I believe, at seven. One time there were eleven; one time it was eight. That has been one of the rough spots in our Federal judiciary - - judicial history. For instance, during the Civil War there was a wrangle over the Reconstruction Acts and the court refused to - - the legislature - - the Congress refused to increase the number from eight to nine simply because they didn't like the executive then in office, President Johnson. In one case, they denied the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

For that reason, the committee felt it desirable to put that number beyond the realm of any tinkering by legislation. In other words, we want to know what the court is and whether or not we are going to have a full court. Most state constitutions, I will say, do have a stated number of justices on the supreme court.

The other matter, of course, judges of the circuit courts is, of course, left to legislation as the business of the several circuits requires.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ohrt, does that satisfy you? Is your question answered?

OHRT: Not quite. I'd like to know whether it's statutory or not. We have been hearing so much about this constitutional law and statutory law. It is an exception, in my mind, and I think the chairman has admitted that.

ANTHONY: It could be enacted in statute. But I'll say this, most state constitutions, I think, uniformly state the number.

TAVARES: I think the main reason why it is necessary to set the number in the Constitution is that it will prevent court-packing, and that is something that we very narrowly escaped, if the members will remember, in the last decade or so where there was an attempt to pack the Supreme Court by creating 15 justices so that they could put their own people in and get their own philosophy over. I think it's a dangerous thing to leave to the legislature and the governor, who, at one time may feel that they want to accomplish some results by simply packing the court. I think it's very desirable and necessary to fix that number in the Constitution, so it can't be monkeyed with, the proper way.

KAUHANE: I'd like to ask a question. Under Section 2, "The supreme court shall consist of the chief justice and four associate justices," as stated here before, if in open court, a full quorum of the supreme court shall be present to hear cases in open court, what number is then required when hearings are held in chambers?

ANTHONY: The supreme court does not hear cases in chambers. That is a single judge, Delegate Kauhane, in equity, under our present system.

KAUHANE: I'm only thinking of other jurisdiction which - - or other states which have similar provisions in the formation of the supreme court, with certain businesses delegated to a number of the associate justices to carry out. If we feel the associate justices are to be given special powers and duties, and if, as stated here, in open court a full quorum of the supreme court is necessary, and if delegation or allocation of business is made to the two associate, the four associate justices, then, I certainly believe that it will be a department doing one - - conducting one affair of the court, and another department conducting another affair of the court. That's the reason why I ask if such matters are necessary and practical, and if it requires that hearings are to be held in chambers, I'd like to know what number is sufficient to allow such judgments if it is rendered in chambers. Maybe Section 2 needs to be amended to allow something of that nature.

HEEN: It's not an accepted practice at all that I know of, that cases are heard by the supreme court in chambers. The people who appeal their cases to the supreme court are entitled to have their cases heard by the supreme court sitting with a full membership. Now in the circuit courts, the legislature can provide for the hearing of various types of proceedings before the judge sitting in chambers. For instance, the probate cases are heard by the circuit court sitting in chambers, and there are cases in equity [which] may be heard by a judge sitting in chamber, and by statute judges sitting in equity may assign certain type of work to referees, or masters, rather.

KAUHANE: I'm not lawyer but a common, ordinary layman. I want to read from the Constitution of California, "Supreme Court, Distribution and Conduct of Business." Maybe California has the very thing that I feel is necessary for Hawaii to help the common people.

> Section 2. The supreme court shall consist of a chief justice and six associate justices. The court may sit in departments and in bank, and shall always be open for the transaction of business. There shall be two departments denominated, respectively, Department 1 and Department 2. The chief justice shall assign three of the associate justices to each department and such assignment may be changed by him from time to time. The associate justices shall be competent to sit in department and may interchange with each other by agreement amongst themselves, or as ordered by the chief justice. Each of the departments shall have the power to hear and determine causes and all questions arising therein subject to the provisions hereinafter contained in relation to the court in bank. The presence of three justices shall be necessary to transact any business in either of the departments except such as may be done in chambers and the concurrence of three justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair ask - -

KAUHANE: That's the thing I'd like to raise here. If this provision, as contained in the Constitution of California, is workable and has served the purpose to help the common man in getting the court to have his cases heard in the respective courts, certainly we should give some consideration to this matter. That's the reason why I raised the question as to a quorum.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair ask Delegate Kauhane if he has any amendment to offer on this section?

KAUHANE: Well, Mr. Chairman, until the question is answered as to - - As I stated in the first instance, the statement was made, if in open court a full quorum is necessary with the supreme court, my understanding to that statement is, if the court is in session, both the supreme - - the chief justice and the four associate justices shall sit to hear cases that comes before them. I'm concerned about cases, and if it is practical to have cases heard in chambers, how many of the five members shall constitute a quorum to do business in chambers?

Certainly, if we allow in the lower court the hearing of cases in chambers by the judge who presides in the lower court, we should then follow that practice up to the supreme court, if necessary, with the express purpose to alleviate as much of the cost as necessary on the poor man who wants to carry his case right through to the supreme court.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee to answer the question, then will recognize Delegate Gilliland.

ANTHONY: The State of California has some ten million people in it. I don't know the exact figures. It has an appellate court of 12. It has a vast volume of judicial business that comes before that appellate court and in order to transact the business of the highest court of California, they have found it necessary to divide it up into departments. Some cases are held - - heard before a department, others are heard before the full court, en banc.

That is a totally different situation than we have here. We are a small country of roughly a half million people. A court of five is ample, more than ample in the judgment of some of us, to transact the appellate business of the Territory, and the court will always be available to hear any litigant.

There is no distinction, or comparison, rather, between what is done in a trial court and chambers. That expression "in chambers" is simply some ancient lawyer's lingo which distinguishes trial in jury cases from other trials, such as probate, divorce, and receiverships and things of equitable nature, hence the expression "in chambers." As a matter of fact, you go in the same courtroom, you hear your case before the same judge, you have the same clerks. You have a different number up at the top of the file, which is entitled, "Equity number so and so, in chambers." So there is no occasion for putting anything into the Constitution relative to appearance or hearings in chambers.

Each judge—if that's what the question was addressing itself to—each judge could have - - would have the power under this article to issue a writ of habeas corpus, a single judge. In other words, if a litigant walked up to the supreme court right now and found one judge in, he could get a writ of prohibition or writ of mandamus or writ of habeas corpus, if he could persuade that single judge he was entitled to it. It would then be returnable before the court. It would not make for expediting the business of the court to divide it into departments, in my judgment.

GILLILAND: I know of only one restriction now that prevents a case being heard in chambers, and that is where a counsel demands a jury trial. In that case, the cases would be heard - - have to be heard in the public courtroom. Under the Organic Act it provides that divorce cases shall be heard in the public courtroom, but I know, in my own experience, I've had cases where the court has asked counsel to stipulate, for the purpose of that particular divorce case, the judge's chambers shall be considered the public courtroom. So there is only one restriction, Mr. Kauhane, on having cases heard in public courtroom, that is when you demand a jury trial. I think I'm correct, if the delegate from the fourth district will bear me out on that.

A. TRASK: I just have one question I'd like to ask the chairman. It's not explained in the Section 2 on page 4 of the report. Namely, it has to do with, "In case of a vacancy in the office of chief justice, or if he is ill, absent or otherwise unable to serve, an associate justice designated in accordance with the rules of the supreme court shall serve temporarily in his stead." Now, I'm concerned about the question of whether or not the words "vacancy, ill, absent or otherwise unable to serve" would include death, because the language is different from the language in the second sentence, "When necessary," which would include any contingency, an associate justice may be appointed from circuit. I wonder why that tenor of language was not followed with respect to the absence of the chief justice.

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman of the committee answer?

ANTHONY: I'd be very glad to answer that, Mr. Chairman. The word "vacancy," if the office is vacant that would include death, in the first place. The reason we didn't follow the same language of the preceding sentence, "When necessary, the chief justice shall assign a judge or judges of the circuit court to serve temporarily on the supreme court," was this. That sentence gives full authority to assign a judge in any case that is necessary. Whether it's death, absence, inability, disqualification, or any reason, the court can assign a judge from the cirucit court to sit on the supreme court.

Now when we came down to dealing with the powers of the chief justice, we had to take care of the situation where there was no chief justice. In other words, the chief justice might have died, or the chief justice might have resigned, and therefore, the difference in the language. "In case of a vacancy in the office of chief justice, or if he is ill, absent, or otherwise unable"—that means otherwise, for any reason—"unable to serve, an associate justice designated in accordance with the rules of the supreme court shall serve temporarily in his stead." Does that answer your question, Mr. Trask?

A. TRASK: Yes, if the word "vacancy" does include the word "death," and the supreme court we know recently struggled over the matter, well that satisfies me.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

HOLROYDE: I'd like to be a little further convinced why the supreme court cannot be allowed to operate in the absence of one or two members for the reason that we've had a three-man court for a long time and they have functioned pretty well. Now you increase it to five. Five men, if they have a vacation of a month a year, they are gone for five months. In other words, for five months you have a man moved up from the lower courts where the greatest load of our courts is at the present time. Now I sort of sympathize with Delegate Mizuha's suggestion there that maybe that court ought to be allowed to operate with fewer members present. I'd like to hear a little more discussion on that point, from the chairmen of the committee.

ASHFORD: I would like to speak very briefly to that point. I think it has been the sad experience of this Convention that where two lawyers are gathered together there is a difference of opinion and I think that the chairman of the Committee on Style, who is cursed with eight attorneys on his committee, will bear that out. Now the great advantage of having five rather than three is that you get all sides of the case presented in arguments among the judges before the decision is determined, and they may agree for different reasons, all of them valid, or there may be a necessity of dissenting opinions setting out a different theory. I think that that could be carried to an extent where you would be prevented from having a speedy administration of justice if you got too many, but I think five would certainly present all aspects of the case.

MAU: Mr. Chairman, I concur heartily with the lady.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will recognize Delegate Mau. I recognize you now.

MAU: I'm sorry. Speaking to the point raised by the delegate from the fifth district, he has the impression that the justices of the supreme court take their month or two month vacation during different months of the year. That does not happen in practice. The practice adopted by this supreme court is like the practice in vogue in the Supreme Court of the United States. In the summer months, I think for a period of two months or so, there is no full hearing of the court. They don't hear any cases. There is a justice remaining to administer the administrative affairs of the court, but at least nine, ten months out of the year, they sit as a full court. So that they don't take their vacations during different months in the year.

KAUHANE: I'd like to ask another question of the chairman. The word "absent" is used in Section 2. It also provides that in the absence of the chief justice, an associate justice may serve in his place—absent from the state with respect to official business. Does that - - has the committee given any consideration as to how long a period of time must the chief justice be absent in order to allow the associate justice to serve? Could he leave the state and be absent from the state on business other than that of the court's work?

CHAIRMAN: I believe the article says can fill any vacancy.

ANTHONY: That is correct. If the chief justice would go to San Francisco over the week end and any business would arise requiring an acting chief justice, then under this article, the person designated by the rules would serve.

KAUHANE: Yes, but if he stays away for six months and doesn't come back to the State to conduct or take his position in the supreme court, are we to grant him that long period of time to be absent from the State without cause? Or should he be penalized if he absents himself from the State without cause?

ANTHONY: In my judgment, that would be grounds for impeaching the chief justice or any other justice.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any other - - any further discussion?

NIELSEN: I would like to know if the committee has given any consideration to the expense of the five justices over three, as I understand that the State is going to have to pay the bill from now on out instead of having the Federal Government pay it.

CHAIRMAN: That was given in the chairman's original statement on the proposition. He covered that subject. Do you wish any further answer from him, Delegate Nielsen? Will the chairman restate the position he stated on that?

ANTHONY: That's covered in the report and I'll briefly restate it.

The total cost of operating the judicial department of government is relatively insignificant when you compare it to any one of the many departments of the executive branch. So, if the considerations warrant a court of five, I do not believe that the added expense of salaries of two judges and secretaries for two judges and, of course, chambers for two judges, is an overwhelming consideration. If it is desirable to have five, I think we should have five. In other words, the actual cost of it is relatively small as compared with other departments of government.

ASHFORD: I am an example of disagreeing right here. I disagree with the gentleman's statement that if a man remains away six months, that's ground for impeachment. Where is that a high crime or misdemeanor within the provisions of that section?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony?

ANTHONY: That would be a matter for the House of Representatives in the first instance to make a charge. If a justice had no valid excuse, was just going up to look around the mountains of Canada and letting the judicial business of the Territory go to pot, in my opinion an argument could be made that that would be nonfeasance or misfeasance in office. That would come before the House of Representatives and ultimately before the Senate.

ASHFORD: The language of the section on impeachment refers to "high crimes and misdemeanors," not malfeasance or misfeasance in office.

BRYAN: I think that subject can be aired properly when we take up Section 4.

CHAIRMAN: I didn't understand, Delegate Bryan. Did you move for the previous question?

BRYAN: No, I didn't move for the previous question. I suggested that they withhold discussion of that matter until we took up Section 4.

CHAIRMAN: Oh, thank you.

KAUHANE: I'd like, if I'm in order, to offer an amendment, and I don't know where to put it. I'd like to meet with the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, to safeguard the abuse of being absent out of the State.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state that, if you'll suspend a moment, that the clerks have been taking down - -

KAUHANE: I move we take a short recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: No objection? We'll have a five minute recess.

(RECESS)

HOLROYDE: I move the previous question.

H. RICE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question has been moved and seconded. All those in favor of the previous question say "aye." Opposed. Carried unanimously.

The question is the adoption of Section 2 as it is written. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 4 as written.

DOWSON: I second the motion to approve Section 4.

CHAIRMAN: Same mover, same second. Adoption of Section 4. Any discussion? Are you ready for the question?

RICHARDS: I have a question that I would like to ask the chairman of the committee. In Section 4, in the chairman's statement he seemed to be particularly exercised when discussing Section 10, that it was necessary to do a lot of things between sessions of the legislature. Now Section 4 providing for impeachment does not permit the removal of any judge prior to the next meeting of the legislature regardless of what crime he may have committed. And I wonder of the chairman of the committee if there is no way that could be provided to remove from the actual conducting of his office any judge so accused.

CHAIRMAN: Ask the chairman of the committee to answer that, please.

ANTHONY: Section 4 accomplishes just that, only he is not removed. The member will read the language of Section 4: "Any judicial officer impeached shall not exercise his office until acquitted." In other words, once the charge is made in the House of Representatives, and I understand they're going to have annual sessions, then he shall not exercise his office until he has been acquitted.

RICHARDS: That does not answer my question. A man can commit murder in office right after a session of the legislature and, even if there are annual sessions, he can still perform his office until impeached by the next session of the legislature.

ASHFORD: I know that in the Constitution of the United States the word "impeachment" alone is used. In the opinion of the committee, does the word "impeachment" carry with it the necessary connotation that it is upon charge by the House of Representatives to be tried by the Senate?

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman please answer that?

ANTHONY: That is correct, and so referred in our report. This will tie into an impeachment proposal pending before the legislative powers and functions section.

ASHFORD: May I make a further statement in that connection? If we have a unicameral legislature then there would be no means of impeachment.

HEEN: The Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions have already decided for a bicameral legislature. And it has also approved the proposal relating to impeachment following the language of the Federal Constitution. In other words, impeachment must be made by the House, by a majority vote, and then the charges in the impeachment tried by the Senate, and that requires a concurrence of two-thirds of the members present to convict. This provision goes one step further, however, that once the judicial officer is impeached he shall not exercise his office until acquitted.

BRYAN: I would like to ask the chairman of the committee if he feels it would be necessary to make a change in this section in order to get around the question that was brought up by the delegate from the fifth district.

ANTHONY: I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman, someone was whispering to me when that question was - -

CHAIRMAN: Would you repeat the question please?

BRYAN: Do you think it would be advisable, or is there a possibility of making a change in this section to get around the question brought up by the delegate from the fifth? Also, I might say that I believe it would be up to the Committee of Style that, should we have a unicameral legislature, to point this inconsistency out to the Convention.

ANTHONY: I think the case that the delegate from the fifth district has put, namely, the justice of the supreme court committing murder the day after the legislature adjourns, is such a remote one that I don't think it's necessary to include such a remote contingency in the Constitution. I know of no state constitution that has such a provision in it. Of course the governor could call the House and the Senate into session immediately if there was any public demand for an impeachment, and that could be speedily done. Otherwise, the judge would sit on the court but he would only be one of five, in any event.

RICHARDS: This does not refer to just supreme court judges. It refers to circuit court judges as well. I know that there are a good many circuit court judges who use alcoholic beverages. They drive automobiles, and negligent homicide I imagine would be subject to impeachment. And can that judge sit and judge other people for nine, ten or eleven months? That's the question I asked.

ASHFORD: I would like to give notice that if the only method of removing a judge is by impeachment for high crimes and misdemeanors, I shall not vote for Section 3.

TAVARES: In the first place, I'd like to give notice that I am going to propose an amendment which will to a large extent take care of the situation, although not exactly what the delegate from the fifth district has raised.

There is a very remote possibility that some judge might be accused of a crime and that the legislature might not be in session for some time and that the governor might not want to call a special session and go through that expense for removing him. However in the 50 years that this Territory has been in existence and the -- I don't know, maybe 50 or 70, I don't know how many years before that when we had a judiciary, I know of no instance where that has occurred. Nor do I know of one on the Supreme Court of the United States where they hold office for life. I think the possibility is very remote.

I'd like to point this out also. If there is that kind of a crime committed, it is probably in view of the care which, under any system, goes into selection of a judge. The crimes that are committed are more likely to be of that negligent type, and that negligent type does not, as a rule, disqualify a man to sit fairly on most cases. It is usually not the type that reflects on the morality and character of the judge, it's perhaps—I mean his ability to judge fairly, which is the main thing. I think that we could manage to suffer along a little while, before the next session of the legislature.

Finally, it seems to me that if a man is accused of crime, most of them will have the good grace to resign if they are guilty, or they will be put away within such a time that they won't do too much harm in the meantime.

I will offer an amendment at the proper time allowing the legislature by a two-thirds vote after certain procedures, rather than -- in addition to the impeachment procedure, to remove a judge for any cause showing unfitness to remain in office.

CHAIRMAN: Did the delegate offer that as an amendment now or would you like to defer this section until the end of the proposals?

TAVARES: In order to facilitate the discussion, I will offer it now as an amendment to go in as Section 4A. As an addition, yes, to the article, to go in as Section 4A to supplement Article [sic] 4.

> Section 4-A. A justice of the supreme court or a judge of a circuit court shall also be subject to removal from office for unfitness to continue in office, by resolution adopted by two-thirds of the membership of both houses of the legislature sitting in joint session, upon written charges made by a commission or agency established by law, after notice and an opportunity to be heard before a joint committee of both houses, and an opportunity to address such joint session in his defense.

CHAIRMAN: I'll have the Clerk read the amendment. If the messenger has enough copies to distribute, we'll distribute copies of the amendment.

KAUHANE: I'd like to ask the learned attorneys the -- CHAIRMAN: We have 17 of them. Which one?

KAUHANE: Any one who is a member of the Judiciary Committee, relative to impeachment. If an impeachment proceeding is filed in the House against Garner Anthony and the Senate is to hear the case, what penalty will be instituted if Anthony walks around to the members of the Senate and asks them to drop -- to vote against the impeachment proceedings against him? In other words, intimidating the senators to gain their confidence. Is there some provisions for penalty made to take care of cases like that?

CHAIRMAN: I'll ask Chairman Anthony to answer that.

ANTHONY: Each house is the judge of its own rules, and that would be direct contempt of either house. And either house could promulgate any penalty it saw fit, depending on the character of the offense committed.

KAUHANE: That rule only applies to members of the legislature, not to a judge who has to escape from the proceeding of impeachment. The thing that I'm worried about is when the impeachment proceedings is pending before the Senate, the Senate hasn't held a hearing yet, and the accused gives a party and invites the members of the Senate and gets them to vote against an impeachment against him.

CHAIRMAN: Does the delegate have an amendment to offer?

KAUHANE: Well, I'd like the Judiciary Committee to think of that and prepare the necessary amendment to take care of that. We, the laymen, are penalized for almost anything we do. We certainly would like to penalize them when they begin to interfere with the judicial proceedings of the Senate in relation to impeachment proceedings.

CHAIRMAN: May I ask the chairman of the Judiciary if any thought was given to the problem that Delegate Kauhane has raised?

ANTHONY: I confess that it has not, but I say this. There is ample room for the legislature to pass any laws which will penalize anybody for interfering, whether it's by way of lobbying or giving luaus or whatever they are doing, in any of the deliberative processes of either house. I don't think that the members of the House of Representatives, on a solemn occasion like an impeachment, I don't think the delegate and his associates on the House floor or in committees, would pay any attention to any luau. In fact they'd probably vote for the impeachment quicker if anybody started to do that sort of thing to him.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to recognize Delegate Tavares on this motion.

KAUHANE: I have another question to ask.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will recognize you in just a moment.

KAUHANE: I yielded only for distribution of this amendment, to the question from the delegate from the fifth district.

TAVARES: I offer this amendment as an addition to supplement Section 4 but for convenience, to be numbered 4A, leaving the final numbering to the Style Committee, a section or an additional provision providing for a more liberal method of removal of judges.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

ROBERTS: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded.

TRASK: I'd like to ask a question of Delegate Tavares.

CHAIRMAN: Well, before I can recognize you, do you wish to speak any further on the motion, Delegate Tavares?

TAVARES: I'll speak later. I thought I'd have this before the members in the discussion and a little later I'll try to answer some of the questions.

CHAIRMAN: I'll have to recognize Delegate Kauhane, who was asking a question before, then I'll recognize Delegate Trask.

KAUHANE: I realize the answer given by Anthony, Garner Anthony, but I still say because of the fact that we have no prohibition against lobbying, I think it should be -- what I am attempting to safeguard should be made a part of the committee proposal.

Another thing relative to impeachment. If the Senate fails to hold a hearing on the impeachment proceedings, and the legislature adjourns, I presume that the accused is still suspended from office. Am I right or wrong, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, I believe. That's correct.

KAUHANE: Then if the legislature reconvenes two years later, we go through the same process of filing the complaint again in the House and then it's submitted back to the Senate. Nothing is done in the next two years, so he is out four years. What provision is made so that the continuation of this thing could be protected to allow a man fair trial under a democratic system, so that he can return to his office without any further jeopardy on the part of the impeachment proceeding hanging before the Senate.

CHAIRMAN: Does some member of the committee wish to answer that?

ANTHONY: The question propounded by the last speaker is a situation in which the Senate, the elected Senate of this State, has flagrantly refused to do its duty, commanded by the Constitution, and there is no answer. If the legislatures -- legislators whether they are in the House or in the Senate, or even the executive or judicial branches of the government, if they are going to flagrantly disregard their clear duties, then we might as well fold up and have no government at all. I don't think for a moment that any Senate of this State, having on its Clerk's desk a charge of impeachment, would have the temerity to go back -- leave the capital and go back to their own districts and islands without disposing of that important business.

A. TRASK: Just one question. Section 9, Delegate Anthony, seems to provide for the appointment of a circuit judge to serve temporarily in the place of another circuit judge, and during the time that the trial is on, the impeachment trial, the chief justice may appoint a circuit judge from Kauai to sit for a judge on Hawaii. That seems to be so, but it seems to me there ought to be consideration in Section 4 of either the executive branch temporarily appointing a judge to sit in a particular circuit, instead of taking one judge from one circuit and have him temporarily double up on his work. I think some provision should be given. During the time when the impeached judge is not authorized to exercise his office, there should be some provision made for the appointment of a temporary judge by the executive. Did you consider that? Because I don't think Section 9 satisfactorily covers that situation when the people should have continuing judicial service.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman, may I answer that question? If a justice, say, of the supreme court is unable to serve because of charges of impeachment as provided in Section 4, then under Section 2, "When necessary, the chief justice shall assign a judge or judges of the circuit court to serve temporarily on the supreme court."

A. TRASK: That doesn't quite answer the situation, Delegate Heen, because that is when a justice in the supreme court is under impeachment. But where -- the question posed by me was the circuit judge. When he is under impeachment, he cannot exercise his office. The chief justice is empowered to get a judge temporarily from one circuit to have him double up on his duties on another island, or circuit. It doesn't provide for it. I think there should be an inclusion so that the Section 4 be amended whereby while such officer -- judicial officer is incapacitated to exercise his duties, the executive shall have the power, in whatever previous section we may refer to, for appointment, temporarily.

HEEN: I think Section 9 is broad enough in language whereby the chief justice may assign justices from one circuit to another for temporary service.

A. TRASK: That is correct, but I do not think it is fair for the people of one circuit to have only the part-time service of a judge from another circuit when there is no telling how long a period this impasse may last. So I think the committee should seriously consider an amendment to this, so that -- it's not fair to the judge who is doubling up, it's not fair to the people.

HEEN: Of course, if there is considerable work in the particular circuit court, where the judge of that circuit is unable to serve because he has been impeached, the chief justice can assign one circuit judge from another circuit for, say, a few days or a few weeks; then relieve that circuit judge and take another circuit judge from another circuit to do the temporary -- to serve temporarily.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask the chairman of this committee, if many of the things that have been brought up here can't be taken care of by legislation, by the way of removing a judge from the bench temporarily under certain circumstances and so forth.

ANTHONY: That's precisely the basis that the committee proceeded upon. The case that delegate from the fifth district, Delegate Trask, referred to, if there is any danger, if that is any problem—and never in our judicial history has it been a problem—that could be amply covered by legislation. In the meantime, under the mechanics of this article, the chief justice could assign a judge to take -- do the business of any particular circuit. If something more need be done, it can be filled in by legislation.

TAVARES: One more thought to be added to that, and that is, there is no limit in this article on the number of circuit judges that may be appointed -- that may be created by the legislature. And it would be quite feasible in my opinion for the legislature by law to provide for appointment of acting circuit judges who could then be assigned to take up the load when the regular circuit judges were unable to handle it all.

MIZUHA: I would like to ask a question of the chairman first. Is this amendment proposed by delegate from the fourth district before the committee?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment 4A is before the committee.

MIZUHA: I would like to ask the delegate from the fourth district who proposes this amendment the question as to the "resolution adopted by two-thirds membership of both houses of the legislature sitting in joint session." Do you mean that the combined vote, two-thirds vote of both houses of the legislature, or a separate two-thirds vote of the legislative branch and the Senate?

CHAIRMAN: Before the delegate answers that, may I remind the delegates here that we're not in recess, we're still in the Committee of the Whole, and there is a lot of extraneous noise going on that makes it very difficult to hear.

MIZUHA: The question is two-thirds vote of the House of Representatives or whatever they call it, and the Senate, separately or combined?

TAVARES: I think from the words, "sitting in joint session" it's very clearly implied that the vote must be a vote of the combined houses sitting in session. Two-thirds of all the members sitting in session, not two-thirds of each house.

MIZUHA: Then I'll ask the further question. Don't you think that perhaps it will be giving the House of Representatives too much power inasmuch as the division of representation may be much greater in the House of Representatives than in the Senate?

TAVARES: I am thinking of the words in this article -- of this section, which says that the removal must be a "removal from office for unfitness to continue in office." I am assuming as I believe I have a right to assume, that when that body gets together, there will be enough good men in there to see that the majority does not act from such motives as to allow mere political or other improper influences to result in removing a judge as unfit for office, unless he really is unfit for office.

MIZUHA: The reason for -- Mr. Chairman, I still have the floor. The reason for asking this question is, traditionally impeachments of public officers have been vested with the Senate of any legislative branch of government. The reason for that is that the Senate usually has a proportionate representation from smaller areas as compared with larger areas. If the recommendations of the Legislative Committee carry through with this Convention, we will find perhaps the combined Oahu vote in the legislature will be much greater, if they sit in joint session, than the outlying islands. And sometimes I wonder whether or not this combined vote may work against the giving a judge from the outside circuit the kind of trial he deserves.

TAVARES: In the first place, the only situation under which I can imagine there would be a possibility of the question other than unfitness coming up, would be if it were a pure political vote. There will always be a split even in the Oahu delegation on political lines. In the first place, I do not believe that where such a trial comes up, they will split on political lines.

LUIZ: I would like to understand the mechanics on this Section 4A. It specifies here only "upon written charges made by a commission or agency." In other words, will it only be the commission or agency that can apply to 4A or [if] any other, like the group IMUA, would like to petition, that they would petition one of the commissions -- the commission or the agencies, that they can bring it up in that fashion.

TAVARES: That provision was put in there advisably. It is neither -- it neither befits the dignity of a judge or court nor is it advisable in the public interest to have any individual be able to run to the legislature and file a charge and force the legislature to have a hearing on any kind of trumped-up charges. For that reason this provides that the legislature by law must set up a commission—it can be a judicial council as is recommended in the Model Constitution and is provided in some other constitutions; it can be some other commission, perhaps a bipartisan commission created by the legislature, before which the person who wants to make a charge must bring his charge, and they sift it through and see if it's a charge serious enough to bring before the legislature. Once they vote to bring that charge before the legislature, they are the accusers. Now the reason for a separate commission is this. We do not want any legislator disqualifying himself from voting because he has to file a charge. So we provide for an outside agency to do it so that the legislator will not be prosecutor and judge and jury at the same time.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Luiz, does that answer any further question? He asked a question. He hadn't yielded the floor. Are you through?

GILLILAND: May I ask the delegate from the fourth district a question? You have in here that he shall "be subject to removal from office for unfitness to continue in office, by resolution adopted by two-thirds of the membership of both houses of the legislature sitting in joint session." Don't you think it should properly be sitting -- that the House of Representatives should control this man's dismissal? Since he was confirmed by the Senate, why should the Senate sit in judgment on him.

TAVARES: The thought was that here are all of the representatives and senators of all of the people sitting in judgment on the removal of a member of a coordinate and independent branch of government. It was felt that it was desirable to add to the geographical distribution on the one side, the population distribution on the other, and have both elements consider the matter together as to whether this person was unfit to continue in office.

Let me explain how this procedure works. A person having a grievance goes before whatever commission is set up by the legislature. They prepare the charges and file them in the legislature. The first thing the legislature does under this section is to appoint a joint committee of both houses, not both houses because you can't get both houses to sit on a long trial. That has been the vice of impeachment. You can't get the Senate. It's very difficult to have a quorum sit day after day after day to have a trial. So they appoint a joint committee of a few members who will then have the trial, at which there will be written charges presented to the judge. He will be given a full dress trial. The committee will then make a report, analyzing the evidence and making its recommendation of removal or non-removal. If they recommend removal, then the charge goes before the Senate like any committee report, and the accused has one more chance. Just as we lawyers have to go before a judge and argue against the master's report, the accused has one more chance to address the joint session. He doesn't waste their time with a long trial. He simply addresses the joint session to show why he thinks that report should not be adopted, and then the joint session votes.

SILVA: Is the amendment before the committee or has it just been presented? There's no motion for adoption of the amendment. I don't see what they are discussing on.

TAVARES: I move that the amendment be adopted.

SILVA: No.

DELEGATE: I think there was a motion and a second.

PORTEUS: I second the motion.

SAKAKIHARA: For the purpose of discussion I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair recognizes that a motion was made to amend this Section 4 by adding to it the section to be numbered, for convenience, 4A. Therefore, it was not felt necessary to move the adoption of that separately.

GILLILAND: I'm not satisfied with the delegate from the fourth district's explanation. Why should we have one division of the legislature, the Senate, confirm a man and require two divisions, the House and the Senate, to throw him out. I don't think it's fair.

ANTHONY: I move we take a short recess to the call of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: No objection? We'll have a five minute recess.

(RECESS)

ANTHONY: There have been a number of suggestions in regard to this Section. Accordingly I move that we defer consideration of it for the time being.

A. TRASK: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: You defer it until when, Delegate Anthony? Till the end of the section - - to be taken up after Section 10?

ANTHONY: Yes, that's correct. After we discuss Section 10.

CHAIRMAN: Yes. I might - - The Chair would like to announce that any business that remains unfinished on this at 12:00 will be taken up at a continued session at 7:30 tonight.

SILVA: That will be the will of the Convention, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: It has been the consensus of the opinion here, the group, that they would like to continue on that. We'll take a vote at the proper time.

ANTHONY: I move the adoption of Section 5.

BRYAN: Point of order.

APOLIONA: I move at this time that Delegate Bryan be allowed to move for adoption of Section 5 and Delegate Dowson be allowed to second his motion.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

BRYAN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Will you state your point of order.

BRYAN: We have not voted on the deferment.

CHAIRMAN: I haven't put the - - He was out of order, the deferment has not yet been put. All those in favor of deferring will say "aye." Opposed. Deferred.

APOLIONA: At this time, I move that Delegate Bryan be allowed the honor of moving for adoption of Section 5 and Delegate - -

CHAIRMAN: You're unplugged. Delegate Bryan.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 5 as written.

DOWSON: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded by Delegate Dowson that Section 5 be adopted.

ROBERTS: Section 5 provides that when the supreme court shall certify to the governor that a member of the supreme court or the circuit court is so incapacitated as substantially to prevent him from performing his judicial duties, that the governor shall appoint a committee to investigate and the governor may recommend the retirement of the judge or justice from office.

The chairman of the committee, Judicial Committee, has prepared a very excellent paper which was read before the Social Science Club, which to me suggests that it would be quite difficult and certainly extremely embarrassing for a member of the supreme court to suggest to another member of the supreme court that he is no longer competent and able to perform his duties. And he cites, I think, two very effective situations, where Justice Harlan, when he was asked to so retire, said that his previous action in connection with the Grier case was one of the dirtiest day's work that he had ever performed.

Mr. Chairman, in a later section I plan to move a judicial council, not a council for the suggestion of a panel of names, but one dealing with administrative matters. I would like to reserve that if this Section 5 is adopted, that if a judicial council is set up, dealing with such administrative matters, that such judicial council shall certify when a circuit court or supreme court justice is incapacitated.

HEEN: Inasmuch as there is so much controversy as to how a justice or a judge may be removed from office or suspended from office, I move that we defer further action upon, or further consideration of Section 5.

DOI: I second the motion.

HEEN: Maybe then we can combine all of these things in one short section.

MAU: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: There has been a motion to defer this section until when? Until - -

DOI: Consideration of Section 4, I believe.

CHAIRMAN: Will you plug in, please?

HEEN: Until we get through with Section 10.

CHAIRMAN: Section 4 and 4A have already been deferred to that position. Would you like to take this up after Section 4 and 4A or before?

HEEN: All at the same time.

DOI: That's right.

HEEN: All at the same time, maybe, as I said, combined into one section to cover all situations. That includes, I suppose, the deferment of Section 4, or has that already been deferred?

CHAIRMAN: Section 4 and 4A have been deferred till the end of this section.

DOI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 5 be deferred. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Section 6.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 6 as written.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Same mover, same second.

ASHFORD: I would like to ask a question. "Shall not be - -" "The compensation shall not be diminished during term of office." In my own opinion that includes a case where the legislature has, after the inception of the term of office, has raised the pay. It can then not diminish that raise. I would like to ask the committee if they agree with that interpretation of "diminish."

ANTHONY: That interpretation is correct. This is taken directly from the Federal Constitution. In other words, whatever the salary is when the Constitution goes into effect, the legislature may not diminish it. And if the legislature thereafter increases it, again the legislature may not diminish the salary during the term of office.

ASHFORD: I'm opposed to that provision then for this reason, that we have seen raises made during times of extraordinary inflation. Then when we collapse, the judges should take their cuts from that raise that has been made after the inception of their term, just as everybody else in government should.

CHAIRMAN: Does the delegate wish to propose an amendment on this section?

ASHFORD: I will move to amend that section by inserting after the word "diminish," "shall not be diminished from that which existed at the inception of a term."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

KIDO: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It's been seconded by Mr. Kido.

TAVARES: I do not believe that that is a sound amendment. If there is to be one, it seems to me that the amendment should read, "that it shall not be diminished unless as a proportionate part of a fair scheme of cutting all salaries." It ought to be worded in that way, there shouldn't be a picking out of one particular group. I think it should stay as it is, but if they want to add a qualification, have a provision that if all salaries are cut generally, they may be cut at the same time. Just as when taxes are paid today under the most recent rulings, that is not considered a diminution because everybody has the same cut taken out of their salary proportionately.

ANTHONY: I'm opposed to the amendment, and the reason I'm opposed to it is that this will strike right at the heart of the judicial branch. It will permit the legislature to pass a decent salary, then if a judge sits on the bench, and he does something which the legislature doesn't like, they could reduce the salary of the judge of the second circuit, and at the same time they could leave the salaries of the judges of other circuits where they are. I think it would be an inroad on the independence of the judiciary. It is a radical departure from the provision of the Federal Constitution, and I'm opposed to the amendment.

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, one - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau hasn't spoken on this yet.

MAU: I am in agreement with the chairman of the Judiciary. If we are to keep the three branches of government separate and independent, then we've got to protect the judicial branch of the government. If this amendment passes, the danger is too great that that independence will be knocked out in our democratic form of government, and I'm opposed to that for that reason.

TAVARES: One more factual thought, and that is, I doubt very much whether for a long time to come all the combined salaries of our judges will equal $200,000. Now we have a 40 million dollar a year budget. Those salaries come to less than one-half of one per cent. We're arguing over absolutely infinitesimal microbes here.

MIZUHA: As one who had stood steadfast in the committee for the retirement of our judges at a full pay, I wish to move to table the amendment.

ASHFORD: In response to some of the arguments made by the gentleman from the fourth, I would like to say that there is no reason on earth why the judiciary should be excepted from every other branch of government in suffering the results of a depression.

CHAIRMAN: Was there a second to the motion?

HEEN: The remark made by the last speaker is not germane to the amendment that she has offered. That is a different proposition altogether. But I do agree with her remark though, that if there is to be a diminution, I mean a provision that the salaries shall not be diminished, that there should be an exception there that the same may be diminished when all other salaries are diminished. I recall that in 1932, the legislature was called into special session to effect - - to enact a piece of legislation which reduced all compensation of government employees by ten per cent.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Arashiro had seconded the motion to table. There's a motion to table the amendment.

RICHARDS: May I - - a point of information. Does this mean in its present wording that if there were applied to the judicial department the same type of cost of living bonus that is now in effect throughout the rest of the territory, that if, at the time a judge takes office that bonus is in effect, that that bonus cannot be removed?

DELEGATE: Right.

RICHARDS: And we are suggesting here appointing the judges for 12 years? I think that is out of line.

CHAIRMAN: The question is to table the amendment. All those in favor of tabling the oral amendment as proposed by Delegate Ashford to say "aye." Opposed. The noes have it. The motion is not tabled.

LEE: As one who has supported this proposal, there is something - - I disagree with some of my colleagues in the majority as to the merits of the arguments made by Miss Ashford. I wonder whether Miss Ashford had considered this possibility of eliminating the words "which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office," leaving it to the legislature to determine the matter. It's a point of information on my part as to whether or not that was her intention.

CHAIRMAN: Can Delegate Ashford answer the question, please?

ASHFORD: I would like to have that rephrased. I don't get the meat of it.

LEE: Well, the last part of that sentence reads, "which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office." That is the bone of contention, as I recall.

ASHFORD: Yes.

LEE: Now if that phrase were eliminated completely, would that not accomplish the purpose that you seek to have, or is it something else?

ASHFORD: Yes, that would accomplish the purpose, but I think there is a great deal to be said for the fact that compensation of a judge should not be diminished over that which existed at the inception of his term. And I would accept such an amendment as was offered by the delegate from the fourth, to read somewhat such as this, "unless by general law, all compensation of public officers were diminished, and to that extent."

TAVARES: I move - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan had the floor, requested the floor.

BRYAN: I would very gladly yield. Miss Ashford covered what I wanted to say.

TAVARES: In view of the necessity of rephrasing that provision, I move to defer action until after consideration of Sections 4, 4A, and 5, so that we may have an opportunity to reword the proposed amendment.

A. TRASK: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded we defer action on Section 6 and the amendment in Section 6 until the end of the proposal. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Section 7.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 7 as written.

DOWSON: I second the motion to adopt.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded, the adoption of Section 7. Anyone wish to speak?

ASHFORD: I would like to ask some questions. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee the question of whether or not the provision of the New Jersey Constitution, that "justices and judges shall not while in office engage in the practice of law or other gainful pursuit" has been considered by the committee.

ANTHONY: That practice that has obtained in the State of New Jersey and was outlawed in the New Jersey Constitution is unknown to our practice here. Judges of courts of record do not engage in any practice of law. They can't under our present system. If they want to go into real estate business on the side, that's up to them, or play the stock market. This provision prevents them from holding any other office of profit under the State or under the United States.

ASHFORD: A further question. Is it the contention of the chairman of the committee that the practicing of law is an office of profit, or how is it excluded?

ANTHONY: It is not an office within the definition of this section. "Office" means an office under the State, or under the United States. They would not -- an attorney is a member of the court but he doesn't hold office, within the meaning of this section.

ASHFORD: Then under this section, is it not true that a judge could practice law?

ANTHONY: The answer is no.

TAVARES: May I answer that further. We have a statute which is still in effect and will be continued in effect by the Constitution I am sure, if my recollection serves me right, which prohibits circuit judges and supreme court judges from practicing law while they are in office. That's a legislative matter which has been taken care of and can and will continue in effect.

ASHFORD: I disagree entirely. I think this is wholly a constitutional matter, that judges should be forbidden by the Constitution to practice law. If it is necessary to pass a statute to that effect, then it is imperative that it be written into the Constitution.

TAVARES: If that is correct, then we'll have to write every disqualification provision into the Constitution also. It has been traditional that the legislature has power to prescribe provisions for disqualification of judges from pecuniary interest and otherwise. And I think that that is just as proper a matter to be left to the legislature as these other provisions for disqualification.

CHAIRMAN: What is your pleasure on Section 7?

SILVA: Put it in the Constitution.

LAI: In this section, do I understand that a judge or justice can accept a position on a board or commission without pay?

CHAIRMAN: Would the chairman of the Judiciary answer him?

ANTHONY: That is correct. Without pay.

LAI: If that is so, I am opposed to that for two reasons. One is that when the judge or justice serves on the board or commission, his time and effort would be divided. And I know for a fact that some of these commissions and boards spend lot of time, and they have lot of problems, and I don't think a judge or justice should serve on the board or commission. And the second reason is that we are here to write a Constitution to create a strong state government, and this state government has three branches of -- three departments, and I don't think a member of one department should pry into the business of the other. And I know the commission and boards are mostly of the executive department. I feel strongly against that for that two reasons.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion on this section?

DELEGATE: Question.

WOOLAWAY: By this last sentence, prohibiting the judge to run for an elective office, I take it we won't have the services of Judge Wirtz in future constitutional conventions? Is that so?

TAVARES: I think that is probably correct.

I'd like to call the attention of the members to Section 9574 of our Revised Laws which will be continued in effect by our Constitution. It says, "No justice of the supreme court nor any circuit judge shall exercise the profession or employment of counsel or attorney at law or be engaged in the practice of law." Now I can't imagine any legislature ever repealing that section.

ASHFORD: If it is not necessary to write these things into the Constitution, why do we have this section at all?

CHAIRMAN: Would any one on the committee care to answer that?

ANTHONY: The reason the section is drafted is to prevent a judge from holding two jobs, drawing two salaries from the State, or one salary, a judicial salary from the State, and another salary from either the United States or the State of Hawaii. Perfectly proper provision.

CHAIRMAN: What is your pleasure on this section? You ready for the question? All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Ayes have it.

Section 8.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 8.

DOWSON: I second the motion to adopt Section 8 of Proposal No. 7.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

GILLILAND: May I have an explanation of this second sentence under Section 8, "With the approval of the supreme court he shall appoint an administrative director to serve at his pleasure."

ANTHONY: The purpose of that sentence is to make the judicial department an efficient department of government. It puts the chief justice as the head of a unified court system. It gives him an administrative director who will attend to the administrative duties, the business of all of the courts. It is expressly made appointed by the court and serves at the pleasure of the chief justice for the simple reason that the court should have command of its administrative officer, and if he's no good he ought to be able to remove him.

ROBERTS: I indicated before that I planned to put a proposal before the committee, in the form of an amendment, providing for administrative machinery. I believe that that section could well be discussed when Section 10 is taken up. I move to defer that section to be treated together with Section 10 and Section 4.

SAKAKIHARA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this section be deferred, to be taken up with the other sections that have been deferred—most of the proposal.

ROBERTS: I might say that I'm in full accord with the proposal suggested by the chairman for administrative machinery and for such a person to assist in the operation. I'm in full accord with the principle of careful administration and careful review of the work of the judiciary.

CHAIRMAN: The question is for deferment. All those in favor - -

ANTHONY: I'd like to speak on the deferment, if I may. Am I out of order speaking, Mr. Chairman, against deferment?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair recognizes - -

ANTHONY: It seems to me even those who desire to have a judicial council still should be prepared to act on this. In other words, if we do have a judicial council, the duties of the director would be fitted into the council. As I gather the way we're moving here, we're passing over a lot of things that we are in agreement upon. If we are later going to have a judicial council, then we can reconsider this and put this back in any section on judicial council. So I am against deferring this at this time.

H. RICE: I'd like to say that I think that this is absolutely necessary, this section, because from my experience with the judge of the second circuit and the judge of the fifth circuit, they waste a lot of time going into the matter of the civil service classification of their employees and if they had an administrator up here and the chief justice could let him take care of such matters for them, they would save a lot of expensive time of the judges in caring for just such matters. I move that we table the motion to defer.

MIZUHA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second? There's a motion to table the motion to defer. All those in favor of tabling the motion to defer say "aye." Opposed. The motion to defer is lost.

OHRT: I want to say I'm very much in favor of that section because I'm hoping that this Convention will give the governor the same privilege of having an administrative assistant.

ROBERTS: I indicated before that I'm in support of that section, and if it's understood that it could be worked into the section later on the judicial council, I will support the motion.

CHAIRMAN: What is your pleasure?

H. RICE: I move that we adopt Section 8.

CHAIRMAN: It's already been moved.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the adoption of Section 8 will say "aye." Opposed. Carried unanimously.

Section 9.

BRYAN: I'd like to move the adoption of Section 9.

DOWSON: May I second that motion?

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we adopt Section 9. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried unanimously.

Section 10.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 10.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we adopt Section 10.

ROBERTS: Section 10 goes to the same problem of procedure, and I'd like, if it's agreeable with the delegates, to move that the Committee of the Whole rise, and report progress, and then beg leave to sit tonight at 7:30 to continue with this discussion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

MIZUHA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the Committee rise, report progress, beg leave to sit again at 7:30 this evening. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

DELEGATES: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: All those demanding a roll call raise their hand.

BRYAN: May I suggest a show of hands?

CHAIRMAN: It's been suggested, a show of hands. Would that be sufficient?

WOOLAWAY: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Point of information? State your point of information.

WOOLAWAY: Is there any reason why we can't meet at 1:30 this afternoon?

CHAIRMAN: There are committee meetings all afternoon that have been set up.

BRYAN: I don't see how we can go ahead with these committee meetings and allow these committees to get their work done if we go ahead this afternoon and interrupt, and that's why I favor this 7:30 meeting tonight.

SILVA: Have the committee meetings at night.

PORTEUS: There seems to be some issues - - question as to the number of committee meetings. The Committee on Executive Powers and Functions has asked to hold a meeting at 1:30; the Committee on Agriculture, Conservation and Public Lands also wishes a meeting at 1:30; the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions wishes to meet at 3; and the Committee on Industry and Labor also wishes to meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

KING: I hope the members will agree to a night session tonight, and I feel that we've got to have a night session almost every night hereafter, perhaps not Saturday, but next week. The agenda is not going ahead as fast as it should and this particular proposal is one of the major proposals that should be cleared up. Next week, we'll have Legislative Functions perhaps before us; we'll have Executive Powers; we'll have Local Government; and we'll have to be sitting both forenoons and evenings in order to complete our work. So I hope that the motion to recess until 7:30 will carry.

HEEN: I note that both the Committee on Industry and Labor and the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions are sitting at 3 o'clock, at the same time.

CHAIRMAN: If you'll suspend a moment, when we reconvene in regular session will be the time to take that up. We are still in the Committee of the Whole, and it would be the time to take up the committee assignments at that time.

SILVA: You just report progress.

HAYES: I was going to say that the Hawaiian Homes Committee was going to -- intended to meet tonight.

CHAIRMAN: That would be the same point. It would be true of that, that all committee announcements should be kept until we reconvene.

ASHFORD: Any of us who have worked here or tried to work here at night are very conscious of the extremely bad lighting. Would it not be possible, if we are going to meet tonight, to have spare bulbs or something put in?

NIELSEN: I move that we report progress and recess from the Committee of the Whole.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is already before us to rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again.

LEE: Suggestion. Would it not be in order to have committee meetings at night so that the Convention could meet during the day? That's to combat this lighting situation as well as to be able to accomplish more work in committees during the evening. I know in my experience here in my night meetings we were able to accomplish more during the committee than in the daytime.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair rules that the motion was to rise and report progress, and beg leave to sit at 7:30.

ANTHONY: I move to amend that motion, that we move to rise, and beg leave to sit again -- report progress and beg leave to sit again.

FUKUSHIMA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved to amend the original motion. It would save time if -- Delegate Roberts, would you accept the amendment?

ROBERTS: I'll accept it.

CHAIRMAN: The motion now is to rise, report progress and beg leave to sit again. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried unanimously.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole please come to order. Will you be at ease, please. We will continue with Committee Proposal No. 7. We were on Section 10. What is your pleasure?

BRYAN: Is that before the house?

CHAIRMAN: Section 10 is before the Convention.

LAI: The ten sections here in Proposal No. 7 cover the functions and personnel of the judicial department very well. But I think we forgot the biggest thing. How do we get the money to run this department? There is no provision here calling for appropriation of a budget to run the department. Can somebody tell me that?

CHAIRMAN: Can the Committee on Judiciary answer that please?

ANTHONY: That's entirely a legislative function. It's up to the legislature to appropriate funds for this department just like every other department of government.

LAI: You mean they don't have to submit --

CHAIRMAN: Will the delegate please address the questions to the Chair.

LAI: You mean that the judicial department doesn't have to submit a budget?

ANTHONY: The executive will submit a budget which will include a budget for all branches of government, including the judiciary.

CHAIRMAN: Are there any other questions on Section 10? Any further discussion?

ROBERTS: I'd like to offer an amendment to Section 10. In the last line -- next to the last line, after the words "and appeals" insert the words, "which upon publication shall have the force and effect of law." Delete the word -- add the words "upon publication." The purpose of this amendment is to make provision for the publication of the rules of procedure adopted by the supreme court and promulgated by it.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment's been moved and seconded.

ANTHONY: The amendment, in my judgment, is entirely unnecessary. No court in the land would ever presume to promulgate rules of practice and procedure without the fullest sort of publicity. As a matter of fact, what they do is draft a set of rules and send it down to the bar, and the bar are the people that are concerned with the rules of practice and procedure. There is a complete discussion of what the rules should contain, and after the rules have been approved by the bar, the supreme court promulgates them. They will always give ample notice and I see no reason to incorporate useless language in the Constitution for publication.

CHAIRMAN: You ready for the question? The question is on the amendment, which inserts the words "upon publication" after "which" in next to the last line of Section 10. You ready for the question?

ASHFORD: Doesn't "promulgate" mean the same thing? I mean, doesn't that include the essence of publication?

ROBERTS: If the answer of the chairman of the committee states that the word "promulgation" shall include publication, I will withdraw.

ANTHONY: Of course, it includes that. Every lawyer here knows that.

ROBERTS: Well, I'm not a lawyer, Mr. Chairman, that's why I asked for the clarification.

CHAIRMAN: Does the Chair understand, Delegate Roberts, that you have withdrawn the motion?

ROBERTS: I have withdrawn the motion on the statement by the Chair, which I assume will be part of the committee report, that the word "promulgation" includes the publication of those rules and regulations, so that the laymen know the implication and meaning of that word.

DELEGATES: Question.

CHAIRMAN: The question now is on the main motion, the adoption of Section 10. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

BRYAN: I rise to a point of information. In deferring several of these sections, we deferred them after Section 10. However, this morning we skipped over Section 3. Is the proper order of business now to go to Section 3, then to 4, 5, or do we still skip Section 3?

CHAIRMAN: I believe the Chair stated this morning that Section 3 would not be taken up until all of the other sections had been disposed of.

BRYAN: In that event, I rise to a point of personal privilege. I wish to move the adoption of Section 4.

DOWSON: May I also rise to a point of personal privilege to second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will rule that those are, neither one, a point of personal privilege, if you move the adoption of Section 4.

ASHFORD: I have discussed with the "Supreme Court" the proposed substitution for Sections 4 and 4A, which I had mimeographed and, I think, is now on the desks of all the delegates. To substitute for Section 4, the following language, 4 and 4A, "The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall be subject to removal from office upon the concurrence of two-thirds of the membership of each house of the legislature sitting in joint session, for such causes and in such manner as may be provided by law." I move the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair ask if that amendment has been circulated?

ANTHONY: They are in the process of circulating it at the moment.

MIZUHA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: May I have a copy of that, please.

BRYAN: I would like to ask a question. As the delegate from Molokai read this, she used the word "will" in the last line, and I see the printed copy says "shall." Was that an intended deviation?

CHAIRMAN: "May." My copy reads "may."

ASHFORD: Some of them were written one way and some the other, apparently. Mine reads "may," and that was the intent. I've had a little discussion on whether it should be "may" or "shall," and that is one thing which I think the seven other attorneys on the Committee on Style might decide, Your Honor.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair ask, as to your amendment, was it "may" or "shall"?

ASHFORD: Mine was "may," but I have no pride of opinion about that, and I'm perfectly willing to leave that to the seven other attorneys.

CHAIRMAN: Well, it has to be recorded as either being one or the other.

ASHFORD: It's "may."

CHAIRMAN: "May," and was the second the same?

WIRTZ: Point of information. Is this proposed amendment to substitute for both Sections 4 and 4A?

ASHFORD: 4A was not adopted. It was just offered; and so I therefore put on the amendment, "Substitute for Section 4." I think it would render the proposed Section 4A unnecessary.

WIRTZ: Well, I think we ought to have that clear, if it will take the place of the impeachment.

CHAIRMAN: If the movant of Section 4A will withdraw that motion, it would clear the way for this.

TAVARES: I will withdraw my motion for the purpose of -- well, I'll withdraw my motion.

BRYAN: I think the point to clear up is, my motion for the passage of Section 4 would be Section 4 as written by the committee. That would clear that.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the Chair would state that in considering Section 4, you would consider Section 4 and 4A because 4A was an amendment to this Section 4, and they were being considered together. So when you move to consider action on that section, it automatically brought up the two of them. Now then, Section 4A has been withdrawn; the only section before us is Section 4 and this is an amendment to Section 4.

A. TRASK: I would like to ask the movant here, the lady delegate from Molokai, her reason for this substitute amendment to Section 4.

ASHFORD: I think the provision for impeachment is non-essential. It almost never takes place, it is the most crushing insult that can ever be offered any officer, and the provisions of Section 4 for impeachment and the usual provisions for impeachment are so strict that it is practically impossible to prove the charges, even if you make them. Now, this section provides for removal, it safeguards the judicial office by requiring the concurrence of two-thirds of the membership of each house sitting in joint session, and it also safeguards them by the requirement of the passage of legislation by the legislature in a time of peace and quiet when there are no charges lying on the table.

ANTHONY: I'd like to speak to the proposed amendment. It is quite true that impeachment is a cumbersome, and therefore a little used device. This will -- this proposed amendment will go far to make it a workable device, rather than a cumbersome device, and it will not restrict the causes of removal to treason, bribery, and high crimes and misdemeanors. In other words, it will be an enlargement. And speaking for myself alone, and not for members of the committee, I would have no objection to the acceptance of this amendment.

SHIMAMURA: I understood the chairman of the Judiciary Committee to say this morning, rather the Legislative Committee, Judge Heen, to say this morning that there was a provision in the legislative section concerning impeachment and that it was to be brought by not the two-thirds majority of the full house, of the membership, but two-thirds of those present. Am I mistaken about that?

HEEN: That is correct, and if the proposed action is to be taken at this time, deleting impeachment as a process of removal of judges, then that particular proposal before the Legislative Committee will have to be amended in order to conform with what the Convention decides upon finally in this matter.

DOI: To further protect the rights of the one subject to being removed, and to further set up more definite methods by which one could be removed—and I say at this time that should we leave it entirely to the legislature we will find probably that they will not pass laws until the occasion arises, and that might be a little too late, and that has been shown, I understand, by history. And therefore I would like to move for the adoption -- move to amend the substituted proposal. The amendment would read thus—I think a form is already on your desk, with minor corrections—"A justice of the supreme court or a judge of a circuit court shall also be subject to removal from office for unfitness to continue in office, by concurrent resolution adopted by two-thirds of the membership of each house of the legislature, upon written charges made by a judicial council, after notice and an opportunity to be heard before a joint committee of both houses, and an opportunity to address a joint session of both houses in his defense."

CHAIRMAN: Is that offered -- Delegate Doi, is that offered as an amendment to Delegate Ashford's amendment?

DOI: Yes.

ROBERTS: I'll second that.

ASHFORD: I haven't got that, Mr. Chairman. May we have the language again?

CHAIRMAN: Would Delegate Doi please read the --

TAVARES: I think I can clarify this. That amendment is my old Section 4A with some changes, and if they take the old 4A and follow Mr. Doi, I think they'll be able to get most of it.

DOI: Shall I read it slowly again? "A justice of the supreme court or a judge of a circuit court shall also be subject to removal from office for unfitness to continue in office, by concurrent resolution adopted by two-thirds of the membership of each house of the legislature, upon written charges made by a judicial council after notice and an opportunity to be heard before a joint committee of both houses, and an opportunity to address a joint session of both houses in his defense."

ANTHONY: I'd like to speak in opposition to the amendment. In the first place, that presupposes the existence of a judicial council. This Convention has not agreed upon a judicial council.

Moreover, it sets up rather cumbersome mechanics, which to my way of thinking is much less desirable than the simple amendment proposed by the delegate from Molokai. In other words, we can simply have, if the amendment suggested by the delegate from Molokai is adopted, a provision whereby judges shall be subject to removal from office upon concurrence of two-thirds of the membership—and incidentally I think it should be membership present, not the total membership, because the action of the combined houses should not be defeated by an absence of any particular member—sitting in joint session. This other provision gets into the realm of legislation which I think is unnecessary, and the proposed amendment provides for just that sort of thing if the legislature desires that kind of action.

MIZUHA: I'd like to speak in opposition to the amendment also. A judicial council presupposes having probably a majority of lawyers sitting on the judicial council, and they would be getting into the hair of a judge who decides against them all the time.

WIRTZ: I'd like to echo the sentiments of the delegate from Kauai. As a judge sitting on the bench, I would be much concerned about the membership of the judicial council which, as he states, presupposes at least an equal representation on the judicial council and they would be the ones active in pressing any charges. It puts the judge in an unfortunate position, in my opinion, so I'm voting against the amendment.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak in favor of the motion to amend. As I read the amendment the purpose is --

CHAIRMAN: The motion is in favor of the amendment, to amend the amendment.

ROBERTS: I'll accept the Chair's statement of the issue.

As I read the purpose of this section, it is to protect the judges and not to get in their hair. It seems to me that the substitute for Section 4 previously submitted does not actually provide for any protection. It merely states that the legislature may provide by law. The legislature may never provide by law. They may provide when the person is actually up for charges, at which time the issue may be so difficult and warm that the legislation may possibly reflect that attitude. It seems to me that the draft proposed by the delegate from the fourth in Section 4A more nearly accomplishes the protection both for a proper hearing and an opportunity to speak in his defense. It seems to me that this section goes to protect the judges rather than to remove such protection.

CHAIRMAN: I'll recognize Delegate Trask. He has not talked on this subject yet.

A. TRASK: I rise to speak against the offered amendment, Section 4. I'm inclined to think that the general impeachment feature of letting the justices and the circuit court judges be removed from office by legislative action is outmoded and archaic. It seems to me that we proceeded here in the Convention in the Frank Silva case on the principle that the members of the body should determine the fitness of their own members. Now the judiciary is a distinctive branch of the government. It seems we have come a long way since the impeachment days, and this substitute section of the lady delegate from Molokai is really, in fact, a streamlined impeachment process nevertheless.

It seems to me that we should venture the thought that the judiciary, being as independent as we would want it to be, strong as we would want it to be, it would seem to me likewise to follow that its members would be most acutely concerned about the fitness or unfitness of its members. And inasmuch as the Section 9 provides, I believe, that the chief justice shall, of course, appoint judges and so forth, and the associate justice may, by rule of court, select their own chief justice, that we should go along with the principle already established, because I don't see any particular merit in delay if a judge is unfit.

Why delay the process, awaiting the legislature to meet when you have probably many, many members, and being that we are separated by water, most of our counties, many of the members would not be concerned, one way or another. And they may be too influenced by friends who are advocating the cause one way or another of the person under scrutiny or under charge for unfitness.

So it does seem to me and I venture the suggestion that we should have a simple amendment to this, which is -- someone has circulated around which I think should be amended, but as submitted, here—I think it's on the desk of all of us—"Any judge accused of treason, bribery, or high crimes and misdemeanors may be suspended by a majority of the supreme court." Now that should be amended with the word "treason," of course, stricken, and maybe the words "or removed" after the word "suspended."

RICHARDS: May I say something to the delegate here from the fifth district.

A. TRASK: I yield to the --

CHAIRMAN: Does the delegate yield?

A. TRASK: I do.

RICHARDS: There is an amendment of that amendment that is at present being worked out in the printing department and will be on the table shortly.

A. TRASK: Well, in view of that, Your Honor -- I mean, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

A. TRASK: I would like to move for a recess until the call of the Chair until this thing is looked at, that particular suggested amendment. Or let's defer action on this matter pending receipt of that printed amendment.

ASHFORD: If it is proper at this time, I'd like to say that I would accept the suggestion that the word "present" should be inserted in the amendment that I offered.

WIRTZ: I'd like once again to address my remarks against the proposed amendment to the amendment that has been offered by the delegate from Molokai, by pointing out that in the original Section 4 and the amendment offered by the delegate from Molokai, there is sufficient latitude allowed the legislature to take care of the situation that was brought up by my good friend, the delegate from the fifth district, to take care of situations that arise between sessions of the legislature, whereas the proposed amendment referring to a judicial council is restrictive in that it provides only one method and that still requires the meeting of a legislature to consider the matter. That is in addition to what I've already had to say on the subject.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state that there are two amendments to Section 4 before us at the present time, the first amendment was offered by Delegate Ashford, the second amendment by Delegate Doi. What is your pleasure now?

ANTHONY: I believe -- I don't believe it's been recorded, but Delegate Ashford accepted a suggestion that after the word "legislature" in her proposed amendment to Section 4 --

CHAIRMAN: That's next to the last line?

ANTHONY: Next to the last line, the word "present" be inserted. I think there should be an acceptance of that amendment before we vote on this.

CHAIRMAN: I think that it should be in the third line, Delegate Anthony, after "membership."

ANTHONY: I think the Chair is correct.

CHAIRMAN: Is that correct, Delegate Ashford? Is that acceptable to the second?

CASTRO: May we have the whole amendment as offered by Delegate Ashford reread?

CHAIRMAN: Well, the amendment before the house, as has just been pointed out, is Delegate Doi's amendment to Delegate Ashford's amendment to the section. Which part of this would you like read?

CASTRO: I would like to have Delegate Ashford's amendment, original amendment read, so that I may get the correct wording of it in order to understand the changes of Delegate Doi's amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The section as amended by Delegate Ashford reads as follows: "The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall be subject to removal from office upon the concurrence of two-thirds of the membership present of each house of the legislature sitting in joint session, for such causes and in such manner as may be provided by law."

PORTEUS: I don't like to refer to points of order, but I do have an objection to the word "present." I would like an occasion where I could get at that word, and prevent it from being included. The result of that amendment is this, that you can leave to a small minority of the Senate and the House the privilege of determining whether or not a judge is to be removed from office, by use of the word "present." Otherwise, what is the meaning?

CHAIRMAN: I believe that in order to keep this in the proper sequence we will have to proceed with Delegate Doi's amendment first, and then take up that if it's still in order to do so.

DOI: I would like to further add to my amendment this sentence. "Any judicial officer so charged shall not exercise his office until acquitted." The reason for that addition is to take care of the point raised by Delegate Arthur Trask this morning, and that is, there might be a long elapse of time between the time the offense is committed and the time the legislature might meet. And as to that particular problem, I again point to history and say that there have been times in the past where the legislature has failed to provide for the detailed method of removing an officer. And this would take care of this -- that particular situation automatically.

CHAIRMAN: Before -- Delegate Roberts, you seconded Delegate Doi's original motion. Do you accept that addition?

ROBERTS: May I have him read it again? I think I do; I want to get the full language.

DOI: The addition was at the end of the proposed section, a new sentence to read, "Any judicial officer so impeached," -- no, "so charged," rather, "shall not exercise his office until acquitted."

ROBERTS: I'll accept that.

RICHARDS: There is being circulated at present a proposed amendment in -- by adding a second sentence that uses approximately the same wording that the delegate just spoke about. It reads, "Any justice of the supreme court or any judge of a circuit court held to answer for any high crime or misdemeanor may be suspended by the supreme court until he has been acquitted."

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that there have been so many amendments to this that it would be well if we recessed long enough to --

DELEGATE: No.

CHAIRMAN: -- gather them all together so that we would know which ones we are talking about.

HEEN: There was no motion to adopt the last amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That is right.

HEEN: That was suggested. That was just simply presented so as to be -- enable the delegates to be thinking about what they might have to do next. If the discussion on Delegate Doi's motion to amend has been completed, I would move to table the motion that was made by Delegate Doi and seconded by Delegate Roberts, and I so move.

SMITH: I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the motion to amend as put by Delegate Doi, seconded by Delegate Roberts, be tabled. That would also include the added sentence that had been added, in making up that motion.

ROBERTS: Point of information. I'd like to ask the Chair whether or not the motion to table carries with it all of the pending amendments and the original motion?

CHAIRMAN: No, it is only on the one amendment that we are voting now, that is the last amendment that was made by Delegate Doi, seconded by yourself.

ROBERTS: I'd like to point out that the general procedure with regard to tabling a motion tables the substance and all that goes along with it.

DELEGATE: Point of order.

ROBERTS: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts has the floor.

ANTHONY: The delegate is out of order.

ROBERTS: I raised the question of a point of order. May I speak to it?

CHAIRMAN: Please proceed.

ROBERTS: We have been going along on the supposition in our general proceedings that the way to get rid of a proposal is to move to table. It seems to me that there are proper procedures whereby the delegates of this Convention can state their position for or against a specific proposal, and that is to vote on the language and on the merits. It seems to me that the use of the procedure to table does not permit the Convention to express its opinion on the question. The general purpose of a motion to table is to put the question aside until such time as the pending materials are properly handled. It's something which comes up which has no immediate relevance or bearing on the question. It seems to me that there has been too much procedure with regard to tabling of amendments. As I read my rules of procedure, a motion to table carries with it everything that deals with that particular motion and so it seems to me that if the motion is to table, the motion goes to table all of the section.

FUKUSHIMA: Mr. Chairman.

HEEN: Now, Mr. Chairman --

CHAIRMAN: You're addressing this Chair on a point of order?

FUKUSHIMA: Point of order, yes.

HEEN: No, it's not on the point of order, but upon the argument made by the last speaker.

CROSSLEY: I recognize Delegate Fukushima on the point of order. Will you state your point of order?

FUKUSHIMA: I believe what Dr. Roberts said is true. A motion to amend is a subsidiary motion. A motion to table is also a subsidiary motion. If you will read Cushing, which we follow here, a subsidiary motion cannot be attached to a subsidiary motion unless it falls within an exception. And a motion to table an amendment is not an exception, and I believe Dr. Roberts is right.

HEEN: I'd like to have them point out that rule.

CHAIRMAN: Would either of the gentleman who raised the point of order care to point out the rule?

LEE: I just heard a good suggestion you made for a short recess. I wonder if it might be in order to move for a recess to clear these matters.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: If there's no objection, we'll have a five minute recess.

(RECESS)

HEEN: I will now withdraw my motion to table the motion that was made by Delegate Doi and seconded by Delegate Roberts. And I now move the previous question.

WIRTZ: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved -- the previous question been moved and seconded. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

The previous question is the adoption of the amendment as proposed by Delegate Doi and seconded by Delegate Roberts. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The amendment is lost.

We now have before us the one amendment as proposed by Delegate Ashford.

RICHARDS: I would like to move at this time that that amendment be further amended by adding the sentence, "Any justice of the supreme court or any judge of a circuit court held to answer for any high crime or misdemeanor may be suspended by the supreme court until he has been acquitted."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that? Hearing no second, what is your pleasure on the --

TAVARES: I'll second it for purposes of allowing discussion.

RICHARDS: This I feel, in conjunction with the amendment already before the -- on the floor, will take care of the interim situation that I was exercised about earlier in this meeting. In other words, it will leave up to the supreme court the opportunity of suspending any judge in between meetings of these sessions of the legislature.

WIRTZ: I'd like to point out that in the amendment that has been offered by the delegate from Molokai which is now before us, there is the general clause, "for such causes and in such manner as may be provided by law." The question of suspension, in my opinion, could be provided by law, and that would take care of the situation that the delegate from the fifth district has in mind.

TAVARES: If I were sure of that, I would be very happy to leave that amendment out, but I am not satisfied that that would necessarily be implied. The proposal, or the amendment, only talks of removal, it says nothing about suspension. And if the word "suspension" is included in "removal," then it seems to me the suspension would have to be done in the same manner, and that would mean you would just go round and round. You would still have to wait for the next session to have the suspension.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask the delegate from the fifth that proposed the last amendment if he should not specify, or at least the record should not show, "suspended by a majority of the supreme court" or "unanimous decision."

CHAIRMAN: Would Delegate Richards care to answer that?

RICHARDS: In answer to the question of the delegate from the fifth district, I discussed this with our local "Supreme Court" who stated that the mention of the supreme court automatically meant a majority of the supreme court, so that three members of the supreme court would be able to suspend one of their own members.

WIRTZ: There is one other thing I'd like to point out about this amendment, this second amendment that is offered, and that is that suspension is limited to high crime or misdemeanor, whereas your removal is "for such causes and in such manner as may be prescribed by law." Now is it the intention of the delegate from the fifth district that the question of suspension should be limited only to high crimes or misdemeanors?

CHAIRMAN: Would the -- Delegate Richards, would you answer that, please?

RICHARDS: I am again mentally handicapped when it comes to dealing with legal language. But I understand as a mere layman that a misdemeanor covers practically everything that is not a high crime.

SAKAKIHARA: Will the delegate from the fifth district yield, delegate who offered the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

SAKAKIHARA: In the event of an insurrection and the machinery of these courts has failed, and it involves the supreme court, which might betray the public, then who is to remove the supreme court? The justices of the supreme court?

CHAIRMAN: Are you asking the question of --

SAKAKIHARA: I am asking the question of the introducer of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Richards.

RICHARDS: I did not get the question.

CHAIRMAN: Perhaps Delegate Tavares heard it and could answer it?

TAVARES: I think I could answer that with another question. If the whole legislature revolts, who is going to remove the legislature?

SAKAKIHARA: That is not the question, Mr. Chairman, not parallel to the question. In the case --

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara, would you please state the question again?

SAKAKIHARA: In the event of an insurrection, and if the justices of the court, supreme court in this case, should betray the people, who is to remove the supreme court? The five justices or three justices?

TAVARES: If there is an insurrection and the supreme court members join the insurrection, they will be put down by the militia and the United States Army and Navy.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

KELLERMAN: May I ask the gentleman from the fifth district if he would explain what is meant by the words "held to answer." To just what proceeding does he refer, the "held to answer"?

CHAIRMAN: Can the Delegate Richards answer that?

RICHARDS: I understood, also, from members of the "Supreme Court," that "held to answer" would be charged in one shape or another, possibly indicted, or formerly or legally charged.

HEEN: That language was copied from Section 9 of the Bill of Rights. "No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury," which is a good section of the Bill of Rights.

CHAIRMAN: What is your pleasure with this amendment? Ready for the question? The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment. All those in favor --

LEE: How does it read? Will you read the --

CHAIRMAN: -- of the amendment to the amendment, and the one under question at the present time is as follows: "Any justice of the supreme court or any judge of a circuit court held to answer for any high crime or misdemeanor may be suspended by the supreme court until he has been acquitted." I might state that this is an amendment to the amendment proposed. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The amendment is lost.

We are now back to the Delegate Ashford's amendment to Section 4.

ROBERTS: As a matter of future procedure, I would suggest that since we have microphones, which do not give the proper indication of the feeling of the Convention, that a show of hands be substituted for the microphones.

RICHARDS: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the Chair would like to state that despite the volume produced by the microphones he was able to see the open mouths easily.

TAVARES: I would like to know whether the motion now includes the word "present" after the word "membership."

CHAIRMAN: The motion as it now stands includes the word "present."

TAVARES: Then I move to strike that word. I think it's utterly dangerous to subject the removal --

PORTEUS: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to strike the word "present" from that amendment. Any discussion?

A. TRASK: The word "present" --

ANTHONY: Point of order. I never heard of a motion to strike in a parliamentary body.

CHAIRMAN: That's probably --

ANTHONY: I've heard of it in civil cases and equity cases.

TAVARES: All right, I'll move to amend the amendment by deleting the word "present."

CHAIRMAN: All right, that's what the Chair understood.

A. TRASK: Question, please, of Mr. Tavares. The word "present" --

PORTEUS: Point of order. That motion has not been seconded. If I may be recognized, I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize Delegate Porteus for the second.

PORTEUS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, I now second the motion.

TRASK: Is the word "present" after the word "two-thirds"?

TAVARES: No, "the membership present." This means, the word "present" means that you can wait until - -

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will be glad to recognize the delegate.

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, I'm sorry.

That word "present" means that you can wait till half of the house or almost half goes out on a holiday, pull a sneak meeting, and bring the question up unknown and vote somebody out of office with two-thirds of those present. I think it's utterly dangerous. I think everybody ought to be forced to be present and if they are not there, they ought to send the sergeant at arms after them. Everybody ought to be made to do his duty on this kind of a dirty job.

ANTHONY: I don't agree with the last speaker. The purpose of inserting the word "present" is not to have any half a dozen people meet in a covert session and act on the removal of a judge. Obviously, they have got to have a quorum of both houses. But it is a very salutary provision which will prevent a dissatisfied minority absenting themselves from a session of the legislature, thereby reducing the number of those present. And if you've got to have two-thirds of all members, then you would have to have possibly a majority or a unanimous vote of all present.

I call attention of this Convention to the fact that this is the very language used in the Federal Constitution, and that's why it was put in there. "Those present," "two-thirds of those present" is the language of the Federal Constitution. It should not be two-thirds of the membership, otherwise a dissatisfied minority could absent themselves and thereby defeat the - - PORTEUS: I'm afraid that I disagree with my colleague from the fourth district most emphatically. A dissatisfied minority cannot absent themselves and prevent action. I think the vote ought to be two-thirds of the membership. I understand that's what it's supposed to be. I think in a matter as serious as this, it should take two-thirds of the membership. If a minority wishes to absent itself, it does not interfere with the power of those that remain to compel their attendance. It does prevent, however, in a legislature, people from absenting themselves and thus trying to avoid taking a position on a question, and leaving it to a bare majority of one of the houses to determine what should be done. And of the bare majority present it only takes, under the scheme outlined, a two-thirds vote.

Now I believe that it would be much better to omit the word "present," to require a two-thirds vote of the full house and leave it to the others present to compel the attendance of the members, as may be done in connection with other legislation.

BRYAN: I am in support of the previous speaker. I believe that anyone who would stay away from the meeting would be no different than just voting "no" on the question. That's all it amounts to. As a practical matter, I don't think it makes any difference. Therefore, I believe the language with the word "present" removed would be proper. If they are going to stay away, it means that if they came they would vote "no," that's all.

A. TRASK: I agree altogether with Delegate Tavares, because I see no merit in the fact that the language in the Federal Constitution is used at all, because the net result has been that that machinery for impeachment is so cumbersome it's only been used a few times in our entire history, just because of that situation. And I think the amendment by Delegate Tavares is very good.

SILVA: The Senate in itself, our Senate takes two-thirds to remove each member. We have the qualification of our own membership and it takes two-thirds of the total membership to remove a senator, and in the House of Representatives the same thing, and I feel that this is much more important, and I think that two-thirds of both houses, of the entire membership of both houses should be used for the removal of a judge. And I just want to state my position.

SHIMAMURA: I was just about to call the members' attention to the provision of our Federal Constitution. "And no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present."

ANTHONY: If the Convention wants to facilitate the process of removal, as evidently Delegate Trask would like to do, the way to do it is not to have two-thirds of the membership of the house, but two-thirds of those present, and therefore, in line with his suggestion that we get rid of the cumbersome procedure of impeachment, I think we ought to adhere to the language of the Federal Constitution, namely two-thirds of those present. You would first have to have a quorum, then you would have to have two-thirds of both houses.

SILVA: Move the previous question.

KING: Will you just suspend a moment? Two-thirds of a half or two-thirds of a quorum, would be two-sixths or one-third. In other words, there is a possibility that a judge could be removed on a vote of one-third of the membership of the two houses. At first I thought the word "present" was desirable. I'm now convinced by the arguments of both Delegate Porteus and Delegate Tavares that it ought to be two-thirds of the full membership.

SILVA: Previous question.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? The motion is to delete the word "present." All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Ayes have it. "Present" is deleted.

MIZUHA: I'd like to ask the movant of the original amendment whether or not she meant two-thirds of each house separately or in joint session. I want that clear, although it indicates of each house, but I want it clear.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford, will you answer the question, please?

ASHFORD: The language was changed from "two-thirds of both houses" to "two-thirds of each house" so as to make it perfectly clear, and give the other islands a chance to protect themselves.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before us now is to amend Section 4 by the substitution of a new Section 4, which you all have before you. Ready for the question?

A. TRASK: I'd like to address myself to the original thought that I had a moment ago, namely to amend the substitute for Section 4 offered by the lady delegate from Molokai and to adopt the language in the amended sentence submitted by Delegate Monte Richards.

CHAIRMAN: That sentence was submitted and lost.

A. TRASK: Was defeated. That's correct. Well, I'm offering this particular amendment to substitute for the substitute for Section 4 as offered, namely, reading as follows – and if you'd follow the amendment offered by Mr. Richards, why it would read as follows – and this is to take the place of the entire Section 4 and 4A – namely as follows: "Any justice of the supreme court or any judge of the circuit court, held to answer for any high crime or misdemeanor may be removed or suspended by the supreme court." Now I feel that this method would hold - -

CHAIRMAN: Would the delegate read that again a little slower so that our clerks will be sure and get the motion inasmuch as it has not been circulated. Thank you.

A. TRASK: "The supreme court or any judge of a circuit court held to answer for any high crime or misdemeanor may be removed or suspended by the supreme court."

CHAIRMAN: And that is in place of the amended Section 4?

A. TRASK: That is correct, as offered by the lady delegate from Molokai, and I so move.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

A. TRASK: To correlate my argument here – I'm a little shocked by the reaction near me – I realize that the lady delegate this morning said she objected highly to the expression "high crime or misdemeanors," but I'd like to say in anticipation of the objection that Section 5 in the proposal, Committee Proposal No. 7, I have suggested an amendment to that. After the word "incapacitated" in the middle of the third line of Section 5, to have the words "or unfit" which would be grounds for negligence and so forth, for a justice to be removed.

So addressing myself directly to what may be considered a novel section to the question of removal or suspension of justices or judges, I feel that a strong judiciary should be strong enough to clean out itself when the occasion arises. I have - - I cannot go along with Delegate Sakakihara who talks only about rebellion in one branch of the government and leaves the other two branches spotless. I feel that the governor having the power of appointment and the judiciary thereby being composed, it, probably more than any other branch of the government, is acutely aware not only of the legal aspects of proper judicial conduct but the high ethics that are required of judicial conduct.

The court makes its own rules and regulations. It regulates itself. It is so tenacious with respect to its own conduct that there comes clashes now and then, as was brought to the attention of the Convention some time ago, I believe either in the committee or in the convention hall, where it was suggested that if the legislature by a law sought to say that anyone that was born on October 4 would be given a license to practice, such a law would be obviously unconstitutional because it would attack the very individual character and dignity and all the attibutes that are given and attributed to the judiciary, and its independence and its power to make its own inherent rules. There are many inherent powers in the judiciary, in the self-determination with respect to this business of justice.

So it seems to me, even though the suggestion may be adventuresome here, I do think that this business of letting this matter rest in the hands of the legislature when only one part of the legislature has power to advise and consent to the appointment of any judge or justice, that we should leave this matter altogether with the court. The first and immediate reaction is this: if any person is answerable for any high crime or misdemeanor, the public reaction would be such that they would want immediate action. The courts would be put under a cloud, and immediately the court itself and the justices would feel compelled, even though they would probably vacillate. The question always of public opinion rules both the legislature certainly which would bring up this question of presentment for a charge and will go on its two-thirds membership to oust or seek the removal of a judge. Certainly the courts, when one judge is amiss or any other situation, the entire judicial system is under question.

So it seems to me that consistent with every attribute of independence that we are seeking to make the three branches have, we should consider seriously this amendment to have the court itself be the judge, as we are here, of the fitness of our own members.

BRYAN: I think that my colleague from the fifth has given a very good argument why his amendment is not required. He proposes putting - - among other things he proposes putting the word "unfit" into the third line of Section 5. That would take care of his particular problem with respect to Section 4, and Section 4 as proposed by the delegate from Molokai would be in order.

CHAIRMAN: Do you offer that as an amendment?

HEEN: I move the previous question.

SMITH: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question has been moved. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed.

The Chair is a little in doubt and wants to be fair. The previous question would be a vote on whether or not we shall take up immediately and without further debate the amendment that has just been made. All those in favor of the previous question say "aye." Opposed. Ayes have it.

Question now is the amendment made by Delegates Trask and Trask for the adoption of the amendment as a substitute for the amendment for Section 4. All those in favor say "aye.' Opposed. The noes have it. The amendment is lost.

All those in favor of the amendment offered by Delegate Ashford which now remains unchanged - -

KAM: I would like to ask one of the three judges of our "Supreme Court" in this Convention a question. What, in this proposed amendment by Delegate Ashford, "for such causes," what are the causes for impeachment?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, would you care to answer that?

ANTHONY: That would be left as a matter of legislation, for determination of the legislature. In other words, it would be included - -

SILVA: I rise to a point of order, Mr. Chairman. Is that an admittance that you are a member of the "Supreme Court" of this Convention?

CHAIRMAN: The question is out of order. Will you proceed, Mr. Anthony. Are you satisfied, Delegate Kam? The Chair will put the question.

KAM: Is it the same as the original Section 4, "treason, bribery or other high crimes and misdemeanors"?

CHAIRMAN: The motion for adoption now is on the amendment to Section 4 which was offered by Delegate Ashford.

ANTHONY: In further response to - - May I speak in answer to the question? This is a broadening of those causes for which an impeachment would lie. In other words, it goes beyond high crimes and misdemeanors. That's the purpose of the movant.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? All those in favor of the amendment will say "aye." Opposed. Ayes have it. Section 4 has been adopted as amended.

DELEGATE: Is that the ruling of the Chair or do we have to act on Section 4 as amended?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment was offered as a substitution for Section 4. The Chair would rule that that passed Section 4 as amended.
Section 5.

HOLROYDE: I have the unique privilege of moving the adoption of Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: It's the consideration. It has been deferred.

A. TRASK: May I have also the unexpected pleasure of seconding the motion for the adoption of Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we reconsider Section 5 which was deferred to the end of the calendar. Any discussion? All in favor say "aye." Opposed. We will discuss Section 5.

ROBERTS: I raised the question this morning on Section 5 on whether or not the members of the supreme court are the individuals who are to determine and suggest to the governor the appointment of a commission to inquire into the ability or inability of another judge of the supreme court or the cirucit court to sit in office. I indicated this morning that I would move the adoption of a proposal in the form of an amendment either to this section or Section 10, for the creation of a judicial council. I recognize that it is difficult to move an amendment substituting the word "judicial council" for the "supreme court" in Section 5 without first getting before the Convention the question as to whether or not a judicial council should be included in the Constitution. If it is agreeable, we might defer this Section 5 and take it up at the same time as Section 10.

BRYAN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order, please.

BRYAN: I believe we have already voted on Section 5 and passed it, just a moment ago. If not, I'd like to know what we were voting on.

CHAIRMAN: We voted on Section 4.

BRYAN: Following that, my colleague from the fifth district, from Kahuku made a motion - -

ROBERTS: That is correct. We have passed Section 10.

BRYAN: It was seconded and then we voted on something.

CHAIRMAN: We voted on reconsideration, on taking Section 5 up at the present time. It had been deferred and moved to take up Section 5 at this time.

TRASK: I move to amend Section 5 - -

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry. Delegate Roberts has the floor. I yielded only for a point of order. Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: I'd like at this time to move that the words "supreme court" be deleted from Section 5, and Section 5 be amended to add the words "judicial council," so that the section would read: "Whenever the judicial council shall certify to the governor." The language thereafter would remain the same.

ARASHIRO: I second that motion.

BRYAN: In order - - point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, have you finished?

ROBERTS: I'll yield to a point of order.

BRYAN: I believe it's necessary to move passage of this.

ROBERTS: That has already been done. I can't - -

CHAIRMAN: The motion to adopt Section 5 was made earlier this morning, and it was deferred until this afternoon. Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: Is it in order to speak to the question of the - - CHAIRMAN: It's in order to speak to the question of your amendment and to the section. Do you wish to speak at this time?

ROBERTS: Just a moment. I think there was a question raised as to what the amendment is. The amendment is to delete the words "supreme court" and to substitute the words "judicial council."

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Does Delegate Roberts yield?

ROBERTS: I yield for a question.

HEEN: There is no provision in the article as it stands now for the establishment of a judicial council. Perhaps this suggestion might appeal to Delegate Roberts. Have that part of Section 5 read this way: "Whenever a commission or agency established by law shall certify to the governor," and so forth. In other words, that will then permit the legislature to, say, establish a judicial council to take care of this situation.

ROBERTS: That would be agreeable to me, Senator, if you would add the words "or in accordance with such other agency as established by the Constitution" so that would permit me - - I indicated that I intended to move the inclusion of a section dealing with a judicial council in the Constitution.

KING: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Do you yield for a question?

ROBERTS: I yield.

KING: It is my understanding that you propose to introduce another amendment that would establish a judicial council. It seems to me we would best defer Section 5 and go down to that amendment, vote it up or down, then come back to Section 5. Would it be agreeable to defer action on Section 5 at this time and proceed to the subject matter where your amendment would come in?

ROBERTS: That will be agreeable.

KING: Would you not prefer to move then that action be deferred on Section 5 at this time?

H. RICE: I think what is in dispute is a judicial council, and we could go down there and make a new section, Section 11, and establish a judicial council and then see how the delegates feel on a judicial council. Is that all right? That seems to meet with approval, and I would suggest then that we take up the matter - -

CHAIRMAN: That we defer Section 5?

H. RICE: Defer Section 5 and have Section 11. We take up now a new section, Section 11, the establishment of a judicial council.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

ROBERTS: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded we defer action on Section 5, and consider a new section to be known as Section 11 dealing with a judicial council. All in favor say "aye." Opposed. Ayes have it.

ROBERTS: I have an amendment which I'd like to place on the desk and have distributed to the delegates.

CHAIRMAN: Will the messengers distribute them and please give the clerks and the Chair a copy immediately?

ROBERTS: Would it be in order to move for a short recess so the delegates have an opportunity to read the proposal.

CHAIRMAN: There'll be a five minute recess, hearing no objection.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will recognize Delegate Rice. Delegate Harold Rice, do you have the amended section or - -

H. RICE: The amendment given to me was an amendment to Section 7. I think, although it isn't in order, it should be a new section, Section 11, as I understand it.

CHAIRMAN: Well, we defer - - the motion to defer the other one was made and the motion to take up a new section to be known as Section 11. Does someone have a proposal to make on Section 11?

ROBERTS: I'd like to move that the new Section 11 be accepted by the Committee of the Whole.

> Section 11. There shall be a judicial council consisting of the chief justice, who shall be its chairman, and eight additional members, of whom two shall be judges of courts having appellate jurisdiction who shall be appointed by the chief justice, for terms of four years; two shall be practicing attorneys; and four laymen citizens of the state, who shall be appointed by the governor for overlapping terms of three years.
> It shall be the duty of the council, and it shall have the power, in addition to other duties and powers which may be conferred upon it by law, to make a continuous study of the administration of justice in this state, and of the organization, procedure, practice, rules and methods of administration and operation of each and all of the courts of the state, to receive and consider, and in its discretion, investigate criticisms and suggestions pertaining to the administration of justice in the state; to collect and publish statistical and other information concerning the work of the courts of the State; and to make or alter the rules relating to pleading, practice, or procedure in all the courts of the State, including rules prescribing the duties of all administrative personnel and agents of the courts.
> Rules of pleading, practice or procedure shall be effective only when published as provided by law, and the legislature may repeal, alter or supplement any rule by a law limited to that specific purpose.

CHAIRMAN: What is Section 11?

ROBERTS: Section 11 comprises a proposal creating the establishment of a judicial council which shall consist of nine members to be appointed in part by the chief justice of the supreme court and in part by the governor, to consist of judges of the supreme court, practicing attorneys, and lay citizens. The purpose of the judicial council would be to make continuous studies of the administration of justice in the new State, and the organization, procedure, practice, rules and methods of administration, and operation of each and all the courts of the State.

The proposal is basically in conformity with other councils established by some 33 states. The practice and procedure of those councils has indicated a valid and proper use and has resulted, at least on the basis of information available, in the better practice of the judiciary in eliminating certain abuses that have arisen, and providing the lay people of the community a better understanding and appreciation of the functions of the law. It is sometimes assumed that the mere statement of rules of procedures and practices, because they have been laid down by the judiciary, are therefore understood and accepted by the public. It has been found as a matter of practice that the better understood the lay people are in connection with the practices and procedures of the court and their function, the better the administration of justice and the greater the regard for the courts.

The committee that has reported out to us has indicated that they want a strong court, that they want the best qualified people to perform the job. It seems to me that the formation of a judicial council would go toward that end.

I'd like to point out in the support of the section dealing with the appointment of lay individuals as part of this judicial council, a statement made by the president of the American Bar Association on this question. He stated, and I'm quoting,

> I asked an informed individual which kind of group gets the best results. His answer was, "Those councils which have laymen on them. Where either lawyers or judges serve alone they seem to lack energy for sustained attack. Where judges and lawyers serve together each group seems to have a diffidence about imposing its views upon the other, which stultifies action. Where, however, laymen are included, their presence seems to act as an 'ice-breaker' and to stir activity among the professional members of the council. Laymen's criticisms are sharper

I might state that I am perfectly willing to modify so far as the proportions are concerned, as between the members of the bar, the judges and laymen. As long as there are some representatives of the lay citizens on that group, I have no objection to an amendment to make such provision.

CHAIRMAN: Do you move the adoption of this?

ROBERTS: I plan to move the adoption of this.

CASTRO: I second the motion to adopt the proposed section.

ROBERTS: If it is agreeable with the committee, I'd like to suggest that we amend the proposal before you to eliminate the last paragraph, and in the sentence immediately preceding, which is in the second paragraph, after the semicolon, and which now reads, "and to make or alter the rules," to read "and to recommend the making or altering of the rules." The purpose of that amendment would be to indicate that the council acts in an advisory capacity and does not in itself promulgate such rules. So the sentence would read, "and to recommend the making or altering of the rules relating to pleading," etc. I move the - -

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

ROBERTS: - - appropriate amendments.

CASTRO: I second the motion to amend.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to put the motion to make this amendment. Delegate Heen.

HEEN: In order to expedite matters I call for the previous question on that last motion.

CHAIRMAN: On the altering of the amendment before us?

HEEN: That's correct. To delete those -- the last paragraph and last clause after the semicolon --

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

HEEN: -- in the paragraph before last.

CHAIRMAN: The motion for the previous question has been put and seconded. That would be on the -- if that carries, we would then vote on deleting the last paragraph of this Section 11 and making the other changes that have been suggested.

HEEN: Deleting the last paragraph, but also the last clause after the semicolon of the second paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the previous question say "aye." Opposed. The previous question has been called for. I'll now put the amendment to the new Section 11.

ROBERTS: Is the purpose to forestall any discussion to this question?

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion is now forestalled. The question is on the acceptance of the amendment.

ROBERTS: Well, the amendment, as I gather, is the amendment as we proposed it. I thought I heard the statement to delete the entire section after the semicolon. It's all right.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment to Section 11 -- No, all those in favor of the amendment -- Yes, all those in favor of the amendment would say "aye." All those opposed. Amendment carried.

ANTHONY: As I understand it, that motion was carried and now we are open for debate on the proposal of Delegate Roberts as has been amended by the last motion. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

ANTHONY: I would like to speak in opposition to the amendment offered by Delegate Roberts.

CHAIRMAN: That is to the entire Section 11 as now amended.

ANTHONY: To the entire section. This proposal, this amendment offered by Delegate Roberts is statutory, pure and simple. In every state in the union, with but one exception, namely California, judicial councils that have been erected—and there are some 35 in number—have been by legislation. Now there is nothing to prevent the legislature of the State of Hawaii from creating a judicial council. The debate which will ultimately come before this Convention, I assume, will be whether or not there should be a judicial council having to do with the selection and tenure of judges, quite a different thing than we have before us. This seems to me to incorporate a great mass of statutory material, entirely unnecessary in a Constitution, which should be a simple frame of government, and therefore I object, I am opposed to the adoption of this amendment.

HEEN: I also rise in opposition to the amendment that has been proposed. The first state to establish a judicial council was Ohio in 1923. Then in 1924 Massachusetts followed with a similar statute, meaning thereby that Ohio created a judicial council by statute. By 1948, 33 states in the Union has created judicial councils and in addition there were agencies performing similar duties in other -- three other states. California is the only state which authorizes a judicial council by constitutional provision.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

KELLERMAN: I think we deferred considering Section 5 in order to consider Section 11 --

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

KELLERMAN: -- to create judicial council. I wonder if I might ask the movant of Section 11, if he would consider accepting, in lieu of the creation of a judicial council by Section 11, the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole that the judicial council be established by legislation, and supplement that or augment that by amending Section 5 to read, "Whenever the judicial council as established by law shall certify to the governor."

In other words, we shall be referring to the judicial council in the Constitution indicating that it is to be established by law, and then setting forth in as much detail as desired by this committee the entire Section 11, possibly, as recommendation to the legislature to be included. Would he consider that favorably in lieu of creating the judicial council in detail, as this seems to be pretty much a legislative matter?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, you have been asked a question. Would you care to answer?

ROBERTS: My main purpose in putting this section before the committee is to bring forth the presentation of a problem dealing with the total question of the judiciary and law enforcement. It seems to me that the broader the base you have for understanding the action of the courts, the greater the possibility of support of courts and their actions. To those, and this goes for the majority of the people who are not lawyers, the more information that you get to them as to the administration and function of justice, the greater the possibility that the judiciary will be supported and understood.

The reason for suggesting its inclusion in the Constitution is to give cognizance to the fact that some 33 states have adopted it since 1920. The reason why they have not been included in their constitutions, I think, is in part indicative of the fact that there have been no constitutional conventions in those states, and when constitutional conventions had been held, those actions in those groups are -- have already been in effect and are functioning. Therefore, there isn't any need to incorporate those sections in the Constitution. We do not have a judicial council and, therefore, my own preference would be for its inclusion in the Constitution.

If, however, it is the feeling of this delegation, this body—and I would like to urge other members of the Convention to express their opinions on this—if it is their feeling that this matter is best left to the legislature and they would prefer a general statement to the effect that the legislature shall establish such a judicial council, then, of course, I would wholeheartedly support such a position.

I might point out to some of the delegates that this judicial council has nothing to do with their discussion and debate in the Judiciary Committee, which concerned itself primarily with a judicial council for the purpose of selecting and nominating judges. The purpose of this council is merely for the purpose of studying the administration of justice in the new State and the making of recommendations for its better use in the State. I think that we ought to divide our previous thinking of a judicial council which was concerned with the problem of making recommendation of slates of nominees [from] this council which is concerned primarily with the study and the administration of justice in the State.

ANTHONY: The Judiciary Committee has struggled to keep in two simple pages, an entire branch of government. It has been our earnest effort to keep out a lot of statutory material. This is statutory, pure and simple, and I think it would be very unwise to set the precedence in the judicial branch of government that we are going to incorporate? [rest of speech not on tape.]

KAUHANE: The producer of this proposal has made a very careful study of the judicial proceedings relative to a setting up of a judicial council in California. I think if it works well for California, it is only proper that we should give it some consideration. I'd like to ask the chairman of the Judiciary Committee whether this proposal as submitted is a step forward or backward in our judicial setup.

ANTHONY: So far as the Constitution is concerned, it's a distinct step backward. We have already got a supreme court chief justice who is the administrative head; we have an administrative director. If that need be implemented by further legislation, there is ample legislative power to do it. What we will be doing here will be cluttering up the Constitution with matters obviously legislative in their character.

KAUHANE: I'd like to ask the chairman again. The statement that he has made, is that a statement of his own opinion? Because of the wide differences of opinions among some members of this Constitutional Convention - -

CHAIRMAN: I believe you asked his opinion in the first instance.

ANTHONY: I would say that my opinion is borne out by other state constitutions.

MIZUHA: The delegate from the fourth district did mention that there weren't any new constitutional conventions in the various states in the Union to give those states the authority to write it within their state constitutions. But I would like to point out to the members of this Convention that within the last seven years, there were three major states of the Union that held constitutional conventions—Georgia, I believe, in '43 or '44, Missouri in '45, and New Jersey in '47. And in those three revisions of the state constitutions, although they had some system of judicial council, it was not written into the state constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion? Ready for the - - NIELSEN: So far as making this brief section in our Constitution, I don't think we should consider that seriously. In the Florida Constitution which was written in 1949, they have 11 pages to cover judiciary. They even say what the justices, the circuit court justices, shall get in the way of salary. They state what the constables' duty shall be, and on and on and on. So I think that we should put this in here verbatim as the amendment stands.

SMITH: In answering Mr. Nielsen, I believe maybe Florida - - persons who wrote up that constitution didn't trust the legislature. They had to write out something really long, most likely they didn't trust them. This is an administrative - - legislative matter, I fully believe.

ROBERTS: May I answer the - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva.

SILVA: I personally believe that this is a legislative matter in its entirety. The only thing that is necessary in the Constitution is that there shall be a legislative - - I mean a judicial council because the amount of the - - the membership may be expanded or contracted from time to time and the legislature can do that. If we were to put the eight additional members, and two of whom shall be judges, then it will stand. There may come a time that the legislature may feel that we should have a greater representation of laymen with the judicial council, and we couldn't do anything about it if it's fixed in the Constitution, but if it was left to the legislature, then the legislature can easily see fit that there shall be a greater proportion of laymen within the council or a smaller council or a larger council from time to time. Therefore, I think that the only thing that is pertinent is that there shall be a judicial council.

LOPER: I rise to a point of information in the form of a question to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee. It is claimed that this matter is statutory and that under the State of Hawaii there would be nothing in the Constitution to prevent such a judicial council from being organized. My question is, is there anything in the Organic Act at the present time which prevents the organization of such a council, and if there is a recognized need for it, why haven't we had it?

ANTHONY: There is nothing in the Organic Act that prevents it any more than there is anything in the Organic Act that either authorizes or prevents the creation of the Board of Education. But the legislature in its wisdom has created certain agencies. The legislature in its wisdom has not passed on this question of whether or not there should be a judicial council.

CHAIRMAN: I don't think that the last speaker was entirely correct in stating that there was no place in the - - It says there shall be a Department of Education, I believe.

ROBERTS: I'd like to correct the statement made by the delegate, I think, from the first district with regard to the establishment of judicial councils. I have before me the official report prepared for the use of the delegates, and on page 215 there is a tabulation on the formation of judicial councils, the year in which they were founded and by whom authorized. The State of Georgia provided by statute for the formation of such a council in the year 1945. The State of Missouri in the year 1941 provided for an executive committee of the Missouri Judicial Conference Forum. The State of New Jersey in 1930 adopted such action by a statute, and the State of New York in 1934. All of those states mentioned by the speaker before have provision for a judicial council.

MIZUHA: My point was that it wasn't written into their state constitution, and I believe I'm right. I may be wrong that it wasn't - - it is there but I have to see the state constitutions first, but according to this tabulation, it says it's provided for by statute.

LEE: I believe that the - - with the other speakers who have spoken before me that this is a statutory matter. I also believe that the - - as set up in this proposal as I read it, for this judicial council to deal with a continuous study of the administration of justice. It's a continuous thing dealing with the organization, procedure, practice, rules and methods, and the membership is - - may be shifted as the amount of laymen as versus the amount of lawyers and the amount of judges. Those matters could be well thrashed out and debated after the system of the judiciary is set forth in the Constitution as contained in the majority report.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

A. TRASK: I am opposed to this amendment for this one reason. I think it would certainly create nothing else but another hierarchy of the Hawaii Bar Association, and I'm a member of the Hawaii Bar Association. I say it because here we have predominance of a chief justice, four lawyers and four laymen, and as the laymen are silent here in these discussions, I think they will be as silent in the judicial council. So all you are going to have is an Olympian -- Olympian Bar Association, and I'm against it.

WOOLAWAY: In order to silence the attorneys, I move the previous question.

FUKUSHIMA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question has been moved and seconded. All those in favor of the previous question say "aye." Opposed. Previous question is carried.

The question before the house is the adoption of Section 11 as amended. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. The noes have it. The section does not carry.

MIZUHA: Inasmuch as time is running out, and there are many delegates who have other business this afternoon, I move for the adoption of Section 3.

CHAIRMAN: That is out of order. I'm sorry. We have still before us Sections 5 and 6, unless you want to reconsider our actions.

HEEN: We are, I think, considering Section 5, and I have an amendment to offer, I think which will appeal to the delegates and that is to delete the words, "the supreme court" in the first line and inserting in lieu thereof the words, "a commission or agency established by law." So that that first clause there will read, "When a commission or agency established by law shall certify to the governor that it appears any justice" and so on.

TAVARES: I second the motion.

HEEN: It seems to appeal to someone here, so therefore I make that in the form of a motion.

CHAIRMAN: Apparently the second had already thought you had. Delegate Heen, are you through?

HEEN: Through.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: I wonder whether the mover of the motion would be agreeable to substitute the words "commission" and put in its place the term "judicial council" which would achieve the same purpose but would indicate the nature of the commission to be set up for this purpose.

HEEN: I think that the use of a broad term would be preferable. They can create a judicial council. Maybe they will call it something else in order to take care of the situation.

TAVARES: I second that motion now.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

ASHFORD: May I ask a question?

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, just a moment. I'd say that, Delegate Roberts, that the movant did not accept your substitution of words.

ROBERTS: In that case, Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the amendment to substitute the words "judicial council" for the word "commission."

KAUHANE: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The question before us now is an amendment to the amendment substituting the word "judicial council" for the word "commission." Any discussion? Ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. I think we should have a hand vote. All those in favor of the amendment will raise their hand, please. Opposed. The motion is lost. The vote was 29 to 26.

ASHFORD: May I ask a question of the movant of the -- of Judge Heen. What commission or agency? Any commission or agency?

HEEN: Any commission or agency established by law.

ASHFORD: Are there not many commissions?

CHAIRMAN: Will you please address the questions to the Chair? Thank you.

ASHFORD: Mr. Chairman, will you be kind enough to ask the senator and delegate if there are not many commissions and agencies established by law which would be wholly inappropriate for this purpose?

CHAIRMAN: Would the delegate care to answer?

HEEN: Of course, this one will be a special commission or agency established by law for this purpose.

CHAIRMAN: And how -- I believe the question was how is it so designated?

HEEN: As may be provided by law.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Porteus, did you wish to speak?

PORTEUS: I do.

CHAIRMAN: You are recognized.

PORTEUS: I wonder whether we might get at that problem by use of the words, "authorized by law."

CHAIRMAN: Do you wish to continue?

PORTEUS: It seems to me that there is a point that has been made by the delegate from Molokai. I don't think this wording is artistic wording by any means to carry this at the moment. And it seems to me that we ought to have a further amendment to this subject, possibly we can go on to -- I move that the language utilized be, "When a commission or agency, designated by law, shall certify to the" -- I don't think that does the trick either. I move that this section be deferred.

RICHARDS: I move that we take a five minute recess so the attorneys can get together again.

CHAIRMAN: No objection, we'll take a five minute recess.

ANTHONY: Just a second, Mr. Chairman. I don't think we -- there was no second to that, was there?

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Five minute recess.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman, there was a motion to defer, and I seconded that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is sorry it didn't recognize the second. And there was a motion to recess, which is in order, and we are in recess.

(RECESS)

ANTHONY: I move we defer action on Section 5 until after we have discussed Section 3.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second? All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

WIRTZ: I'd like to move at this time we reconsider the established order that we had before, and that we now consider Section 3.

MIZUHA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded we take up Section 3. All in favor say "aye." Opposed. Section 3 is now before the Committee of the Whole.

MIZUHA: I move for the adoption of Section 3.

HOLROYDE: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded Section 3 be adopted. Any discussion?

FONG: Mr. Chairman.

FUKUSHIMA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong.

FONG: I'll yield to Mr. Fukushima first.

CHAIRMAN: Well, you can't do it first, but if you do yield to Mr. Fukushima, why Delegate Fukushima has the floor.

FUKUSHIMA: I'd like to speak in opposition to Section 3 of Committee Proposal No. 7. I have here an amendment to offer, and the amendment is printed for circulation to the entire Convention.

The courts of the future State of Hawaii should be symbols of justice for all. That they may not be, will be entirely our own fault, the fault of the delegates assembled here to write into our Constitution the type of judiciary we are to have. There is no question as the debate has gone on this morning that we favor a judiciary article providing for long tenure, providing for adequate compensation, and providing for retirement benefits. In order that we may attract good lawyers for judgeships, we must necessarily provide for these things.

The only thing that we are not in agreement apparently at this time is the method of selecting these judges. The bare majority of eight of this committee, Judiciary Committee, sincerely and honestly feel that the appointive system is the best system of the judiciary. We likewise, a minority of seven, a very strong minority, feel in our considered judgment that the elective system is the best system under our form of government. I am one of the minority. I am for the election of all supreme court justices and all circuit court judges. Now, that's the tenor of my amendment which I have just submitted.

The arguments advanced for the appointment of judges can be refuted by the proponents of the elective system, and the arguments presented for the elective system can also be refuted by the proponents of the appointive system. When one says that the appointive system is the best system, it is merely an expression of opinion. And when I say here that the elective system is the best form of the judiciary, it is also an expression of opinion. We cannot pigeon-hole the appointive system as being the best and we cannot pigeon-hole the elective system as being the best. The question is not that easy. We must, therefore, in deliberating and in determining what sort of judiciary we should have combine both theoretical acuteness with practical good sense.

If anyone today should ask a man or a woman on the street, who are our supreme court justices, who are our circuit court judges, what would the answer be? The answer might well be, "I don't know" and they may even add, "and I don't care. I've never been in court and I never expect to be in court." Naturally, they don't expect to go to court. No one does, but this is certain. If dire trouble strikes, they, like thousands of others before them, will turn quickly and hopefully to the courts to save their homes, their businesses, and perhaps the future of their children. With their hearts in their mouths and everything they hold dear to them, they'll find themselves looking up at this stranger on the bench, the judge in whose integrity and ability to administer justice their fate now depends. As they study him, tormenting questions will of necessity flood to their mind. Who is this man? Why did they select him? How are these judges appointed anyhow? Had this man actually proved his legal ability, honesty, and impartial justice before being appointed or was he just somebody's friend? These are the questions one will of necessity ask if we have an appointive system.

If we had an elective system, this will automatically take care of itself. The candidates will appear before the public and state their qualifications, and state to the public what sort of man they are. They know who these judges will be and these questions will never be asked.

I, like all of you here, believe that a judge should not be selected on popular will. I am making this contention that they should be elected because I believe sincerely in the complete separation of the three branches of government. Under the proposal as submitted, we have an appointment by the executive. That certainly is not a separation of government. We also have further the confirmation by the legislature, that is one of the houses, the Senate. That again is certainly contrary to the principle of separation of government.

The proponents will have you believe that an elected judge will spend one half of his time in office eying the next election. Well, this can easily be remedied, gentlemen and ladies. All we have to do is to lengthen the tenure, and therefore, I have in my proposal, in my amendment, a tenure of eight years.

The appointive system is a system full of politics. This is only natural. Judges should be selected from lawyer candidates irrespective of the party they belong to. Can you think even for a moment that a Republican governor will have the audacity to select and appoint Democratic attorneys on the bench? Contrarywise, do you feel even for a moment that a Democratic governor will have the audacity to select and appoint Republican attorneys as judges under a Democratic regime? Let us not be too naive. It's just impossible.

Another point in reference to politics under the system as proposed. You will have confirmation by the Senate. Here we have a political football. It happens all the time when you get to the confirmation by the Senate, one individual who may be qualified can easily be bargained off for another because his political thinkings may be contrary to what the senators have in mind. He may be bargained off with just so much dirt and debris.

Let us for a moment leave our small pond here and remove ourselves to Washington. There, many years ago, a very able attorney was nominated as one of the associate justices of the Supreme Court but failed of confirmation simply because his political thinking was not in accord with the Senate and thereby the nation lost a very able jurist. Let's take the case of Associate Justice - - former Associate Justice Louis Brandeis. He had a whale of a time getting confirmation. It was just about impossible. He worked for his confirmation, an able man as he was.

If you should believe in the complete separation of the three branches of government, you believe in the independent judiciary, and if you believe in taking politics out of the judiciary, I cannot see how you can come to any other conclusion but vote for the elective system.

I'd like to read, in conclusion, from the January issue of "The Nation's Business," speaking of our Federal Court appointments, which has been upheld in the committee report. Here Harold J. Gallagher, President of the American Bar Association says bluntly, "Appointments to the district bench are far too political. Often the man's qualifications for the job are shockingly lost sight of. For one thing too many judges are appointed out of government service rather than from the ranks of qualified lawyers engaged in general practice. Let's hope in the future the appointing power will search more thoroughly. Many men of fine caliber and broad experience want the job, would make monetary sacrifices to accept it, yet seldom is a superior man appointed. Why? Because politicians use these appointments to award party henchmen for their services."

I'd like to move at this time for the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair inquire? We -- each of the delegates, I believe has had at least three amendments referred to him. Is yours the pink amendment?

FUKUSHIMA: I shall read the amendment. "The justices of the supreme court shall be elected by the electorate of this state, and the judges of the several circuits shall be elected by the electorate of the respective circuit, both in a non-partisan election. No person shall be eligible to such office who shall not have been admitted to practice law before the supreme court of this state for at least ten years. The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for a term of eight years."

H. RICE: I think that the committee should rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again tomorrow morning at 9:30 and have these amendments before them at that time to study them. I understand the second hasn't been made, so it's perfectly in order that the committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

MIZUHA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded the committee rise --

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: What is the point of order, please?

KAUHANE: There is a motion made to adopt the amendment offered by Fukushima. There is a motion made to defer action until tomorrow.

H. RICE: It wasn't second -- -

KAUHANE: The second --

CHAIRMAN: The motion --

KAUHANE: The motion to --

CHAIRMAN: The first motion was not seconded.

KAUHANE: Yes, but the last --

CHAIRMAN: And the motion to rise was seconded and will be put without debate.

DOI: I think out of ethics and basic parliamentary rule --

CHAIRMAN: Are you speaking to a point of order?

DOI: -- the Chairman should give time for a second. Yes, I do rise to a point of order. I think that on the basis of ethics, the base of good parliamentary rule, the Chairman should give time to second the motion made by the movant. I stood up but Mr. Rice had already risen, so I did not interrupt him. But I think the Chair should give sufficient time for a second. In fact, I think it is incumbent on the Chair to call for a second.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the Convention at this time is to rise, report progress --

FONG: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: -- ask leave to sit at --

FONG: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: -- at 9:30 tomorrow morning.

FONG: I move that that motion be tabled.

KAUHANE: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the motion be tabled. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. We'll ask for a show of hands. All those in favor of tabling the motion.

KELLERMAN: What is the motion?

CHAIRMAN: Just one hand --

TAVARES: That's the point, Mr. Chairman. I don't know what the motion is.

KELLERMAN: What is the motion we're voting on, please?

CHAIRMAN: Just vote with one hand please, it would help the Chair to count. The motion was to table the motion to rise, report progress. The motion before us was to rise, report progress, and beg leave to sit tomorrow. There was a motion to table that motion. All those in favor of tabling that motion will raise your right hand.

[The motion to table was defeated. The motion to rise was thereupon put by the Chair and carried.]

JUNE 9, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole, please come to order. The Chair would like to state that when we rose yesterday that Delegate Fukushima had the floor. He was speaking on his motion which had been made and seconded to amend Section 3. The Chair would also like to state that while it does not feel that it is incumbent upon the Chair to recognize a second as such, it will endeavor to do so, but will recognize people as the Chair sees them.

Delegate Fukushima, had you concluded your case?

FUKUSHIMA: I had, and I believe the motion that I made to amend has been seconded.

CHAIRMAN: The record so states.

CASTRO: I would like to speak in opposition to the proposed amendment, and in doing so answer some of the statements made by its author, the delegate from the fifth district. There are several points which I believe are matters of not complete statement.

One, first of all, the charge that the appointive system in opposition to the system of electing judges opens the door to political maneuver. I think we would be unreal if we were to deny that the appointive system is free of politics in the baser sense of the word, but I cannot see that the elective system, having recently had my own baptism of fire, is free of politics in the popular sense of the word. In fact, the two systems both have their shortcomings in this regard. It occurs to me that the difference is in the amount of time that is spent and the money that is spent by the candidates, a great deal more time and money in the case of the elective system than the appointive, and also money that has to put out by the State in running an election. I am very concerned over the amount of money that we spend in our new State. We are authorizing certain new procedures which we have not had to pay for in the past, and we have not yet found new revenues.

Another point that I'd like to bring to the attention of the delegates from the islands other than Oahu. If I were a delegate from an island other than Oahu I would fight very violently to see that the elective system amendment were defeated. This morning's paper indicates that the island of Oahu has 70 per cent of the population. It is the only island whose population has grown in the last decade, the population of the other islands have decreased. That is by census, not a matter of opinion. That means that the outer island areas would possibly be shut off from voting one of their favorite sons into the supreme court.

Now the argument against that of course is the one that we received yesterday informally that the delegates from the outer islands would like to elect their native sons to their local circuit benches. I think that that is an argument of pride and not of logic, and it breaks down by a very simple statement, and I don't say this unkindly, that the island of Oahu has the large reservoir of talent and it is perfectly possible in my mind, as a lay citizen, that in one of these more remote areas where a circuit bench position must be filled, it is possible that an applicant will not come forward from that particular local population. Are the people there to be made subject to inferior applicants when there is a reservoir of capable men in another area? This is what you would have in the elective system.

The delegate from the fifth district yesterday discussed the joy that a person before the bar would have in seeing a familiar face behind the bench. That familiar face argument is fallacious. I'd give you a half a dozen familiar faces for one that I'd never seen before if I knew that behind that face was a well-trained and capable mind. And it's the intelligence and ability of the judge and not your own personal acquaintance or familiarity that is most important.

The separation of departments has been pointed out by the delegates from the fifth district as a compelling argument in favor of the elective system, the indication being that judges who were appointed by the governor would be in some manner which was not explained attached to the executive. I present to the delegates that the separation comes not by reason of the appointive power, but by reason of the security of long tenure. That is an historical concept and I don't believe that there is any argument on that point.

The very capable paper of our delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Anthony, points out a somewhat humorous incident in the career of the late Justice Holmes where shortly after his appointment to the Supreme Court by President Roosevelt he partook in a vigorous dissent in the Northern Securities case much to the consternation of the executive who appointed him, who was making his stand in those days as a trust buster.

Now this next point I feel we have to look at. It's touchy and I hesitate to bring it up, but it was pointed out to me last afternoon in this hall informally that one of the reasons that some of the delegates would like to see the elective system is that they fear that the capable and well-trained lawyers of oriental ancestry would never attain to the benches, particularly of the superior court, if we were to rely upon the appointive system. That argument is lacking in logic. Let me point out a couple of items, a matter of observation.

In the first place the appointive system, if it has in the past in Hawaii chosen an overwhelming number of Caucasian to the bench, has done so possibly on the excuse that most of the appointments are Federal appointments, from Washington, D. C., where we know this racial ban does exist. And we know that it does not exist here. I feel that strongly, and I don't think it's double talk.

It is also an historical point that it has only been in the last decade or so that there have been a number of able and well-trained gentlemen of oriental ancestry who would be proper applicants for the bench, and we cannot take the long backlog of Caucasian appointments and place it against a situation where we actually have our first generation of well-trained lawyers who are proper applicants for the bench. Today there have been considered several, and I don't want to go into personalities and names, but you can review the facts. I know, ladies and gentlemen, that the charge that an appointive system would continue an overwhelming number of Caucasians for the reason that they are Caucasian or haole, is fallacious. There is no man who would attain the position of governor of this State who would dare, even if he had it in his heart, to turn down the proper man because of his racial descendency.

I think that it's unfair to place upon the populace the burden of choosing judges. As much as we occasionally take joy in sniping at our brothers, the attorneys here, and make little remarks about the "Supreme Court," this is true, that the profession of law is an esoteric one in which the standards can be judged only by those who themselves have knowledge and the average voter has no knowledge of what the basic concepts are.

In arguing against the elective system I am not necessarily arguing for the appointive system because it was I who threw in as a proposal, the Missouri Plan. That brings us this other point, that in all of the judicial reforms of the last decade throughout the United States, the vigorous attempts at reform have come from those states which are presently burdened down with the elective system. If you'll turn to page 201 of the Manual, the first full paragraph: "Within the past decade a new method of choosing judges has been vigorously advocated by those interested in legal reform. As a result, both California and Missouri have adopted a procedure for judicial selection which aims to combine features of both the appointive and the elective methods. In both states, this method developed from an elective system of selecting judges. In 1946 the adoption of this plan was considered in Oklahoma, Utah and Washington." If you turn to the table on page 219, you'll find that those three states are presently burdened with the elective system. "During the same period, the bar studied the plan in Michigan and Pennsylvania"—two more states that have the elective system of judicial selection—"and the Texas Civil Judicial Council recommended the plan in its overall constitutional revision." A committee of the Florida bar in 1948, another state that has the elective system, and Kansas, and they are all moving away from the elective system.

The question, finally, is not whether or not there is politics, or whether or not the devil in man will break down the institution, but it is what is the system that produces the better judge, or the best judges, and the elective system, generally acknowledged and proven by the attempts of the bar associations and the legislatures and the state constitutional conventions in the last 10 and 15 years, indicate that there is nothing but dissatisfaction with the elective system.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to point out before recognizing anyone else that debate on this subject is limited to 15 minutes under the rules of the Convention, and the last speaker spoke just one minute under that, but I will have to warn you at this time so that I don't have to interfere with your speeches.

MIZUHA: I'm going to be brief. I believe that debate on this subject should not go into backgrounds of personalities or anything else. We are all Americans here and we will decide the question as citizens of the future State of Hawaii and not the background we come from. I believe -- I am in favor of the appointive system because I believe it is a better system. It will give us better judges to sit on our courts, and I have faith in the leadership of the people in the future State of Hawaii, that they will select citizens of the State of Hawaii regardless of background, in the positions in our circuit courts and supreme court. I believe it is well at this time that we forget the question of ancestral background. That's all I got to say.

LARSEN: I agree fully with the last speaker, I would like to speak against the elective system. It seems to me the one thing that endangers our democracy are the political machines that are built in our big centers. These political machines, if they have to have every judge as part of that machine, I believe endangers this judicial system of ours that we want to keep so independent. I think the only argument we are making here is, have we a better chance of getting more justice with the appointive system or the elective system, and I believe the evidence points toward the appointive system as giving us a sounder justice.

KAWAKAMI: As a layman, may I say a few words in connection with our problem of selecting our judges. Under our system of government we have three branches. First, the legislative which is the policy-making body of our government; then, administration --

DELEGATE: Louder, louder please.

CHAIRMAN: If you'll hold the microphone directly in front of your mouth.

KAWAKAMI: -- then the executive. As the name implies, his duty is to administer these policies which have been set by the legislators. Naturally these two branches are elected by the people.

Now comes the judiciary, or the judges. Their duty is to interpret these policies so that the decision may be fair and just to the people at all times. Normally I'm a strong believer in electing our public officials, because I believe that is the fundamental basis of our democracy, but in everything else we have exceptions and appointive judges is one of those exceptions, I believe.

I believe the judges should be free, as far away as possible from direct influence of politics. They should be put away in the position so that they can render their decision on the merits or demerits of the case, so that the people would be given the maximum amount of justice.

On the battlefront, the privates are the first ones to receive fire, and in the courtroom battle there too, the private, I mean the private citizen, would be the first one to receive the fire. And I feel that the people should not be divided into two warring factions in choosing the judges. I believe the judges should act in the capacity of umpire and we should not mix up in that particular fight. When we face a court, we can face it with clear conscience that we had nothing to do in direct choosing of the judges.

For the past 160 years, the Federal government has had appointive systems, and if their system was radically wrong, I believe the people of the United States would have made changes. But, till today we have the same old system and it has been working out pretty good according to my feelings, and what's good for the Federal government, I believe is good enough for the State of Hawaii.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion on this? Are you ready for --

ANTHONY: This question that is for decision is one of the most important ones which will be resolved by this Convention, in my judgment. The question whether or not we are going to have popularly elected judges or going to have a strong judiciary based upon an executive appointment under a merit system goes to the very core of the judiciary article, and for that reason I have very strong feelings against the proposed amendment.

Now, what was said yesterday in that lengthy discussion by Mr. Fukushima? First place, he said that this is a matter of opinion. We will concede that it is a matter of opinion. Your committee has studied this question very -- with great care. We have sought the best opinions in the United States. We have not just relied on our own predilection on this matter. We have consulted the great authorities on the whole system of selection and tenure of judges, and the significant thing is that those authorities are against a system of popularly elected judges. Now the reason for it is clear, that you will not attract the best men to the bench if you are going to have them chosen by a popular election.

We have also consulted other phases of local opinion and there has been distributed among the delegates—and I would like to have it filed with the Clerk—a letter from the Hilo Bar Association voting ten to one in favor of an appointive system. If the messenger would pick this letter up and deliver it to the Clerk's desk, I would like to have it made part of the records.

CHAIRMAN: It will be so received.

WOOLAWAY: Mr. Chairman. I'd just like to make --

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony still has the floor.

ANTHONY: In addition to this, the Bar Association of Hawaii has voted overwhelmingly in favor of an appointive system.

Now, are we going to abandon a tradition that we have had in this Territory for almost a hundred years? Are we going to fly in the face of the experience and the wisdom of the Federal system? Are we going to take a step backward in face of the strong movement of every state in the union away from popularly elected judges, and get our judicial system into the morass of politics? That is the question for decision.

I would like to address myself to one thing which I think causes some of the dissent here on the floor, and that is the question which some of the delegates have stated to me that they, during their campaign for office as delegates to this Constitutional Convention, told the voters that they were in favor of popularly elected judges, and that therefore they wished to keep the faith. May I point this out to those delegates who have made statements along that line. Those delegates and you gentlemen who made those statements to the electorate were elected to write a Constitution for the State of Hawaii. The people in electing you expected that you would attend to this Convention, do the necessary work, listen to the debate and then exercise your own informed judgment. They did never intend you to come to this Convention with a crystallized mind on any subject. They never intended any such thing like that, and so I say that there is no breech of faith. All you are doing is saying that in the light of a comprehensive survey of this thing, in light of the evidence that is brought before the floor of this Convention the system of popularly elected judges is no good and we don't want it in Hawaii. Now if that is breaking faith with the people, in the light of all the evidences before the committee, I don't see how that can be urged.

Now one further thing, and I would like to impress this upon the Convention here. If you are going to have popularly elected judges, those judges are going to campaign. In other words, it would take them six months of wasting their judicial office to campaign for election. It would be costly. Judicial salaries being small as they are, the campaign money would have to be put up by somebody. Now I don't think we want our judges sitting on the bench who have any favors that they have accepted from any citizen. We want a strong and independent judiciary, and you don't get that if you are going to have them in a partisan campaign. Even though they may be friendly with the litigants that appear before the bar of justice, query whether or not that is what you want in your courts. I don't want a judge sitting on the bench that is friendly to me because I voted for him. I want a judge who will sit on the bench and render equal justice under the law, and this article will destroy that system, and I am against the proposed amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Arashiro rose prior -- at the same time as Delegate Anthony.

ARASHIRO: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

ARASHIRO: As I sit here this morning and listen to all the arguments, it reminds me of a little story. A minister came along and wrote on the blackboard, "I pray for all"; and a lawyer came along and wrote, "I plead for all"; and a a doctor came along and said, "I prescribe for all." Then came the politician to say, "I promise all." Then came the delegate to the Constitutional Convention who said, "I protect you all." Then came the layman who said, "I pay for all."

Now we are discussing a very complicated and confusing subject in reference to the structure of our government, and I'm just wondering to myself whether I should go for the elective, appointive, Missouri system, or other system that they are thinking. But to me, I want to submit a proposal which is the Hawaii method, the forty-ninth state method, a new method. But before submitting it, what we are trying to get is a judicial system that is a separate, a complete separate setup from the legislative and executive branch of our government, and we want to have an impartial judicial system.

Now the argument raised, the elective system has a tendency—of course I'm going to make my speech short so I will not elaborate on arguments that were brought up—they said the elective system had a tendency of leaning toward politics. The appointment system has a tendency of separating from politics, but may become subject to or obligated to the appointer, and by that they might not have, or the decisions might not be always made in favor of the man that is going to be affected by the decision. And right down the line, there have been different arguments that are sound and every argument that was brought needs careful consideration.

Now I've been thinking of a proposal where it is not an elective system, it is not a completely appointive system, but a system that we might say is a compromise method of all the matters that have been submitted, and that is where we have the chief justice of the State of Hawaii be elected indirectly. There was a suggestion about having the chief justice run for election at large, but that method also was convinced to me might have a tendency of creating a judicial political machine. But now this indirect method of electing the chief justice is a method which I want each delegate to the Convention to seriously consider with open mind.

This method is the joint committee of the legislature, with equal representation from each island to be represented in the committee, and this committee through a secret ballot will elect our chief justice, whose name will be submitted to the legislature 30 days prior to the election. After he is elected, he there and then will appoint his subordinates and other judges of the territory.

MAU: I don't believe that I could add any further argument or put in any more vigorous way than the sponsor of the amendment did yesterday afternoon. I want to congratulate him for his able presentation of the motion that he has made to amend. Several points have been raised this morning, and it is a repetition of the arguments in favor of the appointive system. One is that in the elective system, politics would be involved. If the delegates will recall that argument was ably answered yesterday afternoon. In the judicial system, you cannot remove it from politics no matter how you select your judges. There can be no question about that.

It was pointed out yesterday that if the executive or if you had a judicial council involved in the selection of judges—and the present Section 3 of this proposal calls for appointment by the executive and confirmation by the Senate of the State—can anybody have any doubts in their minds that the appointee might have to perform certain favors in behalf of the executive or those who had confirmed him in the Senate? That's human nature. If you say that that is less likely to be involved in favors, political favors, than that of the elective system, that perhaps might be true. But to say that because you have an elective system, it would ruin your judicial system, I think is a lot of poppycock. Three-fourths of the states have by some method or another the system of election of judges.

It is also true that the trend and great effort is being made by the various bar associations of each of the respective states who have the elective system, or which have the elective system, are trying to change that system to one of appointment in one or more ways. But the fact remains that today even though that trend has started for the last 12 or 15 years, up to today, 36 of the 48 states still operate under the elective system. And it has never been pointed out to me that under that elective system in each of the 36 states, they have not had honest judges, judges who sit there without prejudice, judges who were not fair and impartial. There has been no scandal of any kind which would be to such an extent that we could say that system should go out of the window.

I submit to you, Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee -- of the Convention, that to retain the great principle that we are here gathered to put into this Constitution, the separation of the three branches of government, you must leave that ultimately in the hands of the people. The people elect your executive, the people elect your legislative branch, is it not well to say that the people can be trusted to elect their judges. I have no fear, and this last election in the Constitutional Convention brought that out. I call your attention to the delegates from the fourth district, the elder statesman, Delegate William Heen, who led the ticket in the fourth district; the able and distinguished lawyer, Delegate Anthony, for the first time running for public office received an enormous and tremendous vote for a first time. If either of those gentlemen should run for chief justice of the State of Hawaii, I would give them my wholehearted support and so would the people of the Territory of Hawaii. Can you say that the people will not elect able, high-calibered judges? I am willing to trust the people. For after all, all the power of the government in each of the three branches of the government, those powers stem from the people. Are we afraid to trust the people to elect these judges? I am not.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I want it for the record that when I cast my vote on this, on this important question, I do so because of an honest opinion, not because of my racial descent. And I will do so on every important question, or any question that is raised here or in any public forum when I cast my vote, it is because in my candid and considered judgment that is the right thing to do, and for no other reason, racial or otherwise.

TAVARES: I will be brief. First of all, this debate reminds me of what I, in the course of my reading, learned Benjamin Franklin said when the question of appointment or election of judges came up before the Constitutional Convention. He said that he preferred the Scotch system which was appointive. He says, "You know, whenever there is a vacancy, all the lawyers get together and they pick out the lawyer that is the ablest and got the biggest practice, and get him appointed and then they divide his practice among the rest of them."

But all joking aside, I'd like to read to this Convention something that I think indicates that Hawaii has a noble tradition of appointive judges. We have heard a great deal here about preserving the old Hawaiian traditions, and I am for it. And I'd like to read to you what was said in the Senate of the United States when they gave this territory the distinction of being the first territory with a separate system of its own judges, the first territory, and even Alaska today has a system of where the Federal judge handles everything and all circuit judges do, too. But they paid us the compliment of giving us a separate system of appointive judges and one reason they did it was this.

Senator Collum, who was one of the commissioners that drew up our Organic Act and came down here to the territory, to the Hawaiian Islands to examine the situation, said this about our system. That was way back before 1900. He said, "So we found the supreme court there doing business with just as much dignity, with just as much sense of honor and duty and apparently with just as much intelligence as the supreme court of the State of Illinois or of Connecticut or of any other state. There was nothing in the establishment there in any way that the commission could see would justify us in uprooting the supreme court or the circuit courts of the islands and requiring the government of the United States to meddle with them. So it was the conclusion of the commission and of the committee that as far as that was concerned, we ought to leave that alone at present."

I say Hawaii has a noble tradition, and I say we should perpetuate it.

SMITH: Listening to both sides this morning and hearing a lot of good speeches, if you will go and read this Section 3 that, "Justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit court shall be appointed by the governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate," that first sentence to me means a great deal. For one fact—we will be electing a governor by popular vote. He will have the responsibility of judging, with the consent of the Senate, who will be our judges. Sure, I grant you that there is politics there, but it's not politics that can be detrimental to the State. I at all times would trust the voters, but I also realize one thing, that when -- as being even elected here as a delegate, we are carrying a responsibility to the people who elected us and who didn't elect us, to really judge in the interests of all, which would be best. I think that it is a matter of either politics or policy, therefore I am strongly in favor of Section 3 as it stands.

LOPER: I hesitate to speak on this subject surrounded as I am by legal talent, but to remain silent is to run the risk of being misunderstood because I believe that those who are for the election of judges would justify it on the basis of democracy, and I am for democracy.

I would like to have some philosopher of government answer this kind of question. Is this analogy a fair one or is it over-simplified? The people in a democratic state vote for taxes, they vote for the men who make their laws, and they have the right to decide whether they do want to pay for a new road or a bridge, but they wouldn't begin to think of electing the engineer to design that bridge. They have the authority to appropriate money to control epidemics, but they wouldn't attempt to elect the doctors or the scientists to handle the scientific end of it. They appropriate money for the construction of airports, but they wouldn't elect the pilots for the planes that go and come. It would be absurd to think of having our legislators appointed. There we want people who are close to the people, who have the confidence of the people, who have the social judgment to speak for the people. My question then is this. Is the judicial function a specialized function in the sense of the engineer or the scientist who does a job for those who speak for the people?

When I first attempted to deal with this question in my own thinking, I was in favor of the Missouri Plan because it occurred to me that this was possibly something superior to either appointment or election. However, it has been pointed out—and I have no grounds for questioning this—that the Missouri Plan, the Missouri Compromise, came about in an effort to get away from the election of judges. It was necessary because it was the best that could be had in moving from election toward appointment. I would like to be corrected on that if I'm wrong.

To summarize my brief remarks, although I am for the appointment of judges, I think that it needs to be remembered that that in no sense curtails the democratic quality of our government.

A. TRASK: We all acknowledge that the proponents for this amendment, the two eloquent speakers, Fukushima and Chuck Mau, believe this sincerely. In my conversation with them many years back they believed in the principle of the elected judges. For myself, it's been one of the most difficult questions that I've had to consider, and only recently have I definitely made up my mind with respect to how I should vote, either for or against the election of judges. I am for the appointment of judges.

I think there is a complete answer to the question posed by both gentlemen, namely, do we or do we not trust the people. That question is almost unfair, but let us answer it. I say we do trust the people, and the people certainly trusted us when they elected us, and it is our obligation to give them not trust in return, but to give them service. It's the question of providing a framework of government which -- whereby the people may get the best possible service for all their taxes paid. And that's what I'm interested in, and I'm sure that's what the proponents for the election of judges are.

The question is insulation. The question is that we have a government of politics. To say that any branch of the government or any person is not affected by government is overlooking the realities of life. But the question with respect to the judiciary is to make it as far as is humanly possible, consistent with our traditions, in a manner whereby they may be removed and render the best service. Dr. Loper has suggested that idea when he said with respect to engineers, doctors and other professional people. You want the service, you want the best possible service that's available. The governor will be an elected person, he will visit and campaign on all the islands of the territory, he will be certainly subjected as he is not now.

Certainly we who are close to the subject of how judges are appointed have risen in the Bar Association and have argued this thing long and vigorously. Just recently during the campaign, as a matter of fact, I accused the Bar Association of meddling in politics when a certain committee sent a certain situation back to Washington. But that is what is before us now. We are projecting a program for the future, and however it is, we are working out this matter, I think, successfully.

What question bothers me is this. What facts indeed have the proponents for this amendment brought forth that would have any of us in our minds point to the present system of appointive judges and say it looks bad, there is time for a change? There is no evidence, there is not a scintilla of evidence given here on this floor to persuasively move any reasonable mind that there is need for a change. However, we have criticized the present situation whereby an appointive governor has himself in fact for long been the principle person who has appointed these judges. We know it, we dislike it, but is it only his fault? Or is it the fault also of the Bar Association of Hawaii which as we know has been ruled by a certain group. But I will say for this Bar Association, to which I am a member, that we are coming out of this medieval status and under the able leadership of Nils Tavares, past president here, it is being democratized. So it is a question of growing up, and we are growing up, and there isn't too much that can be said.

As a practicing lawyer for the courts, I am interested first in, not my friendship for a judge. I would be afraid of close friendship with a judge. Indeed afraid, because if he would want to be kind to me as a friend, a better friend may come along the next time and then I'll be sold down the river. I am concerned about the best services that my clients can receive at the bar of justice, and familiarity with a face, as I see, means nothing. We are concerned about service, the best service possible, the most competent service possible, the best mind and heart beating together to render what we consider is justice.

My second point is this. Let us not forget that a person who is a judge is certainly a very human person; he is a cultured person, he is a person that is aware of our cultural history, of poetry, of the best thoughts that have been expressed in music, in song, and in literature. As such, he is a sensitive soul, and to think for a moment that a person qualified and competent—and his competence is built from study and not from going around from corner to corner, and from bar to occasional cocktail party making friends and influencing people—he is a person —and there is no reflection cast upon anyone, there is only one disqualified person here that I know of. We are concerned with the humanity of this judge, and to have a qualified person as sensitive as he would be because of his literary pursuits.

He would have on Oahu 71 precincts, and in each precinct he would have necessarily one worker, political worker. He would not under most circumstances have the money to expend for an intensive political campaign because a campaign for judge would be on Oahu similar to a campaign for the Senate, which I can assure you is a tremendous undertaking. Who is going to pay for his campaign other than people who are interested in the decisions to be rendered? And as a person who is most concerned about the humanity of a judge, I say that the pressure that this ordinary human being would be subjected to would be so great that he could not withstand the human pressure, being the sensitive human being as he is. So you have a tremendous confusion of emotional life going on which is not good for what we would want to be considered deliberation of the courts.

So even though there is a division in my own family—my influence is quite limited—I say to all of my colleagues who are fair-minded, and my brother is fair-minded, that I think the appointive system under every consideration is the best we have and I see no cause for change.

BRYAN: I would like to say that I am very much in accord with the sympathies and beliefs of the previous speaker. I'd like to say further that the little history that was pointed out by our friend from the fifth district, Delegate Mau, as to the states that have the appointive system and the ones that are trying to get away from it, I think that I'd be derelict in my duty if I did not vote in favor of the appointive system. To say that Hawaii should step backward and throw away at least 75 years of good and fine upright judiciary and wait for the rest of the 33 states to keep up with us, I think it's foolishness. I'm very much in favor of the appointive system.

APOLIONA: I submit to you, Mr. Chairman and the members of this honorable body, a point which I have, which I hold very important and has not been discussed on this floor. A candidate in any political campaign is elected or defeated on the stand which he takes on certain issues. A candidate for judgeship in his campaign cannot speak on issues. He cannot speak of his thinking, cannot speak of his opinion, because if he does, he will automatically disqualify himself from the bench because he will then associate himself with certain issues and thus become prejudiced. Then I say, what will a candidate for judge campaign on? On his record. And may I ask what record? A record of how many cases he has won or lost in court? Or the record of his becoming a modern Robin Hood?

I submit to you, Mr. Chairman and members of this honorable body, that I do trust the people, not willingly trust the people, but I trust the people. The people elected -- will elect its chief executive, and as long as that chief executive is in office, they should sustain the judgment of the chief executive. I am opposed to the amendment as introduced by my good friend from the fifth district, and I shall vote for an appointment system of judges.

In his remarks yesterday afternoon, the delegate from the fifth district said that the judicial should be free from politics. In any campaign, any election campaign, I have yet to see that an election is not politics. You can't help but make it into a political campaign.

So therefore, my brothers of this honorable body, and sisters, may I say, will you consider that the appointment system of judges is far superior and better than any other system that is known on this face of this world. Thank you very kindly.

SAKAKIHARA: I believe I'm about the first to have offered an elective system of our judiciary, although it's limited to the supreme court. It is a compromise measure from that offered by the gentleman from the fifth district, asking that all of the judges from the inferior courts to the circuit courts and the supreme court shall be elected by the voters of this territory. The composition of our State Constitution, and the Federal Constitution, definitely separates three branches of the government. On one hand the delegates, in voting for a State Constitution, say that we firmly believe in these three branches of the government and that of the two you shall submit to the electorate so that the people can vote them into office. But in another breath when it comes to the judiciary branch of the government, they want the people to say that you are not competent, that you are not able to judge good men on judiciary positions, that you are incompetent, that you are not fit to judge your neighbors.

The question has been raised here that in a progressive state they have gotten away from the elective system to that of appointive systems. In 21 states of the Union, all judges are elected by popular vote; in 14 others, all but inferior court judges are elected. The remaining 13 have an appointive system. The proponents of the appointive system come before this Convention and say the minority group of 13 states over the 34 states have the proper system of selecting the judiciary. I beg to disagree with their line of argument, but if it is true that a system adopted by 13 states is so effective that they are immune from politics, undoubtedly the 34 states would follow the pattern and it would have become unanimous.

Under Section 3, the appointive power under the appointive system, as already has been pointed out, is vested in the executive and to confirm by the legislature. A governor in office is a human. In order to perpetuate himself into office, our governor will have political machines. Whenever the appointment is to be effected, it will no doubt make -- refer his recommendation to that particular area in order to sustain that political machine. Judges who are selected by the governor under this system will become subservient to the executive and the legislature because he has obtained that confirmation from the Senate.

I don't believe that the answer to the question before the Convention is the appointive system. We can still trust the American people. We are not dominated in a community overrun by a totalitarian form of government. You who have been elected and serving here as a delegate certainly weren't elected by a political machine. We all ran as non-party -- nonpartisan politics. The people were able to exercise intelligently to select this group of people to represent us, and I have an abiding faith in the judgment of the people of this territory, that they are capable of selecting from among their neighbors, from among their fellow citizens, upright, honest, fearless and capable lawyers to be a judge. I submit to you that that is an American way, and if it is not so, 34 states will not adopt that system.

Flowery speeches has been made here by the proponents of appointive system to the effect that the judiciary will be wrapped up in politics, that the judges -- competent men will not run for judges. I cannot subscribe to that principle. Who has a bigger responsibility than one man under the terms of our proposed State Constitution, than the governor who is to be elected by the people. He is vested with the power to reprieve, giving pardons to those who have been convicted, and yet you say to the people, we trust you insofar as the executive is concerned, we trust you to elect one man in whom the enforcement powers are vested; but when you come to the selection of five men, the judiciary, the highest office of the judiciary, the supreme court, we do not trust you. You are unfit, you are not capable of selecting five men to serve on the supreme court as your interpreters or translators of law. Why, certainly we trust you to select one man, the chief executive of the State of Hawaii.

I submit to you, Mr. Chairman and members of this Convention, that it is not consistent with the arguments that have been advanced here by the proponents of the appointive system. I submit that the elective system is a democratic process. It is more American than an appointive system by vesting the power to one man. And depending on the size of the Senate that by majority vote that they shall be confirmed, it may be by nine or ten men who will say who shall or who shall not be the supreme court, or circuit judges of the State of Hawaii. Therefore I submit that the elective system is the answer to the question.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair ask, did I understand from you, Delegate Sakakihara, that you had another amendment?

SAKAKIHARA: I had a proposal here, No. 88, which was filed by the committee which would have required five men of the supreme court --

CHAIRMAN: It does not relate to this section?

SAKAKIHARA: It does relate in this question, Mr. Chairman. We are touching upon elective system here under the terms of the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima, selection of -- election of all judges.

CHAIRMAN: Do you wish to submit that amendment now?

SAKAKIHARA: There will be another amendment to be offered later on after this present amendment now before the Convention.

WOOLAWAY: It is interesting to note that in 1940 the voters of Missouri voted against the elective system by a majority vote of 90,000. The politicians were amazed because they had been certain people would not relinquish the right to nominate the judges in the primary elections and would not approve of the proposed plan. The politicians were then confident that the people did not know what they had done, so through the legislature a constitutional amendment was proposed to repeal the plan. This put the issue back again to the voters. Apparently the people had known what they were doing because when they voted again, at the 1942 election, the plan was retained by more than 108,000 votes against the elective system. I favor the appointive system.

DOI: I want to first make clear that I am not in favor of the amendment proposed, but since there have been so many speakers expressing their views on the question of whether they are for or against the elective or the appointive system, I would like to make a few expressions about my own ideas.

Much has been said about the independence of the judiciary system. When we speak of independence of the judiciary system, we mean that the judiciary must be independent of the executive branch as well as the legislative branch, as well as from politics. If we examine the appointive system, we find that it is not independent of the executive branch and as proposed it is not independent of the legislative body. On those two points I submit the elective system is independent.

On the question of politics I want to start from this premise, that I believe there is as much politics in an appointive system as there is in an elective system. The only difference is in the kind of politics played. In the appointive system, there is participation by a few and then the appointee only looks to a few after he is appointed. Then also in the appointive system, the kind of politics played is on a higher plane. While on the other hand, we find that the kind of politics played in the elective system is the kind of politics that a democratic government would want to see played, and that is submission of ideas and election -- submission of ideas and officers to the will of the public at large.

It has been raised, by one of the delegates, this question, and an analogy has been drawn, that on questions of health we call in the doctor. The elective system admits in the question of deciding a judicial decision a lawyer must be called in. The only question is how. And as to that, I want to submit that a doctor's profession, his work, is more of a technical nature. In case of a jurist, it is not only technical skill, but it is important that we find out and subscribe probably to the kind of social thinking, political thinking, economic thinking that that jurist might have.

In that regard, I want to say that most of the law business are not given to the lawyers by the common man. They seldom have litigation, or legal problems to offer as business to lawyers. Naturally, the predominance of subject matter dealt with by most lawyers have to do with matters which concern a special type of thinking, and I think I am not unfair if I submit at that point that these lawyers who work in that special field would quite often get to think more or less the way that their clients want them to think.

Therefore in the appointive system, where a lesser group than the majority does the selecting and where much is relied upon the opinion of the Bar Association, it is very likely that those few with this peculiar type of thinking might be selected, and that is not desirable. The jurist in interpreting the laws might decide only on one case, but that case lays down the law in many instances and it has very far reaching effects. It might not have been the common man that went to court, but that decision does effect the common man. For example, acts like A.A.A. Therefore, I think we must give some consideration to the expression of desires from the common man group.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to point out that there have been 17 speakers on this section so far, covering an hour and 15 minutes without recess. Does anyone else wish to be heard? Are you ready to vote on the amendment?

I'll recognize Delegate Fukushima, if no one else wishes to speak; he has already spoken once. Delegate Fukushima.

FUKUSHIMA: As the movant of this proposed amendment, I'd like to make a few observations. I will not be long; I'd like to, but I will not.

Whether the learned chairman of the Judiciary Committee had reference to me when he stated that some of the candidates who ran for office stumped on the proposition that he favored an elective system; well, I was one of them, and I did not stump for the elective without first considering the advantages and disadvantages of both systems. I made a thorough study, I've read Haynes, which was constantly referred to in the committee, and I came to a considered judgment, in fact as far back as three years ago when I had a long discussion with our delegate from the fifth district, Arthur Trask.

I've come to this Convention still with an open mind, however, that if the proponents of the appointive system could show me that the appointive system was the better system I would have gladly changed my mind, irrespective of what I stood for when I ran for office as delegate. We've had six or seven committee meetings and I believe it was merely an expression of opinion of a few committee members that were present at the meeting.

The chairman speaks of "great authorities." I can't recall, sitting in the committee meeting, of ever listening to any expression of opinion by great authorities. The only one that I can remember is Dean Vanderbilt. The chairman of Judiciary Committee wrote to Dean Vanderbilt to get his expression of opinion, and that is about all we got. At the same time, a suggestion was made by Delegate Fong that the chairman or the committee write to other authorities in other states having the elective system, and we were told that this would be done, but it was never done. All we had was Dean Vanderbilt's letter. We talked about the same thing in the six meetings; there was nothing new. The first meeting was an exploratory meeting. We explored the thinking of all the committee members present and that was about all. At one time, if I remember correctly, I moved that we have a public hearing on this matter. That was seconded and carried, but I've never heard of that public hearing. I made that suggestion because I felt that there are many attorneys in this territory here that would have attended a public hearing to voice their views.

Now the Bar Association has voted, as the learned chairman says, overwhelmingly for the appointive system. I'd like to remind the delegates that the vote was 50 to 4, and I'd also like to remind that the entire bar of this territory is about 200 lawyers. That represents just one third of the entire bar. I could go on and on and discuss the failings of this committee, because I felt there was not an adequate expression except by the delegates. There was nothing else that was brought in. We had no speakers, except Mr. Cades, who was the chairman of the committee of the whole studying this proposition, and all he reported was the overwhelming vote of 50 to 4.

I'd like to close now, but I'd like to state this. It's very unfortunate, in fact it pains me that one of the delegates here mentioned that the proponents of this measure here, which includes me as I am the proposer, that the reason perhaps why this amendment was proposed was because the oriental attorneys did not have the opportunity to become judges under the appointive system. I'd like to point out that the results of the elections on Oahu will definitely show that the orientals will have less of a chance to become judges than if you were under the appointive system. If I felt that this amendment would give the orientals more chance than the appointive system, I'd be the first one to withdraw this amendment, but I leave it in here because I feel very definitely in the complete separation with the three branches of government which I explored in yesterday afternoon's session. With that I'd like to close.

KAUHANE: I believe that a serious statement or charge, if I may put it, has been placed here before this Convention. If it is true, what has been stated to us, then certainly the committee should recall this report and go back into a committee session and take care of the matter of the charges that have been made. Certainly we are willing to vote on a committee report that is fair and has been given equal treatment. The fact that the statement was made that the committee failed to bring in opinions or bring in facts concerning an election system within the judicial system and because of the failure of the committee, as charged, in calling for a public hearing so that other attorneys who are licensed in the Territory of Hawaii to practice law be given an opportunity to express their views for or against an elective system or an appointive system, I am somewhat confused now. I'm confused because of the fact that I believe the committee report has not submitted a fair and impartial opinion on the judicial system, as they are now advocating and requesting this committee -- this Convention to adopt.

Upon that premise, I now move that the committee report and proposal be recommitted back to the Judiciary Committee and that the Judiciary Committee be instructed by you or by the Convention to carry out or else to make good the charges that have been made here in open Convention.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Will you state the motion again please so that everyone understands the motion? As the Chair understands the motion, the motion is to rise and report to the Convention that you believe that the subject matter should be recommitted to the Committee on Judiciary.

KAUHANE: I move that the committee proposal and the committee report be recommitted to the Committee on Judiciary - -

CHAIRMAN: And how do you propose that be done?

KAUHANE: - - and that the Chair instruct the chairman of that committee to carry out, or in other words, to do away with the charge or to carry out the charges that have been made here upon their - - of their failure to bring to this Convention a complete report of the - -

CHAIRMAN: If the delegate would state the motion - -

KAUHANE: The Clerk has the motion. I ask you to tell the Clerk to read the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Will the Clerk read the motion, please?

CLERK: That the committee report and proposal be recommitted back to the Judiciary Committee, and that the Judiciary Committee be instructed to report to the Convention to carry out the laws - - to make the Act - - the charges that have been made for the information of - -

CHAIRMAN: I believe -- The Chair feels that the motion was not clearly stated, and if we could get it down to a few simple statements, we would know on what grounds we were voting.

KAUHANE: I move therefore, to make it very simple and understandable, that the committee proposal and the report be recommitted to the Committee on Judiciary.

CHAIRMAN: Does the second accept that?

YAMAMOTO: I accept that motion.

H. RICE: As a member of the Judiciary Committee, I resent Mr. Kauhane's remarks because I don't think he attended the Judiciary Committee. I sent the report of the chairman, which I think is one of the outstanding reports of this Convention, back to the lawyers on Maui and to my brother on Kauai and asked them if they had any comments to send those comments to me. As a member of the Judiciary Committee representing Maui I'd like to hear from the lawyers. They were satisfied with the report and they believed - - I think the decision of the Convention is what they'd like to hear now.

FUKUSHIMA: I don't believe that it is necessary that the committee proposal and the committee report be referred back to the Committee on Judiciary. I feel that adequate expressions have been made on the floor already. I for myself feel and know that the report of the learned chairman of this committee is an excellent report.

The reason why I made those statements is this: we could have filed a minority report but we did not, which is largely our fault. And in not filing our minority report, I felt that I could orally state the position of the minority speaking for myself before this Convention. There's no necessity of sending this report and proposal back; we've had enough discussion; we know where we stand. Even if it was sent back, the vote would still be the same. It will not change at all, so I move to table at this time the motion to recommit.

SILVA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made and seconded to table the motion to recommit. All those - -

LEE: A point of order. I notice that you recognize the mover of the motion to table; then I rose and addressed the Chair properly, "Mr. Chairman," and somewhere on my right came a cannon shot of "Second the motion."

CHAIRMAN: I recognized the second.

LEE: Did you recognize the second? I didn't hear you call his name. I stand corrected.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is to table the motion to recommit. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. [Carried.]

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of special privilege.

CHAIRMAN: Will you state the special privilege.

KAUHANE: The delegate from Maui - - I believe I would rather rely upon the statement that he made and have the Clerk read the statement made by the delegate from Maui with reference to my statement.

A.TRASK: Point of order.

KAUHANE: I feel, Mr. Chairman - -

A. TRASK: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: A point of order has been raised. Will you state your point of order, Delegate Trask?

A. TRASK: I object to any special privilege being extended the speaker from the fifth district - - combination, whatever it is.

CHAIRMAN: What is the - -

KAUHANE: I rise to the point of order - - I mean question of personal privilege.

CHAIRMAN : Will you state the personal privilege.

KAUHANE: My integrity or my position has been somewhat challenged in the statement made by the delegate from Maui. Certainly I'm entitled to defend myself, even if the opinion of the member from the fifth district does not agree with me. The reason - -

MIZUHA: I cannot understand the speaker, Mr. Chairman

KAUHANE: I'm trying to say this, Mr. Chairman - -

CHAIRMAN: The Chair rules you're out of order. Will you please take your seat.

KAUHANE: Mr. Chairman, I still rise - -

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: I would like to rise to a point of special privilege. The delegate from the fifth district has made some serious charges against the Committee on Judiciary, and they are unfounded and I want to assure the Convention of that right here and now. It is true that at the initial meeting of the Judiciary Committee I advised the committee that I had written to the foremost authority in the United States, Dean Arthur Vanderbilt, presently chief justice of the supreme court of New Jersey, asking him his views on the judiciary article, and a nice reply was received which was read to the committee. At that time, in a facetious gesture, either one member or two members of the committee said how about writing to those states where they have elective systems. And it was well understood by all that any member of the committee could write to anybody he wanted to.

Now, as to the matter of the public hearing. That was discussed and nobody ever pressed a public hearing for the simple reason that the real persons of interest in the judiciary article on the matter of appointment and selection of judges and tenure is the bar. The bar was furnished with mimeographed copies of the proposal. Every member of the bar received in the mail the proposal that was the draft of the proposal upon which this committee worked. At least two meetings of the Bar Association were held and there was ample notice to every member of the bar. I don't know whether Delegate Fukushima was present or not, but all lawyers who were interested in that problem were there, and a full and complete debate was had in the Bar Association.

Thereafter we had a meeting of the Judiciary Committee, and the chairman of the special committee of the bar appeared and reported the views of the Bar Association. Now there was nothing to prevent Mr. Fukushima or anybody else who could have produced any authorities, and they were unanimous in favor of the appointive system, to do that before the committee. The authority was produced, the leading authorities in this country, and every member of the committee knows that and as I say, the very fact that they were unable to state in writing any reason for an elective, popularly elective system of the judiciary is ample proof to my mind why this thing should be voted down.

MAU: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to rule that in its opinion there was no intent, and certainly the Chair did not hear any castigation on Delegate Kauhane by Delegate Rice, and therefore ruled that the personal privilege was out of order. Delegate Mau.

MAU: I speak now to a point of personal privilege. I'm a member of the Judiciary Committee. I had stated in the committee meetings, and I state so now, that this report by the able chairman of the Judiciary Committee is one of the most excellent reports yet filed with this Convention. I want to state to the Convention that no point was ever raised or discussed which gave rise to a subsequent motion made by the delegate to the fifth district, and the sooner we forget that, the better it is. Of course it was unfortunate that one of the earlier speakers this morning, one of the delegates from the fourth district, raised the point as an illustration, I believe. But if it had not been done, the feelings would not have run so high. I submit to the Convention that we forget that and go on with our business.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the house is the adoption of the amendment. Are you ready for the question?

KAUHANE: I'd like to be given the opportunity to express my views on the subject matter whether the chief justice should be elected or appointed.

CHAIRMAN: That is proper.

KAUHANE: Mr. Chairman, and members - -

MAU: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Will you state the point of order, please.

MAU: I thought there was a motion to table and it was seconded. I know that foreclosed me from debating.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that is correct. There was a motion to - -

MAU: May I finish that for you. There was a motion to table the motion to recommit.

CHAIRMAN: That's right, and that carried. That motion was put and carried. Therefore the Chair is correct in stating that the only motion before the house at the present time is the amendment, and as I understand it, Delegate Kauhane is speaking to that point.

KING: I rise to make it a point of order. As I understood the delegate from the fifth district, Delegate Kauhane, he wished to discuss the election of the chief justice. That's not the pending amendment, which is the election of all judges. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: Well, he was speaking to the amendment. We haven't limited it to whether they were talking on the chief justice or all of them.

FUKUSHIMA: I also have a point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Will you state your point of order please, Mr. Fukushima.

FUKUSHIMA: Prior to my making my closing argument, if you can call it such, the Chair put the question whether anyone here would care to speak further on the subject matter, and hearing none, the Chair recognized me as a proponent of the amendment to close the debate.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of order. It is certainly approved by any parliamentary procedure - -

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has recognized that you have a right to speak and so rules.

KAUHANE: Well if the Convention is taking an arbitrary stand as to my expression of views, I'd like to state this. That certainly the Chair is right in recognizing Fukushima to make the closing statement in support of his amendment. That is a practice that has been recognized throughout in parliamentary - -

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair ask if you wish to speak to the amendment. The other subject has been fully covered.

KAUHANE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

KAUHANE: When I came to this Constitutional Convention, I came here with an open mind to decide whether or not the judicial system should be an elective one or an appointive one. —Mr. Chairman, I ask that you tell my friend who sits in the back of me trying to interfere with my speech to keep quiet. —So much so when this matter was discussed before this Convention and when I ran for the office of delegate I made no promises to support either an elective or appointive system.

Now I am convinced more so in the expression of ideas that was made before the Convention that I believe the elective system is the proper system for the protection of the small man who has to go to court. We have been told that the elective system is a corrupt system, politics plays a great part in that type of system. Politics plays a great part as far as pressure is concerned on both the elective and appointive systems. We see that in an appointive system within our government, namely in the Police Department, when before the enactment of the law repealing the election of sheriff, that there were less corruption within the Police Department as was exhibited during an appointive system, which corruption was publicized in the daily newspapers. So much so that the people are now clamoring for a change from a system which they thought would make the necessary corrections in an elective system by an appointive system. They now have appeared before the legislature in a formal petition by legislation requesting that that legislature revert back to an election system for the Police Department.

We have heard arguments pro and con as to the system that we should decide upon. If we believe that an elective system is the most democratic system throughout our election system, then I say that the judges should run for office. The fact that politics or campaigns cost money is immaterial in this matter, immaterial because those who run for public office to run the affairs of the government have to bear the cost of election. We bear the cost of election because we feel that we can contribute towards forming or attempt to form a good sound and fair governmental system. The election of judges should be on those basis that your judicial system shall be on a sound and fair and impartial basis. Men who run for office, they certainly present themselves, they present their qualification and integrity for the office they run, or they seek for. Certainly, we will have capable men running for the office of judge as much as we will have capable men submitting themselves for appointment.

Let us take the case that has been raised here on the question of races, and because on that question they feel that we should totally disregard the racial question. We know and we have seen that in all the appointments, acknowledging the fact to be that certain groups -- certain race groups should be recognized. Have we given that certain group the recognition as we attempt to say in our Bill of Rights that such recognition shall be given? We find that there is a need for such representation. We find that that need can only be accomplished if and when we adopt an elective system; an elective system so that they will be on comparable basis in presenting themselves to the voters of this Territory whether or not they are qualified and are men of integrity to seek the office as judges. Certainly the people, who after all makes up your government, should be given that freedom of selection,the freedom to exercise its conscience in selecting the men who run its judicial system as well as selecting the men who run the affairs of its government.

As a layman, I feel that is the only fair means of an elimination process and the selection of capable and qualified men to run the affairs of our government, be it in the judicial system, the legislative branch, in both the Territory and county branches. I therefore am heartily in favor of an elective system in the judicial setup.

SMITH: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Smith, you have already spoken on this subject. Delegate James Trask has not yet spoken on the subject, therefore I will recognize --

J. TRASK: I move for the previous question.

A. TRASK: Point of order please. Just one question before --

CHAIRMAN: Point of order. Will you state your point of order.

A. TRASK: I'd like to ask a very important piece of information of the chairman of the committee. Was any --

CHAIRMAN: Will Brother Trask yield for a question?

J. TRASK: I do.

A. TRASK: Was any -- did the Judiciary Committee receive any petition from any source whatsoever opposing the appointive system?

CHAIRMAN: Will you answer the question, please, Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: The answer is "no."

CHAIRMAN: I'll recognize Delegate Trask, James Trask.

J. TRASK: I redo my motion.

A. TRASK: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question has been called for.

SILVA: How about giving a couple of laymen just one little say.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon?

SILVA: If he will remove his motion, I'm just a little layman and I'd like to say just about two sentences in showing my thinking on the election and the --

J. TRASK: I withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: The gentleman has yielded.

SILVA: Two sentences, that's all. Speaking as a layman, if I was to be tried before a judge, and knowing politics like I do, I'd rather have him appointed. Thank you.

H. RICE: I'm not going to talk on the question. I ask that we take an "aye" and "no" vote.

CHAIRMAN: We're voting now on the previous question. Do you want an "aye"? The motion before the assembly is the previous question. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried unanimously.

Motion now is on the amendment.

ANTHONY: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: All those desiring roll call will please raise your hand. Sufficient number; there will be roll call.

APOLIONA: Will you state the motion and the position to the delegates.

CHAIRMAN: The motion that is before us now is an amendment to Section 3, proposed by Delegate Fukushima, reads as follows: Section 3 to be amended as follows:

> The justices of the supreme court shall be elected by the electorate of this State and the judges of the several circuits shall be elected by the electorate of the respective circuit both in a nonpartisan election. No person shall be eligible to such office who shall not have been admitted to practice law before the supreme court of this State for at least ten years. The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for a term of eight years.

NIELSEN: That means then that we vote "aye" if we want the elective system?

CHAIRMAN: You vote "aye" if you want this amendment. You vote "no" if you do not wish the amendment. The Clerk will please call the roll.

APOLIONA: Mr. Chairman, will you clarify that again. An "aye" vote is for the amendment or "aye" vote is to table the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: No, the "aye" vote would be to accept the amendment. Therefore, if you want the amendment, you would vote "aye"; if you do not want the amendment, you would vote "no."

CLERK: Mr. Chairman, might I suggest that they use the mike so that we can hear when they vote.

CHAIRMAN: It's requested that when you cast your vote, you use your mike so that the Clerk can hear the vote. Will the Clerk please call the roll.

Ayes, 11. Noes, 50 (Anthony, Apoliona, Arashiro, Ashford, Bryan, Castro, Cockett, Corbett, Doi, Dowson, Fong, Gilliland, Hayes, Heen, Holroyde, Kage, Kawahara, Kawakami, Kellerman, King, Kometani, Lai, Larsen, Lee, Loper, Lyman, Mizuha, Noda, Ohrt, Okino, Phillips, Porteus, C. Rice, H. Rice, Richards, Roberts, Sakakihara, Serizawa, Shimamura, Silva, Smith, St. Sure, Tavares, A. Trask, White, Wirtz, Wist, Woolaway, Yamauchi, Crossley). Not voting, 2 (Kanemaru, Sakai).

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has failed.

ANTHONY: I move the previous question on the vote on Section 3 as reported on by the committee.

APOLIONA: I second it.

FONG: I have an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: I have the motion to -- for the previous question was asked on the original motion. I recognized the second. We'll have to take a vote on the previous question unless the gentleman yields.

ANTHONY: I'll withdraw if there is an amendment to be offered. I withdraw, Mr. Chairman.

APOLIONA: Likewise.

CHAIRMAN: It's been withdrawn. You are recognized, Delegate Fong.

FONG: Here is the amendment. Will you read that, Miss Clerk?

CLERK:

Section 3. The chief justice shall be elected by the qualified voters of the state on a nonpartisan designation at a regular election in an odd-numbered year in which a governor is not elected. He shall hold office for a term of eight years beginning on the first day of January next following his election.

The associate justices of the Supreme Court and the judges of the circuit court shall be appointed by the chief justice by and with the consent of the Senate. No nomination to such office shall be sent to the Senate until after ten days' public notice by the governor. No person shall be eligible to such office who shall not have been admitted to practice law before the supreme court of this State for at least ten years.

The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for initial terms of six years and upon reappointment shall hold office for a term of twelve years.

FONG: I move for the adoption of the amendment.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this amendment be adopted in Section 3.

C. RICE: Now that the amendment is in, I move the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again at 1:30.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to that motion?

H. RICE: Second.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. So ordered.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole please come to order. When we rose to report progress at 12:00, we had before us a new amendment which had been introduced by Delegate Fong and seconded by Delegate James Trask. This is an amendment to Section 3, Committee Proposal No. 7. Delegate Fong.

FONG: This amendment reads as follows:

Section 3. The chief justice shall be elected by the qualified voters of the state on a nonpartisan designation at a regular election in an odd-numbered year in which a governor is not elected. He shall hold office for a term of eight years beginning on the first day of January next following his election.

The associate justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit court shall be appointed by the chief justice by and with the consent of the Senate. No nomination to such office shall be sent to the Senate until after ten days' public notice by the governor. No person shall be eligible to such office who shall not have been admitted to practice law before the supreme court of this state for at least ten years.

The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for initial terms of six years and upon reappointment shall hold office for a term of twelve years.

This section differs from Section 3 of the proposal which was submitted by the committee to this extent, that instead of having the governor appoint the associate justices and the chief justices, this proposal intends to make the chief justice run for office, and after the chief justice is elected to office, then the chief justice shall select his associate justices and he shall select the circuit court judges, and these will be in turn confirmed by the Senate. I am merely substituting here the chief justice for the governor.

The reason for having the chief justice run for office is due to the fact that traditionally we have had separation of powers. At the present time -- this proposal, may I say, is a half-way measure. It is a proposal in which we keep the circuit court judges away from the people who they are going to pass judgment upon. The circuit court judges will not be elected by the people, and I believe that they should not be elected by the people , because they will have to pass judgment on the people and they are too close to the people. The only man to be elected here is the chief justice and he's far removed from the people.

At the present time, we have three branches of government. The governor is appointed by the President of the United States, he's confirmed by the Senate of the United States, he is separate and distinct from the judiciary, and he is separate and distinct from the legislature. The judges of our courts are appointed by the President of the United States, and they are confirmed by the Senate of the United States; therefore, they are distinct and separate from the executive branch as well as the legislative branch. The legislature is elected by the people. The work of the legislature is reviewable by the Congress of the United States and by the President of the United States. Therefore, at the present time, we have a complete separation of powers, that is, a complete -- a separate judiciary, a separate executive branch, and a separate judicial branch.

Let us see what we are trying to do when we say: "When we become a State, we will have the governor appoint the judges and let the Senate of the state legislature confirm the appointments." Section 3, as proposed by the committee says this, that the governor will appoint the justices of the supreme court and the judges of the supreme court, and a Senate of the state legislature will confirm the appointments. We will be destroying the present complete separation of powers of the three branches of our government. We are saying to our judiciary, "You are subservient to the governor, the executive branch of our government. Being under the thumb of the governor, we want to shove you down further, and instead of only being subservient to the governor, we tell you that you are subservient to the legislature." It is the intention of those who voted or who will vote -- who voted for the majority report to have Section 3 as it stands, to subserve the third branch of our government to the whims and machinations of politicians, that is, men who will be elected to the Senate, men who are elected by partisan politics.

You will note that this amendment eliminates partisan politics. It eliminates the fact that a man has to run on the Republican ticket or on a Democratic ticket or on a nonpartisan ticket. He runs in an odd year, aside from the year when the governor is not running, and he is running on a nonpartisan ticket.

And I'd like to say, ladies and gentlemen, and I say it with a great deal of emphasis, that you are reducing that third branch of our government, which has the dignity of being a branch of government, to a commission; you are reducing it to the level of the Liquor Commission; you are reducing it to the level of the Utilities Commission. The reason is the governor appoints members of the Liquor Commission, the governor appoints members of the Utility Commission, and the members of the Utilities Commission and the Liquor Commission are confirmed by the Senate. Now when you say that the governor will appoint the chief justice and appoint the associate justices and appoint the judges of the supreme [sic] court, you are saying that the governor of the Territory will do the same thing here as he is doing with the members of the Liquor Commission and members of the Utilities Commission who must be confirmed by the Senate. The commissions, the Welfare Department, the Police Commission, the Utilities Commission, are mere functionaries of the executive department. They are just the extension of the executive powers.

Now in saying that the governor will have the power to appoint the judges of your supreme court and the judges of your circuit court and to have them confirmed by the Senate, you are in other words saying that we are extending the executive functions to the judiciary.

After subserving your judicial branch of government to the legislative and the executive powers, you do not even give it the dignity of some of the other elective offices of this city. The judiciary, if elected by -- if appointed by the governor and confirmed by the Senate, does not even have the dignity of the city and county attorney's office, of the county attorney's office of the County of Maui, the County of Kauai, or the County of Hawaii, which officers are elected by the people and are independent of the other branches of government. You are not giving to your judiciary that independence which that branch of government deserves. In the City and County of Honolulu, we elect the sheriff. The sheriff exercises his powers free and independent of the board of supervisors. In the City and County of Honolulu, we elect the clerk, and he is free and independent of the board of supervisors. In the City and County of Honolulu, we elect the auditor, and we elect the City and County treasurer, and in the outside islands, we elect the city and county -- the county attorneys who are all independent of the executive. Are we going to reduce this third branch of our government below the dignity of a city and county attorney's office, below the dignity of a sheriff's office, below the dignity of a clerk's office? I am not willing to reduce it to that subservient position.

Now, let us see what is the philosophy back of the appointive idea. What is the impelling reason that make delegates vote for the appointive system when 36 of the 48 states elect their judges? Let me quote the words of the distinguished member of our delegation here, Delegate Garner Anthony, in replying to the question as to why -- what is the argument against an appointive judiciary. This is read from Delegate Anthony's paper to the Social Science Club on "The Judiciary," by J. Garner Anthony.

"What are the criticisms against an appointive system? The stock argument against an appointive judiciary is that it deprives the people of the right to choose judges. The answer, however, is that in selecting a person for the bench, the judgment of the electorate is not apt to be good."

Let me rephrase it and strip it, strip that of all of its verbiage. It comes down to this: we do not trust the people, we do not trust the voters, we have no faith in the people, we have no confidence in the voters. Isn't that the basic philosophy back of all of those who vote for the appointive system? Isn't this the philosophy? The people are fools, they are apt to vote for fools, they usually exercise very bad judgment, and fools get into office. Isn't that the basic philosophy? As a corollary to that philosophical thought: we who are the chosen few, we who belong in the upper strata of society, we who call ourselves intelligentsia, we know how to vote. You on the other side of the street do not know how to vote.

CHAIRMAN: If the speaker will suspend a moment, I'd like to remind him he has just a little over one minute left.

FONG: May I ask the indulgence of the delegates here to give me a little more time?

SAKAKIHARA: I move that we suspend the rules.

ANTHONY: I think that the speaker should have unanimous consent to express his views.

DOI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the speaker have unanimous consent to express his views. All those in favor say "aye." Any opposed?

FONG: Thank you.

In the corollary to that philosophical thought that if the vote was given to us alone, that probably we'll have an elective system, but it's just too bad that that vote is insured to the other man also. If only I and mine can exercise that inherent right to vote, then it's all right for us to vote; but as long as there are many on the other side and probably, probably, they are all voters, I think we should not give them the right to vote. If I and my class, whether it be the social group, the economic group, the acquired-learning group, exercise the right of ballot and no one else, then it is all right for us to elect the judges, but as long as it's going to be given to the other person, I don't think that we will give it to him.

I have talked to a few of you about this appointive system and elective system. Some of you who have stated that you have gone on the stump and advocated the appointive system, and to those of you who have stated that to me, I'd like to say I would like to use the same argument advanced by Delegate Garner Anthony this morning, that you are here to listen to the arguments made pro and con and then to vote accordingly. Some of you told me that you have been approached by members who have advocated the appointive system and you have promised them that you will vote for the appointive system. Are you willing to go back to your electorate and tell them and look them straight in the eye and say, "John, I would have voted for the election of judges if the other man hadn't seen me first and I had promised him." Regardless of what kind of argument you may give him, even if Delegate Anthony were to phrase it for you, you will not be able to convince him that you voted against the election of judges because you thought that he was not able to exercise his judgment.

Can you go back to your electorate and look him straight in the eye and say, "John, I would have voted for the election of judges if I believed you knew how to vote, but knowing that you don't know how to vote, that you are a fool when you vote, that you don't exercise good judgment and discretion when you vote, I have in your interest taken away that inherent right from you to vote." Are you willing to go back to your electorate and tell them that?

Are you willing to tell John, "John, in the Bill of Rights we start off and say that all men are by nature free and equal, and have certain inalienable rights. John, that is all poppycock. That is all rot. We don't mean what we say. We only want to put it down so it sounds good, so that the men in Congress after they read it probably will give us statehood. We don't mean that all men have inherent rights and that they are by nature free and equal in their inherent rights."

I'd like to say that I am casting my vote here because I believe in the people. I believe that they know how to vote. Delegate Anthony said yesterday, "We will be going backwards if we elect our judges." I would say if we appoint our judges, we will be going backwards. We might as well fold up shop today just because if we elect our officials we are going backwards. Our governor is appointed. If we become a state, we must elect our governor, and he will be the head of a billion dollar corporation, and he will be the head of 500,000 people. Are we going backwards if we vote for the chief executive?

I would like to say that the idea advanced that we are going backwards is quite reactionary. Usually on a political stump, the Republicans are being accused of being reactionary, that they are throwing stumbling blocks in the way of the inherent right of the people to stop the right -- to stop the people from exercising what is inherently theirs. We all abhor the welfare state. We feel that we shouldn't go into socialism, but this is not the way to stop it. We don't erect stumbling blocks along the road to stop this welfare state, this hand-out state. We do it by education, by co-operation, by electing little men to office, men who are willing to grant the inherent rights to those that have been guaranteed those rights, and men who believe in free enterprise, who believe in initiative. That is the only way we can sell them the idea that a welfare state is not the best state for them.

Delegate Anthony stated yesterday that if you had an appendix operation you would not have a popular election over it. I say to you, if you had an appendix operation, you would go to a doctor, a doctor who has passed the medical examinations, who has come from a credited school, who has gone into internship, who has gone into the Queen's hospital where they have supervised him, and after supervising him, they tell him that he has the right to operate. And I say to you that if you went to a doctor who had a degree that your appendectomy will be all right.

So it is with the lawyers. To become a judge, he must first become a lawyer; to become a lawyer, he must first go through 19 years of schooling, he must go to an accredited class A law school before he is allowed to take the bar examination. After you finish 19 years of schooling, and after you finish the bar examination, then you would practice ten years according to this amendment before you will be eligible to the bench. Isn't that sufficient safeguard for the judiciary?

Now let us look at the courts. There has been a lot of talk about corrupting the judiciary, about bias of the judiciary, about a judiciary leaning towards one litigant as against the other. Our courtwork is divided in the main into criminal law, cases in common law including land court matters, cases in equity, cases in probate, cases in divorce, cases in guardianship and adoption. The judge of the criminal court is bound by the decision of the jury, a jury composed of 12 laymen, a jury selected from the resident voters of the city. He is bound by law, after the jury comes into court and finds a man guilty, to give him a fine, give him probation, and if it's a felony, he has to give him the limit. Now what discretion, what bias can a judge show in a case like this? In common law cases and in most of the controversial points in land court, you can get a trial by jury of laymen. In probate, in the great bulk of cases in divorces, in guardianship and adoption, the trial is ex-parte, that is, there is no opposing counsel, there is nobody on the other side, you present your case to the court.

The only place that I can see where there can be some showing of bias is in the equity court where the judge sits there as judge and jury, and that can be easily changed by the legislature passing a bill to provide for jury trials in equity cases.

You leave the judgment of whether a man is guilty of murder, whether he is guilty of rape—and those cases carry capital punishment—to the decision of 12 laymen. Whether he is guilty or not, the layman goes out and finds him as to whether he is guilty or not. The judge has nothing to say in the matter. If the jury goes out and finds him guilty of murder, they judge murder in the first degree, any judge will not give him a fine, any judge will not give him probation, they'll send him to the gallows. So what is all this talk about the judge being biased?

I would like to state that my amendment is not as abhorrent as some of you would like to make it seem. Some of you abhor the idea that we elect our judges. You seem to like the word "appoint," "appoint the judges." Now there are all kinds of ways of appointing your judges and there are all kinds ways of electing your judges. The proposal here which I have presented is a proposal in which you only -- you elect the chief justice, he will in turn appoint the associate justices to be confirmed by members of the Senate. You will note that I have not differed very much from the report of the majority here. I have just substituted the chief justice for the governor.

The idea came to me when I was reading the Model State Constitution. The Model State Constitution was first written in 1921, and those that have participated in the writing of the Model State Constitution are men of great judicial learning, and this is what the Model State Constitution says. The Model State Constitution is revised from time to time and the last revision was in 1948. Section 602 of the Model State Constitution reads as follows: "Selection of judges, justices, and judges. The chief justice shall be elected by the qualified voters of the state at a regular election in an odd-numbered year, in which a governor is not elected. He shall hold office for a term of eight years, beginning on the first day of December, next following his election." My amendment almost in total reflects the thought of this Model State Constitution.

The Model State Constitution, however, goes further in which it provides for the selection of the other appointees according to the judicial council system. I have not taken that up because the majority report seems to give a lot of credit to the confirmation power of the Senate.

In allowing the people to vote for the chief justice, we are giving to them what is inherently theirs. We are telling the people, "This is your kuleana. You have a right to exercise your opinion as to who the members of your judiciary will be."

The governor, if he appoints the members of the judiciary, will be given the power over the judiciary as well as power over all the other appointees. In making the chief justice run for office, we will make one man and one man alone responsible to the people. He will be responsible for the good administration of justice. If the administration of justice is bad under an appointive system by the governor, we may not want to throw the governor out because he may be a good executive in all the other functions of government. If, under an election system, if the administration of justice is bad, we can go after the chief justice.

I have in this amendment preserved the security of tenure, only one man runs for office, and he runs for eight years. He appoints his associates to run for six years according to the report of the majority committee.

Now another statement has been made by Mr. Anthony that lawyers loathe to run for office. Running for office is very distasteful to lawyers. As I look around here, and as I talk to the laymen on the street, many of them feel that we got too many lawyers running for office, and I doubt if we will deter the lawyers running for office if we only have one man running for office.

I say to you, delegates, that you should give back to the people what rightfully belongs to them; and if you do, you can go back to them and look John Citizen square in the eye and say, "I trust you, I have faith in you, I have confidence in you, and I know you will give us a good judiciary."

Thank you.

FUKUSHIMA: Perhaps if I yielded yesterday to Delegate Fong, the result this morning may have been different after the eloquent speech which he has just made for the elective system. At this point, perhaps it may be proper that I should move for a reconsideration of the vote taken this morning, but I will not because I have been in my propounding -- advocating the elective system, I was defeated overwhelmingly. I have no fear in going back to my electorate and saying to the people, "John, I did a good job for you as far as the judiciary was concerned."

I'd like to be consistent, however, this afternoon in casting my vote when the vote is taken. As I read Proposal No. 3, the amendment thereto, "The chief justice shall be elected by the qualified voters of the state on a nonpartisan designation at a regular election," I'm for that thing and for all election as I've pointed out earlier this morning and late yesterday afternoon, but this amendment goes one step further. It provides for the appointment of the associate justices and the circuit judges by the chief justice. Certainly I believe in the complete separation of the three branches of government, but this proposal does not show that. You have the legislature coming into the picture again by a confirmation of the Senate, which is certainly not a complete separation of the three branches of government.

That's only one of the yields of this amendment. If we read further, between the lines, what does it indicate? Your chief justice who selects the associate justice will somehow prevail his judicial thinking among the associate justices which he will select. Coming down to the circuit judges, the same thing will hold true again, and we must always bear in mind the circuit judges are those that try the facts in many cases when the jury is not called in, and his decision, if appealed, will go to the supreme court, of which the chief justice is the appointee of the circuit judge -- appointer of the circuit judge. That certainly weakens the judiciary.

All I'm advocating here is for a strong judiciary, and in my opinion, I still feel that the elective system is the best, but in the considered opinion of all of the delegates here, some 50 delegates, they feel that the appointive system will give a strong judiciary. Now in complying with that thought, I am now speaking definitely in opposition to this amendment, because this is a worse proposal than the one that I introduced yesterday.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN: Before I recognize Delegate Heen—I will recognize you, Delegate Heen, as the next speaker—I'd like to point out that a number of the delegates before I took the Chair asked me to please state that they had plane reservations to catch this afternoon, later on this afternoon, inasmuch as this will be a long week-end for some of them and reservations are very difficult to get. So if that will be kept in mind a little later on, it will be appreciated by those. I'm not saying that anyone is going to cut off debate or anything like that, but they wish -- made their wishes known earlier.

MAU: On this point that you raised. May I ask --

CHAIRMAN: What is the point, Delegate Mau?

MAU: You were saying, Mr. Chairman, that some of the delegates have to catch a plane.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

MAU: Well, I'm wondering when we are going to get this work for the Convention done. It's a terrifically long week-end, I know that --

CHAIRMAN: Well, I simply stated it as a matter of information; that's all that I stated, as a matter of information and consideration and that is all. We have not taken any action on it, and so, Delegate Heen, if you'll continue, please.

HEEN: The proponent of this amendment is not consistent in his argument. When I go back to my constituents and I face John Voter, I say to him, "I had great faith and confidence in you to elect us a chief justice, but when it came to the associate justices and the judges of the circuit court, I didn't trust you, because you don't know how to vote for an associate justice or a judge of a circuit court. Therefore I didn't give you that right, and I placed that right in the hands of the chief justice." Where does the consistency come in on this line of argument? So, gentlemen, I believe that we still have -- should have an appointive system as provided for in Section 3.

ASHFORD: I was one of the few delegates who did not speak this morning. I would like to say that in my opinion there is a great deal to be said for an elective judiciary, and it has been admirably said, but I think there is absolutely nothing to be said for the election of a chief justice who shall appoint the other members of the bench. Is anyone so naive as to believe that the man running for chief justice will not promise every single appointment when he runs?

RICHARDS: I was really surprised and shocked at the implications of my worthy colleague from the fifth district in his remarks that a procedure established by the Constitution of the United States in its appointment of its chief jus -- its Supreme Court was a matter of class legislation. We have already adopted the Constitution of the United States as part of this Constitution, and that implication I feel is abhorrent.

Regarding some of the other remarks of the proponent, when a body is empowered, as has been already accepted by this Convention temporarily passing Section 10 of this proposal or article, where they may set up their own rules without appeal to anybody, and the chief justice may appoint the associate justices who set up those rules, where do we have anything except a very dictatorial court? I still feel that the procedure established in the Constitution of the United States of having the elected President appoint the Supreme Court and having it confirmed by the Senate is definitely proper.

ANTHONY: First, I should like to address myself to the doctrine of the separation of powers. That has been misstated this afternoon and was misstated this morning. The doctrine of the separation of powers is simply this: that we under the American system have three co-ordinate branches of government, co-equal in their respective spheres. Now the application of that doctrine comes after a judge ascends the bench, and after a judge ascends the bench, he is not responsive or responsible to the executive or anybody else. He is responsive and responsible only to his own conscience to do justice according to law. In other words, once you get a judge on the bench, then the doctrine of separation of powers operates.

Now, Mr. Fong has made the statement, which has the superficiality of validity, that if the people elect the judges, they will select good judges, and that comes down to this. In the old Dialogues of Plato, the question was raised, why not any man being a judge, any good man, whether he is learned in the law or not? The answer to that is simply this, that a person does not become a good judge simply because he is a good man any more than a person will become a good judge simply because he is a popular candidate. He has got to possess the qualifications of the judiciary before he is able to render truly the office to which he has been appointed.

I would like to read from one of the authorities, which apparently Mr. Fukushima was absent when it was read in committee, and that is by -- in the latest work on this subject, Minimum Standards of Judicial Administration. "The system of direct election of judges is an unhappy legacy from the popular revolt of a century ago often called the Jacksonian Revolution. Judges were subjected to another and more fatal line of reasoning. If all men are equal, all lawyers, being men, are equal; so, one lawyer was as much entitled to be a judge as another if the public so willed."

Now the vice of the whole thing is that you will never get qualified men to run for office. That is the vice of the whole thing, and this proposal is even more iniquitous than the one that was voted down this morning, in my judgment, because this would make a political machine in the chief justice, a political machine which would have much more ramifications than the direct election, popular election of judges.

The statement has also been made that this system is an improvement on that which was voted down this morning, and the implication is that it's predicated on the English system. The delegates, if they have examined the recommendations of the Statehood Commission, will see that I, as one of the members of that sub-committee of the Statehood Commission, recommended a consideration of the English system. But let me assure you, ladies and gentlemen of the Convention, that the English system does not provide for the election of anybody. The Lord Chancellor in England is appointed by the cabinet, and the Lord Chancellor in turn appoints the remainder of the judges during good behavior, so this is not the English system at all.

Now when the statement is made that this is grounds for political machinations between the executive and the Senate, I would like to read from another historic document, and I'm reading from the Federalist Papers, number 77. "And as there would be a necessity for submitting each nomination to the judgment of an entire branch of the legislature, the circumstances attending an appointment, from the mode of conducting it, would naturally become matters of notoriety; and the public would be at no loss to determine what part had been performed by the different actors. The blame of a bad nomination would fall upon the President singly and absolutely. The censure of rejecting a good one would lie entirely at the door of the Senate; aggravated by the consideration of their having counteracted the good intentions of the Executive. If an ill appointment should be made, the Executive for nominating, and the Senate for approving, would participate, though in different degree, in the opprobrium and the disgrace."

I say, ladies and gentlemen of the Convention, that the system that has been proposed by this amendment is a worse system than that which was voted down this morning. I believe this proposed amendment should be voted down by the Convention.

FUKUSHIMA: I rise to a point of personal privilege.

CHAIRMAN: State the point of personal privilege, please.

FUKUSHIMA: I'd like to correct the delegate from the fourth district. I was physically present at least at all of the meetings that he had, and I also believe that I was mentally present, and no such article was read.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, if the delegate who last spoke will examine the minutes, he will find out that the very book that I've read from was before the committee and read to -- in the committee meeting.

SMITH: I wish I had the ability of some individuals -- that some individuals have of being so eloquent in their speech I have noticed one thing that predominated in this morning's session and is predominating this afternoon's session is the same approach, same attack that is being carried on, and that is, do you, each delegate, are you willing to go back to John the voter and look him square in the eye, and ask him if what he thinks, because I did not vote for an elective -- electing judges, that you could possible look him straight in the eye.

Now it is amazing that individuals can take this approach and use it as a battle or an argument. I took the opportunity in going back and asking my different voters, not only on the appointment of judges and election of judges but initiative and referendum and recall, and you'd be surprised that if some of you will go and ask the average person, you will find that they say, "Look, we're not so dumb. We voted to get you in. We are not the only persons voting, and there are a lot of others who can't vote. You are supposed to represent everybody as a whole, and if your opinion, whether you think right now it should be elective or whether it should be appointive, changes for the good of the whole, not on a policy of politics or personal reasons, but a policy of running a good government, that is entirely up to you."

Now I would like to state that in answering John, if I were thinking of myself and not thinking of politics, would I have voted for elective judges and why didn't I? I would say, "But you know that in all votes of the people, there are many, many more who aren't able to vote, and considering the people as a whole, it is impossible for me not to consider the government of, for, and by the people as a whole. If the opponents of our democracy could get into our judiciary system, they would be at the very base of our democracy. Through electing judges, they have that much more opportunity."

Now the confirmation power of the Senate has pretty well been proven throughout the years. We have not been tested as far as being governed by an elected governor, but we have been -- pretty well been -- by tradition, the appointive system in Hawaii has proven out pretty well. I can't help but feel that there are some good points to electing judges that have been brought up, but I dare not go ahead and throw away something which we haven't really given a fair trial in the minds of the people, because I know that it is harder, very, very -- pardon me, it's very easy to take away, but it's very, very hard to give back.

PHILLIPS: I might say that I believe, ever since I gave the judiciary any thought at all, that I've been for the appointment of judges. I feel very much, as I know that a great many of us do, that the election of judges with their long periods of training and the great group of people who are not familiar with the technicalities involved in the judiciary would by their very nature not be as capable of selecting a judge that would serve the people in the same manner that they would be capable of selecting a legislature -- a legislator or an executive.

Just now there has come to my desk for my signature, a committee report from the Miscellaneous Matters which reads in part, and I feel confident that this will get into our Constitution in regards to the distribution of powers. "Section 1. It is traditional and basic that the three branches of government have separate powers." Well I'm sure that everybody -- I won't bore you with going on because it would be pretty much the same type thing that we've done before, but it boils down to this, that we will have in another part of our Constitution that very basic doctrine which as it states is traditional. Since it's traditional, I cannot understand why the judges themselves and the jurors will come and ask that their particular profession will be tampered with, will be handled by an individual who himself is the chief of a political machine and permits him to appoint them to the bench.

The judiciary is the third major branch of government, and to my knowledge, the chief executive is to carry out the word and letter of the law as laid down by the legislature. Now, in doing so, he is required to delegate down through appointment of certain administrative offices. His power of appointment, I believe should be confined to those administrative offices, and not -- should not necessarily be carried over into this great branch of government. He should not be permitted to disturb and violate as I can -- as it seems plain to me, this traditional doctrine of the separation of powers. As I already said, it does prove and it does show that the chief executive is the chief of a political machine, therefore he is the essence of politics. Whether they let the electorate handle it or not, it wouldn't make much difference, because he is more powerful than all the electorate to select on the basis of politics rather than on the basis of the ability and merit of the judiciary.

I might say that due to this, and many others, I would like to -- I would not go along, though, with the delegate from the fifth district to the extent that he would permit the chief executive, after having been elected, he would permit the chief executive to -- I mean the chief justice to appoint and have the power of appointment. Therefore, I would like and wonder if he would consider an amendment to his motion that would read in the second paragraph, the third line which says -- from—the word is split there—"justice," and then inserted in there -- I will read the whole second paragraph. "The associate justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit court shall be appointed by the chief justice," and then I would have inserted in there, "from a list of three nominees submitted from a"—and then I put this in because of no better place to put it right now, but that could be worked out later—"a judicial commission composed of laymen and judges," and if necessary "and with the consent of the Senate," and then continue on.

I believe that this would solve the possibility of the chief justice himself having -- getting tangled up with any kind of politics. I believe that there is sufficient evidence available to prove that this system would work much better than to leave this in the hands of one man, that it should go down -- first, for the associate justices, should submit the three names, and among them he would then select one of those.

If it pleases the Convention, I would like to make that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

TAVARES: I have many pages of notes, but I will not read them all, but I think there are some statements that have been made here about our courts that cannot go unchallenged. If any attorney who has the low idea of the importance and powers and duties of our courts that was given by the first speaker, certainly has no idea of what a judiciary should be. In the first place, any judge, as we all know, even the layman knows it, has a right to make rulings on evidence, which can mean the difference between reversal and affirmation in the supreme court. He has the right to set aside a verdict, a very tremendous, vital right. He has the right in equity cases to make decisions affecting any amount of properties. He has the right to rule on questions of law of the deepest significance, and remember, the jury must accept from the judge what the law is. Now if that is a perfunctory function, I'd like to know what we go to law school for.

Now, the first speaker mentioned the Model Constitution. Let me read from this great authority that he relies upon. In the first place, he has so changed the child of the Model Constitution that I don't think it would recognize its parents. On page 24, we find this statement by the proponents of the Model Constitution. "Having the chief justice, elected by the people, appoint the other judges after nomination by a judicial council"—which he hasn't put in, and which this assembly has voted down—"and having them subject to popular recall"—which we haven't adopted—"makes the judicial department as independent as can be of the other branches"—and this is the crucial payoff—"at the same time that it rejects the extremely questionable system of direct election of all judges." "Extremely questionable system of direct election of all judges."

Now, this reminds me of the story entitled, "Go easy on Uncle Ben." There was a man who got wealthy, we'll call him Jones, Bill Jones, and he wanted to work out a family tree, and so he hired one of these professional researchers, but he said, "Now, go easy on Uncle Ben," because you see, Uncle Ben had been electrocuted for murder. So when it came back, this is what it said, after telling about all the nice things of all the other members of the family, it said, "Uncle Ben occupied the chair on electricity in one of our large state institutions."

Now, the point of this is this, no matter how you dress it up, it's still murder. If election of all the judges is bad, very bad, I don't see how the election of one judge can be any better.

ROBERTS: I haven't spoken to the question today. I'd like to make one or two general observations, and then I'd like to indicate how I intend voting. I'd like to suggest that perhaps it might be a good idea that we get around to voting on the question. I'm not moving the previous question, Mr. Silva.

I think that there is a desire on the part of the entire Convention to get a strong judiciary, to get good, sound, strong, and independent judges. I think the question raised basically is how do you go about getting it? I agree with one of the speakers this morning that you cannot, either under the elective system or under the appointive system, completely remove the concept of politics. There's going to be politics in both systems. I think the basic question is how little can you get, and then how long a tenure can you give to the judges so that they can be independent and at the same time have some basic regard and understanding of the needs of the people when these cases come before them.

I do not believe that any judge examines and rules on a case in the abstract. He rules on specific facts, on circumstances, on the basis of the law. But there is a substantial amount of latitude in the decision of a judge which reflects his own thinking and his own environment, and it seems to me that that has a very definite bearing on the soundness and on the independence of the judges.

I have examined a lot of literature dealing with the subject, and there seems to be some agreement that neither system offers the best answer, that perhaps a combination of these systems gives us a little better approach to the problem. I, therefore, if I had a choice, would support a proposal similar to the Missouri Plan which combines, it seems to me, the best features of both systems. However, I am not being given the choice to vote on such a proposal. It was removed by the committee. It seems to me, therefore, that I have to get the next best choice. It seems to me on that basis, I would vote for the appointment of judges. If I am given the opportunity subsequently to amend, I will do so, Mr. Chairman.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? The question is on the amendment.

HEEN: I move the previous question.

WOOLAWAY: I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: Then the previous question's been moved and seconded. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

The question is on the amendment proposed by Delegate Fong.

DELEGATE: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: All those who would like roll call, please raise their hand. Sufficient number. All those voting in the affirmative would be voting for the amendment. Those voting in the negative will be voting against the amendment. The Clerk will please call the roll.

Ayes, 20. Noes, 37 (Anthony, Apoliona, Ashford, Bryan, Castro, Cockett, Corbett, Dowson, Fukushima, Hayes, Heen, Holroyde, Kage, Kawakami, Kellerman, Kometani, Larsen, Lee, Loper, Mizuha, Okino, Phillips, Porteus, C. Rice, H. Rice, Richards, Roberts, Serizawa, Silva, Smith, St. Sure, Tavares, White, Wirtz, Wist, Woolaway, Crossley). Not voting, 6. (Arashiro, Gilliland, Kanemaru, Sakai, A. Trask, King).

CHAIRMAN: The motion is lost.

ANTHONY: At this time I move the adoption of Section 3.

CHAIRMAN: The adoption of Section 3 has already been made. It's the section before it - -

ANTHONY: I then move the previous question.

APOLIONA: I second the motion for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question has been called for on a vote on Section 3 without amendment. All those in favor - -

SAKAKIHARA: I intended to offer an amendment to this section. Will the previous question shut me off?

CHAIRMAN: That would be correct. You would be unable to - - we'd have to vote on the motion. If you have an amendment to offer - -

SAKAKIHARA: Will the seconder withdraw his second? I have an amendment being printed.

APOLIONA: I withdraw my second.

CHAIRMAN: The second has been withdrawn, therefore, if you have an amendment to make to Section 3, would you offer it.

SAKAKIHARA: May I ask five minutes recess.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair ask if the amendment has been put on the Clerk's desk yet?

SAKAKIHARA: No. It's being typed out. I sent it to the Clerk's office to be typed. I want to have it in proper shape. I ask for five minutes recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

MIZUHA: I move that the committee rise and report progress, and beg leave to sit again on Tuesday morning at 9:30.

ASHFORD: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the committee rise, report progress, beg leave to sit again Tuesday at 9:00.

DELEGATE: I move to table the motion made by delegate from Kauai.

APOLIONA: I second the motion.

SILVA: Before that's put through, I think that some discourtesy has been shown the second of the previous question. He removed his second for the - - just for courtesy of Mr. Sakakihara. And all these other motions are not pertinent to the subject. It's not fair to the seconder of that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The question is, shall we table the motion to rise and report progress.

ANTHONY: In order to clear the parliamentary situation, I would suggest that the mover of the motion to table withdraw his motion to permit the delegate from Hilo to prepare his amendment.

MAU: Mr. Chairman, I don't think that would clear it up. If Delegate Mizuha from Kauai would withdraw his motion, I think then it would clear it.

MIZUHA: I shall be glad to withdraw my motion. I did not intend to kill the amendment offered by the delegate from Hawaii. However, I asked - - I think I did inform the chairman on behalf of myself and another fellow delegate from Kauai that we shall be leaving at 3:00, but would like to particpiate in the voting on Section 3, and inasmuch as we have given unanimous consent to a speaker on this floor to continue extension of debate here, and we have been rather generous with absent delegates while they did go to Washington, I believe on an important question like this, on the question of voting for the judicial - - on the type of the judiciary we shall have, that courtesy should be extended when asked by some delegates.

CHAIRMAN: Inasmuch as Delegate Mizuha has withdrawn the previous motion, the motion to table is no longer before us. There'll be a - - we now have the amendment before us. Therefore there is no need of a recess. The Chair would like to ask Delegate Sakakihara if, in offering this amendment, he intends to take considerable time.

SAKAKIHARA: I move that we agree to the amendment to Section 3.

PHILLIPS: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded the amendment to Section 3 be adopted.

SAKAKIHARA: The amendment reads as follows:

The chief justice and four associate justices shall be elected by the qualified voters of this state on a nonpartisan designation at a regular election in any odd-numbered year in which a governor is not elected. They shall hold office for a term of eight years, beginning on the first day of January following their election. No person shall be eligible to such office who shall not have been admitted to practice law before the supreme court of this state for at least ten years.

Judges of the circuit courts shall be appointed by the chief justice of the supreme court with the concurrence of two of the justices thereof, for terms of six years and until their successors are appointed and qualified. They shall have resided in this state for not less than three years immediately preceding their appointment, be qualified to vote and be licensed to practice law in all of the courts of this state. They shall be subject to removal for cause by the chief justice with the concurrence of two justices.

CHAIRMAN: It would seem to the Chair that this incorporates the two amendments that have been defeated. It incorporates in one section the first amendment that was offered, and in the second section, the second amendment.

SAKAKIHARA: If the Chair will recall, during my statement this morning, I proposed to offer an amendment, and this is the amendment I had in mind this morning to present to this Committee of the Whole at this afternoon session.

HEEN: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: The specified time that Delegate Mizuha had requested was 9:00 Tuesday morning. Is that agreeable to you, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: All right, I'll withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: Well, no, your motion will have to stand. The other motion was withdrawn. The only thing is that he had specified a time. I asked if you would please specify a time. Withdraw the motion altogether?

SAKAKIHARA: Would the motion made by Delegate Mizuha, would it now be in order?

CHAIRMAN: No, he has withdrawn that motion.

SAKAKIHARA: That will not preclude me or any delegate to make a similar motion, does it?

CHAIRMAN: Any delegate may make a similar motion.

SAKAKIHARA: In that case I make a motion at this time that the Committee of the Whole rise and report progress and beg leave to sit at 9:00 Tuesday morning.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

MIZUHA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. So carried.

JUNE 13, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole, please come to order.

When we rose on Friday to report progress and beg leave to sit again, we had before us an amendment to Section 3, Committee Proposal No. 7, introduced by Delegate Sakakihara. The Chair stated at that time that he felt the amendment might not be in order inasmuch as the first section dealt with an amendment previously voted down that had been introduced by Delegate Fukushima, and the second section is one covered at least in part by Delegate Fong. However, there is a slight variation and it's the feeling of the Chair that perhaps the amendment itself should be debated and the wishes of the Convention followed.

ANTHONY: I think that's a correct ruling of the Chair. The statement is from the Judiciary Committee, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you for the vote of confidence. The Chair will recognize Delegate Sakakihara if he wishes to speak on his motion.

SAKAKIHARA: I submitted the amendment to Section 3 of Committee Proposal No. 7 feeling very strongly as I do, believing in the separation of our government into three branches. I'm opposed to making the judiciary subservient to the executive department and the legislative branch of our government. Under the terms of Section 3 of Committee Proposal No. 7, you will precisely do that, vesting the power of appointment of the judiciary to the governor of the Territory and that appointment is subject to the confirmation of the Senate of the State of Hawaii.

The judiciary is a body which is separate, distinct and apart from the executive and legislative branch of the government, and as a branch of the government should be solely independent and made answerable to the people of the State of Hawaii, not to be made answerable to the executive branch of the government or to the legislative branch of the government. I submitted the amendment so that the people of the State of Hawaii may by their ballot exercise their franchise and say who shall head the judiciary branch of our government.

You allow under Section 3 the appointments, and under the terms of our supposed Bill of Rights and the report of the Committee on Executive Powers and Functions that the governor of the Territory of Hawaii shall be elected by the people of this state, and one of the recommendations to be filed by the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions that the people of this state - - qualified voters of the State of Hawaii, shall elect the legislature. But when it comes to the judiciary branch of our government, by the precise language contained in Section 3 of Proposal No. 7, you say to the people of the State of Hawaii, "You are incompetent, you are not fit to select your judiciary branch of the government."

Under the terms of the amendment the qualified voters of this state will say at the polls by their respective ballots who shall be the chief justice of the supreme court, who shall be the four associate judtices of the supreme court. And in order to divorce politics – if any politics is to be connected as pointed out by the chairman of the Judiciary Committee – the courts which come in direct contact with the public will be appointed by the chief justice with the concurrence of two associate justices of the supreme court under the terms of the amendment, thereby divorcing the judiciary from the executive and the legislative branch of our government.

My amendment differs from that one offered by the delegate from the fifth district, the honorable Speaker Fong. His amendment would have required the election of a chief justice, who will name his judges with the confirmation of the Senate. I am divorcing entirely the judiciary from the executive and the legislative branch of the government.

I am sure the people of the State of Hawaii will be competent, will be very careful, in the selection of their branch of government, whether it be the judiciary, the executive or the legislative, and it has been proven by some 34 states in the Union that such is the case. They still elect their judges. I'm sure the people of the State of Hawaii will be men and women who do understand their neighbors, who do understand their people, who do understand the judges and the character of the lawyers who will offer themselves as chief justice or associate justices of the supreme court of this State.

I'm sure it is not necessary for these candidates running for chief justice or associate justices to campaign on partisan politics. They could carry on a dignified campaign offering themselves to the offices of the supreme court because they are men and women who would have been tried in the eyes of the public, their standing in the community, their record as lawyers speaks for itself. The finest example is the intelligence and the ability of the people of the fourth district who have demonstrated in the February and March elections for delegate to this Constitutional Convention. They went out and selected the best available candidates, men of integrity, men who have been tried as competent lawyers and judges, as delegates to the Constitutional Convention from the fourth district.

I submit, Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee of the Whole, that it is the American way and the democratic way to allow the people, free-thinking American people, to go to the polls and exercise their franchise to the fullest extent and by their ballots express as to who shall be elected as chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court of the State of Hawaii, to entrust the interpretation of the laws of the State of Hawaii, to construe the Constitution of the State of Hawaii and of the United States of America. I'm sure these people will by their ballots say to the candidates aspiring for these offices that you are the men and women in whom we repose our confidence and entrust the destinies of our supreme court.

I respectfully submit that the amendment is a good one. It limits the term of office to eight years for the supreme court justices, long enough so that the supreme court justices will not play politics. They are far removed from the public, only cases of appeal nature will go to the supreme court. The term of office for the circuit court justices are made long, six year terms. They will be removed from politics because they will be made answerable to the supreme court of the State of Hawaii in their conduct, in their integrity, and enlightened public opinion will not allow them to serve as judges of the circuit courts without bringing the matter before the attention of the appointing officer, the chief justice of the supreme court.

I submit that the amendment deserves the serious consideration of this committee. I say to you with all sincerity that if the people of the State of Hawaii could be entrusted with election of the governor of the State of Hawaii, who is vested with extra-ordinary power, far more than those vested presently to governors of various states of the Union, then I can say truthfully to every voter of this territory that the people could be trusted in the exercise of their ballots and election of the supreme court justices of the State of Hawaii, and I ask you delegates to support the amendment.

A. TRASK: Will the delegate yield to a question?

CHAIRMAN: The question was, will the delegate yield to a question? Will Delegate Sakakihara answer a question?

SAKAKIHARA: I'll be glad to, Mr. Chairman.

A. TRASK: The chief justice and the four associate justices will naturally be obliged to campaign over the islands of the group. Now, how much do you estimate it would cost the chief justice and the four associate justices to campaign for an election?

SAKAKIHARA: I believe that the campaign expenses could be kept to a minimum, compared to that of the campaign expenses heretofore involved by the delegate to Congress—I'm serious about it, it's not a laughing matter—because the campaign will be carried on at a high level. I'm sure that the campaign for the office of the supreme court justice differs from that of the office of the governor or the legislature. I believe there will be candidates, men and women of high integrity and character, that they will not reduce themselves to the level of ordinary political campaigns as ordinary politicians do.

A. TRASK: We're not getting into the merits of whether or not - -

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will be glad to recognize you, Delegate Trask.

A. TRASK: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Without going into the merits about the level, high or low, of politics and politicians, would the delegate give an estimate in money, how much it would cost the individual justice, because I might be interested in running for this office, and I would like to know in dollars how much it is.

SAKAKIHARA: Your guess is as good as mine.

CHAIRMAN: Will you please keep order.

BRYAN: I'd like to point out, while the Chair rules this amendment is in order and covers a slightly different subject than the amendments that were proposed when the subject came up before, that the proposer has by his own words brought this back to the same thing we talked about Friday, that we voted on.

TAVARES: I'll be very brief. I'm getting a little tired about this argument about not trusting the people. The very requirement that we have to have a written constitution in this country is a requirement which shows that we don't trust the people's hasty actions. If we can trust the people in every respect, all the time, then why do we even need to have a written constitution. I say that the very existence of a written constitution presupposes a lack of confidence in the people's actions which may be hasty at some times.

Secondly, why do we have to have a Bill of Rights. The very people here who are most vociferously in favor of arguing for trusting the people are the ones just as strong in favor of a strong Bill of Rights. Now, what does the Bill of Rights mean? It means that it must protect the minority because we don't trust the majority. Therefore, I submit that the argument that in arguing for an appointive system we don't trust the people, is just as unsound or just as sound as it would be against the Bill of Rights, and I think it ought to be dropped.

There are some things in which we know that the people are not able at the time to act always with full knowledge and full understanding of the situation. And that is the reason why, among other things, we require and we ask that judges be appointed.

There is one more thing, and that is, that when we were in committee, at the request of the proponent of this measure, we held up a vote on the elective and appointive system so he could hear from the bar of Hilo. He was very much concerned about hearing from it. The bar of Hilo voted ten to one for appointive judges but he didn't change his mind.

FUKUSHIMA: As I have already said, all I'm interested in is a strong judiciary. I feel, still feel, that the election of judges is it. In fact, I argued it so strenuously as perhaps to incur the wrath of our learned chairman of the Judiciary Committee. But at this time I'd like to state that any judiciary to be strong cannot be one of compromise. Here this is exactly what we have, the election of our supreme court and the appointment of circuit court by the chief justice with the concurrence of two of the associate justices, which meets the same ill which I pointed out with the second amendment proposed by the delegate from the fifth district. In such a thing as a constitution, there should not be a compromise. We compromise certain things. If I came to a legislature and asked for an appropriation of $1,000 and I could get $500, I'd take that $500, yes. But for a constitution which sets up a fundamental basic law, we should not compromise, just as we will not compromise our principles.

We should not have a scrambled judiciary, which this amendment is, or an omelet judiciary or a chop suey judiciary. I am for the election of judges, period, paragraph, full stop, nothing else, but I will not let the electorate say that I did not provide in our Constitution a judiciary article.

Since the appointment system will be carried overwhelmingly I will now go with the appointment system, but I also have another amendment which I'd like to offer on the question of tenure. I'd like to make this statement right now so that I will not be foreclosed from presenting my amendment by a motion for previous question after I finish.

My amendment merely amends the second paragraph of Section 3 of Committee Proposal No. 7. It reads, "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of eight years and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for a term of six years."

I feel that the original proposal, the committee proposal, calling for the six year and twelve year tenure is a little too long. I am mindful of the fact that the tenure should be long to attract good attorney candidates, but, however, a long tenure for judges may tend toward judicial stagnation, due to lack of incentive. Here I have also provided for the longer tenure for supreme court justices and a shorter one for the circuit court judges. In all the states -- most of the states --

LEE: Will the speaker yield to a point? It might be wise to speak on the subject after we vote on the amendment proposed by Delegate Sakakihara.

CHAIRMAN: I think that's proper.

PHILLIPS: I rose to a point of information. As a result of Delegate Bryan's inquiry, I'm confused now as to whether there is actually a motion and a second on the floor of Delegate Sakakihara's amendment.

CHAIRMAN: As the Chair stated at the beginning of the session, Sakakihara's motion is now on the floor; it has been moved and seconded; it was the other day before we closed debate. The debate is now on the motion to Section 3.

PHILLIPS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

AKAU: I do not wish to speak directly to the amended motion by Delegate Sakakihara, but I do want to say a word regarding Delegate Tavares' statement. I think we all thoroughly agree that there are many things regarding the judiciary as well as other sections which will not be very clear to John Q. Public. It's not within his grasp, we agree. But I would like to ask Mr. Tavares, if I may, Mr. Chairman, isn't it up to you and me and all the rest of us to help, to explain, shall we say, even to educate slowly but surely, so that the people will grasp the significance of this very important document? I think you'll agree, Mr. Tavares, we have come a long way, let us say since 10 or 15 years ago, so there is much more hope for our people here. I would like to have the delegates please say a word on that.

CHAIRMAN: Did you have a question? Is it on the amendment?

AKAU: Mr. Chairman, it's not directly on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: If it's not on the section -- on the amendment, the Chair feels that we ought to go on and discuss things relative to the business before us.

LEE: I notice that Delegate Gilliland wanted to speak. Unless there were other speakers, I was going to move the previous question.

GILLILAND: I have been in politics since 1925. I have run for the office of city and county attorney some years ago and served two terms and I think I know what I'm talking about. If a man is a candidate -- if a lawyer who is a candidate for judgeship must depend on the electorate to vote him into office, I'm certainly opposed to any election of any judge. I want to say that in my experience in running for the office of city and county attorney, I received donations from friends, and I want to say this, that some of these friends, when it came to handling some of their cases, expected me to return the favor and have the case dismissed.

I want to say also that the man who runs for office, the office of judge—if this Constitutional Convention is going to provide for election of judges—he's got to look forward to the question of how much money it will cost him to run for that particular office, how many favors he will have to dish out to the electorate, how many political factions he will have to deal with, and he will have to worry about finding his expenses for the next election.

I say that in our Constitution, we should provide for the election of judge -- for the appointment of judges and not for the election of judges.

CHAIRMAN: State your question.

PHILLIPS: If you say you don't approve of election of judges --

CHAIRMAN: Will you speak to the Chair, please.

PHILLIPS: I would like to talk directly to him because the question is to him.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will put the question.

PHILLIPS: I would like to know then, if he is not in favor of the election of judges, would he have the chief executive have complete control over the appointment of judges without any kind of a check on his appointment, and he generally gets his recommendation for appointments from a political party or political adviser? I would like to know then, would he approve of the chief executive, the chief of patronage in the state, would he have him be solely responsible for the appointment of judges, which I feel is comparable to the election of judges?

CHAIRMAN: Would you care to answer that, Delegate Gilliland?

GILLILAND: The governor will be elected by the people, and any appointment he makes he will certainly take the advice of the judiciary, members of the Bar Association, the people at large, and any appointment he makes will be subject to the confirmation of the Senate.

LEE: I move the previous question.

PHILLIPS: Then along that same line of reasoning, I would like to ask the delegate from the fifth district why certain states have found it necessary to create commissions which would involve laymen and all other complicated machinery to prevent this very thing which he felt sure that he had precluded. Why is it that Missouri and other states, California, would care to create a commission who would certify three names to the chief executive, and through that commission be able to cut out this patronage which everybody is aware of?

ANTHONY: I think the question addressed by the last speaker is not germane to the amendment. It may be a good question later on, but I suggest we confine ourselves to the amendment.

HOLROYDE: I second Senator Lee's move for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before us is, shall the previous question be put? All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

The question now is on the adoption of the amendment offered by Delegate Sakakihara. All those voting in favor will be voting in favor of the amendment; those voting in the negative would be voting against the amendment. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Amendment is lost.

We are now back on Section 3, as it stands. The Chair will recognize Delegate Fukushima.

FUKUSHIMA: I don't have very much to say, but I have the amendment already circulated. I believe it's on the delegates' desks. If you will note - -

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state, Delegate Fukushima, that the amendment you offered was not seconded so that we can get it before - -

SAKAKIHARA: Second that.

CHAIRMAN: Will you make the motion, then I'll recognize the second.

FUKUSHIMA: I move at this time that the amendment which I have distributed be adopted.

> The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of eight years and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for a term of six years.

SAKAKIHARA: Seconded.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment to Section 3, Proposal 7, has been made and seconded and is before you now.

FUKUSHIMA: As you will note, in the amendment I have provided for two categories; that is, the supreme court justices will serve a term of eight years, and the judges of the circuit court for a period of six. I made this distinction because I believe in most of the states it is customary that the judges in the upper court have a longer tenure. I believe that the proposal as submitted, calling for a period of six years, does not make the differentiation between the circuit court judges and the supreme court justices, and the reappointment portion which gives the judges or the justices a period of 12 years is a little too long. I feel that even for a re-appointment the original tenure should prevail.

LEE: At this time those who have supported the committee report, the majority of us, there were some phases of it which - - some of us didn't give as much attention as possible to this particular question. For myself, I'd like to say that I'm in favor of this amendment. I do believe that the tendency of having a judge appointed for a term of six years and then appointed for a term of 12 years, a period of 18 years, is a long period. It's a question of drawing the line as to the dangers of having short term appointments as well as having judges appointed so that they develop corns in their posterior. I believe that the amendment is in order. I spoke to the chairman of the committee of one of these things that I felt the tenure was a little too long, but I'd like to say that I am in support of the amendment.

A. TRASK: I am in favor of the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima. The amendment seeks to make the tenure of office for justices of the supreme court eight years and for circuit court judges six years. The second section - - the second paragraph of Section 3, which this amendment seeks to modify, provides that the judges of the supreme and circuit courts shall hold office for a term of six years and upon their reappointment shall hold office for a term of 12 years.

I am reminded of a great jurist, Albert Moses Cristy. He was appointed by - - for a term of at least 20 years. He was appointed by five presidents, having in mind terms of four years each. He said that a judge should be sought, the man should not seek the office. And I think if we put that and use that as a yardstick of measurement for office without the reappointment for a term of 12 years, I think we would make the judges more acutely aware of what is going on in the community.

We are concerned about judges, some of them who limit their activities merely to the fourth district. Very few judges go into the fifth district, see what's going along in the slums, the alleys, byways. Judge - - Associate Justice Peters made a remark some time ago in tribute to the district courts, that because you appeal to the supreme court, it doesn't mean the supreme court has superior knowledge of social condition existing in the community. I do feel strongly, therefore, that there should be some etching, needling incentive, and that the shorter term as provided by the amendment I think would help make our judges acutely aware of conditions, have them get down and mix around and increase their humanity, as Judge Cristy had. He mixed with the people, he talked with the jurymen, he was out in the lobby of the court constantly talking with everybody. That's the kind of judge we would want to have, and although I sympathize with the elective system, I feel that the humanity of judges will be better maintained with a shorter tenure.

CHAIRMAN: Before the Chair recognizes any other speaker, I'd like to state that we have in the audience one of our distinguished members of our legislature, also a fellow Kauaian. I would ask the Sergeant at Arms if you would please escort Delegate Marcelino to the rostrum - - Representative, pardon me. He should have been a delegate. There'll be a short recess.

(RECESS)

ANTHONY: [Beginning of speech not recorded.] . . . on the committee proposal which provides for long tenure and upon reappointment a term of 12 years. Now in the first place there is no valid reason for making any distinction between the tenure of a judge on the circuit court and the tenure of a judge of the supreme court. It is equally important that both courts have long tenure, and had I obtained the support of the majority of the committee, I would have been addressing you on the subject of life tenure.

Now what is the purpose and purport of this amendment? It is simply an attempt to stir up recurrently, every six or eight years, the appointment of the judiciary. Now if you will examine the list of states, you will find the strongest jurisdictions have longer tenure as provided in the committee proposal. The federal system, as you all know, is life tenure; the State of Pennsylvania is 21 years for the supreme court; and you can go on down the line. Every state that has a strong judicial system has a long tenure. Now the reason I opposed this amendment—and I opposed the other one which is equally, if not worse, more obnoxious, that is currently being circulated—is, it is going to make the judiciary some kind of a political football.

Now I think that we have reached a happy medium here between life tenure and long tenure. All competent authorities on the judiciary agree that in order to have a good judiciary you have got to have security in office and long tenure, and the proposed amendment will be an inroad on that basic principle. Therefore, I think the Convention should vote against it.

CHAIRMAN: Anyone else wish to be heard?

TAVARES: Just one more thought. If anyone takes the trouble to read the newspapers he will find that the one court that people like to get into if they can, where liberal attitude is desired, is the federal courts, and they have life tenure. The most liberal court in the United States today is the court -- the Supreme Court of the United States and the lower courts who hold office for life. As I say, if you will read the papers you will find that the first place that people want to go when they want the most liberal court possible is to get into the federal courts.

Now, when New Jersey adopted its split term system of seven years and then life, the American Bar Association Journal, which I think represents the thinking of the American Bar Association, had an editorial which was entitled, "New Jersey Goes to the Head of the Class."

True separation of power lies not so much although somewhat, in the method of appointment -- well not so much. As a matter of fact, I don't think it lies in there at all. It lies in the security of tenure given to the judges after they get into office. The members have cited here examples of where presidents have put in judges who they thought would follow their views, and as soon as those judges had security of tenure they used their own judgment and they were independent. I say that giving these judges short terms will tend to reduce their independence below what it would be if you gave them long tenure.

Now one more thing. Something was said about removing judges if they got too tired, they became too much kamaaina. Some people know the definition of "kamaaina," about how the blood in your veins turns to lead in the lower part of the anatomy. The provisions of this article for liberal removal will tend to take care of that. We have provided liberal removal provisions, and that is the thing that will take care of that situation.

I hope that the members of this delegation vote against the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Anyone else wish to be heard?

RICHARDS: There's something that isn't quite clear in my mind and I would like to ask the chairman of the committee. I notice that in all of the proposals for a lengthy term of office, there is nothing regarding any staggered term. Is it the expectation that each time there is a resignation or a removal and a new judge is appointed, he will receive appointment for the full term and in that way obtain the staggered possibility, or do they merely fill out for the balance of the term? That is not clear.

CHAIRMAN: Chairman of the Judiciary care to answer that?

ANTHONY: Upon the making of a new appointment, the appointee will get the terms specified in the provision, the full term. There is no attempt, in fact it is not even desirable, to stagger the terms. You stagger the terms when appointing or electing a public utilities commission in which you want a continuous -- a body that is more or less continuous. That has no application to the judicial system, in my judgment.

A. TRASK: The statement was made by Delegate Tavares that he saw no difference—and apparently in Section -- paragraph 2 there is no difference—with respect to the tenure of the supreme court justices and the circuit court judges, namely just six years. I was just wondering whether or not this reappointment refers only to that particular supreme court or circuit court. I'm having in mind this situation. Say if a circuit judge has been on the bench and at the conclusion of his six years, he is appointed to the supreme court. Now, if the thought that there is no distinction and there should not be and it is the sense that there is no distinction, a judge is a judge, should -- would there be opportunity for the contention that upon his elevation to the supreme court it would be in the nature of an reappointment, and therefore be entitled to 12 years?

ANTHONY: I think the language of the article and the clear intention of it, as well as the understanding of the committee, is that that case would be a new appointment. In other words, a circuit judge elevated by appointment to the supreme court would then have a new appointment as justice of the supreme court, and upon his reappointment he would then serve for an additional term for 12 years.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak to the amendment which provides for a term of eight years for judges of the circuit -- excuse me, for the supreme court and six for the circuit court. As I got the objection by the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, that objection is to the differing lengths of the terms, as the circuit court and the supreme court should have the same length of term. Now the committee proposal provides for only six years. I'm in favor of longer tenure. I could support a proposal which would provide for eight years initial term of the supreme court, but I'd like to have the terms identical with the circuit court. I therefore would amend the proposal -- amend the amendment to have a uniform eight years for both the supreme court and for the circuit court.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that amendment?

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, I --

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that amendment?

PHILLIPS: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment's been seconded.

Will you state now, Delegate Roberts, will you please state your amendment as it would read?

ROBERTS: The amendment would read that, "The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for an initial term of eight years and upon reappointment shall hold office for a term of 12 years." It provides for a longer term, but uniform term.

CHAIRMAN: Did you say for "an additional term of eight years"?

ROBERTS: I assumed that the amendment covered the reappointment in paragraph 2 of Proposal No. 3 -- Section 3.

FUKUSHIMA: In proposing my amendment, it does not foreclose the justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit court for reappointment, but the period -- the tenure of the reappointment remains the same as the initial period; in other words, eight for the supreme court justices and six for the circuit court judges.

TAVARES: Before vote is brought on any of these proposed amendments, I would like to make one more suggestion; and that is, if it is the sense of the majority of this Convention that the term should be, at least for the moment say six or eight years, then it should be provided that they should be for not less than those periods so that the legislature might be able to lengthen the terms, because I sincerely believe, and I think your authorities that have studied this question universally agree, that longer terms produce a better judiciary.

KAGE: I am in favor of a long tenure for the judges and so I should vote for the eight years tenure instead of the six years, and make the amendment that when he is reappointed, he should be reappointed for 12 years, but I shall not make the amendment. We believe --

CHAIRMAN: I believe that amendment has already been made.

TAVARES: I'll second Mr. Roberts' motion.

KAGE: Then I would like to speak against the motion -- the amendment. We believe in three distinct departments. If our appoint -- the term of office is for eight years, then the appointment will fall upon the year that the governor is elected, and therefore the judiciary will become dependent upon the executive. I would rather see six years because the governor is already in office.

MIZUHA: We have heard a great deal about the independence of the judiciary. What more could we want, if we had a long term for our judges, to give them that independence and give us that basis of the separation of powers in government between the judicial department and executive and the legislative branch. And as the proposal now stands, the initial appointment of six years, if the governor or the people or the bar feel that that judge should not be reappointed for a long term of 12 years, then that is the time, through their representatives in the legislature, in the Senate, to fight confirmation of the judge whose initial term has not been so proper as to indicate a need for his reappointment. And if we are to follow the doctrine of separation of powers, then the second appointment of our judges should be for a longer term to give them the independence they need.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

BRYAN: I'd like very much to know what the question is.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is about to state the question. We are dealing with Section 3. To Section 3, the following amendment was offered by Delegate Fukushima: "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of eight years, and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for a term of six years." To that amendment, another amendment was offered by Delegate Roberts; that amendment reads -- The Clerk will read the amendment, please.

CLERK: "I would like to speak for the amendment which provides for a term of eight years for judges of the supreme court and six for the circuit court. As I get the objection of the chairman to the Judiciary Committee, that objection is to the differing lengths of the term, that the circuit court and the supreme court should have the same length of term. The committee proposal provides for only six years. I am in favor of longer tenure and I could support a proposal whicl would provide for eight years for initial terms but I would lik to have the terms identical for circuit courts also. Now, I would therefore amend the amendment to have a uniform eigh years for both the supreme court and for the circuit courts."

ANTHONY: I took down the amendment, I can read it if the Chair would like to have me read it.

CHAIRMAN: Would you, please?

ANTHONY: Delegate Fukushima's amendment as amende by the motion of "Justice" Roberts. "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of eight years, and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for a term of eight years, and upon reappointment, shall hold office for a term of 12 years."

CHAIRMAN: Does Delegate Roberts agree that that was the motion the way he stated it?

ROBERTS: That's substantially correct, Mr. Chairman.

PORTEUS: I'm much in sympathy with the point that one of my colleagues from the fourth district made this morning about a way of getting at particular motions by votes. As I understand the amendment that was offered by the delegate from the fifth district, he offered it on the theory that he wanted some difference in term between the circuit court judges and the supreme court judges. That he accomplished. However, his amendment had two -- was twofold in purpose. It was also designed to eliminate the 12 year reappointment. My colleague from the fourth district very delicately has inserted back into the amendment, in order to nullify one of the purposes of that amendment, the reappointment for 12 years.

Now if that's a fair parliamentary maneuver, then it is als a fair parliamentary maneuver to move that that amendment be further amended, and unless we get a straight vote on the delegate from the fifth district's amendment with an amendment to that only for eight years and not for reappointment, I'm going to move that we amend that amendment further to knock out the 12 year reappointment, because it is striking down part of the purpose of this other amendment. If you want the 12 years, let's get a separate vote on the 12 years. But in this way, it's being maneuvered in such fashion that you have to take two things at once, and I am in agreement that we want to separate these matters out so that we can ascertain the will of the delegates.

HEEN: Then as I understand Delegate Roberts' amendment, it's simply this: substitute the word eight for six in line two. In other words --

CHAIRMAN: Of the original Section 3, that would be correct.

ROBERTS: The purpose of my motion was not to frustrate the proposal put in the form of an amendment by the delegate from the fifth district. As I understood the discussion, the objection raised by the Judiciary Committee was for unequal terms, and since the amendment provided for an eight and six, I merely moved the amendment to provide for uniform eight year terms, which provides for a longer tenure on first appointment. The original proposal provides for reappointment, and therefore my motion did not repeat that. If the delegate from the fifth would like to get a vote on his proposal, I'd be very happy to withdraw my amendment to permit his presentation. Now my assumption was, and apparently it's an incorrect one, that the author of the motion wanted a longer tenure for the supreme court justice for eight years and a six year term for the circuit court.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair asked a while ago if Delegate Fukushima's amendment was one on reappointment and was informed that it was, rather than on the original tenure of office. Is that correct, Delegate Fukushima? Or is this to replace that paragraph of Section 3?

FUKUSHIMA: This amendment which I have proposed would substitute this wording here for the second paragraph in Committee Proposal No. 7.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you, then the Chair was in error.

LEE: And in order to get a straight vote on that, Mr. Chairman, I suggest that Delegate Roberts withdraw his motion.

CHAIRMAN: Before he does that, the Chair would like to recognize Delegate Nielsen who had asked to speak.

NIELSEN: Well, I had a point of order but as long as we've gone along, I'll skip it. I think we had about three amendments on there and we can't stack them that high.

CHAIRMAN: I realize that we can't stack them that high, but we haven't gotten that high. There have only been threats of amendments.

ROBERTS: I had previously offered to withdraw the amendment. In light of the statement made that the purpose was to replace the sentence in the second paragraph of Section 3, I will withdraw the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The question then is on the amendment as proposed by Delegate Fukushima.

ANTHONY: Just one point that should be borne in mind. One of the purposes of having seven years in the New Jersey Constitution for the initial term, and our committee proposal agreeing on six years, was to avoid an appointment in a year in which the governor runs for election. Now if you are going to put in eight, then you are going to run into periods of appointment when the governor is running for election. We thought that undesirable.

CHAIRMAN: That was the point raised by Delegate Kage; there was no second to either his motion or suggestion.

The question now is on the amendment. The amendment as proposed to substitute for the last paragraph of Section 3, proposed by Delegate Fukushima, reads: "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of eight years, and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for a term of six years." Ready for the question? All those - -

SHIMAMURA: I move that the amendment be further amended by striking out the figure "eight" in the second line and insert in lieu thereof the figure "seven."

KAM: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this amendment be further amended.

FUKUSHIMA: I'll accept that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: He has accepted the amendment. The section now reads - - The amendment now reads, "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of seven years, and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for a term of six years." Are you ready for the question?

SILVA: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: All those desiring roll call, please raise your right hand. Sufficient number. The Clerk will please call the roll. All those voting "aye" will be voting for the amendment; the negative will be voting against the amendment. Will the Clerk please call the roll.

KAWAHARA: As I understand it, if we vote once, does it mean that we're voting for the whole amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Will you speak into the microphone, please. I couldn't hear you.

KAWAHARA: Do we have two separate amendments?

CHAIRMAN: No, there is only one amendment now before us. That is the amendment on tenure of office, original tenure of office of seven and six years as proposed by Delegate Fukushima, amended by Shimamura, and accepted by Delegate Fukushima. Those voting "aye" will be voting for the amendment. Those voting "no" will be voting against it.

HEEN: The Chair has just stated that the amendment was on the original appointment. That contemplates another term for reappointment, but this is a period of tenure that will continue all along the line, whether it's the original appointment or a subsequent reappointment.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. The Clerk will please call the roll.

Ayes, 32. Noes, 29 (Anthony, Apoliona, Arashiro, Bryan, Castro, Cockett, Corbett, Dowson, Hayes, Heen, Holroyde, Kage, Kanemaru, Kawakami, Kellerman, King, Larsen, Loper, Mizuha, H. Rice, Richards, Roberts, Smith, Tavares, White, Wirtz, Wist, Woolaway, Crossley). Not voting, 2 (Sakai, Sakakihara).

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has carried.

NIELSEN: I'd like to ask a question of the chairman of the Judiciary; it comes from the New Jersey Constitution. I'd like to know what discussion they had on that phase of the New Jersey Constitution which reads, "No nomination to such office shall be sent to the Senate for confirmation until after seven days' public notice by the governor."

CHAIRMAN: What section are you speaking on, please?

NIELSEN: Well, it's in the same - - it would be in the same section of our Constitution. If they have the proper explanation, I won't make it as an amendment, but I wish to make an amendment.

ANTHONY: That's in the committee proposal, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Would you care to answer, Delegate Anthony?

ANTHONY: Section 3. "No nomination to such office shall be sent to the Senate until after ten days' public notice by the Governor." Section 3.

NIELSEN: Thank you.

ASHFORD: I was a little bit concerned, and I still am, over this language in the last sentence of the first paragraph of Section 3. "No persons shall be eligible to such office who shall not have been admitted to practice law before the supreme court of this state for at least ten years." I am informed by the chairman of the committee that it is proposed that some provision shall be made to cover service as a member of the bar of the Territory; otherwise, we would have no one eligible to serve as judges, and that is before another committee. I'd like to check on that if the Chair would be kind enough to do so.

CHAIRMAN: Would the chairman of Judiciary please answer that?

ANTHONY: We debated that in committee and the technical difficulty was in using the expression "State and Territory" and we concluded the simplest thing to do was to see to it that in the miscellaneous section of the Constitution, where this problem will come up not only with the judiciary but elsewhere, that an appropriate section be incorporated in the Constitution to take care of the delegate from Molokai's question.

CHAIRMAN: Is that satisfactory?
What is your pleasure on Section 3?

AKAU: In the first section -- in Section 3, between the first and second sentence. In explaining the other day, the chairman of the Judiciary said that there would be hearings for people who wish to come, regarding this statement. Now then, I'd like to ask him a question, if I may, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

AKAU: Would the public hearing, since they would be provided, what would happen if the citizenry didn't approve of the nominees that had been already suggested? Is there any provision for that sort of thing or it just doesn't have any effect?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, would you care to answer?

ANTHONY: I think the Chair could answer it better than I. That's simply a question whether or not the citizenry can make their voice heard and felt in the vote in the Senate on confirmation. If they've got good arguments, they can satisfy the Senate that the confirmation should not be approved.

CHAIRMAN: I might point out to Delegate Akau that it's not a public hearing, it's "public notice."

PHILLIPS: I feel at this time that there is little doubt in our mind about whether we should have appointment or election of judges, and I think due to that fact, and I believe that the reason why we are chiefly concerned with why we should appoint judges is to see if we can eliminate any politics or partisanism from the appointment of judges. Now, due to that, I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee if he -- or why that committee hasn't taken into consideration the value of a commission, a judicial commission, as is demonstrated in the constitutions of California --

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to point out that the question of the judicial commission has been voted on. Also, the elective or appointive system has been voted on, I believe, four times --

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: -- and has been defeated each time; so unless you have an amendment to offer that is different than the amendment --

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

PHILLIPS: I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman, I don't yield the floor yet.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will be through in just a moment. Unless you have an amendment to offer, why I would feel that you're out of order at this time.

PHILLIPS: I rise to a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Point of what?

PHILLIPS: A point of information.

CHAIRMAN: A point of information? State your point.

PHILLIPS: Has the Convention voted or acted upon a commission or upon a council?

CHAIRMAN: On a judicial council.

PHILLIPS: I'm talking about a judicial commission.

CHAIRMAN: Are you proposing an amendment to Section 3?

PHILLIPS: I'm asking a question of the committee chairman as to why a judicial commission was not considered. I wondered if he could answer us as to why a judicial commission is not in there.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will put the question, but before putting the question, what is your point, Delegate Arashiro?

ARASHIRO: I had an amendment that I wanted to submit.

CHAIRMAN: It will be -- I'll recognize you next. Someone had the floor; they were speaking on the section; they have asked a question of the chairman of the Judiciary. Would you care to answer that, Mr. Anthony?

ANTHONY: The delegate that last spoke said, why wasn't the matter of a commission or a council considered. As a matter of fact, it was considered and written into the report, the reasons why. In fact there was a division seven to eight whether or not there should be a judicial council, and incidentally, the expression "council" is no different than "commission." If the Convention wants a council, they can vote on it, but the reasons are stated in the report why we didn't recommend it in the proposal.

ARASHIRO: I have an amendment to offer at this time, an amendment to read as follows, and --

CHAIRMAN: Has this amendment been circulated?

ARASHIRO: Circulated.

Section 3. The chief justice of the supreme court shall be elected by secret ballot of the joint committee of both houses of the legislature with equal representation from each county, the names to be submitted to the legislature 30 days prior to the election as provided by law. The other justices and judges of the circuit courts shall be appointed by the chief justice by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The reason for this amendment is that it seems like that there was much argument and discussion on the elective system --

HEEN: Point of order, Mr. Chairman, point of order.

CHAIRMAN: What is the point of order?

HEEN: As I understand it, the delegate is offering an amendment and I take it he is moving for the adoption of the amendment. And it's out of order for him to talk about it unless it's seconded.

CHAIRMAN: Your point of order is well taken. Is there a second to -- have you made this in the form of --

ARASHIRO: Just a minute then.

No person shall be eligible to such office who shall not have been admitted to practice law before the supreme court of this state for at least five years. The chief justice's term of office shall be for six years and the other justices and judges terms of office shall be for eight years

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

NIELSEN: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is now before us. I'll recognize Delegate Arashiro.

ARASHIRO: The reason for the amendment is that we have discussed and argued on this section for the last two days and we haven't reached agreement. It seems like we have quite an opposition for the original section which is the appointive system, and then the amendment that was submitted was on the elective basis and also there was quite an opposition, and not only quite an opposition, but it was defeated.

So now, I'm offering this amendment which is an amendment away from the elective system and away from the appointive system by the governor.

This is an indirect elective system in which the chief justice of the supreme court will be elected by the legislature, whose names will be submitted to the legislature 30 days prior to the election in order to give the legislature time enough to go over the names, the names to be submitted by some body which will be created by the legislature through some legislation.

And then, in this method, I feel that it will iron out all the points that were brought up by the different delegates in arguing against the appointive system and the elective system. The term of office being six years for the chief justice and eight years for the other appointed judges was to make the appointed judges independent from the chief justice, and under this system I feel that it will be an independent judicial department or branch of the government.

C. RICE: I'd like to ask a question of the introducer of this. "With equal representation from each county." He means if the legislature was apportioned the same as it is now, Kauai would sit with - - would have as much right with two senators and four representatives as the 18 from Oahu. Is that right?

ARASHIRO: That's right.

C. RICE: There would be four counties. How about if we had a tie, two-two?

ARASHIRO: The intent of this proposal was that we have equal numbers of representatives from each county. In other words, if we were to have two senators from - - if we were to decide on two senators, that meant that we will have two senators from each of the four counties and then if we would decide on having two House members in this committee, then it will be two representatives from each of the counties.

SILVA: Personally I'd like to offer an amendment if it would be acceptable. I see no reason to put Oahu in. Just make it simple and leave Hawaii, Maui, and Kauai, and leave Oahu out of it, because the primary purpose, as I see it, would be that the outside counties would really have the power of appointing - - nominating all the judges. That's what it really means; it simmers down to that.

ASHFORD: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford - - oh, sorry.

SILVA: I still have the floor.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford had asked for the floor next.

SILVA: I'll yield to Miss Ashford for a question. Is that what you want?

ASHFORD: I was just going to suggest that the possibility of a tie was just one more argument for the County of Lanai.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva, will you carry on?

SILVA: Well, I was under the impression that Miss Ashford was probably going to ask me a question, but since she didn't, I yield the floor to any speaker that may desire the floor at this time.

CHAIRMAN: Are you through, Delegate Silva?

HEEN: Supposing the legislature adjourns and there is a vacancy in the judgeship. How are you going to appoint a judge during the interim period between the session that had just adjourned and the next session of the legislature ?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Arashiro, will you care to answer that?

ARASHIRO: If the introducer of this amendment has overlooked those things, we invite some suggestion and idea, but we are probably going to have an annual session, and if not, we'll have a hold-over committee.

MAU: I was just going to point out that problem which was raised by the delegate from the fourth district. I think this is - - would make it very, very impractical. I want to state to the Convention that the idea of election of judges has been licked on this floor three separate times, and I think that those of us who are in the minority ought to bow to the majority and let's get on with our work.

LEE: Kokua. I move the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: The question is before us, I think. Are you ready? Without the previous question, I think we can vote on the amendment before us. All those voting "aye" would be voting for the amendment; voting "no" would be voting against the amendment. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The amendment is defeated.

We are now back to Section 3 as amended. Are you ready for the - -

FUKUSHIMA: Is there a motion to that effect?

CHAIRMAN: There has been no motion now to adopt Section 3 as amended.

FUKUSHIMA: In that event, I move at this time for the adoption of Section 3 as amended.

ROBERTS: I spoke yesterday and I voted with the majority on the question of appointment versus election. I indicated at that time that my own personal preference was for a commission to nominate names of individuals and for the governor to appoint from that panel. The persons so nominated and confirmed by the Senate would then serve in office for a period of time and then stand for election on a nonpartisan ballot - -

SILVA: I rise to a point of order. I don't think there is anything before the Convention now. The motion was made to adopt the proposal as amended. There's no second to that proposal and there's really nothing before the - -

CHAIRMAN: Section 3 is still before the committee and the floor is still open on Section 3.

ROBERTS: I plan to move an amendment when I've presented it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts has the floor.

ROBERTS: I indicated at that time that I would submit a proposal providing in part the general language of the Missouri Plan. I have such a proposal, and I plan to offer it in the form of an amendment. I'd like to point out that the proposal is not the proposal I submitted yesterday, the last day of our meeting, on the question of a study group dealing with the judiciary process. That council had nothing to do with the selection of names from a panel and the question that I'm proposing today in the form of an amendment goes to that question.

I'd like, if it's agreeable with the Convention, after I move the amendment and if I'm -- if I have a second, to provide for a short recess for two purposes: one to read the amendment, and second, to give the delegates a chance to get over the feeling of amendments. I recognize that you are all pretty tired and not in the mood for amendments. I'd like to get you back in the mood to consider this particular amendment that I plan to offer.

The first sentence of the first paragraph of Section 3 of Committee Proposal No. 7 is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 3. The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the several courts of the state shall be appointed by the governor subject to confirmation by the Senate. The chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall each be appointed from panels of five names submitted to the governor by a commission to be created by the legislature and to be composed of judges, members of the bar and laymen.

Each appointed justice and judge shall hold office for a term ending December 31 following the next general election after the expiration of twelve months in office. At the general election next preceding the expiration of his term in office, the name of such justice or judge shall appear, unopposed, on a separate nonpartisan ballot which shall read as follows:

"Shall judge [or justice] _____ (Here insert the name of the judge _____ of the _____ court or justice) (Here insert the title of the court) be retained in office? Yes _____ No _____"

If a majority of those voting on the question shall vote in the affirmative, the justice or judge shall remain in office for the number of years after December 31 following such election as is provided for the full term of such office, and at the expiration of each such term shall be eligible for retention in office by election in the manner here prescribed. If at any such election, a majority shall vote against retention in office, a vacancy shall then exist upon the expiration of the appointive term. Should any justice or judge not desire to continue in office beyond the original term provided for in his appointment, he shall, at least 60 days prior to the said general election, give notice thereof to the governor and his name shall not be placed upon said ballot.

CHAIRMAN: Has the amendment been distributed?

ARASHIRO: I second that motion.

ROBERTS: I have copies of the amendment which I will have distributed now.

ARASHIRO: Mr. Chairman, I will second that.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been moved and seconded. It's been suggested we take about a five minute recess. Hearing no objection, why we stand at recess for five minutes.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will recognize Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak in favor of the amendment proposed. I think it provides an effective and fair method of dealing with a problem on which there is a division, strong division of opinion, on the question of an elective versus an appointive system. This proposal was a proposal which was adopted in the State of Missouri after a similar discussion and consideration of the pros and cons of an elective versus an appointive system. It seems to me that this provides some of the better features of the appointive system and some of the better features of the elective system.

On the appointive system, it provides a check, it provides an opportunity for the community, in the form of judges, in the form of the Bar Association and attorneys, and the lay people of the community to nominate those best able to perform the function of judges in our new State. It provides an opportunity, then, for these men to get together and to present a panel of names to the governor from which to choose the members of the court.

It also provides, it seems to me, the better features of an elective system since it does not require that a person run for office in competition with other individuals or to ask favors of individuals to provide enough funds with which to run. This proposal provides a nonpartisan ballot: it provides that the individual does not run against anyone; his name is presented to the people in the form of a confirmation. The people then have the opportunity to vote yes or no. There is no problem of partisan politics; there is no problem of a competitive position with regard to presenting the question to the electorate.

It seems to me that so far as the basic tenure is concerned, the tenure is already set forth in other sections of the committee proposal. This proposal, this amendment, goes only to the question as to how the judges of the supreme court and the circuit court are to receive their office. It provides for a careful review in the form of a panel, appointment by the governor, and confirmation by the Senate, and provides a review at the end of a one to two-year period, depending on the date of appointment, to give the judge the opportunity to serve, and then give the people an opportunity to vote on the question, yes or no.

I don't think we ought to take too much time discussing the proposal. I think the basic questions have been considered in detail. If there are any additional comments, I personally would like to hear them. I don't want the debate drawn out on this thing if we can get to an early vote.

ANTHONY: Has there been any second to this?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, it's been moved and seconded.

ANTHONY: This is a rehash of what this Convention has voted on at least three or four times, namely the central issue, whether we are going to have an elective system of judges. Now, no matter how thin you slice it, it's still an election. Now, if the delegate did what he -- what I understood him to be doing, namely, propose a panel from which the executive should make the executive appointment, that would be one thing. That has not been done. We are right back again to the old debate, whether or not we are going to have our judges stumping the country, and for that reason, I am against this amendment.

ASHFORD: May I call attention to a further matter in this? We have already adopted Section 4 as amended which provides for removal of judges. Now this would be in absolute conflict, as I read it, with Section 4, and if Section 4 is going to be repealed, I want the vote on election of judges to be had again.

PHILLIPS: I disagree with Delegate Anthony insofar as stating generally that this is a rehash of the election of judges. This election of judges comes after the appointment has been made by the governor and has been approved by this commission consisting of laymen, which is a check on the patronage tendencies of the chief executive. Now, I would say that unfortunately Missouri has in their last election -- was not successful with this placing the judges on the list. They got more, considerably more noes and a very small vote. I do not believe that this election system here has proven successful, but I would say that the first part of the commission, as I said before, does have its value and it does remove or provide this check and balance, this separation of powers which is, I believe, what the entire Convention is making every effort to strive for.

CHAIRMAN: Anyone else wish to discuss this?

ROBERTS: I don't think anyone answered Miss Ashford's question. As I get the question, the suggestion is made that Section 4 of the committee proposal is negated by the amendment. Section 4 reads that "The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason --"

CHAIRMAN: No, that section has been amended. You are reading from the original text.

ROBERTS: What does the amendment now provide, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: I do not have the amendment before me at the present.

ROBERTS: Oh, I think I have it. The proposal as amended provides, "The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall be subject to removal from office upon the concurrence of two-thirds of the membership of each house of the legislature sitting in joint session for such causes and in such manner as may be provided by law."

It seems to me that that particular proposal is still applicable. The purpose of that section, as I recall, was to provide some method of removal from office because of treason, bribery or other high crimes or misdemeanors, and that such a procedure is still possible if the amendment were adopted.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the amendment? The question is the adoption of the amendment proposed by Delegate Roberts. All those voting --

ROBERTS: May I have a show of hands on that or a roll call?

CHAIRMAN: Roll call has been requested. All those desiring roll call will raise your right hand. Sufficient number. Those voting "aye" will be voting for the amendment. Those voting "no" will be voting against the amendment. The Clerk will please call the roll. Will you please answer with your microphones. It's very hard for the clerks to hear the vote.

Ayes, 24. Noes, 37 (Anthony, Apoliona, Ashford, Bryan, Cockett, Corbett, Crossley, Dowson, Fukushima, Gilliland, Hayes, Heen, Holroyde, Kage, Kawakami, Kellerman, Kido, Kometani, Lai, Larsen, Lee, Mizuha, Okino, Porteus, C. Rice, H. Rice, Richards, Silva, Smith, St. Sure, Tavares, A. Trask, White, Wirtz, Wist, Woolaway, King). Not voting, 2 (Sakai, Sakakihara).

CHAIRMAN: The amendment is lost.

There was a motion made that Section 3 be adopted as amended. That was made by Delegate Fukushima; it was not seconded.

HEEN: I now offer an amend ment to the second paragraph of Section 3 as amended. The amendment that was voted upon favorably was the one offered by Delegate Fukushima and it read, "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of seven years and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for a term of six years."

My amendment is in this form. "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for an initial term of seven years and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for an initial term of six years. Upon reappointment, the justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of twelve years, and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for a term of ten years." I move the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is just a little bit in doubt as to whether or not this is a proper motion because the section was adopted and it was the Chair's understanding, upon question, that that was not only the initial term, but was the term of the reappointment as well. There was a continuing term. Therefore unless someone who voted in the affirmative, or voted on the adoption, would vote -- move for reconsideration, this motion would not be in order.

SILVA: I rose to a question.

HEEN: This leaves the number of years of the first appointment the same as was adopted by the Convention, and the amendment is to have that tenure be the tenure of the initial appointment, and that the reappointment shall be for a longer term of years.

CHAIRMAN: Well, you made the point, Delegate Heen, at the time the vote was taken, that the Chair had stated the motion in error, and that it was not only the original tenure, but it was also the continuing tenure of office.

HEEN: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN: Therefore that was the motion on which we voted, that was adopted. Therefore, this motion would be out of order unless we reconsider our actions.

HEEN: I don't think that is correct. The Convention has acted along certain lines. Now, I take it there's nothing to stop the Convention from amending the action that was taken in that connection.

ANTHONY: In regard to the Chair's tentative ruling, were we not focusing our attention on the question whether there should be a different term for judges of the supreme court and judges -- justices of the supreme court and judges of the circuit courts? It seems to me that's what the delegates had in mind when we voted on that amendment of Mr. Fukushima now.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment was that "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of seven years and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for a term of six years." The Chair stated that it understood the motion to be that this was on the reappointment. The Chair was corrected by Delegate Heen to say that this was the original tenure of office and reappointment thereafter. And therefore, that was, as the Chair sees it, that's what we voted on. This is now an amendment to something that we have adopted, and therefore, unless there can be reconsideration of our action, why it will have to stand that way.

ANTHONY: It doesn't change one iota the original vote. All it says is upon a reappointment what the term shall be. I think the Chair's in error in the ruling.

SERIZAWA: I believe the Chair called on the mover, Mr. Fukushima, to clarify whether or not the reappointment term was also a part of his amendment and the delegate from the fifth district stated definitely that it was not. And we voted on that, I believe.

SILVA: Point of order. You've ruled on the question and it's your right to rule, unless the Convention so decides it isn't your right.

CHAIRMAN: It's been pointed out that this amendment has the word "initial term," whereas the previous amendment that we adopted did not have the "initial term" in it, simply said what the term should be, which was the reason that I queried as to whether or not the -- it was a continuing term. Therefore it's the Chair's ruling that we have already voted on the motion, that this motion is out of order unless we move for reconsideration.

ST. SURE: I so move for reconsideration.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved. Is there a second?

KIDO: Second, I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that both Delegate St. Sure and Kido voted with the majority and therefore it's proper that they move for reconsideration. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. I think we should have a show of hands. All of those in favor of reconsideration will raise their right hand. Opposed. 26 ayes, 22 noes. The motion to reconsider is carried, so the amendment is now properly -- can properly be introduced.

HEEN: I move the adoption of the amendment which I have offered, the same one that I spoke about a moment ago.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

RICE: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded, this amendment which would not be an amendment to Delegate Fukushima's amendment.

HEEN: I'm speaking in support of the amendment. I believe that after -- we'll call it the short, initial term, the term on reappointment should be long so that these judges will be removed from politics to a greater extent.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

LEE: I believe this is a rehash of the previous vote that was taken, 32 - 29. At that time I spoke in favor of the amendment to have it eight years and six years and then later it was amended from eight to seven, and then six. That was on a continuing term. Now, I still believe that there should be an adequate check upon the judges who come up for appointment. If you have such a term upon reappointment of 12 years, you are actually putting it for a period that he's going to develop those things that I mentioned, and I feel that the original amendment which was passed is proper, and I am opposed to this amendment.

HAYES: I just wanted to clarify some questions that I have in my mind. I have been standing -- I mean voting for the appointment of judges for eight years and then it was amended and has been amended and amended and amended. Now, "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for an initial term of seven years." That would mean, I suppose, his first term. Correct?

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

HAYES: "And the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for an initial term of six years. Upon reappointment, the justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of twelve years." Now, that 12 years, does it mean that it would add to the other seven years that he had already served as a judge by appointment?

CHAIRMAN: It would be a new term of 12 years?

HAYES: His new term, of the same man, will be 12 years?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

HAYES: And the circuit court shall hold office for a term of 10 years on reappointment? Now the legislature can impeach the judges, remove them?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. They can be removed for trial.

HAYES: Now, he's in for a much longer term.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

HAYES: These judges would be in much longer term.

CHAIRMAN: The only difference from this and the proposal adopted a few moments ago is on the reappointment portion of it.

ANTHONY: The committee, I believe, was unanimous in one thing, that is, the Judiciary Committee. They favored long terms for judges. Now, the proposal as recommended by the majority would have an initial term and then a longer term upon reappointment. What some of the delegates do not fully appreciate, I think, is the fact that we have liberalized the method of removal of judges. Under the Section 4 as it presently stands, any judge can be removed from office at any time upon concurrence of two-thirds of the membership of each house.

Now, the essential thing in a judiciary is to have long tenure. That is the way you get good judges on the bench. I think we ought to adopt the amendment proposed by the delegate from the fourth district because it will make for long tenure; it will make for better judges on the bench; and you can still remove them if you've got a bad one easily.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

TAVARES: Perhaps we could compromise a little more by reducing that 12 years to 10 years and having the second term be 10 years for both, and I move, therefore, that the amendment be amended so that the second sentence will read "Upon reappointment such justices and judges shall hold office for a term of 10 years."

WOOLAWAY: I'll second that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Would the introducer accept the amendment?

HEEN: I'll accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Fine. Delegate, would the second accept the amendment? Would the second?

OKINO: I rise to a point of information. To me, it is not clear whether or not upon reappointment of justices of the supreme court or the circuit court judges, the confirmation of the Senate is required?

ANTHONY: That's the -- first sentence in Section 3 would require that.

CHAIRMAN: The first sentence in Section 3.

OKINO: Am I to understand from the chairman of the Committee on Judiciary that upon reappointment, the first sentence of Section 3 will apply, namely, in that confirmation is necessary. Is that correct?

ANTHONY: That is correct.

DELEGATE: Question.

MIZUHA: I would like to amend the section to reduce the term upon reappointment from ten years to eight years. If you reduce the justices of the supreme court to ten, then I think the circuit court judges should be lowered to eight years. So I so move.

ARASHIRO: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the term of reappointment be -- of the circuit court judges be reduced to eight years.

HEEN: If that proposal to amend the section appeals to the delegates, then that last sentence there or the second sentence of this paragraph would read "Upon reappointment, the justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of ten years and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for a term of eight years." Is that correct? I'll accept that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment's been accepted.

H. RICE: The amendment is on amendments, so I think it's in order that I make another amendment. After they have served their apprenticeship, six and seven years, give them life tenure or until they are seventy.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

There are no amendments on amendments at the present time. In each case the amendment proposed has been accepted by the original movant so that we have only one amendment before us, and the amendment now reads, "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for an initial term of seven years and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold office for an initial term of six years. Upon reappointment the justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of ten years and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for a term of eight years." Are you ready for the question?

FUKUSHIMA: When I proposed my amendment for seven years -- eight, and six, I did this deliberately after much study. Now we have many, many amendments, acceptance of amendments, and what do you find? Just taking arbitrary figures. I think the Convention should not be confused in this manner. I think the original amendment which we voted on is proper, and now the delegates are just bringing this up to confuse the Convention here with no reason for making these changes. Twelve to ten, ten to eight, is utterly ridiculous.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those voting "aye" will be voting in favor of the amendment as I have just stated it. "Noes" will be opposing it. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The motion is lost.

PORTEUS: There seemed to be a volume of sound and it was a little confusing to some of us here as to what is was. May I suggest that the Chair call for a division of the house either by standing or by raising of the hand?

TAVARES: I move that we have a showing of hands. I was caught unprepared on this matter myself. I didn't vote at all.

CHAIRMAN: Do you want roll call?

DELEGATES: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: All those desiring roll call raise their hands. Sufficient number. Those voting "aye" will be voting for the amendment. Those voting "no" will be voting against the amendment. The Clerk will please call the roll.

C. RICE: Which amendment?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment proposed that I just read, proposed by Delegate Heen which calls for reappointment of ten and eight years, respectively.

C. RICE: Only on the reappointment?

CHAIRMAN: Well, the first part of that amendment is the same as we have previously adopted. The only change is on the reappointment.

The Clerk will please call the roll.

Ayes, 30. Noes, 32 (Akau, Arashiro, Ashford, Cockett, Doi, Fong, Fukushima, Ihara, Kam, Kauhane, Kawahara, Kawakami, Kido, Lee, Luiz, Lyman, Mau, Nielsen, Noda, Ohrt, Okino, Phillips, C. Rice, Sakakihara, Serizawa, Shimamura, Silva, Smith, A. Trask, J. Trask, Yamamoto, Yamauchi). Not voting, 1 (Sakai).

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has lost.

LEE: I second the motion to adopt Section 3 as amended.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made and seconded that we adopt Section 3 as amended. It is the Chair's understanding that the -- by the adoption of that -- The amendment should be considered as an amendment to the last paragraph which previously had been voted on separately and is now simply offered as an amendment on the whole Section 3.

LEE: I believe that amendment passed.

CHAIRMAN: We reconsidered our action.

LEE: Well, I move for the adoption of the amendment.

C. RICE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: We're now talking about the amendment proposed by Delegate Fukushima which we reconsidered.

HEEN: There was a motion to reconsider the action that was taken on the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima. Now, that being so, I would amend that amendment by changing the figure "seven" to "eight,"so that will be the same as what Delegate Fukushima put in originally.

CHAIRMAN: I didn't get the -- the Chair didn't get the amendment, Delegate Heen.

HEEN: The amendment would be to change the figure "seven," in line two, to read "eight." "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of eight years and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for a term of six years." Same as the original amendment that was offered by Mr. Fukushima.

CHAIRMAN: Would Delegate Fukushima --

SILVA: I'm afraid that we're beginning to lose sight of the fact that the purpose of this portion in the Constitution is to dispense justice to the people rather than for continuation of office in the courts. It seems that those who are intending or hoping to become appointed to these positions are trying to prolong themselves in office. And if more attention will be given to the -- for the reasons why these longer tenures should be granted, then perhaps we would come to a point, rather than for the personal interest of holding themselves longer in office. I see no reason at all, unless sufficient reason is given, for the elongation of the term in office, rather an arbitrary figure. I think that the previous question -- the previous motion put by Fukushima is very much in order, and if it isn't, I'll be glad to put it, that the justices of the supreme court shall hold office for an initial term of seven years and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for an initial term of six years, upon reappointment, and that is all.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to point out to Delegate Silva that Delegate Fukushima's original proposal called for --

SILVA: We'll leave the "initial" out.

CHAIRMAN: -- the term of eight years and six years; he accepted a floor amendment of seven and six.

SILVA: Well, I'd like to move the amendment to seven and six.

LEE: I believe I made a motion to adopt the amendment of Delegate Fukushima which required seven and six. That motion was seconded.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

LEE: So that if Delegate Silva would want to move the previous question on that, I would be glad to second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Well, Delegate Heen had moved to amend that back to eight and six again.

LEE: But there was no second.

SAKAKIHARA: I'll second, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Do you second that, Delegate Sakakihara?

SAKAKIHARA: I'll make a motion for the previous question.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question has been called for. All those in favor of putting the previous question say "aye." Opposed. The question is the adoption of the amended section which reads, "The justices of the supreme court shall hold office for a term of seven years and the judges of the circuit court shall hold office for a term of six years." All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

LEE: I now move for the adoption of Section 3 as amended.

SAKAKIHARA: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded we adopt Section 3 as amended. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Carried. Section 3 is adopted as amended.

The Chair notes that it's 12 o'clock. What is your pleasure?

HOLROYDE: I move we rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again at 1:30.

SILVA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded the Committee of the Whole rise, report progress, and beg leave to sit again. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. So ordered.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: At ease. The Committee of the Whole will please come to order. When we recessed, we had completed the adoption of Section 3. We are now on Section 5.

ANTHONY: In view of the action of the Convention on Section 4 liberalizing the method of removal of judges, it now strikes me that Section 5 that is before the house at the present moment is unnecessary. Therefore, I move that that section be eliminated from the proposal.

CHAIRMAN: Would you restate the motion?

ANTHONY: I move that Section 5 of Committee Proposal No. 7 be deleted.

HEEN: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 5 be deleted. Any debate? Any discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

HEEN: I move that Section 6 be adopted.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

ASHFORD: I move an amendment to Section 6. The amendment was distributed the other day; I think it was -- I've lost count of the days we've spent on this article, Mr. Chairman, but when we were working on it last week I had distributed to all the delegates a proposed amendment to Section 6, Committee Proposal No. 7. Insert after "diminish" and that -- the word should be "diminished," not "diminish," the following--beginning with a small "u," not a capital "U"--"unless by law applying in equal measure to all officers of the State." I move the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

BRYAN: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 6 be amended.

WHITE: I also have a proposed amendment to this which I think would help to clarify it. It's now in the process of being typed. Would you like me to read it in the meantime?

CHAIRMAN: Please.

WHITE: "The compensation for the justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit court shall be established by law, and shall not be decreased for the term for which they shall have been appointed. They shall retire upon attaining the age of 70 years and shall receive pensions as provided by law." I think the question of establishing the salary for the term for which they are appointed will not preclude any increment adjustments to take care of cost of living or anything of that nature.

ASHFORD: Speaking on my amendment, and may I also refer to Delegate White's amendment --

CHAIRMAN: Would you second his, so we could speak on it too, please.

ASHFORD: I don't -- I don't --

WOOLAWAY: Mr. Chairman, I'll second Mr. White's amendment.

ASHFORD: We have two amendments in there that I don't -- I think my amendment should apply to his as well as to the original. In other words, Mr. White's amendment uses the word "decrease" instead of "diminished." My purpose in adding "unless by law applying in equal measure to all officers of State," is that if a bonus were given in good times, that would be increasing the compensation of the judge, and if we then have a depression and everybody else was taking a cut, under the provisions of the section as it now exists the compensation of the judge could not be cut. I think that judges should be no more immune to the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune than other men.

TAVARES: I see no objection to the amendment proposed by Delegate Ashford. I've lost my copy, but subject to Style I think it's a good amendment. In other words, I agree with the delegate from Molokai that in a period of stress when all salaries are cut, the judges ought to be willing to take their cut with the others, and I'm sure they will.

This also might tend to prevent the courts or anyone else from later raising the point that taxes which are applicable to all persons of the same class, if they are increased, it might be interpreted as a decrease of compensation. It's my understanding that after some shilly-shallying, the United States Supreme Court has finally okayed the proposition that the income tax law is not a diminution of salary. However, this would make that doubly clear and for that reason, whether this amendment by Delegate Ashford is adopted alone or as a part - - an addition to the amendment by Delegate White, I see no objections.

WHITE: I beg to differ with the delegate from the fourth district. I think there is a considerable difference between a man that is prevailed upon to take office for a period of eight years, and he takes it with an understanding that his compensation is going to be a certain amount of money, as against some appointive officer that takes it and serves at the will of the governor. I think there is a considerable difference, and I think that any man that leaves his law practice to take on a job of that kind is entitled to that protection.

ANTHONY: I am opposed to both amendments. The language as drafted is taken from the Federal Constitution, and the purpose of adopting the language, and with it goes the interpretations of the Supreme Court—the judges like everybody else have to pay taxes out of their salary—the purpose of adopting the provision of the Federal Constitution is to make a certain and definite provision for the salary, the compensation of judges.

Now, if you want to get good men on the bench, you've got to have long tenure and you've got to have security in office, and they ought to know what they are going to get. We all know that the legislature notoriously fixes rather low salaries for our judges. If you're going to superimpose on that the possiblility that a judge may have his salary diminished after he has severed all his connections at the bar, then you're going to have one further obstacle against getting good judges on the bench.

Therefore, I think that the section as drafted originally should stand.

SHIMAMURA: I agree with the last speaker for the additional reason that the proposed amendment loses sight of the theory and spirit back of the constitutional provision against diminution of the judges' salary, namely,the preservation of the independence of the judiciary and the theory of the three separate branches of the government. For that additional reason, I am opposed to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Are you speaking as being opposed to both amendments or - - Any further discussion?

OHRT: I have an amendment to that last sentence, "Provision for pensioning them shall be made by law." Is this the proper time to bring that in or - -

CHAIRMAN: There are already two amendments on the section I would like to straighten out. Delegate White, was your amendment an amendment on the section or on Delegate Ashford's amendment?

WHITE: It was a substitute; in other words, it was an amendment of her amendment, to take the place of hers.

CHAIRMAN: To take the place of hers?

OHRT: My amendment would only affect the last sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Would you - -

OHRT: Can we wait until this present motion is taken care of ?

CHAIRMAN: Let's get these out of the way and then I'll recognize you.

WHITE: Could I ask Mr. Anthony a question? As I read the provision that he has there, it would under no circumstances ever permit any reduction in the salary of one of the justices. I don't think that, at the time that they had the provision in the Constitution, I don't think they had these temporary adjustments made to take care of the cost of living, and so forth, and I don't think it was ever intended. The purpose of the wording that I submitted would provide that you would establish the compensation for the justices and you never could, for the term for which they were elected, reduce their compensation below that amount, but if temporary adjustments were made they could be made without any difficulty.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, would you care to answer that?

ANTHONY: I don't know that it was in the form of a question, but if I understand the speaker, he would like to make sure that the salary of a judge will remain constant for the term during which he has been appointed, as distinguished from Delegate Ashford's amendment which would permit the legislature to raise it or lower it from year to year. The second - - the first amendment, Miss Ashford's amendment, would be a direct violation of what we are trying to preserve here, the independence of the judiciary. The second amendment by Mr. White would permit a reduction in salary or a temporary raise that had been put into effect by the legislature after the judge received his appointment, but it could not go below, the reduction could not go below the salary as initially fixed as I understand it.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state that these amendments are now being passed out, that perhaps a recess of about five minutes so that everyone can get it would be in order. No objections? So ruled.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The committee will please come to order.

Is there anyone now that has not received copies of each of the amendments, the two amendments that had been offered so far and one that is anticipated?

OHRT: My amendment is to Section 6. I move the adoption of that amendment.

A. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment offered by Delegate Ohrt has been distributed and it's been - -

DELEGATE: We have so many amendments here that we'd like to know - -

CHAIRMAN: I'm trying to identify it for you right now. The amendment is

. . . amendment to Section 6 of Committee Proposal No. 7 by deleting therefrom the last sentence thereof reading,

"Provision for pensioning them shall be made by law," and inserting in lieu thereof the following sentence: "Provisions shall be made by law for the inclusion of such justices and judges in any retirement law of the State."

This has been moved by Delegate Ohrt and seconded.

TAVARES: I rise to a point of order. I submit that this entire series of amendments is now hopelessly confusing, and I submit that we should take them up in regular order. First, Delegate Ashford's amendment should be either considered as being moved to be amended further or we should vote on it. I submit that this is so confusing now we can't vote on anything.

CHAIRMAN: The amendments that now are in are amendments to the section rather than amendments to one another. Therefore, it would be perfectly in order to take the amendments up in the sequence that they were given. The Chair would, therefore, like to state that the first amendment to be considered will be Delegate Ashford's amendment, which has now been distributed.

ASHFORD: In reply to what the chairman of the Judiciary Committee had to say, may I say this. He said that this was a blow at the independence of the judiciary. It is not because no dimunition of salary can be made except by a general law applying to all officers of State. Now, if we -- our state goes into a serious depression, is there anyone who really believes the judges should be immune to the effects of that depression and have their salaries stand unchanged while everyone else has a cut?

CHAIRMAN: The question is the adoption of the amendment to Section 6. Does everyone understand the amendment or do you wish it read again?

NIELSEN: Will you please read it.

HEEN: I note in the written amendment, it reads, "insert after diminish." The word is "diminished" and not "diminish."

ASHFORD: I made that correction when I - -

CHAIRMAN: That correction was made from the floor.

ASHFORD: And the big "U" should be a small "u."

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. That correction was made, that the word should be "diminished" and the "U" should be a small "u." The section would then read: "The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall receive for their services such compensation as may be provided by law, which shall not be diminished unless by law applying in equal measure to all officers of the State." And then continuing on with the last two sentences. "They shall retire upon attaining the age of 70 years. Provisions for pensioning them shall be made by law."

HEEN: It seems to me the period after the word "office" should be changed to a comma and then insert the clause, "unless by law applying in equal measure to all officers of the State."

ASHFORD: I accept that suggestion.

CHAIRMAN: That would seem to be in order.

HEEN: While we are dealing with the amendment of - - with amendments to this particular sentence, I think the word "continues in" should be changed to read "their respective terms of office," "shall not be diminished during their respective terms of office." In other words, if you set a salary of $10,000 for a circuit judge, that should hold during his term of office of six years. It should not be diminished during that term, but there might come a time when the legislature might diminish the salary of all circuit judges from $10,000 to $9,000 so that if this particular judge receiving $10,000 is reappointed, then upon his reappointment, he will receive only $9,000; whereas the word "continues" might mean the continuing or holding of office by appointment and reappointment. Therefore, the reduction, I mean the provision as to prohibiting the reduction of compensation should apply to the term of office of the particular judge. So in connection with this amendment, I think the language should be, "which shall not be diminished during their respective terms of office, unless by law applying in equal measure to all officers of the State."

ASHFORD: I'll accept that.

BRYAN: The two amendments offered, the one we are speaking on now by the delegate from Molokai and the one by Delegate Ohrt, would seem to me would apply equally to either the section as written or the other amendment proposed by Delegate White, and I would ask either that we take up Delegate White's proposal first or that he be willing to accept these amendments to his amendment if they are passed.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate White.

WHITE: If the intention is to have the judges participate in any reductions below the amount initially fixed for the office, I'm perfectly willing to withdraw my amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The question is now the adoption of the amendment as proposed by Miss Ashford - - Delegate Ashford, amended by Delegate Heen, and the amendment accepted by the original movant. That means that the section will read as follows: "The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall receive for their services such compensation as may be provided by law, which shall not be diminished during their respective terms of office, unless by law applying in equal measure to all officers of the State. They shall retire upon attaining the age of 70 years. Provisions for pensioning them shall be made by law."

Are you ready for the question?

WHITE: Will that preclude the amendment of that last section to mine?

CHAIRMAN: We're voting only on the amendment now. We're not voting on the section as amended. You would still have time to make further amendments to the section.

HEEN: The amendment applies only to the first sentence of that section, so that the other two sentences will still be subject to amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. All those in favor of this amendment say "aye." Opposed. Carried. The amendment is carried.

I'll recognize Delegate White now. Do you still wish - -

WHITE: I'll withdraw my amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Your amendment has been withdrawn.

Delegate Ohrt now has an amendment on the floor which changes the last sentence.

OHRT: Speaking to that amendment, the last sentence reads, "Provision for pensioning them shall be made by law." I'd like to see that changed because it, if left alone, it will provide the means by which the judges will be given special pensions, which I think will be discriminatory.

We now have in terms of a retirement system, one of the most liberal retirement systems in the country. There are now 16,000 members with reserves of some $45,000,000. It is on a reserve basis; it is a contributory plan in which the employee contributes his share and when he retires, he gets a retirement allowance. A retirement allowance consists of two parts, a pension which is the part that the Territory gives him, as well as an annuity which is made up from his own contributions. It requires a little individual effort on the part of the employee to keep up his own contributions and the law as drafted permits anyone who comes in late in life to look it over and decide what he wants when he retires. He can build up his annuities by contributing more money.

I think he ought to be - - or the judges ought to be given the same rules as the other 16,000 employees of the government. Otherwise, we are setting up some discrimination and I think our attorneys don't want to see any discrimination go into this Constitution. If left to the legislature their prior service in the event that they have served as attorneys for the government might be given them as prior service, and I think the whole thing will work out better if my amendment is adopted. I move for the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That's already been moved and seconded.

HEEN: I'm wondering if the delegate from Maui who is a judge of the circuit court there might yield to the question as to how they are treated with respect to retirement benefits.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Wirtz.

WIRTZ: You mean presently? The present circuit judges, being under the federal system, for some unknown reason, the circuit judges are considered members of the Federal retirement system. Five per cent of our pay is deducted towards that fund. The supreme court judges and justices are covered by a special act of Congress providing for their retirement on pay. I think it's on ratios of 1/16 for each year of service, is it not? That is the present system.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. Delegate Heen asked a question. He had the floor to - - HEEN: Yes. I was going to ask another question based on what the delegate has just stated, and that is whether or not the justices of the supreme court make any contributions.

WIRTZ: To my knowledge, the members of the supreme court make no contribution, but five per cent from the circuit judges is deducted from their pay.

ANTHONY: I think the movant of the amendment has lost sight of the difference in the character of the employees that he is dealing with. In the case of the Board of Water Supply or the public school system or any number of the other executive departments of government, you will have the employees who will go into the public service and remain there for a long period of time. Now, in the first place, a judge has to be a member of the bar for ten years before he can even be appointed. He then has a term, if he's on the supreme court of eight years - - seven years, or on the circuit court, six years.

Now, the difference in the two kinds of employment is simply this. A person who is of sufficient capacity and ability and notoriety in the profession to be appointed to the bench has got to have wide experience at the bar. Now, if he's going on the bench, he will then break off all his connections. The effort on the part of the states generally and the federal government is to make sure that a judge who serves a stated number of years on the bench may retire without having to go back into practice. Most of the states have provisions by statute which enable the judges to retire any place from one-half to full salary, and none of them, to my knowledge, have them in the uniform retirement system because of the fact that they are in a different category than other employees that spend their whole lives, from the minute they graduate from college till the time they die in the public service - - die or retire in the public service. And it is for that reason, in order to make the position on the bench attractive, there should be provision for their retirement.

This is wholly a matter of legislation. The debate in the committee was whether or not we should make it retirement on full salary or half salary or three-quarters salary. We finally decided to leave it up to the legislature entirely.

TAVARES: I speak against the amendment. I realize that the delegate who proposed it has his heart and soul so much in this retirement system which he helped so much to build. I think it is destroying his perspective a little bit. For one thing, our legislature now has provided for several types of pension systems. One is the county pension system which is based on no contributions at all. Another one is the police and firemen system which is a carry-over from the old system, and they make no contributions. And the third one is this retirement system.

Now, it seems to me that if we look around as Delegate Anthony has said, to the other systems, we will find that, for instance, the federal government today after ten years allows retirement of judges of the Circuit Courts of Appeal and the United States Supreme Court at full salary after ten years. And now they have - - the district judges have been given that privilege also, after ten years. We have now pending in the Congress, which we hope to get through, a bill that will give our circuit and supreme court justices here in Hawaii the same privilege of retiring on federal pensions after ten years instead of sixteen, or, say, the way they have it now. If you serve ten years, when you retire, you get ten-sixteenths, and if you serve sixteen years, then you get all of that full salary as your pension. It seems to me that we should not foreclose our legislature from examining all of the other systems.

I think it is very important that we bear in mind this. Your lawyers today, as they have always been, are some of the highest earners in the business, and every time you take a really good lawyer out of private practice and put him on the bench, you are going to ask him to make a substantial sacrifice in salary. You are also going to take him, as has been said, later in life than most people go into the territorial service. When they go into the territorial service, they first of all usually go when young, they have opportunities for promotion all the way through and they have increments, an increase of salary every year for five years. They have civil service which prevents them from being fired except for cause, but a judge under the system which this Convention has just adopted is going to have to take his chances on reappointment every six years. There is no merit in that situation. He doesn't even have that protection.

Now, if these - - if the members of this Convention really want to give security enough to these judgeships to attract the best men, I submit they should leave it to the legislature to experiment and to make up its mind to which system of pensions will help attract the best men, and should not tie their hands by forcing them to go into a retirement system which maybe our legislature will abolish someday if the federal social security, for instance, should be extended to territorial - - to our state officials, as it might be. I, therefore, hope that the delegates will vote against this amendment.

OHRT: I was quite interested in listening to the delegate from the fourth district. He's mentioned the county pension plan which we know is all wrong. He's mentioned the police and firemen's plan, which we also know is all wrong, and that we should treat everybody alike when it comes to pensions.

Now, as I have sat through this Constitutional Convention, I've heard a great deal about this use of this word "discrimination" and I think that if the lawyers or the attorneys insist on passing this, that they are just encouraging discrimination. We all know that it's statutory again. We shouldn't put anything statutory into this Constitution, but we're doing it.

Now, Delegate Wirtz from Maui said he was paying five per cent, he's probably - -

CHAIRMAN: Will the delegate suspend a moment. If you'll hold your microphone a little closer, we can all hear a little better.

OHRT: Delegate Wirtz said that he was paying five per cent. He's probably a member of the federal plan that's applied to everybody, and they are getting the same treatment, and, I think, that is rather important.

Now, Delegate Tavares said we were talking about microbes the other day when we were talking about a few dollars. As a matter of fact, we are really talking dollars and cents. Let's take an example of a judge who is retiring and he is given ten thousand dollars, and he lives ten years. He is being given ten times ten thousand dollars or a hundred thousand dollars when he retires.

Now, I want to give you my own example. I've been in the service 35 years. I've made my contributions and I've gotten my share of prior service and I can retire anytime now, and after 35 years I would get about 40 per cent of my salary, half of which I have taken care of in my own annuity.

Now, the lawyers who insist on a hundred per cent pension, I think are just discriminating in favor of themselves. They are different, apparently a different type of human being; therefore, they should get all this - - these favors, and I hope that this Convention votes for this amendment.

ANTHONY: There's one statement by the movant which I can't allow to go unnoticed. He says that the lawyers are trying to put statutory provisions in the Constitution. That's precisely what we do not want, and that's why we have left it to future legislation. What Mr. Ohrt wants to do is to put legislation in the Constitution to tie the hands of a future legislature. And I'm opposed to that.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

OHRT: That clause could be easily eliminated entirely and then the legislature could take care of it in its own way, but when it's tied up to pensions, that means a non-contributory plan and the lawyers may not realize it, but that's what they are trying to put into this Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? All those in favor of the amendment say "aye." Opposed. I think we should have a showing of hands. All those in favor of the amendment will raise their right hands. Will all those in favor raise their right hand, please.

DELEGATE: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: All those favoring roll call raise their hand. Roll Call. All those in favor of the amendment will vote "aye." Opposed will vote "no." The Clerk will please call the roll.

Ayes, 30. Noes, 23 (Anthony, Apoliona, Cockett, Corbett, Crossley, Doi, Fukushima, Hayes, Heen, Kellerman, Lai, Larsen, Mizuha, Porteus, C. Rice, H. Rice, Richards, Shimamura, Tavares, White, Wirtz, Woolaway, King). Not voting, 10 (Fong, Gilliland, Lee, Loper, Mau, Sakai, Silva, Smith, A. Trask, Wist).

CHAIRMAN: The motion has carried. The amendment has carried.

MIZUHA: Now for the record, do I take it that the delegate from the fourth - - fifth district who proposed this amendment and which passed, will mean only one retirement law, or will it be any other retirement law that we may have for judges separately? How can you bind our legislature? What retirement law are we going to deal with?

OHRT: Well, the only one - -

CHAIRMAN: Would the delegate from the fifth district care to answer?

OHRT: The only one that we now have 16,000 members in.

MIZUHA: Can our legislature get another retirement law?

CHAIRMAN: Will you address the Chair please, Mr. Mizuha.

MIZUHA: Mr. Chairman, may I ask another question?

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

MIZUHA: Can our legislature pass another retirement law?

OHRT: The legislature may, but I'm sure that they won't discriminate as much as this will appear to be.

MIZUHA: And there's another question that I would like to ask, Mr. Chairman. Does the delegate from the fifth district intend that we will eliminate our policemen's and firemen's pension law and the county pension system under a separate article in the Constitution or section in the Constitution?

CHAIRMAN: Would you care to answer that?

OHRT: Those that are now in the police system already have a contract, and I'm sure the legislature is not going to repeal that. But everybody that's been in - - that has joined the police department since nineteen hundred and twenty six are now in the standard system. That applies to the firemen; that applies to every other government employee, and that's what we would like to see. Everybody given the same treatment, which is, I think, one of the basic tenets that I have heard the attorneys arguing on here for the last 40 days.

HEEN: I'd like to point out that the pension system for firemen, policemen and bandsmen will eventually become functus after the last fireman, after the last bandsman, and after the last policeman dies who are entitled to the benefits under that system. And as to the county system, the same thing applies. When the last county pension person entitled to pension dies that system will also become functus.

CHAIRMAN: The question now before us is the adoption of the proposal of the section as amended.

HAYES: I have a question in my mind. Supposing the judge is not reappointed at the end of his second term. How would he continue, does he -- he doesn't continue to put his retirement in there, would he?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ohrt, would you like to, care to answer that.

OHRT: He could leave the service, leave his funds within the system, and at the age of 55, go in and get whatever the formula gives him. Again like everybody else.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

PORTEUS: I don't think we need to get too excited about this, but on the other hand I think that we can all perceive that the judge is not going to be treated as the ordinary government employee is. So far as I can see, the judge is not going to have the protection of civil service. He's going to have a six-year term only. There are a number of other aspects in the position of the judge that is different from the government employee. He is one of the living representatives of the judiciary department as distinguished from the executive. So far as I can see, under the particular clause, we now have the word "retirement." If the legislature determines that if such a small amount would be given to a judge after six years service as to render it almost next to nothing as compared to someone who may have been able to acquire after 35 years service some 40 per cent of his pay, then it will rest with the legislature to determine whether or not perhaps the higher contribution, a higher percentage might well be required for the judges and in turn, in the long run, those judges given higher benefits for the number of years that they are in service. As far as I can see, this matter leaves it for the legislature to provide. Even under a retirement system, there is a pension that's involved in that because the Territory is making a contribution. It's not just the contribution of the employee.

So it seems to me that this leaves the matter at such a position that if the legislature does not wish to make special provision for judges, and a retirement bill, they will go in with the other 16,000. If, however, the attorneys and judges are able to persuade the legislature that this is not the best system, and that another system should be set up that would be equitable, and would not discriminate against other employees, that course would be open. I'm satisfied to leave that decision, now that the delegates have spoken, in the hands of the future legislatures of the State of Hawaii.

HEEN: I'd like to find out if the delegate from the fifth district will yield to a question.

CHAIRMAN: Will you state the question, please.

HEEN: The question is this. Are the district magistrates who are now appointed for terms of two years, are they -- have they joined the retirement system?

CHAIRMAN: Would the delegate care to answer that?

OHRT: If they are government employees, they must become members of the system.

HEEN: Well, do you know as a matter of fact that they are?

OHRT: I don't know, but the law is that any government employee on a permanent job must become a member of the system.

ASHFORD: I can answer that question. I was appointed magistrate for a short period of time and I was a member of that system and without particular election either.

BRYAN: I think that further discussion on this might be ruled out of order.

CHAIRMAN: The section has not been adopted yet, therefore, the question is still open. The Section 6 should be -- now they should move for the adoption of Section 6 as amended.

TAVARES: Because I think this thing is so important, I am going to move to defer action on this matter. The question is not whether any lawyer is going to get a break in a pension. The question is, if you adopt this section as it now stands, do you want to get the best possible caliber for your judges, the people who are going to have the right of power of life and death over those accused of capital offenses, the people who are going to determine, perhaps, whether people are going to get large judgments or going to lose very important cases, who are going to decide the constitutionality of your statutes, and all those very, very absolutely vital things that a judge must do.

It seems to me that the attitude here at this Convention is that we lawyers are trying to do something selfish for ourselves as lawyers. As a matter of fact, that is furth- - est from our minds. We know and believe that the function of a judge is so important that the public, not just the lawyers—and the public are the ones that suffer from the mistakes of judges—that the public is entitled not to just any ordinary lawyer being appointed judge but to the best possible men and women that they can attract to that bench. And to the extent to which they fail to achieve that goal, they are being to that extent unjust to the public.

CHAIRMAN: Did the delegate wish to move to defer?

TAVARES: I therefore move to defer until further -- we can think this matter a little more -- over a little longer.

CHAIRMAN: I'd like to point out to Delegate Tavares that this is the last section to be adopted. We have completed all other sections of this, and this is the third day of almost continuous debate.

PHILLIPS: I second the motion for a deferral.

PORTEUS: Mr. Chairman, is it in order for me to speak to the matter of deferral?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

PORTEUS: May I point out that under a provision requiring a pension system, you are waiting the pleasure of the legislature as to how much that will be. The same legislature that will provide a 50 per cent of salary after ten years time can surely see its way clear to providing a 50 per cent retirement after ten years based on some contribution, so I can't see that the thing -- the fight is won or lost depending on the words that are used here. So long as the Committee on Judiciary has not brought a provision in that says it will have to be 50 per cent of salary, you are going to have to turn to the legislature and find out what it's willing to give you, and it ought to be able to -- it ought to be willing to give you just as much under the wording "retirement" as it will give you under the word "pension." The same factors, the same arguments will have to be presented, and I am against deferring this matter.

TAVARES: Under the understanding that that is the meaning of this provision, the legislature does have some discretion, I'll withdraw my motion to defer.

SAKAKIHARA: I move that the amendment as agreed be adopted.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Phillips, you had seconded the motion. Is that satisfactory with you?

PHILLIPS: I'll withdraw my second.

SAKAKIHARA: Now, I move that the amendment as agreed be adopted.

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is the adoption of Section 6 as amended.

MIZUHA: In connection with this question of retirement of judges, I'd like to point out one fact, and I believe we have a jurist here who is serving under the federal government on the circuit bench on Maui. Now, he makes his contributions to the federal government for his retirement system. I'd like it to be made clear in the record that it was the intent of this body that in the event we become a State of the Union, that those years of service that he served on the bench on Maui will be considered by our legislature as though they were years of service with the State or the Territory of Hawaii in the computation of his retirement income.

CHAIRMAN: I don't know that it would be in order for that to be anything more than the statement of the discussion on the floor.

The question now is the adoption of Section 6. You ready for the question?

SAKAKIHARA: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the adoption of Section 6 as amended will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

ROBERTS: I'm going to move that we reconsider Section 5 which was acted on by the Convention on the motion of the delegate from the fourth to delete. Section 5 provides for a separate machinery for the handling of judges who are incapacitated and are unable to perform their judicial functions. Section 4 as amended, provides for removal on the basis of a law to be established by the legislature which carries certain stigma attached to it, more in the form of an impeachment. I think the original purpose of the committee in Section 5, as set out in their report, indicates a very useful function and it seems to me that that section should be left in the proposal. I will therefore move that we reconsider our action on Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

KELLERMAN: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we reconsider our action in the deletion of Section 5. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. The section is now open for debate.

ROBERTS: I now move the adoption of Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

KELLERMAN: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 5 be adopted.

HEEN: I have a suggestion to make, that is, instead of having the supreme court certify to the governor, have a commission or agency as may be authorized by law certify to the governor. In other words, "Whenever a commission or agency authorized by law for such purpose shall certify to the governor that it appears any justice" and so forth and so on. If that appeals to the delegates, I will change that into a motion.

ROBERTS: I'll accept that amendment.

HEEN: I move that the words the "supreme court" be deleted and in lieu thereof insert the words "a commission or agency authorized by law for such purpose."

ASHFORD: I second the motion.

ROBERTS: It is acceptable.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has been accepted.

HOLROYDE: I understand the original reason for removing Section 5 was because Section 4 had been liberalized. I wonder if you could have somebody read the new Section 4. I don't seem to have the amended version of it here.

ANTHONY: I have it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, would you read Section 4 as amended, please?

ANTHONY: "The justices of the supreme court and judges of the circuit courts shall be subject to removal from office upon the concurrence of two-thirds of the membership of each house of the legislature, sitting in joint session, for such causes and in such manner as may be provided by law." That's the substitute for the impeachment section.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. Any further questions on that? The Chair was in order in stating that the amendment offered by Delegate Heen could be accepted by Delegate Roberts, inasmuch as Delegate Roberts had moved for the adoption of the section as such. Therefore, we would have to vote on the amendment first.

HEEN: Correct.

CHAIRMAN: And if you would be good enough to restate the amendment, we can vote on the amendment and then on the section as amended.

HEEN: My motion was this. Delete the words "the supreme court" in the first line of Section 5 and insert in lieu thereof the words "a commission or agency authorized by law for such purpose." That motion I understand was seconded.

CHAIRMAN: That motion was seconded. I'd like to have another second just for the record. Delegate Ashford, I believe seconded it.

ASHFORD: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

RICHARDS: As I have understood frequently in discussions here in this Convention that where there is a question of interpretation, the action of the Convention is used as a basis for determination. There were two different amendments presented to this Convention, both of which were voted down, which provided for interim suspension of judges between the meetings of the legislature. Now, if I understand previous interpretations, if this Convention takes no further action, it will automatically mean that the judges will have absolute power to remain in office between meetings of the legislature. And I ask, is it the wish of this Convention that that interpretation shall stand on the record?

PORTEUS: May I point out that under Section 5 that we now have under consideration that on the certification by this agency or commission to the governor, the governor himself is given the power to retire the particular judge in question, and will not need the attendance of the legislature in order to accomplish -- to carry out this particular section. Now, this does give you the alternative of providing one of several ways in order to achieve the same end.

RICHARDS: In answer to that, it says that this can only operate if a judge is so incapacitated as substantially to prevent him from performing his duties. That is the only reason why this commission can certify. Now I don't know if a man accused of a crime -- of a high crime is incapacitated or not.

ANTHONY: The original purpose of keeping these two sections separate was to have separated in the judiciary article a removal when a judge has done something bad from the situation in which you remove a judge simply because of decrepitude or incapacitated, and I think that they should be kept separate. If Delegate Richards wants to offer further amendment to remove judges who have committed murder during their time of office, we could then debate that. But I don't think we ought to confuse it with this particular section.

CHAIRMAN: In the previous discussion of this section, many amendments were made along that line. It seemed to the Chair that the two subjects are quite widely removed, one dealing with Section 4 and one with Section 5; that amendments were already made along this line, I believe by Delegate Richards; and unless the amendments offered now are totally different, why the Chair will rule them out of order.

RICHARDS: The amendments were offered as with respect with Section 4, not Section 5. I merely brought up the subject to Section 5 as to whether or not such an amendment could be included or if it was the wish of the Convention to grant judges absolute immunity during the interim period of the meetings of the legislature. That's up to the Convention.

CHAIRMAN: Do you have an amendment, Delegate Richards?

RICHARDS: I do not. Since my amendment was voted down, I leave it entirely up to the Convention and to the members of the bar if they wish to propose such an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the amendment will say "aye." Opposed. Carried.
The motion now is to adopt Section 5 as amended.

ROBERTS: I move that we adopt Section 5 as amended.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we adopt Section 5 as amended. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.
That completes all sections.

LAI: If there's no further question on this proposal No. 7, I move that we rise and recommend passage of No. 7.

CHAIRMAN: We have completed all other sections. All sections of the proposals are now complete.

MIZUHA: At this time for the purposes of the record, I would like to move that in the passage of the amendment to Section 7 and Section 7 as a whole, it was the intention of this body that in the writing of any retirement law for the judges of the future State of Hawaii that the prior service of our circuit judges and supreme court justices would be considered as though they were officers of the Territory of Hawaii in the transition period.

ARASHIRO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that? You've all heard the motion. Delegate Woolaway.

WOOLAWAY: Point of order. I imagine he means [Section] 6.

CHAIRMAN: That's not Section 7, he's talking to Section 6. Ready for the question?

OHRT: I have no particular objection to that. That was one of the real reasons why it should go to the legislature. If the legislature decided that they wanted to give these people prior service, either on a contributory plan or a non-contributory plan, it could be decided at that time.
While I'm on my feet, I'd also like to point out to the delegate from the fourth district that he said we were all under civil service. I want to comment that I serve at the pleasure of my own board. Most of the department heads in the government will serve at the pleasure of their boards. So we haven't got that protection that the delegate from the fourth district thinks we have.

CHAIRMAN: Well, I think that the subject is no longer germane to the discussion before us and the question is now on another motion. Unless you wish to speak to that motion --

TAVARES: I just want to say, we don't have staggered term boards to protect our judges, either.

CHAIRMAN: I said that that is out of order.

HEEN: I now move that this article be --

CHAIRMAN: We have a motion before the Committee of the Whole at the present time that prior service be counted in the new state pensioning system, if and when. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

HEEN: I move that this Convention adopt Committee Proposal No. 7 as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we adopt Committee -- we are sitting as Committee of the Whole, we don't adopt it, we rise and make the recommendation. If you will restate the motion --

HEEN: No, I was going to say this, that we adopt it as a matter of form. Then the next motion should be to rise and report progress so that the chairman of the committee, this committee may prepare his written report.

CHAIRMAN: And will you please state that the Chair will need quite a few days.

HEEN: Right.

CHAIRMAN: Motion is on the adoption of Committee Proposal 7. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried. I think that there is some question. All those in favor of adopting Committee Proposal No. 7 as amended say "aye." Opposed. It's carried.

It is now proper to make the motion that we rise and report.

HEEN: I now move that this committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again in order to consider the written report of the chairman of this committee.

WOOLAWAY: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

JUNE 23, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole please come to order.

HOLROYDE: Point of information. Could somebody please interpret the top part of this for me?

CHAIRMAN: I might say that the chairman of the committee apologizes for the fly sheet. That was supposed only to go to those listed, so it will please be detached from the report. It means by royal order, etc.

You have had distributed to you the entire report, and today two corrections on the proposal itself, pages 2 and 3 of the proposal, the last two pages. You'll note RD 1 on page 2, RD 1 on page 3. That is no change in what took place. It was simply an error in copying the report and having left out in one case, in the case of Section 5, the words in the first line beginning with "authorized by law for such purpose." I reviewed this with Delegate Wirtz; I showed him the original minutes that I had and those words were there.

In Section 6, the next to the last sentence, "They shall retire upon attaining the age of 70 years," I did the same thing. Delegate Anthony had also checked it and both of those corrections were in my notes and in the action that we took.

The committee report, therefore, having been circulated, is now ready for action. I'll recognize the chairman of the Committee on Judiciary.

ANTHONY: I move the adoption of the committee report, and that the proposal attached pass second reading, if that's in order.

CHAIRMAN: That is in order. It's the adoption of the committee report with a recommendation that the proposal attached thereto pass second reading.

PORTEUS: I'll second the motion, if no one else has.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded. All those in - -

TAVARES: I am very sorry to confess that I have not yet fully studied this report, and I wonder if we could - - I don't want to hold up the adoption of the report, but if the gentlemen wouldn't feel too hurt if later on I moved to reconsideration, if I find any grave error which I don't think I will. But not having gone through this, and this being one of the major departments of government—I've been on a few other reports and things—I'll vote for it with that warning, and I hope that the delegates wouldn't be offended later on if I did do that.

PORTEUS: May we do what the captain of the ship did to the gunner's mate who failed to strap down the gun? After the gun broke loose and the man at the risk of his own life got it together again, first he gave him a medal and then he shot him. I'd be very happy if the delegate from the fourth district finds a grave error in this, to join with him in a motion to reconsider, and then I'll shoot him.

CHAIRMAN: I would like to state - - The Chair would like to state that I spent all of last weekend and quite some hours, about 18 hours, writing this up. I did present it to everyone, and I know how busy they have all been. We have delayed it day by day and I have promised the President that today was the absolute deadline.

I'll put the motion. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed. Unanimously carried.

DOWSON: I move that the committee rise and report the adoption - - recommend the adoption of the committee proposal and the report - -

CHAIRMAN: On second reading.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the committee rise and report the adoption of the committee report and the recommendation that Committee Proposal No. 7 in Committee of the Whole Report No. 8 pass second reading. All in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on

TAXATION AND FINANCE

(Article VI)

Chairman: NELSON K. DOI

JUNE 6, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come into session.

We have before us the consideration of Standing Committee Report No. 41. I believe it has been already circulated, and you will find it in one of your folders. At this time I would like to call on Mr. White to point out the issues before this committee.

WHITE: If the question that we're to consider now is the recommendation of the Committee on Finance and Taxation that the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law draft an ordinance which would provide in effect, that home exemption would continue until December 31, 1949 [i. e. 1959], that for the reason that in the proposal of the Committee on Finance and Taxation, no provision has been made for home exemptions, in order to bring this matter before the committee, I'd like to move the adoption of the committee report.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to it?

DELEGATE: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that committee -- Standing Committee Report No. 41 be adopted. Discussion.

WHITE: Now, in support of this motion, I'd like to give you a little information that I think has a bearing on it. In the first place, in starting off I think it might be well to refer to the action taken by the committee, and I'll read it.

"The chairman suggested that the question of home exemption be discussed and drew attention to the memorandum on this subject. Several of the members were in favor of abolishing home exemption but it was pointed out that this would probably not be acceptable to the public. The chairman, Mr. Castro, and Mr. Tavares were in favor of immediate abolition and Mr. Yamamoto was in favor of retaining home exemption but making it a flat $1500. Mr. Tavares stated: 'Is the strength of our country only in home ownership or is it in the strength of industries?' After considerable discussion pro and con, the members compromised on the principle of no home exemption with the understanding that an ordinance be written that it would not take effect until January 1, 1960."

Now, in starting it might be well to say that Mr. Mizuha was not present at the meeting, although a member of the committee, and that in the filing of the report both Mr. Mizuha and Mr. Yamamoto were opposed, or did not concur in the action taken by the committee.

Now, subsequently, copies of this memorandum or of a memorandum entitled "Spreading the burden of property taxes on all property through the elimination of home exemption" was distributed to all delegates and I would suggest that each of you get a copy of this memorandum before you for reference. I might summarize the memorandum briefly. First of all, it points out that while in theory home exemption is intended to encourage home ownership, in actual practice it plays a minor part in influencing people to own their own homes. Second, home exemption is both unsound and discriminatory in its application. Third, it weakens the tax structure and complicates the job of financing the cost of government. If we had no home exemption, that limitation to the state and county could be set at 18 per cent of assessed value of taxed property, in order to justify limits of 75 million dollars, the minimum that the committee believes will be needed in order to take care of the present situation.

ANTHONY: Could the speaker ask us -- tell us the date of that memorandum that he has referred to? I don't seem to have it here.

WHITE: The date of it is May 22, 1950. It wasn't printed by the Convention; it was printed by the committee and circulated to all delegates. I have a few extra copies here.

CROSSLEY: May 23 is the date.

WHITE: As I said a minute ago, in order to support a debt limit of 75 million dollars, that would require a ratio of 18 per cent. Now, if home exemption continues, that percentage would have to be increased to 22 1/2 per cent. Now, in extending this concession to a limited group of people, the net result is to transfer the burden to other tax payers, including a great number who would be unable to own homes under any circumstances. Further than that, because you, by extending the home exemption, cut down the taxable value to an extent where you are in effect at present rates, making exemptions of about two million dollars, that will mean that that amount of money will have to be made up from other sources, in which event the home owners will be required to pay some of it, although it may not be proportionate to the amount of their exemption.

Exhibits -- attached to the memorandum of May 22, there are a group of exhibits which I might summarize as follows: (a) only 12 states permit home exemption; (b) the Territory will lose over two million dollars in revenue in 1950 because of home exemption, or, if home exemption is eliminated it is estimated that the average tax rate could be reduced $5.76 per thousand, and yet raise the same amount of money. Now, if you apply it -- if you break it down into classes of homes, of homes having an assessed value of $1500 or less, $1500 to $3000, $3001 to $5000, and over $5000, the exhibits show this: that 7,359 home owners pay no real property taxes at all and yet receive all the benefits of government, such as fire, and police protection, schools, and so forth; 9,839 home owners pay taxes on an aggregate assessed value of $3,576,000 or an average assessed value of $363 per home, which at a tax rate of $30 per thousand amounts to only a tax of $11 per year; 8,681 home owners pay taxes on an aggregate assessed value of $10,295,000, or an average assessed value of $1186, which at a tax rate of $30 per thousand amounts to but $35 a year. Now, 5,996 home owners pay taxes on an aggregate value of $30,000,880, or an average assessed value of $5,150, which at a tax rate of $30 per thousand amounts to $155 per year. Thus, there are 31,875 home owners who would have been granted home exemptions. The average assessed value of all their homes is $1404 which at $30 per thousand would produce an average tax of but $42 per year.

The discrimination also exists as between counties. For instance, in the County of Honolulu, 57.76 per cent of the assessed value of all real property occupied as homes is exempted from property taxes. The percentage in the other counties is as follows: Maui, 72.69 per cent; Hawaii, 75.45 per cent; Kauai, 72.89 per cent. The range on lease property runs from 58.82 per cent in the case of Oahu to 95.82 per cent on the Island of Maui. In free property, the range is from 57.71 on the Island of Oahu to 75.34 per cent on the Island of Hawaii. Home exemption also affects the over-all assessed value as between the counties and the amount of the debt each can incur, as the following comparison shows: the percentage of assessed value of taxes to real property in the City and County of Honolulu to the total assessed value is 76.02 per cent prior to home exemptions, and 74.83 if you have home exemption; for Maui, the percentages are 8.5 as against 9.08; Hawaii, 10.24 as against 10.43; and for Kauai 54.24 as against 5.66.

I should like to emphasize that there are approximately 32,000 owners of homes appraised at 112 million receiving home exemption of $67,500,000, so, as a matter of fact, they're getting -- about 60 per cent of the assessed value is eliminated. And there are over 60,000 taxpayers who do not receive the benefit of such exemptions.

In all my discussions on the subject, no one has submitted a valid argument for continuing this type of exemption. All of the reluctance to prohibit the granting of homestead exemptions in the Constitution is influenced by political or emotional considerations. In my judgment, we delegates were sent to the Convention to draft a Constitution which was in the best interests of the State of Hawaii and its people, and I do not feel that our judgment should be influenced by political -- by personal, political, or emotional considerations.

That's all I have to say, Mr. Chairman, but I'd be very happy to answer any questions that anybody has, and I have some other committee members here who are willing to assist.

CHAIRMAN: Anyone who wishes to be recognized?

H. RICE: Originally in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii I did not vote for home exemption. I thought that, just what the speaker said, our chairman said that the same people that had home exemption believed in -- should have the policing, the fire protection and so forth. But it's on the books now, and even the last legislature went further and gave those who were interested in leaseholds an exemption.

As I say, so far as I'm concerned, I think of the people that are getting homes on the understanding that they have home exemptions at the present time. The average home that's being built in the so-called Dream City on Maui costs around $7500, the lot costs only $100, and in amortizing this loan over a period of 20 years, it will cost them, I understand, the average home-owner, $46. Now, if we charge them with $32.50, at the present county rate on Maui it would increase this amount by $8 per month per year or instead of $46, which I claim is high enough for those people to pay, there'd be an average of $54 per month. To me—and that's just one part of Maui. Pioneer and Wailuku Sugar Company are encouraging their people in good faith. They are all building with the understanding that they will get this exemption from taxation up to the $32.50.

I say that you'll find that a state like New Jersey who has just drawn a model Constitution has left the exemption from taxation entirely in the hands of the legislature. I signed the majority report, but I feel that on this matter I've changed my mind, and so far as I'm concerned I'd rather leave the home exemption up to the legislature, and leave all exemptions intact as they are at the present time. So, so far as I'm concerned, I'm against the inclusion of the home exemptions in the Constitution.

MIZUHA: As one of the members of the Committee of Taxation and Finance that signed his name to the report and added the phrase, "I do not concur," I wish to state this fact: that the subject of exemption from taxation is a matter for the State legislature to decide in future sessions, and it is -- it should not be written into the Constitution. And examination of the various state constitutions on the mainland would indicate that there is no such provision placing just homes in the Constitution, eliminating home exemptions, but they might provide for other types of exemption, but just to single out the homes itself is something that is going against the traditions of constitutional provisions. And I may be wrong in that statement, but maybe in a great majority of the states they do not specifically state in the constitution that there shall be no home exemption.

LARSEN: [Beginning of statement not on tape] ... the Finance Committee, I imagine it's been considered, but it seems to me that one thing that makes a state strong is to have homes and the one thing that some countries have tried is even to endow each infant. I'm in favor of -- anybody who is willing to marry and have a home and have children should be given some recognition. It seems to me the one thing that we want is to have more people buy homes, and if this is merely a little come-on, I just wondered what the thinking was in not trying to stimulate more home-buying, rather than less.

ANTHONY: I have a great deal of sympathy with the chairman of the Taxation Committee in endeavoring in a constitutional article to eliminate exemptions. Several years ago, when I was attorney general, I think it was Senator Rice called at my office and posed to me the problem, the mounting problem of exemptions. If you will examine Section 51-51 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii, you will find there 20 or 30 specific exemptions, some of which are for religious and charitable purposes, others are not; some of which are within the provisions of the Organic Act which prohibit the legislature from granting any special privileges or immunities, and some do not. This is an effort, as I understand it, on the part of the Taxation Committee to get rid of this bad system of particular exemptions and addressing itself to one question alone, namely home exemptions.

I think the question whether or not we should incorporate this in the Constitution should devolve about whether or not there will be a greater burden placed upon individuals. If we are satisfied that the individual home owner in the last analysis will not pay any more in taxes, then it seems to me that this is a constructive step to eliminate a very bad legislative practice that we've gotten into, namely a number of exemptions from real property taxes. Exemptions, as I view it, should be confined to religious and charitable -- educational and charitable institutions, not such as we have under 51-51 of the present Revised Laws. If the chairman could explain that further, I think it would be of some assistance to the Convention.

WHITE: To answer Dr. Larsen's question first, sure, I'm heartily in favor of encouraging home exemption, but I don't think that you should favor home exemption to a certain group at the expense of all the other residents of this Territory. And that's what you're actually doing is to pass two million dollars of tax burden from 30,000 people on the other 60,000 people because the amount of taxes to be raised is proportionately increased.

To talk to Mr. Anthony, to Mr. Rice also, I'll agree that this in normal times is a legislative proposition, but in my opinion the legislature has fallen down on its job for a great many years in allowing this thing to continue on the way it's been going because it's going from bad to worse. Now, if we're -- we sit around here and talk about the Bill of Rights and all the rest of the things and eliminating discrimination and then we allow rank discrimination in taxation to go on.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask Mr. White if they considered in the committee a proposal to the effect that there should be no tax exemptions except by general law and if that would'nt clear up some of the points that Mr. Anthony mentioned.

WHITE: As the proposal is now written, any -- the provisions that have to do with tax exemptions are written on a permissive basis to try to protect the wide range of exemptions that are presently in effect, but that doesn't mean that they have to be continued by the legislature. If you were to go over the number of exemptions, probably the largest -- the longest provision I think that we have in the proposal is on home -- on tax exemptions to take care of the present situation. Now, it's drawn in a way that it's permissive, it's not mandatory so that the legislature can change them at any time.

ASHFORD: I would like to ask the chairman a question. Is it not true that in a very substantial measure the home tax exemption is an equalizer in values? That is, when a man owns a large area of a thousand acres it's usually assessed at about $100 an acre, and when he sells a half acre for a home that's immediately assessed at about $10,000.

WHITE: Well, I think that that is more opinion. I doubt whether that could be [inaudible]. There may be instances of it, but nevertheless I don't think that any attempt should be made to equalize taxes by home exemption, I think that's highly unsound. If there's something wrong with the basis of assessment that should be corrected.

HEEN: I would like to ask the chairman of the Taxation Committee this question. Does that committee have in mind the recommending of the adoption of the proposal relating to the exemption of real property and personal property in certain classification, then end up by saying, "All laws exempting from taxation property other than property enumerated in th at proposal shall be void"? In other words, there is a provision in the Constitution of Missouri which is I think quite appropriate, without mentioning home exemption. It's a short proposal -- provision, and I may read it:

> Exemption from taxation: All property, real and personal, of the State, counties and other political subdivisions, and non-profit cemeteries, shall be exempt from taxation; and all property, real and personal, not held for private or corporate profit, and used exclusively for religious worship, for schools and colleges, for purposes purely charitable, or for agricultural and horticultural societies may be exempted from taxation by general law. All laws exempting from taxation property other than the property enumerated in this article, shall be void.

Then you don't have to deal with the question of home exemption itself, you deal with it in a general statute.

WHITE: Well, that's just what we've endeavored to do, Senator Heen, in listing the exemptions. We list the properties that are -- that can be granted exemption, and it does not list homestead, so that it would automatically be eliminated. But the reason for the meeting today is because of the feeling on the part of a large part of the committee that to terminate it immediately Hawaii became a State would be unfair, and in order to give the people who had bought homes figuring on home exemption, a period of ten years in which to adjust their finances. That's the reason for this report.

HEEN: May I rise to a point of information. I'd like to get this from those who have been attached to the attorney general's office. We have homesteads under the homestead law belonging to various persons. Now, I believe under the law relating to public lands which have been set aside for homesteads that these homesteaders have to pay the real property taxes on those lands whenever they may not hold the title, and if that is so, they wouldn't have the benefit of this tax exemption because under the present statute the tax exemption on homes was made for the benefit of those who have fee simple title or those who hold leases for a certain term and have the right -- and who have, under the terms of the lease, the ownership of the improvements.

TAVARES: I'll try to answer that question. It's been some time now since I left the office of the attorney general, and I left before this new-fangled leasehold exemption was put into effect. It's my recollection that there is a provision in the land laws that where persons take a general lease of public lands, they shall be subject to taxation. I think the reason for that was that this is public land and the Congress didn't want it to be felt that because it was public land, even though under lease, it couldn't be taxed. I don't believe that that would prevent it from being taxed in an equitable manner or exempted in an equitable manner in the same way as other similar property, similarly used, is exempted. I think that would be the proper interpretation, and furthermore, if we became a State, I think we would -- that problem would probably not exist any longer. We could change those laws to a -- I think, to a substantial extent, depending on what we put in our Constitution, so as to eliminate that as far as the problem of taxation is concerned, in my opinion.

KING: In the first place, may I ask the chairman of the committee a question. The purpose of this meeting, as I understand it, in Committee of the Whole on Committee Report No. 41, is to get the consensus of the Convention with regard to the home exemption. If the committee report is voted down, the chairman of the Committee on Taxation and Finance would take it as the judgment of this Convention that the Constitution should not include a ban on home exemption, but leave it to the judgment of the legislature in the future and leave the existing law. That's the purpose for which this Committee of the Whole is meeting. Now, is that right?

WHITE: I'd say that the practical effect of the decision on whether or not this goes to the Committee of Ordinance really is a decision as to whether you want to continue home exemption or whether you want to ban it by the Constitution.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, what are you rising to? President King has the floor.

ANTHONY: Well, I'm rising to straighten out the statement which I think is erroneous, that we do not --

KING: I appeal for a point of order, but --

ANTHONY: No, I just wanted to straighten out one statement, President King, if I may.

KING: I yield, Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: There's no doubt there will be incorporated in the Constitution a provision, either in the legislative branch or some place else, against special privileges or immunities. Now, unless there is some exception made to that in favor of the special immunity which we're talking about, then I think there would have to be an affirmative statement in the Constitution granting the legislative exemption, or constitutional exemption, for home ownership. In other words, I don't think you've got to deny home ownership, but you've got to affirmatively vote for it in the Constitution, otherwise you won't have it.

KING: Well, the point that I wanted to make was this, that the purpose of this discussion on this particular committee report was to clear the air for the Committee on Taxation and Finance. Delegate White, as chairman of that committee, wanted the judgment of this Convention whether he should incorporate into the report of the Committee on Taxation and Finance a ban against home exemption. I have here the draft of that committee report and it lists the properties that may be exempt and does not include homes. Therefore, if we approve of this committee report, under some modified form, not as an order or an instruction to the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Laws, but in some other form, the chairman of the Committee on Taxation and Finance would take that as the go-ahead signal to include a ban on home exemption in his report, or the report of his committee. Is that correct?

WHITE: That's correct.

KING: On the other hand, if we table this committee report, the chairman of the committee would take that as the judgment of this Convention that no such ban should be incorporated in his committee's report. Now, I'm not going into the question of whether there should be some provision in the Constitution that explicitly permits home exemption. Now, I would like to speak in favor of the -- in opposition to the motion to adopt the committee report, and later may second or may initiate a motion to table that report.

I was a member of the Tax Commission that went into this quite thoroughly some years ago, when we organized our whole system of taxation. At that time the home exemption was already on the statute books of the Territory of Hawaii, and the Tax Commission argued the problem to and fro, and finally decided that it was a desirable piece of legislation and would not recommend its abolition; so it remained on the statute books. Even had the Tax Commission recommended its abolition, the legislature might not have followed out our advice.

Now, we're constantly criticized for the lack of general home ownership in the Territory of Hawaii. That is one of the points that's been made by many congressional visitors that have come here to the islands. We have tried over the years. You can go back into Hawaiian history and find that over a hundred years ago the kings of Hawaii made recommendations to the legislature to secure a wider distribution of land and a wider home ownership among the people, and right down to the time of President Dole, who made such a recommendation to the legislature of the Republic of Hawaii. My feeling is that this home exemption is an indirect subsidy to a man that is going to buy a home. Nevertheless, it's considered to be in the public interest, and in the general welfare.

The comparison made by the chairman with regard to the tax situation is not exactly correct, at least the figures are correct but they are limited in their use. The chairman of the Committee on Taxation and Finance has called attention to the fact that out of some millions of dollars worth of taxable homes, 67 million are exempt, about 60 per cent, and leaving 40 per cent. But the taxable real property of the Territory of Hawaii is 401 million dollars—that's homes and land that is not used for homes—so that the home exemption is 67 million out of 401 million, a very much smaller percentage of the sum total of all the real property owned in this territory.

And now, there's another point to consider. It was not only to increase the home ownership in the territory but increased improvement of land. A man may build a home, and up to a certain limit get 100 per cent exemption and up to another limit get a 50-50 exemption. Now, I don't consider that the exemptions in this day and age are very generous. The maximum total exemption is $3,250, at the current rate, it's approximately $100 a year. It does not increase with increase in value. A man who has a home that's worth 15, 25, or $50,000 gets no greater exemption than a man who has a home which is assessed at only $5,000; so the grant is not a very great grant. It was given with the idea of increasing home ownership, promoting the improvement of property, and getting wider distribution of land into the possession of the individual. It has accomplished its purpose, and to abolish it at this time would, in my opinion, be a mistake.

Nevertheless, I feel that the point that we should consider is not whether it should or should not be abolished, but whether we should leave it to the judgment of the legislature in the future.

There's another point I'd like to point out, although the parallel isn't exactly the same. Nevertheless, on the exemptions from real property taxes in this proposed draft of the proposal from the Committee on Taxation on exemption, they listed all kinds of properties that are going to be exempt. Homes are to be barred, but property dedicated to a forest reserve may be exempt by law. In other words, if I were the owner of 2,000 acres of land and didn't want to use 1500 acres of it, I'd put it in a forest reserve and escape taxation until such time as I wanted to withdraw and put it to some other use. Property set aside for reconstruction, redevelopment, rehabilitation is to be exempt. For a limited period, that's true, but nevertheless it's permissible to exempt it. Property essential to the conduct of a business, together with the improvements thereon, may be exempted from taxation. There again for a limited period, but nevertheless, the principle of subsidizing, if you want to use that word, of giving a grant-in-aid to people who own real property and are going to use it in the public benefit or in the general interest is accepted by this document which is a tentative draft of the committee report. So I feel --

SILVA: I second the motion we file it.

KING: Well, I am coming to that. I feel quite strongly that it would be a mistake for this Convention to incorporate in the Constitution any ban on the extension of home exemption I think that's a question that we could leave open to the legislature, with a probability that the legislature will not ban it. Thank you.

RICHARDS: I would like to ask a question of Mr. White to make sure that I heard his statement correctly. Do I understand that you state that there are approximately 30,000 home owners who have exemption as against 60,000 renters that have to pay the tax in their -- as part of their rent?

WHITE: I don't have the exact figures, but the best figure that the Tax Office could give us was that there were approximately a thousand -- I mean a hundred thousand home units, of which 30,000 are exempt.

RICHARDS: Well then, in other words, there are about 70,000 home units where the individuals will have to carry the load, the tax load of the people who own their homes. In other words those who cannot afford their homes.

KING: If the gentleman would yield.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Richards, will you yield for an explanation from President King?

RICHARDS: I yield.

KING: That doesn't put the situation fairly at all. There may be a hundred thousand family units in Hawaii, of whom 32,000 are exempt, but that doesn't mean that the 70,000 carry the load. The whole real property of the territory carries the load, including the land that is owned by businesses, corporations, and large estates. The renters don't carry the load. If you took the home exemption on a piece of rental property and allocated it to the tenants, their rent wouldn't go up or down fifty cents a month. The landlord would absorb the home exemption and pocket the difference. That's about the size of it.

RICHARDS: I question our worthy President's last statement; I have yet to hear of any landlord that's absorbed any tax.

I want to also point out to this Convention that this morning the Committee on Agriculture, Conservation and Lands adopted as one of its proposals - - one section of its proposal, "The public lands shall be used for the development of farm and home ownership on as widespread a basis as possible." This refers to approximately 180,000 acres that, according to HR 49, is to be returned to the Territory at this time. Now, if this - - rather this land now for the most part is under lease and full taxes are paid on this land. If this land is sold into farm and home ownership, it will further decrease the tax base on which taxes can be collected, if home ownership does give a tax exemption. Therefore, it will further increase the load on renters.

KING: The point to remember there [is] 10,000 acres of ranch land leased to one landlord, to one tenant, at valuation that's fair for that purpose, cut into homesteads with homes built on it, the home exemptions if applied would pay a larger tax than the original undeveloped land. There's no question about that. We see that in Honolulu all the time. A man buys 20 acres of land up here for 11 cents a square foot at Palolo Valley; he puts in roads and water, and builds houses on it and sells it for 50, 60, and 75 cents a foot. Even with the home exemption applied to that improved property occupied by home owners, the total tax revenue will be greater than that land was paying to the Territory of Hawaii before it was sold and developed as a subdivision. Any part of the homestead lands of the Territory of Hawaii that are now occupied by homesteaders is paying more revenue into the treasury of the Territory of Hawaii than it did when it wasn't so used. I live in a homestead area that is now—Delegate Ashford has a lot in the same area—that was under lease at two bits an acre years ago and was opened up to homesteads and sold for $50 an acre, now valued at something like 50 cents a square foot. The tax value has gone up by leaps and bounds, even with a home exemption in that particular area. That's true of every single area in the Territory that has been opened up for development for small farms and homes, even with the tax exemption applied to it.

KELLERMAN: I would like to speak on several points that have been made. In the first place, I'm speaking in favor of the committee report. We all know that home exemption is a so-called "hot potato." The question has been brought up in various legislatures, various sessions, for the last eight to ten years. It has consistently been ice-boxed because there were many who did not wish it to be known how they stood on such a controversial matter.

It seems to me that the delegates of this Convention were elected to do a job, that which they thought would be best for the Territory regardless of any political consequences to themselves. And it seems to me that we should judge this matter on its financial merits. We all know that when you reduce the amount of a tax base, you necessarily impose to that degree the extra load of tax upon those who are not - - who are included in the tax base. If we have home exemptions for 30,000 home owners to the degree that we have it, we necessarily are increasing to that degree taxes on the properties that are rented, and the renters then must pay increased tax.

It seems to me that if we view at large those persons who own their homes and those who do not own their homes, we will find that the greatest majority of the home owners are persons of greater wealth and therefore more able to pay the tax than those who are renting, and those who rent pay it just the same through the rent that they pay to the landlord. We are, as I see it, subsidizing those better able to pay a tax by relieving them of the obligation of paying a tax.

In the second place, the question was raised that our legislature indicated an extension of home exemption by including leaseholds. I happen to live in a leasehold area. I was a member of a community association which went into the matter, and over my vote went to the legislature—not that I could control, but I mean that I voted against the action—went to the legislature and attempted and pressurized through leasehold exemptions. I may state, and I think I can prove, that the entire argument in that association was that if home owners get exemption, we should get it. If home owners don't, we're willing not to have it, but what we are opposed to is the discrimination between home owners and those who pay for a leasehold and own the improvements and yet get no exemption for it. Their argument was not to extend the principle of exemptions, but to receive fairer and equal treatment with those who already had the exemption. So I hold that that argument is without merit.

It seems to me that we will be perfectly justified, in fact more than justified, in using the positions and responsibility which we hold to the people of this Territory to write into the Constitution a ban against the exemption of property held for homes, not written out in so many words, it doesn't have to be, but simply by elimination, because we are giving that group of people a subsidy and they are the people most able to pay the tax.

In addition, when it comes to the debt limit which we can set up for the State of Hawaii, we are relieving 66 million dollars, as I understand it, from the tax base. And every time we remove more from the tax base, the more difficult the financing of our State government and necessary improvements becomes. For those reasons I am very much in favor of the report of the committee.

SAKAKIHARA: Speaking in opposition to Standing Committee Report No. 41 I have been deliberating here since reading the report. How many of us campaigned in February in seeking nomination or election before the people of this Territory that if we are elected we will go to the State Constitutional Convention and write into the basic law of the future State of Hawaii, a prohibition against home exemption? I don't think any one of the delegates here had the audacity to tell the people in all sincerity and all truth that if you elect me, I will go to the State Constitutional Convention of Hawaii and I will write a prohibition in the Constitution denying home owners home exemption, including the proponents of Standing Committee Report No. 41.

If the proponents of the prohibition against home exemption will go back and check up the original home exemption act, they will find that the purpose of granting home exemptions was for the reason that Hawaii believed in having contented citizens, to have good American citizens, so that people can own homes and enjoy certain exemptions so that they may bring up children who will be contented good Americans against foreign ideologies. We all believe today we have certain elements in our midst who are trying to undermine the American way of life, trying to arouse discontent among the citizens [by saying] that only a certain few, so-called Big Five, are the only ones able to provide homes and certain privileges, so that you should subscribe to these ideas that we possess, namely communism. Here we are, through the national administration and through the present administration of this Territory, advocating and promoting better citizens, and one method advanced by the present administration of this Territory is to open up more homes and farmlands so that we will have contented American citizens who will be so satisfied with the American way of life that they will not be influenced by the so-called communists.

In looking at the report submitted, memorandums, "Statement spreading the burden of property taxes on all property, through elimination of the present home exemption," they also state some 32,000 families, less than one-third of the total 100,000 family units in Hawaii, benefit by this exemption. Granted that is true, the fact nevertheless remains that these 32,000 people who own their homes, who have brought forth in this community families, have some definite securities compared to some less fortunate people, but the fact nevertheless remains that this Territory has not gone bankrupt because of these exemptions. On the contrary, Section 51-51 carries some 62 items giving specific tax exemptions to eleemosynary corporations and religious societies and some homes, homes to support aged and indigents. I don't see where this denial of tax exemption will in any way help to improve the so-called financial situation. We are here -- or I can say with all sincerity to the 63 delegates here that I was one of those who voted to give the leaseholders tax exemption during the 1949 Special Session which became Act 51 -- Act 64.

I believe that the committee report should be tabled, so I move that the committee report be tabled.

CROSSLEY: Mr. Chairman.

MAU: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman.

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to it?

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded the committee report No. 41 be tabled.

CROSSLEY: Mr. Chairman, if you would recognize the people who are on their feet and not look for a second --

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels it's proper that after a motion is made, a few seconds should be allowed for anyone interested who wants to second the motion, and that is what the Chair did.

TAVARES: Well, Mr. Chairman, in fairness to this committee whose report is about to be tabled, I think the members ought to be willing to hear all of the story. There have been some statements and mis-statements made here, not -- I say, not exactly correct, that ought be corrected before you vote on this situation.

CHAIRMAN: Will the movant --

HEEN: It seems to me that we are dealing with this problem in the wrong way. We ought to have before us first the main proposal as to tax exemptions. If there is a -- if that proposal is finally adopted with home exemptions being allowed, then --

SILVA: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva, state your point of order.

SILVA: The point of order is that motion has been made and duly seconded to table, unless the motion is withdrawn, then we can proceed with the arguments pro or con or whatever you want to do. I would suggest that the Chair ask the courtesy of having the motion withdrawn first to table it.

CHAIRMAN: Will the movant --

SAKAKIHARA: In fairness to those who desire to further participate in this important question, I'm willing to yield -- withdraw my motion to table for the time being.

HEEN: If the main proposal has a provision allowing tax exemption, then this report of the committee at the present time would be unnecessary. If tax exemption is to be allowed for homes, this committee report then would be in order in order to have that exemption allowed for a certain number of years before going into effect finally. Therefore, we should proceed with the main proposal first, and not with this one.

RICHARDS: I would like to answer the delegate from the fourth district that many of the members of the committee who signed this report signed it only on the basis that there would be a continuation of tax exemption for a ten year period. That is the reason why this is placed before the Convention in this order. [It] is because of the fact that if this ten year period were not granted for financial readjustment to home owners and home purchasers that probably the committee would not submit a majority report out in favor of the matter of taking off home exemption.

LARSEN: Could I ask a question from the committee? Do you have any figures on how many families are living in leaseholds and not getting exemptions?

WHITE: As near as we can figure out it runs between 60 and 70 thousand.

SILVA: Under new law they got an exemption on leaseholds.

WHITE: This is the 1950 -- these are the 1950 figures that they figure out of approximately 100,000 family dwellings there are --

SILVA: Those are rental units, not leaseholds.

WHITE: Family units. There are 32,000 exempt, that would leave approximately over 60,000 non-exempt.

LARSEN: In other words, you have for each family that's paying this tax, you have -- I mean who were exempted, you have two families who do not pay it. That right?

WHITE: For every one family that is exempt you have two families not exempt.

LARSEN: Yes.

AKAU: Mr. White, along that same line would you clarify this so that we could know why it may be a legislative matter. It still enters into our thinking regarding this exemption pro or con. We know that many of our religious institutions here, as well as other organizations, do own and lease and rent a great deal of property to others on which to live; that is, the income is to the religious organizations. Now, in view of that situation, what happens from the point of view of exemption of land and property and real estate and income to those religious organizations over and above the question of eleemosynary institutions?

WHITE: Any property that is for profit-making purposes cannot be exempted, and is not exempted.

SILVA: I am really amazed at some of the remarks passed here about the person who uses the tenement is the taxpayer in all instances. In a lot of instances some of these units are not rented and sometimes they're vacant and the tax goes on just the same, and the landlord will have to pay it. To say that the land - - that the tenant is the sole taxpayer in that instance would be an admittance upon the fact that American Factors, Davies and Co., and any people in business pay no taxes because the consumer is the ultimate taxpayer, and I know surely that no one would care to admit that. They'd all say, "Well, we're in business and we pay our taxes," but there would never be an admittance that no one pays taxes but the consumer. We grant that that's quite true, but we would like to say that we do pay our taxes.

The point I'd like to say is this, is that in true Americanism, which we intend to build within this territory and to carry on, is that the average home owner, especially on the Island of Hawaii—I was thinking about Hawaii—where the tendency among the corporations themselves, plantations, is to eventually give these homes to the people. Well, when I say give, I mean sell, within a reasonable rate, about the cost. For us to now, just at that point, to invoke in our Constitution that those of that class shall not receive an exemption, will surely put those people, that class of people who intend to own these homes, in a very, very bad position, and in a position where they would have a doubt in even buying the home because the moment they would care to put in an improvement, we say for a bathhouse which would cost $500, they would have to pay a tax on it, but if it had an exemption of $1,500, they could put in this improvement and not pay the tax at all. And that in itself would be something for the Territory, which eventually brings in revenue, paint, employment and that would offset what we lose. I just want to say that as far as the Island of Hawaii is concerned, the tendency is that there will be a greater proportion of home owners than there are tenants.

CASTRO: I would like to speak in favor of the committee report, briefly. First, to contradict a statement that has been made, that is, a conclusion that has been made. When the home exemption law was passed some number of years ago, the stated reason was merely to encourage home ownership. It is, however, a fact that many of the proponents of home exemption felt that it would discourage the tendency on the part of large landlords to rent land and would force them to sell the fee. Now, this has not happened, and the best proof of that is the fact that some of the must substantial landowners are people who have refused to buy the fee when they have been given an opportunity. In 1948, out of 112 leaseholders in the new section of Aina Haina leasing from the Robert Hind, Ltd. who were offered the chance to buy the fee, some two dozen accepted. However, this isn't my argument.

The point is that I think that if the home exemption is pointed to be the thing which has encouraged home ownership, the argument falls because in Hawaii today we have only 24,000, 25,000 at the most, home owners, yet on the Island of Oahu alone you have 60,000 rental units. In the days when home exemption was granted and put through for the purposes of granting or encouraging home ownership, we did not have available to the populace the tremendous government aids in financing. The FHA was not known then. The Veterans' Bill of Rights was not known. The 4 per cent mortgage, while known, in some cases had no federal insurance. Today we have these emoluments that aid people who want to own their own homes. The problem is still a shortage of land. And you - - this cannot be solved by the process of granting home exemption.

Now, I would like to look at this home exemption thing, not on the basis of who is paying the tax, who is paying the real property tax, but upon a straight basis of who is going to finance this State. We have gross assessments of our land of 770 millions of dollars. We have exemptions amounting to 437 millions of dollars, leaving us a net taxable land area - - land assessed at 333 millions of dollars. Now, if we take out the United States lands and the territorial lands and the county lands, if we take out the charitable lands, if we take out the utilities, we still have not even four hundred thousand - - four hundred million dollars of assessed - - in assessments that can be taxed for real property taxation. I present that the matter of exemptions is actually dangerous when we are trying to finance our State.

How far can they go? If you're going to encourage home ownership, you're going to grant more exemptions. I foresee the time that it is possible that a State like Hawaii, limited as it is to land and income, may have to withdraw some of the exceptions to charitable organizations. I do not think that we can go on and on granting exemptions forever. We must stop somewhere; perhaps this is a good time, this is an historical moment, to look this business of exemptions in the eye. Here is 66-67 million dollars assessed land that can be taxed for which the government presently would get two million dollars more in taxation. It will create no burden, unsurmountable burden, uncarryable burden, on the part of the people who will pay the tax. This has been indicated by the facts. I see no sentimental reasons other than that where a man can use as a political drum this business of fighting for home exemption. But looking at the facts of paying the bills for the State, I feel that we should look at it on the basis of a balance sheet and I think we can find fair enough reasons to abolish the home exemption.

FUKUSHIMA: As I sit here and listen to the arguments day after day, I'm just wondering what kind of a Constitution we're going to have. For weeks on end we have been talking about the philosophy of certain types of governments, philosophy of the Bill of Rights, philosophy on public welfare. It seems to me that we will all be authors of a book on philosophy.

Now, we are arguing something which is strictly statutory, there is no question about it. They try - - the proponents say that this is a "hot potato" for the legislators. What if it is? We came here to write a Constitution, a basic law; now we're going and delving into the realm of legislative enactments, statutes. To me, it seems awfully ridiculous to have people stand up and talk about statutes when it should not be so, or else also going to have the Hawaiian Homes Act in our Constitution, something which is very different from the constitutions of the other states. I'm not saying that I'm against that, but when we come here and talk about statutory enactments in our basic law, I think we're going far afield.

People who get up and say that it is not statutory I know are wrong, because it is statutory. If they say so, they are varnishing nonsense with the charms of sound.

I feel, also, that we should not be the grand marshals in the parade of government. This is not the time that we should make changes. We should be here writing a Constitution and nothing else. I am of the inclination and I definitely feel that this is purely statutory; it has no place in our Constitution.

TAVARES: I'm going to be brief. I think that the prime problem here is equalization and equity, and you can't prove any equalization or equity in this iniquitous tax exemption. You've already been shown how 60,000 or two-thirds of the people don't get it.

There's another angle. Even among the people who do, who are, who have, who own homes, you have an iniquitous lack of equality. If a man has a home and he's built in such a way that he can draw a wall straight down to the ground he can get an exemption on half of it or any part of it that he uses. But if he happens to have a little basement or something on top and rents it out, he can't get an exemption. And that's just one of the many, many iniquities that you have to have when you have a home exemption. And you're going to continue that as long as you have it. There's no way, it seems to me, of changing that lack of equity. And it seems to me that since one of the problems of this Convention is to provide for equalization, at least in the same class, you are not getting it by your home exemption.

CROSSLEY: In 1943, when I served in the legislature, I introduced such a measure as is before us today except that it was more inclusive. I introduced it at that time because I feel - - I felt then as I'm sure the proponents of this measure do today that it was the equitable thing to do. I still think that is true, though I would be against including it in the Constitution because I feel, as some of the previous speakers have felt, that this is statutory, that this is something for the legislature to handle, whether it's hot or cold. They are really the people who are elected to go in and change the statutory laws of the Territory. I think our purpose here is a different purpose, and I do not think that we are here to take the "hot potatoes" out of the legislature, and if I were in the legislature I wouldn't hesitate for a moment to vote for such a bill, but in a Constitutional Convention I think it's a totally different thing and I do not think it has any place here.

WHITE: Could I just talk a moment? In the first place there are constitutions that do prohibit - - I haven't seen any constitutions that prohibit home exemption, but they prohibit the imposition of income taxes, so I don't think that this is so far afield that it can't be put in the thing. The reason why it is of serious concern to the committee at this time is that it has a bearing and a very definite bearing on the debt limitation that we fix for the State, and an answer to the thing, one way or the other, is important to the committee. And, for that reason, I think that it could well, very well go into the Constitution.

Now, I'd like to ask a couple of the opponents to this measure that have talked about all the good it does and how unfair it would be, whether, and I'd like to ask Mr. King in particular, whether he feels that it's right that 7,350 taxpayers pay no real property tax at all, and that another 9,839 pay on the average about $11 per year for the benefits of government?

KING: I would like to answer that question in this way. If we would put in the Constitution a ban against all exemptions of real property whatsoever, church schools, forest reserves, business property, then you are putting in a ban that is of general application. Once you admit that there is any justice or any merit in any exemption, then you can't stop at home exemption as a necessary point.

Now, while I'm on my feet, I would also like to refer to the inference of politics. The only office for which I've run myself is delegate to this Convention, in the last ten years. That's no promise for the future, but nevertheless, there's no question of politics in it; it's a question of justice, a following out of policy that this Territory's had for about 25 years on the statute book. I'm in entire sympathy with Delegate Crossley and Delegate Fukushima that it's a statutory matter.

Now, as we get down to the finances, this Territory isn't going to stop at 400 million. The legislatures of the future will have different sums to work on. The assessed values are going to go up, right today they lag behind current market value, and the tax burden will be prorated at those higher evaluations.

The problem that the Taxation and Finance Committee wants to settle now—that's why they're putting the cart before the horse, as Delegate Heen has pointed out, and want a decision on this particular issue before they bring in their final proposal—their problem is to fix a tax limit for the ensuing ten or twenty years. But this Constitution that we're writing today is going to be amended in ten or 15 or 20 years. The last one was 50 years ago, the Organic Act. That's been amended repeatedly by Acts of Congress. The one before that only lasted for six years, so we're not writing a Constitution in perpetuity, and the land values of this territory are going to increase in assessed values, and the tax burden would be distributed accordingly.

Now, to get back to the point that Delegate Castro made, he said there was 700 million dollars worth of taxable property here, but there is 400 million dollars of home owners' property. Where is the other 300 million? Why not put that on the tax roll? That's exempt for schools, churches, other public benefits. And if that's true, well, then, home exemption isn't so far off, 67 million dollars to promote home ownership and 300 million dollars to promote other general welfare projects.

CROSSLEY: There was one point that I - - one other point I'd like to speak to. That is, the Committee on Submission and Information is going to have a very difficult job, I believe, in presenting a Constitution to the people that is going to be well understood in all of its implications. If you take and add to that measures that could be considered to be purely legislative or statutory in nature, I think the job is going to be doubly hard, especially when you get into such controversial issues as the one on home exemptions.

I'm reminded again in 1943 of the hundreds of letters that I received against the proposal that I made at that time. Those are the same people that we're going to go to and ask to understand in a short time, in a relatively short time, a document that has taken us just hours and hours, and days and days, weeks and weeks, and how many months no one knows, to complete. And I think it would be very difficult to go and have to defend issues that the people themselves feel that they should have the right to speak on, and I would hate to see an otherwise perfect Constitution defeated on just one issue alone, and yet I feel so strongly that on an issue such as this the entire Constitution could be defeated.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state that the previous movant of the motion to table has been very anxious to be recognized. But none the less in fairness, the Chair would like to state and ask that we should give those who have as yet not had the chance to speak, and after that give the chairman of the committee the last chance to say his few words. Unless Delegate Heen has - -

HEEN: I have a contribution to make, Mr. Chairman. All of the arguments this afternoon have been pointed to one question, whether we are to have home exemption or not. That's the argument. There are those who favor home exemption; there are those who do not favor home exemption. Therefore, we should decide that question first before we act upon this report. If we have the main proposal written in such a manner as to allow home exemption, then this report here would be out of order - -

KING: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

HEEN: - - but if this were adopted, the Committee on Continuity of Law might write a long report and submit a proposal that might be thrown out of the window, if the main provision provides for home exemption. If it provides for no home exemption, then it would be in order for that committee to act.

KING: Will the gentleman yield?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, do you yield?

HEEN: Yes.

KING: The point at issue is not whether we shall have home exemption or not, it is whether we shall ask the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law to draw a law that would extend it for ten years, and then the Committee on Taxation would bring in a proposal that would ban it. The Committee on Taxation brought this up by request, in order to have some instruction regarding its proposal. Now, if we follow Delegate Heen's suggestion, which I recognize as being the more proper order and procedure, nevertheless we would first have to have a proposal before us with the home exemption in it—that's the way that committee report has been done—with the home exemption banned, I think; and then this other instruction to extend it for nine years. While before that proposal is submitted, the chairman of the committee, I think very promptly, wants the judgment of the Convention whether he shall draft it that way or not. Delegate Richards said that many of them signed it with the understanding that it would be continued for ten years. So it isn't whether we shall or shall not have home exemption. It's whether the Committee on Taxation shall at this time ban home exemption.

CHAIRMAN: Is there anyone who hasn't yet spoken who would like to be recognized?

ARASHIRO: I've been listening this whole afternoon, and the question in my mind is whether this should be a constitutional matter or a statutory matter. If it's a matter that can be written into the Constitution and a matter that we do not have to worry for the next 10 to 20 years, and not a matter of controversy, then maybe it should be in the Constitution. But as it has been debated on the floor, there is a doubt in my mind whether it should be written into the Constitution, and again if it should be written into the Constitution - - or if it's not written into the Constitution, can this matter be taken care of? If it can be taken care of without being written into the Constitution, then should we leave it out?

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Are you through, Mr. Arashiro, or do you yield?

ARASHIRO: Well, I'll hear that gentleman from the first district.

SAKAKIHARA: It is purely a statutory matter which could be taken care of by legislative acts. We are about to write into the basic law a statutory provision, and if the gentleman from Kauai has any doubts that it is not a statutory matter, then it should be in the Constitution. But if it is purely a statutory matter, we are here to write a Constitution, and not a statutory provision.

ARASHIRO: I'm trying to get my mind clear whether this will affect the setting up of our government, the kind of basic law that we have, and whether it will have anything to do with the operation of the government.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to at this time to recognize the chairman of the Committee on Taxation and Finance.

WHITE: Well, I don't have much to add to what I've already said. Answering to the point of these people that talk about all the voters wanting the home exemption continued, I think you were all furnished with a committee - - with a report that came in from Mr. McDonough in which he attached a report of the Joint Tax Study Committee in which they said that all their membership was wholeheartedly in favor of banning home exemption. I think that that represents a large number of voters in this community as well. As far as I'm concerned, I'm primarily interested in seeing a very flagrant discrimination cleared up. I have no wish to deprive home owners of anything that they are rightfully entitled to, but in this particular instance I think that they are getting something at the expense of a great many other people.

SAKAKIHARA: I desire to renew my motion. Before I renew my motion, I would like to say this. It is not because of political issues. Whether this committee report is adopted, we will have for the next ten years a guarantee of tax exemption but it seems to me that this Convention will dictate to the legislature ten years from now on a basic law when we have a proviso that all home exemptions shall be wiped out. I'm sure we will have just as intelligent or more intelligent people aspiring for legislative office under a State government. We have more and more young men and women graduating from schools, coming forth, and I'm sure we can entrust to these future citizens the destiny of our State, and I wish to state this is purely a legislative matter and has no place in the basic law.

I now move, Mr. Chairman, that the committee report be tabled - -

DELEGATE: Second the motion. Mr. Chairman, I second that motion, Mr. Chairman.

SAKAKIHARA: - - and that there be instruction to the Committee on Taxation and Finance that this Convention instructs them to leave the basic law - - home exemption alone, and explore the other field of taxation.

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved by Delegate Sakakihara and seconded by Delegate Apoliona that the Standing Committee Report No. 41 be tabled. All those in favor of the motion to table Committee Report No. 41 - -

WHITE: Could we have roll call?

CHAIRMAN: All those - - how many desire roll call?

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion for roll call.

CHAIRMAN: We shall have a roll call. All those in favor will answer "aye." Opposed, "no."

TAVARES: I take it that that latter part of the movant's motion should not be included in this motion. I think it should be a separate one. I think it's a little bit mixed up to vote on two things at the same time.

SILVA: There's only one question. The question was put to table, as put by the Chair.

TAVARES: All right, if that's the understanding.

CHAIRMAN: The understanding is that the motion is to table Committee Report No. 41. Will the Clerk please call the roll.

[Roll call not on record]

Clerk please read the results of the vote.

CLERK: Forty-three ayes, 13 noes, 7 not voting.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: The ayes have it.

ANTHONY: I move that we reconsider that and defer action until the report of the Committee on Taxation and Finance is brought in. I think a great many of us -- on the general question of tax exemption, a great many of us who voted to table, voted that way because we would like to see the article first, before we dealt with the minutia of home exemptions.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to the motion to reconsider?

HEEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that—just a second—it has been moved and seconded that we reconsider the motion to table.

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman.

HEEN: And in support of that motion --

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen still has the floor.

HEEN: -- in support of that motion, if the report on the main provision as to tax exemption is written in such a manner as to provide for home exemption, then you don't need this action on this report at all. I voted to table the motion to adopt the report for that reason. If the provision, the main provision provides for the elimination of home exemption, then it would be in order to have some provision written into the law to postpone the final effect of this event, provision to some future date. Otherwise you wouldn't have to act on it at all. If home exemption is to be allowed, then it would become statutory matter.

WHITE: It's quite apparent from the expressions that were made here today, that the vast majority of the delegates here are very strong for continuing home exemption, and as far as the Committee on Taxation is concerned, the vote is ample notice to them that they don't want -- that the Convention does not want home exemption discontinued. So that the simple thing -- it makes our job a whole lot simplier because we then do not have to come in with any lengthy and detailed description of properties that are entitled to home exemption, that is left to the discretion of the legislature in its entirety. So that I would much prefer to have this vote stand and have it taken as an expression of this Convention that they are opposed to discontinuing home exemption, and we will then write our final report accordingly.

SAKAKIHARA: I make a motion at this time that we table the motion for reconsideration.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to the motion?

SILVA: If it's going to be withdrawn, I won't second it.

ANTHONY: In view of the statement of the chairman of the Committee on Taxation and Finance --

CHAIRMAN: Will you -- just a second, Mr. Anthony. Would you be willing to yield for one speaker?

ANTHONY: I would like to withdraw the motion.

CHAIRMAN: In that event, there is no business before this Committee of the Whole. Motion in order to rise.

C. RICE: I move the committee rise and report recommending that this proposal be tabled.

SAKAKIHARA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried. Committee will rise.

Chairman: HERBERT K. H. LEE

JUNE 19, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: The meeting will come to order.

CROSSLEY: I move that we have a five minute recess at the pleasure of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: I see that there is no objection to a five minute recess. A five minute recess is declared.

(RECESS)

WHITE: In preparing its report, the Committee on Finance and Taxation has gone into considerable detail and it has done so believing that it was advisable in the interest of clarity. In presenting the views and recommendations of the committee at this time, I'll endeavor to brief them, as I assume the delegates have read the report a half a dozen times, so it won't be necessary to -- they have probably memorized a lot of the sections. In any event, we can refer to any section as and when necessary. At such time as we take up consideration of the proposal, it is my suggestion each individual section be acted upon separately.

Before proceeding to consider the proposal itself, I believe that a brief outline of the principles which guided the committee in its deliberations and conclusions would be in order. These are: (1) That an essential requirement of good state government is a strong chief executive, and accordingly he should be supported by a strong financial organization. (2) That adequate checks and balance should be provided between the legislative and executive branches of the State, without the encroachment of one on the prerogatives of the other. (3) That means for the early consideration and passage of the general appropriations bill should be provided so that the overall requirements of the State can be more readily determined and thus obviate confusion and uncertainty with respect thereto. (4) That effective control over expenditures is essential, as are also, when the legislature is not in session, means of curtailing expenditures when it is apparent that anticipated revenues will not be realized. (5) That the tax structure, the types of taxes, and the granting of exemptions therefrom should be left to the discretion of the legislature. (6) That safeguards to protect the credit of the State and its ability to issue bonds at favorable rates of interest are vital requirements. (7) That positive separation of pre-audit and post-audit functions is a prerequisite to effective financial control.

Now, turning to the subject of organization, the proposed offices and the duties of each are set forth on this chart. We divided this into the duties of the three officers that are proposed in the committee report, commissioner of finance, the treasurer and the commissioner of taxes, who would be in the executive organization. Now, there is a line drawn there to show that the auditor as proposed in this committee report is considered a part of the legislative branch of the government.

Under the commissioner of finance, here, all of the duties shown in black are those that are presently administered by the Bureau of the Budget: that is, analysing budget estimates of departments and so forth, except the public service corporations such as the department - - I mean, the Board of Harbor Commissioners and boards of that kind; consulting with department heads; submitting findings and recommendations to the governor; compiling the budgets for the governor; effecting periodic allocations of appropriations as directed by the governor.

Now, the examination of vouchers, or what is sometimes termed as pre-audit to make sure that the payments are according to law or authorized by law, and the establishment of accounting policies and procedures are now functions of the State auditor and under this proposed setup would be transferred from the auditor to the commissioner of finance so that the auditor's functions would be confined solely to post-audit. Also, there is one other item here, the establishment of purchasing policies and procedures. Then there's an over-all provision under the job description to provide for all other functions prescribed by law.

Now, under the treasurer's duties, the same duties are covered that he presently handles with two exceptions. He would still continue to carry on or be responsible for the receipt of State funds, custody of State funds, disbursement of State funds, and also for the sale of State bonds. The functions that have been transferred are the collection of bank and estate taxes which he presently handles and, as stated in the report, in order for him to assess the taxes it is necessary for him to get all the basic information from the tax commissioner, so that it would be better to leave the collection of those taxes with the tax commissioner rather than with the treasurer. And, as you will see in A under the auditor, the audit of the public subdivisions is presently handled by the bank examiner's office and should, in our opinion, the opinion of the committee, be handled by the State auditor, if that office is set up.

Now, below the office of treasurer here, you see in A, B, C, there are duties of fire marshal, insurance commissioner and the bank examiner. Now, those are presently duties or responsibilities of the treasurer's department. There is some question in the minds of the committee whether all of those functions should be continued under the treasurer's department. The nature of the work as well as the responsibilities of the job are such that it is felt that they might be better placed in some other department. However, that is just put there as a matter of calling the subject to your attention and that, naturally, would be left to the discretion of the legislature.

Are there any questions that anybody would like to ask about the chart?

ANTHONY: I think it would be well if we could have a statement from the chairman of the committee as to the relationship of the chart to the existing territorial government. I assume it is allocated on some such basis. Is it not, Mr. Chairman?

WHITE: Well, that's what I was explaining. These duties here are presently handled by the budget director with the exception of the examination of vouchers and the establishing of accounting policies and procedures, which are handled by the present auditor. Also, the collection of bank and estate taxes that are presently handled by the treasurer, under this proposal would be transferred over to the commissioner of taxes. That also applies to the audit of the counties which is presently handled by the bank examiner.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, Delegate White, those three offices there correspond to offices of the present Territory; that is, the commissioner of finance represents the budget director, and the treasurer, the treasurer, and the commissioner of taxes, our tax commissioner. Is that right?

WHITE: That's right. The only major difference there is a change in title as far as the budget director is concerned and separating the post-audit functions from the pre-audit functions.

Now, as stated in the report, it is not proposed that the respective functions be enumerated in the Constitution, but it is hoped that the description set forth therein will be a help to and used by the legislature in defining their duties. In accordance with the recommendations the Committee on Executive Powers and Functions, it is proposed three officials be appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the Senate to serve at the pleasure of the governor. There is some support for the belief that because of the specialized character of his work and the dependence of the governor upon him in connection with fiscal affairs of the State that the appointment of the commissioner of finance should not require Senate confirmation.

Now, to get to the proposal itself. The first five sections cover the budget and appropriations. These provisions contemplate that the governor will be responsible for developing an over-all financial program either annually or every two years and it will be submitted in two parts, accompanied by bills to cover appropriations, new taxes or borrowings as may be required. A full chart has been developed to illustrate the course of action required under these proposals and I would like to refer to that even before we get to the proposal itself because there are a number of different sections of the proposal involved and I think it might bring about a clearer understanding of what is proposed.

Now, under the recommendations of the committee, as I stated a minute ago, the governor would be required eventually to develop an over-all financial program for the Territory. Initially, the departments—I just mentioned a few of the departments—the regents of the University, Department of Public Instruction, and other administrative departments, would be required to prepare a budget in two parts: one, covering their ordinary operating expenses which, incidentally, would also include any incidental equipment requirement for all of the departments, and then a capital budget. And those two budgets then would clear over to the commissioner of finance who would analyse them and, after full analysis, would then consult with all of the department heads concerning any of the recommendations made. After that work had been completed, he would then develop his findings and recommendations and that would serve as a basis for the general appropriation budget and also for the capital expenditure budget.

Now, those bills then would then clear over to - - He would also have to determine what the anticipated revenue was and also determine whether other additional means of providing revenue would be necessary, that is, the form of additional taxes. Then the budget would then go to the governor for consideration and, if it met with his approval, it would then pass on to the legislature for consideration. It is being proposed that the general appropriation bill be given first priority and that action on other bills other than special bills, for instance the deficiency appropriation or the bill to cover the expenses of the legislature, beyond those two bills no other bills would take -- would be considered until after the bills had passed final reading by both houses of the legislature.

Now, you see there that it's proposed that on the general appropriation bill that any changes in the general appropriation bill would be limited to adjustments as between items within the bill and that the legislature could not exceed the amount -- the over-all amount recommended by the governor, but they could make switches in between departments. Any other bills -- any increases over that amount would have to be covered by separate bills, each bill applying to a particular project or purpose, and thereafter the bills would then go through the legislature as well as any bills that were introduced by members of the legislature, then go back to the governor for approval and under the sections of this proposal as provided, the governor would also be vested with the authority to make item vetoes, that is, by reducing or deleting amounts. And in those instances it would have the same effect as a veto of a whole bill and the legislature could override the veto by a two-thirds vote of both houses. And, thereafter, it's provided that in the handling of the -- or the control of the expenses, that the governor, under two particular situations, would be vested with the power to reduce appropriations, that is to reduce expenses below the amounts appropriated: One, if the revenues fall below the estimates on which the appropriations were based, and two, if such authority is given to them -- given to the governor specifically by statute.

As far as the allocation of funds is concerned, the purpose of that is to provide that there be periodic allocations of funds because, as pointed out in the report, under the present system the budget is really developed about three years in advance and the purpose of making these periodic allocations is not necessarily to interfere with the actual operation of any of the departments of government, but more to require that the governor can make allocations on a quarterly or some other basis to take care of work programs that are developed by each of the respective department heads. Now, the advantage of that is quite obvious in that if the governor didn't have the power to make these allocations, why it could conceivably develop that any one department could spend a very substantial part of their budget in the first quarter, and therefore it would be very difficult to cut down on expenses if it became necessary due to a falling off in revenues.

It's not proposed in here, and I think it's covered quite clearly in the report, that whatever legislation is enacted to implement this procedure could require that in making any reductions under those situations where the revenue falls below estimate that the governor would be limited in making those reductions to making them by amounts instead of by being able to tell a department head that he shouldn't be able to employ this man for this particular purpose or that he shouldn't buy this desk or that he shouldn't -- he ought to put off the purchase of a typewriter until the following quarter, or something like that.

I know that there has been some criticism of the present system due in part, in my humble opinion, to ineffective administration when the budget director goes to the extent of instructing the department head what items he should have and what items he shouldn't have, and I think the report is quite explicit on that. And, of course, it should be very -- the legislation should be very carefully drafted to make sure that that idea is carried out in the law.

SAKAKIHARA: May I ask the chairman of the Finance Committee a question? With the holding of budgetary sessions during the odd years, Mr. White, won't we be eliminating a lot of those powers, or the necessity on the part of the executive department to practice the austerity program that they have now in force?

WHITE: You mean to alter it?

SAKAKIHARA: No. If this Convention should incorporate in the Constitution to hold an annual session of the legislature, one known as a budgetary session and the other during the even years a general session, wouldn't it eliminate many of these things which the present administration is doing along the line that you pointed out?

WHITE: No, I wouldn't say altogether. What you would do is to -- you'd cut down the period over which you have to work your estimates, but even on an annual session, your estimates would still be prepared a year and a half in advance and things can change very radically within the period of a year and a half. I think that the number of times that the governor might have to exercise that power would be materially reduced by your annual session, but I don't think that it would be entirely eliminated.

SAKAKIHARA: I noticed from column 3 on the chart there Mr. Chairman, "Executive departments," you are taking away the policy-making power from the duly elected officials, namely the legislature, and investing it to the governor. Is that correct?

WHITE: Taking away what power?

SAKAKIHARA: The appropriations there.

WHITE: No, no. He passes it on for the legislature to act on. In other words, he approves the general appropriation bill and the capital -- general appropriation budget and the capital expenditure budget as prepared by the commissioner of finance. It goes to the governor for approval, who thereafter sends it on to the legislature for action.

SAKAKIHARA: It's still there under the caption of "Legislative Functions," "amendments, decrease or change but no over-all increase." Is that right?

WHITE: No over-all increase on the general appropriation bill but the legislature can increase by initiating separate bills.

SAKAKIHARA: But won't that be the general function, the policy of the legislature rather than to spell it out and say you cannot increase the budget as submitted by the budget director or the commissioner of finance to the legislature without introducing a separate bill? Isn't that policy-making a privilege of the legislature without the approval or limitations on the legislature?

WHITE: I don't think that it encroaches on the powers of the legislature at all because they still have the right to handle it by a separate bill. I think that one thing that it will do will assure the early passage of the general appropriation bill instead of having it held up by the legislature until the dying hours of the session.

SAKAKIHARA: It won't necessarily hold it up to dying night of the session. I think the legislature can pass general appropriation bills first without these prohibitions in the Constitution. I think it's a policy of the legislature. They should be left free—they are elected officials answerable to the people provided they make adequate provisions for revenues.

WHITE: I don't think that there's anything unreasonable about that because, after all, we're talking about a strong executive and he spends a considerable amount of time developing this program and he comes in with a program.

SAKAKIHARA: That is true.

WHITE: Now it's quite possible that the legislature may not agree with him and they have the right to disagree with him. The only requirement there is that if they do disagree with him and they are going to exceed - - if the general appropriation bill provided for $50,000 and they are going to exceed that amount, whatever the excess was would have to be covered by a separate bill.

SAKAKIHARA: Provided the legislature would enact a sufficient revenue measure to provide the additional increase without a separate bill.

CROSSLEY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

CROSSLEY: It seems to be that we're beginning to debate sections of this proposal without having any part of the proposal before us. We are taking out a certain section and debating it without that section yet being before us.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that your point is well taken. It has allowed the questions to be put by Delegate Sakakihara in the point of allowing it to go in as far as possible, but I think your - -

SAKAKIHARA: I want to clarify - -

CHAIRMAN: Your points are merely points of clarification.

SAKAKIHARA: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: So that's a matter of debate.

SAKAKIHARA: In view of the fact that we have a chart here, the chairman of the Taxation and Finance Committee is trying to explain to this Committee of the Whole from this chart here. [Facsimile of chart on page 440.]

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara, I believe the points have been clarified, so that there are differences of policies, so that if Mr. White will proceed in his explanation.

CROSSLEY: I wonder if Mr. White would be willing to follow out, say, on his tri-borough bridge here along the solid highway lines and the broken highway lines an item beginning with the D. P. I., say, and going clear through to the governor, back, and how it gets into the legislature, following one course all the way through and what the various lines, solid and broken, mean on just one item.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the Chair hasn't thought to direct Delegate White how to present this matter, but I believe he prefaced his remarks that he was proceeding on a certain basis, showing the procedure. He's at this point of stating the procedure. Do you want to follow the suggestion made by - -

WHITE: Well, I would be very glad to do whatever is going to help bring about a clear understanding of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN: If that is the desire of the committee, I guess you do that then, Delegate White.

WHITE: Well, as you see here, if we take the D. P. I. budget, the D. P. I. budget would be developed - - would be prepared in two parts, the operating budget and the capital budget. Thereafter, that budget would go to the commissioner of finance who would analyze the budget and if there were differences of opinion—and I can't imagine that there wouldn't be between what is recommended and what the commissioner of finance may not believe is advisable—in any event, he may want clarification on some of the items. Then he would go back and consult with the head of the D. P. I., and once having satisfied himself on that particular thing, he would then develop his findings and his recommendations to the governor and the D. P. I. general operating expenses and capital budget expenditures would then be incorporated as part of these two bills, the general appropriations budget and the capital expenditure budget. Now, that would then go to the governor for his approval. As a related activity of that, there would have to be revenue bills, appropriation and revenue bills drawn up to support whatever this - - the recommendations developed by the commissioner of finance, and those would go to the governor who would then send them on to the legislature for submission.

The general appropriations bill, that would receive prior - - preferred action, come down and be handled here. As you see, the general appropriation then would come down here and would come over to the governor to review any changes that had been made up here. If we assume that the total of the general appropriations budget was $40 million, the legislature could make changes in between items there, but it could not exceed over-all $40 million. Now, when it comes down here, the governor would then have the right to reduce or to strike out or reduce items, after which, then, the general appropriations bill would go back to the legislature who would then be in a position to override the governor if they did not agree with the changes that he made.

Now, the same procedure would follow on your capital improvement budget except that the capital improvement budget might come through with a number of bills, because they'd all be separate bills on each project and the legislature wouldn't necessarily have to consider all of them and act on all of them at one time.

CROSSLEY: I had one more question along the highway here. The broken line from the governor back to the "Findings and recommendations" wasn't explained as to just what that function was and how it worked or the relationship between the "Determination of anticipated revenues" and the "General appropriation bill."

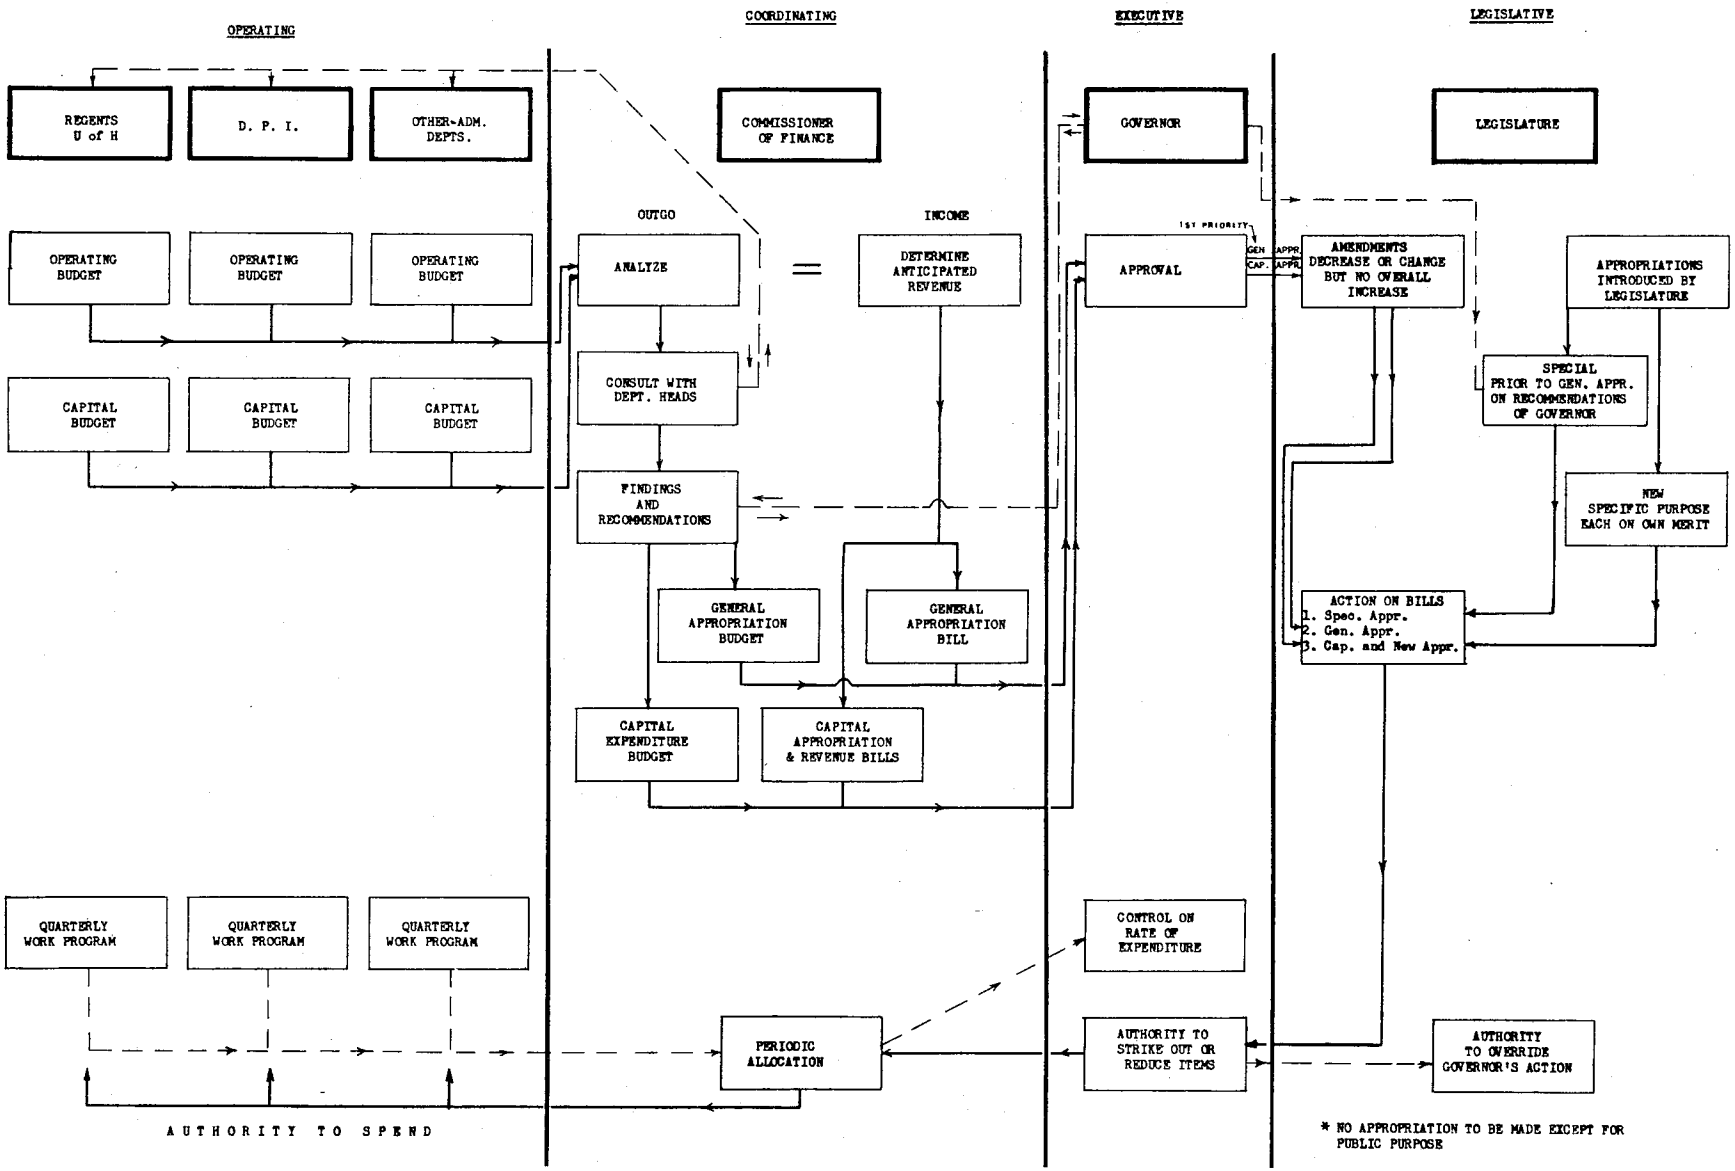
WHITE: The only difference in the broken line is that it indicates contact but no actual working or line arrangement. That's all.

DOI: I have two questions. The first is in regard to the legislative column there, headed "Amendments." That would mean that the legislature can refuse to appropriate anything for a specific item. Is that right? "Decrease or change but no over-all increase." Now, suppose the legislature does refuse to appropriate any money for a specific item. When that particular item comes down to the "Executive" column on the bottom where it says "Authority to strike out or reduce items," the governor does not have the power or even the power of suggestion to say that that item is necessary, it should be - - some appropriation should be made so that if the item was unduly reduced by the legislature that an increase should be made. Is that correct?

WHITE: Well, the governor would have the right to make the adjustments in the general appropriation bill to conform with the amount that he originally proposed and if he deleted some items, it might result in increasing other items.

STATE BUDGET PROCEDURE

(Presented to The Constitutional Convention by Committee on Taxation and Finance June, 1950)



DOI: I'm referring to a specific item.

WHITE: Well, a specific bill or a specific item?

DOI: Specific item in the general appropriation bill.

WHITE: Well, he would - - if a bill came back to him after the adjustments had been made by the legislature, he would have the opportunity to reinstate the items that he originally proposed to be - -

DOI: No, no, Section 5 doesn't say that.

WHITE: That's right, he wouldn't have the right. If the legislature reduced it, he wouldn't have the right to increase it. I was confused.

DOI: I don't want to get into a debate, but would you state the reasons why he shouldn't have the power?

WHITE: Well, because the legislature has considered the appropriation and that's the amount of money that they've appropriated. Now, if he doesn't think it's right, he can veto the bill.

DOI: If I say what I want to say I'll be getting into a debate, so I won't.

LOPER: Would the chairman of the committee point out the answer to this question? If we are talking about a $40 million budget and the legislature should decide to cut that to 35 or raise it to 45, can you show us on the chart where that action would originate and where it would be traced through from the commissioner of finance to the governor to the legislature? I'm speaking of revenue rather than expenditures in budget.

WHITE: You mean if the governor cuts the general - - Are you talking about the general appropriation bill, now?

LOPER: I'm not sure that I know. I'm talking about the question of whether we're going to raise more or less money in taxes. Where does that originate? How do you trace it through?

WHITE: Well, the over-all financial program submitted by the governor to fund the general appropriations bill and the capital expenditures may either require borrowings or additional taxes, and if they do, then at the time that the budget is submitted by the governor, it will include those two items. In other words, it will be a complete financial program for funding the program that he recommends.

LOPER: If the recommended budget then went over the amount that existing taxes might raise, it would be an obligation on the part of the governor to suggest additional taxes to cover it. Is that your intention?

WHITE: Yes. In other words, in making his recommendations he will have to show what the anticipated State revenues are, and if they aren't adequate to take care of your general appropriation bill and your capital improvement budget, he'll have to submit other bills to take care of the additional revenue that is necessary.

HOLROYDE: In case the finance commissioner and department head can't get together, I imagine they would both go to the governor to settle their difficulties. The finance commissioner doesn't have the power, does he, to make the final decision on the departmental budget?

WHITE: Well, the governor has the final decision, but the governor may be influenced by the findings and recommendations of the finance commissioner, but that doesn't preclude a department head going to the governor.

KELLERMAN: May I ask a question? If your general appropriation bill, say, runs to $40 million, and the legislature by special bill increases the appropriation for, say, the D. P. I. —we'll just take a department there for example —and suppose the revenues, estimated revenues, after the legislature has adjourned, the estimated revenues appear to be less than those originally anticipated and so the governor then starts reducing or controlling the rate of expenditures, is he allowed to actually reduce? For instance, you've got a quarterly program. If you divide the two years into eight quarters, is he allowed to reduce the special appropriation bill at a greater rate than the general? Is there any priority of whether the appropriation bill items shall take precedent as to rate or as to volume over the special appropriation bill which may have been passed by the legislature for the same executive department?

WHITE: No, because your regular - - In other words, any capital expenditure bill would be for specific purposes.

KELLERMAN: I don't mean the capital, I mean the special appropriation bill to grant an extra general operating budget appropriation to the department. I am foreseeing that, say, that the legislature reaches the maximum permitted by the governor's general appropriation recommendation for the department and sees fit to enact in addition a special appropriation bill for that same department for operating budget. Do they stand on the same footing when it comes to rate of expenditure or reduction, or does the general bill take priority over the special bill on any reduction in case of failure of anticipated revenue to reach the amount anticipated?

WHITE: I'd say that they both fall into the same category.

KELLERMAN: They go into the same category.

Now, there's one more point I'd like to ask. Does - - is there any provision in your proposal, or is there a contradiction in the proposal to the possible power of the legislature to decide that certain departments, if cuts are necessary in the operation of the government because of deficiency of funds, that certain departments or certain items shall not be cut at all because the legislature may consider those departments or items to be essential to the public welfare in the amounts appropriated, rather than any over-all cut or any decision on that point by the governor? Do you make room for that possible exercise of power by the legislature, to designate certain specific departments or specific phases of governmental operations that shall not be reduced at all? It seems to me that would be a very worthwhile power in the legislature. Does your proposal permit that? As I see it, it allows only a general across-the-board cut and possibly would not allow the legislature to have the power to designate items that shall not be reduced at all.

WHITE: The proposal doesn't provide that it has to be a uniform cut in every department. But whatever cuts are made by departments would be made by dollar amount, that's all. There's no specific requirement that if revenues fall off ten per cent or if a cut in expenses of ten per cent is necessary, that he has to cut everybody across the board ten per cent.

KELLERMAN: Then the governor is allowed the freedom of cutting one department and not another department. Is the legislature given the power then to designate which department shall not be cut?

WHITE: No.

KELLERMAN: Well, it seems that's a matter we should take up.

LOPER: Will the chairman of the committee assist us in our thinking by answering a specific question? If the gross income tax is two and one-half per cent, and the legislature should decide to change that to two and one-quarter per cent or to two and three-quarters per cent are they free to do so under this plan of yours, and where would that act originate?

WHITE: You mean if they change the taxes?

LOPER: Yes.

WHITE: This wouldn't provide for that at all. All that this is, is to cover the budget procedure and has nothing to do with taxes, as such.

LOPER: In other words, Delegate White, what you're saying is that the legislature still has the power to raise taxes.

WHITE: Yes, it's still the responsibility of the legislature to raise taxes.

ASHFORD: May I ask a question? You provide for the determination of anticipated revenue by the, what is it, the financial commissioner? Is that -- Do you consider that as binding upon the legislature, or can they just say, "Well, we think we're going to have $2 million more and so we'll appropriate that much more."

WHITE: Well, they can say that and, of course, if they make the appropriations it makes the cuts that are necessary even more severe.

Now, I think that -- my experience with budgets has been that when it comes to anticipating revenue, as a rule, they are on the low side, and when it comes to anticipating expenses, they are generally on the high side. So I think there is a certain amount of cushion in there under any budgetary procedure.

The legislature, on the other hand, may disagree with the governor's recommendations and say, "Well, we're going to get a million more in revenue than you anticipate," and they may go ahead and appropriate on that basis. But, if they do, it would be necessary -- and the revenues didn't materialize, it would be necessary for the governor to make more severe reduction.

HEEN: As I understand it, the general appropriation bill is designed to cover all operating expenses of the State. Is that correct?

WHITE: Yes, all operating expenses plus equipment necessary for the respective departments.

HEEN: Now, I take it then that an appropriation such as has been made in the general appropriation bill, in the past, appropriation to the Hawaii Visitors Bureau, would have no place in that general appropriation bill because that is not designed for operating expenses of the government. Is that correct?

WHITE: That's right. I'd say that would be a special purpose bill.

CHAIRMAN: Unless you establish a Territorial Visitor's Council as proposed by your chairman in the last session.

HEEN: You mean to make that a department of government?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

HEEN: That might get around that.

Now, the other question is this. I take it that the item of contingency fund allotted to the governor would have no place in the general appropriation bill where you would find it now.

WHITE: Oh, I would think that you could -- the legislature could still give him --

HEEN: By a special appropriation bill. Is that correct?

WHITE: That's right.

HEEN: Now, is there anything in the committee proposal to prevent the appropriation of public funds for the purpose of the Hawaii Tourist -- Visitors Bureau?

WHITE: No. In the initial proposal that we drew up for items that were permitted we endeavored to cover that as well as grants to hospitals, and were advised positively, as you will see by the letter attached to your proposal -- to the committee report, that the attorney general says that it's unnecessary to mention those specifically for the reason that they are covered by the doctrine of public purposes. There is a letter in there attached to the committee report.

ASHFORD: To go back to that question, the determinatio of anticipated revenue. In effect, have you not frozen the power of the legislature to make its guess when you say, in Section 3, that, "The legislature may make any amendments to the general appropriations bill, provided such amendments shall not result in increasing the total amount in the bills recommended by the governor." In other words, isn't that total amount based on the determination of anticipated revenue?

WHITE: Well, they would be frozen here, but they have the right to put in a separate bill for a particular purpose, so that they can exceed the general appropriation bill by separate bills.

ASHFORD: And your proposal does not require them to provide methods of financing that special appropriation?

WHITE: Well, I think that that would necessarily follow when it came back to the governor, if he vetoed the items because of the inadequacy of revenue.

I think that if there are no other questions, it might be well to get this thing under way if I move the adoption of Section 1 of this Committee Proposal No. 10.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

WHITE: I think that there has been enough discussion on it. It doesn't require any further explanation, but if there are any of the other members of the committee would like to talk on it, why I'd be very -- Nils, would you like to?

H. RICE: We have always taken the procedure that to adjourn we have to go into general session. I think the committee itself could take a recess 'til half past one, at this time, ten minutes to twelve—and I don't think --

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

APOLIONA: I so move that we recess until half past one this afternoon.

HEEN: Point of order. I think that what we should do is rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, you state your point of order, Delegate Heen. Unless under suspension -- well, I don't know whether you can suspend the rules. I think Delegate Heen's point of order is well taken, so the motion is ruled out of order, for the present time.

HEEN: I so move that this committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again at half past one.

DELEGATE: Second.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Carried. Unanimous.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole is now meeting. As I recall, the motion before the committee was the adopti of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 10. Any discussion If there is no discussion, the Chair will be glad to put the motion to a question. All those in favor --

DOI: I have something to say on this. I'm not very clear on the section here. To me, it appears that the first sentence in Section 1 and the last sentence in Section 1 deal with the same question. Therefore, they are repetitious. It speaks about - - both sentences speak about the duty of the of the governor to submit a budget to the legislature and the last sentence - - the only dfference is that the last sentence speaks in a little more detail. That's about the only difference. I would like to ask the chairman if that is not correct.

CHAIRMAN: One is the budget and the other is submitting the budget together with the bill to the legislature. One deals with the preparation of a budget and the other deals with the preparation and submission of the bill to the legislature.

DOI: In other words, if you have the budget and the bill together, the last sentence you are referring to, it is not necessary to have the first sentence because that covers it.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the first one provides that - - the first part of it provides that at such time as the legislature shall prescribe, the governor shall submit to the legislature a budget.

DOI: And the last sentence on that point says, "shall be submitted by the governor to the legislature and shall be introduced therein as soon as practicable."

TAVARES: Perhaps I can help clarify that. It's my understanding that the legislature generally likes to have the governor submit the budget to the members of the legislature some time before the session opens so that they can study it before the session opens, and that first sentence requires that whatever time the legislature fixes, the governor shall submit the budget that period before the session so they can study it. The last sentence, as I understand it, provides that when the legislature meets, the governor must submit a bill or bills for the appropriations to implement his budget, and I think that you do have separate functions, and it isn't necessary for the governor to submit the bill as early as it is to submit the budget.

CHAIRMAN: Any other questions?

NIELSEN: Isn't this legislative? I don't see where this has any point of being in the Constitution. It's strictly legislative and it's always been handled that way. It's certainly extending the wordage of our Constitution. I'd like to know whether we should have it in the Constitution or not.

WHITE: I think it sets forth a basis on which this shall be done, that's all. It's a customary provision in a Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: If there are no other questions, the Chair will put the question. All those in favor of the adoption of Section 1, please say "aye." Opposed. Carried. That was Section 1.

LAI: I move for the adoption of Section 2.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion? If not, the Chair will put the question.

HEEN: There is a part of that bill - - I mean section which I don't understand. It says that, "No appropriation bill, other than bills to cover the expenses of the legislature, shall be passed on final reading by either house until the general appropriations bill shall have been transmitted to the governor, unless the governor has recommended the immediate passage of such appropriation bill, in which case, such a bill, if enacted, shall continue in force only until the appropriation bill shall by its terms become effective." Just what does that last part mean? I don't quite understand it.

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman of the committee or Mr. Tavares - -

TAVARES: I think the delegate who spoke last has a point there. It may not be clear on the face of it, but actually what that section is intended to do is this, to prevent the legislature from passing any other appropriation bill except the appropriation bill, until the appropriation bill has been passed and sent to the governor, except for such special or emergency appropriation bills which the governor may recommend to be passed before the general appropriation bill is passed, or bills for the legislative appropriations. That is the intent of this section. In other words, the words "unless the governor has recommended the immediate passage of such appropriation bill," doesn't refer to the general appropriation bill, but to the first type of appropriation bill mentioned in the first line of this section.

HEEN: Then what does this mean? That that bill "shall continue in force only until the general appropriations bill shall by its terms become effective."

TAVARES: The explanation for that is this. As a rule, as we know, the legislature meets before the end of a biennium, or if we have annual sessions, it will meet before June 30th of each fiscal year. And generally the appropriation bill takes effect the subsequent July 1st. Now ordinarily, the type of appropriation bill the governor will recommend to be passed before the general appropriations bill will be deficiency appropriations bills which have to take care of the remaining fiscal period before the beginning of the next fiscal period, and therefore there will be no trouble there because the deficiency period will end when the effective date of the new appropriation bill is reached.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Are you through, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: Not through yet, Mr. Chairman. Why should it be limited that it shall remain effective, that is remain in force, only until the general appropriations bill shall by itself become effective? If you pass the deficiency appropriations bill, it remains in force until it works itself out. It should not be terminated when the general appropriations bill goes into force.

TAVARES: This is not intended to change the general law which is in existence under similar provisions which are followed all the time that if, under a deficiency appropriation bill there has been a what we call - - what's the word now, a commitment? No, if there's been a commitment or the amount or obligation has been incurred, then naturally the appropriation bill will carry over. We have that all the time under appropriation bills that say that in appropriations for the fiscal period from July 1st of one year to June 30th of two years from that date, every item on which there is a commitment before that period is carried over by the auditor automatically, and there will be no harm in doing this. All that has to be done is to let a contract or make an order or do something that starts the obligation to expend the appropriation and the appropriation automatically carries over beyond the fiscal period. That is just common ordinary financing and it's done today.

ANTHONY: I'd like to ask the chairman or Mr. Tavares a question. The third line from the bottom of the section, "such bill." What does that refer to?

TAVARES: That "such bill" refers to the special type of appropriation bill, such as deficiency bill, which might be passed before the general appropriation bill is passed.

ANTHONY: I don't find that in the language. Does it refer to "such appropriations bill" in the sentence immediately before it?

TAVARES: Yes, and the words, "such appropriation bill," refer to the first use of that word in the section. You notice the general appropriations bill is capitalized.

ANTHONY: That's the point, and I think that being so, "such bill," referring to "such appropriation bill" in the sentence immediately preceding it, and "such appropriations bill" referring to the "general appropriations bill," the same thing will be accomplished if you put a period after "governor" and delete the remainder of the section.

TAVARES: I do not think so. I don't think that will be the result. It may be that that section is ambiguous, but I don't think that that's the way to resolve the ambiguity.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Crossley is recognized.

HEEN: As I understand it - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Crossley is recognized.

CROSSLEY: As I read this section, this has to do with legislative appropriations procedure and not the general appropriations bill. It simply says that before the general appropriations bill shall have been passed or even transmitted to the governor there can be emergency bills passed, and they would go for the balance of the biennium. In other words, they couldn't pass an emergency bill beyond the end of the fiscal period.

TAVARES: That's correct. If it were to go beyond that, it should be included for the period beyond that in the appropriation - - in the general appropriations bill for the succeeding fiscal period.

CROSSLEY: And therefore it would seem to me that the last portion of that sentence would be necessary because that does spell out exactly that. It says, "shall by its term become effective" - - "and shall continue in force only until the general appropriations bill shall by its terms become effective." Well, the general appropriation bill does not become effective before the beginning of the next fiscal period, the next biennium. Therefore what they are providing for here is the deficiency spending that has taken place; they are providing the funds for that and any other emergency, such as the legislative cost itself, up until the time the general appropriation can go into effect. Therefore I think all of the language is necessary, and as I read "such bill" it refers back to the special legislation.

TAVARES: That is correct, and if there is any ambiguity it can either be resolved here by amendment or the Committee on Style can take care of it.

SHIMAMURA: I would suggest the insertion of the word "special" after the first word, "No special appropriation bill." And also in the fourth line from the bottom, "immediate passage of such special appropriations bill," to clarify the situation.

TAVARES: I'm not quite sure that would do. That is a suggestion that might be considered and I would suggest that if this section otherwise finds approval that we tentatively approve it and I will try to prepare an amendment before we are through going over this article to try to bring that out.

SILVA: I assume that the intent here is provided that we are going to meet annually, and we have not decided yet as to the membership of the House nor the Senate and the apportionment. This proviso, I believe, was with the intent that we were going to meet annually, and we could probably work it this way. I think we should defer action until the Legislative Committee comes out with the picture, whether we're going to meet annually or we're not going to meet annually and how big or how small our Senate is going to be. I move that we defer action on this section till later on.

WHITE: May I answer that, Mr. Chairman. That provision would apply whether you have annual or semi-annual, I mean biennial sessions.

SILVA: I don't know, I think that some of the members of this committee, if we were not to meet annually, we probably wouldn't act favorably on this section. If we were to meet annually, there may be a different story.

NIELSEN: It seems to me this is going to make it very difficult to move things along in the House, and if we have a 40 day session it's going to create further difficulty because it says here that, "No appropriation bill," and then you can skip the next few words, "shall be passed on final reading by either house until the general appropriations bill is passed." Well, that means that if the House passes the appropriation bill and sends it over to the Senate, then their Finance Committee and the entire delegation have to stand by on all appropriation bills until that has gone to the governor from the Senate. They could waste two or three weeks in that way. There would be conferences and everything else before it gets to the governor and meantime the Finance Committee and the House couldn't pass any appropriations or do anything about them.

WHITE: The purpose of this is, of course, Mr. Nielsen, to speed the enactment of the general appropriations bill before you consider other appropriations. Now the legislature can provide to accelerate that any way that they want, to be considered simultaneous by both houses if necessary, and then meet in conference.

HAYES: There's a question I want to ask. Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of information.

HAYES: That supposing it came from the House, the appropriation bill, then went over to the Senate, and after it passed the Senate it went to governor, and then, if the House is not satisfied with it after it has gone to the Senate and up to the governor, can they still override the governor's veto?

CHAIRMAN: Are you referring to the general appropriations bill or the special?

HAYES: Yes, to the general appropriations.

CHAIRMAN: The general appropriations bill?

HAYES: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: Will you answer the question, Mr. White?

WHITE: There's nothing to prevent the - - otherwise it goes through the regular course. If the House or the Senate aren't satisfied with it, they can override the governor's veto.

CROSSLEY: I read nothing in this section that would prohibit the Finance Committee of the House or the Ways and Means of the Senate from doing their work and acting on other appropriation bills. There's nothing to foreclose them from continuing the consideration. It simply sets up a priority in getting the appropriations bill out, and to that point I think it has a great deal of merit. But there's nothing in here that would stop the work of either of those two committees except in their final enactment of such legislation.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Crossley, may I direct your attention to the fact that unless a special appropriation bill has been recommended by the governor, doesn't the language there prohibit the legislature from considering any special appropriation bill?

CROSSLEY: As I read—and perhaps the chairman or one of the members of the committee should answer—but as I read that, if the governor disapproves of the appropriations bill as it comes up to him through the machinery that has already been set up, the House or the legislature can override any recommendations or veto that he might make and continue on from that point. If they override his veto, then I would say that there is no question because he has no further consideration of it after they have gone over his veto, and it would have been an appropriation bill that would have passed. That's correct, Mr. Tavares?

TAVARES: Yes, that's correct. I'd like to point out that words used in this section are that "No appropriation bill, other than bills to cover the expenses of the legislature, shall be passed on final reading by either house." The way I read that word "final reading," it means what we call the sixth reading; that is, whatever reading in either house makes the bill final shall not be done until the general appropriations bill passes, so that a house could pass the bill on third reading and it wouldn't be final reading. But when it gets to the second house, it might be third reading in that house, or if it was amended, it would be the final reading in the house in which it originated which would be the final reading. That's the way I interpret that section, and therefore the word "final" does not prevent either house from passing a bill. It prevents either house from making the final passage of a bill.

WIRTZ: I'd like to call to the last speaker's attention the language that "No appropriation shall be passed on final reading by either house."

TAVARES: That is correct, but either house might have the particular final reading. In case the bill originates in the House, it goes to the Senate, is amended, it comes back to the House, the final reading is in the House. But in case it isn't amended, the final reading is in the Senate. There is your definition of "either," as I understand it.

HEEN: My point is this, though. Supposing a bill, a deficiency appropriation bill is introduced by the House and the governor approves the immediate passage of that bill and it provides for the payment of various claims, now the language here used is that that act or that bill if enacted shall not continue in force -- shall continue in force only until the general appropriations bill becomes effective. That's correct, is it not, as far as I've gone?

WHITE: Yes.

HEEN: Then these claims are not paid by the end of June 30, or before July 1 when the general appropriations generally goes into effect, then those claims that are not presented before that time can never be paid because that appropriation bill is no longer in force.

WHITE: If there is no commitment against the funds at that time, then they would lapse, but they will be covered by the new general appropriations bill.

HEEN: I don't think that's true. The new appropriations bill is supposed to take care of all operating expenses starting from July 1, and is not intended to take care of any past claims. What I have in mind is this. If you say that the bill which has become law is no longer in effect on June 30 of the particular year, then claims which have not been paid or supposed to have been paid under that deficiency act cannot be paid because the act has gone out of effect. What I think they have in mind is this, that the funds available under the deficiency bill shall be available only up to the time the general appropriations bill goes into effect. The law remains in force nevertheless.

MAU: As I read this section, it is rather restrictive. It does not give the opportunity to the legislature to pass emergency appropriations. Say that along the Hamakua coast they would have a plague and we have to wait a month for the general appropriation bill to pass, I don't think the legislature could appropriate emergency money to take care of that area. Likewise, if we have another eruption of Mauna Loa and the legislature wants to do something about it, it wouldn't be able to do so until this general appropriation bill is passed.

I want to call the attention of the delegates to the situation which faced Wyoming in 1949 in January. They had a snowstorm which killed thousands of cattle. Senator O'Mahoney got an appropriation for Wyoming in two days of three million dollars for the State of Wyoming. Now if they had a restrictive section like that, Congress could not have made the money available.

WHITE: There is provision in there. The latter part of the provision takes care of that very thing. The governor can recommend the passage of a special bill.

HEEN: The trouble with that is if they appropriated, say, three million dollars to take care of the cattle on Parker Ranch and it takes about six months to take care of that situation there, but that money will not be available to the full amount if under the terms of this bill the special bill goes out of effect on June 30.

WHITE: That's true, unless it is encumbered.

C. RICE: The legislature is meeting in February until sometime in the end of April or first of May and that's when the current appropriation bill is in effect, and they make an additional appropriation for a deficiency. It runs to June 30, and all items that are not contracted for expire as of June 30 and the money lapses to the treasury. But anything that's contracted for and if some of the bills in the last legislature -- the additional appropriation bills lapsed last June 30 but they've been contracted for and not paid, but the budget officer finds out they are contracted for, they are still in effect. The claims bill was always a different bill, I think the senator will remember, than the additional appropriation bill. I see nothing wrong with this for the additional appropriation bill.

WHITE: It seems to me on that particular thing, that you are bringing up a very unusual type of situation which could be handled by a bill, a special bill that would lapse on June 30th, but while the legislature is still in session, they could consider this subject, and if it wasn't necessary to appropriate additional funds, that could be done after the general appropriation bill is passed. This is only to accelerate or expedite the passage of the general appropriation bill, and would not prevent the legislature from taking care of the situation that Judge Heen brings up.

CROSSLEY: I would like to point out to the previous speaker from the fifth district that these are State funds that we are talking about. The funds that Senator O'Mahoney got on the cattle relief—O'Mahoney—got on the cattle relief were federal funds for the most part because I followed along about that time trying to get a few hundred thousand dollars of fruit fly funds. We found it very difficult, whereas Wyoming, because it already was a state, had no particular problem in getting federal funds for quick relief from that, whereas we had an invasion of fruit fly here and found it very difficult to get federal aid because we weren't a state, but these funds that he refers to were primarily federal funds.

MAU: That's correct. I was just using that as an example. If the Congress itself had a restrictive clause like that they couldn't make emergency appropriations. Now the answer to that as I understand it is that the governor must consent to it. As I read the whole proposal it makes the governor the most powerful individual in the State. It will create him and his commissar of finance dictator. They could, in my judgment, throttle the whole State if they wanted to. I've never seen any provision like that in any constitution in which the governor is given so much power over the finances. Now, historically speaking, finances are always in the hands of the legislature, and that's where it should rest. I think we should go back to fundamental principles and leave the financing of the State to the State legislature.

H. RICE: I reply to the last speaker. I'm in great sympathy with the appropriations bill [being] passed before any other bill up to the governor, but I agree with Mr. Anthony that probably we should have a period after "transmitted to the governor" period.

TAVARES: I think that is a matter of policy for this Convention to decide. I disagreed with Mr. Anthony because I didn't think it had the same meaning if you cut that out. That is where I disagreed. Now it is true, and I think there will be nobody here, not even the members of the legislature, who will deny that there have been great abuses in holding up the general appropriations bill until the last day sometimes, and we want to prevent that. And if it is the sense of this Convention that we've gone too far in providing that a special bill, if enacted with the approval of the governor, shall cease to be effective when the general appropriations bill become effective, why that seems to me a matter of policy which might well be decided adversely to our committee. But I do believe that the rest of the section is necessary in the light of past proven and frequent abuses by the legislature.

HEEN: Following that expression, I would suggest that we put a period after the word "bill" in the third line from the end of that section. "Unless the governor has recommended immediate passage of such appropriation bill," period, and then delete the rest. That would take care of deficiency appropriations and emergency appropriations which may take more than a year to carry out.

LOPER: If that is made as an amendment, I'll be glad to second it.

HEEN: I so move.

LOPER: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: In other words the motion is, as the Chair understands it, that a period be put after the word "such appropriation bill" at the end of line five. Is that correct?

HEEN: That's correct, Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: Do I understand it that we are adopting these sections tentatively, or is this the final vote on each one?

CHAIRMAN: That's the understanding of the Chair. Although the motion has been to adopt, the procedure in the other Committees of the Whole has been to tentatively agree in principle to the provisions.

ANTHONY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: All in favor of the amendment please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

NIELSEN: One other thing regarding that first sentence, and that is the fact that sometimes the University budget and other budgets ask for 32 specialists instead of 20 as the legislature agrees to, and unless you know what bills both houses are more or less agreed on are important bills, why they can't give really fair thought to the general appropriations bill. Now, I think this matter ought to be deferred for further study because we are going to tie them down to where they, after they pass the general appropriations bill and the deficiency bill, then a lot of important bills that should be passed and maybe cut down the number of extra specialists at the University, why there's no money for them, for these special appropriations for vital things throughout the territory. So I don't see how you can pass the budget bill without considering all the other appropriation bills that are introduced. I move for deferment.

CHAIRMAN: Well, if the - -

CROSSLEY: I move now that we tentatively adopt Section 2 as amended.

WHITE: I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion? If not, all those in favor of Section 2 as amended please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

LAI: I move for the adoption of Section 3.

WHITE: I'll second that.

SAKAKIHARA: I move that Section 3 be deleted.

DOI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

SAKAKIHARA: May I speak on my motion to delete?

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

SAKAKIHARA: Section 3 as drafted by the Committee on Taxation and Finance provides thus: "Power of legislature to amend the general appropriations bill." I believe that the policy-making body of our government should be free to determine the appropriations, being responsible to the people to provide revenue adequate for the appropriations. I don't see why the governor should have this tremendous power. I am in accord with the statement made earlier by the delegate from the fifth district, the honorable Chuck Mau. The power of taxation, power to make appropriations, is vested in the legislature and under the provisions of Section 3 of the proposal you are hamstringing your legislature. Now, I'm against it.

DOI: I would also like to speak in favor of the motion. I believe appropriations are the basis of the legislative power. In this section here we are giving too much power to the executive body. By doing so we presuppose this fact, that the executive, which is one man, can be trusted more than the legislative body which is composed of many men. I think we have to admit that there are honest and fair-minded men in the legislature. The question is shall we take our chances with one man or with a number of men, and I am willing to take my chances to rest with many men.

For another reason also. The executive has been given much power and we have to admit that it is much easier for the executive to build up a political machine through the spoils system than it is for the legislature because it is composed of many men. For example, we have given the executive the power of appointing judges. Now, to subject the judiciary again to the whim or the will of the executive by going to the executive and bowing and begging him to give so much money so the judiciary can efficiently function, I think is going a little too far. And therefore I would like to urge that we vote in favor of the motion to delete.

MAU: Speaking in favor of the motion. I want to ask where are those who in all of the Convention said that they want a concise Constitution? Where are those who say that legislative matters should be left to the legislature? Aren't we cluttering up this Constitution with a lot of legislative matters? Go to each of the sections; they've got a section on purchasing methods, they've got a section on uniformity of taxation, they've got a section on expenditure of funds. Aren't they all legislative matters? Why can't we have a simple provision like that of the New Jersey Constitution. I speak in favor of this motion to delete because I think that many other sections ought to be deleted. I think we ought to come to our senses and realize that we're writing a Constitution, not passing legislation in this Convention.

LOPER: I believe the purpose back of this and some of these other provisions is perfectly worthy and that is to come out of the legislative session with a balanced budget, so that we have enough money in the treasury to cover our expenditures. However, if I understand the matter correctly the appropriation of funds is a legislative function. One of the provisions here that the appropriation - - the general appropriations bill shall pass before other special appropriation acts will help bring the legislature to carry its proper responsibility. Another provision that may come in from another committee for an annual session of the legislature will be another step in that direction. Still a third would be to call a special session of the legislature if the revenues are not sufficient to cover the appropriations. I'm speaking then in favor of the motion, although I'm in sympathy with what I understand to be the basic purpose back of it, namely that we shall have a budget that is balanced but balanced by the legislature rather than by the executive by [inaudible] funds.

SHIMAMURA: I agree with the sentiments expressed by the gentleman from Hawaii. However, if you delete the entire portion of Section 3, it may be the legislature won't have any power of amendment of any of the general appropriations bills because as we have passed the first section, as I read that section, the first section there the governor has the authority and the power and the function to introduce a general appropriations bill, and I think that Section 3 is to take care of the situation where the executive, the chief executive, submits the appropriation bill, and Section 3 restricts that somewhat by giving the legislature the power to amend. But if you delete the entire Section 3 the legislature in effect won't have any power to amend the bill. I think, therefore, if that reading is correct—I've just read it now, Mr. Chairman—Section 3 should be amended only to the extent of putting a period after the words "appropriations bill" in the second line, to conserve the power of the legislature to have power to amend the appropriations bill submitted by the governor.

WHITE: I'd like to speak in opposition to this motion. I don't think that they've read this thing correctly if they say it restricts the power of the legislature. It doesn't restrict the power of the legislature. The legislature can by separate bill appropriate additional amounts and there is nothing unusual about this procedure. In fact, 19 states now have a constitutional provision requiring appropriations supplementing the general appropriations bill be made in separate bill for a single object and purpose. And that's all that 3 and 4 does in this particular instance. I don't see where you are taking away any power from the legislature at all.

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman, I - -

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, I believe Delegate Kellerman wished to be recognized. Unless you waive your right - -

SAKAKIHARA: I yield to Delegate Kellerman.

KELLERMAN: Thank you. I agree with the last speaker, Mr. White, that this only requires the legislature to enact additional appropriations by special bill. But because I am rather concerned with the priorities against revenues which those additional bills are going to carry with relation to the to the general appropriation bill, it seems to me that we can effectuate the same result of preserving - - As I gathered it, the proponents of this proposal had in mind the executive responsibility for tax program and the executive responsibility for an appropriations bill. The legislature may vary either, but insofar as the proposals of the governor, the appropriations bill and the proposals for revenue to be derived should be allowed to remain co-terminus. But if the governor's revenue bill is to go through and he is to be responsible for that, then the appropriations made against that revenue bill should be left intact. Conversely, if the appropriation bill is to be increased, the revenues would have to be increased. But since the executive is to assume the responsibility for the initial proposal of balancing a revenue tax proposal with a general appropriations proposal and leaving it to the legislature if it varies one to necessarily vary the other, it seems to me that we could arrive at that result by adding this language to Section 3. It reads as follows: "The legislature may make any amendments to the general appropriations bill, provided such amendment shall not result in increasing the total amount in the bill as recommended by the governor unless it also makes provisions for such additional revenues that may be necessary to fund such expenditures."

Now, it seems to me that is what we are trying to drive at. What we want to have is if the governor proposes a revenue bill and proposes an appropriation to match those revenues, those two are to be studied and regarded by the legislature as a unit proposal. If the legislature wishes to increase expenditures, then it's the legislature's responsibility to increase the taxes which the governor has proposed. It seems to me that we are saving the governor's function, we are saving the degree of his responsibility to the people —and remember he is an elected governor. His responsibility to the people is being protected, if we provide that the legislature can increase the appropriation bill, but if it does it has got to provide right then and there for such additional revenues as shall be necessary to meet and fund these additional expenditures. On that basis I see no reason why the general appropriations bill could not be increased by the legislature and we'd get away from this idea of all these extra or special appropriations bills subsequent to the general bill, which we may run into trouble on which one shall have priority in case there are not sufficient revenues to fund them all.

If it is agreeable I would propose as an amendment to the amendment introduced by the gentleman from the second district that in lieu of deleting Section 3 we add the following language. After the word "governor," change the period to a comma and add: "unless it makes provisions for such additional revenues as may be necessary to fund such additional expenditures."

HEEN: I think in reading that Section 3, we ought to read also Section 4. If I understand 4 correctly, instead of increasing the items in the general appropriations bill so as to increase the total in that bill, you may make those increases by way of separate bills. Is that correct?

WHITE: That's correct.

HEEN: All right. Then, but in introducing separate bills, appropriation bills, those bills must specify one object or purpose. Is that also correct?

WHITE: That's correct.

HEEN: All right. Then supposing the legislature passes a bill with the purpose or object of augmenting the appropriations made for the various departments of the State, augmenting the appropriations made in the general appropriations bill to take care of several of these same departments. Would that be one object or purpose?

WHITE: No, they would have to be done by separate bills under this wording.

HEEN: But it seems to me that the one purpose of such a bill is to augment the appropriations for various departments, that's the one purpose. Otherwise you'd have to have separate bills that you have in mind, one department at a time.

ASHFORD: Speaking to Mrs. Kellerman's remarks, may I say that that brings us right back to the question that I asked the chairman before lunch. Wouldn't the legislature in that case have to accept the predetermination of the anticipated revenue even though their own figures and experience determined it to be larger or less?

CROSSLEY: I would like to speak against the deletion of this section, but recognizing fully that the power should rest with the legislature. But inasmuch as the legislature has that power, it should also have the full responsibility along with it, and that full responsibility is better spelled out I think in an amendment to that section as proposed by the delegate from the fourth district than it is by Section 4.

In other words, we have had a great deal of deficiency spending. Now, deficiency spending doesn't go on so much in times of increasing prosperity as it does during the time of decreasing revenues, and at that time it's a favorite stunt to make estimates knowing that they can't be met and go into deficiency spending. The idea of this section, as I read it, is to stop deficiency spending of government, which is certainly a bad practice. It's a thing that we all wish could be stopped in our federal government. Therefore, it would seem to me that rather than delete this section that it should be amended, and I would like at this time to second the amendment proposed by Delegate Kellerman.

CHAIRMAN: Will the Clerk please read the amendment offered by Delegate Kellerman—just a moment, Delegate Fong—in order to understand what the amendment is.

CLERK: "Unless it makes provisions for such additional revenues as may be necessary to fund such additional expenditures."

FONG: The amendment proposed by Delegate Kellerman is meaningless. When I say meaningless, I want to point to the fact that there has always been divergent opinion as to how much we will receive in revenue. Now, in the time that I have been in the legislature the Budget Bureau director always tells us that we will be three to five million dollars in the hole. In 1947 session they told us that we were in the hole three million dollars. When we ended, we were ten million dollars above.

Now the question comes up, who has the last word as to how much revenue we can expect? The budget director, the members of the legislature, the governor, each has his own idea -- have their own ideas as to how much money can be realized. If you put that amendment to this section here, I think it's meaningless. The legislature will say, "As far as we are concerned, we will be three or four million dollars above deck," and the budget director will naturally hold hue and cry in all of these budget meetings that we will not meet the expenditure. In all the years that I have been in the legislature I have found that the budget director has been off at least five million dollars; he was ten million dollars off in 1947. How many million dollars will he be off in next session of the legislature? Now who is going to tell us that we can only expect the revenue-producing measures to bring in 100 million dollars a biennium? Who is going to tell us that the revenue will not exceed 100 million dollars in the biennium?

So I say that where you have guesswork—of course it is intelligent guesswork, guesswork by people who are supposed to know and they differ so widely—then you won't have a yardstick by which you can gauge these things, and the legislature can very well say, "We have provided for the appropriation and the money is available, the only thing is that the budget director is too pessimistic." I would like to leave that forethought here and I think that is one of the very serious things we have in the legislature now, the difference of opinion as to how much could be raised.

WHITE: Could I talk to that, too? I think it has one further disadvantage if you have that provision in. The legislature would be recommending the passage or making additional tax laws when it didn't know what the over-all needs were because we are only talking about the general appropriations bill. Before the legislature could be in a position to know what the financial needs were, you'd have to wait until you get through with the capital budget and other appropriations in the session.

To speak to the point that Mr. Delegate Fong made on this, on the difference of opinion on what the revenue may be, I feel that will in large measure be corrected when you have the type of auditor setup that we are proposing under this setup, because the auditor then will be under the direction of the legislature and he will be in a position to pass and to advise the legislature on the validity of the figures used by the executive department, so that you will have a check and balance in that regard.

HEEN: I rise to the point of information. I would like to have that amendment proposed by Delegate Kellerman read again. Read it slowly.

CLERK: "That we add the following language: after the word 'governor,' change the period to comma and add, 'unless it makes provision for such additional revenues as may be necessary to fund such additional expenditure.' "

HEEN: Now according to that language, in order to increase the amount of the general appropriations bill, the legislature would have to enact legislation to produce additional revenue. I think that is wrong because the legislature might find that the over-all estimated revenue may be sufficient without any additional taxation law to take care of any additional amount to be added to the general appropriations bill.

TAVARES: May I point out, simply for the information of the delegates, what I think induced our committee to suggest Section 3? Whether that reasoning is right or wrong is up to the members of the delegation to decide. But I think it was felt that by eliminating increases over the total over-all amount of the governor's budget, there would be a tendency to minimize some of the points of difference so that it would help them to get through a little earlier than otherwise with the general appropriations bill. In other words, by cutting down somewhat the area of disagreement by the legislators, it was thought you would expedite. Now that may or may not be sound in the opinion of the delegates, but it did have an influence on the members of the committee

I feel this way very strongly. I would rather see this section deleted than the amendment proposed go through. I think that a provision like that has a tendency to force throug hasty, ill considered tax measures, piece-meal tax measure which are always wrong. A tax should be passed only after you have an all-around, all-over view of all of your requirements. And I think it's wrong to do that.

We had before the committee for consideration a proposal that we must balance the budget every time, and we gave it up for several reasons. One was the reason brought out by some legislators to the effect that they never can agree on appropriations. Secondly, it was pointed out that sometimes it's not too unhealthy to go into a legislative session with a deficit, rather than a surplus. It makes the legislators more economy-minded. So on the whole I would rather see the whole section go out than to have it tied down in this manner.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to withdraw my second. As I reread this and listen to the arguments, I think they are valid. As I look at Section 4 again, it's there perhaps where there should be an amendment. I would at this time like to withdraw my second to the previous amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Wirtz.

WIRTZ: I would be out of order speaking now. I was going to speak against the amendment but the second has been withdrawn.

SILVA: I was going to speak against the section for the reason that, as an example, during the last session of the legislature in which the governor made certain recommendations through the Bureau of the Budget or vice-versa and the appropriations bill was presented to the legislature, in the opinion of the department heads—Department of Public Instruction, the Board of Health—they appeared before the committee and they asked that certain items be re-inserted into the appropriations bill, as an example, mosquito control and additional kindergarten teachers. In the opinion of the legislators, we felt that during the next biennium there would be sufficient revenues raised throughout the Territory to cover the additions requested by the department heads. We re-inserted mosquito control and plague control for Hawaii, and the Department of Public Instruction requests were inserted again. Now, all of that would have increased the appropriations bill. If it wasn't for the power of the legislature to increase the appropriation bill, then the public of the territory with the whole state would have been deprived of government that they requested themselves. And by doing that, I can't see how you are going to put the power in the hands of the bureau of the Budget and the governor, that rightly belongs to the members of the legislature.

ARASHIRO: I have a question for the chairman of the Taxation and Finance Committee. Doesn't this section limit the power of the legislature of introducing new tax measures?

TAVARES: No.

ARASHIRO: Because I feel this way, that when the governor makes his recommendation or submits his proposed budget, he naturally has all the methods of raising the revenue, and as far as the legislature is concerned, we don't have to think about raising the revenue, because as far as raising the revenues are concerned it has been restricted by the last section of the sentence where it says, "provided such a method shall not result in an increase in the total amount in the bill recommended by the governor." Then naturally if we are not going to increase the revenue, we are not going to think of new methods of taxation.

WHITE: This increases the -- this is a prohibition on increasing the total amount of the expenses provided by the general appropriations bill and has nothing to do with the revenue.

ARASHIRO: Well, if we cannot increase the expenditure, then we don't have to think about raising money and new methods. Is that right?

WHITE: I don't understand your point.

ARASHIRO: If we cannot -- if we do not find the need of increasing the expenditures, then we don't need the necessity of finding, exploring new field of raising revenue.

WHITE: Of course this is only a part, this is only one item of the program that the governor submits at the legislative session. There is also the capital budget that still has to be considered or any other bills that the legislature may introduce that have not cleared through the governor.

KELLERMAN: I want to withdraw my amendment because I think the result that I was trying to achieve can be accomplished better in a further provision -- amendment of a further one that's coming up.

AKAU: I feel we had free and full discussion on this issue and most of us have made up our minds. I move the previous question.

FUKUSHIMA: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: For the previous question?

FUKUSHIMA: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the previous question please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.
The question then to be put before this committee is whether or not Section 3 should be deleted. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

FONG: If Section 3 is deleted --

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong, Section 3 has been deleted. The only way to have discussion on Section 3 is to move to reconsider.

FONG: I was going to ask you this question, by the time you put it to a vote as to what would be the import of deleting Section 3? Will that mean that the legislature will have the right to amend? Now if that's the understanding, it's perfectly all right.

HEEN: I don't think there is any question about it that the legislature may amend without any restriction because in the first section there's no limitation on the power of the legislature to amend any general appropriations bill. When the governor sends the bill down for introduction in the legislature, that bill is not law until acted upon and passed by the legislature, and the legislature has the power to amend.

FONG: If that is the spirit and the thought, it's fine.

CHAIRMAN: May we proceed to Section 4?

HEEN: I move that that section be deleted. Number 3 has been deleted, number 4 has no place here.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion has been made to delete Section 4. Any discussion?

LOPER: I wonder if there isn't going to be a provision somewhere else in our Constitution providing that any bill shall deal with only one subject and it shall be reflected in the title, the subject.

HEEN: That provision is in the article relating to the legislature.

TAVARES: Before there's a vote on this section, I think the delegate ought to hear a little of the other side. There is a place, it seems to me, for a provision like this. Although ordinarily we are going to have provision limiting bills to one object or purpose, but you can get one object and purpose by an appropriation bill by just making the title broad enough. You can cover any number of subjects. It seems to me that even though Section 3 has been deleted and the latter part of Section 2, there could be some point to this by amending Section 4 to read: "Appropriation bills other than the general appropriations bill and other than the deficiency appropriation bills shall not appropriate money for more than one object or purpose." I think it might prevent a little too much log-rolling on some of the other types of appropriation. I think general appropriations bills and deficiency appropriation bills need to cover a large number of subjects, but there isn't so much necessity for other bills to do that.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion?

TAVARES: I move that the motion to delete be amended to a motion to amend in the manner I have stated.

ROBERTS: I didn't get any specific language on the amendment. I think if the delegate from the fourth would draft some language and present it to us, I think we could consider it at that time. May we have a five minute recess for that?

CHAIRMAN: Shall we defer it, or are you making a motion to recess?

ROBERTS: I move we defer to give the gentleman opportunity to prepare a proper amendment.

DELEGATE: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion's been made to defer consideration of Section 4. All those in favor please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.
We will proceed to Section 5.

WOOLAWAY: I move that we approve tentatively Section 5.

RICHARDS: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

SAKAKIHARA: I move to delete Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: Does Delegate Mau second the motion to delete Section 5?

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. May I ask those who are familiar with the enactment of general appropriations bills whether or not there is something in the statutes now which provides for the same thing that is designed here in this particular provision?

WHITE: As I understand it, the governor has this power at the present time.

HEEN: By statute?

WHITE: Yes.

PORTEUS: I think there is a provision in the Organic Act which lets the governor veto items in an appropriation bill, but there is nothing which permits him to reduce appropriations.

TAVARES: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN: May I state that it was Delegate Porteus who spoke without recognition by the Chair.

PORTEUS: I apologize to the Chairman and I withdraw my information.

HEEN: It should be expunged from the record.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

TAVARES: That is correct about the Organic Act. Section 49 of the Organic Act provides that the governor "may veto any specific item or items in any bill which appropriates money for specific purposes, but shall veto other bills if at all only as a whole." Now that type of provision can be abused and it has been abused. The legislature, by lumping a lot of items together into one big item and then putting a lot of water in it, can force the governor to take it or leave it as a whole. It seems to me it would be a healthy thing to allow the governor to not only veto a whole item but to take some of the water out of an item without eliminating it entirely. And remember that since we have provided here that the legislature -- we have provided means which will give an incentive to the legislature to pass the appropriation bill early, they are now going to have an opportunity to pass on the governor's veto. We are encouraging them to pass it early so that if the governor does wring too much of the water out, they can still put it back.

ANTHONY: I don't think we're adopting exactly the correct procedure. Presumably this committee has done a lot of work on the proposal and I think we ought to hear from the committee chairman before we start to vote on a motion to delete. We have had no discussion of that. The basis of the proposal, as I understand it, is to get away from the difficulty that pertains in the Federal Constitution. As you know, there the appropriation bill, the President must either accept it or veto it, and no President in our entire history has ever had the nerve to veto an appropriation bill, even though he disapproves heartily of some items in it. I should think our appropriate procedure here would have the -- if the movant would withdraw his motion, get this section before the house and let the committee explain it.

CHAIRMAN: May I correct the speaker's last remarks. A motion was made to adopt Section 5 in principle, it was seconded; and then there was a motion made to delete Section 5, that was seconded; and then Mr. Tavares spoke in favor of Section 5. Mr. Tavares and Mr. White represented the committee.

ANTHONY: I'm sorry, I didn't know there was a motion to adopt.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, there was.

HEEN: For the information of the committee I might state this. The Committee on Legislative Powers have tentatively agreed upon this provision: "Every bill which shall have passed the legislature shall be certified by the presiding officers and clerks of both houses and shall thereupon be presented to the governor. If he approves it, he shall sign it and it shall become law. If the governor does not approve such bill, he may return it with his objections to the legislature. He may veto any specific item or items in any bill which appropriates money for specific purposes by striking out or reducing the same but he shall veto other bills, if at all, only as a whole." That is taken from the Organic Act except that we have put in there the power to reduce.

WHITE: Well, I would accept that if you have covered it in the legislative section and I think it's something that should be done. I think the reasons for it are well set forth in the explanation of Section 5 in our report.

HEEN: If that is accepted, I take it there will be no objections to that going into the article on the legislature. Then this committee proposal can be reduced in length.

WHITE: That's right.

CROSSLEY: On that specific understanding, then, I would vote to delete this section with the complete understanding that it is going to be included in the legislative bill which undoubtedly will be the very last bill to be considered by this body—with emphasis on "the very last." We would have no chance to come back in on this one, so I would like to be sure that the gate isn't closed to such an inclusion at some later time.

WHITE: We reserve the right to bring it up at that particular time, particularly as it applies to the reduction of items.

CHAIRMAN: With that understanding, is the committee ready to vote on the motion to delete?

FONG: I think the deletion of Section 5 is a little too drastic. I would like to amend that motion to delete just to delete the words "or reduce" in the first line of the sentence. "The governor may strike out items in the appropriation bills passed by the legislature." This would restore it back to what the Organic Act is at the present time. The reduction is an addition here.

SAKAKIHARA: I was the original movant of the motion to delete Section 5 and precisely because of the fact that we've already taken care of this provision in the legislative committee, I don't see the necessity of duplication of the right of the governor in Section 5 when it's already taken care of by the legislative committee. And that is a question to be taken -- subject matter taken care of by the legislative committee.

ARASHIRO: With the understanding suggested by my colleague from Kauai and the suggestion made by the delegate from the fourth district, I now move to the previous question.

DOI: Before I'm shut off, I would like to say that this Section 5 here is not the same as that just read by Delegate Heen. Section 5 not only includes the power to strike out but also includes the power to reduce, and I think that's better. The power to strike out of the governor is only a right -- his right to suggest to the legislature that this and this should be done. Should we include the power to reduce, I think we should also include the power to increase. That would suggest to the legislature that this be completely stricken out, reduced or increased, and the legislature could do what they want with it. And should they find that this Section 5 passes here, then when the Legislative Committee proposal comes up to this particular point, we can just incorporate this, and leave it up to the Style Committee.

HEEN: I don't think the last speaker understood the language that I presented at a moment ago. This states that the governor "may veto any specific item or items in any bill which appropriates money for specific purposes by striking out or reducing the same." "Reducing the same" is an addition to what we now have in the Organic Act.

FUKUSHIMA: I second the motion for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the previous question, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

All those in favor of deleting Section 5 with the understanding that the subject matter will be covered by the legislative proposal please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

RICHARDS: I now move that we approve tentatively Section 6.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

TAVARES: I think some explanation should go into the record here. The blank section, the section blank of article - - Section 5 of Article blank is intended to refer to the section of the Bill of Rights which provides for the separation of church and state. I don't know whether it's still Section 5, but I should like to have that understanding so that when we vote on it, the proper section can be inserted.

CHAIRMAN: Are you through, Delegate Tavares?

SAKAKIHARA: At this time I move that we defer action on Section 6 until we have disposed of the proposal as a whole - - defer action on Section 6 until we have acted on the rest of the proposal, so we may make proper reference to the section, due to the fact that Section 5 was deleted.

WHITE: As I recall, the Style Committee had already given article numbers to these things and we could refer to the article numbers that the Style Committee has provided for that section.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no further discussion, are we ready for the question? All those in favor of the adoption in principle of Section 6, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Section 7.

WOOLAWAY: I move that we now adopt Section 7 tentatively.

RICHARDS: Second the motion.

SAKAKIHARA: At this time I wish to move to amend Section 7 by deleting the first clause so as to read, "The governor shall have the authority through allotments or otherwise, to control the rate at which appropriations are expended."

CHAIRMAN: I didn't understand the motion. Will you please repeat it in clear and unmistakable language.

SAKAKIHARA: Delete the first clause, so as to read - -

CHAIRMAN: While we're having time out, do you want to have Mr. White explain this section?

SAKAKIHARA: All right.

WHITE: As previously stated, the committee believes that means should be provided for preserving financial stability by authorizing the governor to reduce expenditures when conditions warrant such action. This would not be construed as an encroachment by the governor on the power of the legislature since the appropriations made were based on estimated revenues submitted by him. Such a delegation of power must be provided in the Constitution in order to be effective. You will note that it is only in situations where anticipated revenues fall below the estimates upon which the appropriations were based or whenever the governor is authorized by law to affect economy that he has the power to reduce expenditures below the amounts appropriated.

It is the belief of your committee that any statute granting such power to the governor should stipulate that any reductions in appropriations should be limited to lump sums by departments, thus leaving to the discretion of the department head the means of effecting such reductions.

The governor is also authorized to make periodic allocation of funds to take care of operations programmed by each of the departments which are submitted to him for approval.

LOPER: May I ask the chairman of the committee if the second word in that section should not be eliminated, "anticipated" revenues? Aren't you referring to the actual revenues falling below estimates?

CHAIRMAN: I believe Delegate Loper addressed his question to the chairman of the committee.

WHITE: I think the difficulty there is that you may - - it isn't always actual because on the basis of receipts up to a particular time, it may develop that your anticipated revenues for the future are still not adequate. And so I think the word "anticipated" should stay in.

LOPER: Then I would like to speak again on that. It seems to me that when the government is actually going in the red because the revenues are not adequate, certainly then the power must be somewhere to balance the budget and keep expenditures below income. But to do that in advance seems to be unnecessary.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong sought to be recognized, I believe.

FONG: I'd like to ask a question. In the latter part of the section, "that the legislature, by resolution concurred in by a majority of the members of each house, may exempt specific appropriations" from this legislative - - this executive reduction. Now do I understand that this resolution must be concurred in by majority of members of the House and the Senate at a session?

WHITE: What was the question now, Mr. Fong?

FONG: The question is, the resolution, must it be adopted during the session or shall it be adopted or may be adopted outside of the session?

WHITE: It would have to be adopted at the session.

FONG: At the session?

WHITE: Yes.

FONG: Then when the legislature anticipates that there may be a drop in the revenues, they may by resolution exempt certain provisions from this governor's veto?

WHITE: The purpose of this would be that if the legislature wanted to set up some special legislative committee to operate in between sessions of the legislature that they could appropriate the money for that purpose and the governor wouldn't have any power to cut it down as he would in the case of other departments.

FONG: And that is by special resolution, accompanying the appropriation probably?

WHITE: That's right.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Is Delegate Fong through? Delegate Heen.

HEEN: Point of information. Is there not some statute on the books now that is similar to what is written here in this section, so far as the general appropriations bill is concerned?

WHITE: We'll look that up. I think there is in creating the Budget Bureau.

HEEN: If that is the case, why have it written into the Constitution and have it a fixed basic law when in the future you might want to have to change some of the provisions that are written here?

FONG: I could anticipate - -

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, Delegate Loper desires to speak.

FONG: I was just yielding to Senator Heen a little while ago.

CHAIRMAN: Well, this Chair when it rules—when you yield you yield for all purposes contrary - -

FONG: I bow to the ruling of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: However, I'll call - - since Delegate Loper has asked you to speak, I'll call on Delegate Fong to speak.

LOPER: I wish to ask another question about the second line in this Section 7. It reads as follows: "revenue estimates upon which appropriations were based." Are those estimates the ones made by the commissioner of finance and the governor, or are they the estimates made by the legislature in passing the appropriations bill?

WHITE: They are the ones made by the governor and submitted to the legislature. Assuming - - I can imagine the situation might arise where there might be some adjustment of those after conference.

LOPER: It seems to me then that the revenues might well drop below the estimates made prior to the legislative session and still be well within the appropriations. In other words, if the tax returns are higher than anticipated, the government would not in any sense be heading into the red, and yet the revenues would be less than the original estimates.

WHITE: If you run into a situation where revenues are running ahead of it, then you don't have - - the governor has no power to reduce expenses.

KELLERMAN: I am not particularly in favor of Section 7, but in case the majority of this body is in favor of putting it in, I should like in the interim to propose an amendment, which I think would clarify one picture.

We've heard much about the executive department cutting appropriations during the period of anticipated deficiency of revenues, and cutting them using discretion which rightly belongs to the legislature and interfering with the activities of the executive department, that it made it very difficult for them to carry on the work which apparently the legislature had intended them to carry on. It seems to me that it would be a very logical solution to such an impasse if this next to the last line were amended. Where it says "provided, that legislature, by resolution concurred in by a majority of the members of each house, may exempt specific appropriations," delete "for the legislative department" and insert in lieu thereof "in whole or in part." That would give the legislature the power to state in the appropriation bill as errata that such appropriations are not to be reduced at all, and if so, only to what percentage.

It seems to me it's quite logical to assume that we have certain departments of governmental function that are very much more essential to the carrying of the State, the general welfare, than other departments. It would be much more logical to refuse the less necessary departments than to reduce the more essential departments. This would make it possible for the legislature, if we're going to have such provision as this in the Constitution, to designate the certain departments which - - the functions of which it considers so vital that they are not to be reduced at all, or others to be reduced only in part, and then it is the legislative discretion being exercised and not the executive in cutting in to general appropriations.

SAKAKIHARA: I rise to a point of order. The lady Kellerman wanted to offer an amendment to the motion to delete, that being a proper motion to talk on. I think there is a motion before the Committee of the Whole to delete this section, isn't it?

CHAIRMAN: The only motion before the committee at the present time is to adopt Section 7.

SAKAKIHARA: I make a motion at this time to delete Section 7.

ANTHONY: I would like to ask a question of the chairman of the committee. Under this Section 7, would it be possible for the governor to eliminate from the funds allocated to the judicial department of the government the necessary funds that had been appropriated by the legislature for the running of the courts? Would it be possible under any circumstance?

WHITE: You mean to cut them out entirely? Well, I don't think that - - Under the provision here he'd be permitted to make reductions. I can't imagine any executive ever taking such action. It would permit the governor to specify, say, that the judicial department had to cut down their expenses by $50,000, and enable the judicial department to work within that reduced appropriation.

HEEN: I second the motion to delete this section. It contains a lot of legislative material which should not be written into basic law.

CHAIRMAN: A motion has been made to delete Section 7.

TAVARES: A question was asked a few mintues ago by Delegate Heen and I simply rise to answer it. Section 1634 of our Revised Laws now gives very drastic powers to the governor. "No head of a department shall expend or be allowed to expend any sum for any purpose whatsoever not specifically authorized by the legislature, and where distribution or expenditures are made under lump sum appropriations the head of each department shall be governed in making such distribution or expenditures by any authority of the legislature, and in the absence of such legislative authority shall be governed by the authority and approval of the governor." Under that section it has been customary for the governor through the budget officer many, many times to refuse to expend the appropriations made by the legislature.

RICHARDS: I think there is one point that this Convention is overlooking in its discussion. We hear from a great many of the legislators regarding the difficulty they have had with an appointed governor. We are now talking about an elected governor and I think you will find that the elected governor will be a lot more in sympathy with the legislature than, necessarily, an appointed governor.

WOOLAWAY: I haven't spoken on this matter yet. I'd like to speak in the affirmative before we take a vote on it. Such a system has been in effect in Hawaii since 1925. It has been the means of carrying the territory through the periods of financial conditions. Dr. Harley Lutz of Princeton University cites some of the advantages of the allotment system. (1) It establishes the responsibility for efficient administrative operation of departments definitely on the governor and provides him with definite executive control over the performances of services and the expenditure of public funds. (2) It affords the means of maintaining budgetary balance. If revenues are declining, allotments can be correspondingly reduced to avert a deficit. (3) Through the allotment system, the executive may exert pressure to obtain increase in efficiency—which we certainly need—in the administration of government functions and services. The territory has used the allotment system for the control of expenditures for several years. The proposed provision neither adds to nor detracts from the authority now exercised by the governor. I would vote against deleting this provision.

ASHFORD: I call attention of the delegates to the fact that this section gives the governor power to act by allotment or otherwise.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is to delete Section 7. All those in favor of deleting Section 7 please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

That removes the motion for adoption, so we proceed to Section 8.

RICHARDS: I move for the tentative adoption of Section 8.

YAMAMOTO: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of adopting Section 8 in principle, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

LAI: I move for the adoption of Section 9 tentatively.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

WHITE: I 'd like to suggest an amendment that that be deleted since it's covered by one of the provisions in the section on ordinances, and I think it really belongs there rather than in this section.

CHAIRMAN: Do you move for that deletion?

WHITE: I move for its deletion.

SHIMAMURA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: A motion has now been made to delete Section 9 from Committee Proposal Number 10. Any discussion?

C. RICE: Is this in H.R. 49?

WHITE: Yes, it is in H.R. 49 and the Committee on Ordinances has drafted an ordinance to take care of it. I think it's better taken care of in that section.

CHAIRMAN: If there's no further discussion - -

ANTHONY: I'm not so sure. I'd like to ask the chairman of either the Finance Committee or the Ordinances, it is my understanding that an ordinance is of an ephemeral nature, and this provision that the Finance Committee has brought in is something permanent, not to disappear after the ordinance has run its course.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, do you care to answer that question?

SHIMAMURA: H.R. 49 provides for two types of ordinances, one that may be included in the Constitution and another type which may be separately submitted to the people. The type of ordinance we have provided for, pursuant to H.R. 49, is of the permanent nature.

ANTHONY: It is on a permanent basis?

SILVA: To be on the safe side, I see nothing wrong about leaving this section in. The Committee on Style can properly place it and I'd like to leave it in in the meantime, anyway, to take care of my friend, Francis Brown, in San Francisco.

HEEN: This article is one on taxation and I believe that this section properly belongs to this article. I would like to point out, in one place it speaks about "citizens" and another place about "residents." Is there any reason for using the two words there?

WHITE: Well, it's not our wording; the wording is taken from H.R. 49, so - -

HEEN: It would seem to me that that ought to read, "The lands"—instead of singular, it should be plural—"The lands and other property belonging to residents of the United States residing without this state shall never be taxed at a higher rate than the lands and other property belonging to the residents thereof."

WHITE: Well, all that we did is to take this out from H.R. 49.

HEEN: Well, that's not a safe thing to do all the time.

TAVARES: In that form, I think it would be unconstitutional. We have United States citizens residing in foreign countries. This is to protect non-resident United States citizens from discrimination against residents. We can't discriminate against residents in taxation inside the territory, so automatically the word "residents" includes both citizens and non-citizens in the territory.

NIELSEN: I want to differ with that because we do discriminate against citizens right here in the territory, and I think this is where possibly an amendment should be made, or adding on to it. At the present time, and I'm one of them.

My placement burnt down a year and half ago and I built a store and my living quarters is in the back of the store building. And I'm assessed full commercial value on the real estate, land and building, although I should have home exemption. But if you have a store and your living quarters are in back of it, why you get no home exemption, and that certainly isn't equal taxation.

So we do have that discrimination right here in the territory. It's contained in the Section 5149 which says, "A person living on premises, a portion of which is used for commercial purposes, shall not be entitled to an exemption with respect to such portion, but shall be entitled to an exemption with respect to the portion thereof used exclusively as a home; provided, however, that this exemption shall not apply to any building or structure, including the land thereunder, a portion of which is used for commercial purposes."

So anyone living in the back of their store is discriminated against in home exemption, and I'd like to see an amendment in this taxation structure that will take care of that so that the part that is used for a home, why I don't know why anyone that is willing to put up with living in back of a store they should really be entitled to an exemption more than a person who has a separate home.

TAVARES: I think that that question has been settled by this Convention in voting against any elimination of the home exemptions. All of these inequalities were pointed out at the time. They are not inequalities of the type that are unconstitutional, they are inequalities of classification. All residents in the same class as the delegate who has just spoken are treated the same way, and that is the kind of uniformity that the Constitution and H.R. 49, this provision requires. All people in the same class must be treated the same way.

WHITE: If somebody would like to move for reconsideration of that home exemption thing, we'd be glad to discuss it again.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the Committee of the Whole is for the deletion of Section 9 at the present time.

WHITE: In view of the feeling on the part of some of them that it probably belongs in here and that we can leave that to later determination by the Style Committee, I'll withdraw my motion to delete and then the motion to adopt will be the only motion before the house.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been withdrawn. The second withdraws too.

CROSSLEY: Inasmuch as there is no motion on this section before the house at the present time, the only motion was to delete - -

CHAIRMAN: No, there was a motion to adopt, then there was a motion to amend by deleting Section 9. The motion still stands to adopt Section 9. Any questions? If not, all those in favor of adopting Section 9 in principle please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

SAKAKIHARA: Was that as amended?

CHAIRMAN: There has been no amendment.

SAKAKIHARA: Oh yes. Delegate Heen amended by adding "s" to "land" in Section 9.

CHAIRMAN: He may have suggested it, but there was no motion, no second.

SAKAKIHARA: In view of the fact that I voted in the affirmative to adopt Section 9, I offer to add the word - -

CHAIRMAN: Isn't that a matter of style, anyway?

WOOLAWAY: When this body of learned individuals met at 1:30, it was the decision of the body by a majority vote that we rise at 3:30 and go into recess, so that we can convene again at 7 o'clock tonight which will allow the Committee on Legislative Powers to finish their work. It is now 25 after. I would move at this time that we defer Section 10 until 7 o'clock tonight and move on to Section 11. It's been a hot and lengthy matter to discuss.

ANTHONY: I would like to amend that motion to make it 7:30. That's a little early, 7:00.

WOOLAWAY: Is that an order, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Well, Delegate Woolaway, as I understand it your motion is to defer action on Section 10 and to consider action at this time on Section 11. Is that correct?

WOOLAWAY: Correct.

CHAIRMAN: Has that been seconded?

CROSSLEY: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to defer action on Section 10 at this time, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.
Section 11 is now before the committee.

WOOLAWAY: I now move that we tentatively approve Section 11.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

FUKUSHIMA: I move at this time that Section 11 be deleted.

HEEN: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion has been made to delete Section 11. Any discussion?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: If there's no discussion - -

FONG: May we ask for the reason for deletion of that section? Looks like a pretty good section.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe this is purely statutory and nothing else.

TAVARES: I think the delegation ought to know that in the past we have had counties that had centralized purchases and counties that didn't, or counties that put in centralized purchasing and then took it out again. And this is sort of a finger, at least, pointing the way to the legislature that they ought to make every county have centralized purchasing.
While I was in government service, the residents of one of the counties tried to get action in the courts to stop some of the abuses that were caused by lack of centralized purchasing. In one county, for instance, they were buying from certain people at much higher prices than they could get from somebody else, because they didn't have this centralized purchasing bureau.

SAKAKIHARA: Would you assure the Convention that the subject matter is now under the consideration of the holdover committee of the legislature? That is now being considered by the subcommittee on government efficiency, and it will recommend to the next session of the legislature for purchasing methods, centralized purchasing methods. Purely statutory matter.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion? If not, all those in favor of the motion to delete Section 11 from Proposal Number 10, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

WOOLAWAY: I now move that we rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CROSSLEY: I don't think that we have to go through that formality. I think if we can recess for five minutes, we can certainly recess for a couple of hours. Therefore, I move that we recess until 7 o'clock.

APOLIONA: Second the motion.

KING: I agree with Delegate Crossley as to that procedure, but there are some things on the desk that have to be taken up in the Convention, so I hoped we would follow the normal procedure.

CROSSLEY: I respectfully submit to the elder statesman.

APOLIONA: I now move that this committee rise and beg leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: You second the motion of Delegate Woolaway? All those in favor of the motion, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Evening Session

WOOLAWAY: At this time, I'd like to move that we pass tentatively Section 10.

DOI: Second the motion.

WHITE: I'd like to make a few comments on Section 10. First of all, I'd like to - - all of the delegates have been furnished with a new draft to Section 10, and I would like to offer that as an amendment to replace the draft that was attached to the committee proposal or that was incorporated in the committee proposal. Now the substance of this amendment - -

Section 10. Debt Limitations.
No bonds or other instruments of public indebtedness shall be issued except by or on the behalf of the State or a county. All such State bonds and other State instruments of indebtedness must be authorized by the legislature. All such county bonds and other county instruments of indebtedness must be authorized by the governing body of the county issuing same, and the legislature shall have no control over their authorization or issue; provided that no county bonds or other county instruments of indebtedness shall be deemed to be authorized until the issue thereof is approved by a majority of the registered voters whose votes are tallied on the subject at an election in the county concerned.

Fifty million dollars is hereby established as the limit of State debt at any one time. Bonds and other instruments of indebtedness in excess of this State debt limit may be issued, provided such excess debt of the State is authorized by a two-thirds vote of all the members of each house of the legislature, and such excess debt, at the time of authorization, would not cause the total of State indebtedness to exceed a sum equal to fifteen per cent of the total of assessed values of taxed real property in the State, as determined by the then last tax assessment rolls of the State, pursuant to law.

Bonds or other instruments of indebtedness to fund appropriations for any fiscal period in anticipation of the collection of revenues for such period or to meet casual deficits or failures of revenue, which debts shall be payable within a period of one year, and bonds or other instruments of indebtedness to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, to defend the State in war, or to meet emergencies caused by disaster or act of God, may be issued by the State under legislative authorization without regard to the limits on debt and excess debt hereinabove provided.

A sum equal to seven and one-half per cent of the total of the assessed values of taxed real property in the county, as determined by the then last tax assessment rolls of the State pursuant to law, is hereby established as the debt limit of such county at any one time.

All bonds or other instruments of indebtedness for a term exceeding one year shall be in serial form maturing in substantially equal annual installments, the first installment to mature not later than five years from the date of the issue of such series, and the last installment not later than thirty-five years from the date of such issue.

Interest and principal payments shall be a first charge on the general revenues of the state or county, as the case may be.

The provisions of this Section shall not be applicable to indebtedness incurred under revenue bond statutes by a public enterprise of the State, county or other political subdivision, or by a public corporation, when the only security for such indebtedness is the revenues of such enterprise or public corporation, or to indebtedness incurred under improvement district statutes when the only security for such indebtedness is the assessments upon properties benefited or improved.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the refunding of any indebtedness at any time.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, Mr. White.

NIELSEN: Mr. Chairman, so Mr. White can talk on the amendment, I'll second it.

WHITE: Thank you, Mr. Nielsen.

The substance to the amendment differs primarily from the original in eliminating any dollar limitation on county indebtedness, this being governed solely by the percentage of assessed value of taxed real property. The percentage is recommended, 15 per cent for the State and seven and one-half per cent for the counties compared with ten and five per cent prescribed in the Organic Act. These limits you will note cannot be exceeded except by the State in periods of emergency. All bonds issued under this provision must be in serial form with the requirement that the first installment shall not mature later than five years from the date of issue and the last not later than 35 years. Under this provision, the debt limit will not apply to bonds issued by a public enterprise or a public corporation where the only security is the revenues thereof, or to bonds issued under improvement district statutes when the only security for such indebtedness is the assessment upon benefited or improved property.

I have been in communication with the legal firm of Wood, King and Dawson who have represented the Territory and counties over a period of years and this proposal incorporates changes suggested by that firm. It has also been reviewed by the attorney general and has his approval as to form.

In order to assist the delegates in considering this important subject, the debt limits of the State and the counties, and the situation of each with respect to outstanding bonds as well as those authorized but unissued, is shown on this chart. [Facsimile of chart on following page.] All supporting data are set forth in exhibits attached to the committee report. If you'll look at the chart here, at the top set of figures are shown the assessed value of the Territory as a whole and then for each of the individual counties: 249 million for the City and County of Honolulu, 30 million for Maui, 34 million for Hawaii, and 18 million for Kauai. On the basis of this seven and one-half per cent for those counties, Honolulu would have a debt limit of 18,750,000; Maui 2,275,000; Hawaii 2,600,000; and Kauai 1,400,000.

To give you an idea of how each of the individual counties stand, in the case of the island of Oahu, City and County of Honolulu, their bond limit is now -- I mean their outstanding bonds now amount to $13,982,000. They have bonds that have been authorized but unissued of $6,200,000, so that the total outstanding and authorized but unissued would amount to 20,182,000, which would be in excess of their 18,750,000 bond limit.

In the case of the island of Maui, they had 652,000 outstanding, and they have authorized but unissued 1,150,000, making a total of 1,802,000 which would be well below the debt limit.

In the case of the island of Hawaii, 689,000 outstanding, 795,000 authorized but unissued, or a total of 1,485,000 against the bond limit of 2,600,000.

When we get to the island of Kauai, where we run into some difficulty because their bond limit would be one million four, they already have -- the 725,000 that are shown on the chart here have now been issued, so they would have 1,874,000 outstanding, which would be in excess of their bond limit. On the other hand, if an ordinance were adopted approving of the present borrowings, why the bonds of the County of Kauai would not be effected except that they would not be permitted to make further borrowings until they got down to the debt limit or unless the assessed value, in the case of the County of Kauai, would permit them to increase that figure of one million four.

Now, in the case of the Territory, the Territory at 15 per cent would work out 50,050,000, which is the present bond limit, the present limit on their bonds. In the case of the Territory, they have a 50 million debt limit now, but outstanding and authorized but unissued bonds amount to about 56 million. However there are a number of those issues that I understand that there is not much chance that they will be sold. That's all I have to offer. If there are some questions, why --

LOPER: May I ask the chairman of the committee a question? Is it your intention, Delegate White, to hold on to both the 50 million limit and the 15 per cent limit? Are they both to be written in?

WHITE: Well, in the case of the Territory, it was felt that it would be advisable to have a value limitation because under the provision the legislature by two-thirds vote can increase that up to a limit of 15 per cent. There's nothing so sacred about the 50 million dollars that the limit couldn't be carried solely to the 15 per cent except you would have a fluctuating figure all the time, and I don't think we will always be in a period where the assessed values are just going to continue to rise. So having a dollar debt limit may actually prove to be an advantage.

WIRTZ: I understand the chairman of the committee has stated that they corresponded with the firm of Wood, King and Dawson. I should like to know if this question was put up to them, and how do they feel?

WHITE: You mean on the question of the percentage?

WIRTZ: That's correct, and also the fixed figure. My experience as city and county attorney in the past has made these firms who underwrite bonds or issue bonds very wary of any problem of fixing out -- determining the debt limitations. And I wondered if this proposition as stated in your proposal had been submitted to this firm for their opinion.

WHITE: Yes, it has been, and while I haven't had any positive opinion from them that they would advise very strongly against a combined debt limit exceeding 22 1/2 per cent, I think their thinking is that way, that they should be. When you go above 20 per cent, why you're getting into a situation where you have to watch it because the people that buy the bonds are interested in the ratio of your debts to your assessed value because while all of the tax revenues of the State or the counties naturally are available for the payment of the debt, it's been customary for bondholders to look to the real property taxes as their real collateral.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Finance a question. If you tied the debt limit to dollars rather than to percentage in dollars, what would you do in inflationary times? How would you get beyond your 50 million dollar limit then?

WHITE: Well, in the case of the Territory, it's 50 million dollars. The Territory can raise that above 50 million dollars up to 15 per cent of the assessed value, so that the legislature can by two-thirds vote increase the debt limit so long as they don't exceed the 15 per cent. For the county, we've taken out -- if you read the new proposal, there's no dollar debt limit on the county. It's all seven and one-half per cent.

There is one thing that I think we must consider on this too, is that during the war values have increased substantially, and the tax assessments, the assessments on real property are still far below a reasonable value as compared with market values. There was a 20 per cent increase made this year, and I think there is a further increase contemplated for next year, which will tend to narrow the present margin.

NIELSEN: I would like to ask the chairman of the Taxation Committee a question. In the unissued No. 3 [referring to chart] there under Territory, 41 million dollars, isn't a considerable sum of that unissued amount authorized but just hasn't been issued? In the 41,076,220. All of it's been authorized, so that today on this basis we couldn't borrow anything. We couldn't anyway.

WHITE: We couldn't anyway because Congress has authorized an increase in the territorial debt limit to 50 thousand --

NIELSEN: 50 million.

WHITE: -- you've already authorized 56 million, if you issued all of those bonds. But there are lot of those bonds if you go back over--I've got the details here--there are some of the bonds that there is little possibility that they'll be issued, so I think it's safe to say that they will stay within that limit. It's my understanding that since this time five million of that 41 million in the last few days have been sold so that this has gone up to 19 million and this down to 36 million.

NIELSEN: I can't recall the figures because I wasn't on the Finance Committee of the last session, but it seemed to me that we raised or got Congress to raise the authorization to 50 million, but we had already authorized the sale of that many million dollars worth of bonds, so on this basis we couldn't issue any more or authorize the issue of any more bonds. We would be locked at 50 million which we have already authorized.

MIZUHA: I believe there was a significant section written into the education article some time ago, in the past few days, which would transfer to the future State of Hawaii the obligation for the building of our schools. Now in the past, the bulk of the bonds that were issued by the various counties were for building of public schools. If the future State of Hawaii is to assume the obligation for the building of our public schools, then it seems to me there must be some revision in the percentages as far as county obligations are concerned, and perhaps lowering the percentages allowed to the various counties and increasing the percentage for the future State of Hawaii.

WHITE: May I answer that? If you look at the exhibits that are attached to your reports, you will find that the school bonds are territorial bonds. It's true that the interest is charged to the county, but they are territorial bonds and are included in this figure that we have for the Territory. They're not county bonds.

AKAU: In the new Section 10 which has just been submitted this evening, I'm wondering if I understand this correctly. According to the first paragraph, we don't limit but then we go on into the second paragraph which starts "Fifty million," and it seems to me that we establish a limit. Am I correct, to the chairman or Mr. Tavares over there, am I correct in my interpretation or is that -- clarify this statement. I don't know.

WHITE: Well, the first part of the paragraph has nothing to do with the limit. It only has to do with the method of issuance. It says, "No bonds or other instruments of public indebtedness shall be issued except by or on behalf of the State or a county. All such State bonds and other State instruments of indebtedness must be authorized by the legislature. All such county bonds and other county instruments of indebtedness must be authorized by the governing body of the county issuing same, and the legislature shall have no control over their authorization or issue; provided that no county bonds or other county instruments of indebtedness shall be deemed to be authorized until the issue thereof is approved by a majority of the registered voters whose votes are tallied on the subject at an election in the county concerned." That has to do with the method of issuing.

AKAU: Well, where it says, "The legislature," in the first paragraph, "shall have no control over their authorization or issue," that is about issue. Now in the second paragraph, "Fifty million dollars is hereby established as a limit of the state debt." That doesn't have to do with the same thing?

WHITE: The legislature will have nothing to do with the issuance of bonds by the county.

WIRTZ: I noticed from the committee report that you were in communication with Wood, King and Dawson, which is a firm that has for many years financed most of the territorial bonds and most of the municipal bonds, and I'm just wondering whether this proposition of debt limitation was submitted to them, because I do know in the past that they have raised many, many questions on this very question of debt limitation.

WHITE: This provision has -- this last provision was sent back to them again on Thursday or Friday, but this provision incorporates all of the ideas and suggestions that have been submitted by Wood, King and Dawson, with one possible exception, and that had to do with the payment, where we provide that the serial bonds shall be paid in approximately equal installments. They made some suggestion that the installment in any year would not be more than 50 per cent of the preceding year, but to me it would be a very cumbersome provision and would add nothing to it. But that is only a detail that they don't place too much weight on in any event, but the provisions of this section incorporate all of the suggestions and ideas of Wood, King and Dawson.

WIRTZ: Do I understand that it's the amendment that's now before the house, or the original section?

WHITE: No, the amendment that's now before the house, Number 10.

Well, I don't know whether it might be helpful if we would take this Section 10—there's a lot in it—and take it paragraph by paragraph and act on each paragraph. I think we might get further.

PORTEUS: I think there is some confusion in the minds of some of the delegates on this subject which is very complicated, that of bonded indebtedness. When the committee talks about the number in dollar signs of bonds authorized, the committee does not include what is known usually as revenue bonds. In other words, the Board of Harbor Commissioners might in a proposition issue bonds for certain public improvement of a nature that brings in revenues and from those revenues the interest and the principal would be paid off. I think there is a distinction to be made there and if the delegates will give their minds to that for the moment, that thought, they will find that the 50 million dollar limitation is not the limitation of the total bonded indebtedness of the Territory. It will not include, I believe, improvement district bonds unless the improvement district bonds are an obligation on the general revenues. If they are only out of specified revenues, and being revenue bonds, they won't be in the total of the 50 million.

Now, as I understand the committee, too, the 50 million isn't the top total. The 50 million is the total to which the legislature cannot exceed as far as the State itself is concerned, not counting the counties, until you can get a two-thirds vote in each house. That's to enable something less than a majority of the members of each house to agree that in the future, for instance, that we will need to spend money for school buildings, and that we shouldn't spend all the money we can borrow now and that we ought to wait awhile and keep a little cushion. Now, the fifteen per cent, as I understand it, is to give the cushion between the 50 million dollars and that higher figure, so that if you run into depression days or if you want to schedule out that you write bonds for a program for the school department, for instance, you could schedule out that you were going to support a program that would involve say ten million dollars in bonds for school building spread over a number of years.

There would be the tendency on the part of some legislators to try to spend all the money the session they were in, and let the future take care of itself. But I think the scheme of the committee is sound because it lets less than a majority say to the others, "You can't go beyond this first limit because there may be more needy times ahead of us. There may be other programs we need to support."

Now, there also seems to be some question on the fifteen per cent. I'd like to point out that the fifteen per cent is not the true limitation insofar as these islands are concerned. The fifteen per cent is a limitation on the State. The county has a limitation of seven and a half per cent, so that the real total here could well be, if the counties go up to their seven and a half and the Territory to its fifteen, really twenty-two and a half per cent.

So that you have a number of steps in this proposition. One, this excludes revenue bonds; two, the 50 million dollars is the first limitation of the State; and it does not include county bonds. There is a question about that with the 15 per cent so far as State bonds are concerned. Then the county operates independently on a seven and a half per cent limitation.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Porteus, the Chair would like to ask a question on a point of clarification on your statement there. You picked out a figure of twenty-two and a half per cent whereby the legislature by two-thirds vote could - -

AKAU: Mr. Chairman, please use the mike. We can't hear your question. I'm sorry.

CHAIRMAN: Is it your meaning that the legislature could raise the assessed values of the real property or merely to say how much shall be derived from the assessments of real property, in that way get around the - - over the 50 million?

PORTEUS: No, what I was pointing out was that this has first a 50 million limitation. You have the 15 per cent of assessed value. It may be very considerably in excess of that. It may go up to 70 million. Now that 20 million cushion, you might call it, if that's the right figure - -

CHAIRMAN: But under that 15 per cent there, you only reach 50 million.

PORTEUS: Well, if the values keep going up—and we know that the Tax Office has put up values this last year and they intend to increase their assessments the following year—if in the next few years we get more money, in order to get into that additional point beyond 50 million, it takes a two-thirds vote. Now my twenty-two and a half per cent that I referred to is a limitation on indebtedness throughout these islands, not on a State basis. Fifteen per cent is your top maximum limit from the point of view of the State operating as a legislature of the State and borrowing in the name of the State.

The counties have a right, if the voters of the particular counties approve, to borrow up to seven and a half per cent. So if every county borrowed its maximum and if the State borrowed its maximum, I'm pointing out that you would have a total maximum of twenty-two and a half per cent. So that those that were saying, "Well, is 15 right, perhaps 20 per cent wouldn't do any harm," that as this has been written by the committee, you have a prospective limit of twenty-two and a half per cent.

WIRTZ: There is one thing that I think that we ought to consider very, very gravely at this point and that is the words "assessed value." We have the same language appearing in the Organic Act, Section 55, where the total indebtedness for the Territory is ten per cent of the assessed value and five per cent for subdivisions. Now, although we use the artificial—and I say artificial because I mean it, it is artificial—50 million dollars or 25 million dollars, and then we provide for the other formula of 15 per cent, we still tie it up to the assessed value. But we've had trouble in the past and we'll have trouble in the future unless we clarify that term as to what is meant by the "assessed value."

TAVARES: I think - - Shall I answer that question?

WIRTZ: I haven't finished yet, I don't know. Do we mean by that term "assessed value," the net assessed value without home exemptions, without other exemptions, or do we mean the total assessed value?

WHITE: Have you got the new Section 10?

WIRTZ: I believe I have.

WHITE: The new Section 10 reads, "The total of assessed values of taxed real property," which would make it the net assessed values.

WIRTZ: Well, that's still not clear in my mind. I think if it's not clarified here, it ought to be clarified in the report. Are we talking about the net or are we talking about the total assessed values?

WHITE: We are talking about net assessed values, which is the taxed value, "the assessed value of taxed real property." If it isn't taxed, why then it wouldn't be included, so that any exemptions under home exemption or for other purposes would not be included.

WIRTZ: I see.

NIELSEN: I'd still like to have an answer to the fact, and I'll change the putting of it, isn't it true right now that under this setup where we specify that the State maximum limits shall be 50 million dollars, that for any future borrowings, we have to get a two-thirds vote of both houses because we are authorized over the 50 million now? So for any further increase we have to get a two-thirds vote of both houses.

WHITE: That's right, because your fifteen per cent would only bring you 50,050,000, so the fifteen per cent just happens to hit the 50 million right on the nose. That was one of the reasons why I was so -- that was one of the reasons I was working on the elimination of the home exemption because that meant a great deal of difference in the borrowing capacity on the basis of these percentages.

NIELSEN: Well, on that basis then we are not to -- our hands are tied by the legislature to two-thirds vote of each house before we can borrow any more money.

WHITE: That's correct.

NIELSEN: I think that is rather a high limitation to place on this. I'd like to hear from some of the others on that.

ASHFORD: I would like to ask the chairman of the committee a question that carries on Delegate Wirtz' question. The language used is the "total of assessed values of taxed real property in the State." Now, suppose there is a $5,000 home which has an exemption but it is still taxed because it runs over the exemption, and that is assessed taxed real property, is it not? And is not the assessment the $5,000?

WHITE: No, I'd say that the taxed value would be the five thousand less whatever the exemption was. In other words, the net value as shown on the tax -- it says as shown on "the assessment rolls of the State, pursuant to law."

BRYAN: I'd like to ask Delegate White if he'd consider changing the wording so that it would read "taxed value instead of "assessed value of taxed property."

WHITE: Well, there's no pride of authorship as far as the words are concerned. This section has been reviewed by the Attorney General's Office, who have to advise the tax people, and this is the language that they suggested as being the clearest language that they could think up to take care of this unless you wanted to write a statute on it to explain what items weren't included in it.

I understand the difficulty there. I'd like to ask Mr. Tavares if he thinks the committee report along with this would be sufficient.

TAVARES: Yes. I think that can and should be clarified by the committee report. It isn't even as simple as it has been said so far. At the beginning of an assessment year, you have two values, the value assessed by the government, and in tax appeal cases the value claimed by the taxpayer. The law now provides that for purposes of fixing the rate we take half the difference and add it. In other words, we take half way between the tax value claimed by the government and the tax value claimed by the taxpayer. In my opinion this means that you will take, as of the date you determine the limit, whatever rule the statute lays down for fixing the tax rate. In other words it is a net assessed value, after deducting exemptions and including the adjustments made under our laws to take care of tax appeals which are pending and not yet determined, and I think our report should so state. That is the way, as I understand it, it is done now and I think we should follow that interpretation.

AKAU: The delegate from the fourth district and Mr. Nielsen from Hawaii mentioned the necessity of both houses passing it by a two-thirds vote. Now, then, I raise the question, is it within the power of the governor to veto such vote after it's been passed by two-thirds of both houses, and if it is within the power, maybe Mr. Porteus could answer, what happens then?

PORTEUS: I would take it that the usual legislative procedure would have to be followed. If you provide that it is necessary to have a two-thirds vote in the first instance, you would have to accumulate that vote in order to get the measure through from a constitutional point of view. It would have to run the gauntlet of regular legislation and go to the governor. If the governor should choose to veto it, if it were in a pocket veto period after the legislature could no longer get at it, it would be dead. If, however, the governor had to act on it within the time, he would have to write a veto message and it well might be that while two-thirds ordinarily would be the vote to override a governor's veto, if his message was well taken, there might be a number of those of the two-thirds that would pay attention to that message and decide that perhaps their earlier opinion had not been correct and refrain from overriding his veto. So that the two-thirds vote in the first instance still doesn't assure -- tell the governor that no matter what he does it will be useless.

WIRTZ: I noticed at the end of the first paragraph of the redraft, "provided that no county bonds or other county instruments of indebtedness shall be deemed to be authorized until the issue thereof is approved by a majority of the registered voters whose votes are tallied on the subject at an election in the county concerned." Now, is that not a—I'm addressing my question now to the chairman of the committee or any member thereof who wishes to answer—is that not a new idea as far as the Territory of Hawaii is concerned? And secondly, is that not placing the referendum on financial matters in the hands of the people?

WHITE: Well, I'd say it is, it's new. In both instances, the answer is yes. This is recommended very strongly by Wood, King and Dawson, and while I don't see a great deal of strength to it, they say it has a lot of psychological value in dealing with the sale of bonds. In other words, people are more inclined to buy bonds where the requirement is that the voters have to vote on the bond issues.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask a question of the chairman of the Finance Committee, please? Doesn't the present statute provide for election of people of the county for issuance of county bonds, requiring a 65 per cent majority?

CHAIRMAN: Say that again.

SHIMAMURA: Under the present Revised Laws, isn't an election required and an approval of 65 per cent of the voters for issuance of county bonds, except where the legislature shall provide otherwise?

WHITE: Let me get that. We'll have to check that. I didn't know there was -- SHIMAMURA: I so understand it. And may I ask another question? Why is it that the authority of the legislature was entirely omitted in the case of the issuance of county bonds, whereas in the present Revised Laws, the legislature is given certain powers concerning issuance of county bonds by counties?

WHITE: Well, under this program, all of your school bonds would be taken care of; that is, the bonds for school buildings would be taken care of as Territorial obligations, and it was felt that it was advisable to leave to the discretion of the people of the respective counties whether or not they wanted to issue additional bonds.

SHIMAMURA: In other words, you have given the counties, the various counties entire autonomy as far as the issuance of county bonds go. There is no control from the legislature. Isn't that right? Was that your purpose?

WHITE: As far as the issuance of the bond, yes, with the approval by the voters.

SHIMAMURA: Whereas, under the present Revised Laws the legislature had certain discretionary powers.

WHITE: To mandate.

TAVARES: Since that is a technical question, I think perhaps I could try to answer it. It is true that under Chapter 117 of our Revised Laws today, the subject of issuance of county bonds is covered by statute, and there are two ways. One is under legislative authorization and the other permitted by the statute is at an election at which 65 per cent of the registered voters of the county vote affirmatively. To my knowledge, as far as I know, that's never been used. I think it's almost a dead letter in use.

I might say that this last amendment, I don't believe came in time for the committee to discuss it fully. Is that correct, Mr. Chairman? And so I may be a little weak on that myself, the last amendment of Section 10. But it is true that we must bear in mind that if this provision is approved, we are departing from the present method of authorizing county bonds because we have at the present time required that the legislature first authorize the county to issue bonds by statute. This allows a county, in spite of the legislature, without any legislation, to issue bonds but only after an election. I think that should be borne in mind so that the delegates understand what the effect will be on county bond issues. In other words, it takes away the power of the legislature to authorize county bonds. They are authorized directly under the Constitution by this proposed article.

SHIMAMURA: There is a point I wish to raise. In the past there was no election necessary for the issuance of county bonds because in most cases the legislature provided otherwise. But the legislature had discretionary power so to provide under our Revised Laws. But under this proposed amendment - - rather proposed constitutional provision, there is no such authority vested in the legislature, and the county boards are entirely autonomous. Furthermore, not only that, the county boards themselves don't have the full authority, but they must rely upon the electorate, and each time you issue a county bond, you must have an election.

WHITE: I think it might be well to hear from Mr. Charles Rice and Mr. Harold Rice. They were very much interested in that particular part of it.

H. RICE: Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates. It seems to me we've come a long way under the Organic Act the way it is in the Territory. I feel that I'd like to see us on a pay-as-you-go basis but I don't see how it's possible for probably many years under the conditions as they are. There is no question in my mind that they have inflation in the East, and I believe that we ought to follow the Organic Act and make it a percentage basis on the real property, and I'll offer that amendment as it is I've prepared on that but I didn't think that this was the time for me to introduce it. I thought that they were working on this other amendment, but if you'd like to see this amendment, I'll offer it. Where's the messenger?

WHITE: Delegate Rice, what I wanted you to talk on was this question of having the voters of the county approve the bond issue.

H. RICE: Well, personally I feel that we should limit the borrowing of each county for a certain period, but I could see that when we become the State of Hawaii, if you have to go through that procedure the minute we become a State, it will take almost two years before you can float a bond issue. So I think in a way the simpler this is the better. I know that it's going to be a lot harder if you are going to submit these bond improvements to the electorate each time, but say we become a State, the first election - - you will have to wait until the second election before you can approve those bonds, even if the legislature authorizes them. So I don't claim that my amendment would do away with it, but it will do away with the fact that you set up - - I allowed: "Twenty per cent of the total assessed value of real property in the State as determined by the tax assessment rolls of the State is hereby established as a debt limit of the State," and 15 per cent for the counties, and go right along and the provision down there, the large chapter at the bottom allows for the revenue bonds and improvement bonds. This section seems to have worked all right in the Organic Act. As I say, I don't think I'm in order in making this amendment now. It's just getting it before the delegates. But, I was called on to talk.

ASHFORD: I'd like to say that this suggested amendment that is coming afterwards appeals to me more than the first amendment that was passed around. I can just see what would happen to the islands of Molokai and Lanai if the electorate had to pass on bond issues. There would be about $400,000 available on Maui and it would all be spent on Maui, and if anything was for Molokai, it wouldn't be passed.

ROBERTS: I'd like to raise a few questions on the problem that is before us which removes us a little bit from the present consideration of assessed valuations as a basis for the credit of the State. It seems to me that the delegates ought to consider seriously some of the basic problems involved in this question. We are taking bodily a section from the Organic Act which has used assessed valuations and has provided a limitation, a debt limitation.. When we are wards of the Federal government, there is perfectly ample reason why someone should control the child. When we needed something, as we have in the past two sessions, we have gone to Congress and asked Congress to raise our debt limits and the Congress has so done. It seems to me that when we are a State, we've got to stand on our own feet, and in doing so we ought to see to it that our credit is sound, that our finance is adequate, but that credit and that finance is based on the operation of the Territory and its economy.

When we are considering, as we are now, putting a debt limit on the State ourselves and that debt limit, in terms of a fixed amount, is close to being identical or perhaps a little bit smaller than the actual total indebtedness, we are making no provision whatsoever for the possibility of additional increases and issuance of bonds. The proposal suggests that we have some flexibility by providing a base of 15 per cent, or the suggestion perhaps for raising it, which would provide an opportunity for us to meet conditions as they arise. That 15 per cent on the basis of existing evaluation, taxable evaluation or net base, gives us identically the figure that we have as a debt limit, 50 million dollars, so that you have no possibility even within the 15 per cent of providing for any opportunity for expansion along that line.

I'd like to raise questions, too, as to whether or not assessed valuation is a proper base for basing our credit. Now, when we issue bonds we say in fact to the people who buy them that we are going to pay you a rate of interest over a period of years, and at the maturity of that bond, we are going to give you the actual money that you put in. Now, how do we know whether we are going to pay that or not? In other words, on what grounds do we issue it? What credit do we have? It seems to me that the credit that we have is the income, the earning capacity of the territory, the tax capacity of the territory. What we are planning to do with an assessed valuation, it seems to me, limits the basis of our payments to only a very small portion of the total revenue of the State. If you take a look at the total revenue published last year you'll find in actuality that the total income from property is approximately 13 per cent of the total revenue. That is a relatively small part. As we grant additonal exemptions, of whatever kind, that base becomes constantly narrower, so that actually what you are doing is placing a proposal for the credit of the Territory on an extremely small base. What you pay is in terms of what you have, and what you have is in terms of income from the things that you produce. It seems to me that you ought to provide, if you provide a base limitation, something that goes basically to the revenue of the Territory which covers all of the islands.

Let me give you an illustration as to what I have in mind. If you take a look at the assessed valuation figures from 1930 to 1949, you'll find that in two years, in the year 1932 and in the year 1949—I think the same thing would show for 1950—your assessed valuation has changed by some 16 per cent, in 1950 I understand close to 20 per cent. Now, how do you base your credit on a fluctuation of that type? It doesn't seem to me that sound finances of the Territory can properly be based on a fluctuation as wide as 16 or 20 per cent in one year, and you are basing your bonded indebtedness on that ground. That to me is an awfully slim ground. It seems to me also that if you are going to tie the hands of the future State and if you get individuals who are not terribly concerned about how they are tied, assessed valuations can be changed, and they have been changed very drastically, so if you want to avoid your constitutional limitations, then you get around it by providing a change in the assessment.

It seems to me that that is not basically sound, that if we are going to provide a debt limitation, it should be on actual revenue, actual income that the Territory has year by year. Now I say perhaps one year would not constitute a proper base. I think it ought to be averaged over a period of years, and that base then becomes a proper area in which we can issue bonds and which will give the prospective buyer an idea as to what we can pay. Now I grant that lands look good. That is the basis upon which bonds have been issued in the past, but the lands become a smaller and smaller base in terms of actual income, and I would suggest to the delegates that we give a little additional thought to looking for some other base than assessed valuations.

I recognize, and I don't know in detail, that some correspondence has gone on with regard to that, and that does not apparently satisfy some areas where we may look to get assistance in the issuance of future bonds. The way this section is drafted there are no future bonds unless your assessed valuations increase substantially within the next few years. Even though our present valuations alone—I understand they were 30 per cent a few years ago and perhaps close to 50 per cent now; perhaps they may get up finally to close to what the market value of the properties are—but assessed valuation, I still suggest to the delegates, is not a sound base for future financing of the Territory. And I would suggest that we give a little additional thought to revenue, actual income for a period of time, to more properly base the finances of the Territory and the future State of Hawaii.

HOLROYDE: The delegate from the fourth district suggests revenue as a basis for getting a base or debt limit. I can't think of anything that fluctuates more than revenue to the Territory. It can be upset by so many things that I don't think it is a very sound approach.

Another consideration that we have is the sale of the bonds which we are going to put on the market. At the present time a good part of our bond issues are supported because they are authorized by the Federal government and therefore are tax exempt bonds. For that reason they receive a ready market in many quarters of the United States. I feel, therefore, that as we become a State we may not be afforded that same privilege. I feel, therefore, that we should proceed cautiously and be sure that whatever foundation that we pick as a base for our debt limit should be done soundly and with as much security as we possibly can, if we're going to continue to have a market for these bonds.

MAU: I was just going to -- wanted to ask the delegate from the fourth district if he would include in his base for the debt limit the real property together with revenues over a period of years.

CHAIRMAN: That question was addressed to Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: The total revenue obviously has to include revenue which comes from taxes on real property, so that you have as a base for financing the property plus other revenues. Now, the question was suggested previously that this is a fluctuating base. Of course, income is fluctuating, but I suggest that we use a base which is sufficiently broad, a ten year period, a ten year average, which will provide a situation that you do have a more level opportunity to indicate what the total possibilities of financing are of the State. I indicated in my previous statement that a 16 per cent fluctuation in one year certainly doesn't provide a proper base for issuing bonds, and the fluctuations run from one to 16 to 20 per cent. I'm sure that if you take your total revenue over a ten year period, including your property taxes, that you won't find that much variation.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Mau?

MAU: Yes, I have another question. May I ask the other question?

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

MAU: I wonder if the delegate from the fourth district has any figures as to revenues of the Territory, even a rough estimate. I'd like to compare the amount of revenue he speaks of. I imagine he limits that to revenue of the State. It doesn't include revenues of other kinds, the assets of the community, revenues in private industry for instance. I don't believe he includes that. I want to compare the amount of revenues of the State to the value of the -- rather the assessed value of real property.

CHAIRMAN: I believe a question has been addressed to Delegate Roberts. If it has, he can answer it.

ROBERTS: I don't have the total revenue figures. I had them this afternoon.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate White, can you answer that.

WHITE: I don't have the figures handy. I'd like to --

ROBERTS: I could give you some overall, total overall figures. Well, of course, this is revenue, tax revenue that comes in to the State.

CHAIRMAN: Well, will the speaker address his remarks to the chair? Delegate Roberts, are you through?

ROBERTS: I'm not through. I haven't answered --

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Smith has been seeking recognition.

SMITH: Just to give the clerks a little rest, I move for a five minute recess.

CHAIRMAN: Moved for a five minute recess. Any objections? If not, recess is ordered.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The meeting please come to order.

WHITE: I'd like to move that we defer action on this section.

CASTRO: I second the motion to defer action on Section 10 to a later date.

WHITE: In order to assist us in giving further consideration to this particular section, in my opinion it would be very helpful if we could get the answer to three questions by the delegates here. Number one, is it their wish that the authority for the issuance of county bonds be retained by the legislature?

BRYAN: I move that it be the consensus of this body for the purpose of committee study that the authority for issuance of county bonds be left with the counties.

CASTRO: I second the motion of Mr. Bryan.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

TAVARES: Just one matter I'd like to call to your attention before the vote and that is that we must bear in mind that this provision limits the issuance of bonds, the general obligation bonds, only to a county or the State. In other words, we are not authorizing any other type of political subdivision to issue bonds. There is one other matter and that is, if you are going to leave it that way, it just occurred to me, maybe it is an oversight, we have the County of Kalawao, which is not a true county. We had better be careful in our explanation or somewhere to make sure that we are not giving them the power to issue bonds.

HEEN: Would it not be better to use the term "political subdivision" instead of county?

WHITE: Well, that was what was intended, whatever is shown on this chart here. Honolulu, Maui, Hawaii and Kauai.

HEEN: I don't quite get the idea of deferring action on this section. If we deferred -- Of course the duty of this Committee of the Whole is to finally determine what should be done in this connection. If it's to be referred to the Committee on Taxation and Finance, then the whole bill will have to be returned to it. That bill now is before this Convention, and in order for that committee, that particular committee to further consider the matter, the whole bill will have to be -- rather the whole proposal will have to be referred back to that committee.

CROSSLEY: It was my understanding in the motion to defer, to defer to the end of the calendar of the Committee of the Whole sitting on this. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: That is my understanding.

CROSSLEY: Now, the second question I have, if the movant of the last motion would tell me, that when he moved that the consensus of this group be that the power to issue county bonds be invested in the county, did he mean as proposed by the Committee on Taxation and Finance, that is, with confirmation by the electorate?

H. RICE: I think you ought to defer the whole matter, and if it would expedite matters, I think the whole of Section 10 could be referred to the Taxation Committee.

HEEN: That cannot be done without referring back the whole proposal.

RICHARDS: My understanding of this particular proposal was that the matter of Section 10 be deferred so that the Finance Committee would be able to submit a proper amendment; but meantime, in order to give the Finance Committee and the chairman guidance, that there were certain questions which the Finance Committee would appreciate getting the ideas of this Convention on. Is that not correct?

WHITE: That's right.

RICHARDS: It's similar to the same proposition that the Finance Committee came forward with to ask the ideas of the Convention regarding home exemptions. This is what the Finance Committee is asking. We would like some indication from this Convention as to how they feel on certain specific matters, and then the Finance Committee can draft a proper amendment after having received the guidance of the Convention.

ARASHIRO: In reference to that questioning, did you recognize that motion that was made by the delegate from the fifth district and seconded by the delegate from the fourth district --

CHAIRMAN: As I understand it, Delegate Arashiro --

ARASHIRO: -- in reference to the authorization of issuing bonds that would be approved by the county board of supervisors?

CHAIRMAN: I did recognize the maker of the motion, yes.

ARASHIRO: In reference to that may I ask a question, then. What happens then? There are some times that the Territory may be able to match federal funds but the counties do not have that authority. Now what happens if we should adopt that motion?

CASTRO: Point of order. The motion before the house is to defer Section 10.

CHAIRMAN: I understand that that is the motion. However, on a point of information, there was requested by the chairman of the Taxation and Finance Committee, they wanted an expression from this committee as to their particular questions, before the motion to defer was put.

TAVARES: I think on second thought we ought to just defer this, period, and let the committee work up some alternative proposals. I think we'll save time.

KING: Technically, Delegate Heen is right that the whole proposal is before the Convention and if we defer Section 10, anybody can bring in a proposed amendment that would be acceptable, except for the fact that meanwhile we go on with the rest of the bill. However, the chairman of the Committee on Taxation and Finance did want an expression from the delegates as to their feeling on three matters, and he might propound these questions and then get the answers on them individually or any other way he can. It's a little hard to have a vote on a request for information without going through the parliamentary procedure of referring it back to committee with instructions. So I'd like to move the previous question on the motion to defer action on --

DELEGATE: Before you put that could I --

WOOLAWAY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment. Delegate King, are you through?

KING: I did not make the motion for the previous question

WOOLAWAY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

WOOLAWAY: Wouldn't it be proper, after getting expressions of this assembly, to recommit Proposal No. 10 back to committee instead of deferring it?

CHAIRMAN: That isn't the motion.

KING: I hope no one makes a motion to recommit the whole proposal because then the rules of our procedure would delay consideration of this for quite a long time. We can defer action on Section 10, go on to the next section, and bring it up in a Committee of the Whole meeting tomorrow perhaps.

MAU: If I understood President King correctly, after the motion to defer is passed, anyone could bring in an amendment thereafter, even this evening.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

MAU: There is no time limit on this deferment. If that is so, I'm wondering whether or not the two possible proposed proposals, one by Delegate Rice and the other by Delegate Roberts, couldn't be taken up at this stage rather than deferment because we've called a special meeting this evening. We ought to meet until 11, 11:30 or 12 o'clock, if necessary, to get through with this proposal.

SILVA: I think the question of counties issuing bonds could be easily settled here. I think the board of supervisors would prefer in any county to have the legislature earmark bonds for certain projects, so that situations like the one pointed out by Miss Ashford could well be taken care of, so that small communities could receive the benefits of bond issues by having them earmarked; but through the legislature for the board of supervisors, rather than have an election every time there's a little school building to be built that an election will be put out for the amoint of bonds to be issued by that county. There is no question in my mind that as far as issuance of bonds for the county, it should be a legislative matter rather than the county.

ARASHIRO: Is the motion for deferment in order now?

CHAIRMAN: The motion for deferment has been made and seconded.

ARASHIRO: I now, therefore, move the previous question.

CROSSLEY: Second the motion.

BRYAN: Point of order. I made a motion which I had not withdrawn. Upon instruction from the chairman of the committee, if he wishes, I will withdraw that motion.

WHITE: I was about to ask him to withdraw the motion and let's defer it, and I want to ask for the expressions on those three points and we'll have an amendment drawn up.

BRYAN: I withdraw.

CHAIRMAN: There's a motion for the previous question. All those in favor of the previous question please say "aye." Opposed.

Now let's put the motion. The motion is to defer action on Section 10. All those in favor of deferring action on Section 10, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Then we may proceed to Section 12.

RICHARDS: I move that we tentatively approve Section 12.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

WHITE: In support of that motion, I'd like to say that the auditor is one of the most important positions in the field of financial management and government. The combination of a competent state auditor and commissioner of finance can go a long way toward eliminating waste and inefficiency in government operation. It is proposed that the auditor be appointed by the legislature, not because we believe the electorate incompetent but because we believe that they are not afforded the means of investigating the qualifications of an individual who might run for office if it were an elected position.

Furthermore, we are recommending an eight year term because, as in the case of judges, long tenure will attract more competent individuals. Secondly, the government would profit from long tenure since background and experience are indispensable; and, thirdly, it would serve to remove the auditor from undue pressure of any one legislature.

The requirement that he be a certified public accountant is consistent with those governing the eligibility of the attorney general and judges. It is possible that there are others not holding certificates of certified public accountants who might be capable of filling the job, but to eliminate this requirement would increase the hazard of having an incompetent individual appointed. You may be interested to know that at the present time there are approximately 56 known certified public accountants in the territory, so that the ratio on the certified public accountant would be 1 to 56 as compared to 1 to 20 for the judges. Furthermore, there is no reason why a person should not become a certified public accountant for the requirements are not too demanding. If anybody is interested in the requirements of the C. P. A., I could read them to you, but all that it requires is a high school education.

FUKUSHIMA: I have an amendment to offer. The amendment reads as follows: "The auditor shall be elected by the electorate of the State and shall hold office for a term of four years. No person shall be eligible to such office who shall not hold a certificate as a certified public accountant." Following that, the language is the same as Section 12, Committee Proposal No. 10. I'm making this amendment because I feel, as does the chairman of the Committee on Taxation and Finance, that the auditor's position, the auditor's office, is a most important one. Before proceeding, I'd like to move for the adoption of my amendment.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe the auditor should be removed not only from the executive whose book the auditor checks. This Section 12, the auditor is not a pre-auditor. It's a post-auditor, and as such, there can be no question that his position should not be one that is appointed by the governor. This proposal here makes his office appointed by the legislature. This same auditor, the post-auditor that we are speaking of, checks the account of the legislature—I believe that is a correct statement—and if he is to check the accounts of the legislature, that officer should not be appointed by the legislature. He should be removed from the executive and from the legislature, and I believe with the safeguard that he be a certified public accountant, that under the elective system you will find you will get an auditor who will be free and independent both of the legislative department and the executive department.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion.

ANTHONY: I'm opposed to this amendment. I assume it was seconded. Was it, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: It was seconded.

ANTHONY: The purpose of having an auditor for a long term is to follow in line with the federal practice. There, as you know, we have a comptroller who is answerable only to the will of Congress, not to the executive. He holds office for a period of fifteen years, I believe, and he is not subject to reappointment. Now, if we were going to have an elective auditor, you would do just exactly what the purpose of the committee is set out to defeat and avoid. You would have an auditor who would be periodically engaged in political campaigns. We don't want any politically campaigning auditor. We want an auditor who is going to audit and keep the fiscal affairs of this State of Hawaii in good shape. We want him to possess qualifications of the office, and the way to do that is not to subject him to partisan political campaigns. Give him a long tenure, give him security in office, and make him independent of the executive once he is appointed. Therefore, I would vote against this proposed amendment.

AKAU: I will vote for this amendment - - for this motion, yes, the amendment, but I would like to amend further because I feel that after the word in the fourth line, "accountant," that following until the next to the last line is statutory. It's spelling it out quite a bit. I would move to amend, therefore, by striking out from, beginning with "It shall be the duty," as far down as "at such time or times as shall be prescribed by law," because in the last sentence we are saying that, as directed by the legislature, and the middle of that part is all spelled out, which I think is unnecessary. I, therefore, move that we amend it that way by striking out those lines that I've just mentioned, stated, to read as follows: "The auditor shall be elected by the electorate of the State and shall hold office for a term of four years. No person shall be eligible for such office who shall not hold a certificate as a certified public accountant." Then down below. "He shall also make such additional reports and conduct such other investigations of the State or its political subdivisions as may be directed by the legislature."

HOLROYDE: I'd like to ask one of the members of the committee if it's not true that the fundamental job of this post-auditor is to see that the legislation, specifically monies that have been appropriated for a specific item are carried out. In other words, he is the agent of the legislature when they're not in session to see that their appropriations are carried out the way they intended them to be. If that is correct, he should I feel, then, be appointed by the legislature.

TAVARES: I agree with that theory. That's the committee's theory that primarily the legislature makes the laws and therefore the legislature is primarily the one to which the auditor should report to see that the laws had been carried out.

I'd like to say one more thing about this elective proposal. I think that if you have the auditor elected, he will be using this or tempted to use it as a stepping stone to the governorship. You have today a number of jurisdictions where the attorney general is elected. He will run and he will do everything he can, not necessarily to just follow along the lines of duty, but pick everything he can to find fault with, perhaps, the governor, if he wants to run against the governor the next time. Instead of having unification, you are going to have disunity. Whereas if you have him responsible to at least one of the great branches of the government, the legislature, I don't think you will have that disunity. He will at least be kept to his job. I don't think he will be tempted to play politics the way he will when he is independent of everybody and out to make a name for himself.

KING: Point of information. There was no second to the proposed amendment to the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

KING: And there is no amendment to the pending amendment then?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

KING: I'd like to speak in opposition to the pending amendment. The whole purpose of it is to get an officer who will be the servant of the legislature. He should carry out the obligations and responsibilities that the legislature laid on him to see that the money they appropriated is properly spent. Now, the Federal Government for many years had no such offices and they finally created the Office of the Comptroller-General. As Delegate Anthony has just told you, he is appointed for 15 years. It is true he is appointed by the President of the United States and confirmed by the Senate of the United States, but once in office, he is independent of the executive, answerable only to the Congress, not eligible for reappointment, and only can be removed for cause. So Congress has made every effort to set him independent above politics and above every other influence except as their representatives to see monies are properly spent. Now, if we elected an auditor, he would be independent of the legislature that he is supposed to serve to a certain extent. He may find opinions and pass on expenditures without any reference to the will of the legislature whom he is supposed to represent in the matter of public expenditures. So I'm opposed to the amendment.

HEEN: I'm opposed to this amendment, also, but there is one feature I like about it, and that is if this auditor is elected, he can check the appropriations made for the expenses of the legislature to see whether or not those appropriations have been properly expended. That's a feature I like about it.

RICHARDS: I can agree with the delegate from the fourth district regarding the appropriations of the legislature, but when one looks over the amount of money appropriated and spent by the legislature for its own use in connection with the amount of money that the legislature appropriates for the balance of the operation of the State, it is comparatively small. The legislature and the members of the legislature so far in the discussion of this particular proposal have been very jealous of the position of the legislature, feeling that certain proposals - - certain sections in this proposal delegate to the governor too much power, and I can agree with certain of those feelings if there were not a proper check. Now, this auditor that is appointed by the legislature will be the proper check to make sure that the governor does not usurp his powers.

NIELSEN: I don't see why every time anything comes up here where the people might elect someone, there's always the same opposition to it, every time. Now, if we would just look over there in Ohio which has been put out as a splendid example. This fall, Auditor Ferguson is going to give Robert Taft a good licking, I think, and I think that maybe it's a good idea to get a good auditor in there, elect him, and then let him run against the governor or run against our senators, and we'll have some real material. But this fellow Ferguson is really red-hot and he's going to go to town against Bob Taft of Ohio. So I think we should start electing some of our people and taking our government to the people where it belongs.

MAU: It seems very, very odd to me that every time an officer of the State is proposed, they fear that the people would contaminate him. They want to remove him far above the poor common mass. I'm wondering whether they really believe in representative government. They argued very, very strenuously on the judiciary. The judiciary is so sanctimonious, you can't touch it with a twenty-foot pole. Then you come to an auditor. He is so sacred you can't give the people the right to choose him. If that is so, we'd better change some of our county government auditors. They should be above suspicion. You should have the mayor appoint him rather than have the people elect him.

I'm wondering whether or not these delegates who have said that the members of the Board of Education should be appointed, the attorney general and all the other officers who are to be appointed, whether they, too, stand in such sacred ground that the people should have nothing to do with their selection. I think that if you are going to have the government belong to the people, the people ought to have some say as to who shall govern them, and if they believe that this auditor should be elected for long tenure, let's have him elected for eight years. If they are afraid that he may be part of a political machine and play politics, so they say, I understand that politics is the science of government. I heard Senator Anderson from New Mexico make the statement in the statehood hearing. He said, "I'm glad to be a politician. I'm glad to be in politics. Every citizen in the United States should be interested in politics." Why are you afraid of the people? Why are you afraid to allow the auditor to be elected by the people of the State of Hawaii?

MIZUHA: I would like to speak in support of the delegate's amendment, delegate from the fifth district. Every state in the Union from Alabama on down the line of the 48 states in the Union, elects the state auditor. Now, there must be something to it, bringing representative government back to the people, and some of our administrative officers in the future State of Hawaii shouldn't be afraid of going to the people to campaign, not only on this island but on the other islands of the group to tell them what kind of a man they are. If we have a good auditor, surely he will be elected to public office and give the people of Hawaii the kind of protection they need in expenditures of their money.

CASTRO: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

CASTRO: I'd like to know where the delegate from Kauai gets his information.

MIZUHA: It's in the Legislative Reference Manual beginning from 162.

CASTRO: Page 162. Thank you.

CROSSLEY: I would like to speak in opposition to the amendment, and also I would like to answer the delegate from the fifth district who just delivered the fine political address, by saying that if the auditor is selected by the legislature, he then is being selected by the representative choosings of the people. In the new State as now proposed in the legislative section, there are 51 members in the House of Representatives, 25 members of the Senate, a total of 76 people who have gone before the electors, the electorate of the State of Hawaii, and they have said, "One of our jobs, one of the things that we are going to do, is appoint an auditor, a man who will come back and say that the job that we did for the people was properly done; the monies we appropriated were properly spent. The State has carried out the functions, the duties, the mandates that you imposed upon them. All of those things have been done. I am responsible to see that they were carried out. You are responsible to the people; the legislators are responsible to the people. I am simply certifying that the things that you have promised the people would be done are being done properly. My responsibility is simply that of an auditor, a very simple function by a specialized man. All I have to do is, not report to the people as to whether your laws are good or not, [but] all I have to do is to say, were they correctly carried out and do the books balance."

A. TRASK: I'd like to offer an amendment to the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima, the end of the second line, "for a term of four," to insert therefor, "eight years."

FUKUSHIMA: I second the amendment. I accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: You agree to the amendment.

A. TRASK: If you please, speaking briefly for the amendment of Delegate Fukushima, I want to say that I am a member of the committee of Delegate White, but I reserved my right to object to this particular section. I'm in favor of an elected auditor because I feel he should be free. He is a minor officer in the three divisions of government. He is set apart from them all with the right to look after the people's money. I think in line with that, the observation by Delegate Heen that he would like the idea of the audit of the legislative processes, and he probably had reference to the hold-over committee, I think it would be a very good idea that the auditor, particularly with that very, very shrewd observation smilingly made by the able Delegate Heen, that I think we should give more than ordinary heed to his observation, and really if the auditor is going to be subjected to the will of the legislature which has the power of appointment, I say that let's indeed make him an elected officer, elected by all the people and if he should -- and his campaigning will be extensive and probably cost much, it would seem to me that he should have a minimum of eight years and I'm for the amendment.

FONG: May I ask the chairman of the committee a question. Is the Comptroller of the United States a certified public accountant?

WHITE: I don't -- I couldn't answer that question, Mr. Fong.

ANTHONY: No, he's a lawyer.

FONG: Could you answer this question? Did you take into consideration the budget director? Did you put the qualifications of a certified public accountant to that office?

WHITE: No, I didn't.

FONG: Why didn't you?

WHITE: Well, I think that the job is quite different than -- the budget director or the commissioner of finance is an entirely different type of individual than an auditor. There are certain technical requirements, there is certain technical education that you have to have when you are an auditor that you might not have to have when you are a commissioner of finance.

FONG: You feel that the budget director is a man who should have less qualifications than the auditor?

WHITE: No, but I think --

FONG: And he sets up your budget of say, 100 million dollars a biennium.

WHITE: I think that his responsibilities might be even greater, but that doesn't necessarily mean that he would have to be a certified public accountant because his work wouldn't be in that field.

FONG: Now I want to ask the question of Delegate Mizuha as to all the auditors who are elected by the other 48 states. Are they all public accountants?

MIZUHA: I believe there is no qualification listed with reference to being a certified public accountant in each of those states, as far as I can recollect.

FONG: Thank you, Mr. Mizuha. I'd like to say that in the City and County we have a comptroller, and we got a pretty good comptroller in the person of Mr. Keppeler. Mr. Keppeler is sitting in the back here. I understand that he is not a certified public accountant. Is that right? That's correct. And the auditor of City and County is not a certified public accountant and I think that you people will all say that he has been a pretty good auditor.

DELEGATE: What's his name?

FONG: The treasurer of the City and County has to do a lot with finances. He is not a certified public accountant. The auditor of the County of Kauai, the County of Maui, and the County of Hawaii are not certified public accountants, and as I understand, the treasurers of the various counties are not certified public accountants. The budget director of the Territory of Hawaii at the present time, Mr. Thurston, whom we all have a lot of confidence and faith in, is not a public accountant.

Now, if this committee is going to impose a qualification of certified public accountant license to this auditor, I think we should place that definition, that restriction on the budget director because the budget director has a position which I believe is far more serious and more difficult and one that is more important than the auditor of the Territory of Hawaii.

In speaking for the amendment as proposed by Delegate Fukushima that the auditor should be elected, I have in mind that there are many times that the auditor of the Territory of Hawaii will have to go contrary to the legislature of the Territory. The legislature may at times overstep its bounds in the appropriation of money, and it is the job of the auditor to stop the appropriation if he feels that it is illegal. I know of several instances in which the treasurer and the auditor of the Territory of Hawaii, that is, Auditor Treadway has exercised that power of stopping the legislature in its appropriation of money. The legislature has on many occasion appropriated money for various specific things and treasurer and Auditor Treadway in his position as auditor of the Territory of Hawaii has stopped the appropriations and has held that the law was illegal to the extent that he could not certify to the sufficiency of the bill and the bills at the end. The suit was taken to the Supreme Court and Auditor Treadway was upheld in many instances.

I feel that the auditor of the Territory of Hawaii should be an elected official. He should be entirely divorced from the governor, and he should be entirely divorced from the legislative branch of government. In listening to the debates on this floor, I'm beginning to feel a little bad about the governor. I'm beginning to hate the governor a little because every time we try to do anything, we impose and give more power to the governor. Now, it seems to me we are building a superman in this territory here in the man in the position of the governor. We are giving to him a lot of powers and we are taking it away from the people.

A friend of mine in this territory the other day, high in the office of the government told me, "Hiram" he says, "your Convention is anti-people. Every time there is a chance to vote against the people, your Convention has voted against the people."

Now, this is one time where I feel that we should let the people speak up, the people who will have -- in whom the power rests inherently with, and I feel that the people should have a voice in whom the auditor should be, and I would like to make an amendment to this proposed amendment that the words, "No person shall be eligible to such office who shall not hold a certificate as a certified public accountant" be stricken out. I so move.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

WOOLAWAY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: A second has been recognized.

WOOLAWAY: I'm speaking against that amendment.

NIELSEN: Point of order. That's two amendments on an amendment. I don't think we can go that far.

CHAIRMAN: The first amendment was agreed to, so actually there was only one amendment that Delegate Fong has sought to amend.

NIELSEN: Don't we have the eight years as an amendment?

CHAIRMAN: That was agreed to by the maker of the motion.

WOOLAWAY: May I be recognized now? First of all, an argument used by Mr. Fong, Delegate Fong, about the wonderful qualifications of Mr. Keppeler, which I don't doubt he has. Everybody realizes that. That's no criterion why anybody else would be of the same quality.

I'd like to state one of the most important positions in the field of financial management is held by the auditor, both in the commercial field and in government. Auditing has been defined as "a systemic examination of the books and records of a business or other organization in order to ascertain or verify and to report upon the facts regarding its financial operations and the results thereof."

Governmental auditing entails duties beyond mere verification of records and subsequent recording of facts connected therewith. It should review all steps which have been taken from the initial preparation of estimates as set forth in the budget to the payment of expenditures, to determine whether they have been legally and regularly followed. In addition, it should be able to provide recommendation as to means and methods for improving financial management. The duties of the governmental officer can never be completely divorced from either budget making, expenditure control, or financial planning. His report must provide the public as well as the legislative body with the assurance that all public funds have been properly accounted for.

The arguments in favor of requiring the state auditor to be a certified public accountant are as follows, gentlemen, I have ten of them. One: a provision in the Constitution requiring that the position of state auditor be filled by a certified public accountant would greatly reduce the opportunity for the appointment of a less qualified individual. The legislative body could be highly political and in consequence the position of auditor might be given to a person politically strong but possessing few or no qualifications for this important post.

Two: restricting appointment to a certified public accountant would materially assist in attaining a fully qualified person. A person who has successfully passed an examination for certified public accountancy would normally be better qualified than a person unable to pass an examination. While there is never a guarantee that a well qualified man will be selected, the chances are that by fixing qualifications some mistakes will be eliminated.

Three: at present there are a number of auditors employed in the public service. Very few are public accountants. An individual other than the certified public accountant may meet the requirements of these positions. Those with an adequate background of experience and training in auditing would be able to take the examination for certified public accountant, and if passed, would be eligible for appointment.

Four: most large businesses employ certified public accountants for final verification of their records and reporting on facts regarding financial operation.

CHAIRMAN: I'd like to remind the speaker that you have two and a half minutes more.

WOOLAWAY: Fine. It is only reasonable therefore that a governmental unit with a volume of business much larger than a majority of commercial firms should also require an individual of the highest caliber of background and training to occupy the position as auditor.

Five: Section 707 of the Model State Constitution states that the auditor should be a certified public accountant.

Six: it may be argued that fixing the qualifications for the auditor infringes upon the power of the legislature. While in a certain sense it may be true, it must be remembered that the legislature is vested with the responsibility of determining state policies as well as what monies are to be spent. Consequently it must be able to rely on the reports and findings of the auditor. The legislature as well as the public must be provided with the true financial picture at all times, and it is believed that a certified public accountant would provide an additional safeguard in the public interest. An audit made by a person not fully qualified may prove to be worse than no audit at all.

If it's all right, I'll continue. Mr. Chairman, can I have more time?

CHAIRMAN: Proceed. You have one minute more.

WOOLAWAY: The present auditor of the Territory is a certified public accountant. It is believed that there is in the territory an adequate number of certified public accountants interested in this position so that a good auditor could be elected. At present there are approximately 55 certified public accountants licensed in the territory.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for some decorum here, if you don't mind.

CHAIRMAN: Your point is well taken, Delegate Woolaway. Proceed.

WOOLAWAY: If I don't have any more time, I hope that sunk in. Thank you very much.

CROSSLEY: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Point of information has been asked by a delegate. Delegate Crossley.

CROSSLEY: The point of information is simply this. I would like to ask the speaker from the fifth district two questions. One is, is it his—I'm asking Delegate Fong—is it his understanding, in hating the governor so, that this was an appointive office of the governor? Because if it is, he's reading a different bill than I have, as mine reads that it is an appointive office of the legislature.

FONG: No, I'm making a point that we are trying to appoint everybody. I understand that this will be appointed by the legislature, the first time that the House of Representatives will have some say in it.

CROSSLEY: I understand. The second question is, he inferred that all of our public officials who deal with finance are not certified public accountants and that is not true in the case of the territorial auditor, as I understand it. Is that correct?

FONG: That I do not know.

CROSSLEY: Well, then, let me inform the Speaker of the House, the delegate from the fifth district, that the auditor of the Territory of Hawaii is a C. P. A.

FONG: Can you swear to that?

WOOLAWAY: Point of personal privilege.

CHAIRMAN: Point of personal privilege has been asked. Delegate Woolaway.

WOOLAWAY: I would like to state that if my colleague from the sixth district was listening, I made that point here. It didn't have to be made again.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state that he can't see anything about personal privilege in the matter.

A. TRASK: I have another amendment to offer which I understand the movant for this amendment will accept, under this elected amendment provision for the auditor. If you will please direct your attention to the committee's Section 12.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Trask, I believe in order that we may proceed properly there has been an amendment made to the proposed amendment. I think we should dispense with that before any other amendment be made to the amendment, if you please.

A. TRASK: Pardon me.

WHITE: Just in order to dispell the delegates' fear that this requirement of a C. P. A. is placing an unreasonable requirement and cutting down the selection of people, would you mind if I read the qualifications of a C. P. A. ? It's only four or five paragraphs, short paragraphs.

CHAIRMAN: Well, if the committee desires to hear it, although I believe we all know that the C. P. A. 's qualifications.

RICHARDS: Personally, I do not know and I would appreciate that information.

CHAIRMAN: Very well, Delegate White, will you please state the qualifications of a C. P. A.

WHITE: Well, these are the qualifications and there are six of them.

> Any citizen of the United States or anyone who in good faith has declared his intention to become a citizen, in which case he must become a citizen within two years after time allowed by law or the certificate shall be revoked by the board; (2) Over the age of 21 years; (3) Of good moral character; (4) A graduate of a high school of recognized standing with a four years' course or presenting an education fully equivalent thereto; (5) Who has had at least five years' accounting experience, three of which shall have been in public practice on his own account, or in the office of a public accountant in active practice or its equivalent; (6) And has passed the satisfactory examination; shall receive a certificate of his qualifications to practice as a professional accountant. No other persons and no corporations shall assume or use the title or the abbreviation of C. P. A. or any other words, letters, or figures to indicate that the person is a certified public accountant.

So that you can see the requirements are not very great at all.

CASTRO: I believe that under all of the debate of the last ten minutes is the fundamental point that we are - -

KING: Point of order. If too many of us do that blowing into the mike, which I believe the speaker started a moment ago, we won't have any loudspeaker left.

CHAIRMAN: Yes. Proceed, Delegate Castro, with that reminder.

CASTRO: Your point is well taken, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I'm glad you recognize that.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman, I don't think it's - -

CASTRO: Mr. Chairman, I believe I have the floor.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

CASTRO: I believe the underlying question is the amendment as proposed by Delegate Fukushima as opposed to the committee proposal, in which I find that the question of the certified public accountant is agreed to in both. So I would like to suggest that for the purposes of expediting this argument, we call for the previous question on the last amendment to the proposed amendment having to do with whether or not we want a certified public accountant. As I understand it, the amendment was that we delete the words in the committee proposal in the second line.

CHAIRMAN: In the amendment to the committee proposal?

CASTRO: In the amendment to the committee proposal, " - - who shall not hold a certificate as a certified public accountant." I call for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question - -

TAVARES: To correct one point of misinformation. We have been told here on good authority apparently that no state in the union fails to elect its auditor. I want to correct that statement. I've just taken the trouble to go over this book and the States of Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Virginia don't elect their auditors. I want the members of this Convention to know that that statement is not correct.

KING: Point of order. I'd like to raise a point of order that the statement by Delegate Castro is in error. The amendment offered by Delegate Fong is to the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair stated that.

KING: So that if we voted on that amendment, we're not deleting it from the original committee proposal but only from Delegate Fukushima's amendment. I wish to speak in favor of the amendment to the amendment. If we are going to elect the auditor, then I believe he should not be a certified public accountant. I'm not even too sure that he ought to be a certified public accountant if he were appointed. I'd like to make three small points.

Delegate Tavares has just called our attention to the fact that Delegate Mizuha was in error when he said that all the auditors were elected. He talked about a different kind of an auditor. The auditor we are talking about it is the man who makes post-audits primarily as the agent of the legislature. His nearest parallel in public life is the Comptroller General of the United States, the man who outlaws illegal expenditures after they have been made, and surcharges the department and the officers who made those expenditures.

Now, two of the gentlemen whom Delegate Fong has praised, and rightly so, are both appointive officers. Mr. Keppeler was an appointive officer or is an appointive officer and so is Mr. Thurston, so that question about election or appointment doesn't seem to affect their excellency and their efficiency.

The business of electing an auditor for the Territory to make post-audits as an agent of the legislature puts the legislature in a difficult position with the man who gets his mandate right from the people and not from the legislature itself. If we want to elect an auditor of the Territory as a member of the executive staff of the government, and not have the governor appoint him, why then we are talking about another officer entirely. So I feel that the amendment to the amendment should carry, but certainly I do not believe the amendment itself should carry.

SILVA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva.

BRYAN: I have a point of order.

SILVA: Mr. Chairman.

BRYAN: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order. State your point.

BRYAN: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I believe there's some confusion here about what the - -

SILVA: Mr. Chairman, I would like to know if the point of order should be directed at me. I have the floor, so if I'm out of order I request that Mr. Bryan address his remarks to me. Am I out of order?

CHAIRMAN: Will you state your point of order?

BRYAN: My point of order is that the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima - -

SILVA: I have the floor. It's not in effect with me. I still have the floor. I got the floor before you stated your point.

CHAIRMAN: Will the Delegate Silva please let the delegate finish his point before making any further remarks? Delegate Bryan, will you please state your point of order?

BRYAN: The amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima actually only consists of a very small part of the circulated amendment. Actually, the bulk of his amendment is identical to the original proposal. I think that his amendment constitutes only the matter of election and the matter of the term.

SILVA: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

BRYAN: And therefore, I think that the second amendment made is amendment to both proposals and not amendment to this amendment alone.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to rule that your point is not well taken.

BRYAN: I appeal.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment before the Committee of the Whole is the amendment offered by Delegate Fong to the amendment proposed by Delegate Fukushima, and if the motion carries, it need not carry if the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima fails to carry. It would still have to be acted on in the original proposal. Delegate Silva.

SILVA: Thank you, very much. It's the second time I've been recognized without saying anything.

I would like to speak in favor of the auditor being appointe After all, the main purpose of this position is the auditor shall be a servant of the legislature. That is the primary purpose of this auditor. There is a difference between an elective auditor for the entire State - -

NIELSEN: Point of order. Is he speaking on the amendment or something else?

SILVA: I'm speaking against the amendment. I'm trying to speak against the amendment.

NIELSEN: Point. Are you - -

HEEN: I rise to a point of disorder.

NIELSEN: Is he speaking on the amendment to the amendment or the original amendment? It sounds like he's speaking on the original amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That is the understanding of the Chair, and I think, Delegate Silva, you should address your remarks to the amendment proposed by Delegate Fong. That is the only thing before the Committee of the Whole at the present time. You may speak on the amendment in toto after the question is put concerning the certified public accountant.

SILVA: In whom did you say?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has ruled.

APOLIONA: I second the motion for the previous question

CHAIRMAN: The previous question has been asked. All those in favor of the previous question, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Now the question to be put before the committee is the deletion of the phrase, "No person shall be eligible to such office who shall not hold a certificate as a certified public accountant" from the amendment proposed by Delegate Fukushima. All those in favor of the amendment, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt. I ask a standing vote, if that's agreeable. All those in favor of the amendment, please signify by standing. Thirty-one. All those opposed. Twenty-seven. The motion carries. The phrase is deleted.

Now, Mr., Delegate Silva, if you desire to speak to the amendment, you may be recognized.

SILVA: Thank you, thank you very much, sir. The purpose that I pointed out a moment ago, and may I keep my remarks to that point, that this auditor, as I get it, is to be a servant of the legislature so that the legislature can check on the administrative branch of our government. That is the main purpose of having this auditor. Surely if he is to become elected, then half of the legislature, that is the Senate, will lose jurisdiction over this appointee because the Senate will be controlled by the so-called outside islands and the House of Representatives will be controlled by Oahu. If he is elected, then in all probability in 90 per cent of the cases he'll be elected from the electorate of the City and County of Honolulu, having that population. That would not be the purpose of having the position as a check between the Senate and the House and the administrative branch of our government. And I say that if he is appointed, then all the outside islands will have half to say of this auditor and Oahu will have the other half to say. That was my main purpose that I'm very much for the appointive rather than the elective.

A. TRASK: I'd like to move for an amendment to the amendment of Delegate Fukushima. I'd like to have inserted the second sentence of the original Section 12 which reads as follows, quote, "The legislature by two-thirds majority vote of the members in joint session may remove the auditor from office at any time for cause."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Trask, you are speaking on the proposal of the committee? That's the one you're referring to?

A. TRASK: Yes, the proposal of the committee, second sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Well, at the present time we are discussing the proposal offered by Delegate Fukushima.

A. TRASK: Well, I haven't concluded, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Excuse me.

A. TRASK: I'm referring to the insertion of the second sentence in the committee's Section 12 proposal to be inserted after the first sentence of Mr. Fukushima's -- Delegate Fukushima's amendment. In other words, after the first sentence which ends "eight years" you would have this sentence, which is the second sentence of Section 12 of the original committee's proposal, "The legislature by two-thirds majority vote of the members in joint session may remove the auditor from office at any time for cause."

FUKUSHIMA: I will agree to the amendment.

A. TRASK: Speaking briefly on that, there is no provision in the proposals from any of the committees, and I've conferred with the chairman, Judge Shimamura, who says there is no provision in ordinances and continuity of law which would have -- some general provision which would take care of the rejection for cause of the auditor. So I think it becomes a necessary provision to insert an amendment [which I] offer at this time.

CHAIRMAN: That amendment has been agreed to by the maker of the motion.

RICHARDS: May I ask the movant and the delegate who made the original motion, assuming that the legislature did remove such an elected auditor, would the State be without an auditor until the next general election, or what is their proposal regarding that?

A. TRASK: Well, I think there would be some general law with reference under suffrage and election to cover such a vacancy. Would there be, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: No, I don't think there is any article now that provides for any such contingency.

TAVARES: There is a general territorial statute that now provides for appointment of acting heads of departments. I don't know whether that covers the exact situation, but I know it has been held under the federal system that the legislature can provide for acting officers where there is a vacancy, even though the Constitution is silent. So I think our legislature would have power to make a special provision for that by statute.

HEEN: Right.

A. TRASK: There seems to be some question here with reference to my amendment that the impeachment provision under the Legislative Committee may be offered whereby this matter may be taken care of, and in view of that provision -- contingency, I would not withdraw my -- or a special election. In view of that consideration, I withdraw my offered amendment.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. In the proposed amendment, the second sentence provides, "It shall be the duty of the auditor to conduct post-audits of all transactions and of all accounts kept by or for all departments." Would that word "departments" include the legislature?

FUKUSHIMA: That wording was taken directly from the committee proposal and I believe the chairman of the Committee on Taxation can well explain that sentence.

HEEN: As I read it in the original Section 10, or rather Section 12, that was, of course, designed to take care of all departments other than the legislature itself. That was my understanding of it.

WHITE: No, the intent was that he would audit the legislature as well.

CASTRO: It seems to me as an unskilled parliamentarian that the underlying question here is not this last amendment nor the amendment that has gone before, but the question of whether the auditor shall be appointed, as brought out by the committee proposal, or elected, as brought out by the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima. I would like to ask the aid of the Chair to expedite this matter. Mr. Chairman, as a matter of information, would it be correct to ask for a consensus of the committee as to whether or not the committee prefers the idea of an election or the idea of an appointment by the legislature. Question of the information from the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: Well, since the Chair's been asked, I'd like to state to the delegate that the Chair would do anything to expedite matters but that the proposal you made could be easily answered by putting the question --

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: -- of the amendment, the adoption of the amendment which calls for the election.

CASTRO: I, therefore, call for the previous question.

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question has been asked.

FONG: Of all the states that have appointive auditors, how many states have appointive auditors?

CASTRO: A point of order. Previous question was called for.

FONG: Just a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order has been called for. I believe the delegate has a right to ask for a point of information if the information is available.

FONG: How many states?

TAVARES: I think it's eight. I thought it was nine. I counted again leaving out some questions where they call a person a comptroller. I don't know whether that's the auditor or not, but those states that I am certain from the Manual that apparently don't elect their auditor are Maine, page 169; New Hampshire, page 173; New Jersey, page 173; New York, page 174; Oregon, page 177; Rhode Island, page 178; Tennessee, page 179; Virginia, page 180.

MIZUHA: I stand corrected.

FONG: There's only 40, out of 48 states.

DELEGATE: Point of order.

HEEN: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment. Your point of information has been answered, Delegate Fong.

HEEN: Point of information. These auditors that we've been talking about, those who are elected, those who are appointed, are they post-auditors?

TAVARES: It's not clear from this very brief account in the Manual as to what they are. They call some of them comptrollers.

HEEN: Well, is the comptroller a post-comptroller?

CHAIRMAN: Now, are we ready to put the previous question? All those in favor of the previous question, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.
Now the question before the committee is this: Shall the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima to Section 12 as proposed by the committee be adopted? All those in - -

FUKUSHIMA: May I request a roll call.

CHAIRMAN: Roll call has been demanded. All those in favor of the roll call, please raise your right hand. Sufficient number. Roll Call.

DELEGATE: How about repeating that motion?

CHAIRMAN: For the point of information of the committee, the motion is this: Shall the amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima be adopted - -

CROSSLEY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: - - as amended.

CROSSLEY: I do not recall that there has been any motion to adopt this amendment as amended.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

CROSSLEY: We voted on an amendment and since that time there has been no motion to adopt the section as amended. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

FUKUSHIMA: In order to bring this up to date, I move at this time that the amendment which I proposed be adopted as amended.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

NIELSEN: I move for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: It's been passed, it's agreed, and a roll call has been demanded. Madam Clerk, please call the roll.

RICHARDS: I rise to a point of information.. Exactly what is the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair state the amendment as follows: "The auditor shall be elected by the electorate of the State and shall hold office for a term of eight years. It shall be the duty of the auditors to conduct post-audits of all transactions," etc. down to the end of the page. Madam Clerk, please call the roll.

Ayes, 27. Noes, 33 (Anthony, Ashford, Bryan, Castro, Cockett, Corbett, Crossley, Dowson, Hayes, Heen, Holroyde, Kage, Kanemaru, Kellerman, Larsen, Loper, Lyman, Ohrt, Porteus, C. Rice, H. Rice, Richards, Roberts, Sakai, Shimamura, Silva, Smith, Tavares, White, Wirtz, Wist, Woolaway, King). Absent, 3 (Gilliland, Phillips, St. Sure).

CHAIRMAN: Motion failed.

DOI: I would like to move to amend the Section 12, the first line, by deleting the words at the end of the first line, "all the," and also deleting the word "members" in the beginning of the second line, inserting in lieu thereof two words, "each house." The first clause there would read, after amended, "The legislature shall by a majority vote of each house in joint session."

SERIZAWA: I second that motion.

SAKAKIHARA: I would like to make further amendment to that section, so that it would read, including the amendment just made by Delegate Doi, "The legislature shall by a majority vote of each house in joint session appoint an auditor," and then delete the following, "who shall hold a certificate as a certified public accountant and."

DOI: It is acceptable to the movant of the first motion to amend.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, your proposed amendment would read as follows, "The legislature shall by a majority vote of each house in joint session appoint an auditor who shall serve for a period of eight years and thereafter until a successor shall have been appointed." Is that correct?

SAKAKIHARA: Correct.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

TAVARES: I move an amendment to the amendment. After the words "appoint an auditor" insert, "who shall have passed a civil service examination for said office."

RICHARDS: We seem to be getting into a little bit of difficulty here. We are bringing in two different subjects into an amendment. Let's take one subject up at a time. We first bring up the point of whether it shall be a majority vote of all the members in joint session and the second point involved is to whether or not the auditor shall hold a certificate of a certified public accountant. Let's vote on one point at a time.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to move at this time, inasmuch as a number of us have been toppling over here from exhaustion that we rise, report progress and beg leave to sit again tomorrow.

NIELSEN: Second the motion.

DELEGATES: No.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The noes have it.

ARASHIRO: Do I understand that now as the motion stands that in joint session that both houses need the majority in order to appoint a - - elect a post-auditor?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment states that "by a majority vote of each house in joint session."

ARASHIRO: That means that they must be separately decided?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct, but sitting in joint session, as the amendment reads.

KING: Following the suggestion made by Delegate Richards, may I suggest the Chair ask those who have made amendments to the amendment to withdraw theirs and let us vote on the amendment offered by Delegate Doi, get that out of the way, and then consider the next one.

CHAIRMAN: That is the suggestion made by Delegate King, However, the Chair has only one motion to put. Unless the person who made the subsequent amendment, which was agreed to by the maker of the first motion, the motion still stands, unless Delegate Sakakihara decides to do that.

KING: May I suggest to Delegate Sakakihara that some who might want to vote for or against him could be involved in this other question. As Delegate Richards pointed out, there are two points there involved, a little bit conflicting.

DOI: I agree with Delegate Richards and President King. Therefore, I would like to refuse to consent.

SAKAKIHARA: I withdraw my amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you, thank you. That clears the air, so the only amendment at this time before the committee is,

"shall by a majority vote of each house in joint session." All those in favor of the amendment, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

SAKAKIHARA: May I offer the amendment by deleting after the word "auditor," "who shall hold a certificate as a public accountant and."

CHAIRMAN: "As a certified public accountant and."

SILVA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: I believe we had enough discussion on it to vote. All those in favor of the amendment, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The ayes seem to have it. Roll call has been demanded. All those in favor of -- How about a show of hands. All those in favor of show of hands. Okay. All those in favor of the amendment proposed by Sakakihara please signify by raising your right hand. Please raise your right hand, those who are in favor. That is the one that is proposed by Sakakihara. Thirty-two in favor. Those opposed. Twenty-four. The amendment carried.

Now we are on Section 12.

FUKUSHIMA: I move the adoption of Section 12 as amended.

FONG: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made to adopt Section 12 as amended.

HEEN: I move that the whole section be deleted as amended, the section as amended be deleted altogether.

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

DELEGATE: Can't take a beating.

ROBERTS: I think the section now, the auditor has a very useful purpose, I think we ought to retain it. I don't think that because it has been amended, that is adequate reason for deleting it entirely unless it serves no function; and if it doesn't, I'd like to hear from the chairman of the committee.

HEEN: I withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: The only thing before the committee is the adoption of Section 12 as amended. Any discussion? If not, all those in favor please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

ARASHIRO: I now move that the chairman report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: You've heard the motion. All those in favor please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

JUNE 22, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the meeting please come to order. I believe we were discussing Section 10 of Proposal No. 10 regarding debt limitation.

WHITE: That's right. All delegates have been provided with a copy of the new provision which is headed "Final draft." Now the changes that are incorporated in this new draft are that it leaves off the requirements for approval by the voters of the various counties; it increases the debt limit of the state to $60,000,000 with a proviso that it can be increased above that amount provided the increase does not have the effect of increasing the debt limit above 15 per cent of the assessed value used for tax-rate purposes. Now we have used this "tax-rate purposes" because that is the term that is used in the statement that is prepared by the Tax Office to show what the value is, and it doesn't leave the question open then as to what you are talking about when you refer to net assessed value or just plain assessed value. Now in the case of the counties, the debt limit has been increased to 10 per cent and there has been an added proviso that "the aggregate of the debts contracted by or on behalf of any political subdivision during any fiscal year shall not exceed two per cent of the total of such assessed value in said political subdivisions."

I've had the statement corrected to show the new figures, and you can see that the debt limitation of the State has been increased to 60 million. At the present time there are outstanding 14,000,936; unissued 41,076,220; for a total authorized and unissued of 56 million. However, in this 41 million, there are a number of bonds that it is highly questionable whether they actually will be sold. In any event, the difference between the 14 million now outstanding and the 60 million that is authorized as a debt limit would leave plenty of room for the State to go ahead with improvements. It wouldn't hamstring the State in any way.

I think the same applies to all of the counties as well with the possible exception of the County of Kauai, where, you see, with their recent issue of 725,000, they are just about up to their debt limit. There is one thing about the County of Kauai that I think has had an adverse effect on it, and that is in that recent sale of $725,000, there was $300,000 of school bonds. Now if you'll refer to the schedules that are attached to the report, you will find that most of the school bonds are carried as territorial obligations and not as county obligations, and that 300,000, of course, has had a very adverse effect on the County of Kauai. Now in proposing this 10 per cent, even though in the case of Kauai the debt limit is pretty close to what their outstanding bonds are at the present time, we feel that with the trend that is taking place in the assessed values for tax purposes, that it's only a matter of a short period of time before the county will have, the County of Hawaii [sic] will have some leeway there. Because according to the statements that we have reviewed, the assessed value, the territorial assessed value anyway, over a period since 1940 has just about doubled. It's gone from 183 million to 333 million at the present time, and I think with the adjustments that are now under consideration by the tax authority, to try to get the tax value of improvements more in line with their present replacement cost less depreciation, I think it will have the effect of increasing the value. Now we feel that in the case of the Territory, although the present 15 per cent on the 333 would bring a value of only 50 million, within 3 years time the assessed value would probably be up to 400 million, so that the 15 per cent would start to operate above that if the need arose for further borrowing.

I think that's all I have to say, Mr. Chairman, I'd be glad to try to answer any questions that they have. I've got my legal counsel here to help me.

H. RICE: I move for the adoption of the final draft of the amendment proposed by the Committee on Finance.

Section 10. Debt Limitations.

All bonds and other instruments of indebtedness issued by or on behalf of the State or a political subdivision thereof must be authorized by the legislature, provided that bonds and other instruments of indebtedness of a political subdivision must also be authorized by its governing body.

Sixty million dollars is hereby established as the limit of the funded debt of the State at any time outstanding and unpaid. Bonds and other instruments of indebtedness in excess of this State debt limit may be issued, provided such excess debt of the State is authorized by a two-thirds vote of all the members of each house of the legislature, and such excess debt, at the time of authorization, would not cause the total of State indebtedness to exceed a sum equal to fifteen per cent of the total of assessed values for tax rate purposes of real property in the State, as determined by the then last tax assessment rolls pursuant to law.

Bonds or other instruments of indebtedness to fund appropriations for any fiscal period in anticipation of the collection of revenues for such period or to meet casual deficits or failures of revenue, which debts shall be payable within a period of one year, and bonds or other instruments of indebtedness to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, to defend the State in war, or to meet emergencies caused by disaster or act of God, may be issued by the State under legislative authorization without regard to the limits on debt and excess debt hereinabove provided.

A sum equal to ten per cent of the total of the assessed values for tax rate purposes of real property in the political subdivision as determined by the then last tax assessment rolls pursuant to law, is hereby established as the limit of the funded debt of such political subdivision at any time outstanding and unpaid; provided that the aggregate of the debts contracted by or on behalf of any political subdivision during any fiscal year shall not exceed two per cent of the total of such assessed values in said political subdivision.

All bonds or other instruments of indebtedness for a term exceeding one year shall be in serial form maturing in substantially equal annual installments, the first installment to mature not later than five years from the date of the issue of such series, and the last installment not later than thirty-five years from the date of such issue.

Interest and principal payments shall be a first charge on the general revenues of the State or political subdivision, as the case may be.

The provisions of this Section shall not be applicable to indebtedness incurred under revenue bond statutes by a public enterprise of the State or political subdivision, or by a public corporation, when the only security for such indebtedness is the revenues of such enterprise or public corporation, or to indebtedness incurred under special improvement statutes when the only security for such indebtedness is the properties benefited or improved or the assessments thereon.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the refunding of any indebtedness at any time.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

PORTEUS: I would like to hear from the committee. There was a suggestion that was made the other day with respect to discussions that possibly insofar as the third paragraph is concerned that where you are borrowing money in anticipation of collection of revenues for a fiscal period or to meet casual deficits or failures of revenue, and you have to pay these back within a year, you don't have to write a bond to do that, do you? Won't you - -

WHITE: I think that's quite correct, that if we had just "instruments of indebtedness" it would say the same thing. We left the word "bonds" in to make it uniform with what we had up above, but I believe that it could be left out. You want to talk on that?

TAVARES: I was the one that objected to taking the word "bonds" out, because I think the definition of "bonds," one of the definitions, is so broad that it would cover almost any kind of written obligation to pay. So that I don't think there is any harm in leaving it in.

PORTEUS: The only question we had really was that if you have to submit this to various bond attorneys, and you are establishing various limitations, they may want to know what the limitations are with respect to these other bonds which basically are not long-term indentures at all. But this other is really a specialized form of short-term borrowing, just as though it were a note of the Territory for the time being rather than a bond.

TAVARES: Yes, at the present time we fund our indebtedness in anticipation of fiscal, current fiscal revenues by what we call "treasury warrant notes." When we are short of cash, we pay by a check that is entitled "treasury warrant notes" which bears interest, and the people take it down to the bank and the bank takes it over and gives you the money and later on the Territory pays the bank back. That is the usual form now of funding indebtedness for current fiscal needs within the estimated or within the resources or income of the fiscal period, and I didn't think leaving the word "bonds" in would do any harm. "Bonds and other instruments of indebtedness" would include those, but there might be some time in the future where we would change from treasury warrant notes to some other kind of a document, and rather than have a question arise whether it is an instrument of indebtedness as opposed to a bond and a draw a distinction between the two, we thought we would just leave them in.

DOI: I would like to move we amend the proposed final draft in paragraph two on line six after the clause, "of the legislature," and deleting all that follows after that comma to the end of the paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to inquire of the mover of the motion to adopt the Section 10. In the other discussions of other proposals of committees where there are one or more paragraphs we followed the practice of moving for tentative approval of each paragraph.

H. RICE: I should have made the motion to tentatively approve paragraph one. If the second agrees, I so move.

WOOLAWAY: I accept.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion as to paragraph one first? No further discussion? All those in favor of adopting in principle paragraph one of the Section 10 as amended, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

H. RICE: I make the motion in paragraph two that that tentatively be agreed to.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the motion. Now, Delegate Doi, we're considering paragraph two of the Section 10.

DOI: I would like to move to amend paragraph two by deleting all that follows in the sixth line after the phrase, "of the legislature" comma, to the end of the paragraph.

SILVA: Second the motion.

DOI: Period after the word "legislature."

CHAIRMAN: And eliminate - - as I understand your motion would eliminate the phrase beginning "and such excess debt, etc." down to the word "law." Is that right?

DOI: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been seconded. Would you like to explain the reason for your amendment?

DOI: Yes. I moved to delete the last portion of paragraph two. The reason was that the 15 per cent provided, in my opinion, is meaningless and purposeless. In time of depression real estate values go down. The result is, the practical effect of providing 15 per cent is meaningless in that it will also go down and very likely go below the $60,000,000 provided. The 15 per cent, I understand here, is provided for purposes to exceed $60,000,000. Might I add also that during times of depression especially, we do need money -- we do need to borrow money, and I believe the only time we will resort to using the 15 per cent clause is during time of depression, and that is when this 15 per cent becomes meaningless and there is -- and for that reason there is no purpose for having this particular provision in this Constitution.

Might I also add that the Joint Tax Study Committee had some time ago circulated their findings on the question of whether we should even have a tax -- a debt limit, and their findings show that in the several states, Connecticut, Maryland, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Tennessee, and Vermont, they don't have any debt limitation and that they do not find that their credit has been impaired.

ROBERTS: I spoke the other day on Section 10 on debt limitations, and I indicated that I had some doubts as to the soundness of using assessed values for setting a debt limit. However, I'd like to speak in opposition to the amendment proposed on the ground that you have, by the first part of that paragraph, set a $60,000,000 debt limit. The purpose of the second sentence, I gather, is to provide some flexibility for excess debts above the 60 million. If you delete that section, you provide for no flexibility whatsoever, and you place a top debt limit of $60,000,000, with no possibility whatsoever to change that debt limit, except by a constitutional amendment. I will therefore suggest that that section be retained if we retain a debt limit. I don't favor a debt limit, I don't like assessed valuations, but if you are going to provide some flexibility, and if you have agreed to a debt limit; I think this section ought to stand the way it is.

DOI: In answer to the previous speaker, I believe the portion retained of paragraph two does permit the legislature to go beyond the $60,000,000 debt limit and they could do so by a two-thirds vote of the legislature. At least that is my impression.

BRYAN: I'd like to speak against the proposed amendment. If I had my way, we would have no bonds. I think that this is a very serious question. In my own mind I can visualize putting the State on a pay-as-you-go basis. The money which we would pay as interest on $60,000,000 in a period of 15 years, if that money were put into a sinking fund or if it were invested in bonds of other states, it would provide this Territory with sufficient income from the interest alone to take care of this whole problem. I think for sure we should have a limit, and I would go further.

HOLROYDE: I agree with -- partly with the previous speaker, and I disagree with the amendment. If the amendment carries, you might just as well eliminate any debt limit as far as the Constitution is concerned and leave it up to the legislature, the way it's worded, if that amendment is carried. I am in favor of a debt limit, and I am in favor of the committee proposal.

MAU: Speaking against the amendment because I'm not in favor of paragraph two, I would like to amend by striking out all of paragraph two and inserting in lieu thereof this simple language. "Twenty per cent of the total assessed values of real property in the State as determined by the tax assessment rolls of the State is hereby established as the debt limit of the State." Do I get a second to discuss this?

NIELSEN: I'll second that.

MAU: If we are to place a debt limitation—and I'm not against the idea of a debt limitation, although I would be willing to leave it up to the legislature not to bankrupt the State, and I don't think the legislature will bankrupt the State—but if we are to have a debt limitation, it should not be stated in dollars and cents. It should be on a percentage basis on the assessed value of real property, then you can go up or down according to the circumstances in the times. It seems to me that if we work it under that proposition, even at 20 per cent, that the legislature can be trusted to permit the issuance of bonds only to the extent that will protect the financial position of the State of Hawaii, and that is the reason why I offer that amendment. It would also, I think, in good times, give more money to the State with which to operate the State government.

OHRT: I'd like to speak against the amendment. I think that we get into the very heart of the finances of our municipalities when we begin discussing bond limits. If I were to say anything, I think I would be criticizing the Committee on Finance for setting up too high a limit. I think 60 million is a fixed limit, and you must have the variable limit.

Now, when you begin judging the credit of municipalities, I'd like to just read one paragraph as to what the bond attorneys and the bond buyers think of this subject. "When you find a state with low debt limits, with few if any exceptions from these limits, preferably they are constitutional limits, and a scheme for the issuance of bonds which makes it a little difficult to incur the debt, where there are few if any limits to the taxing power for the payment of the debt once it is incurred, and the laws for the enforcement of those levies are adequate, I would say that those things indicate that in that state the people are focusing their attention upon the necessity of paying the debts which they are going to incur. Also, where the converse is true and where there are high debt limits or no limits and the creation of debt was a matter of great ease, and the provisions for the payment of obligations were restricted by tax limitations, it indicated a desire merely to obtain money. Naturally investors take these things into account."

Now, I think this is very important. The Finance Committee has raised the limit from ten per cent in the case of the Territory to 15 per cent, and I think that that is very liberal. Now, there is a liberalness in that which you may not find now, but you could easily raise assessed values and that will give you higher limits at some future date.

Now the city and county limit has been raised from five per cent to seven and one-half per cent, and I think that's rather high because you can get around that later. That is, all the highway bonds can be put over into revenue bonds and let the gas tax pay for it, and after awhile, we will have very heavy fixed charges against the city and county and our whole credit will be affected. At the present time I think the Territory sold its last issue at the rate of one and six-tenths per cent yield, which is a very low rate, and that is because of the limits that are now in the Organic Act, and I would vote against these two amendments.

SHIMAMURA: I favor the retention of this paragraph as contained in the final draft for various reasons. As the previous speaker pointed out, it specifies and provides for a definite limitation in dollars and cents, which is a good thing. And then in times of prosperity where the assessed valuation of property presumably may be greater than $60,000,000, we may increase the debt to 15 per cent of the assessed values as determined by the assessment rolls. Therefore it will give a greater flexibility, and also it will insure our credit. When a bonding company would wish to underwrite our bonds they know that there is a definite limit of $60,000,000, and yet the limitation is 15 per cent of assessed valuation. I think we would be sustaining our credit under such a provision.

FONG: May I ask the chairman of the committee a question? Your $60,000,000 is what percentage of your assessed value now, Mr. White?

WHITE: Well, it's—I would say it's about 18 per cent.

FONG: Now it's 18 per cent? Sixty million is 18 per cent of your assessed value now?

WHITE: Yes.

FONG: Now your 15 per cent, will that be over your $60,000,000?

WHITE: Well, in other words, I think probably if the -- supposing that the tax -- the assessed values for tax purposes went up to 450 million, within your debt limit you could borrow an additional six and a half million dollars or six and three-quarters million dollars.

FONG: You said $60,000,000 is 18 per cent.

WHITE: Yes, it happens to work out 18 per cent as of the present time, and the purpose of putting in the sixty million at this time is not to freeze the Territory.

FONG: Now, if you had 15 per cent of your assessed value over $60,000,000, would that give you around another $50,000,000, or is it your intention to limit your borrowing power to 15 per cent?

WHITE: No, your borrowing power would be -- your debt limit would be 60 million at all times, but at such time as the result of taking 15 per cent of the assessed value would produce a higher figure than 60 million, then you would be authorized to incur that additional debt.

FONG: Then why do you set $60,000,000 when it's over 15 per cent now?

WHITE: Well, we set it at $60,000,000 so that we didn't hamstring -- it wouldn't have the effect of hamstringing the Territory in the next two or three years.

FONG: I see, so you anticipate that if the assessed value did not depreciate, then $60,000,000 probably would not be the limit.

WHITE: That's right. We anticipate that the -- on the basis of the trend that there has been in the increase in net assessed values, that within three years time that your assessed values would be up to 400 million, which would then, 15 per cent would give you $60,000,000. Now, if they continue on at that same rate, why then the 15 per cent would also apply to the increase over the 400 million and increase your debt limit by that amount.

FONG: Now, in your report you stated that financial writers feel that that debt limit should be lower in percentage. Could you give us an idea as to what these writers think is a safe percentage.

WHITE: Well, the expressions of the bond attorneys are not altogether clear because they talk about a debt limit not exceeding 18 per cent. Now that in many instances may be influenced by the way in which the county handles its bonded indebtedness. In other words, where the county takes care of all the school bonds and all that type of expenditure and makes the borrowing for those purposes, why they feel that an 18 per cent over-all limit is as high as it should go. Now we have, on the other hand, submitted this proposal back to them, and they do not feel that the way in which we have set it off will impair the credit of the State. They have, on the other hand, cautioned us that the policy now in effect in the Territory of granting exemptions of all kinds can have an effect on the acceptability of the State bonds.

FONG: I feel that this certain amount of $60,000,000—that is a gross figure—is a good thing. Your legislators -- you will find that many legislators come to the legislature with very little experience or very little knowledge of finance, and if you did not set an amount like that, it would be very difficult for them to find out what the taxable -- what the debt limit should be. I know when I first went to the legislature I was quite confused as to what -- how much we could go in the matter of having tax -- debt limit, and I think that $60,000,000 is a pretty generous figure. During the war the Territory was able to cut its debt down to $8,000,000, but within two sessions of the legislature we shoved it up to $56,000,000. Now you will find that when it comes to appropriation of money which is going to be floated by bonds it doesn't get as careful scrutiny as the appropriation of the present money has. I think that some limitation should be placed here, and I think the final draft of the committee is a very good one.

WHITE: I'd just like to add that if you'll notice, we have used the expression in there, "used for tax-rate purposes," so that there's no question about what we're talking about because the Territorial Tax Office makes a compilation showing what all the gross assessments are and the exemptions therefrom. They get down to this figure or this term "valuation for tax-rate purposes" and that is why we have endeavored to tie it to some figure or some term so that there would be no question about it.

I'd like to make one comment on Mr. Mau's motion which I oppose strenuously. It's fine to have some objective and I think that all of us would like to see the State and the counties in a position where they could carry on all the projects that they want to. But I think we have to bear in mind that we can't do all those things without running the risk of prejudicing the credit risk of the Territory, and I think that is something that we have to keep in mind very definitely, and particularly right now. We have a situation in the Terri tory at the present time where the industrial securities of the Territory do not enjoy a very high reputation as evidence by both prices and the interest on the part of mainland purchasers, and if there is one thing that we should guard very jealously, it is the credit of the State because we are going t need it.

MAU: The chairman of the committee has stated that presently percentage-wise, $60,000,000 comes to 18 per cent of the present assessed values. I'm quite agreeable to knocking down that percentage of 20 which I suggested to 18. But the point is this. When you have a dollar and cents limit, that limit stands until the Constitution is amended. We don't know whether this Constitution will be amended in the next 20 or 50 years, and if you don't have a flexibility there, it seems to me that that would not be proper. If 18 per cent does not endanger the credit of the State, then we ought to put it on the percentage basis so that it can go up or down. If that percentage today, 18, reaches $60,000,000 there should be no objection to that because in the county section, the original county section gave it a dollar-and-cents limit. In the amendment, it does not give it a dollar-and-cents limit but says ten per cent of the total assessed value. So in the one instance, on the State you give it a limitation in dollars and cents, in the county one you don't. Now, it seems to me if it doesn't make any difference, we ought to leave it flexible if that is possible through the percentage basis.

WHITE: Can I answer that? I thought I made that clear, Mr. Mau, that as you know during the war period the tax assessments have not been able to keep up with the increases in value, and they are now in process of correcting that differential that exists between present assessed values and what might be considered fair assessed values based on present replacement cost, less depreciation. Now last year they made an adjustment of -- by increasing improvements by 20 per cent. It will probably take two or three years to get those adjustments ironed out, and I am sure that by that time that your assessed values then will, by applying 15 per cent to it, will produce the 60 million. This was to take care of an interim situation which we hoped, after that, would iron itself out.

Now, when we talk about the 18 per cent, that isn't limited to state debt, Mr. Mau. The 18 per cent in many instances, that was supposed to include the combined county and State. In other words some of these states don't have any percentage debts, but they have a low debt limit, and in those cases the bond attorneys advise that the 18 per cent was a high figure for the counties. Now you take the 15 per cent plus the ten per cent, you are getting up to 25 per cent and you are getting up to a very high percentage of assessed value.

MAU: Mr. Chairman, may I answer that question? If that is so, are you giving preferential treatment to the counties? Because under the county provision their debt limitation is on the percentage basis, ten of the total of the assessed values of the tax rate. Then there is no limitation on the amount of money involved. If seven per cent or seven and a half is enough for the counties, as your studies have shown, you have given the counties ten per cent, which is very generous of you. Then you limit the State to $60,000,000. That might be ten per cent or that might be 15 per cent depending on the assessed values. Are you being niggardly with the State there?

WHITE: There was no intention to be niggardly with the State, but I think that if you think of the county problem as such, you can appreciate the problem that we ran into when we made our first draft. We got onto the assessed values and tried to fix the dollar limit. We would either have to fix it by each particular county in the Constitution or we would have to fix an over-all limit and then provide for a proration over counties, and because it did make a very complicated provision, we went back to the simplified provision of ten per cent.

Now, if you refer to the initial provision, it provided seven and a half per cent for the counties. When we applied the seven and a half though, we found that Kauai then was over their debt limit, and there are some - - there is one thing about that that affected the county of Kauai and that is that she has issued $300,000 worth of bonds for school purposes, which in most instances is a Territorial obligation for the other counties. So it was in an effort to not hamstring the counties at this particular time that we established the ten per cent. But you will notice there that the - - in the initial provision it requires approval by the legislature and also by the county governing board.

MAU: One more question. Do you visualize the possibility of increase in real property values so that, in order to reach the $60,000,000 limitation, the percentage could possibly come up to five or seven and one-half per cent of assessed property in the State to reach that $60,000,000? It could be possible?

WHITE: Do I think that assessed values will increase to a point where you could cut the 15 per cent in half?

MAU: That's right.

WHITE: No. I doubt whether we'd ever reach that thing, and I think that that would be dangerous in that you could have fluctuations for a period of one or two years which might seriously prejudice it. I think the long range trend is going to be upward, but when you do have periods of depression you may have downward adjustments on assessed values to reflect the condition of the real estate market.

MAU: So that it is possible, though, to have a percentage equal to say seven and a half or eight per cent of the real property taxes or assessed value of the property in the State to reach 60 million. It is possible where there is a rising scale in the value of property.

WHITE: I think it's possible, but I don't think it's too probable.

MAU: What, in your judgment, would be a safe percentage to use if we use the percentage, without endangering the credit of the State?

WHITE: Well, I think that the way we've got it set up now should enable the State and the counties to operate and still have the State and the county bonds enjoy a good rating from a credit standpoint.

MAU: That's true, but you have a limitation in dollars. If we use the percentage, what would be a safe percentage to use?

WHITE: Well, you mean looking always to the long-range future?

MAU: Yes.

WHITE: Well, it might get down to a point where you could - - where ten per cent would provide for it. Now, there is another thing that this provision provides, that the bonds are going to be serial bonds. In other words, they are going to be paid off in fairly equal installments over a period of 35 years, so that as you go along you are paying off some of your debt, and you always have that additional borrowing power because this provides that the limit is the limit on the bonds outstanding at any one particular time. In other words, you can exceed these figures on outstanding bonds and authorized but unissued bonds, but they can't actually be sold if it has the effect of exceeding this limit.

MAU: Well, you have a percentage limitation in the last part of that paragraph of 15 per cent. Now, if that is a reasonable limitation upon two-thirds vote of the legislature, would it be a reasonable limitation in the original instance rather than use the dollars and say 60 million is all that you can go?

RICHARDS: May I answer that particular question as I understand it? At present, the authorized debt is approximately 56 million, which is roughly 16.8 per cent of the assessed value of 330 million. Now if the - - under this particular provision, if we leave it at 15 per cent until the present assessed value goes to $400,000,000, the bond limit will be $60,000,000. If that assessed valuation goes up to $500,000,000, then the debt limit will be $75,000,000, but at no time will it go below $60,000,000.

WHITE: Mr. Mau, could I answer that one another way? I think that if we assumed that we knew what the situation was going to be in the next two or three years, why we could eliminate the 60 thousand[sic] and rely on our belief that the assessed value is going to go up to a point where they take care of that. But in fixing the 60 million we were trying to take care of the situation that prevails today where you have a debt limit of 50 thousand [sic] but you've got authorized - - outstanding plus authorized and unissued bonds that bring the total up to 56 million. So in other words we were trying to take care of the situation that exists at the present time until such time as we could catch up with it.

MAU: Well, I'm in agreement with you about taking care of the present day situation. It's good as it is for the present day, but what happens five years, ten years from now, twenty years? When the Constitution is unamended, it remains as is, 60 million.

CHAIRMAN: Well, Mr. Mau, I might recall that I think there has been the point of view expressed by you and Mr. White. I think your point is brought out in the discussion. Are you satisfied that it is brought out?

MAU: Yes. May I amend my own motion to change the 20 per cent to 18 per cent?

H. RICE: I think Delegate Mau from the fifth district would agree, if the 60 million is 18 per cent, why not write 18 per cent down where you have the 15 per cent? Then in any increased valuation you have increased borrowing power, because it shows that you have to go up to 400 million to get to 60 million. So I think that that was - - I had quite a discussion with our Secretary the other day on that point, if in one case it's 60 million.

I want to continue to say that this committee, the Joint Committee on Tax Study has made some - - has got some letters here that would help the Territory. You take on Oahu, you got 1,900,000, Oahu; Maui has 908,000; Hawaii, 1,488,000; and Kauai, 207,000, making a total of four and a half million that the interest and sinking fund is all provided for by gasoline tax. They should form a corporation and have that revenue bond and that would decrease the limits some because this section - - in the following section you will find that revenue bonds stand on their own. But I'd rather think that - - I think Mr. Mau's suggestion may be all right if we write 18 per cent which we have now written in as 60 million, then any increase in valuation - -

Personally I'd like to agree with Delegate Bryan and Holroyde. I'd like to go without any indebtedness. When we got down to eight million, if we could have gotten rid of the whole debt we would have been better off. But the Territory isn't in that condition to be without any bonds because of the employment problem, and it's times like this when you have employment problems that you have to got to borrow. You've got to put the money into work and get projects out to take care of your employment.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Mau, you made a motion to amend your motion from 20 per cent to 18 per cent. Is that agreeable to the second, whoever seconded it?

NIELSEN: I second it for purposes of debate.

CHAIRMAN: It was agreeable? Now Delegate Bryan has been seeking recognition. I recognize Delegate Bryan.

BRYAN: I'd like to speak against the second amendment of raising that figure from 15 per cent to 18 per cent very much on the basis of what I said a little while ago. I think that the committee proposal is more than generous. I'd like to point out one or two things in that connection. I think one reason for raising it was so that in times of prosperity when the assessed value would increase, the debt limit could increase. Those are not the times when we need an increase in the debt limit.

MAU: I wonder if the gentleman will yield for a second? We might be able to cut out part of the discussion.

CHAIRMAN: Well, if you yield, you yield for all purposes.

BRYAN: I won't yield. Well, I had two or three other points I wanted to speak to, if I could.

The thing that worries me is we are very conscious of our balance of trade here in the territory, and I think the interest on $60,000,000 would actually have an effect on that balance of trade. I don't know what it would be on these bonds that are issued, but I've heard two and a half million to three million a year quoted.

CHAIRMAN: Excuse me a minute. Perhaps the Chair didn't express his mind correctly. When you stood up, Mr. Mau, did you intend to ask Mr. Bryan to yield to a question, or rather to yield to speak?

MAU: Yes, I think I could have covered it in that form.

CHAIRMAN: Do you desire to yield to a question?

MAU: I believe that my amendment will not get the support of this house, and in order to avoid it, I will offer an amendment later to other sections of paragraph two. At this time I withdraw the amendment that I had offered.

CHAIRMAN: You desire to withdraw your amendment?

MAU: That's correct.

BRYAN: Do I understand the amendment before the house now is the amendment to delete the words after "legislature"?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

BRYAN: In that case, I'd like to speak to that amendment again. I think that the legislators are in a pretty tough spot on this. They come to the legislature and they are expected by their constituents to bring home the bacon, and it's very hard sometimes for them to vote against a limitation of debt. I think that this would actually, the section as written, be a service to the legislature, and at the same time keep our credit ratings sound. That's all I have to say.

KELLERMAN: May I make a - - I am in favor of the proposal of the committee, but I'd like to have one point brought up for discussion and clarified to the committee. Mr. Ohrt mentioned it indirectly when he referred to the fact that as values rose, the debt limit could increase under the 15 per cent provision. He referred to the fact that there was another open end, so to speak, in a possible increase in the proportion of assessment value to real value. Mr. White, will you answer this question, please? You said that the bond attorneys who had served in the past with respect to bond proceedings of the Territory had approved, as being reasonable or rather not excessive, the present proposal of the committee for a $60,000,000 limit with this 15 per cent additional proviso. Is that correct?

WHITE: That's correct, with the 10 per cent for the counties.

KELLERMAN: Did they not approve that on the basis of our present rather low proportion of assessment value to real value. I understand our present assessment rate is about 50 per cent of market value. Is that true?

WHITE: I would say it was about 40, and I think with the adjustment that they made this year it would be close to 50.

KELLERMAN: Then it seems to me that they have approved your present proposal based upon the present fair or comparatively low assessment proportion to market value. It is within the power of the legislature, after we approve this provision, if it should see fit to increase the base on which that 15 per cent would apply, to simply pass a statute which would increase the rate of assessment to some 60 per cent, 70 per cent or 80 per cent of market value.

WHITE: That's not - - I mean, that's not necessarily so that they've done it, that they've approved this on that with that understanding.

CHAIRMAN: I believe Delegate Tavares might clear that. Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: I might say that our present law today requires assessment at market value, and even with that law, we are only going 50 per cent. Even in those jurisdictions that actually mandate full value, you will not find them at full value because of the problem of equalization. Tax assessors are afraid to go to a 100 per cent of actual market value on every piece, because they are afraid that because of the differences of opinion between people as to value, they will overvalue one piece of land too much and knock off their tax rate or knock off the assessment, and therefore they always stay below 100 per cent in order to be safe because of that problem of equalization. So I say, I don't think that's a real danger because even today under a law requiring market value, you only have 50 per cent or less.

KELLERMAN: I did not mention the potentiality of going to 100 per cent of market value for the very circumstances that - - facts that Mr. Tavares has mentioned and which I fully realize, but it seems to me it's quite possible that under the direction of the legislature, an assessment is made on a territorial-wide basis under its direction, that assessments could be increased to 80 per cent of market value. Had we had an 80 per cent market value assessment today, I would like to ask Mr. White if he feels that the bond attorneys would have considered this rate reasonable. It's my feeling that what we are doing is approving only one side of a proposition. We are putting on a $60,000,000 limit, which I consider highly advisable, but we are leaving an open end that the legislature can increase the 15 per cent rate by increasing the rate of assessments. They can revalue the property on a higher ratio and jump it to 450 million, 475 million, 500 million. I think it should be rather the understanding of this group that when we approve 60 million, we are approving it on the assumption that the assessment rate as compared with market value will be around 50 or certainly not to exceed 60 per cent of actual market value.

WHITE: I think there are two replies to that question. In the first place, I don't think that you could get the bond attorneys to rule on that without looking at other factors, and the other factor is, what are the revenues of the Territory, because that in the final analysis determines what supports the bonds. Now, if over a period of years, it looks to the bond attorneys as if you were just raising the assessed values and without any corresponding increase in the taxes that were raised from that, I think that it would have an effect on the credit of the bonds.

Now secondly, when you talk about the assessor just being able to do that willy-nilly, I think you've got a lot of safeguards on that because at the present time you have 15,000 odd taxpayers who are paying little if any taxes in the way of real property taxes, and the minute you get up to an 80 per cent or 85 per cent ratio, you'll drag 15 or 20 thousand people in, and I don't think the legislature would ever run the risk of incurring the wrath of that group.

SMITH: I move that the committee recess till 1:30.

ROBERTS: I'd like to make one statement for the record. Mrs. Kellerman indicated that it be the sense of the Convention or the sense of the committee that the assessed valuations be maintained at the present base. I think that if such a feeling is left unanswered, it might presumably tie the hands of the future legislature. The purpose, I gather, of providing for a percentage figure is to provide for some flexibility and to permit a possible base in excess of $60,000,000 if and when assessed valuations increase. We aren't discussing the desirability or undesirability of increases or changes in assessed valuation. I want it to be understood and made quite clear in the record that there is no such intent in drafting this proposal.

KELLERMAN: I don't think -- either I misunderstand the last speaker or he has misunderstood me. I was not speaking with reference to changing the 15 per cent in the committee proposal, and I know that was put in for flexibility, which I approve. I was wondering if it was the sense of the Finance Committee and of this committee that these figures of the 60 million and the 15 per cent were based upon the assumption that the present tax assessment evaluation of properties in the territory would remain within a 60 per cent limit of market value, certainly which will be higher than we now have, and would not run up to a possible 80 per cent of market value.

GILLILAND: I ask the chairman of the Committee on Finance whether or not the committee has taken into consideration that at the present time under territorial status we are receiving a lot money from the federal government and our salaries and all are being paid by the federal government. When we become a state, we will have all that extra load on our own shoulders, besides a lot more expenses of the government that the United States government won't have to meet. Has the committee taken that fact into consideration on the question of increase assessments of property for taxes?

WHITE: Well, our reason for -- in reply to that, our reason for providing the 60 million was to allow some elbow room in the first three or four years that the State may be in operation before it might attain that 400 million dollar assess value appropriation, I mean assess value figure.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no further discussion, the motion before the house is the --

ROBERTS: I still believe that we have the statement in the record to the effect that the evaluation -- assessed valuation is based on the recommendations of somewhere approximately 60 per cent of actual values.

CHAIRMAN: I do not believe that is so, Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: I just want the record to show that.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kellerman stated that it was her belief that if that was the intention of the committee, it should be in the record. There was no statement made by the chairman of the committee on that basis.

SHIMAMURA: I believe Delegate Kellerman has a very good point. However, the only danger I see in such a consensus of opinion is that we may run into a constitutional question in the future. If the legislature should otherwise provide and enlarge the assessment rate, I believe that we may run into a constitutional question, that is, the constitutionality of the bond issue which exceeds the 60 per cent basis.

MAU: I wonder if I may ask another question. In the last part of paragraph two, they speak of assessed values for tax-rate purposes of real property in the State. Did the committee consider the possibility that in the future the legislature may tax personal property, and whether or not assessed values on personal property also should be included, and if not, why not?

WHITE: Well, I can only express a personal opinion, and I hope that we never ever get back to the personal property because I think it was the most ridiculous tax we ever had and the most expensive to administer. But regardless of that, this wouldn't -- it wouldn't be included in this because we are tying it back to real property.

MAU: And it is the committee's feeling to limit the assessed value to real property taxes only?

WHITE: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: That's what it says in the proposal, Mr. Mau.

MAU: Would there be any advantage in including all properties that may be assessed for taxation?

WHITE: Well, there's nothing -- I think it should be understood by this Convention that there is nothing scientific -- there is no scientific way of developing any percentage. All that we can hope to do is to try to select a percentage that is realistic and that is going to take care of the situation that we think might confront the State. There is no scientific way of putting in real property or any other property. This is only a yardstick, only a guide, that's all.

KING: May I ask the chairman of the committee a question? As I understand it, the limit of $60,000,000 does not bar the counties from borrowing up to ten per cent of the assessed value of each county.

WHITE: That is correct.

KING: If every county uses the full limit of their borrowing capacity, that would amount to, at present valuation, about $3,300,000.

WHITE: That's right.

KING: That's on a total assessed value for tax purposes of $330,000,000.

WHITE: No, it will amount to 33 million.

KING: Pardon?

WHITE: Thirty-three million for the counties.

KING: That's right, 33 million. So then the maximum debt of the Territory could conceivably be - - or the State, 60 million plus 33 million, 93 million dollars. Now it seems to me that's a pretty liberal amount of leeway in which to finance the public improvements and to meet emergency needs as time goes on. Now, I'm one of those who believes that the assessed value will go up in the next few years, perhaps not in the next two years, but over a period of five or six years, the total assessed values will go up from 330 million to some figure very close to $400,000,000, so that the 15 per cent on the 60 million will be invalid, and then in a later period, the 15 per cent will exceed $60,000,000, let's say in ten years from now. In the meantime, is it not true that we are paying off a considerable amount of our present bonded indebtedness? Now the total of the bonded indebtedness at this time of the Territory is about 56 million. Is that correct?

WHITE: Total what?

KING: The bonded indebtedness of the Territory at this time.

WHITE: Well, the outstanding is about 15 million and the authorized but unissued 41 million, so that we have a total of 56 million. However, the bond limit of the Territory is 50 million.

KING: Well, what I mean is, what is the leeway that we could borrow immediately in case we had need for a five or six million dollar bond issue within the next two years?

WHITE: Well, I would say that it would probably run from 10 to 15 million, because there are a lot of the bonds that are authorized. It's highly questionable whether they would ever be issued.

KING: In other words, if it were necessary by legislation to meet the problem of unemployment, the legislature could borrow money up to about $15,000,000 within the next two or three years?

WHITE: I would say that there would be 10 or 15 million dollars available.

KING: It seems to me that is a very liberal provision, and I would like to express my opposition to the pending amendment and to express my approval of the paragraph as recommended by the committee.

SHIMAMURA: Do I understand "assessed values" to mean "net assessed values," that is net after deduction of exemptions that may be allowed by law? Then shouldn't we say so?

WHITE: Well, I tried to explain, Delegate Shimamura, that the reason we use this "value used for rate purposes" is that that is the value that produces the taxes. Now, it isn't net value because it's affected to this extent, that any of the amounts that are on appeal in any year, 50 per cent of those amounts are added back. So that's why we are using this as against the net value, because the net value is lower than this.

FUKUSHIMA: I'm one of those that cannot think on an empty stomach. I move that we take a recess until 1:30.

RICHARDS: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of recessing say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: I believe, Delegate King, you have an announcement to make before we start on the regular order of business.

KING: It's been generally agreed, subject to the Convention's approval, that we would sit in Committee of the Whole until five and then adjourn and not have a night meeting. Then the Committee on Legislative Functions and Powers wants to have an evening meeting after dinner, as I understand it, Delegate Heen. Now when we rise, rather than recess—we have to adjourn anyhow—there is a little business on the Clerk's table that I'd like to complete as soon as the Committee of the Whole rises. If we finish the pending committee report on time, we'll go ahead with the report of the Committee on Agriculture. If not, we'll work right up to five on the report of the Committee on Taxation. I'm very anxious to have a caucus in executive session of the members to discuss our program hereafter, especially after June 30. So that when we do adjourn at five o'clock, if the members will just give me about 15 minutes, we'll go right into the committee room used by the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions and I'll make our little caucus very brief. That's all I have to say, Mr. Chairman.

HEEN: I'd like to make it clear that there will be a meeting of the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions at 7:30 this evening. All the members are urged to be present. This may be the final meeting on the report, the final report upon the complete article relating to the legislature.

SAKAKIHARA: May I ask the chairman of the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions, how long does he expect this meeting to last?

[Answer not on tape.]

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the house is Delegate Doi's motion that all the part from "and such excess debt" to the end of the paragraph, "to law," be deleted from paragraph two of the proposed Section 10. Is that clear? All those in favor of the motion to delete that particular sentence say "aye." Opposed. The noes have it. The motion failed.

The motion before the committee therefore is whether or not paragraph two of Section 10 should be adopted. All those in favor of the adopting tentatively of paragraph two of Section 10 please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The motion is carried.

HOLROYDE: I move we tentatively adopt paragraph three.

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

WHITE: I would like to propose that we make an amendment to that paragraph by deleting the first three words and changing the "i" in "instrument" to a capital "I," so that the thing would read: "Instruments of indebtedness," leaving off "bonds or other."

CROSSLEY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair did not fully understand your motion, Mr. White. Would you please repeat it?

WHITE: I moved an amendment to delete the first three words of that paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: Oh, "bonds or other." Your motion is made Any discussion? If not, all those in favor of deleting the words, "bonds or other," will you please - -

KELLERMAN: Does the chairman also want to delete the same words that appear in line five of that paragraph, or was it intended to leave a difference?

WHITE: No, no. This is only to apply to short-term debts.

KELLERMAN: You intended that to be a difference between those two?

WHITE: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

MAU: I propose another amendment on the next page, after the word "State" add the words "or its political subdivisions." Second page, top line.

CHAIRMAN: Any second? Delegate Trask seconds the motion. Any discussion?

WHITE: It seems to me that that is unnecessary, and not only unnecessary but dangerous. How many people are you going to have taking care of an emergency within the State? I think that that is something, that when you talk about raising the State debt to take care of emergencies that might be authorized by a political subdivision, you are going pretty far.

H. RICE: The comptroller of the City and County and I spent the lunch studying over this matter and he felt that if it was good for the territory -- the state, it was good for the county. They might be in the same position.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

TAVARES: May I point out that this a very wide open section. The provisions of this paragraph mean this, that in time -- that for the purposes of suppressing insurrection, repelling invasion, defending the State in time of war or to meet emergencies caused by disaster or act of God, there is no limit on the amount of bonds you can issue. Now as long as the State has that power, I see no reason why you have to give it to the counties too. It's a wide-open power.

LARSEN: I just want to tell Delegate Mau that the County of Honolulu will be part of the State of Hawaii.

MAU: Thank you, Doctor, for the information.
I don't suppose that any county will take care of invasions or defend the State in war. I am sure the State will do that. But up above, it says, "to meet casual deficits or failures of revenue." I think that the counties might well do that. Now, I don't visualize that any counties are going to put the counties into bankruptcy, as I don't visualize the legislature will put the State into bankruptcy.

ARASHIRO: A question directed to the last speaker. By addition of such a phrase, wouldn't that in the future raise some complication by the State trying to pass the buck to the political subdivisions?

CHAIRMAN: I noticed Delegate Mau smiled. Perhaps the point is well taken.

MAU: That point is absolutely well taken. They always do that.

TAVARES: May I point out one more thing. There is nothing in this Constitution, in this article to prevent the legislature by passing a law to have the Territory aid the counties in times of emergency, and today we have a law that allows the Territory to make loans to the counties, so that the legislature has ample power to take care of those emergencies in the counties, and if they are big enough so that isn't enough, then a special session can be called to take care of it.

MAU: If that argument is good. then certainly why put it in for the State, because the legislature by rightful subject of legislation can take care of emergencies like that.

WHITE: I'd like to point out one further thing. That paragraph there, in my opinion, would be inconsistent with the first paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion? If not, all those in favor of the adoption --

ARASHIRO: Point of information. A little explanation on this, "which debts shall be payable within a period of one year."

CHAIRMAN: Well, what do you want to know about that?

ARASHIRO: What does that mean?

TAVARES: All that means is this, that if the State borrows money, makes a temporary loan to fund appropriations for a fiscal period in anticipation of collection of revenues, that is, they need the money in advance, they haven't got it yet, but they expect it to be a little later in the fiscal period and they want to borrow to anticipate those revenues, or if they have a casual deficit and they need money temporarily to cover that, or the revenue falls below estimates, which amounts to the same thing as the casual deficit, they can borrow money to the extent necessary to cover those things but the money must be payable back within a period of one year.

CHAIRMAN: If the committee please, then the only thing before the committee is the adoption of the amendment proposed by Delegate Mau inserting the words "or its political subdivision" on page 2 after the word "State." If there is no further discussion, are we ready for the question?

SAKAKIHARA: Did I understand Delegate Mau to have said that he had withdrawn that amendment or does that amendment still stand?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment still stands.

SAKAKIHARA: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The noes have it. The motion failed.

SAKAKIHARA: I would like to pose a question to the chairman of the committee, if he will kindly define this phrase. What does it mean? "To meet emergencies caused by disasters." What kind of disaster? Economic disaster which brings about unemployment in the State of Hawaii, or what?

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman answer the question?

WHITE: I think I'd better leave that to one of the attorneys to answer.

SAKAKIHARA: We have a situation now which might continue to be in existence for some time. There is some 25 to 30 thousand unemployed in this territory. Is that an emergency caused by economic disaster or what, or is it an act of God? Will you kindly define that?

TAVARES: In my opinion that would not be either a disaster or act of God within the meaning of this provision. The word "disaster" is not absolutely definite, but I think it implies something more than this type of financial emergency. I would say it would include something like a severe explosion or a tidal wave. They are very similar, the two words. I think they overlap; "disaster" and "act of God" are very similar in their meaning.

SMITH: Wouldn't that be left up to the legislature as to determining whether it should be -- what it should be defined?

TAVARES: I think that within reason that probably is true because there is always a presumption when the legislature acts that it is acting constitutionally, and if there is some doubt, but not too great a doubt, the courts will undoubtedly resolve the doubt in favor of the validity of the legislation if the situation to be covered can come somewhere near the definition of "disaster."

SAKAKIHARA: There are numerous disasters. We have financial disasters, we have economic disasters, and we have an unemployment situation here in the territory. I think we should provide in this provision so as to enable the legislature for the State of Hawaii to have a clear understanding now, in this phrase of the amendment, to take care of such a situation. The proposed amendment merely states, "to meet emergencies caused by disaster or act of God may be issued by the State" in an emergency bond, redeemable within one year. I think it is very important to make it clear so that the future legislature would know what is the purport and intent of that phrase and wording.

CHAIRMAN: Has this been made clear to you yet?

ARASHIRO: Maybe that can be clarified by inserting a comma after "emergency," and then by adding two words -- adding a comma after "emergency," then adding the words "and emergencies caused by disaster."

TAVARES: If a more definite definition is asked for, I suggest we defer and go on to the next paragraph, and I will get the dictionary and try to resolve that question a little more definitely. I've sent for a law dictionary.

SAKAKIHARA: I move, therefore, we defer action on that paragraph.

YAMAMOTO: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that we defer paragraph three of the proposed Section No. 10. All those in favor of deferring, please say "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt and will call for the raising of hands. All those in favor of deferral, please signify by raising your right hand. All those opposed. The motion is lost.

WHITE: It seemed to me that the representative's -- I mean the delegate's question was directed to the intent of the committee.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

WHITE: The intent of the committee was not that it would include such a thing as an unemployment problem or things of that character. That would be taken care of, and that was the reason for providing for the $60,000,000 debt limit.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to pass paragraph three of the proposed Section No. 10 as amended, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Ready for the next section? The motion is in order.

KAM: I move that Section -- paragraph four of Section 10 be tentatively approved.

HOLROYDE: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion? If not, are we ready for the question?

WHITE: I have one amendment I would like to propose to that on the one, two, three, four, five, six, on the seventh line. To delete the words "on behalf of, " so that it would read: "provided that the aggregate of the debts contracted by any political subdivision during any fiscal year shall not exceed two per cent."

CHAIRMAN: Do you make that in the form of a motion?

WHITE: I make that in the form of a motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any second?

CROSSLEY: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion on the proposed amendment to paragraph four? If not, are we ready for the question? All those in favor of the proposed amendment suggested by Delegate White please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: I move that we adopt the fourth paragraph as amended.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion? If not, are we ready for the question? All those in favor of the passage of paragraph four of the proposed Section 3 [sic] please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: I now move that we adopt paragraph five, Section 10.

CHAIRMAN: Any second?

LAI: I second that motion.

ROBERTS: I have a question to ask the committee. The language in paragraph three provides for instruments of indebtedness to fund appropriations for any fiscal period. That's a short-term proviso to meet needs for a particular period of time, usually one year or less. Paragraph five says that "all bonds or other instruments of indebtedness" -- Oh, excuse me, "for a term exceeding one year." I'll withdraw that question.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion? If not, are we ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

H. RICE: Just one question. I was wondering if -- as you know, in the Organic Act, we were allowed to float bonds and so forth—I address this to Mr. Tavares—and we changed from regular long-term bonds to serial bonds, and I was wondering if this paragraph could be left out altogether or do you want to tie it in?

TAVARES: It is my recollection that the reason why we changed in the Organic Act from term to serial bonds was that term bonds are bonds which are payable all at once after a long period of time, for instance, if we borrow a million dollars payable 30 years after date. Now in order to build up enough money to pay that back at the end of 30 years, the custom was in the past to build up a sinking fund, the theory being that you put so much money each year into the sinking fund and you invest it, and it will draw interest, and at the end of 30 years, there would be enough money in the sinking fund to pay back. Well, it didn't always work that way. Sometimes you lost money in your investments of the sinking fund, so when the 30 years came up, you didn't have the money anyhow. So it was felt better to require every -- us to pay back in installments, so much a year in substantially equal installments and not build up the sinking fund with its great dangers, because the bigger your sinking fund and the bigger loss you take in some investments, the harder it is to pay it back later. So considering every angle pro and con, it was felt that it was better for the Territory and the counties to try to pay back their debts in annual installments than to try to build up a huge slush fund to pay back at the end of a long period. Have I made myself clear?

H. RICE: That's quite clear, very clear.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: I now move that we adopt paragraph six of Section 10.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

WOOLAWAY: I move that we tentatively adopt paragraph seven.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: I move for adoption of paragraph eight.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion? If not, are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the passage of paragraph eight, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: I believe this completes the section. I now move for the adoption of Section 10 in its entirety, as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

NIELSEN: Before that is moved on, I think we should have in our tax structure something to this effect, that real property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules. At present, that is not being done.

DELEGATE: Not in this section.

NIELSEN: Well, where would we put it?

DELEGATE: At the first.

NIELSEN: Well, somewhere in this before we adopt this entire setup.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion? Are we ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

WHITE: I would just like to call attention to one thing. We have made some revisions in the section, so after we cover a couple of other points, I think we would have to go back and renumber this particular section.

CHAIRMAN: Well, that can be done later.

WHITE: All right.

In our action the other night, Section 7 was eliminated. In reviewing the thing further, I am willing to admit that there was a lot in Section 7 which was really statutory in nature, but I do feel that we should make some provision for the allocation of funds and the control of expenditures when the legislature is not in session, and I have discussed this with the chairman of the Legislative Committee, and he agrees. So if I could get some good-hearted soul to move for - -

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Are you through, Delegate White?

ANTHONY: Will the delegate yield? I move that we reconsider Section 7 in order for the chairman of the committee to present his problem.

CROSSLEY: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to reconsider our action taken on Section 7, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried. Section 7 is now before the committee.

WHITE: I've furnished all of the delegates with a copy of the proposed Section 7, and I would like to move the adoption of it.

CROSSLEY: I believe the proper procedure would be to adopt the original Section 7 first and then offer an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

CROSSLEY: I so move.

ANTHONY: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: And now you, Delegate White.

WHITE: Then I move to adopt it - - I move to amend it so that it reads as per this copy.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

ANTHONY: Perhaps the section as amended should be read by the chairman of the committee.

CHAIRMAN: I believe it should be done; yes, Mr. White, will you please read that?

WHITE: Well it reads here, "Section 7, Expenditure of money. The legislature shall provide means for the control of the rate of expenditures of appropriated State moneys, and for the reduction of such expenditures in such manner and under such conditions as it may prescribe."

SAKAKIHARA: May I ask the chairman a question? I'm in accord with this amendment, but is it necessary to have this section incorporated in this Constitution?

WHITE: We feel that it is, to provide that the legislature will have and should make provision for the control of expenditures during the period when the legislature is not in session, because I feel that that may be a very necessary thing in those periods. All that this permits them to do, Delegate Sakakihara, is what is now done under the present Budget Bureau, only by not spelling it out the way we did in our original thing, it gives the legislature the opportunity to change it from time to time to meet changing conditions.

SAKAKIHARA: I'm in accord with the assumptions set out in your amendment, Delegate White, but I thought it might be within the province of the legislature, rather than to instruct the legislature what to do.

ANTHONY: I think this does not attempt to instruct the legislature. It just sets the framework within which this Convention thinks that the legislature should operate. I think it's a very good amendment.

TAVARES: May I add one other further note of explanation. As we all know, a provision like this is not self-executing until after the legislature has acted. As I interpret this section, if the legislature had not passed a budget law, as it already has, we couldn't force the legislature to do it by mandamus; but once the legislature has passed a budget law, as I interpret this, they could not repeal it without putting a substitute in its place that would reasonably take care of the situation of budgeting, and that is therefore some safeguard against an entire repeal of the budget law someday.

ROBERTS: Would the chairman of the committee please explain the words, "shall provide." I construe that language to be a mandate to the legislature.

WHITE: I thought Mr. Tavares just explained that, that if the legislature didn't take any action to provide for a method of controlling those, there's nothing that could be done to force them to do it. On the other hand, if they once adopted an act, well then it would be necessary for them to always make provision for it.

MAU: As I view it, this is purely legislative. Whenever the legislature makes appropriations, it can say how that money shall be spent and at what rate. This goes to merely a further prescription limiting the power of the legislature.

Just like the original Section 7, it is purely legislative and takes -- usurps part of the legislative powers.

WHITE: As I mentioned in the beginning, I have reviewed this with the chairman of the Legislative Committee, and he thinks that it's very much on order.

CHAIRMAN: Are there any further discussions?

ROBERTS: May I ask a question -- further question? If it's a matter of legislative power, why doesn't it go in the legislative article?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate White.

WHITE: The only reason it is, it ties in with the provisions that we have here on budgetary procedure.

CHAIRMAN: Well, I'd like to ask a question. What difference is there between the Section 7 which was deleted and this section, outside of it being shorter?

HEEN: In the original draft, it spells out the method which is contained in this amendment, and that method should not be spelled out in the Constitution, because the time may come where you want to modify the method, so this one is a broad general provision which can be complied with this way or that way or any other way.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question or is there further discussion? All those in favor of the motion to adopt the amended Section 7 please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The motion carries.

CROSSLEY: I now move that we adopt Section 7 as amended.

LAI: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no further discussion, the Chair will put the question. All those in favor of the motion, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

WHITE: In the meeting the other night, also, we deferred consideration of Section 4. I'd now like to move that Section 4 be deleted in its entirety.

CHAIRMAN: Any second?

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

TAVARES: As the person who asked for deferment, I also agree to the deletion.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no further discussion, the Chair will put the question. All those in favor of the motion of deletion, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

I believe that takes care of all the sections, but, Delegate White, you wanted to speak concerning 1 and 2?

WHITE: Yes. In the interest of eliminating unnecessary wording in Section 1, that has been redrafted, and I've reviewed that with the chairman of the Legislative Committee, and he believes it's a decided improvement over the Section 1 that was adopted the other night. In the case of Section 2, Section 2 has been worded to be consistent with the new Section 1.

LAI: I move to reconsider Section 1.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to reconsider action taken on Section 1, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried. Section 1 is now before the committee.

WHITE: I'd like -- now like to move the adoption of the new Section 1.

Section 1. The Budget - Operating and Capital Expenditures.

Within such period of time prior to the opening of each regular session of the legislature as may be prescribed by law, the governor shall submit to the legislature a budget setting forth a complete plan of proposed general fund expenditures and receipts of the State for the next ensuing fiscal period, together with such other information as the legislature may require. The budget shall be compiled in two parts, one of which shall set forth all operating expenditures proposed for the ensuing fiscal period and the other shall set forth all capital improvements expenditures proposed to be undertaken during said period. The governor shall also submit bills to authorize such proposed expenditures and for new or additional revenues or for borrowings by which the proposed expenditures are to be funded, which bills shall be introduced in the legislature as soon as practicable after the opening of each session during which the budget is to be considered.

CHAIRMAN: I think the proper motion --

CROSSLEY: I move the adoption of the original Section 1.

TAVARES: Second the motion.

SAKAKIHARA: May I ask for a recess so that we can intelligently study the amendment, the long amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Before putting the question, I think there should be a motion for the adoption of the amendment. There has been no motion as yet.

CROSSLEY: I move we adopt the amendment as proposed by Mr. White, Delegate White.

NIELSEN: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Now, Delegate Sakakihara, did you make a motion?

SAKAKIHARA: Yes, I ask at this time we take a brief recess subject to the call of the Chair so as to enable the delegates to study the amendments -- the long amendment.

NIELSEN: May I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that we have two amendments now, and during this recess we study both the amendments to 1 and 2.

CHAIRMAN: With that understanding, the Chair will declare a short recess subject to the call of the Chair.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The amendment before the committee is at your desk. There has been a motion made to amend Section 1 according to the page on your desk. Any discussion?

ROBERTS: An article dealing with the finance and taxation section was submitted yesterday. We had a statement from the committee that full and adequate consideration was given to it. I think the article was well drafted and, as I recall, I supported the committee on the general idea that there ought to be a budget presented by the governor, that it ought to set forth the expenditures as well as developments of a capital budget. I also supported the idea that such appropriation bills shall be acted on first before additional appropriations were to be made. I think the language as we had it originally is good language, with the possible exception of one sentence. That sentence starts with line seven -- eight, "For the preparation of the budget the various departments, offices," and so on to the end of that sentence. I don't think that is necessary. I would therefore suggest that we leave the section as it is, and I would propose an amendment after this substitute proposal is submitted to delete that one sentence. I would therefore suggest that the amendment proposed not be adopted.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

HEEN: The amendment that has just been offered to Section 1 does that very thing, to eliminate that paragraph that's really not necessary in that section; and then there's been a little refinement of language used there in the rest of the section. I think it is an improvement on the section as it was first drafted.

ROBERTS: I may agree with the senator that it's an improvement. I think if it's an improvement merely in language and style, I think that should be left to the Style Committee. It seems to me, after we have acted on an article which was carefully prepared and presented, which we have given thought and consideration to and studied, to submit an additional changed article on the floor which requires additional time and study and is a matter only of language, it should be left to the Style Committee. I agree that that one sentence "For the preparation of the budget" to the end of that sentence is unnecessary and I think should be deleted. I would favor its deletion and leave it to the Style Committee to see whether the proposed language is or is not preferable.

HOLROYDE: I agree that fundamentally all this does is exclude one sentence, but as the delegate said, it is an improvement in the language and if it's an improvement, let's vote for it.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

ROBERTS: May I make one further observation? We are dealing with a finance section, a pretty technical proposition. I don't believe that all the delegates are sure that this is merely a matter of style. I agree generally it appears that way. It seems to me a five or ten minute recess on a matter of a finance article is pretty slim time.

DELEGATE: Question.

FONG: I notice that this departs somewhat from the present operations of the legislature. I notice that in this budget there shall be two budgets, one is known as the operating and the other is known as the capital expenditure budget. Now may I ask, why is the capital expenditure budget submitted? For what purpose, may I ask?

WHITE: Is it what?

FONG: Why are you cutting this budget into two?

WHITE: Well, because the purpose of it is to separate the capital from the general appropriations bill so that under Section 2, which was passed the other night, you can act immediately on the general appropriations bill.

FONG: Now, is it for the purpose of probably retarding the legislature from asking for capital expenditures other than that proposed by the governor?

WHITE: Oh, no, not at all.

FONG: Would this tend to deter a legislator from asking for capital expenditures which may not be included in a governor's budget?

WHITE: All that this does is to require the governor to submit an over-all program, the budget being made up in two parts, one your general appropriation budget and the other your capital improvement budget. The purpose of the thing is to have it divided into two parts so that the general appropriations bill will be acted on first.

FONG: And in this capital expenditure budget, the governor will propose as to how that money -- where the money is coming from, whether it's from sale of bonds or whether it is from the revenues of the territory. Is that right?

WHITE: That's right, or whether new taxes will be required in order to fund it. In other words, he submits a program together with the plan of financing it. Now it's up to the legislature to either approve or disapprove of that plan or adopt any other appropriations that they want. It doesn't tie the hands of the legislature in any way.

FONG: Now, could you tell us as to how many jurisdictions have such a budget divided in this manner?

WHITE: No, I can't answer that question offhand, Mr. Fong, but it's a similar type of provision that is incorporated in the Model Constitution. They haven't spelled it out in two parts. They have dealt with the general appropriations bill in the same way and have also dealt with submitting an over-all financing program.

FONG: Then is it the intent of the committee that this budget divided into two parts, the operating budget and a capital expenditure budget, that the bills for these two items shall be passed first before any other expenditure -- any other bill may be passed dealing with appropriations?

WHITE: No, only the general appropriation bill.

FONG: It's all included in one?

WHITE: No. They are separate bills. That is the reason for submitting them in two parts. If you'll read paragraph two, it only refers to the bill covering operating expenses which will be -- to be known as the general appropriations bill.

FONG: Thank you.

ARASHIRO: It is my understanding that the way that the thing is worded here, "The budget shall be compiled in two parts, one of which shall set forth all operating expenditures," and then it continues saying that, as we go down the line it says, "set forth all capital improvements." Does that "all" have something to do with restricting the legislature?

TAVARES: That is in the original section; the wording is changed for that -- the wording is practically identical to what we approved in the original section, that part of it. There is nothing in here to restore any of the provisions which were knocked out in the debate which prohibits the legislature from changing any item in the -- in either -- in any of those bills. There is nothing to restore that. The only purpose was to refine the language a little bit, and not change the sense in any way.

ARASHIRO: What I'm referring to is that -- of course we have the power to change the figure from one fund to the other, but the thing is, when it says "all operating" that means we cannot appropriate new --

TAVARES: The word "all" means all that the governor can think of, but it doesn't mean all that the legislature can think of or that they want to put in. When we eliminated Section 3, which we are not trying to restore, we gave the legislature full power to do what it does today, disregard all or any part of what the governor has recommended and add anything they want to.

ARASHIRO: Will the committee have any objection in deleting the word "all" then?

TAVARES: Don't you want the governor to tell the legislature all of the things he wants to have them authorize spending? That is to give the legislature the information needed. They don't want the governor to send the budget in piecemeal. They want it all in.

HAYES: A point of information. It doesn't mean that the legislature has to pass everything the governor wants to do, does it? I think that is a question, that maybe he is --

WHITE: The governor submits the general appropriations bill and the legislature may amend it in any way that it wants by deleting items or adding items. The only requirement is that it pass the general appropriations bill first.

MAU: Much of this is purely legislative, like most of the proposals and -- but I think my voice is like a voice in the wilderness, but I just want to make that observation.

ROBERTS: I think we acted on this thing yesterday. We indicated our support for a submission of a budget which provides both operating and capital expenditures. We have supported that and I think it was good. There may be some legislative matters in there. I think it's good policy, however, and if we want it in the Constitution, we should have it in, and we so voted. I'm not against the proposal. I'm merely suggesting if it is a matter of style and drafting of language on a technical financial section, we have a number of the members who worked on this thing in the Style Committee. It will give us a little additional time to look it over and see if it is just a matter of style as is claimed, and I have no reason to doubt it. It seems to me, however, that the only action, in substance, is for the deletion of the words, "For the preparation of the budget, various departments, offices, and agencies shall furnish the governor such information in such form as he may require." I believe it should go out of that section.

HEEN: If we adopt this refinement of language here, it will save the Committee on Style a lot of trouble.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

SAKAKIHARA: Question.

CHAIRMAN: The question is the adoption of the proposed amendment to Section 1.

FONG: I notice that in this redraft of Section 1, the redraft does not state specifically that there will be two bills, although it says the budget shall be submitted in two parts. It also -- in Section 2 you will note that it refers to the general appropriations bill. Now, nothing in Section 1 differentiates between the operating budget and the capital expenditure budget. Now, how are you going to tie that in? What is the explanation?

WHITE: Delegate Fong, Section 1 reads that, "The governor shall also submit bills to authorize such proposed expenditures and for new or additional revenues or for borrowings by which the proposed expenditures are to be funded."

FONG: That's very true. Now, in Section 2 you talk about a general appropriations bill.

WHITE: That's because the bill covering all operating expenditures will be known as the general appropriations bill.

FONG: Where do you say that?

WHITE: Well, that's why we put it in Section 2, to make sure. We can insert in here -- you can insert it in Section 1 if you think it's necessary. "The budget shall be compiled in two parts, one of which will set forth all operating expenditures proposed for the ensuing fiscal period to be known as the general appropriations bill."

FONG: Well, I have your amendment to Section 2, I think that explains it all right.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

SAKAKIHARA: I wish to offer an amendment to the amendment. In the first paragraph, ending with line nine, commencing with the paragraph -- sentence, "The budget shall be compiled," I move that the same be deleted right down to "considered."

CHAIRMAN: Down to where, Delegate Sakakihara? Oh, to the end of the sentence, is that it?

SAKAKIHARA: End of the paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: I can't hear you, Delegate Sakakihara.

SAKAKIHARA: End of the paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: End of the paragraph. Is there any second to that motion? The motion is to delete the sentence beginning, "The budget shall be compiled in two parts" until the end of the paragraph. Any second? If not, the only motion before the committee is the adoption of the amendment proposed by Delegate White to Section 1. Are you ready for the question?

MAU: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You second the motion? The motion has been seconded that the phrase beginning, "The budget shall be compiled in two parts" until the end of the sentence be deleted. Is there any discussion? Question? All right. All those in favor --

HOLROYDE: It seems to me the deletion of that eliminates or is ineffective as far as the Section 2 is concerned. The idea for dividing that budget into two parts is so that the appropriation operating expenditure bill can be handled expeditiously. This way you have to combine both of them and it makes it a much more difficult problem.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the proposed amendment to the amendment, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The motion failed.

The motion before the committee is the adoption of the amendment. Are we ready for the question?

NEILSEN: I have an amendment that I'd like to introduce at this time. It will probably have to head the section of the proposal, so there might be renumbering necessary or something like that. I'll leave that to someone else. But the amendment is, "Property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules."

TAVARES: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

TAVARES: It's not germane to the subject.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Nielsen, will you finish reading your proposed amendment.

NIELSEN: "Property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules. All real property assessed and taxed locally or by the State for allotment and payment to taxing districts shall be assessed according to the same standard of value." I so move.

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

TAVARES: I submit the point of order that the amendment --

CHAIRMAN: Just one moment, Delegate Tavares. Did you make a motion for the adoption of that thing that you read NIELSEN: Well, I don't want this Section 1 to be adopted and then be told that Section 1 is already adopted and I can't introduce it.

CHAIRMAN: Well, perhaps the point of order may be now stated. What is your point of order?

TAVARES: I submit that this is an entirely new matter and should be submitted as an amendment to the entire proposal at any time before the entire proposal is adopted, and there is perfectly good opportunity after these sections are considered for the gentleman to offer that as amendment to the article.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the point is well taken, Delegate Nielsen. In other words the Chair feels, as stated by Delegate Tavares, that after we have considered the entire proposal, then if you desire to make that as an amendment to the proposal as Section 1—as I understand it, you want it before the beginning of this section—then all remaining sections will be numbered differently should the committee adopt your suggestion.

NIELSEN: All right, I'll withdraw the motion at this time.

CHAIRMAN: Therefore, the only motion before the committee at this time is the adoption of the amendment proposed by Delegate White. Are we ready for the question? All those in favor of the amendment please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The motion is carried.

HOLROYDE: I move Section 1 be adopted as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

NIELSEN: I move that Section 1 be amended as follows: "Property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules. All real property assessed and taxed locally or by the State for allotment and payment to taxing districts shall be assessed according to the same standard of value." I so move.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CROSSLEY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order.

CROSSLEY: I believe the same point of order as stated before now applies. This amendment that Delegate Nielsen is trying to make to Section 1 is not germane to that section at all.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Nielsen, it was the understanding of the Chair that you had withdrawn your amendment and that, pending the final adoption of the proposal, you would make your amendment. This present motion is now to adopt Section 1 as amended. It is still the same section.

NIELSEN: All right, I'll withdraw it at this time.

CHAIRMAN: Then are we ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: I now move that we reconsider our action on Section 2, Proposal 10.

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to reconsider action taken on Section 2, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Section 2 is before the committee.

CROSSLEY: I now move the adoption of Section 2.

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

WHITE: I would like to propose an amendment which has been presented to the various delegates reading: "Section 2, Legislative appropriation procedure. No appropriation bill, other than bills to cover the expenses of the legislature, shall be passed on final reading by either house until the bill authorizing operating expenditures for the ensuing fiscal period, to be known as the general appropriations bill, shall have been transmitted to the governor, unless the governor has recommended the immediate passage of such appropriation bill."

CROSSLEY: I second that motion for the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: We are discussing this amendment.

FONG: I move that the whole Section 2 be deleted from this proposal.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

FONG: The reason for asking the deletion of this Section 2 is that I feel that this section encroaches upon the prerogative of your legislature. Now all of you who have been in the legislature know that it takes from 40 to 50 days to pass your general appropriation bill. There is a lot of bickering. There is a lot of work to your general appropriation bill. Your appropriation bill carries a sum of around ninety to a hundred million dollars. I can foresee that within the next biennium probably your appropriation bill will be around a hundred million dollars. Now, you have various departments. You have all these departments. You have to call the department heads before you and the department heads come to the House of Representative and tell the House of Representative one story. The House passes it, it goes -- the same department head may go to the Senate, tell the Senate a story, and the Senate may have a different idea on the whole situation.

Now, in our legislative history we have found that sixty days are insufficient for us to really get down and work on an appropriation bill so that within the sixtieth day we could very well say we all agree to it. We have found out within the past few sessions that the appropriation bill has always been the last measure, and has always been the first measure which has been taken up by the Finance Committee of the House and the Ways and Means Committee of the Senate. Now you will note, for those of you who have been in the legislature, that the Finance Committee as its first project works on the appropriation bill. It keeps on working on the appropriation bill till almost the fortieth day of the session. The members of the Senate Finance Committee also work on their Ways and Means Committee bill, and they consume a lot of time, probably another thirty to forty days. Now that means that for thirty to forty days your whole session will be tied up.

This here, this section is put into the Constitution only for the purpose of holding down appropriations for some other project. The practical working of this section, if enacted, will mean that no other bill will be considered dealing with appropriations. No bill could be passed that carries an appropriation unless the governor says that he wants it. That means that you will only have probably ten days or twenty days out of a sixty day session to consider appropriation bills for other worthwhile projects, and I submit to this Convention that ten or twenty days for the discussion of other bills carrying appropriation for this whole Territory for a biennium is insufficient.

Our Legislative Committee will bring forth a provision stating that the session will be sixty days and that the appropriation session -- that the budget session will be only for thirty days. Now with the sixty day session, I cannot conceive of any legislature having sufficient time to pass other appropriation bills after they get through the appropriation bill of -- the general budget bill. So the only reason why this is put in that I can see in my experience in the legislature is to hog-tie your legislature so that they will not be able to pass any other bill dealing with appropriations. If they are able to pass any bill dealing with appropriations, the bills will be very, very few.

TAVARES: We have been all through this before and it's the same old argument. The argument is not correct, and I think we all understand that. There is nothing to prevent one house passing appropriations of -- other appropriation bills on third reading. The only thing is, whichever house has the final reading can't pass those bills on final reading, as was explained before, until this appropriations bill has gone through. We all know that the big fight on the appropriations bill comes on second reading when the committee reports come out. There is nothing to prevent any house from passing any bill on second reading and even on third reading so long as it is not the final reading. I submit that the reasons given originally for this section, which has not been changed except to add a definition of "appropriations bill" because we took it out of Section 1, the same argument that justified this delegation passing it the first time justifies it passing it this time.

MAU: In addition to the arguments made by the delegate from the fifth district in support of his motion, I repeat my same objections, Your Honor -- Mr. Chairman--

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

MAU: -- that this is purely legislative; this is an attempt to usurp some of the powers of the legislature; it is dictation to the legislature. It attempts to circumscribe the legislature within the sphere of financing the Territory -- the State. It seems to me that the methods of financing the State should be left entirely in the hands of the legislature.

SAKAKIHARA: As we have stated here the other night in Committee of the Whole and strenuously opposed Section 2 in its original form, Section 2 is a mere duplication of that section. I am strongly in opposition to Section 2 as worded here. We are having the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions reporting out a committee proposal providing for an annual budgetary session, confining its work primarily to budgetary session. Now comes the Committee on Taxation and Finance and says to the legislative branch of the government, "You shall pass no appropriation bill other than that submitted to you by the governor in two parts."

I [wonder] whether many of the delegates here who have not had experience in the legislature [realize] what hardship it means to the members of the legislature to work on a budget. Oftentimes it takes between 30 and 45 days for the appropriation bill to pass the legislature. And yet the executive branch of the government will tell the legislature, "You shall pass no law pertaining to appropriations unless you have passed and transmitted to this department a general appropriations bill and capital expenditure bill." Who elects the legislature? The people who elected -- the same people who elected the governor of Hawaii. Certainly it is an encroachment upon the privilege and the prerogatives of the legislature.

I wonder, and I am getting very suspicious of the movants, why they are so concerned to see that the general appropriations bill and the capital expenditure bills pass the legislature first. Certainly, the movants must be prompted by some reason unknown to those who stand between centralized government and the people's in this Constitutional Convention. There has been moved here time and again, when the Committee of the Whole tried to elect officers, "No, no, we want you to centralize the power in one man, this great governor, whoever he may be, the governor of the State of Hawaii. We do not trust you to select the department heads or the principal department executives who shall be appointed by the governor with the confirmation of the Senate."

I submit that this Section 2, which encroaches upon the rights of the legislative branch of government, should not be enacted. And I urge upon you, some of you who may be aspiring for legislative offices in the future years to come, when we are a state, you will regret to say that you have taken part in this Convention, that you have taken part in this Convention to incorportate this section, a very vicious section, in your Constitution by mandating your legislature that you shall do this and you cannot do that unless you have first passed the appropriation bills as submitted to you by this great dictator, the governor of Hawaii.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to speak only briefly to this point. I am one of those who has had some experience in the legislature and I am speaking in favor of the amendment. I do not see any place in here a centralization of power. It doesn't say that the governor has any special powers under this section. It simply says that the appropriation bill, as I read this section, will no longer be the political football that it has always been, that is, held up until the last day, the last hours until everything also has been squeezed out that those who want to squeeze can do. It would help a great deal if this bill could be expedited and pushed out ahead.

Now, nor will it hold up the work of the other finance bills. There is nothing at all, as Delegate Tavares pointed out awhile ago, to hold up the work on other finance bills. They can go ahead, they can even pass one house. The only thing they can't do is they can't pass final reading, can't be adopted by both houses, and the work can progress, and as a matter of fact, in my estimation and from my experience, it will progress much faster.

H. RICE: In 1947 we had a House 15-15. It didn't hold back the appropriation bill because we introduced the appropriation bill in the Senate at that time knowing that they were deadlocked in the House and we went along. There is no reason the appropriation bill shouldn't be introduced in both houses at the same time. I think we want to be fair with our new chief executive, whoever he is, as the governor of the fifthieth State of Hawaii. He shouldn't have a lot of bills coming up with cash and have a run against the treasury before the departments are well cared for, and I know from my past experience. In the twenty-four years I was in the Senate I always sat on the Ways and Means Committee, and I want to tell you they could have put that bill out in thirty days if they had put their shoulders to it. And we would have been in better financial shape maybe today if they had done it that way.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question or is there any further discussion? All those in favor of the motion to delete the proposed amendment please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. I believe the --

FONG: We ask for a show of -- ask for a roll call.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a sufficient number for roll call? It's sufficient. Roll call is demanded. Madam Clerk, please call the roll. The amendment is -- the motion is to delete Section 2 as proposed in this amendment.

Ayes, 22. Noes, 35 (Akau, Anthony, Apoliona, Arashiro, Bryan, Castro, Cockett, Corbett, Crossley, Dowson, Heen, Holroyde, Kage, Kam, Kanemaru, Kawakami, Kellerman, King, Kometani, Lai, Larsen, Mau, Mizuha, Porteus, H. Rice, Richards, Roberts, Shimamura, Smith, Tavares, A. Trask, White, Wist, Woolaway, and Lee). Not voting, 6 (Gilliland, Loper, Phillips, C. Rice, Sakai, Wirtz).

CHAIRMAN: The motion failed.

The question before the committee is the adoption of the amendment. Is there any further discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the adoption of Section 2 signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it.

CROSSLEY: I now move the adoption of Section 2 as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is to adopt Section 2 as amended. Is there any further discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Motion is carried. Section 2 as amended is now approved.

KING: I would like to make the pro forma motion that we now adopt the proposal as amended and then give Mr. Nielsen an opportunity to make his proposal.

CHAIRMAN: Any second?

KING: I so move.

NIELSEN: I wish to make the following amendment to Section 1 -- no, Section 9 would be a better place for it, I believe, Section 9 "Property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules. All real property assessed and taxed locally or by the State for allotment and payment to taxing districts shall be assessed according to the same standard of values."

May I speak on this?

CHAIRMAN: Wait, there has to be a motion.

SILVA: I second that motion.

CROSSLEY: Point of order.

HOLROYDE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Crossley, state your point.

CROSSLEY: Section 9 had already been voted upon. Therefore, if this new amendment is to be added to Section 9, I suggest to the movant that we vote on the section, then find the place for it.

NIELSEN: That's all right to do that.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the point is well taken. You could call it 9A if you desire or something along that line, to propose a new section called 9A.

NIELSEN: I agree to that.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that a new section called Section 9A be added to the proposal. Now I'm not sure whether the members of the committee understand the proposed amendment. Have the members received copies of the amendment?

NIELSEN: The amendment is on everyone's desk. May I talk on it for a minute or two?

CHAIRMAN: I'd like to have one of those amendments so that I might follow. The Chair doesn't have a copy. Please proceed, Delegate Nielsen. Go ahead.

NIELSEN: The reason for introducing this is that this is a taxation bill and I don't see anywhere a thing to protect the taxpayer or that the taxation assessments shall be equal or the same standards of values shall be used in making these assessments. I think that that is certainly a constitutional provision that we should have in the Constitution.

TAVARES: When the committee originally was discussing the proposal, it had a tentative provision along the same line. However, it was called to the attention of the committee by the Attorney General's Office that there is no such provision in our Hawaiian Organic Act. And yet I can say, I believe, without fear of successful contradiction that the Territory of Hawaii today has the finest and most equitable state-wide assessment law for real property in the United States without exception, and we didn't have to have it in our Organic Act to make us do that.

In the first place, we have in the United States Constitution and in the Bill of Rights, which we have already adopted, a provision requiring equal protection of the laws, and if any assessment system goes very much out of line -- substantially out of line so as to produce an inequality, it will be knocked out as most -- many tax laws have been knocked out on the basis of violating the equal protection of the laws clause of the Constitution. You can have reasonable classification, but the classification must be backed up by sound grounds which absolutely justify any discrimination, and attempts to unduly discriminate in that respect don't need such a clause other than the equal protection clauses of our own Bill of Rights and the United States Constitution. And, therefore, I consider it unnecessary and it was finally left out for that reason.

ROBERTS: I'd like to suggest that we give very serious consideration to this article. The only argument so far presented against it is that we don't need it, that we have been well taken care of under the Organic Act. We are writing a new Constitution. We are writing a Constitution to protect the State of Hawaii and its people. This section is not a section unfounded in state constitutions. I suggest that the State of New Jersey, which recently revised its Constitution, placed that article as the first paragraph in its article on taxation and finance. They thought it was important. They gave very careful consideration and study to those problems as well. I think we ought to consider this.

Since, however, it is a new idea thrust upon the Convention, I would suggest that we have a little further discussion on this problem and see where the merits lie. On first look at this thing, it conforms fairly well to some other state constitutions. It deals with a very specific problem with regard to the general laws and application by uniform rules which is protected now, which has been the practice. In writing a constitution, you want to put certain good practice, if it is fundamental, into our Constitution. I can personally see no objection to putting it in, unless I hear some further argument to the contrary.

NIELSEN: May I answer? I want to take exception to Delegate Tavares' remark that things have been perfect under the Organic Act. I come from the small district of Kona, but I can show you coffee land where there is simply a street between it or a highway, the same value of land both sides of the highway, and one is assessed at $50 an acre and the other at $100. I can show you plenty of instances where things are not equal and the standard value is not maintained.

TAVARES: In answer to that I have only to say this. Our present laws require equalization, and if those properties are not equalized, the only reason for it is that the owners are too lazy or unwilling to go into the Tax Appeal Court and the court and get justice. The only reason for that is not the defect of the law but the defect of enforcement, which can't be taken care of anyway even under a Constitution unless people are willing to go in and protect their rights.

And furthermore, I'd like to say one more thing. There isn't one state in the United States that has the state-wide system of assessment that we have and that is the real justification of requiring that in the State Constitution. New Jersey has counties, I'm sure, that have separate assessment setups. We have a state-wide setup that comes from the very operation of things. The same group making the assessment must come a lot closer to an equalized assessment that any state can, and that is another reason why it isn't necessary.

H. RICE: I would just like to ask the last speaker a question. Don't you think, Delegate Tavares, if you had something like this it might have helped you get the values of the ranch lands on Hawaii on an equal basis with Maui?

TAVARES: I don't think so because it was just a matter of going into court and getting it settled. And if that had been sufficiently unequal to require such a uniformity, it could have been held unconstitutional under the equal protection of the laws clause.

But actually a clause like this might actually cause trouble between counties. I think if we draw a clause like this, we may have to draw some exceptions to it, and it will take a lot more study, as I think Delegate Roberts pointed out, to study the impact of that on our own laws.

I say this, and as I say I've been associated with the tax laws for some time, I don't contend that they are perfect. I don't contend they operate perfectly. I do contend that the system is a system which can be made to operate more nearly perfectly and does operate more nearly perfectly than any state of the Union because of our state-wide system of assessment by one centralized assessing group which can't be done in the various states because they have an assessor for every county or an assessor for every district under separate control, and they try to get equalization by a state board of equalization which must take appeals up first. But here we do the equalization in the first instance by having the same people do it all over the territory.

WHITE: I would just like to add that the problem that I think Mr. Nielsen - - that Delegate Nielsen raises here is one of administration and there isn't anything that you could put in the Constitution that would correct that. Any provision that you put in here would still require good administration to make sure that you are having equitable assessment.

NIELSEN: May I answer that? This will require that the legislature pass laws regarding taxation that are equitable to all the people.

SHIMAMURA: The only argument so far I've heard against this section is the fact that it's not necessary. Is there any objection to that section itself as such?

FONG: This morning we argued a lot about the general laws. I noticed Mr. Tavares arguing like anything that we should have a general law dealing with public lands. Now here we have the same situation, general laws of taxation. What's the difference?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. The Chair might say "touche'."

SAKAKIHARA: I don't see any harm in adopting this resolution. It gives a constitutional guarantee to every property owner in the future State of Hawaii.

TAVARES: There is a further defect in this proposition, and that is, "taxed locally" seems to imply that we have a local taxing power, which we don't have, and until and unless we insert that in the county or local government section, I think this might be an implied recognition of taxing power by local jurisdictions. That is why I say we can't adopt this thing. If the delegates here want to adopt it, it calls for little more careful study.

SHIMAMURA: I'm wondering as to the meaning of "taxing districts" and also as to "the same standard of value." I am in favor of this proposed section in principle, but I'm wondering as to the meaning of certain words, as I've said.

WHITE: I would just like to say that I think I express the views of the committee that we wouldn't have any objection to the insertion of a clause that carried out the intent of Delegate Nielsen's amendment here, or proposal, except that I think that it would have to be corrected. We had a provision almost identical with this, but left it out because we were advised that it was unnecessary and we were trying to save some space in the Constitution. If this section were amended to read, "Property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules. All real property assessed and taxed shall be assessed according to the same standard of value," I would see no objection to including it in the proposal.

NIELSEN: I would be glad to accept - -

CHAIRMAN: You are willing to accept the - -

NIELSEN: I'd be glad to accept that amendment.

ANTHONY: I've got an amendment here which I'd like to suggest, if it's satisfactory to the committee and Delegate Nielsen. The change is to reduce the proposed amendment to one sentence. Insert the word "all" before the word "property," and then at the end of the word "rules" in the first sentence, insert the words "and standards." That sentence would then read as follows: "All property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules and standards." I don't see how the chairman on taxation would have any objection to it. It seems to me it accomplishes what Delegate Nielsen is talking about and certainly is fair and equitable to everybody.

NIELSEN: Can I ask you a question? Would the "standards" mean "standards of value"?

ANTHONY: That is correct.

NIELSEN: Well, I'd be glad to accept that amendment.

ANTHONY: If that's acceptable to the Convention, I'll make it in the form of a motion, that Committee Proposal No. 1 [i.e. 10], Section 1 be amended to read as follows. Nine, is it 9, Mr. Chairman?

LARSEN: 9A.

CHAIRMAN: It's a new section called 9A.

WHITE: Better call it 9A and let the Style Committee work it out.

ANTHONY: Let Section 9A be added to read as follows: "9A. All property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules and standards."

CHAIRMAN: Did you make that in the form of a motion, Mr. Anthony? Did you second it, Delegate Nielsen?

NIELSEN: I'll second the motion.

TAVARES: I am sorry that I cannot say that I am satisfied as yet with this provision. It may be that the gentlemen proposing the amendment have in mind the questions in my mind and they are settled in their minds. But unfortunately I am not sure of the effect of this clause on taxing of incomes and various other types of, in a sense, property, and I think it deserves a little study. What effect does a provision like this, without something on income taxes, have on our right to have different rates of income taxes on different amounts of income and various other things?

ANTHONY: May I answer that question? This does not relate to the income tax. This relates to property taxes only.

TAVARES: I'll ask the gentleman if the first income tax law passed by the United States was not thrown out because it wasn't apportioned according to population.

ANTHONY: That is right. That's because of the prohibition in the Federal Constitution, all taxes shall be apportioned among several states. It required the Sixteenth Amendment. We have no such prohibition. This amendment relates only to property taxes. It has nothing to do with either income or gross income.

TAVARES: Well, I can't vote for this without more study. I'm sorry but I can't without looking that provision up myself know whether it means that.

MIZUHA: Under this proposal it is well that several questions be settled in order to avoid litigation in the future. First of all, will the provision for general laws provide for a different system of taxation of the properties of our public utilities? I would like to ask the proponent of that amendment that question. Will the phrase, "general laws" and "uniform rules and standards" permit a different rate of taxation for the properties of our public utilities?

ANTHONY: Under existing law, as the delegate probably knows, property taxes are not assessed against public utility. However, to answer his hypothetical question, there certainly could be a reasonable classification putting all property of a utility in one classification and taxing that upon a particular standard which should apply to every utility in the territory. At the present time, they are not subject to real property taxes. They pay five per cent on the gross income, in lieu of property taxes.

MIZUHA: Under the present taxation laws of this territory, various counties are allotted a certain amount that they could raise from real property taxation. And the value - - assessed valuation of those properties in the various counties may differ, and as a result, the amounts allotted by the Territorial legislature by statute. In order for the various counties to raise the money or the ceiling they are allotted, when they compute the rate per thousand, some counties have to pay $28 per thousand on assessed valuation, other counties may have to pay $36 per thousand. Will this provision in the Constitution prevent that system of assessment?

CHAIRMAN: Would you care to answer that, Delegate Shimamura?

SHIMAMURA: Well, that's the same query I had. What does the word "standard" exactly mean? Does it include rates?

CHAIRMAN: Well, there was one question that was put by Delegate Mizuha. Perhaps Delegate Anthony might answer that.

ANTHONY: This proposed amendment does not go to the subject of rates. In other words, I think under this proposed amendment, there still could be a general rate established for the Island of Kauai in which the uniform standard and regulation for assessments would be applicable. In other words, they would still have the same degree of flexibility as to rates, in my judgment.

MIZUHA: Then it is contemplated that the phrase "uniform rules and standards" are not applicable to rates for the various counties.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

TAVARES: I think the delegates can see that there are questions here. As a matter of fact, other states, I believe, are under the impression—I haven't had time to check it—have declared the income taxes unconstitutional. A note that I read here in one of the books I just hastily looked at says that the first federal income tax law was declared unconstitutional because the Court held that a tax on the income from land was a tax on the land. And I think it's well worth studying, if we are going to take up this new point, before we pass it. I therefore move to defer this section until - -

CHAIRMAN: Later on?

TAVARES: Later on.

ANTHONY: This has nothing to do with income taxes. If the delegate thinks that it does, insert the word, "real property" in front - - "real" in front of "property." The difficulty with the income tax act of 1895 was that it was a direct tax not apportioned among the several states and it ran squarely afoul of the prohibition in the Federal Constitution, thus requiring the Sixteenth Amendment to validate the income tax. Now we needn't get bogged down on whether or not we are dealing with income taxes. We are not, here.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, Delegate Anthony, in order to obviate that possible doubt, you are willing to amend your proposed amendment to read, "All real properties - -"

ANTHONY: "All real properties."

CHAIRMAN: "- - shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules and standards." Is that agreeable to you, Delegate Nielsen? Delegate Nielsen, Delegate Anthony has proposed the amendment to obiviate a possible doubt as to the construction of what "property" means, to add the word "real" before "property."

NIELSEN: Well, that's what I had in mind, was real property.

CHAIRMAN: Well, that's agreeable to you then?

NIELSEN: If you want it spelled out, that's agreeable to me. And I might say further that so far as the rates of the different counties, the rate has nothing to do with this. This is so that the property will be assessed uniformly in the counties and according to rules and standards that are the same regardless of who owns it. The little fellow can't go to the Tax Appeal Court when he owns five acres of coffee land, so he just pays through the nose.

TAVARES: One more statement and I'm going to be silent. I am still not satisfied that what the delegate from the fourth district has said is necessarily correct. I have a great deal of respect for his learning and judgment, but I am not satisfied as to the result of the effect of this provision on real property of a public utility. I am not satisfied that we won't be held to require - - to be required to tax public utilities on an ad valorem basis instead of as we do now on a combined tax which takes care of and is in lieu of property taxes. It's a gross income tax in lieu of property taxes, and real property of utilities is not taxed at all today. I am not satisfied that this amendment won't have some effect on that.

A. TRASK: We also have great respect for the learning of Delegate Tavares and I second his motion for deferment. I think if he, of all people, has any doubt about it, I think we should accede to him.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made to defer action on the new section, entitled Section 9A.

KING: I request a short recess of about five minutes or ten minutes.

CHAIRMAN: Before the putting the motion to defer?

ANTHONY: Will the President yield for a moment? I was wondering if we could tentatively agree upon that. Then if the lawyers can settle the question in the meantime, well and good, and if in the meantime we have not agreed upon it, let's all agree that we will move to reconsider it. Would that be satisfactory to the delegate?

KING: If we take a recess then the lawyers could discuss it and withdraw the motion to defer. I request a short recess from five to ten minutes at the order of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: Short recess, subject to call of the Chair.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The question before the committee is 9A. There is a motion to adopt 9A.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: In fairness - - Are we ready? In fairness to Mr. Tavares - -

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Well, I recognize Mr. Tavares.

TAVARES: One more short statement and I'll be through, and if the gentlemen want to vote on this sight unseen, it's all right with me. There is one provision here. On page 234 of the Legislative Manual, there is this statement: "In Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and Washington, however, court decisions have prohibited graduated income taxes or classification of property, holding that such measures violated the uniformity clause." Until I have read those decisions and know what this means, I cannot vote for this provision.

SAKAKIHARA: In all fairness to the delegate from the fourth district, I move that we defer action on proposal - - amendment offered by Delegate Nielsen.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion is made for deferral of this thing. Any discussion? All in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

H. RICE: I move the committee rise now and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Before putting that motion, I might say to the Committee of the Whole that deciding this question of 9A will probably settle this proposal. You heard the motion. All those in favor of - -

BRYAN: I wonder if it wouldn't be wise to change that motion to authorize the chairman to begin preparation of his Committee of the Whole report.

CHAIRMAN: Well, your chairman will begin working on it without any authorization. All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

JUNE 23, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole come to order. I believe we were discussing a proposed amendment offered by Delegate Nielsen entitled Section 9A. Delegate Tavares was discussing the amendment, and I believe the committee had deferred the action on Section 9A, and I wonder whether Delegate Tavares would like to report to the committee at this time on his finding.

TAVARES: While some of the members were enjoying themselves at cocktails yesterday, I spent between two and three hours, which is all the time I had available, looking up as much law on this subject as I could find. This was the result of my studies. I found that there is no unanimity in the state courts as to the meaning of clauses of this type providing for equality in assessment or taxation. I did not have time to do what a lawyer should do to give a final opinion and that is read every decision interpreting the various constitutional provisions. I was only able to read general texts like Cooley on Taxation, which all lawyers recognize as a leading authority, and American Jurisprudence which is one of the two great law encyclopedias. The result of my study was this.

Under the Federal Constitution, the provision requiring equal protection of the laws, it is uniformly held that taxpayers are protected both against a statute which in its terms unduly discriminates against any class or group of taxpayers without a reasonable ground for classification and against an improper administration of a good law which is so unequally administered as to produce a gross inequality between people in the same class. It seems to me, therefore, that the Federal Constitution, upon which by the way we have built our entire tax structure, is ample to cover both of the angles which Delegate Nielsen wanted covered, namely, an unconstitutional law on its face or an unconstitutional unequal application of a good law, and putting such a provision in our Constitution would not obviate the necessity of going to court anyhow to see that it was properly administered. But I'd like to read, if I may, from two of the texts.

CHAIRMAN: As a point of information, Delegate Tavares, you are pointing to the clause assessing real property, "under general laws." Do you object to the phrase "under general laws" or the phrase, "by uniform rules and standards" or to the entire - -

TAVARES: "According to uniform rules and standards" is a dangerous provision. Here is what American Jurisprudence says—I'll give you the citation, Volume 51 of American Jurisprudence, pp. 522-523—in Section 520 under the heading, "Equality and uniformity," under the title "Taxation." After saying that it is a universally accepted principle of taxation that taxes should be levied with equality and uniformity and so forth, it goes on to say this, and I quote: "Many of the state constitutions contain express requirements of equality and uniformity or proportionality. In these states, according to one view, the legislature is bound to tax all property within its jurisdiction, and therefore cannot grant any exemptions unless the power to do so is expressly reserved in the constitution, but this rule is not enforced with literal exactness." Then there is another line of state decisions that says you can have limited exemptions and you can classify. But the point I make is that in the textbooks themselves, it indicates the courts are not uniform and one line of decisions actually says that that kind of a provision might prevent you from leaving out of taxation, and I say here it might prevent you from leaving out of assessment for taxation under this provision one class of property, such as, as I pointed out, the public utility lands which are not taxed now under real property tax law because there is a tax in lieu of property taxes on their gross income. And in view of that lack of uniformity, I think it would be very dangerous.

We've got a house here; we have built on the firm rock of the provision of the Federal Constitution requiring equal protection of the laws. The foundation is firm. We are going to now cut that foundation and stick a new foundation under it and we don't know whether it will fit or not.

Now, Cooley on Taxation has substantially the same thing. If the gentlemen would like me to read it, I will also read the citation from Cooley. But Cooley again points out this lack of uniformity in the interpretation of this section and the danger that some courts hold. The court might hold that you can't classify.

ANTHONY: I wonder if the speaker would yield to a question.

CHAIRMAN: I believe you will yield to a question, Delegate Tavares?

TAVARES: Certainly.

ANTHONY: Has there been any decision discovered in which the provision of uniformity is clearly designated and refers to real property and the court has held that that prevents a graduated income tax? What I have in mind is, I think those statutes do not differentiate between taxes generally and taxes against real property. I think that is the first thing to clarify here.

TAVARES: That is the trouble, Mr. Chairman. I think, I think, I think, I don't know, so I'm not saying I know. I don't think this committee - - this delegation ought to go on, I think, I think. I haven't had time to go into the decisions, but I do say that under a general tax law, they have held this. And, therefore, I say under a special tax law, you may not be able to have exemptions from the real property tax as you have today, unless you make these specific exemptions in your statutes, which was what we had to start with. And we deleted it because we got so bogged down with exceptions, "except that we can have exemptions for this and exemptions for that." We finally took the whole thing out on the theory, as the Attorney General's Office advised us, that there was ample protection in the Federal Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Anthony?

ANTHONY: No, that does not. I just wanted an answer to a simple question as to whether that sort of provision applied where there is a constitutional requirement of uniformity relating to assessment of real property taxes.

TAVARES: I have found none that particularly have that specific language. But in two hours I couldn't find it, and I don't know whether there is one or not.

CHAIRMAN: Any questions from the committee? Any further discussion?

ROBERTS: I was one of the individuals yesterday who asked to defer discussion on this. I think there are some doubts as to whether or not the uniformity section might later prevent us from putting in certain types of taxes which the courts might construe as being improper because they were not uniform in application, such as, possibly an inheritance tax or graduated income tax. I believe unless we feel pretty sure that the article is safe, I would suggest that we not have it in our Constitution.

TAVARES: One more thought. I noticed in the Model Constitution they have no provision whatsoever of this type of uniformity because I think they have had too much trouble with it.

NIELSEN: In the judicial interpretation of this tax clause, which is taken from the New Jersey Constitution, the statement is made [The Governor's Committee on Preparatory Research for the New Jersey Constitution Convention]:

> Even under the present Constitution, class taxation is valid so long as there is compliance with the classification rule that all reasonably within the class are included; that uniformity prevails throughout the whole class; and that the property is taxed at true value.

I think that answers the question of Mr. Anthony. Also I would like to quote this from it:

> But classification must be of property according to its characteristics, or the use to which it is put, and not according to the status of the owner, or the mere incidence of location of the property. Consistent with the right of classification is the Legislature's power to prescribe different rates of tax for different classes of property, provided, always, that there is rate uniformity within each class. Because real and personal property, in legal contemplation, belong to different classes, a tax law may constitutionally affect one without affecting the other.

So it could be very easily interpreted by the legislature, and uniform rules and standards can be maintained. [Tape inaudible. He said he was willing that the provision should apply only to real property, but he wanted to have it included in the taxation structure so that there would be something said about taxation to the effect that it would be fair to all.]

ANTHONY: I don't think that we should arbitrarily reject Mr. Nielsen's amendment because of some general statement by Cooley on Taxation, that this might possibly present a constitutional difficulty. We have to see the statute that he refers to and see whether or not it is the kind of a statute that we are talking about here. Now we can make this perfectly clear, that it applies only to real estate. That being so, it cannot apply to the income tax, either gross or net, and the report can so state. It can also be made abundantly clear in the report that there can be reasonable classifications so that when there is a public utilities gross income tax which imposes a five per cent on the net in lieu of property taxes, you will take the public utilities off the tax rolls for purpose of assessment. The principle is perfectly clear. All we have to do is to make up our mind whether or not we want to put a provision in the Constitution for equality of assessment with respect to real property. If we do, let us vote on it. Let's not be fearful about the thing because of some possible state interpretations of statutes whose text we do not have and which it is not the intention of this body to be bound by.

SHIMAMURA: The New Jersey Constitution doesn't have the words "and standards." May I ask the proposer of this amendment, the delegate from Hawaii, if he has any serious objection to the deletion of the words, "and standards" and have it as the New Jersey Constitution has it and end with the words, "general law and uniform rule"?

NIELSEN: No, I accepted that amendment because Mr. White said he would go along with that change. That's the reason for that. It was Mr. Anthony who suggested it, I believe, and I think the interpretation is all right.

SHIMAMURA: I realize what Mr. Anthony feels. Does he mean that he consents to the deletion of the words "and standards"?

CHAIRMAN: No, the answer was that the words "and standards" were added. It was acceptable to him because he didn't see anything wrong with the addition. That was his answer.

SHIMAMURA: If I may speak a few moments longer. I think the deletion of the words "and standards" makes it ambiguous. If you leave it as now approved, I think it makes it less ambiguous.

WHITE: I'd like to ask Mr. Anthony a question, seeing that he favors this amendment. The words, "Real property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws," wouldn't that be mandatory, that the real property of public utilities would have to be assessed unless you specifically exempt it?

ANTHONY: The way that could be handled is to recast this sentence and say:

> Such real property which is assessed for taxation purposes shall be assessed according to general laws.

That would accomplish what Delegate Nielsen has in mind and would very specifically and clearly permit the classification of such real property according to general laws, general classifications such as real estate of charitable institutions, real estate of public utilities. What the delegate is trying to get in the Constitution, and I see no harm in it, is a simple, clear statement that there shall be equality of assessment as to that real property which is in fact being assessed. It certainly poses no difficulty as to net income or gross income tax. I don't feel seriously one way or another about it but apparently the delegate from Hawaii seems to think there has been some abuse and I can see no harm to it.

WHITE: I don't think anybody has any fault with the intention of the thing. Our concern revolves around the question of whether it is going to be possible to operate under it. I had one further question that I wanted to ask Mr. Anthony and that is whether our present system of taxation on real property, under which we use the Somers System where the corner piece of property is taxed at a different rate than the piece right next door, would fall within the definition of the "same standard of value." I think that is a very serious question as to whether that would fall within that.

CHAIRMAN: Well, didn't Delegate Anthony say it was just a question of reasonable classification?

WHITE: No, he said according to uniform rules and according to the same standard of value. My own -- I'd just like to say that this committee started working with this in the first week of April and we struggled with it until about the fifteenth of May and we finally threw up our hands and decided we couldn't write a provision that was going to cover every situation that we had in the territory here today, and that we therefore better leave it out of the Constitution and leave it to our legislature to pass necessary statutory laws.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau has been seeking recognition, unless you are yielding to Delegate Anthony.

MAU: I was just wondering how the amendment now reads.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment as it now stands before the committee reads as follows: "All real property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules and standards."

MAU: One question as to the amendment. As I understood it, Delegate Anthony interpreted it to read that under that section, the legislature may make reasonable classification.

CHAIRMAN: That's what I - - the Chair understood.

MAU: That's correct.

NIELSEN: Could Mr. Anthony read that suggested change a little slower so I can get it down.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the only thing before the committee is this amendment that has been proposed, and you - - Delegate Anthony did not make it as a motion. All right.

ANTHONY: I think we are wasting a lot of time here. I don't thing that with this proposed amendment the delegate from Hawaii will accomplish anything different than under existing law, and I was wondering if he wouldn't be content to withdraw the proposed amendment so we could go on. I think under existing law the thing he is driving at is mandated under the statutes. It's just a question of enforcement. Apparently the committee feels rather strongly about this. I'm not persuaded that their fears are well-founded, but I would suggest to the delegate, even though I supported him, that he withdraw his amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Well, your point is this that under the equal protection of the laws, that same interpretation of equal protection of the laws would be applied in this section. Is that your point, Delegate Anthony?

ANTHONY: That's correct. [one sentence inaudible] All the objectives can be accomplished under the present Bill of Rights and under the existing statutes.

NIELSEN: The existing statutes are unfair. You take the statute on exemption where part of the building is used to live in, that part is charged to you in taxes the same as the commercial end of your building. I don't think that is fair. If you have home exemption, it shouldn't make any difference whether you live upstairs, downstairs, in back of your store, or where you live. You are entitled to home exemption the same as anyone else. I think that we could get a short sentence included in the Constitution. It would then be up to the tax commissioner and the legislature to maintain uniformly the standard value of tax assessment and also exemptions. That is the reason I would like to see something in the Constitution to this effect.

TAVARES: I want to say that the Attorney General's Office is sincerely disturbed over this proposed provision. Furthermore, I want to say that if the proposed addition by Delegate Nielsen has the effect he claims for it, its effect will be to prevent classification rather than permit it, and actually, all exemptions are likely to go out and all other classifications. If it means what he says it means, then I say let's not have it because the legislature won't even be able to classify the way it does today. It goes too far if that is what it means.

CHAIRMAN: Well, are we ready for the question or ready for discussion? All right. The question before the committee is whether or not Section 9A shall be added to the proposal, Section 9A reading as follows: "All real property shall be assessed for taxation under general laws and by uniform rules and standards." All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The noes have it. The motion failed.

The matter before the committee is the adoption of the proposal as amended.

WHITE: This isn't an amendment to the proposal, but I think it is something that should go into our committee report and I'd just like to explain it because I think it has some importance. On page 2 of Committee Report No. 24, which is the report of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Laws, Section 4 reads that "The debts and liabilities of the Territory of Hawaii shall be assumed and paid by the State of Hawaii and all debts owed to said Territory of Hawaii shall be collected by said State." Now, it seems to me that that ought to be expanded to include any acts of the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii authorizing the issuance of bonds by the Territory or its several counties also, because there are acts of the legislature that have already been taken and there may be bonds already printed and ready for issuance, and I would like to suggest that this addition be incorporated in the committee report for the purpose of calling it to the attention of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law. I could turn this over to the Clerk to incorporate in the record or I could read the whole thing.

> Ordinance Regarding Debts. All acts of the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii authorizing the issuance of bonds by the Territory, or its several counties, are hereby approved, subject, however, to amendment or repeal by the legislature, and bonds may be issued by the State of Hawaii and its several counties, pursuant to said acts. Whenever in said acts the approval of the President of the United States or of the Congress of the United States is required, the approval of the governor of the State of Hawaii shall suffice.

DOI: I move that it be incorporated into the record.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no objection, will you turn that over to the messenger to have it incorporated.

Delegate Arashiro, did you seek recognition or didn't you seek recognition? You are recognized if you seek recognition.

ARASHIRO: I move that the committee reconsider the action taken in adopting the amended form of Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 10.

CHAIRMAN: Your motion is made to reconsider action taken on Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 10.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of reconsideration of the action taken on Section 2 say "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt. Perhaps if you might - -

ARASHIRO: The change won't be much except that the last - -

WHITE: Point of order. As I recall, Mr. Arashiro voted in the negative on this.

ARASHIRO: I voted for it. I am for it in principle, and I want this, except that I do not believe in the principle of the last sentence where it reads "unless the governor has recommended the immediate passage of such appropriation bill." I don't think the governor should have this power over the legislature, and that is the reason I want to make a change to that so it will read, "unless the legislature by two-thirds vote of both houses shall recommend such appropriation bills." This will not change the main thinking, only a matter of principle.

H. RICE: I went over this with Delegate Arashiro this morning. If you are the business manager of a concern, you are the one that is supposed to suggest the changes that are necessary, and in this case it is our chief executive who suggests changes, and I think it ought to stand the way it is.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the Chair finds itself in this position. A motion has been made to reconsider and the Chair is in doubt as to the vote, so in order to resolve that doubt, I ask all those in favor of the motion to reconsider, please raise your right hand. Will someone count? Opposed. The motion failed.

I have here Miscellaneous Communication No. 106 which was referred to the Committee of the Whole considering Taxation and Finance. This is a letter from Stanley Miyamoto, Chairman of Joint Tax Study Committee, addressed to Mr. King, which was referred to this committee. "Enclosed please find a statement relative to the debt limitation clause in our proposed Constitution. Your consideration of the enclosed statement will be greatly appreciated. We have made enough copies to be distributed to the Convention delegates." Have all the delegates received the communication?

KING: Copies were delivered at the beginning of the discussion on the amendment to Section 10 of the current proposal, and the communication will be acknowledged and be placed in the files with the discussion on this particular proposal.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no further discussion then, are we ready for the main question? The question is the adoption of Proposal No. 10 as amended. All those in - -

J. TRASK: I have an amendment, and I do not know whether this is an amendment to a section or if it is a new section. I'm inclined to think it is a new section and it's in regard to the retirement system. I believe the delegates - -

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman, the amendment is on your desk.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, I noticed this, but I didn't notice anyone standing up to propose it.

J. TRASK: Well, I didn't think you were ready to put the question, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: You are in order, Delegate Trask.

J. TRASK: I move that we tentatively adopt this amendment. Whether it should be a new section or added to another section, that could be left entirely up to Style.

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

SAKAKIHARA: What is the amendment?

J. TRASK: An amendment to Committee Proposal No. 10, that, "There shall be a retirement system, subject to regulation by the legislature, for the employees of the State and its political subdivisions."

As it now stands, it's purely a matter of - -

HEEN: Point of order. No second to that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion was seconded.

J. TRASK: May I proceed then, Mr. Chairman? I believe that the government employees are entitled to a constitutional protection of a system that has gone a long way in contributing to the welfare of our community. There might be some who might raise the question that is is purely statutory, but I have noticed that all during our deliberations here for the last 60 days we have included quite a few things that I myself consider to be statutory.

HEEN: Point of order. I don't think this subject is germane to the purpose contained in the article on finance and taxation.

J. TRASK: As a matter of fact, I believe a proposal was introduced and I think it was placed on file by the committee.

APOLIONA: That proposal the delegate from the fifth district is referring to is Proposal 129, which was referred to the Committee on Taxation and Finance on May 16, 1950.

HEEN: Therefore, I take it that that has been rejected. I suggest therefore that it is not germane at this time.

WHITE: Mr. Chairman, this - -

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment. You have raised a point of order, did you not?

HEEN: That is correct. What I have in mind is this, that I'm in agreement with this proposal in principle, but I think it ought to be put in as an amendment to - - No, I don't know whether there is going to be an article on general provisions. If there is an article along that line, it could be placed there.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate White sought recognition. By the way, Mr. Trask, you had the floor. The point of order raised by Delegate Heen does not seem to me to be well taken, particularly in view of the fact that that proposal was referred to the committee. However, the Chair, if anyone desires to speak on that point of order, the Chair would like to be enlightened or corrected on this presumption.

MAU: I do.

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman.

MAU: I do, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate White, were you seeking - -

WHITE: No, no.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau.

MAU: I think it is germane to this subject matter. It deals - - this proposal deals with taxation and finance. Now, under the retirement system, as I understand it, the government has a direct responsibility in its financial obligations to the system, and I see no reason why it can't come under this provision.

CHAIRMAN: Well, Delegate Mau, will you please cease? You have bulwarked the Chair's conviction and, Delegate Trask, if you desire to continue with your arguments, please proceed.

KAM: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

J. TRASK: I would yield the floor to Delegate Mau, Mr. Chairman.

KAM: Mr. Chairman, has the Chair put the question to Section 9, to adopt the Section 9 as amended?

CHAIRMAN: No. The section that we have just voted on, Delegate Kam, was a new section entitled Section 9A which was voted down. Section 9 has already passed. So now there is a new amendment proposed by Delegate Trask which is before the committee, and Delegate Trask has finished discussing the proposal. Am I right?

J. TRASK: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: And Delegate Ohrt is now seeking recognition. Delegate Ohrt, you are recognized.

OHRT: I was interested in Proposal 129 which I think is the type of proposal that this Convention should adopt. The retirement system really gives protection to some 16,000 employees and fixes the benefits through a trust fund. That is, the retirement system has been set up as a trust fund, and as I understand it, there is a statutory contractual relationship at the present time, and I think the employees would like to see it as a constitutional contractual relationship.

I was sorry that the Finance Committee commented as they did in their report on the retirement system. You will find that in their report, "It is the opinion of your committee that to include such a provision in the Constitution would be unwise and unsound for it would be committing the State forever, practically speaking, to continue the present benefits and it is conceivable that some adjustments may become necessary at some future time. Further, it appears to be unsound as class legislation. Government employees are protected by law and it is the belief of your committee that no provision should be placed in the Constitution which would interfere with the free action of the legislature who can take necessary action as times may warrant after they have had an opportunity to complete a capital review and analysis of the system and of the then financial condition of the State."

The present system is patterned on the New York system and the New York Constitution has what is in Proposal No. 129. Now, government employees haven't the right to strike and I think we ought to give them protection such as is incorporated in Proposal No. 129. This proposal that Delegate Trask has submitted, I would like to amend the wording that is in Proposal No. 129, which would read as follows: "Membership in the employees' retirement system, benefits not to be diminished or impaired. Membership in the employees' retirement system of the State shall be a contractual relationship, the benefits of which shall not be diminished or impaired."

ASHFORD: If that is a motion, I would like to second it.

J. TRASK: I'm willing to accept the amendment.

OHRT: Now, speaking to that amendment. It's the benefits in the system that really mean something and here in Hawaii we have a contributory system that really reduces the cost to the taxpayer, and I think the only criticism that you hear of the system is that the benefits are too low. That is the general criticism, but anyone who knows anything about pensions knows that it's a very expensive operation. If a person were to try to provide a pension for an individual and he was in an individual business, in order to furnish the benefits that the retirement system of Hawaii furnishes the employee, if he were to do that on his own he would have to set aside practically 20 per cent of his salary each month. That would more or less assure him of half pay at the age of 60 provided he has had 35 years of service. The contribution that the Territory has to make runs about 7 per cent, so that the retirement system itself is probably one of the cheapest things that the taxpayer pays for.

Now, pensions are in the limelight and they are part -- becoming a part of the personnel. We now have civil service and I myself would like to see the benefits more or less assured. We now have $45,000,000 in the trust fund and it is the trustees who are required now to see that these benefits are paid. That fund is increasing at the rate of about five million a year, and I think this is most important to 16,000 employees who are in a different category from people in other walks of life. They have no right to strike, and accordingly I move that this amendment be adopted.

SAKAKIHARA: I second that.

TAVARES: I am sorry that although I am a member of the retirement system and I am looking forward to the day when I can draw a pension from it for some of my years of past service, I have to oppose this proposed amendment. I want the delegates here before they vote for it to understand what they are getting into. Once upon a time I had the same idea. I made the same proposal and it was pointed out to me that by making it a contractual relationship, we would be sewing up every future legislature to guarantee to put up enough money for this system forever and ever and ever. Gentlemen, if you do that you might as well put in a provision that the salaries shall never be diminished of government employees.

I am for the system. I want to see it continued, but I want to point out that the time may come when our legislature will feel, and sincerely so, that it is too heavy a burden. Insofar as those members who are in the system at that time and who have contributed, there is a contractual relationship. And I want to correct the statement made. The contractual relationship applies only to the money in the system, which means that the legislature at the present time is not by a contract bound to put in money in the future, but if they stop doing it, then the courts can take it over in receivership and liquidate it or administer it for the benefit of those members at that time who have interest in the fund. But at the present time there is no blank check for the system. If you put this through, this amendment by Delegate Ohrt, you are writing a blank check for the system. I want you to understand that, saying that the legislature contracts now always to put up all the money necessary to maintain the present benefits of the system without any change. Now, if you want to tie that kind of millstone around the neck of your legislature, that is your prerogative. For my part, although I am a member of the system, I cannot see how we can for one group of our people tie that kind of a tight millstone around our necks.

One more thing and that is, social security is being extended today. The time may come when either by constitutional amendment or otherwise it will be extended to government employees of the states and territories and so forth. At that time will we still want to be -- if we are compelled to contribute to a federal system, do we still want to be compelled to contribute to the same system with the same benefits at the same rates as we do now? If we put this through we are saying until this and unless this Constitution is amended, we can't do anything else but keep it up.

MAU: Of course, there have been other millstones around the necks of the genteel -- or rather the genteel necks of the legislators. I don't think that is an argument in itself. My distinguished colleague from the fourth district, of course, has come a long way from the time when he was a lowly deputy and so maybe his viewpoint does change.

But I have here a copy of a letter written by Mr. Buck, George B. Buck, the actuary. I understand that he is the advisor of the retirement system. He wrote to a Mr. F. B. Holmes, Director, New York State Employees' Retirement System, and in it he agreed that such a provision should go into the New York Constitution and it was made part of the New York Constitution. Likewise, it was incorporated insofar as the municipal employees were concerned, together with the state employees. I won't take the time to read that, but that is an actual fact. Now, if we do it, we will not be violating any precedents; as a matter of fact, we would be following the great State of New York.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

HEEN: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Point of information. State your point.

HEEN: This language proposed by Delegate Ohrt is similar to the language employed in the New York Constitution?

OHRT: Yes, I think it's taken from the New York Constitution.

HEEN: Verbatim, the same?

OHRT: As far as I know, yes.

CHAIRMAN: Can you answer the question, Delegate --

MAU: No, Mr. Chairman, it is not verbatim. I would like to have an opportunity to read the New York provision. "Membership in a pension or retirement system of the state or civil division thereof shall constitute a contractual relationship, provided however, that in systems which do not have reserves sufficient to cover benefits accrued on account of previous service, members' claim on retirement shall be limited to the benefits which could have been produced from an employer's contribution not exceeding five per cent of the member's salary during such service, and a like contribution from the member. In systems providing for the accumulation of reserves, such reserves shall be maintained without impairment for the purpose for which created."

NIELSEN: Well, I'm in favor of this, but I think that something should be done so every citizen in this State can come in on the same basis as government employees. I don't know why we are any different than government employees, and if the territory is, or the State is willing to put up seven and a half per cent against our seven and a half per cent, why shouldn't we come in on it? Then we will all get that retirement when we get through.

MAU: Welfare state.

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman and members of the Convention. I recall some 18 years ago when the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii absolutely defaulted on their share of the contribution towards this obligation. As we all know, the retirement system is a sacred trust by the government of funds entrusted by the employees of this Territory and the counties. Unwise investments were then made by the then trustees of the retirement systems. I remember very, very much, because I was a member of the finance committee of that session of the legislature.

I say to you, that the employees of the county, City and County and the Territory today are by law required to become members of the retirement system as long as they are employed by the government. They have no choice. They have no alternative but to become a member of the retirement system. I feel very strongly that there should be a contractual relationship, there should be between the government, if the government desires to maintain this system in good faith with the employees of the government. As presented here by Delegate Ohrt, there are some 16,000 employees of the county, City and County and the Territory. What protection do these employees have? What assurance do they have after having been employed in the service of the government that this fund will be secure? What assurance do they have that the government will continue to put up its share toward this retirement fund?

I recall the day when the actuary, Mr. Buck, was invited by the legislature and appeared before the legislature in joint session and actually advocated that that security should be given to the employees of this government who are members of the retirement system. This fund has grown to the extent of $45,000,000 and I feel very strongly, ladies and gentlemen, that this amendment should be adopted and that the government should in good faith keep their obligation with the employees of the territory. I am therefore very strongly in favor of incorporating this amendment in the Constitution.

ASHFORD: I think the gentlemen from the legislature will recall that about four years ago someone from Mr. Buck's office, the actuary looking after the system, appeared and recommended further deposits in the fund by the Territory, holding up as a horrible example the complete breakdown of the system of New York, and I have no doubt at all that that constitutional provision was written into the Constitution of New York because it had broken down under the old system.

SAKAKIHARA: For the information of the delegate from Molokai, I wish to state that it was Mr. Buck, the actuary himself, who was invited to appear before the legislature in joint session.

LARSEN: I was rather interested in Mr. Nielsen's comments and it reminded me, and I want to tell all of the delegates about a certain politician who was talking to his crowd and he said, "Ladies and gentlemen, when I get into that legislature, I'm going to do away with all the taxes because I'm going to make the government pay for it."

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question?

MAU: I just want to read the latest provision in the New York Constitution. I read from an old one. This is very much shorter. "After July 1, 1940, membership in any pension or retirement system of the state or a civil division thereof shall be a contractual relationship, the benefits of which shall not be diminished or impaired."

TAVARES: I don't know why I have to stick my neck out all the time, but I am sincerely worried about this. I think there is a difference between benefits of members who are already members at a given time and the reserve they have put in and the changes that can be made for future employees. For instance, it seems to me it ought to be possible for the legislature to say, "O.K., for all those who are now members, we won't change the benefits, but for all new members coming in, we are going to reduce the pension a little bit." I think that ought to be left within the power of the legislature.

Now, if that is what this means and if it doesn't mean that the legislature has to -- is making a contract to put up the necessary money forever and ever and ever in the future, that's one thing. I think that we need an interpretation of that and perhaps Mr. Buck has written one. It may be it doesn't mean as much as I think it does. And if so, I might vote for it. But the way it stands now, if it means fully that the legislature guarantees that no employee in the future will ever be given less benefits proportionately than the employees today and that the legislature guarantees to put up all the money necessary from now to forever to cover whatever the benefits may be, then I think it's a little -- it's rather dangerous. And it seems to me therefore that it is worth looking into as to that meaning. Has Mr. Buck written an interpretation of that section?

CHAIRMAN: Well, the language says, "The benefits of which shall not be diminished or impaired."

TAVARES: Is that benefits of old members or the benefit of members now and any members that may come in in the future? If so, I think that again is a very, very grave restriction.

OHRT: I think it applies to all those that are now members of the system. They have made their contributions and the benefits are a fixed benefit plan. And it's just such a reduction or the impairment of those benefits that the employees should be concerned with. Now, before Congress today or a few days ago, we have the social security bill. That has just been passed and the government employees are exempted from that. I think that is the answer to Delegate Nielsen. If he wants to get in under this, he can get in under social security, probably is there already.

TAVARES: Well, one more question of the very able delegate from the fifth district and that is, does the delegate interpret this provision to mean that it is also a contract by the legislature guaranteeing to put up every bit of money necessary in the future to make good these proposed benefits set forth in the present law?

OHRT: That would be my interpretation of it. Yes, I think the government employees should have that.

NIELSEN: I would like to ask Mr. Ohrt one question. Has the government so far in the Territory put up all the money they should have put up?

OHRT: The answer to that would be yes.

NIELSEN: It seems to me in the '47 session, they didn't want to give you the funds to keep the security sound.

OHRT: Well, that's correct. There was an effort to delete certain funds but the legislature finally appropriated them.

TAVARES: Is it not true that we have some considerable amount yet that we owe that we haven't paid up for the reserves because we started in in 1925 with Territorial employees and had to make up all the back years ourselves without any contributions from the employees?

OHRT: That covers the amount that covers prior service.

TAVARES: Prior service credit?

OHRT: Prior service credit.

TAVARES: What is the balance now?

OHRT: About $4,000,000, but that is funded. The Territory is paying that. I don't recall what the rate is but a certain percentage each year is being paid.

TAVARES: We have extended it once already, haven't we?

OHRT: Yes, and those are just the things that we are trying to avoid.

TAVARES: In other words, we are not up to date then in our obligations.

OHRT: No, insofar as prior service, we are not. That's right.

TAVARES: But the legislature is putting up the money in installments and hopes within a reasonable time to cover that prior service credit.

OHRT: But it's being funded so it's being taken care of, Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: Well, I wanted the delegates to understand that.

H. RICE: It seems to me that the way the Congress may pass the statehood bill would be to review our Constitution. I think Delegate Ohrt and others here will agree with me the Territory has a fine retirement system, in fact, one of the best of any state, and I think if the Congress is going to review our Constitution that in the section of ordinances somewhere we should have some sentence just like this: "The retirement system of the Territory should be continued under the State." It shows then that we have a good system, we believe in it and it should be carried on. I think that is sufficient.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, you are opposed to the insertion of this in the taxation and finance article.

H. RICE: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion? Are we ready for the question?

HEEN: I noticed that the amendment suggested and accepted by Delegate Trask reads as follows: "Membership in the employees' retirement system of the State shall be a contractual relationship, the benefits of which shall not be diminished or impaired." I believe that this language refers to the retirement system as it exists now. It seems to me that it should be more general. "Membership in any employee retirement system of the State or of any political subdivision" would be much more preferable so that it might take care of any system that the counties may wish to establish.

OHRT: I would be very glad to accept that amendment. I think it's the understanding that the present system is a state system.

HEEN: That is correct, but that means that you would have always under the Constitution a state system. But there would be nothing I suppose to prevent a political subdivision from establishing its own retirement system.

OHRT: That is possible.

HEEN: And if the political subdivision does that it should have the same protection.

OHRT: I'd be very glad to accept that amendment.

J. TRASK: I'm willing to accept the amendment made by Delegate Heen.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, the proposed amendment -- proposal would read as follows: "Membership in any employees' retirement system of the State or a political subdivision thereof shall be a contractual relationship, the benefits of which shall not be diminished or impaired."

HEEN: Correct.

CHAIRMAN: Is that correct?

TAVARES: May I ask one more question? These are very important things because this is going to run into millions of dollars. I would like to ask the proponents of this amendment if this means that if the legislature in the future should raise the benefits, that thereafter they couldn't reduce them? Because that might be a deterrent in the future against your legislature ever, ever raising the benefits, because every benefit they give is a blank check forever for the future. Is that correct? That is my question -- I'd like to ask -- my question as to whether the future benefits will be covered. Will that question be answered, please?

CHAIRMAN: I think Delegate Ohrt understands the question. Are you ready to answer it?

OHRT: I think if the benefits are increased, there will also be an increase in the members' contributions and if the Territory does want to increase the benefits, then the contractual relation would start from then on as to the new benefits.

TAVARES: Well, then one more question, and that is, I think the delegate will agree that if the legislature, for instance, in the future brings in a new class of employees who have not contributed and covers them into the system as they have done several times in the past, that that automatically pledges the funds of the system to cover those new benefits, does it not?

OHRT: I don't think they can bring in any new employees under the present statute without providing the reserves that would go for those particular employees.

TAVARES: Nevertheless, we brought in the counties after we brought in the territory.

OHRT: But when you did that you provided the reserves to cover it.

TAVARES: But is it not true, I'd like to ask the delegate, that under the retirement system law all of the assets of the funds are pledged for every benefit, not divided for a certain amount for each member.

OHRT: Well, they are in one fund, but when a person once retires, then it's set up for that particular individual.

TAVARES: Well, what I'm worried about is that this provision might not prevent the legislature in the future from bringing in new members unless they put up right away a separate fund to cover those new members' benefits, rather than pledging the old assets for the new members.

OHRT: Well, they couldn't touch the old because that would be absolutely wrong.

TAVARES: That might then freeze the legislature's power to bring in to some extent new classes as they do today.

OHRT: No, the legislature brings in -- is bringing in new members, but providing the funds that went with that liability.

TAVARES: That's not my understanding of what has been done. It's my understanding when you join the system and are given membership, all of the assets of the system immediately are pledged to protect you as well as other beneficiaries of the system. The legislature does put up additional money, but it goes into the same pot.

OHRT: If you have no prior service it doesn't make a bit of difference because your obligations start from the day you join the system. So you begin making your contributions at that time.

SHIMAMURA: I am in favor of this amendment in principle, but I see certain legal difficulties. First, does this mean the continuation as a contract of the present membership in the system? If that's true, I think there is no legal difficulty as to that. Continuance of the present membership on a contractual basis. But what about future membership? Are we going to write in at the present time before such a contract is formed that it shall be a contract?

CHAIRMAN: Do you care to answer that, Delegate Ohrt?

OHRT: I would think that every employee that comes in would be given that same contractual right. I see no reason why not.

RICHARDS: I would like to ask one question of Mr. Ohrt, Delegate Ohrt, if I may? Who is at present responsible if there is diminution of the assets? In other words, if one of the companies whose bonds are held by the retirement system fails and the bond becomes worthless, is it incumbent upon the Territory at present to make up that deficit?

OHRT: Yes, it is.

MAU: The discussion on the New York provision throws some light on the questions raised by Delegate Tavares. Part of it reads as follows:

> The bill protects taxpayers because it does not attempt to force them to continue unsound costly systems which never would have been approved if the real cost had been known. On the other hand, it does give members of such system contractual rights to reasonable accrued benefits. Taxpayers are not obligated to assume further burdens under any system because of service not yet rendered, but they cannot take away what the employee may be considered to have earned by reason of his previous service.

And again,

> The amendment should have the support of taxpayers because it clearly defines the contractual rights of employees in sound systems, which definitions add no greater rights than many believe are now possessed by such employees, and it does not give any basis to require the public to assume the unlimited liabilities which some of the unsound pension funds may be assumed to have undertaken with no basis for meeting them.

Now it seems to me that this system is a sound one, particularly for those who pay more taxes that I do. If we didn't have such a system, if we don't protect that system, whenever the government employee ceases employment with the government, somebody is going to have to take care of him, and eventually you may have a welfare state. But it is better that the government employees help themselves by contributing to the retirement system and helping their retirement and their pension for later years.

WHITE: I'd like to ask a couple of questions. Is the New York system administered by individual trustees or by a corporate trustee?

OHRT: By a corporate trustee. That is, they have trustees appointed just as we have.

WHITE: But it's a corporate trustee?

OHRT: Yes, so are we as I understand it. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN: No, you are individual trustees.

WHITE: The trustees are individuals in this case, aren't they?

OHRT: The fund is set up as a trust fund and then the trustees are - -

WHITE: Yes, but it's administered by individuals as trustees of the fund. You made the - - the delegate from the fifth district made the statement that in the event that the value of the fund should shrink five million dollars, it would then be an obligation of the Territory to make up that deficit. Is that right?

OHRT: That is written into the statute today. That is a contract that the Territory has made with the employees. In these days when we are talking about the sanctity of contracts, I hope the Territory lives up to its contract.

WHITE: I think that's quite true, but I think the one difference is that in this particular instance, even though the Territory might have a bad experience and decide that it might be a better thing to give up the retirement system because of the risks involved, this would obligate them to keep it on indefinitely and make up deficits as long as deficits are accrued, which I think is highly unsound.

OHRT: I think that that's unfair to the system. As far as the contract is concerned, if the system earns more than 12 per cent they give the Territory and the taxpayers credit for it. Now, I tried to tell the Convention that this was the cheapest thing that the taxpayers were paying for because you are making the employees pay their own pensions or at least half of them.

ANTHONY: May I ask the proponent of this amendment a question? I'd like to know whether or not he is satisfied with the existing retirement system? And if he is, why does he want to put a piece of legislation into the Constitution?

CHAIRMAN: Would you yield to that question, Delegate Ohrt? I believe it's addressed to you although it was proposed originally by Delegate Trask.

OHRT: I've seen a great deal of work here on the Convention floor. New York State has taken the leadership in this -- in pensions, trying to save the taxpayers some money. This was done in 1938 in New York. It's functioning well and we think that we are entitled to the same protection. Now, our system is practically the same as the New York system. It's based on the same formula, one-seventieth for each year of service. It's a formula plan. It varies with the number of years of service. There is nothing as sound as the Territorial Employees' Retirement System at the present time.

HEEN: Whether or not the system here was the corporation or corporate entity, it is, under this language, the retirement system established and placed "under the management of the Board for the purpose of providing retirement allowances for employees. It shall have the powers and privileges of a corporation."

TAVARES: A point of information. It seems to me that the answers given by Delegate Ohrt and what was just read by Delegate Mau are directly contradictory. As I understand it, Delegate Mau's explanation now, apparently I imagine written by Mr. Buck, is that the taxpayers do not assume liability for service not yet performed, which would seem to me to be that the legislature could cut off benefits for earnings of the future - - for service of the future. As I understood Delegate Ohrt, it meant we had to continue this forever, and I think that ought to be cleared up. I might go along with Delegate Mau's explanation, but I don't think I would go along with Delegate Ohrt's.

OHRT: That would only apply to those people who become members of the system. As far as those that were not in the system yet, I don't see how you can extend any contractual obligation to them.

TAVARES: I think Mr. Mau ought to read that again. I don't think that's what Mr. Mau said.

OHRT: As I heard that, he is making a comparison between the contributory system which saves the taxpayers millions of dollars, and the non-contributory system where the obligation gets to be such large figures that nobody wants to pay them.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion, or does Delegate Mau desire to clarify a confused and muddled situation on this point?

MAU: I was reading a discussion of the measure that was introduced in New York, and the discussion states that the State has no obligation to continue any unsound system. That's what it says. But my view is on the point raised that the State can any time cut out that retirement system, but those who belong to the system before it is terminated, their rights and the benefits accrued to them still remain under this provision.

CHAIRMAN: In other words - -

TAVARES: If that's what this means, I have no objection to it, but I was afraid it wasn't and that's not what Delegate Ohrt says it means. That's why I'm worried about it.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, your point, Delegate Mau, is that the state could abolish the system.

MAU: Yes, but all the rights that have been accrued - -

CHAIRMAN: Vested rights?

MAU: - - by the employees before the termination of the system, remain intact. That's my interpretation of the language.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion? Ready for the question?

KELLERMAN: I would move that we defer this then until the language can be worded to mean what we say. Certainly the way it's written it sounds like it's an absolutely open and unqualified statement. Now, I'm perfectly willing also to go along with the explanation as Mr. Mau has given it, but that is not what the language says to me. It seems to me it can be - - if it can be made clear we might better pass upon an amendment that says what we mean.

KING: I hope we do not defer it but settle it this afternoon and perhaps with less discussion.

CHAIRMAN: You expressed the wish of the Chairman.

KING: I'd like to ask Delegate Ohrt a question. Assuming the legislature changes the form of the retirement system for future employees at some date five or ten years from now, sets up what is in effect a different system, then it's not obligated under this provision of the Constitution to retain the same contractual relation, but can establish a new one. Is that so?

OHRT: That is correct.

KING: Well then, that agrees with Mr. Mau. In other words this provision only protects those who are in the system as it now exists, and if the legislature reorganized the system it could apply to all new employees. But the contract would remain in existence for all of those who had entered prior to that change.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready - -

KING: Under that interpretation I see no particular objection to incorporating it in the Constitution if a substantial number of people feel it protects their equity as employees of the government.

RICHARDS: I still don't think that it's quite clear. At least it isn't clear to me that if the legislature changes the form of their retirement system, does it mean that employees already under the present system may continue along as far as their future earnings are concerned under the old system, or does it merely mean that all the benefits accrued up to the time of change will definitely be a contract' There is a distinct difference.

J. TRASK: I believe Mr. King has just stated that - - reiterated the question that Mr. Richards has just asked. I think we have had enough debate on the matter. We have had any number of explanations on different points. I see no reason why we shouldn't take a vote at this time.

WHITE: I don't agree with the delegate from the fifth district, because I'm more confused than ever as a result of Mr. King's explanation of it. As I understand the explanation that Mr. Mau made, it differentiated between past service and future service. Now if it means that as of the time any retirement system is terminated that there can be no impairment of past benefits but that the future benefits can be changed by the legislature, well then I think that this thing ought to say that. I'd like that question answered. Mr. King's explanation carried the past benefits for the present employees into the future. Now Mr. Mau made it clear-cut between the two.

KING: I wasn't making an explanation. I don't dare to get involved in these legal intricate questions. I was asking a question of Mr. Ohrt. In view of the little confusion, I would like to move for a five minute recess.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair was just going to declare a short recess.

(RECESS)

ANTHONY: I would suggest that the word "accrued" be inserted before the word "benefits."

HEEN: The language in the amendment reads: "Membership in any employees' retirement system of the State or any political subdivision thereof shall be a contractual relationship." Using that as the basis, the amendment proposed by the last speaker is to insert before the word "benefits," the word "accrued."

CHAIRMAN: The Chair understands this to be before the committee, before the amendment was proposed. "Membership in any employees' retirement system of the State or its political subdivisions thereof shall be a contractual relationship, the benefits of which shall not be diminished or impaired." Is it the mover's amendment that the only change would be the word "accrued" before "benefits" or is it to eliminate also the phrases that were formerly proposed?

ANTHONY: I was trying to get rid of the impasse and I think the insertion of the word "accrued" will do it. Now if there has been some other amendment that has been lost on me, I was engaged in conversation when the amendment was made.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the amendment was just changing the word "the," "membership in the system," to "any system," and then adding after the word "State," "or its political subdivisions thereof," and that was accepted by the mover originally.

ANTHONY: Well then, I request the movant of the original amendment, if he will accept the insertion of the word

"accrued" in his amendment before the word "benefits." Then if he will state that, I would be glad to second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been accepted, so the amendment before the committee reads as follows: "Membership in any employees' retirement system of the State or its political subdivisions thereof shall be a contractual relationship, the accrued benefits of which shall not be diminished or impaired."

HEEN: Mr. Chairman, may I ask what word did you use before "political subdivision"?

CHAIRMAN: "Political."

HEEN: No, "any political subdivision."

CHAIRMAN: "Or any political subdivision "?

HEEN: That is correct.

ANTHONY: The purpose of the amendment will be to preserve the accrued benefits but still leave the legislature free as to the future. In other words, the fears that Delegate White and Delegate Tavares had, I think, are met by this insertion.

DELEGATE: Question.

TAVARES: That is correct, and it agrees with Mr. Mau's interpretation. I accept that and I think that is entirely all right.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to adopt the provision just read by the Chair please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

J. TRASK: This particular section that was just carried will be put where the Style Committee sees fit in this proposal?

CHAIRMAN: That was the understanding when the discussion took place.

J. TRASK: So I move at this time that we tentatively approve Committee Proposal No. 10 as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

H. RICE: I move the committee rise and report progress.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any objections? If not the Committee of the Whole stands recessed until adjourned.

JULY 6, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee please come to order.

RICE: I move that the committee rise and report recommending the passage of Committee Proposal No. 10 on second reading.

LAI: I second the motion.

FONG: As I understand it, there is quite a lot of sentiment now for an elective auditor. I notice that quite a few people have told me that they would now vote for an elective auditor feeling that the auditor shouldn't be appointed. Under those circumstances I would like to ask for a reconsideration of Section 12 at this time of Committee Proposal No. 10.

CHAIRMAN: Well, Delegate Fong, do you recall whether or not you voted against the present proposal?

FONG: I think I did.

CHAIRMAN: You might, if you could, get someone else to move the action.

SILVA: I move to reconsider the action taken on Proposal No. 10.

RICHARDS: I'll second the motion.

CASTRO: Just so that we all know what we are discussing, I think we should have Redraft One in front of us, should we not? In which case, the section on the auditor is numbered Section 8. If we go to the original draft it would be 12, but these redrafts are placed in here in front of the original draft.

CHAIRMAN: Well, you mean you find it in either Proposal 10 or in the -- I suggest that you look at the proposal attached to the Committee of the Whole report, Redraft One.

CASTRO: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN: Well, you heard the motion. As this matter was thoroughly debated, as I recall, and -- What is the pleasure of the body? Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

CORBETT: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: The question is whether the auditor shall be elected -- Oh, reconsideration first.

CORBETT: You have already answered my question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of reconsideration, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt. Roll call is demanded. Madam Clerk, call the roll.

Ayes, 26. Noes, 30 (Anthony, Arashiro, Ashford, Castro, Corbett, Crossley, Doi, Fukushima, Gilliland, Heen, Ihara, Kanemaru, Kawahara, Kellerman, Larsen, Mau, Mizuha, Nielsen, Ohrt, C. Rice, H. Rice, Roberts, Serizawa, Shimamura, Smith, Tavares, J. Trask, Wist, Yamamoto and Lee). Not voting, 7 (Kawakami, Luiz, Phillips, Sakakihara, Sakai, White, Wirtz).

CHAIRMAN: Motion failed. The motion before the Committee is still the adoption of the report. Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed. The motion carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

(Article VII)

Chairman: ARTHUR K. TRASK

JUNE 23, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole meeting on local government, that's Standing Committee Report No. 74, Committee Proposal No. 26. What order does the chairman, Delegate Kauhane, want to follow?

KAUHANE: The first order of procedure as far as the committee and the chairman are concerned is that we take a short recess so that we be prepared to come back and sit until we finish.

CHAIRMAN: If no objections, so ordered. Five minutes.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will now recognize the chairman of the Local Government Committee, Delegate Kauhane.

KAUHANE: Mr. Chairman, and members and delegates of this Convention, your Local Government Committee in its honest endeavor tried to put together what we felt was an honest proposal to be submitted for consideration by this Convention on matters relating to local government. We took into consideration the various problems and the different problems that confronted in the matters of local government with respect to the various counties. We have submitted here a proposal which we felt and which, I would say, the committee in all sincerity felt was the best possible provision to be incorporated in the Constitution for the future State of Hawaii relating to local government. The committee feels that if there is any amendment to be made to the proposal as submitted by the committee, that such amendments should be offered now before we go into the proposal either by section, paragraph after paragraph, or sentence after sentence. We -- the committee is now ready to accept any amendments to the proposal that the committee has offered.

SAKAKIHARA: May I offer an amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Holroyde is recognized.

HOLROYDE: Just a point of information. How can we offer amendments when there's nothing before the Convention?

DOI: We believe that there are two minority reports submitted. and those two minority reports go not to the specific sections of the committee proposal, rather it goes to the amendment of the whole idea of the proposal. Therefore, we felt that it might be little more time saving to first present the idea of the committee as stated in the whole article on local government; and then, if there is any amendment to be offered as to the whole article, then let's have it first before we go into the specific sections.

CHAIRMAN: Is it the desire of the committee to hear, therefore, from Delegate Sakakihara, who has presented a minority report? Please note that there is another minority report filed by Delegate Phillips that is being printed and will be submitted to the committee soon.

RICHARDS: To make the proceedings proper, since there is nothing at present before this committee, I move tentative adoption of Committee Proposal No. 26 in its entirety.

CORBETT: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is made and seconded that we adopt Section 1. Any discussion?

HOLROYDE: I don't think that was the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, Delegate Monte Richards, will you please state that again?

RICHARDS: I understood the chairman of the committee, he felt that to speed up proceedings it would be better to discuss the amendments to the proposal as a whole rather than attempt to take it section by section, inasmuch as these amendments cover the whole proposal. Therefore, I made the motion to adopt the whole proposal to permit the amendments of the proposal as a whole.

KAUHANE: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: And that has been seconded by Delegate Corbett.

PHILLIPS: I believe that would be an improper course insofar as local government is -- consists of more than one function and requires sections -- individual sections which would require the individual consideration of the Convention. I don't believe that would accomplish our purpose at all, if we were to accept it in its entirety, because we would still have to go through it item by item. I would be against that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the motion pending, that is to consider the entire proposal?

RICHARDS: I do not know what the proposal of Delegate Phillips is or what his amendments, but I understand that there is one amendment by Delegate Sakakihara which covers the whole proposal and does not go section by section.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the motion to consider the entire proposal? Ready for the question? All those in favor of proceeding by considering the entire proposal say "aye." Those opposed. The ayes have it.

HAYES: Not standing up very often, I have a little time trying to plug this [microphone] in.

CHAIRMAN: The committee can stand a lot of charm.

HAYES: Do you mean to tell me that you're going to adopt this Section 1 and Section 2 and Section 3 and Section 4? Is that the motion?

CHAIRMAN: The motion which you voted for—there was no opposition --

HAYES: No, I didn't vote.

CHAIRMAN: -- that we consider the entire proposal.

HAYES: Oh, "consider," thank you. Just a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: So that all the dissidents may come out with their amendments.

KAUHANE: By the motion just adopted, the committee feels that the minority report as submitted by Delegate Sakakihara will be considered together with the committee proposal.

SAKAKIHARA: That is my desire.

KAUHANE: That being the case, Mr. Chairman - -

SAKAKIHARA: I offer the minority's amendment to Committee Proposal 26. I think it has been distributed to the members of the committee.

CHAIRMAN: Have all the members of the committee received copies of Sakakihara's - - Delegate Sakakihara's Standing Committee Report No. 84.

SAKAKIHARA: My minority committee report is No. 84, along with the majority report. I believe the majority report - - committee report is No. 74 and my minority report is Standing Committee Report No. 84.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

SAKAKIHARA: My amendment is proposed precisely in the language of the present Organic Act except the opening word, "that," of Section 56 is eliminated; "State" is substituted for "Territory of Hawaii"; the words "governor and" are eliminated from just prior to the last word, "legislature," in the above. The words "of the Territory" are eliminated after the last "legislature." So that the amendment will read:

> Section 1. The legislature may create counties and town and city municipalities within the State and provide for the government thereof, and all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the legislature.

CHAIRMAN: This amendment that you have just proposed for Section 1 appears on page 5 of your report No. 84?

SAKAKIHARA: Correct.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

SAKAKIHARA:

[Reads SCR 84.]

> The report of the majority of your Committee on Local Government states that the committee has been guided by its belief that "the people have the ability and have a right to manage their own affairs" and that is was the consensus of the members that the committee should "allow as much independent local self-government as the welfare of the State would permit." Although the committee's proposal is drafted upon strong "home rule" lines, it does reserve to the legislature the power "to enact laws of state-wide concern."
> I am in full accord with the principle of increased self-government.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara, there wasn't a second. Will you yield - -

SAKAKIHARA: I move - - Yes.

CHAIRMAN: Will you yield until that—your motion is seconded?

HOLROYDE: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded by Delegate Holroyde. Proceed.

SAKAKIHARA:

> I am in full accord with the principle of increased local self-government, but unable to agree with the manner in which the majority would achieve this end. The majority report would prohibit the legislature from enacting any law, beneficial or not, respecting the activities of an individual unit of government unless that action has been first requested by the board of supervisors or other governing body of the local unit. Every one of us will recognize that the individual citizen is frequently unable to obtain a satisfactory solution to particular problems presented to his local governing body. It is in recognition of this that the members of your territorial legislature have for many years constituted an agency which not only listens to requests of individual citizens but furnishes in many respects the only solution to such problems. The majority report would have the citizen's only recourse against his local government's failure to take action on the vote that he casts at election time. There are many who would say that this recourse is sufficient. In practice, and without depreciating in the least the intelligence of the voter, it just does not work that way. We feel very strongly that there must be an alternative available to the individual citizen, and I feel equally strongly that the legislature has, as that alternative, efficiently performed that function in the past and should not be limited in the future.
>
> In our territory, which is, after all, substantially a state-type of government (excepting for the presidential appointment of the governor, secretary, and judges) the present division of functions and responsibilities of government between the Territory and the counties is the result of steady development since 1905 when county government was first instituted. Such development by acts of the legislature has given us a system of government in which the details of operation of the following functions and activities which are often considered of a "local government" character are conducted basically under territorial statutes and not under county ordinances: airports, principal highways, libraries, civil service, fixing of public salaries, retirement system, police department, liquor control, public housing, public parks and recreation (City and County of Honolulu), public waterworks (excepting rural Oahu and Kauai), property taxes, schools and public welfare.
> Some might even argue that certain of the functions for which the Board of Health and the Board of Commissioners of Agriculture and Forestry are now responsible are properly within the scope of county or town government.
>
> At the time of writing this minority report, the report of the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions had not been released. The report of the majority of the Committee on Local Government includes a proposal with respect to taxes (to be a state matter) and the reports of other committees have provided, or are understood to provide, for state control of schools and public welfare. Proposals with respect to health and agriculture and forestry activities may or may not be in sufficient detail to fix the functions of those departments so definitely as to leave no question as to whether or not certain of the present activities thereof may, under the Committee on Local Government's proposal, be considered "local" in character.
> With respect to most of the functions above listed, it seems to be the present concensus of this Convention that details ought not to be "spelled out" in the Constitution; thus, it seems clear that if the report of the majority of the Committee on Local Government is adopted, there will be a perpetual invitation to local governments to assume control of many of the functions which are now either operated by the territorial government or boards or commissions under territorial statutes, or operated by the county governments or boards or commissions in a manner prescribed by territory statutes.
> The Committee's proposal that each political subdivision "shall have power to provide for . . . the form and management of its own affairs" and that the article "shall not limit the power of the legislature to enact laws of statewide concern" is most impracticable. The indefiniteness of the line that would be established between the constitutional scopes of the State and local governments, respectively, would give the courts and attorneys a perpetual field day.

The Chairman knows that.

It is the belief of the undersigned that the entire section under discussion should be delegated to the legislature which, according to present indications, will be comprised of a House in which the City and County of Honolulu or Island of Oahu will have a majority, and a Senate in which the outer islands would have a majority. Such a plan should assure well-considered legislation because it would mean that fundamental governmental policies and organizations (other than as fully set forth in the Constitution) would be determined by the people of all counties jointly, rather than by the people of Oahu alone. This Convention will be remiss if it adopts a Constitution worded in a manner to make it possible for Oahu alone to bring about drastic changes in presently effective laws under the claim that "its own affairs" include this or that function heretofor within the scope of the territorial government.

The several functions and activities listed herein are actually "of statewide concern." If they were otherwise the laws would not be in effect. The adoption of Committee Proposal No. 26, as presented, however, would result in continuous questioning by chartered areas as to the classification of function - -

DOI: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Doi on a point of order. Please state it.

DOI: I believe these minority reports and the majority reports were required to be printed and circulated so the members of this Convention could read those reports. I don't see why it's necessary to read those reports verbatim into the recording machine. I understand Mr. Phillips here who has another minority report is anticipating reading the whole report into the record, also.

SAKAKIHARA: My understanding is some of the members of the Committee of Whole have not received this minority report. They have come to me for the report.

CHAIRMAN: I'd like to say to Delegate Doi the observation is made quite late. I think Delegate Sakakihara is down to the last sentence of his report. Under the circumstances, you may proceed.

SAKAKIHARA: That is right.

CHAIRMAN: There might be another question later on.

SAKAKIHARA:

It is recommended that there be substituted for the four sections of Committee Proposal No. 26 the following (one section only).

That's the amendment which I have presented, and I ask the Committee of the Whole to give this amendment your very serious consideration. I'm in fear that under the setup proposed by the majority [Committee] Proposal No. 26 that in the event any area is set aside as a city or a county under separate charter, some of the bond issues now outstanding would be in a serious situation where they may have to be altered or may have to be provided otherwise. I submit that the majority committee report, therefore, is not in line with the best interest under the presumption and the guise that they are advocating strong home-rule for local government.

HOLROYDE: In signing the report of the committee, the majority report of the committee, I stated that I did not concur completely with paragraph 2. The committee worked diligently and hard trying to set up for the local governments of the territory a degree of home rule. However, during the committee hearings and during the progress of the committee, it was never clear to me the full effect that Section 2 would have on the progress that we made in the government locally.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Holroyde, point of order here. The motion before the committee at this time is directed to amending Section 1, according to Sakakihara's amendment, so would you confine your remarks to the section for amendment, please.

SAKAKIHARA: My amendment - - point of order. My amendment - - When I offered my amendment, I offered it with the understanding that the Committee of the Whole was to consider the entire article of Committee Proposal No. 26, not specifically limiting it in my amendment to Section 1 alone.

KAUHANE: That's right.

HOLROYDE: I'm coming to his amendment. I'm just giving a little background for a suggestion that I'm going to make about this amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Well, with that clarification made by Delegate Sakakihara, proceed.

SAKAKIHARA: May I ask the delegate to allow me one more sentence to make here.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Holroyde, will you yield?

HOLROYDE: I yield.

SAKAKIHARA: I believe it's a healthy thing to have the legislature in the control of local government. I, as a member of the Committee on Local Government, considered the requests of the residents of Lanai. Oftentimes the legislature is called upon by the residents of Molokai for relief; and that requests or petitions submitted to your legislature by the residents of Molokai is because their requests have been ignored by the Board of Supervisors of the County of Maui. Numerous requests of that nature will come and will continue to come before the legislature if the entire matter of a local nature is left to local government.

CHAIRMAN: I don't think Delegate Holroyde yielded so that you would bring Lanai in at this time. So I think we'll have Delegate Holroyde continue. You might keep it under wrap, however.

HOLROYDE: As I stated, I could not vote for Section 2 until I am fully aware of all the complications and effects that might have on our local government. For that reason I'm inclined at the present time to support the amendment suggested by Delegate Sakakihara. However, before voting on that, I would like to hear the full debate on the floor on Section 2. For that reason, I would like at this time to move deferment on the action on the amendment of Delegate Sakakihara.

SAKAKIHARA: I accept your motion for deferment.

CHAIRMAN: You have heard - -

KAUHANE: You going to put the question?

CHAIRMAN: Do you desire to say anything further?

KAUHANE: No, we'd like - -

DOI: I believe there will be, after all the minority reports are in, there will be three different theories of local government. One that is recommended by Mr. Sakakihara, the other by the committee, the other, the third, by Mr. Phillips. Therefore, we wanted to first get an agreement from this group here as to what theory we would subscribe to, and after that we can go into the specific sections and work it out. Up to now, Mr. Sakakihara has presented his theory of local government and I believe we should give the chairman of the Local Government Committee a chance to present the theories of the committee report, and maybe after that, Mr. Phillips. It seems that the chairman of the committee wants to yield, to yield first to Mr. Phillips.

PHILLIPS: I would like - -

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, Delegate Phillips, is your - - do you know, is your minority report circulated as yet?

PHILLIPS: That is what I rose to.

PORTEUS: Just a point of information. The committee seems to be - - the rest of the Convention is able to determine who the members of the committee are, but what I'd like to know is, are they together on this matter? It seems to me the only people we've heard arguing so far are the members of the committee. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

SAKAKIHARA: We are not in accord. I waited 60 days for this.

CHAIRMAN: The report shows that there are 15 members of this committee, and Delegates Sakakihara and Phillips did not concur with the majority report.

PHILLIPS: I'd like to ask the indulgence of the Chair to permit me to get my report which is now, right now in the Printing Committee. I'd like to have an opportunity to get it out and into the hands of the Convention before I make any statement on it.

J. TRASK: In order to save a lot of time, I believe that both minority reports should be made a part of the Convention, a part of the record, and let the original committee go ahead with their original proposal. Then the members of the - - that have filed minority reports can bring in their arguments against the proposal of the committee. I think that way we will save a lot of time instead of considering individual minority reports.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the question before this committee right now is the adoption of the entire [Committee] Proposal No. 26. So, we can very well proceed with the chairman. Delegate Kauhane can proceed and let's not have any further delay, and when Mr. Roberts [sic] has his report ready it can be circulated.

KAUHANE: The intent of the committee is not to delay deliberation or consideration of the proposals relative to local government. We feel under the republican form of government that those in a minority should be given the right to express their opinions so that the whole Convention may ably consider the matter of the majority report when it comes up for them for consideration and vote, and I'm sure we're just trying to abide by such a form of government. But if the Chair insists, I will now move that Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 26 be adopted.

J. TRASK: Is that tentatively adopted, Mr. Chairman?

KAUHANE: Everything is tentatively adopted.

J. TRASK: I just wanted to be sure.

HOLROYDE: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the motion, which is in the nature more or less of an amendment of the pending motion by Delegate Richards, namely that we consider the entire proposal?

BRYAN: Perhaps that motion should be amended since we have so many minority reports, that Section 1 of the proposal be considered, and when we run down on that, we can consider Section 2; and then after the minorities have had a chance to speak, we can move to either amend or so forth. But I think it should be taken up on a consideration basis. Is the chairman of the committee willing to accept that or answer it?

APOLIONA: I think the reason why this local government has two minority reports is that if you checked the attendance roll that the two majority reports came from - - I mean minority reports came from delegates who did not attend the meetings regularly.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Apoliona, I think those remarks are on the edge of being out of order. I think you should get down - -

APOLIONA: Well, I just want to show, Mr. Chairman - -

CHAIRMAN: Let's get down to merits. Confine yourself to the immediate thing before us, which I believe is a consideration of the adoption of Section 1, and there's been no second to it.

HOLROYDE: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: You may proceed, Delegate Apoliona.

APOLIONA: As I was interrupted by your honor, I mean, Mr. Chairman, the reason I say that we have these two major - - minority reports is that we couldn't get the members of the committee together at all times in our thinking.

J. TRASK: Point of order. The delegate is not confining himself to the question at hand. We are discussing Section 1 and not the minority report.

CHAIRMAN: I am forced to agree with the delegate from the fifth district, Delegate Apoliona.

APOLIONA: Well, then I'll wait for the time to come and argue against the minority report. I'll wait.

KAUHANE: I believe when the motion was put by Delegate Richards, who is also a member of the Committee on Local Government, that we consider the committee proposal in its entirety, it was to allow the minority, or to give the minority a right to support their minority report. And if an amendment made by Delegate Bryan that we accept the amendment that he has offered that we take the proposal section by section, the committee here would be glad to abide by whatever amendment he is making.

ANTHONY: As I understand it, we are discussing the motion which was duly seconded by Delegate Richards to consider this proposal as a whole.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

ANTHONY: Possibly, if we could solve the central question whether or not we want true local home rule, and by that I mean with the taxing power in the local units, then we can decide whether we want to go to Delegate Sakakihara's amendment or to the committee proposal. It seems to me in the first order, to get at this logically if we could clear the decks on that central issue, we could then narrow our activities to the difference between the committee's proposal and that of Delegate Sakakihara.

I don't see how under our system of laws, our system of government, we can go ahead and have true local self-government, and by that expression I mean with the taxing power in the several political subdivisions. It would destroy our present uniform system of taxation for one thing and we'd have a series of varied taxing authorities. We'd have school districts, we'd have the great morass of varying taxing units which has plagued the states on the mainland. I think if we could get the sentiment of the body as to that central issue, we could move from there to the question whether or not we should adopt Delegate Sakakihara's simple amendment or the modified form of home rule as recommended by the committee.

CORBETT: I agree with the last speaker. We of the majority group in the committee felt that we could not give taxing power to political subdivisions for the very reasons that he has mentioned, and as you notice, none of us raised any objection to any of the articles in the section on taxation. We feel that our particular form of government, the diversion of our factors and our plantations on the different islands, makes it extremely difficult to have a breakdown in the different counties for tax purposes. We also felt that taxing and collection of taxes is a very expensive procedure and should not be diversified. We state that very particularly in Section 3 of our proposal, that the taxing power shall be reserved to the State and only such portions of it as the legislature feels should be delegated to the political subdivisions may be so delegated. Now, that I think is the stand of the majority group of the committee.

While I'm on my feet, since I seem to find it very difficult to get to my feet in this Convention, I'd like to say a few more things. The committee, of course, in its first deliberations looked at the article in the Organic Act and deliberated as to whether it had contributed to the proper development of the county governments. We find in the history of the community that there have been many objections raised by various counties to the lack of home rule that they have had. We find in 1939 a memorial sent to the Congress of the United States after a meeting of members of the boards of supervisors from the different counties, requesting a change in the Organic Act. This was only one thing we found. More recently we have had letters from the local mayor and board of supervisors requesting this Committee on Local Government to consider very seriously the matter of giving more home rule to local units. We have tried to give as much home rule as we felt was compatible with the local situation. As we say in our report, we tried to tailor our proposal to fit the needs.

Some of us are firm believers in the principle of local government as strengthening all government. At the local level, people can take an interest in their immediate needs. They assume a responsibility and feel an identification with their government which people do not feel for a centralized government. A centralized government which has been developing over the last two decades brings about the feeling that is so current today, that the government is somebody else. He's a rich uncle, let him worry about our problems. But as soon as we ourselves assume the burdens for seeing that things are done and done properly and that the proper people are elected to carry out our wishes, then he is not our rich uncle, he is ourselves. His moneybags are not somebody elses' moneybags, they are the dollars that come out of our pockets. And we would like to see government return to the people, to strengthen their responsibility, to increase their interest, and to educate them in government.

Now that answers in part our objection to adopting in toto the Organic Act clause. We feel that the legislature, interested as it is in territorial government, has done little for county government. We are afraid that the same situation will hold when we become a State. Their duties are primarily to the State. It is for that that they are chosen to sit in their House of Representatives and in the Senate of their State. Their duties and their responsibilities and their burdens should not be for the local unit.

KAUHANE: The Committee on Local Government felt this:

[Reads from Committee Report No. 74]

> The urge for self-government is inherent in every American. This country has been made great by an abiding faith in the principle that the people have the ability and have a right to manage their own affairs. It is the purpose of the committee to give form and life to this urge in the Constitution.
>
> The question before the committee was to determine the kind and extent of such self-government. In arriving at an answer different theories and philosophies of local government were considered.
> The committee realized that theories alone were inconclusive. Therefore, careful study was given to pertinent matters as they now exist or may exist in the future in Hawaii. Theories and local conditions were compared and the proposal offered by your committee was tailored to obtain a workable form of local self-government.
> The committee felt very strongly that a local government unit should have strong powers of self-government with minimum interference from the legislature. Thus, we find the provision that, once defined, the political subdivision of the State shall have full authority to provide for its form of government and management of its own affairs.
>
> It may fairly be said that the consensus of the committee members was to allow as much independent local self-government as the welfare of the State would permit. For example, it was felt that local taxing power is a desirable feature of self-government, but that in Hawaii, if this were permitted without limitation, it would be injurious to other local governments and to the State. Such being the case, the taxing power was left to the legislature, the legislature to delegate portions of that power to local governments and to apportion State revenues in such manner and in such amounts as the legislature in its discretion might consider proper. Discrimination as to particular locality is consequently prohibited.
> The problem of who should be entitled to local government was studied and the legislature was given the power to set up uniform qualifications, and any area or local unit meeting these qualifications would then be entitled to draft and submit to the people a charter for local self-government without further legislative action.

That spells out the intent of the committee in providing the proposal as submitted, Proposal No. 26.

CHAIRMAN: May I state, to remind the committee, that the immediate question before the Convention is Delegate Richard's motion, seconded, to consider the proposal. The mate, Delegate Kauhane's motion, seconded by Delegate Bryan, is that there should be a subdivision of that question by taking up Section 1 and to tentatively approve Section 1. That's the question.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Phillips has the floor.

BRYAN: I think you misstated my motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion was made by Delegate Kauhane, seconded by you, for a consideration of Section 1 tentatively. Is that your understanding? All right, correction.

PHILLIPS: Then I'm to assume that we are now considering Section 1 of Standing Committee Proposal No. 26?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

PHILLIPS: Then I would like to have this to say about number 1 that, "The legislature shall define political subdivisions of the State," is at best a very confusing statement. "The political subdivisions of the State" aren't necessarily -- I mean is not a proper designation. In none of the constitutions that I was able -- that came to my hand was I able to find comparable nomenclature, nor was I able to find an actual statement that would support the fact that a political subdivision is necessarily a county.

There is some doubt in my mind now that there is -- that the political subdivision is a county at all because the county is a primary division of the State, and that the so-called subdivisions are, to call them properly, would be called civil divisions of the State. Now to call them and to say -- to define political subdivisions is to put into the Constitution a simple section, I mean a section which the legislature would not have any alternative but to break the State up into its various lower administrative districts. Now all this section does and all it accomplishes by the word "define" is to mark or limit the boundaries of the various political subdivisions. But a political subdivision, when you really check it over, you find out it's nothing more than a district that has been set off in order to establish a base for representation in the legislature. So if we are only to define political subdivisions, then we are confining ourselves to -- we are confining the legislature, and under the strict construction of the courts of the State we would not be able to break them down into their administrative, their judicial, their election, their military significance. So it's imperative that that wording be worked out.

I believe that in the report that I -- that is coming out, is on the floor now and is coming to the attention of the Convention -- I believe that the section, the first section in there will provide for the incorporation of the various civil divisions of the State, or if they care to call them, the civil subdivisions of the State, or, as would be more proper, the local government of the State; that in permitting them to be incorporated would be to establish them; and in incorporating them, it is essential that in an incorporation charter that you specify the boundaries. Those boundaries would be set by the people who have to live in them. That's where self-government really comes from. To have the legislature define all the political subdivisions or any of the administrative subdivisions which is essentially what a county or a city is for—I shouldn't say a city there, I'll take that back, I mean a city has other functions and more primary functions than just that of administration of the state's affairs, but a county's primary -- its basic function, the reason for it being created at all is contained in the fact that the State has created it for that purpose.

Therefore, now that the committee report is on the floor, if it pleases the chairman, I would like to find out just what the logic is in putting these minority reports out. I have now -- I mean the thing has moved around in such a manner I really am confused myself. I know that I would like to present my minority report, but I feel that it should be presented after the majority report has completely been considered, and then any additions to or subtractions from would be either covered by my minority report or at least would have the proper consideration on the floor. Could you inform me on that, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: You are being given every consideration, Delegate Phillips. The immediate motion, of course, is -- the question before us is the adoption tentatively of Section 1 of the Committee Proposal 26. Now the Standing Committee Report No. 91, your minority report, is before the group. You have the floor. You may proceed in whatever legitimate manner you may.

PHILLIPS: Well, that's why I rose to a point of information. Now I am not at all in accord nor do I care to think that there's any necessity for discussing this business of defining political subdivisions. Because of that, I would like to replace Section 1 with -- we'll say Section 1 of the minority report No. 91. But I don't believe that would be proper at this time because it should -- I believe that it would be more courteous and more judicial to have the Committee Proposal No. 26, Section 1, be considered by the Convention. At the same time, I believe that they would have to reconsider the minority report, the first section of the minority report, which I feel establishes or is attempting to establish -- I mean establishes the same thing that is attempting to be established in this first section here, but which there are not either the proper kinds of words or sufficient words to properly define it.

CHAIRMAN: Are you referring to your page 9 of your report, the first section, entitled "Organization of local government"?

DOI: Point of order again. I think Mr. Richards made the motion to consider the proposal as a whole with this in mind, that there are three different theories. Let's consider those three different theories and agree on one and then work out the detailed provision. Otherwise, we'll have to go back and forth, back and forth. I had thought that that motion to adopt Section 1 was out of order because of the previous motion to consider the whole theory. If it's not out of order, I would suggest that we have the mover of that motion withdraw the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The movant for -- It was really a division of the question as proposed by Delegate Richards, namely consider the entire proposal, and the division was moved --

DOI: I don't believe we can divide the question and save time.

NIELSEN: Mr. Chairman.

PHILLIPS: I believe I still have the floor.

CHAIRMAN: Well the committee certainly is disposed to carry the ball and to suggest whatever manner it desires.

KAUHANE: You're right in the exercise of your duties, Mr. Chairman, but Mr. Bryan made a statement. Whether he was amending Richards' motion or not it was not clearly understood by the chairman of the committee, and I felt that he had requested the amendment so that we take up section by section. That being the case, I move to support his amendment, if the statement was to the effect that we were to consider the committee's proposal section by section.

BRYAN: If my request is confusing, I'd be very glad to withdraw it. The intent was that instead of moving the adoption of these sections, since there were sometimes two or three sections covered by one of the minority proposals, I moved that we consider the sections rather than adopt them. Then after they were considered, then the Convention could decide whether they wanted to adopt those sections or to consider the minority proposal. So I'd be very glad to withdraw my request as far as that goes, if you wish.

PHILLIPS: If I'm not mistaken, Mr. Chairman, I still have the floor. I didn't yield the floor when Delegate Doi rose to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

NIELSEN: Point of order. As long as there has been a move to adopt Section 1, why can't -- wouldn't the next move be for Mr. Phillips to suggest his Section 1 as an amendment to it and then we vote on it?

PHILLIPS: That is what I would like to find out.

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of information. I think it was expressed here that the theory of local government was first to be considered, whether we are delegating the power of taxation to local government or not, as raised by Delegate Anthony and Delegate Doi. If we can settle that question first, I think we can go on with the complete proposal. The main question can be put.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the Chair is faced, and I think the committee is faced with this decision to make. We have before us a concrete proposal by the committee and concrete proposals by the two other members of the committee who have filed minority reports. Now, as far as the chairman can see, we must have something concretely before us. If it is the desire of the committee to talk about the principle of local government as against considering directly the immediate concrete proposals, the Chair would be naturally faced with the situation, what is the immediate question?

J. TRASK: May we answer it?

CHAIRMAN: What is the inquiry, Delegate Trask?

J. TRASK: There was a motion duly made and seconded by Delegate Richards that the four sections of Proposal No. 26 be adopted. The Chair should have put the motion at that particular time, but did not do so. So the point of order raised by Delegate Doi at this particular time is wholly out of order because the Chair has recognized the motion and a second to consider Section 1 and that has already been carried. And Section 1 is before the committee at this particular time.

DOI: To consider Section 1 properly, we will have to consider the whole theory of government as recommended by the Local Government Committee because that is only a part of the whole theory. And should we also consider the Section 1 of Mr. Phillips', we'll also have to consider the whole theory back of his Section 1. Therefore, I submit we are wasting time if we do that. Why don't we agree on one of the three theories first.

CHAIRMAN: And what is therefore -- Mr. Doi, Delegate Doi, what therefore is your motion or suggestion?

DOI: Then your problem was that we didn't have any concrete matter before us. To get a concrete matter before this group, I submit that they should read the committee report; also that they listen attentively to this discussion.

DOI: I believe the committee chairman will present the theory of the committee in brief; and then let's hear the theory of Mr. Phillips; then let's hear the theory of Mr. Sakakihara; and then let's decide.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the chairman of the committee did read his report in full, Delegate Doi. And Delegate Sakakihara did so also and now we are with Delegate Phillips'.

HOLROYDE: Could I clear this up a little bit? Over here. I'll withdraw my second to Delegate Richards' original motion, so there's nothing before the house.

PHILLIPS: Therefore I move that the majority report -- that we continue with the majority report and proceed to debate on each section, one by one.

CHAIRMAN: There's no second.

MAU: You will notice that there are various groups carrying on conversations, some of them outside of the rails. I'm going to move a bomb shell so that they will be interested. I move that the delegates -- that the Committee of the Whole now consider whether or not the counties shall have the taxing power. That is the crux to the whole thing. If you once vote it down, then we can go into the other details. I so move and I wish I could get a second so we can decide that. That will take it out of the picture and then we can go on.

NIELSEN: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made and seconded that we consider the question, are the taxing powers for the counties or for the State?

HOLROYDE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order.

HOLROYDE: I think we'll have to reconsider the taxation and finance section to do that.

MAU: Not necessarily, not necessarily so.

PHILLIPS: I feel that -- I can't understand why these committee reports came out and onto the floor and are covered section by section and then all of a sudden we have one come out and we don't seem to be able to organize ourselves in order to consider it in the same manner that the rest have gone through. I prepared myself. I prepared my report on the basis of the habits that have been carried through on the Convention. Now I come before the Convention and I find out that they aren't going to consider the sections at all, but are going to consider some theory or some hypothesis or some major part of a section. That I believe, Mr. Chairman, is not either fair nor do I believe it would permit of the proper deliberative debate.

Therefore, I asked the Convention to vote against the motion to pull out the taxing power only and to try to spread it out and straighten it out before we settle the basic thing which is involved here, which is local self-government. That is our problem, not taxation. Taxation is something that you append to -- that you give later after you give the people self-government, but first we must consider self-government. The title of the committee was Local Government, and to bring out taxation at this time is only to preclude any individual showing that this would be the best method of taxation at a later time.

I feel that we should continue to handle this report in the same manner that all reports that came out on the floor and section by section. Give us an opportunity. Give the majority report an opportunity to be heard and to be carefully gone through. Then the minority report. We can hold up our action on them and our voting on them until it's through and then the Convention will have an opportunity with clear minds to see what has been presented to them.

CORBETT: I think that we are managing to waste a great deal of very valuable time. The committee seems to have agreed among themselves that there are three different, diverse opinions about home rule. One is that there should be none, that the local government should be entirely dependent upon the legislature; the second is a modified version of home rule without the power of taxation; and the third is total home rule. Now I agree with the committee members that we must decide on one of these three theories and then fit our proposal into the theory that we adopt.

Delegate Mau has proposed, and his suggestion has been seconded, that we give the city and counties the power of taxation. Now that seems to me to go to the heart of total home rule. Possibly we could continue to discuss that and that alone until we have put it to a vote and then go backwards. If that meets with the approval of the body, I would like to suggest that we proceed and don't waste any more time, which our President yesterday urged us not to do.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

LOPER: I rise to a point of information. Mr. Chairman would you review for us the motions and the amendments tha are pending before the committee at the present time?

CHAIRMAN: The only question before the committee is this, whether or not we should consider giving the counties taxation power or not.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? All those in favor of considering that question, whether or not the county shall have the taxing power or not, say "aye." Those opposed, "no." The noes seem to have it.

LOPER: Do I understand that the Committee Proposal No. 26 and the amendment proposed by Delegate Sakakihara are now before the committee for discussion?

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

LOPER: In my analysis of the provisions of the majority and the minority reports, I note that Committee Proposal No. 26 says something about general laws and about no special legislation affecting finances and property. I think that perhaps both provisions are alike on that, the majority and the minority. Neither of them provide taxing power for the counties; the difference then seems to be only in the fact that Committee Proposal No. 26 provides for a charter for the local subdivisions and for the selection of officials in accordance with law. That is the only point on which they are different. In one case the minority report says that the selection of officials shall be as provided by the legislature and the other, majority report, says that it shall be as determined by the political subdivisions.

I'm concerned in this matter because of the financing of public schools. I would like to ask any member of the committee, the chairman, vice-chairman, or any of the others, if they can answer how will public schools be financed if we adopt Committee Proposal No. 26?

KAUHANE: If I may attempt to answer the question, I'll answer it this way. That the Committee on Taxation yesterday and today took care of the matter of finances of county government with relation to the maintenance of school buildings.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Dr. Loper? Does any one else desire to further answer the question posed by Dr. Loper?

WHITE: May I ask Delegate Kauhane to repeat what he just said.

KAUHANE: The question asked by Doctor Loper was settled by the Committee on Finances. When the question was asked of the school buildings, the maintenance cost of school buildings, who was to bear the cost of that, I think your committee here went on record as stating that that would be considered as part of the financial setup with respect to the bond and revenues that is to be raised for the respective counties.

RICHARDS: The question of maintenance of school buildings has nothing to do with the -- The only statement that we made was that bonds issued for the construction of schools, with the exemption of one item of $300,000 that had recently been issued by Kauai, was considered state obligation -- would be considered state obligations and not county obligation. We didn't get into the question of maintenance of schools at all.

H. RICE: I think that the whole proposal hinges on Section 2, the matter of finance is in Section 3, and that reserves the right to the State on finances. In Section 2, if we adopt Section 2 as it is, we'll put the police department and the liquor boards all under the county. In most states, I think—I haven't checked the number on this—but I understand in most states the liquor is controlled by the state, and the police is controlled by their subdivisions. In other words, if we adopt Section 2, and it becomes part of our Constitution --

PHILLIPS: I rise to a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Please state it.

PHILLIPS: I'm still confused as to just how we're attacking this proposal. I don't believe that was ever settled and until it is, I want to know exactly what we're talking about.

CHAIRMAN: Well, there is --

HOLROYDE: Actually as Delegate Rice said the real crux of this proposal by the committee is Section 2. If we debate Section 2 and come to a conclusion of adoption or rejection of that section, I think we could reconcile some of the other problems. With that in mind, I move, therefore, that we tentatively adopt Section 2 of the committee proposal.

PHILLIPS: I rise again to a point of information. I don't believe this satisfies how we are going to proceed with the rest of the report then. I feel that we need a plan on which we're going to attack the proposals; therefore, again I move that we consider Proposal 26.

HEEN: Point of order. Point of order.

HOLROYDE: I yield to the delegate.

HEEN: The delegate was asking for information; instead of that he's making a statement.

CHAIRMAN: Was there a second to --

KAUHANE: I'd like to second the motion by Delegate Holroyde.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Holroyde's motion is properly seconded, that we consider and tentatively approve Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 26. Ready for the question?

J. TRASK: I should think we should hear some debate on this section before we proceed with the vote.

FUKUSHIMA: I don't know how many hours we've wasted, but this proceeding this afternoon reminded me of my bank account, it's not making any progress. But I would think that we can take care of Delegate Phillips' amendment right now, and if we -- if the Convention wants his proposal, we'll adopt it; if not, we can go on with the majority and the other minority amendment. So at this time I move that we adopt Delegate Phillips' amendment to the committee proposal.

PHILLIPS: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Phillips', which part?

FUKUSHIMA: I believe he has an amendment, does he not?

CHAIRMAN: Well, he hasn't proposed that as yet. You mean his entire proposal or Section 1 of his proposal, please?

FUKUSHIMA: His entire proposal, and we can vote on his proposal; then go ahead.

NIELSEN: Point of order.

J. TRASK: Point of order. We are -- have tentatively adopted Section 2. Now the gentleman should confine his --

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me. It has not been adopted as yet.

J. TRASK: Tentatively, Section 2?

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to tentatively adopt Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 26.

CROSSLEY: My point of order -- May I have the floor? If they would like to follow the procedure suggested by Delegate Fukushima, it would then be necessary for Delegate Holroyde to withdraw his motion. Otherwise the motion before us is to adopt Section 2. We have not acted on it yet.

KING: I feel that Delegate Fukushima has brought out a point that we might decide. In other words, if we'll forget the majority report tentatively or if Delegate Phillips had moved to delete everything in the majority report, outside of the enacting clause, and substitute his, he has submitted a complete proposal. Then we can consider his or not as the case may be. Until we straighten out the parliamentary situation, I move for a short recess.

PHILLIPS: Second the motion.

HOLROYDE: I second the motion for a short recess.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 26.

HOLROYDE: I withdraw that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Holroyde withdraws. There is nothing before the Committee at this time. President King is recognized, who's just been standing, waiting.

KING: I yield to the delegate from - -

SAKAKIHARA: In order to expedite the matter, at this time I move that the amendment proposed by me to the Committee Proposal No. 26 be adopted.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the amendment of Delegate Sakakihara submitted to the committee, reading as follows:

> Section 1. The legislature may create counties and town and city municipalities within the state and provide for the government thereof, and all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the legislature.

and the same shall be adopted.

KING: There is some discussion whether the minority reports should be discussed first or the majority report. I feel that if the Convention or the committee adopts the minority report then it serves no useful purpose to discuss the several sections of the majority report. Of course, after the adoption of the minority report, additional amendments might be offered. I, therefore, feel that a decision on this minority report should precede the discussion of the separate sections of the majority report. I have suggested to Mr. Phillips that pending action on this particular amendment he may offer the same sort of amendment, that his seven sections be substituted as an amendment to the entire article offered by the Committee on Local Government. I therefore favor the vote on the amendment offered by Delegate Sakakihara at this time.

CHAIRMAN: There's no - - Any further discussion on the - -

SAKAKIHARA: Question.

ANTHONY: What's the question before the house. Is the vote on - -

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is the motion by Delegate Sakakihara with reference to his minority amendment to Committee Proposal No. 26, Section 1, which is on all the desks.

ANTHONY: Well, I think we'd better have the members of the body on the floor when we are going to take an important vote like that. They're not here.

KING: I was going to suggest that the Sergeant-at-Arms and the messengers ask the members of the Legislative Committee to please come in.

CHAIRMAN: Will the messengers and Sergeant-at-Arms and everybody employed by this Convention please get all the members off the floor or off the streets.

WIRTZ: Point of information. I don't know whether in your statement of the question before the house, you tied it down to Section 1. My understanding was that Mr. Sakakihara's amendment was to supplant the entire four sections that are contained in Committee Proposal No. 26.

CHAIRMAN: Well, in direct reply there is nothing before the committee - -

WIRTZ: There's a motion.

CHAIRMAN: - - except Delegate Sakakihara's amendment as circulated which reads - - which begins "Section 1."

WIRTZ: And the motion - -

CHAIRMAN: And that the intention is to supplant, of course, Committee Proposal 26.

WIRTZ: As I understand it, he has moved to adopt the amendment which is not an amendment only to Section 1, but an amendment to the entire article.

CHAIRMAN: The entire proposal of the committee, No. 26, that is correct.

For the benefit of the delegates who have just now seated, the motion before the Committee of the Whole at this time is the proposal by Delegate Sakakihara which seeks to supplant the majority Committee Proposal No. 26 reading as follows:

> Section 1. The legislature may create counties and towns and city municipalities within the state and provide for the government thereof, and all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the legislature.

ANTHONY: I've an amendment. May I read the amendment? I move that this proposal - - amendment be amended to read as follows:

> The legislature shall create counties and city municipalities within the state and provide for the government thereof by the registered voters therein, and all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the legislature to confer upon such political subdivisions local self-government insofar as may be consistent with this Constitution.

If I can get a second to that, I'd like to explain the purpose of the amendment.

CROSSLEY: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: You second that? Thank you, Delegate Crossley.

ANTHONY: The reason I'm tendering this amendment is, if we adopt Delegate Sakakihara's motion, that will be a complete elimination of the committee proposal and the committee report, and as I understand it there was an effort—I think a desirable effort—on the part of the committee to secure local self-government, which the present Organic Act provision does not secure.

For instance, when I was attorney general I recall the legislature started to pass such laws. Delegate Wirtz came to my office one time and said, "How about this? Here's the legislature passing a law about the tennis court down at Ala Moana." In other words, they were telling the Board of Supervisors to put a new surface on the tennis surface. Well, now it's that sort of nonsense, as I imagine, is one of the purposes of this committee, and I think it's a very desirable purpose, and therefore if we just adopt Delegate Sakakihara's motion - - amendment, you'll be preserving that same situation, and I think that can be improved upon. I'm not particularly fond of this amendment of mine, but I still think that something should be done with the Organic Act provision to prevent such instances as I've just discussed.

PORTEUS: Such instances didn't eventuate in legislation, did they?

ANTHONY: Well, if the question is addressed to me, the answer is yes. The money was - - the mandate was actually passed, and it came to the governor's office and came over to my office and at that point the county attorney intervened. I've forgotten whether I persuaded Governor Stainback to veto it or not, but it passed both houses of the legislature. That's the point.

CHAIRMAN: Does Delegate Phillips desire to be heard?

PHILLIPS: I would not like to see that motion passed for various definite reasons. That the legislature shall create a local government and take it away from the people, that the legislature should prevent the people from having the self-government for which the country itself is based on is to me -- I mean I could hardly believe my ears. Perhaps the delegate from the fourth district is versed in law but I doubt now since he proposes an amendment like this that he is versed in municipal law. I have great doubt.

I would like to read you that right down through the periods as set forth in Hawaiian history that they've had the same difficulty. The 1907 Act of Congress which finally got through was the result of a Congressional Board being sent down here to investigate the difficulties that existed between the highly centralized type of Hawaiian government that we had and the lack of local government completely. The reason for that highly centralized type of government was to keep the people or the natives completely under the thumb of the local population -- I mean of the Territory. There was no desire at any time to let them have the kind of self-government for which America is famous.

I quote directly from that history.* "The major problems," at that time, "in setting up these local governments centered about the division of the functions of government between the territorial and county organizations and the adjustment of their financial requirements. The arrangements first made were not entirely satisfactory and these problems became a continuing source of controversy." It goes on to say that, "Nearly every legislature has dealt with them in some way, and it does not seem likely that the controversy will cease until the existence of the local governments, the sources and limits of their revenues, and the scope of their authority are defined in the Organic Act." And then it had in parentheses, "(or in the Constitution of the State of Hawaii) and are thus made independent of the territorial (or state) legislature." The sources of irritation were chiefly that they were legislative mandates that were handed down to the counties. That continued and will continue unless we take this into consideration and do something about it here in this Constitution. As it said there, every legislature since 1907 has made an attempt, but a weak attempt, to give the counties what they deserve, local self-government.

I would like to quote further from some of the special legislation that has existed in the Territory.

ANTHONY: I at this time would like to withdraw my amendment, but I still think this question should be seriously considered before we adopt the delegate from Hawaii's simple incorporation of the Hawaiian Act -- Hawaiian Organic Act provision.

PHILLIPS: I believe I still have the floor.

KING: Will the delegate yield --

PHILLIPS: I'll yield.

KING: -- for a brief statement. I think we're all sympathetic toward what the Committee on Local Government is trying to obtain, a larger degree of self-government for the counties and any municipalities that might be created. However, I think there is a good deal of confusion whether the majority report goes too far or doesn't go far enough. I would like to ask Delegate Phillips if he'll complete his remarks, and then I want to make a motion to rise and ask permission to sit again. I do not want to deny Delegate Phillips the time that he has.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Phillips, Delegate Phillips, the President has asked, without prejudice to your continuing later on, to conclude your remarks temporarily so that the committee may rise and report progress and some attention given to the report so that later on you may proceed further.

PHILLIPS: I'll do that, Mr. Chairman.

CROSSLEY: I move that we rise, report progress, beg leave to sit again.

SAKAKIHARA: Before that motion is made, before I second that motion, I will withdraw my amendment at this time.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is made and seconded that the committee rise --

KING: Before the Chair puts the motion, it is our understanding, then, that the committee report and the two minority reports are before the Committee of the Whole, and there's no motion pending at this time. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. The motion before the house is that the committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again. All in favor say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

JUNE 24, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: The committee will please come to order. The committee shall consider Standing Committee Report No. 74, Committee Proposal No. 26 on local government. We were considering Standing Committee Report 74 with the attached Committee Proposal No. 26 on local government. There is nothing before the committee at this time, Delegate Sakakihara yesterday having withdrawn his motion and Delegate Phillips decided also to forego whatever matters he had to say, and then we declared adjournment.

CORBETT: I move for the tentative adoption of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 26.

PHILLIPS: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion made and seconded for tentative adoption of Section 1 of Committee proposal 26.

SAKAKIHARA: I withdrew my amendment yesterday hoping that it would give the Committee of the Whole and the Committee on Local Government an opportunity to be heard on the majority committee report and on the Committee Proposal No. 28 [i.e. 26]. Later on, however, I intend to offer my amendment, after full deliberations on the proposal.

CHAIRMAN: Will you please state that question again.

SAKAKIHARA: I'm serving notice to the Committee of the Whole that I propose to offer my amendment later on.

CHAIRMAN: The discussion now is on the tentative adoption of Section 1 of Committee Proposal 26.

CORBETT: The purpose of Section 1 and this committee proposal is to mandate the legislature to set up boundaries and to define the part that will go into the constitution of a political subdivision. They may be counties; they may be city and counties; they may be municipal corporations; they may be anything, as the legislature sees fit. But the committee felt that this was the first step toward the creation of political subdivisions, and they felt that they would like to insure the legislature enacting laws so that any political subdivision wishing to adopt a charter, which we have set out in Section 2 of our proposal, will be able to fit themselves into a certain properly defined group or unit; either a county, a city and county, or a city.

---

*Kuykendall, Ralph, and Day, A. Grove. Hawaii, a history. 1948.

KAUHANE: [Reads from Committee Report No. 74.]

The first section is strictly confined to the definition of political subdivisions. It does not empower the legislature to go beyond the definition, that is, no provision shall be made by the legislature as to the form and detailed management of the local subdivisions, except as provided in Section 2 in action on special requests and Section 3 on taxing power. The legislature is limited to defining standards, and that power may be exercised only by laws general and uniform in their application. The political effect of this limitation is that there will be no discrimination between localities. No locality meeting such standards will be precluded from becoming a political subdivision. The legislature will adopt by uniform laws, the conditions that a locality will have to meet before it can become a political subdivision. After the locality meets such conditions, it will be automatically entitled to a status as a political subdivision, without further action by the legislature.

TAVARES: I find difficulty in seeing how a provision like this will work. Don't you have to fix boundaries, and how can you fix boundaries if each subdivision is by general laws? I don't -- I'm a little afraid this provision isn't fully workable. If you mean the powers or the governmental organization or something like that, yes; but one of the things you have to have is boundaries, and I don't see how those can be by general and uniform laws.

PHILLIPS: May I attempt to answer that? In the event the municipality or the local unit was incorporated, the charter would have specified it. The charter sets forth, right at the beginning the charter would have specified just what the boundaries were of that particular unit.

DOI: I would like to attempt to answer the question raised by Delegate Tavares. The general and uniform laws would be something like this, that "Any island or combination of islands having a population of maybe 3,000 people or over are hereby authorized to form a local government known as a county government." Then you might have another general law reading, "Any island or combination of islands having a population of 500 or more but less than 3,000 will be entitled to a local government known as townships."

TAVARES: I do think we should consider that, in this connection, such a requirement is going to increase rather than decrease your cost of government. I believe in this Territory today, with all the kicks we've had, we have on the whole the most economically functioning government of any state as far as our local governments are concerned. The moment you have general laws authorizing this sort of thing, you're going to have the municipality of Wahiawa, the municipality of Kahuku, the municipality of Hilo, the municipality of Lanai, and -- but take Oahu, for instance. You could have Kailua and Lanikai one little municipality, and remember, every time you have one of those, you have a new mayor and a new set of officers to do that, and new taxes have to be levied to cover those extra salaries. I think we ought to be very sure we want this before we adopt such a provision.

I think in a large state, as most of the states in the mainland are, where you have a very large number of counties, it's impossible for a legislature to administer the private affairs or the local affairs of the many municipalities. But in this small territory, we probably will never have more than eight counties at the most. By that I mean one for each of the islands including Lanai and Molokai and maybe two on Hawaii, and so you've got a very, very small number of counties and you have a very economical set of government now.

I think we should be very careful before we allow a super imposition of these pyramided governments that they are having so much trouble with on the mainland where each little place that wants to be a town secedes, so to speak, and sets up its own little government and leaves the rest of the place flat.

DOI: I would like to again attempt to answer the statements and questions raised by Delegate Tavares. I gather from his statements that he is in agreement with at least having counties as they exist today, four counties, five rather. Then probably -- but he's against the creation of smaller subdivisions such as to superimpose upon the counties. I feel the same way as Mr. Tavares does and I stated my opinion in the committee.

Now, I think we can take care of this problem that Mr. Tavares stated by changing the wording to read, "The legislature shall have power to define," instead of making it mandatory that they must define these several different political subdivisions. So that they will have the power and it's in their discretion if in the future they feel that they should create smaller subdivisions to superimpose on the larger counties. In the continuity section we could have a provision to provide that the present setup shall continue until such time that the legislature shall provide, or the different localities shall come under the general and uniform laws.

CHAIRMAN: Do you move for the adoption of those words "have power to" after the word "shall"?

DOI: No, I just raised that as a possible answer, and I would appreciate it very much if Delegate Tavares would answer it.

TAVARES: I think that of course it's very difficult to discuss one section like this alone. We had that same trouble yesterday, so I'll have to go into some other sections incidentally. I think that pure home rule is not feasible unless you're going to give your home rule municipalities some share of the taxing power. Otherwise, you're going to have trouble. In practically all of the states that have the pure home rule, they give some taxing power to those municipalities, so that then there is an incentive for them to sort of set up their own little kuleana. In other words, here's a little hamlet in a middle of a wide, sparsely populated area and they want to set up their own fire department and various other things. So they, by local option or whatever you call it, form this little municipality and set up their own little local government with their own little powers of raising money and so forth. As long as the taxing power is not going to be given to the county—and I'm for not giving it to them—I don't believe that the home rule in any substantial sense is feasible. Therefore, I'd rather see some general law authorizing the legislature to create counties than do it piece-meal here.

PHILLIPS: I wonder if the last speaker would yield to a question.

CHAIRMAN: He apparently will. Proceed.

PHILLIPS: I don't mean it to be impertinent at all, only that I believe that -- I mean the committee itself, the standing committee had a tendency to look at home rule from the standpoint of taxation. Taxation is a very difficult thing. It would have to be worked out. I believe that the delegate that last spoke is very fond and is on record as having said that the tax system of Hawaii is one of the finest in the United States. I'm afraid that I have to agree with him. We do have a very fine system of taxation, but I feel that he's overlooking a series of questions. Isn't the delegate overlooking the fact that self-government, that is, a given small unit of people, should have the right to govern themselves, should have the right to choose their officers, should have the right to decide and plan the particular area that they live in, never forgetting the agency of the state relationship?

TAVARES: May I be allowed later on to answer this? I see it's time for me to leave with the delegation to see the Acting Governor. I would be glad to try to answer that.

CORBETT: May I move for a recess at this time?

DELEGATE: Second the motion for a recess.

CHAIRMAN: Hearing no objections, so ordered.

(RECESS)

KAUHANE: Is there a motion for the adoption of Section 1 of the committee proposal?

CHAIRMAN: There is now pending adoption, tentatively, of Section 1.

KAUHANE: I would like to second Delegate Apoliona's motion for the previous question.

PORTEUS: I had understood that the representative from the first representative district, the delegate from that district, had offered an amendment, but that amendment has incorporated portions of both one and two, so that if we adopt this on a tentative basis, it would not foreclose, would it, the presentation of the amendment at a later time?

KAUHANE: That's right. Everything is being adopted on a tentative basis.

PORTEUS: It wouldn't be necessary to reconsider, in other words, in order to consider the - -

KAUHANE: At a later time, if it is so desired.

CHAIRMAN: Will the Delegate Kauhane restate the question?

KAUHANE: The motion was made by Delegate Apoliona for the previous question and I seconded his motion.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the previous question? Adopt Section 1, tentatively.

ROBERTS: I'm in complete sympathy with the recommendations of the Committee on Local Government. I believe that we ought to give serious consideration to the desire and request for local government consistent with those institutions that we have established on a state-wide basis. I think as a democratic country, we have got to get people interested in government on a local basis and as close to their home communities as possible. We have established by state action certain things in the field of education and finance which are wholly commendable and probably should remain on a state-wide basis. There are, however, areas in which local self-government ought to be aided, and people should become more interested in the operation of their government, and the only way to do it is to create greater responsibility on the local level as close to the grass roots as possible.

I am in sympathy with the proposal, but certain suggestions have been made which indicate that there may be some difficulties in carrying it out. It has been pointed out, for example, that in the first section which is now before us for consideration, that the word "define," "the legislature shall define the political subdivision," merely means that the areas are to be set out, and the question has well been raised as to how the charter is actually to be put into effect. Shouldn't the legislature be permitted to indicate the method by which that charter is to be created? I would therefore move an amendment to Section 1. That the word "define"- -

APOLIONA: On a point of order. I now withdraw my motion for the previous question so that Delegate Roberts could give his amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. Proceed, Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: I would therefore move to amend Section 1, which incorporates in part the first part of the present Organic Act, and it would read, "The legislature shall create counties and city municipalities within the state, and the method of establishing the same." That would permit and in part meet the defect which has been suggested; and when we get to Section 2, it seems to me that Section 1, if adopted as amended, would meet that particular difficulty.

CORBETT: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is seconded by Delegate Corbett. The motion as seconded reads as follows - -

KAUHANE: Your Committee on Local Government accepts the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment made and accepted by the committee reads as follows: "The legislature shall create counties and city municipalities within the state, and the method of establishing the same."

TAVARES: Is it still the understanding that even if this is adopted, that does not foreclose an amendment to the whole article later by an alternative provision?

CHAIRMAN: That is the ruling and our understanding.

KAUHANE: The committee would like to go on record as approving any further amendments - - any reconsideration that we adopt Section 1 - - it's accepted by the committee on tentative basis, everything here is on a tentative basis. Then there can be any consideration of further amendment later.

HEEN: Did I understand the last speaker to say that the committee will approve any amendment that might be submitted later?

KAUHANE: We'll accept - - will consider any further amendment. It was expressed here that Delegate Sakakihara be given the right to submit his amendment.

HEEN: Oh, I see.

CHAIRMAN: The committee will not be obdurant to any suggested amendment later on.

BRYAN: Speaking to the amendment proposed by Dr. Roberts, do you think that the word "city" is required?

ROBERTS: I merely followed the language of the Organic Act as a matter of convenience. I don't think it is necessary.

CHAIRMAN: Any further debate on the amended Section 1?

PHILLIPS: It's very difficult for me to get up and say anything against this because my teacher, Doctor Roberts, would put me in a bad light. I would like to say this though, that for the legislature to create a county or municipality, no legislature ever creates a municipality. It doesn't create a city; it can very definitely and would, whether we put it here or not, create a county. A county is a defined area, as brought out by Delegate Tavares, is an area whose boundaries have been established to establish it as an administrative, a political . . .
[Part of the speech was not recorded.]

Congress will pick that out as one of the basic things wrong with the Constitution.

It seems local government doesn't have so very much meaning, just pass it right along, it doesn't mean much. But it is the grass-roots, the very fundamental of the kind, type, quality of government at the top of the ladder. The legislature itself, the special legislation that the legislature has been dealing in all these years is not a healthy thing. They've done a good job as best they can, but it's still special legislation; and because it's special legislation, any individual who is familiar with simple municipal corporations or muncipal law would tell you that it is not—and we can find it in all our manuals—that it is not a healthy thing to let the State create something when the desire for self-government, the pride of ownership, the pride of planning, beautifying, keeping clean and establishing efficiency, rests in the local unit.

Therefore, I think that this is not a necessary section if all it's going to do is just create a county. They would do that for the admininstrative purposes. Therefore, I feel that we should establish in our first section an opportunity for those individuals who are going to run, who are going to live in that community and not be dictated down from above, which has always been obnoxious to Americans. I believe that we should permit them, through a charter and a commission established by them or by the legislature, to put this thing into being through this charter and establish their right to self-government, limit them and let them discover and find out about their government on the bottom. Now to do it that way rather than to let the almighty legislative tyrannical body over there tell them how to, what their government is going to be, who - - how they are going to select their officers, what their boundaries are going to be and do it arbitrarily, is obnoxious to American democracy fundamentally.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Delegate Phillips. It is the rule, of course, I believe, that as communicated yesterday by Delegate Rice, we shall follow the idea of five minutes to each and not have any repeats until the other delegates have all spoken. Then, you may then consider speaking on the matter.

ROBERTS: On a matter of personal privilege.

CHAIRMAN: Dr. Roberts, you may answer.

ROBERTS: First, let me say that I do not accept Delegate Phillips as a student in the Convention. He is my equal as a delegate, with the power to vote and the power to express his opinion and his position. Further, I might point out that Mr. Phillips has already graduated from the University and therefore nothing that I may say and do will in any way affect his future.

CHAIRMAN: We are aware that we are all peers.

ROBERTS: I might state on the matter of the problem before us that the creation of the counties is not a creation in the sense of doing something which establishes something which has not existed in terms of property. It's an area which is recognized. If you don't create it in some form and establish the area, you may have so-called jurisdictional disputes. One area decides it wants this, one area decides it wants the same thing. Those problems, of course, can be resolved. The word "create," as I've used it, I don't thing can be objected to by the Congress of the United States. It is the word that they themselves put into our Organic Act. Now maybe the present Congress will think differently; that may be. I can see no serious objection to leaving the word "create." I think the problem that Delegate Phillips presents, I think is basically a problem of difference in terms as to what should ultimately go into the basic article.

APOLIONA: If all the delegates here assembled are satisfied with the section and have no further debate, I now move for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? The question is on the accepted amendment to Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 26, the amendment having been accepted by the committee, reading as follows: "Section 1. The legislature shall create counties and city municipalities within the state, and the method of establishing the same."

CASTRO: I do believe that the words "political suddivisions" is better and more all-encompassing than "counties and city municipalities"; soI would move to amend the amendment to delete "counties and city municipalities" and substitute in lieu thereof the words "political subdivisions," so that the section as amended would read "The legislature shall create political subdivisions within the state, etc."

KAUHANE: That's acceptable.

CHAIRMAN: Is that accepted? Will the committee chairman accept that amendment, to substitute the words "political subdivisions" for the words "counties and city municipalities"?

KAUHANE: We'll accept it.

PHILLIPS: The words "cities" and "municipalities" are identical. They are a repeat of one another. Then secondly, that would preclude any of your small cities or your so-called townships or if someone wanted to call it a village or something like that, or a district, or any other division of the future. We don't know exactly how transportation is going to change within even the next five years. So I feel that if we were to follow the accepted - - the generally accepted terminology as incorporated in all the other constitutions which I had an opportunity to go through, "the civil divisions," would encompass everything. Cities and counties as we know here, we have - - right now there are no such things as cities. We only have counties, excepting in the city and county which is a consolidation in Honolulu. Therefore, to just say "cities and counties" would be to establish for all time no opportunity for anybody living in a city which, we'll say, originally was a village, then all of a sudden due to technology it thrives and becomes a very large group, but it was never considered a city, so therefore it never will be considered a city and it will be right down into the future subservient just as New York City is today subservient to Albany.

I would say - - I would move to amend that, instead of the terminology as suggested by Delegate Castro, that the term "civil divisions," which would be sufficiently inclusive, sufficiently flexible, and definitely understood by the courts because they have a great deal of interpretation on that.

CHAIRMAN: I hear no second to the motion.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded by Delegate Sakakihara, namely that the words "political subdivision" which has been accepted by the committee, the amendment made by Delegate Castro shall be stricken and in lieu thereof the words "civil divisions" supplied by Delegate Phillips, seconded by Delegate Sakakihara. Ready for the question?

HEEN: You'll find in the articles already approved by this Convention the use of the term "political subdivisions or agency thereof" in several places. This might create a situation where you'd have to interpret the difference between "civil divisions" and "political subdivisions." I think inasmuch as we've used the term "political subdivision or agencies thereof" in the articles which already have been approved, we ought to follow that same language throughout.

APOLIONA: Your committee is not in favor of that word "civil" and I hope that the Delegate Phillips' amendment will be voted down, and now I move for the previous question.

NIELSEN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order.

NEILSEN: We have an amendment and we have an amendment to the amendment and now we have another amendment to that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: All the amendments have been accepted, except the last.

NIELSEN: Well, you can't have three amendments.

CHAIRMAN: These are not amendments. They are accepted by the committee and they are not considered amendments as such.

PHILLIPS: I really regret taking any more time of this Convention than is necessary, but I'd like to say to Delegate Heen that that word "political subdivision," I wrestled with it for about three solid days, and it's an elusive term. I would say this though, that the word "political" attempts to establish an adjective which would define the fact that a county or a subdivision or individual of a state is broken down into that division for this purpose, for basing the representation in the State legislature, and therefore if you were to say "political," then you would mean that that is the chief purpose for which that subdivision was established. Now the word "civil" includes administration, election—which is your political—the various other things such as, you have your elections -- you have more, and especially and primarily you have a . . . [Not recorded.]

BRYAN: I think that it would be entirely adequate to use the word "political subdivisions."

PHILLIPS: I have the floor. If I --

CHAIRMAN: Unless you'd like to state a point of order.

BRYAN: I'm sorry, I thought you were finished. I'm very sorry.

PHILLIPS: No, my mike went dead.

BRYAN: Well, would it be acceptable to you if the Committee of the Whole report was to show that that would include towns and cities?

PHILLIPS: I would say that we could, simply, just a matter of clarity, and I would like to support it by this, that Dillon's Rule, which is applicable in municipal law is -- just one second, I have it here. It's one of the most important reasons why we should carefully say what we mean in this particular section. There has been massive, great stacks of cases come out of litigation between municipalities and counties and states, and out of that has been established what has been known as Dillon's Rule. If you'll bear with me just a minute, I'll read it. Dillon's Rule essentially is this:

> It is a general and undisputed proposition of law that a municipal corporation possesses and can exercise the following powers and no others: First, those granted in express words.

CHAIRMAN: Well, Delegate Phillips, our attention is directed to your suggested amendment, to the term and definition of the words "civil division." Now you're talking about municipalities and city municipalities. I'll have to rule you out of order unless you confine yourself specifically to the definition of "civil division," whether it includes or excludes "political subdivision" or whether it's a broader term which would include "political subdivision."

SAKAKIHARA: In order to expedite the matter, I withdraw my second to that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house, therefore --

H. RICE: I'd ask the chairman of the committee and the committee to accept Senator -- Delegate Heen's amendment, "political subdivision or the creation thereof -- or any agency therof," because I can see that the Water Board on Maui would be an agency of the county, and I think that that would be agreeable to the committee.

KAUHANE: Mr. Rice being a member of the committee, the full committee will accept that amendment made by Delegate Heen.

HEEN: I did not make that motion to have agencies included in that definition. I think if you use "political subdivision" it would include any agencies that might be created afterwards. I think the amendment proposed by Delegate Roberts and accepted by the committee is the one that should be adopted.

DELEGATE: Question.

MAU: Before you put the question, I have no objections to the words "political subdivision" being substituted, but I think the Convention ought to know that that is a very, very much broader term than "counties or city municipalities or towns," so that in the creation of these political subdivisions throughout the various counties we could have townships, villages. We could have education districts, irrigation districts. They are all political subdivisions. Now, of course, that would be left to the legislature, but I just want to point out that that term is so broad that you can have more than merely county governments and city governments.

APOLIONA: In the language of H.R. 49 as amended the phrase "political subdivision" is used throughout, and I think if Congress uses that word throughout in its language in H.R. 49, it's not wrong to use it in our Constitution.

ROBERTS: May I suggest, since the statements made by Mr. Mau and Mr. Phillips do raise some question, that the Committee of the Whole report show that the adoption of this language does not preclude the creation of counties, cities, and other civil divisions. If the Committee of the Whole report will show that, then I think our problem can be met.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is this, as the amendment recently made by Delegate Rice was accepted, to read as follows: "The legislature shall create political subdivisions or any agencies thereof within the state, and the method of establishing the same."

ROBERTS: I understand that "other divisions" were left out.

APOLIONA: "Or agencies" was left out.

CHAIRMAN: So that it reads as follows: "The legislature shall create political subdivisions within the state, and the method of establishing the same." Ready for the question? Those in favor say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carried.

PORTEUS: May I point out that it's now five minutes after 11 or 10 past 11. Unless we move along today, we're not going to finish this article. I think it is highly desirable, if we can. So I suggest that we limit the speakers to five minutes on each point, and that the Chair insist that all people speak before the person who has spoken speaks a second time. I'd be very happy to assist the Chair in being the unmentionable that gets up and directs attention to the fact that the person has spoken more than once before the others have spoken, or that they have spoken more than five minutes, if that procedure is acceptable.

HEEN: I move then, that it is the sense of this committee that speakers be limited to not more than five minutes discussing any issue; and in connection with that I move that the Secretary be timekeeper and referee.

NIELSEN: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." Opposed, "no." [Carried.]

CORBETT: I move for the tentative adoption of Section 2.

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Holroyde seconds.

KAUHANE: [Reads from Committee Report No. 74.]

> The first sentence of Section 2 deposits a constitutional right with each political subdivision to adopt a charter of its own choosing. The committee feels that the legislature should establish mechanics for this including the manner of electing a charter commission, the com-- position of this group, their method of procedure and the means for referring the charter to the people and should also provide the funds therefor. This does not give the legislature authority to detail what shall be contained in a charter or to interfere in any way with the self-determination of each political subdivision. If a political subdivision has the power to frame and adopt its own charter, even in the absence of complete taxing power, it is considered to have at least some degree of home rule. This is the political philosophy strongly endorsed by your committee.

The committee feels that any board, commission or department of the local government should be a constituent part of such local government and that all appointments to such boards, commissions or departments should be made by the duly constituted authorities of such local government.

CHAIRMAN: Any further debate on the tentative approval of Section 2?

SAKAKIHARA: I, at this time, desire to offer an amendment to Section 2 of the proposed amendment, Committee Proposal No. 26. I think my amendment has been circulated and distributed to the members of the committee. I think this is the appropriate time to take up the amendment. My amendment reads as follows:

Section 1. The legislature shall create counties, and may create town and city municipalities within the state, and provide for the government thereof, and all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by legislation.

HEEN: It seems to me that amendment should be offered to Section 1 of the article proposed by the majority of the Committee on Local Government - -

CHAIRMAN: I might indicate that - -

HEEN: - - or it may be substituted for one and two; and if that is so, then of course - - and if it is adopted, then we don't have to do anything more.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. Delegate Sakakihara yesterday indicated, and it was the sense of the committee, that his amendment would apply to practically the entire proposal. Any further discussion?

CORBETT: I would like to point out to the members of the Convention that this proposal leaves out two points in our Section 2 which the committee feels are of importance. One, the formation of any local group of their own charter, the choosing of the method by which they wish to be governed. If it is a city, do they want to be governed by a mayor and a board; do they want to be governed by a commission form of government; do they want a city manager, or what? We feel that local people should have this choice. Now, there is nothing said about that in the amendment offered.

The next thing which is completely omitted in the amendment is any reference to the legislature not interfering with local government. Now, I don't wish my good friends to jump on me and say that I don't have faith in the legislature. I've always been a very strong backer and an ardent admirer of legislators individually and collectively, but I do feel that the burden of local government for people who are elected to govern the state is too much, and they should not interfere with local government. The officials elected at a local level should take care of the burden that their people lay on their shoulders.

SERIZAWA: I believe the amendment as offered by Delegate Sakakihara leaves it up to the legislature to decide as to whether or not the local subdivision will appoint or elect its officials. I believe the consensus of the Committee on Local Government was that as much home rule as feasible should be given to the local subdivision, and for that reason I believe that all officials, whether appointive or elective, should be decided by the local subdivision. For that reason, I am against the phrase in the last two lines that say - - the last three lines which says, "All officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the legislature." I think that should be the prerogative of the local subdivision.

RICHARDS: I have been sitting here day after day after day listening to this discussion on the point of whether officials of State government should be appointed by the governor or handled in such manner. And there has been continual talk about not having faith in the people. Now, apparently, the legislature doesn't have faith in the people either because they wish to retain - - or rather certain delegates wish to make the legislature all-powerful over the rights of the people. I don't quite understand that particular way of thinking.

We of the committee felt that the people should have the say in how they should be governed at the local level. It was brought up yesterday and remarked that citizens of Molokai had to go to the legislature to get redress from the County of Maui. Now, if the County of Maui was able to form its own government, probably that would not be necessary. The government has been thrown at the County of Maui by the legislature. My feeling is that we should trust the people and permit them to have their own form of local government of their own choosing.

APOLIONA: I am speaking against the amendment. Your Committee on Local Government is trying to get for the people of the several counties exactly what we delegates in the Convention here assembled is trying to get for the people of the State of Hawaii.

CHAIRMAN: Would you yield for a moment, please? There is some doubt in the Chair's mind whether or not the motion made by Delegate Sakakihara, the amendment, was seconded. I don't believe it was seconded.

WOOLAWAY: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded by Delegate Woolaway. Proceed.

APOLIONA: As I have said, we delegates here assembled in this Convention are trying to get for the State of Hawaii the type of government which we in committee here are trying to get for the people of the several counties, and that is home rule as much as possible. We recognize the supremacy of the State just as much as the State recognizes the supremacy of the Congress. The Congress of the United States has in the past fifty years put Hawaii on probation, yes, on probation, before she could be welcomed and taken in to the states as one of the states of our Union. Congress has sent congressional committees after committees down to Hawaii to investigate.

PHILLIPS: I rise to a point of personal privilege. I believe that the delegate has made a misstatement there. I think that just as the states are under or subordinate to the Congress, I don't feel that that is the real difference - -

CHAIRMAN: That's part of debate. Proceed.

APOLIONA: I prefaced my argument on that—home rule as much as possible.

The Congress of the United States has sent committees after committees down to these islands of ours to ascertain for themselves whether Hawaii has met with the qualifying requirements and needs to become a state. Congress has defined to the people of Hawaii the definition of a state and today Hawaii has answered to Congress that she has what is needed to be a state. In this section we are exactly saying what the Congress has been saying to the people of Hawaii, and that is, "Here are your qualifications, go and meet them." Here we are asking the State legislature to set the qualifications for county self-government, and if and when a political subdivision qualifies itself to be self-governing, then the State legislature should grant the deserving political subdivisions self-government, not detrimental to its cause.

Now, we ask ourselves, what constitutes a political subdivision? For our purpose here we can say each island is a potential political subdivision. Having determined this factor as one of the qualifications of a political subdivision, we now say to the legislature, provide for that form of government thereof, whether county or city and county or city municipality, reserving to the several political subdivisions the form of government it desires. We agree that complete home rule is an impossibility, just as a complete home rule for the State of Hawaii is a complete impossibility. But we do say, and we say with emphasis, that out of respect to the lowest level of government for, of and by the people, we should encourage and not discourage our local government to have as much home rule as possible. How we are going to do it is up to each and every one of the delegates here assembled to help us in this problem and we so request it.

TAVARES: I think a little information here is in order. Under the Organic Act, contrary to Delegate Phillips' report, Congress did not create counties. Congress authorized our legislature to create them and under that authorization our legislature has created them and there has been quite a measure of self-government. If you listen to the arguments here, you'd think there had been no self-government. There has been a great deal of it.

Secondly, Congress didn't see fit to put a mandate on the legislature. It left the legislature to make cutting and trying here and there, to work out the best possible adjustment.

Thirdly, it is my understanding that a large number of states, perhaps a majority, do not have mandatory provisions in their constitutions for home rule, according to the Manual as I read it.

Another point, we are a very small territory, as I said before. Our legislature has, can and does pay more attention to local problems than a legislature of a large state. And for that reason, we are justified in burdening it, as we wouldn't be in a large state, with more local problems than we otherwise would.

Another point I'd like to bring out. I make no criticism of this, of the county committee. I think if all the lawyers in this Convention had worked for 60 days on this problem, they probably couldn't have brought in any more satisfactory solution than this. My own feeling is, I'd like to see more home rule, but I don't think it's been worked out carefully enough and I don't think we can, in the time we have, to make -- to see what is going to happen to the presently existing government, some of these elements of which we would like to see preserved. I am not satisfied, from the language given in the committee majority's report, as to just what would happen. I don't think we can, in the time we have, make such a satisfactory working out of a program or plan to show just what will happen. Now, there is no agreement among the various states as to what home rule should be, or how much home rule is to be, or just how it should be done. So it's no wonder that we can't agree here.

Now, I think one of the greatest objections the counties have had, has been to the mandates which have been placed on the counties at times to pay certain claims. I think that's very bad practice. I would like to ask the sponsor of the amendment if he would accept the following amendment to be added -- First of all, an amendment. Instead of the last two words "the legislature," insert the word "law," "as shall be provided by law." And then add the following sentence: "No law shall be passed mandating any county, town or municipality to pay any previously accrued claim."

CHAIRMAN: "No law shall be passed mandating any political subdivision -- ?

TAVARES: Well, I -- the word I had was "any county, town or municipality," to fit in with Delegate Sakakihara's amendment which reads, "The legislature shall create counties, and may create town and city municipalities."

I think there's some virtue in retaining the Organic Act provision. I'd like to point out that the Organic Act says "may" as to all. We are mandating county creation and making it permissive for other types, and I think that's all right. That's to recognize our existing counties' status, so it can never be taken away, but with that addition, I think a great deal of the trouble that the counties have might be taken away.

I'd like to read that sentence again. First of all, change the words, "the legislature" in the last two lines of Delegate Sakakihara's amendment to read "law." Then add the following sentence: "No law shall be passed mandating any county, town or municipality to pay any previously accrued claim." I move the amendment.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion and on behalf of the movant, we accept the amendment.

SAKAKIHARA: My attorney-in-fact has expressed my opinion.

TAVARES: Now, the meaning of this is this. Where a claim is already accrued against the county, even if in favor of the State, we shall not mandate the county by law to pay it. We go into court or do it some other way. However, that will not prevent the legislature, in making appropriations, to put conditions on those appropriations; but it will prevent the legislature from saying to a county, "You shall pay this claim which was previously accrued." And I think that is one of the greatest sore spots about mandates.

RICHARDS: I think that is one point that the counties object to, but having served on the counties, there are a lot of other mandates that are just as obnoxious. There is a great habit on the part of the legislature of mandating the construction of certain things without providing the funds. That is a mandate for the future, and it's swell to pay a political debt by getting something through the legislature that merely mandates the county to do something without providing any money for it. That is very obnoxious to members who have served on any county government.

There is another matter, too, and that is when local functions are involved and not State functions. Why is it that the governor appoints various boards to handle just local functions, such as the liquor commission, police commission and other commissions of that nature that are purely local in their functions?

ASHFORD: Speaking for the forgotten island of Molokai, we very much approve legislative mandates.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask the proposer of this amendment a question? Will you yield to a question, Delegate Tavares?

TAVARES: I'm always glad to yield.

SHIMAMURA: You have here "pay any previously accrued claim." Is there any special reason for "previously accrued"? Couldn't you just say "pay any claims"?

TAVARES: Yes, there is this difference. I think that after a claim has accrued, the legislature should leave it to the courts to decide who should pay that claim. The legislature shouldn't move in there and be judge, jury and prosecutor. But as to future claims, I think the legislature ought to have some leeway to say that if certain types of claims accrue in the future, they shall be handled a certain way or certain things shall be done. I'm not sure if we made it all claims, whether we would be foreclosing the legislature too much. But I do think that as to accrued claims, there has been a definite abuse in the past about the legislature taking on these claims and acting as judge and jury.

SHIMAMURA: Do I understand from the speaker that the meaning of the term "previously accrued" means accrued at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, or accrued at any future date?

TAVARES: I think it means accrued at the time the law is passed. Already accrued at the time the law is passed. We don't want the legislature acting as a court.

SHIMAMURA: That was my understanding at first.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

BRYAN: I'd like to ask the joint council of movants of this amendment if they would consider another amendment to the first line and also in the last line. "The legislature shall create counties and may create other political subdivisions." Then use the word "political subdivision" in the last sentence as well. Would that be satisfactory?

TAVARES: Speaking for myself, I think that would be all right.

CHAIRMAN: Will you please restate that?

SAKAKIHARA: I understand the motion. In lieu of "town and city municipalities," the amendment proposed by Delegate Bryan is to insert "other political subdivisions." Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: At what particular place?

SAKAKIHARA: On line two of my amendment, after the word "create."

CHAIRMAN: Insert the word "political subdivisions"?

TAVARES: No, I think the amendment was to have the first few words read, "The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions."

SAKAKIHARA: That's right.

TAVARES: Well, is that acceptable to the movant?

SAKAKIHARA: It is acceptable to me.

TAVARES: We all accept it, Mr. Chairman.
In that case, I ask that we accept another amendment to my amendment, namely where it says "mandating any county, town or municipality," substitute the words, "mandating any political subdivisions."

SAKAKIHARA: I second that motion. I'll accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That's to be inserted between the words "any" and "county," is that correct, Delegate Tavares?

TAVARES: That is correct, and then delete the words "county, town or municipality."

CHAIRMAN: The consolidated amendment offered by Delegate Sakakihara reads as follows: "The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions," striking the words "town and city municipalities."

TAVARES: May I read the whole section as proposed to be -- as it is now that the amendments have been accepted.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

TAVARES: I'll read slowly. It will read as follows: "The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions within the state and provide for the government thereof, and all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by law. No law shall be passed mandating any political subdivision to pay any previously accrued claim."

APOLIONA: Will the Delegate Tavares yield to a question? Delegate Tavares, if this amendment passes, does it mean that the governor could appoint your police commissioners and your liquor commissioners?

TAVARES: That is correct, if the legislature so provides.

ROBERTS: I'm wondering whether the movants would accept a further suggestion in the following form. Let me state first the purpose and then I'll read the language. This provides that the government of the political subdivisions is to be established by the State. I think that we ought to make some provision to give the people who are to be governed some opportunity in the creation, structure and operation of that government. Just as, for example, we as a State now are setting up our own form of government. I would suggest the inclusion after the words "for the government thereof," the inclusion of the following phrase, "when approved by a majority of the voters registered therein in the political subdivision," which would give the local government -- the group that is to be governed the opportunity to pass on whether or not the legislature -- the political subdivision created by the legislature and the form of government was acceptable to them.

TAVARES: May I, in answering that, ask another question? Is it not true that in many states, without a mandate in the Constitution, the legislature has by law provided for such types of home rule?

ROBERTS: Oh, there's no question that such procedure has been followed, but I gather that what we are trying to do is to give as much local self-government as possible, and this would, it seems to me, give that opportunity.

TAVARES: I see the gentleman's point, but it seems to me that the counties -- the voters of the counties are going to elect the members of their legislature, and if they want such provisions, it seems to me that it's within the province of the legislature to authorize such types of adoption by the voters. It can be done under this provision.

CHAIRMAN: Before we proceed any further, will there be a second to this suggested amendment by Delegate Roberts?

PHILLIPS: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed, Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: Sorry, Mr. Chairman, I've spoken more than once. I just want to say that I am opposed to this amendment. I don't think it can be worked out properly in the time we have.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the suggested amendment seconded by both Phillips and Delegate Corbett?

BRYAN: Speaking to the last amendment proposed by Delegate Roberts, I believe that that could be provided by the legislature.

CORBETT: I'm of the opinion a great deal of material that has been written into the Constitution could be provided by the legislature but my courage was stirred the other night by one of my fellow lady delegates when she got up and said, "What are we doing here if we are not writing constitutional law? If it all can be done by the legislature, why have we been elected? Why are we sitting here?" We certainly are putting some legislative law into the Constitution, but we are affirming certain beliefs when we do that. We believe the people of the counties should have a great deal of say in governing themselves at their own local level. In order to insure that, this clause, or phrase rather, added to the amendment would insure legislation being passed. If it can be passed, if it has been passed in many states, where is the harm of writing it into the Constitution? It will serve notice to the people who have to vote on this that they are going to have control of government at the local level which is the place that immediately interests them.

CHAIRMAN: Question before the committee - -

DOI: I would like to move to amend the amendment of Delegate Sakakihara and Tavares by deleting on the fourth line after the word "thereof," instead of a comma, inserting a period, all that follows after the comma down to the end of the sentence before the new sentence as recommended by Delegate Tavares, and inserting a new sentence thereof to read, "All officials of the several political subdivisions shall be elected by the electors of the said subdivisions or appointed by the authorities thereof."

CHAIRMAN: I'll have to rule that particular motion out of order as not being germane to the motion made by Delegate Roberts at this time where our attention is to the motion, "when approved by a majority of the voters therein." So if you'll hold that up, Delegate Doi, for a moment, let us dispose of this matter. Are you ready for the question?

SERIZAWA: Point of information. Would it be possible to have Doctor - - Delegate Roberts' amendment restated?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts' amendment as seconded, is on the fourth line after the first word "thereof" comma, insert "when approved by a majority of the voters therein."

SERIZAWA: "Therein registered" or - -

CHAIRMAN: The amendment is, after the word "thereof" on the fourth line, "when approved by a majority of the registered voters therein."

ROBERTS: I might suggest a slight technical change in language, "when approved by a majority of the registered voters voting thereon," in conformity with our previous discussion on the people who actually vote on the question. "When approved by a majority of those voting thereon."

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further - -

PHILLIPS: I'll accept that. I'll second that.

HOLROYDE: I'm a little confused as to the full effect of that suggestion by the delegate from the fourth district. For example, if the legislature wished to provide Lanai with a separate county, what voters would have to approve that legislative action? All of the present County of Maui would be affected. Would they all vote to approve that or just Lanai, for example?

ROBERTS: That would apply only to the political subdivision that is being considered.

HOLROYDE: The one to be formed, not the one that - - not all that are affected by that formation, then?

ROBERTS: The political subdivision created by the legislature under the section. The people there covered and the government provided by the legislature would be voted on by the people who are to be governed by that area.

PHILLIPS: I am not sure, but I don't think that - - I'm not sure. I don't think that's quite right. The political subdivision would be the county there, so the entire county would vote on whether Lanai got segregated or separated apart.

HOLROYDE: Point of information.

APOLIONA: If Delegate Phillips will read his amendment, it says "other political," "may create other political subdivisions."

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is, after the word "thereof" on the first line insert "when approved by a majority of the voters voting thereon." We are 15 minutes to 12, ladies and gentlemen. Can we dispose of this matter before noon? Ready for the question? The question as stated. Those in favor say "aye."

H. RICE: I think they ought to mimeograph this section as it is being proposed at this time, and let it go over until Monday because I don't think that they have touched on the two main topics that the counties are interested in, and that is the liquor commission control and the police control.

PHILLIPS: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: You've heard the motion, seconded, that we recess, or the committee - -

H. RICE: The committee rise and report progress, and in the meantime have this amendment presented to the staff and have it circulated and put on our desks on Monday morning.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded. Those in favor vote "aye." Those opposed, "no." Motion carried for the committee to rise and report progress.

JUNE 26, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole will now consider Standing Committee Report No. 74 on the Committee Proposal [No.] 26, and also - -

H. RICE: I move that we have a five minute recess.

CHAIRMAN: No objection, so ordered. Sakakihara, the movant of the pending motion, is not present.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: We are considering Standing Committee Report 74 and Committee Proposal No. 26. For purposes of continuity, the matters before the committee are these, two in number. You have on the desk the amendment offered by Delegate Sakakihara with reference to the tentative adoption of Section 2 of the Committee Proposal No. 26, which reads as follows:

> Section 2. The legislature shall create counties and may create other political subdivisions within the State, and provide for the government thereof and all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by law. No law shall be passed mandating any political subdivision to pay any previously accrued claim.

At the close of the session on Saturday, Delegate Roberts offered the following amendment, in the fourth line after the word "thereof," to insert "when approved by a majority of those voting thereon." So the question before the committee is for the - - on the amendment to the amendment of Delegate Sakakihara, "when approved by a majority of those voting thereon." What is your pleasure?

CORBETT: I have an amendment which I think has been put on the desks of all the delegates. Would the proper thing be to offer that as an amendment to Delegate Sakakihara's amendment or not?

CHAIRMAN: You may do so.

CORBETT: Well, my new proposal is in five sections and I believe properly only the first two sections would be an amendment to Delegate Sakakihara's. The others go further into the other sections of the original committee proposal. However, I would like to offer the entire five sections at this time as an amendment, and may I have a second?

> Section 1. The legislature shall provide by general law for the incorporation, by locally framed and adopted charters, of political subdivisions.
> Section 2. The legislature shall also provide by general law (which may provide optional plans of organization and government) for the organization of political subdivisions which do not secure such locally framed and adopted charters.

Section 3. Any such law may make provision for the alteration of boundaries, the consolidation of neighboring political subdivisions and the dissolution of any such political subdivisions; but no such law hereafter enacted shall become operative in any political subdivision until submitted to the qualified voters thereof and approved by a majority of those voting thereon.

Section 4. Political subdivisions shall have and exercise such powers as shall be conferred under the provisions of such general laws, and unless the governing body of any such political subdivision shall so request no special or local law shall be enacted which shall restrict or direct the exercise of such powers by political subdivision.

Section 5. This article shall not be construed to limit or restrict the power of the legislature to enact laws of statewide concern and uniform application.

H. RICE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion made and seconded. Delegates Corbett and Rice and Yamamoto offering an amendment to the pending amendment.

CORBETT: I hoped by drafting this proposal to answer some of the questions and doubts that were expressed on the floor and also in conversation with some of the delegates. Let me explain briefly what the intention of each section is. In Section 1 - -

CHAIRMAN: One moment, please. The delegates all have the amendment that's being referred to? I believe so. Proceed.

H. RICE: I suggest we take now this new amendment, section by section, and start with Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: Hearing no objection - -

H. RICE: I move the adoption of Section 1 of this new amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That's the tentative adoption of this new amendment by Delegate Corbett in five sections?

NIELSEN: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You've heard the question. All those in favor say "aye."

TAVARES: We are rushing into this thing again. Is it to be understood that we are having the same understanding as yesterday, that the complete amendment to the whole thing can still be substituted if we tentatively approve this? We are again going at it piecemeal.

CHAIRMAN: The entire understanding of the committee from the commencement was that we shall all consider these sections, if adopted, tentative. So far we have one section, Section 1, that has been approved. Section 1, tentatively approved, reads as follows:

> The legislature shall create political subdivisions within the State and the method of establishing the same.

That is our Section 1, tentatively approved.

TAVARES: Well, for the purposes of argument I have no objection to any number of amendments being argued, but it seems to me that taking this up section by section conflicts with the proposition of those who may want to have just one section for everything. Now, I want to hear all the arguments pro and con for any amendments, but I don't like to vote on it because it sort of confuses the situation. May we just argue the matter of Delegate Corbett's motion, rather than at the moment vote on any separate section, because otherwise we are going to get into the same trouble we got into the other day, unless it is understood that in tentatively approving this we do not waive the right to put in one section for the whole article, or for the whole proper amended proposal later on.

H. RICE: I think that ought to be agreed to.

CHAIRMAN: That has been the sense of the committee from the beginning, Delegate Tavares. Is that the understanding of the movant and the second? All those in favor of proceeding as outlined, tentatively approving Delegate Corbett's amended proposal to the Committee Proposal 26 in five parts, say "aye." Those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried unanimously. Proceed, Delegate Corbett.

CORBETT: Is it understood that you want to take it section by section? This first section is intended very obviously to empower the legislature to set up the laws by which political subdivisions may become incorporated, may adopt charters of their own framing, and that is to be done only by the general law. Now, there may be some question as to whether there is to be one law under which all counties, or all city and counties will have to incorporate, but we felt that as is the accepted practice that there will be a number of different methods, a number of different ways by which the different types of subdivisions may be empowered to frame and adopt their charters. I don't really believe there is anything particularly controversial in this, so I won't go on any further.

ASHFORD: May I ask a question?

CHAIRMAN: You may proceed. Of the last speaker, I take it.

ASHFORD: If you please. Is it your idea that a charter might be locally framed and adopted that would prevent a legislative mandate for the expenditure of funds?

CORBETT: We have said in Section 4 that the legislature is to give only such powers, that is, it says definitely, "The political subdivision shall have . . . such power as shall be conferred under the provision of such general law." Now, we feel that that is going to protect many of the things that seem to be in a debatable area right now, the Board of Water Supply possibly—though I have never had any worries about it—the police commission, and so forth. If the legislature feel that those are functions that should not be bestowed upon the county governments, they will exclude them in these laws which are to be passed by the legislature.

ASHFORD: May I carry the question just a little bit further. Without regard to Section 4, is it your idea that a locally framed and adopted charter might, under the provisions of Section 1, prevent the mandating of funds by the legislature?

CORBETT: I would think that the legislature under general laws would be empowered to give them such authority as they wish to give them.

ASHFORD: But if that were given in one legislature, it could be withdrawn in the next, could it not?

CORBETT: Not after the subdivision had adopted a charter, had framed and adopted the charter in accordance with the laws that were set up by this coming legislature. It's hard to do so.

ASHFORD: So that if no specific reference were made in the law providing for the locally framed and adopted charter, that charter might have a provision in it forbidding the mandating of funds.

CHAIRMAN: Do you desire to say anything furthermore? Delegate Corbett still has the floor. Proceed, Delegate Corbett.

CORBETT: I believe only the powers that the legislature lays upon the shoulders of the political subdivision and which appear in their charter would hold good. Is that an answer to your question?

CHAIRMAN: The question was with reference to mandate under the first section, I believe.

ASHFORD: I think you answered it just before this last one. I think the two are somewhat conflicting in the absence of legislative provision on the subject. It is your view, I understand, that the locally adopted charter - - locally framed and adopted charter could prevent the mandating of funds by the legislature.

KELLERMAN: Will the speaker yield to a question? Do I understand that Section 1 relates or is intended to relate to counties as well as municipal corporations?

CHAIRMAN: The words "political subdivision" have been understood by everyone to refer to any type of division under the state government, or agencies.

CORBETT: That is correct, in my interpretation. I originally had the "counties, cities and counties, and cities," and so forth.

KELLERMAN: Well, I would like to be corrected if I am mistaken, but I'm under the very definite impression that counties are not incorporated under charters in any state in the Union. The chartered governments are townships, towns and cities or possibly incorporated villages. Some states permit incorporated villages, where the population exceeds two thousand, sometimes they go down even as low as fifteen hundred. But I have never heard of an incorporated county, and counties do not operate on charters in any state that I have ever heard of. In my work with municipal bond law for the federal government, to my knowledge I never ran across such a thing as a county with a separate charter of government. I would like for someone who has had possibly more experience in municipal law than myself to correct me if I'm wrong on that, but I think that is a very serious question under your Section 1. If the committee is attempting to incorporate counties, I think they better clear that point of general municipal law.

CORBETT: I think that can be very easily cleared up. Probably your suggestion would be simply to delete the words "for the incorporation," and "The legislature shall provide by general law for the framing and adopting of charters by political subdivisions," or something of that sort.

KELLERMAN: No, that would not achieve the result. My point is that counties are not bases of charter government that I know anything about. The charters are given - - charters are charters of incorporation. That's what it means, and they are given only to cities, towns and villages under general laws of the different states. Now, if I'm mistaken, I would like to be shown. I don't mean to be argumentative, but I think it's quite a serious point of municipal law in state organization. To my knowledge counties are not chartered governments that I've ever heard of anywhere else.

CHAIRMAN: Would you like to try to answer that question?

CORBETT: I am afraid I can't answer the question. I bow to the definitely superior knowledge of my fellow delegate, but I believe that the - - while the wording may be incorrect, it could be altered to fit our purpose very easily. Our purpose in this first section is very obviously to empower the legislature to set up general laws whereby any political subdivision may adopt some specific form of government of its own choosing; that is the intent. Now, I'm sorry if I don't have the background. If they shouldn't have charters, we won't give them charters; if they shouldn't be incorporated, we won't have them incorporated.

ASHFORD: May I ask a question? Wasn't the intention really of the first section to provide for incorporation of such political subdivisions as may properly be incorporated, and the section - - the second section refers to those which would not be properly incorporated?

CORBETT: That explanation is very acceptable.

CHAIRMAN: May I bring to the attention and inquire of the delegate, whether or not in submitting this amendment, Delegate Corbett, you had accepted the principle of the tentatively passed Section 1, which reads: "That the legislature shall create political subdivisions within the State and the method of establishing the same." That your amendment follows, and assuming the acceptance, tentatively, of this approved Section 1, and if so, probably the question posed by Delegate Kellerman is answered.

LARSEN: Could I ask a question? I am wondering, Delegate Corbett, say that in this charter the city wanted the election of the police chief. That was in their charter. Would the legislature have to allow that?

CORBETT: In Section 4, we have very specifically stated that the legislature shall confer such powers, well - - it says, "Political subdivisions shall have and exercise such powers as shall be conferred." In other words, if the police department should be kept out of the clutches, shall I say—because that seems to be the general feeling about the local government—it can be kept out by general law. In other words, the legislature couldn't pass a law saying that on the island of Oahu the police department should be under the State rule, and on Maui the counties can take care of State rule. It should be by general law, we feel, so that all the counties shall have a like chance. But that is taken care of in Section 4.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask—it refers back to Section 1 actually—but in Section 3 and Section 4, you refer to "such laws." Are those the general laws that are mentioned in Sections 1 and 2?

CORBETT: That is correct.

BRYAN: If that is the interpretation, unless I misread the other sections, they will have to be amended so that the legislature actually will have some power over these subdivisions, because it looks to me as if any general laws passed could be more or less vetoed within the subdivisions if the people there don't accept them.

CORBETT: May I ask where you read that, Delegate Bryan?

BRYAN: Two places where it's questionable in my mind. The consolidation - -

CORBETT: In Section 3?

BRYAN: In Section 3, "But no such law hereafter enacted shall become operative in any political subdivision." "No such law," is that referring back to your general laws applying to all - - the general outline of all subdivisions?

CORBETT: Well, it refers back to the laws that make provision for the alteration of boundaries and so forth and so forth. In other words, no county can be chopped up into five parts without a majority vote of the, of voters in that county.

BRYAN: Well, I think the answer to your question would be that Section 3 would have to be amended so that the laws mentioned in the second part of that sentence - - second part of that paragraph would be the laws considering boundaries, consolidation and so forth, and not just the general laws pertaining to subdivisions, I mean political subdivisions.

CORBETT: Yes, that is correct.

BRYAN: Then in Section 4.

NIELSEN: Point of order. Aren't we discussing Section 2? We are never going to get anywhere if we just keep on reading into the record everything beyond that.

CHAIRMAN: The delegate is right except that - -

BRYAN: I asked when I started speaking, before we could really consider Sections 1 and 2, I wanted to know if all these other sections referred to the words "general laws" in Section 1. That was all. Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready tentatively, therefore, to vote on Section 1 of the amendments submitted by Delegate Corbett? Any further debate?

KELLERMAN: May I offer an amendment then to Section 1 to clarify that language? At least it does make it clearer to me. "The legislature shall provide by general law for the incorporation, by locally framed and adopted charters, of municipal corporations."

CHAIRMAN: After where, please?

KELLERMAN: In lieu of the words "political subdivisions," use the words "municipal corporations." Or if it would be preferable, say "city, town and village," "of cities, towns and villages." The term "municipal corporations" includes all three of those, so I was being brief using that term instead of "political subdivisions." "Political subdivisions " includes counties.

CHAIRMAN: Will you please give me your precise amendment, Delegate Kellerman?

KELLERMAN: In lieu of the words "political subdivisions," the last two words of the paragraph, insert the words "municipal corporations." No, Mr. Chairman, on second reading that is not accurate because you've got - - if you read back you've got to provide for the incorporation of municipal corporations. It would probably be better to enumerate and say "cities, towns and villages," if that's the intention of the committee, to include villages. They might not want to include villages at all.

CASTRO: I was under the same impression as Delegate Kellerman that there had been no chartered counties, but I see that in the California State Constitution provision is made for the framing of county charters.

CHAIRMAN: Will you yield for a moment? Was there a second to Delegate Kellerman's motion? I did not hear any. Oh, seconded by Judge Wirtz. Proceed.

CASTRO: It seems to me that the word that is misleading in this particular section is the word "incorporation," because a charter need not necessarily incorporate a political subdivision; it might establish the definition of it, but not necessarily an incorporation under the technical sense of the word, and I suspect that the word "incorporation" here is used in a rather liberal sense. I would suggest that the word "establishment" be submitted for "incorporation" and I wonder whether Delegate Kellerman would be willing to include that in her amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Substitute the word "establishment" instead of the word "incorporation."

KELLERMAN: If my amendment is to remain as "cities, towns and villages," I think the word "incorporation" is more apt because they must be - - they do become corporations if they are established in this sense, and I think the committee intends to have city, town or village government. There is such a thing as an unincorporated village, and that has very different powers from an incorporated village. So if we just use the term "establish," that also might be intended to extend to an unincorporated town or unincorporated city, which would then definitely limit its powers. My impression is that, if the committee wants the incorporation or the possibility of incorporation of the city and town and then possibly a question as to villages, I don't think the word "establish" would achieve that.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Castro, I think your offer is denied.

HEEN: Point of information. How many amendments have we got before this committee?

CHAIRMAN: We have the pending amendment of Delegate Sakakihara and a pending amendment to that by Delegate Roberts, namely that after the word "thereof," insert "when approved by a majority of those voting thereon," and this proposed amendment from Delegate Corbett submitting five sections which goes to amend the entire Proposal 26.

HEEN: As I understand the rules of parliamentary procedure, you can have an amendment upon an amendment; you cannot go beyond that then having an amendment upon an amendment that designs to amend another amendment. That's why we are getting bogged down here. We don't know where we are. If we abide by the rules, there can only be one amendment to an amendment; then we can proceed, I think, much faster.

CASTRO: In that case this amendment of Delegate Corbett's would be out of order because there was already an amendment to Delegate Sakakihara's amendment. Is that what Delegate Heen referring to?

CHAIRMAN: That is a point well taken. The immediate question therefore is the amendment to Delegate Sakakihara's motion - - amendment by Roberts namely: "when approved by a majority of those voting thereon." Are you ready for the question? Those in favor of voting for Delegate Roberts' amendment wherein after the word "thereof" in the fourth line insert "when approved by a majority of those voting thereon." All of those in favor of the amendment say "aye."

TAVARES: May we have the whole thing read now with the proposed amendment in it? I'm kind of out of order.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment offered to be incorporated in the submitted amendment of Delegate Sakakihara will therefore read as follows:

> Section 2. The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions, within the state and provide for the government thereof when approved by a majority of those voting thereon, and all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by law. No law shall be passed mandating any political subdivision to pay any previously accrued claim.

CORBETT: At the top of this amendment it says that this is the amendment by Delegate Sakakihara and that he has accepted the further amendments by Delegates Tavares and Shimamura. Now, doesn't that mean that it is just one amendment, or does it mean that it is three amendments?

CHAIRMAN: No, I beg your pardon. The pending amendment is the Committee Proposal, Section 2; that's the primary question before the committee. Delegate Sakakihara's is an amendment; Delegate Roberts' is an amendment to the pending amendment to the question of adoption of Committee Proposal, Section 2.

LOPER: I note that in the reading of the Sakakihara–Tavares–Shimamura amendment as amended by Delegate Roberts, you have put new wording in line three after "thereof." There is a "thereof" in line three and also in line four, and I can't make it read - - make sense in either case. I'd like to ask Delegate Roberts to read it as he wishes to amend it.

ROBERTS: The purpose of the amendment was to insure and give an opportunity to the political subdivision that is either being created or whose charter is being modified or whose form of government is being changed, to give them the opportunity to pass on such change by a vote of the individuals in the political subdivision. If a majority of those approve the change, then that goes into effect; if it does not, then the previous form of government stays in effect. That, I presume, will be taken care of under the ordinances. Now - -

CHAIRMAN: Will you answer the immediate question first, Delegate?

ROBERTS: I wanted to explain that so that the placing of this parenthetical phrase may be put somewhere else by the Style Committee to achieve the purpose that I have in mind. The language that I had provided was, "when approved by a majority of those voting thereon," and the question was raised the other day whether or not that meant a majority of those in the political subdivision, and the answer to that for the record was "yes." Now, you do have a little difficulty in language, but I believe that if the intent of the Committee of the Whole is clear, I think the Style Committee can take care of that problem.

ASHFORD: May I ask a question of Delegate Roberts? Is it not true that the legislature in creating counties could very easily provide that no vote be made thereon? Because the language of your amendment is "when approved by a majority of those voting thereon." Unless the legislature provides for a putting to a vote, there will be no people voting thereon, and therefore, no majority.

ROBERTS: Well, that is certainly not the intent of the proposal, and it would seem to me that if the provision does state that this requires the approval of the voters in the political subdivision, that the legislature would be going beyond its bounds in setting up the charter to state that the individual shall not have the right to vote. That would be, to my mind, in conflict with the intent of the section that we are now drafting.

CHAIRMAN: So, to the precise question made by Delegate Loper, you cannot say where the amendment will go, either after the word "thereof" in the third line or after the word "thereof" in the fourth line. You want to leave it to the Style Committee. That is the answer. Is that correct, Delegate Roberts?

ROBERTS: I suggest that as a matter of procedure and as a matter of moving the thing along on the floor, that it be left to the Style Committee to place as long as the intent of the Committee of the Whole is clear.

PORTEUS: Unfortunately - - Am I recognized?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, you are, Delegate Porteus.

PORTEUS: In offering an amendment, the person who makes the amendment has got to pick the place.

CHAIRMAN: I'm afraid so.

PORTEUS: Now all we want to know is what place does he pick? May I have an answer to the question as to what place has been chosen?

ROBERTS: The place that has been chosen is in the fourth line after the word "thereof." That's the place.

CHAIRMAN: The fourth line, after the word "thereof."

HEEN: In this draft that I have in my hand there are two words "thereof" appearing in the fourth line. Now, Dr. Loper asks the question whether it was "thereof" in the third line or "thereof" in the fourth line. So it looks to me that we have all kinds of drafts of the proposed amendments in the hands of the delegates. We don't know which one to use.

CHAIRMAN: The answer made by Delegate Roberts, Delegate Heen, is that it will appear in the fourth line. After the third word, "thereof," insert "when approved by a majority of those voting thereon."

BRYAN: I have a suggestion for Delegate Roberts, if he would like to consider it. That would read, "within the state and provide for the government thereof, and which shall be approved by a majority of the voters of the subdivision voting thereon."

CHAIRMAN: Will you please restate that? Where does it appear?

BRYAN: "And which shall be approved by a majority of the voters of the subdivision voting thereon." Does that help the question?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan, I have difficulty in finding out where you would want to insert this. Please - -

BRYAN: Wherever Delegate Roberts wants to insert his amendment.

CHAIRMAN: I think you had better get together.

ROBERTS: We have two drafts before us, as Senator Heen pointed out. The draft that I was reading from is the draft which was submitted by Delegate Sakakihara on Saturday, and I am reading from the fourth line on that. Now apparently some are reading the fourth line on that in the new redraft of the proposal. The language that I have is inserted, "within the state and provide for the government thereof, when approved by a majority of those voting thereon, and all officials thereof shall be" and so on.

CHAIRMAN: I think that is clear.

HAYES: Just a point of information. We are now on Roberts' amendment, and he is trying to get this last word into Sakakihara's amendment?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

HAYES: Now, what has happened to the Corbett amendment?

CHAIRMAN: That will have to be - - that is out of order.

HAYES: It hasn't been - - I see. Thank you.

ASHFORD: May I ask a question? I would like to ask Delegate Roberts a question. When he refers to a "majority of those voting thereon," does he mean a majority of those within the proposed subdivision created by Section 2, or the subdivisions that now exist and will be carried on under the provisions of the ordinances and continuity of law?

ROBERTS: It applies only to new political subdivisions or any subdivisions later created by the legislature. There is no intention of requiring the present political subdivisions to pass on their present form of government. I assume that the section dealing with the ordinances and continuity would retain the existing form and setup.

ASHFORD: I think that doesn't quite answer my question. For example, suppose some provision is made whereby the island of Lanai could be set up as a separate county, does that require all the voters of the present County of Maui to approve it, or does it require, under Mr. Roberts' amendment, only the voters of the island of Lanai?

ROBERTS: Just the island of Lanai.

KELLERMAN: May I ask a question, too? "The majority of the voters voting thereon," does that mean the voters within the political subdivision, or simply a majority of those who have cast their votes? "The majority of the voters voting thereon" can certainly be construed to mean simply a majority of those who have cast votes which would - - it might be very much less even than the majority of the political subdivision.

ROBERTS: Those voting thereon are the individuals who actually cast their votes.

KELLERMAN: I understand that means then only the majority of those who actually vote.

ROBERTS: That's right, but the vote is confined to those who are in the political subdivisions.

KELLERMAN: So there really are two interpretations of "voting thereon."

ROBERTS: No, those voting thereon, as in any general election -- Take the general election, we have qualified voters in the entire territory; those voting thereon would be only those who vote on that particular question.

KELLERMAN: Then you intentionally would make it possible for the people within a subdivision to approve a major change in their form of government only by a vote of, say, only one-third or twenty per cent of the entire registered voters of that --

ROBERTS: A majority of those voting on the question, just as our new Constitution is going to be put.

CASTRO: It seems to me that it's a rather complicated procedure to set up a political subdivision of the state. This amendment of Delegate Roberts is nothing more than a referendum, which this Convention has already indicated it did not favor. It seems to me, although I am not a legislator, that if a group of people who were anticipating emergence as a political subdivision of the state wished such a condition upon themselves, that they could aid in the drafting of the proper bill in the legislature, which upon proper passage would become law, and the need for a referendum would not be present. I feel that the amendment therefore should be defeated.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

LOPER: I would like to ask Delegate Roberts a further question, whether the following additional wording doesn't express the thought he has even better. Instead of saying "when approved by a majority of those voting thereon," use this language, "when approved by a majority of the registered voters of such subdivisions voting thereon."

ROBERTS: That's perfectly all right.

CHAIRMAN: The amended amendment which has been accepted by Delegate Roberts will read therefore, "when approved by a majority of the registered voters of such political subdivisions and those voting thereon"?

ROBERTS: "Voting thereon." Comma, "voting thereon."

CHAIRMAN: May I first get the amendment properly agreed upon, Delegate Fong. The accepted amendment therefore incorporated would read as follows: "when approved by a majority of the registered voters of such political subdivisions, and those voting thereon."

ROBERTS: No, "of such political subdivisions," comma, "voting thereon."

CHAIRMAN: So that will reads as follows: "When approved by a majority of the registered voters of such political subdivision, voting thereon." Correct?

ROBERTS: Correct.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong. Oh, pardon me. I beg your pardon. Delegate Bryan had stood just after Loper. I'll recognize Delegate Bryan.

BRYAN: The question I had is that you may oftentimes have a case whereby creating one political subdivision, you create two. Take the island of Kauai and divide it in half, you have two political subdivisions. Now if the people on one-half of the island vote in favor of it, and those on the other half do not vote in favor of it, those who don't vote in favor of it are still left with a new political subdivision of their own, if you grant the wishes of the majority of the voters in the other subdivisions. Now what is the intention to get around that sort of thing? I don't think that this is too practical. I have no qualms about the referendum part of it, but I can see where in many cases it wouldn't be practical. I'd like to know if there is any suggestion to get around it.

ROBERTS: As I understand, the purpose is to permit the legislature to take the initial action. It would seem to me that the legislature should give sufficient and careful thought to what they are doing in the creating of new political subdivisions or changing them, to meet that particular problem. The only point of the amendment is to provide those individuals who are going to receive the change to give them the opportunity to vote on whether the proposal submitted by the legislature meets their needs. That's the only purpose of the amendment.

I might state further, in reply to the previous observation made that this was merely a referendum. I don't want the delegates to get the impression that there is something ornery about a referendum, that there is something dirty about a referendum. We are submitting our own Constitution, the one we're drafting now, to a referendum. It's a perfectly proper and perfectly sensible procedure, and I certainly can't see anything wrong with it.

FONG: Mr. Roberts, you don't give an opportunity here for an expression of what the objection may be. For example, you are setting it for the people to vote, and there is nothing here for an alternative proposal. Now, in our Constitution here the legislature will have alternative proposals to submit to the people. Now, you are just giving it to the people to either vote yes or no. There is nothing here to show what they disapprove of. Now, how is the legislature to know as to what has been disapproved and what is good in the proposal? Don't you think that there should be something here by which the people may express the approval of certain parts of the charter which is given to them and disapproval on other parts?

ROBERTS: I understand the question, but the question is no different from the question we are going to have in our submission to the people of our own Constitution. We are not going to know whether they like part of it or don't like part of it. They are going to vote on the question, I assume, of whether they want the Constitution in the form we have drafted or not. Now actually the way to obtain whether they don't like certain parts would be in the discussions that take place before the ratification of the new Constitution, and it's up to the legislature, just as it will be up to us and the legislature, to keep an ear to what is going on and to what people are thinking. Our own Act 334 provides that if the people don't accept the Constitution, then we have to draft another one. We don't know actually what they are going to disapprove of, but it is up to us to try and keep in touch to see what the thinking of the people is, and if it is disapproved—which I hope it isn't—it would seem to me that we have to keep our ears to the ground and find out why they disapproved it.

FONG: In our case the legislature will have the opportunity of submitting alternatives to the people. Now, the people may vote on the -- they will vote on the alternatives and they will vote as to whether they want to ratify the Constitution. In your plan here, there is nothing here for an alternative and the people either vote yes or no.

ROBERTS: But the alternative is that the legislature creates this political subdivision or gives it the authority. Now, if you think that it's necessary to have a constitutional convention of the political subdivision first, and then to submit to the legislature and then to the people, it seems to me that you are overcomplicating it.

PHILLIPS: I might answer Delegate Fong's question by saying that in a great many of the constitutions they set forth just exactly what will be said in this so-called referendum to the people. The reason that referendum goes down is, do they want self-government, that kind of self-government, under the conditions set forth in that so-called charter or not? And that charter, as you know, is a kind of constitution. Now, it would say we do or we do not want self-government in this particular subdivision. As Dr. Roberts has said, it would be black or white. You either want it or you don't want it. But in many constitutions it's written out and the form of how it will be sent down to the people is set forth there. Now, I believe he has left it out because the tendency here is to leave out as much wordiness in the Constitution as possible.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

HOLROYDE: I'd like to ask Dr. Roberts one question to be sure that it's clear in my mind. "When approved by a majority of those voting" applies only to the creation of counties. If there is a change of the government within the county, a redistricting of districts for, say, the supervisors to be elected from, or an increase in the number of supervisors, that wouldn't be returned to the people for approval under this wording, would it?

ROBERTS: This deals with the creation, as I read it, of "political subdivisions." Now, you might have a problem if you have a serious reorganization of the counties and a change in their government. You might want to submit that.

HOLROYDE: But it's not required under this wording?

ROBERTS: Not as I read the present proposal, no.

HOLROYDE: That's the point I wanted cleared up.

LOPER: I think Delegate Bryan's question deserves a little fuller answer. He pointed out that if West Kauai wished to secede from the rest of the island, you might have, under this, the people of West Kauai voting and the rest of the people not. But is not the answer implied in the question? That is, if by dividing the island you were making two political subdivisions, then by the wording here the people of both of those subdivisions would vote on it because you would be creating two new subdivisions.

ASHFORD: But the answer was from Dr. Roberts that if you set up the County of Lanai, the rest of the County of Maui wouldn't have to vote on it.

BRYAN: That's why I put that question, because actually you are making two subdivisions. You are making a new subdivision of the County of Maui, and you are making a new subdivision on the island of Lanai, and it looks to me as if the whole works would have to vote on it.

TAVARES: That's the whole trouble with this county government proposition. All of these new ideas and new amendments are not well worked out. I, myself, don't know -- I am not sure that this amendment even accomplishes what Dr. Roberts wants to do, and I think it's confusing, and as I say, it's just not well worked out. I think it's going to just render this section very, very difficult to interpret if it's adopted.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? Question is the amendment of Dr. Roberts, accepting the further amendment by Dr. Loper, wherein after the word "thereof" appearing on the fourth line of Delegate Sakakihara's amendment to the committee's tentative approval of Section 2, reading as follows: inserting after the word "thereof," "when approved by a majority of the registered voters of such political subdivision voting thereon." All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The noes seem to have it. The amendment to the amendment is killed.

KAUHANE: The Committee feels that we've had somewhat informal discussion on the amendments that were submitted, and expression of ideas as to how the powers ought to be granted. I think if we consider also the amendment offered by Delegate Richards, I think it will take care of the propositions that have been raised on the floor as to the granting of powers either to the State, to the legislature or to the county government, as were well expressed by Delegate Richards' proposal.

HEEN: Point of information. I don't understand that Delegate Richards has submitted any amendments.

CHAIRMAN: It's not before --

KAUHANE: He has. I think it's been circulated, Delegate Heen.

HEEN: He may have circulated but he hasn't moved any amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the committee, Delegate Heen, is the tentative approval of Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 26, and the pending amendment thereto by Delegate Sakakihara.

PORTEUS: I wonder whether we can get at these various propositions in perhaps a little more simple fashion. I think the reason that Delegate Richards is unable to present his amendment is that there have been so many amendments pending, that this would have been out of order. There are really before the house, this Convention, as a practical matter, the following questions: whether or not we shall take the provision on county government as brought in by majority of the committee on county government or whether we'll follow the theory of the Organic Act as presented by the delegate from Hawaii, Delegate Sakakihara, with, as we know, further suggested amendments by the delegate from the fifth district with respect to mandates. Now those questions are before us.

In addition, there is the question as to whether or not the scheme as proposed by my fellow delegate from the fourth district, Delegate Corbett. We have lost sight for the moment, but not yet completely disposed of, the proposition as submitted by the delegate from the fourth district, Delegate Phillips, except that we have cut the heart out of his proposal by saying that the counties shall not have unrestricted power of taxation.

I think it would simplify our procedure if we could decide first, do we take the Sakakihara amendment or the original committee proposal. If the Sakakihara amendment were to be chosen, then we could go on with the Phillips amendment, with the Corbett amendment. If it's turned down, it's then out of sight and we don't have to pay attention to it any more. It would seem to me if we could orderly clear the decks, if there has been enough discussion, and decide which theory we are going to follow, then we could make the various amendments we need.

CHAIRMAN: We have before us the amendment to the Committee Proposal 26, namely the Sakakihara amendment.

PORTEUS: Well, may I suggest then that we now vote on the Sakakihara amendment, right now. And then with that determined, if that carries, then Delegate Phillips can -- I mean delegate from the fifth district Richards can offer his amendment and Delegate Corbett can adequately discuss hers.

CHAIRMAN: Well, that's the pending -- that's the pending question.

PORTEUS: Pending amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The Sakakihara amendment.

NIELSEN: If you'll make that into a motion, I'll second it.

PORTEUS: I move then that we now proceed to vote on the adoption of whether we will adopt the Sakakihara amendment now.

NIELSEN: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Are you moving for the previous question?

PORTEUS: In effect that's it, but I wanted to explain what the moving of the previous question would really be, and rather than use that word, I - -

CHAIRMAN: Moving of the previous question is the immediate voting on and shutting off debate on the Sakakihara amendment.

PORTEUS: But then, as soon as - - if once the vote is taken - - I don't want to foreclose further debate on the Sakakihara amendment. That's my point. For further amendments, in other words.

CHAIRMAN: Well, I'm afraid if we vote for your amendment, we will shut off any debate.

PORTEUS: No, Mr. Chairman, let me put it this way. I move that we now proceed to vote on the Sakakihara amendment with the understanding that if that carries, it will then be open to further amendments.

CROSSLEY: Point of information.

NEILSEN: I second the motion.

CROSSLEY: As I understand this, what we are voting on is the theory behind the two. So, if we could dispose of what direction we are wanting to go, I believe what Delegate - - the Secretary has to say would be worthwhile. If we can decide on the course that we want to follow, then we shouldn't be foreclosed from making amendments to that course of action, but we would be limited tc following that course.

CHAIRMAN: Well, to resolve the question before the committee, the sense of the motion is this, as I understand it: to continue the same theory of local self-government with relation to its creation or non-creation by the legislature, or to adopt an altogether new theory of true so-called local government. Is that correct? So, by voting for your motion now would be to consider in broad scope without embarrassment of further amendments the Sakakihara theory of the present situation continuing with respect to counties, the creation of municipalities, and so forth.

PORTEUS: I don't want to foreclose Delegate Corbett from being able to present her amendment, but I'd like to get a choice made between the proposition as made by the County Government [Committee] and as suggested by Sakakihara. Let's dispose of that so we don't have too many questions.

NIELSEN: I second the motion then for this reason; that when we dispose of this amendment, then we can go back to Section 2 as in Proposal 26, and other amendments can be submitted for discussion, and they can be amended anyway they want to.

ROBERTS: Point of information. Before I vote on Section 2, I'd like to have an explanation as to the meaning of a "previously accrued claim." I'm not quite sure that that was discussed, as to what this intent is.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares will answer that.

TAVARES: It was intended to cover situations of the type of the Gamewell case, which we all remember, of the Medeiros claim and a number of other claims where somebody has dealt with a political subdivision or one of the county agencies, and has a claim and the agency has turned him down. He comes to the legislature and gets a law through, or tries to get it through, ordering the county or political subdivision to pay that claim that has already previously accrued before the legislature is asked to act upon it. In other words, the type of claim that makes the legislature act as a judge of the merits of an already existing claim, which has been one of the, in my opinion, grave abuses of the legislature. Where, instead of leaving the matter to the courts and to the discretion of the political subdivision, the legislature has assumed to pass upon the merits of the claim and tell the subdivision, "You must pay this claim."

CHAIRMAN: Question. All those in favor of the tentative adoption of the Sakakihara amendment, will say "aye."

MAU: This motion is for the adoption of the Sakakihara amendment?

CHAIRMAN: That's right, tentatively, without prejudice to any further amendment of it.

MAU: If the delegates to this Constitution [sic] desire to retain the present status of county governments, then they should vote for this amendment. It leaves the absolute power with the legislature to do what they will with the counties and the county government. There is no question about that. I think that in view of the arguments made, not only in this Convention Hall, but throughout all the elections held in the past ten years, together with the platforms of both major political parties in the Territory, this amendment should be voted down because it does not provide for what is popularly known as home rule; it does not provide for autonomous county governments, local governments; and if it is the desire of this Convention to provide autonomy or more autonomy to the county governments, then they must vote against this amendment. We have heard arguments in previous sessions of this Committee of the Whole and in the Convention that certain powers should not be taken away from the legislature with respect to the executive powers; likewise, certain powers should not be taken away from the local government. I believe that we have progressed far enough in this territory in the past fifty years to be willing to allow people living in localities as we have fixed them in the past, counties, county governments, that we should give them an opportunity to govern themselves. This amendment does not do so, and I ask that the delegation here vote this amendment down.

TAVARES: Speaking to the over-all picture, which I think is not exactly described with full accuracy by the preceding speaker, I'd like to just point out a few things. First of all, we must remember the small size of this territory, which as I have said enables our legislature to pass on local problems. Secondly, we must remember that the legislature by general laws can provide more local self-government.

Thirdly, we must also remember that history shows very clearly that when the people of a county wanted something badly enough, the legislature, within a reasonable time, has given it to them. I think history shows that. For instance, you had a Board of Water Supply on Oahu for awhile to meet a special problem. The other counties weren't forced to do that until they came and asked for it; and when they asked for it, what happened? At the last session the legislature gave them Boards of Water Supply. In the old days, Kauai never elected its chairman of the Board of Supervisors separately as chairman. They elected a board and the board elected their chairman. When the people of Kauai got around to wanting to change that and have the chairman run as chairman, the legislature gave it to them.

Our legislature has been very, very mindful of the desires of the people of each local county as it was demonstrated clearly to them that the people really wanted it. I submit that this proposal is in line with the historical development of this territory, and that we have not failed to make progress and can still make progress under the system proposed by Mr. Sakakihara's amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Let us be mindful of the motion made and carried by Delegate Heen last Saturday that the speaking shall be limited to five minutes, and if there are no other speakers, I will call upon the movant, Delegate Sakakihara, to conclude this debate.

SAKAKIHARA: Following up the able submission of the statement here by Delegate Tavares, I recall some years back that the people of the City and County of Honolulu requested of your legislature to restore the power of appointment of the police commissioners. The legislature yielded to the request of the people of City and County of Honolulu and gave them the right to appoint the police commission. After that power was given to the City and County of Honolulu, what happened? They were saturated in politics, there was disharmony among the police commissioners, and it did not serve the best interest of the police commission of the City and County of Honolulu. Consequently, what happened? The public was dissatisfied, except for the politicians who craved power within the city government. The legislature restored the power where it rests now, namely, the appointive power of the police commissioners to the governor with the confirmation of the Senate. If we are to follow the philosophy laid down here by the majority proposal, we are going to duplicate the very unpleasant situation which we have experienced when the legislature restored the power of appointment of the police commission to the Board of Supervisors. To obviate that in the future as a state, I felt very strong in my heart that we have demonstrated during the last fifty years that the City and County of Honolulu and the counties throughout this territory have enjoyed and progressed under Section 56 of the Organic Act, namely, vesting the power in the hands of your legislature, and as time progressed the legislature can meet the situation as requested by the people of the various counties and City and County.

I submit to you, Mr. Chairman and members of the Convention, that is the purpose which prompted me to introduce this report and the proposal. I say with all due sincerity, Mr. Chairman and members of this committee, that my proposal in no way tends to curb the power which the Board of Supervisors of City and County of Honolulu or the outlying counties would like to retain. The legislature, upon the petition of a local unit, will from time to time yield certain powers to the Board of Supervisors and restore a home rule to the people. But what assurance do we have here now, once this frame of government as proposed by the majority is set up, we are only going to be confused deeper and deeper, further and further from the very object that we are trying to drive in.

CORBETT: There is always a great deal said about the virtues of the Organic Act and how wonderfully well the territory has fared under the Organic Act. There is very little doubt in anybody's mind about that. We agree. We think the legislature has done a swell job for fifty years. We don't know whether they are going to continue to do as good a job for the next fifty years and we would like to insure the type of government that we want.

Now, the current trend is very plainly demonstrated in everything you read. As my fellow delegate from the fifth district mentioned, the political platforms of both the parties here are in favor of home rule. I submit that the Model State Constitution, which I've heard a good many people hoot at and call a professor's constitution, and so forth, however it is very strongly in favor of local government and goes to greater length than did your committee. This Model State Constitution was drawn up by professional men, students of government. They know their business. They put a great deal more time and thought on this constitution than we have been allowed to put. Most of us would like to put as much time as they have but that power has not been given. I would also like to call your attention to a recently redrafted constitution, that of the State of Missouri. In here, we find twenty pages on local government. We have submitted four or five sections.

I picked up a Saturday Evening Post of this current week last night and one of the first editorials is on the subject of local government, in connection with taxation, it is true, which doesn't interest us because we don't feel it fits the current situation, but it does express an interest in local government at the present time.

Now, it seems to me the issue is very plainly before us in the vote that is coming up. Do we want to stick with the Organic Act? Do we want to say that what is good enough for grandpa, is good enough for us, or do we want to try to catch up with modern times and express the current thinking of truly modern government?

PORTEUS: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State it please, Delegate Porteus.

PORTEUS: As I understood the motion, the motion on the sense of this Convention is that we're just clearing the decks. We are either taking the committee proposal or the Sakakihara proposal. If we take the Sakakihara proposal, it is only the vehicle for further amendment. It's not a question that we stay on this theory of the Organic Act at all times. We are going to have the Corbett amendment, we are going to have the Richards amendment and we are going to have the Phillips'. That's what we understand here.

CHAIRMAN: And Delegate Mau has also submitted an amendment.

PORTEUS: Well, and the Mau amendment. We'll have further amendments. So let's move along. I warn any other speakers who attempt to speak that I'm going to rise to a point of order because I think it's time we voted on this, so we know the vehicle that we are going to use to make amendments to.

CHAIRMAN: Are you agreeable with that, Delegate Phillips?

PHILLIPS: I have this feeling, that at least three or four speakers have had an opportunity to proclaim their views on this thing.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed, proceed, proceed.

PHILLIPS: I feel that if we were to put a gag rule on any other individuals at this time - -

CHAIRMAN: There is no gag rule, and please don't refer to any such thing, will you, please? We want to expeditiously go through this thing and nobody is being gagged.

PHILLIPS: I would like to prevent this being voted on at this time for a very basic reason. However, I mean I wouldn't want to force my words down the throats of the Convention and then have them turn a deaf ear to it. If it's the feeling of the delegate from the fourth district that we should accept or not accept one or the other before we proceed with further amendments, then I will adhere to that; but I still feel that many ideas have already been proclaimed and that we should continue until those run out.

CHAIRMAN: The question - - Are you ready for the question?

DOI: I think the issue before this committee here is as to whether we are going to adhere to the theory of Sakakihara's amendment or to the theory as submitted by the committee, and therefore, I think those in favor of the committee idea should have a chance to speak.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

DOI: I would like to speak against the amendment offered by Delegate Sakakihara. The amendment gives full power to the legislature. The amendment has this in mind, I believe, efficient government, period. If the legislature is interested in efficient government alone, why not set up a department in the several counties. I think the result insofar as efficiency goes is better. The amendment forgets and by-passes this very important idea, and that is participation in government by the people. Probably, participation does not bring about highest efficiency, but then I believe it brings about better government because it strengthens the government by education and participation. You will note that the amendment provides that all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected. Even as to that subject matter, there is no discretion left to the local unit.

The committee proposal, on the other hand, studied all the facts as they existed in the Territory of Hawaii today with this desire, to give as much local participation as is possible without injuring the welfare of the State or the welfare of other local units, and in that regard they came to the conclusion that it is best to leave the taxing power to the State, and as to other subject matters, leave it to the local unit. Therefore, I submit and urge that the amendment should be voted down.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

KELLERMAN: May I make a correction in the interest of the committee? I will precede my statement by saying that I am in favor of the Sakakihara amendment, but in all fairness to the committee and its proposal, I found that I was mistaken on the charter of counties. The new Missouri Constitution, in 1945, does provide for a charter and the incorporation of a county with a population in excess of eighty-five thousand.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? The question is on the adoption or rejection of Delegate Sakakihara's amendment, Section 2, with reference to the main question which is the adoption tentatively of Committee Proposal Section 2, which reads as follows—and this adoption is without prejudice according to the understanding of the committee—"The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions, within the State, and provide for the government thereof, and all officials thereof shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by law. No law shall be passed mandating any political subdivision to pay any previously accrued claim." All those in favor will say "aye."

DELEGATES: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: How many in favor of roll call? Tentative approval, that's all. There's not 10. Those in favor please raise your right hands. Sufficient for roll call. Clerk will please read roll call. Tentative adoption without prejudice.

Ayes, 26. Noes, 29 (Akau, Apoliona, Arashiro, Corbett, Doi, Dowson, Ihara, Kam, Kanemaru, Kauhane, Kawahara, Kawakami, Kido, Kometani, Luiz, Mau, Nielsen, Phillips, H. Rice, Richards, Roberts, Serizawa, Silva, St. Sure, Wirtz, Wist, Yamamoto, Yamauchi, A. Trask). Not voting, 8 (Anthony, Lee, Mizuha, Okino, Sakai, J. Trask, White, King).

CHAIRMAN; The amendment is killed.

We are now on the principal question before the committee, namely, the tentative adoption of the committee proposal Section No. 2.

RICHARDS: I have an amendment which I believe has been placed on the desks of everyone here. Shall I read it?

> Section _____. That the legislature may create counties and city and counties and municipal corporations within the State of Hawaii and provide for the government thereof. The legislature shall provide sources of revenue for the operation of such government so created. The legislature shall not, subsequent to the creation of such government, mandate expenditures from such sources of revenue so provided without providing additional sources of revenue or appropriation. All officials thereof shall be appointed or elected by their respective counties or city and counties in such manner as shall be provided by law.

CHAIRMAN: No, it isn't necessary. Is there any second?

SERIZAWA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded by Delegate Serizawa. You may proceed in argument.

RICHARDS: This particular amendment I grant you is a certain compromise in the theories that have been placed before this Convention in that it does allow considerable legislative control but does place certain specific restrictions on the legislature, particularly in the matter of mandating the various county governments without providing the funds for such purposes. It also does restrict somewhat the matter of appointment and elections within the various counties or city and counties. I feel that this will give us a certain degree of home rule, and yet it is not as sudden a step perhaps as is suggested by the majority committee report. Personally, I signed that committee report and I am in favor of strong local government. But there does seem to be considerable objection by other members of this Convention to taking that step all at once at this time, and I offer this amendment, as I feel that it does give additional control within each county or political subdivision by the people of that political subdivision, and yet still does not too much infringe upon the power of the legislature.

TAVARES: I think in principle this amendment is unobjectionable but I think that it needs a little polishing and I suggest a short recess so we can get together and perhaps we can work something out here and save a lot of hot air on the floor.

CHAIRMAN: For the benefit of the clerks and also in line with the suggestion of the committee, we'll have a recess. There is no objection.

(RECESS)

RICHARDS: May I now withdraw a previous amendment that I made and substitute therefor the present amendment that is placed on the desks of the members of the Convention?

> Section 2. That the legislature may create counties, towns, cities and other political subdivisions within the state and provide for the government thereof. The legislature shall provide sources of revenue for the operation of each government so created. The legislature shall not mandate, or increase the mandate of, expenditures from any previously provided sources of revenue of a political subdivision, without providing sufficient additional funds or other sources of revenue therefor, unless the governing body of such political subdivisions shall approve thereof. All officials of a political subdivision shall be appointed or elected locally in such manner as shall be provided by law. Political subdivisions shall have and exercise such powers as shall be conferred under the provisions of general laws.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment to be substituted for the pending amendment to the committee's amendment to Section 2, which is on the desks of all the delegates.

BRYAN: I'll second the motion, if you'll delete the first word of this new amendment.

RICHARDS: I accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The first word "That" will be stricken and capitalize the word "The" so that it will be "The legislature."

APOLIONA: To make our work here a little easier, I would like to ask Delegate Richards, who made the motion to adopt, to offer this entire amendment and that we proceed taking one sentence at a time.

CHAIRMAN: Well, we'll proceed in the manner as amendments are made, Dr. Apoliona, if that's agreeable to you.

APOLIONA: I think it's easier if we take sentence after sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Well, I think it would be too restrictive a ruling. Let's proceed as the amendments come in, Doctor.

TAVARES: A typographical error, I see, has crept in, in spite of care. Under the tenth line, the last word "political subdivisions" should be singular "political subdivision," singular.

CHAIRMAN: Will Delegate Roberts accept the amendment "subdivision" instead of "subdivisions"?

TAVARES: Delegate Richards accepts.

CHAIRMAN: All right, the amendment is accepted. Any further debate on the pending question as submitted by Delegate Richards?

ASHFORD: The second sentence would be most damaging to such places as Molokai, Lanai and the rural districts of the county. I shall therefore vote against it.

PORTEUS: Isn't that the third sentence, the one with respect to mandates, that the delegate has reference to?

ASHFORD: That's right, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: The third sentence reading, "All officials of a political subdivision shall be appointed or elected locally in such manner as shall be provided - -"

ASHFORD: No. "The legislature shall not mandate, or increase the mandate of, expenditures from any previously provided source of revenue of a political subdivision, without providing sufficent additional funds or other sources of revenue therefor, unless the governing body of such political subdivision shall approve thereof." That means that if those islands referred to or other rural areas aren't getting their fair share and are being neglected, the legislature cannot provide for them without increasing the revenue, so they'll have to pay again.

PHILLIPS: In speaking against this amendment, I would like to say that our committee has sweated hour after hour, received testimony from every expert official, conducted research into every phase of this subject - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Phillips, may I ask, we have twenty minutes to go and I think the Secretary has his bell, and if you could direct your remarks and make them, without feeling you are being gagged, and make them as pithy as possible, I think it would be appreciated by all.

PHILLIPS: That's precisely why I wrote them down, Mr. Chairman, and they consist of no more than thirty-five words, so I'm really taking care of the Convention by assisting, rather than go into a long harangue. If it pleases the Chair, I will continue.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

PHILLIPS: As I said, we have had testimony from every expert official, conducted research into every phase of this subject and have come out with its considered and deliberated Proposal No. 26. Now, we have a caucus which has just now, without any of the above work, has just gone in and decided arbitrarily a provision without any inclusion of the Convention's methods. Are we going to let a three minute caucus or a five minute caucus dictate the fate of local government because they remember something or they are proud of their legislature?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Phillips, I will have to rule your remarks out of order. They are unseemly. You were present in that so-called caucus and I think you should have made those remarks when you were present. I rule those remarks are out of order. Let's confine and make ourselves germane. And address yourself to the pending question.

SHIMAMURA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Richards, I mean Roberts please.

ROBERTS: I'll yield. I think Mr. Shimamura hasn't spoken on this subject. I'll wait until he's through.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask the committee that drafted this proposal as to the construction of the words "or increase the mandate of" in the third sentence of this new proposal, "The legislature shall not mandate, or increase the mandate of." Would those words add anything to that sentence?

TAVARES: I'll try to answer that. The intent of that was this. There are now existing laws which presumably will be carried into effect, at least for the time being, which do mandate certain county funds. Now, the burden of that mandate is not to be increased by mandating more than the existing proportions or amounts. That's what it means to increase the mandate. Or in the future suppose the legislature passes a new law, putting a new tax into effect and saying it shall be spent in a certain way by the various counties. After they pass that law, then they can't go back and increase that mandate without consent of the governing body or unless they provide enough additional moneys to cover the increase of the mandate. That is what it is intended to cover.

ROBERTS: I'd like to offer two amendments to this proposal. In the first line, "The legislature may," I'd like to offer an amendment to change the word "may" to "shall." And in line three which reads "within the state and provide," an amendment after the word "and" to read: "within the state and by general law provide for the government thereof." So that the first sentence would read, "The legislature shall create counties, towns, cities and other political subdivisions within the state, and by general law provide for the government thereof."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Richards, have you heard the amendment?

RICHARDS: A question that comes to my mind. By changing the word "may" to "shall" because it then would practically force, under the other wording here, that we might have a pyramiding of various forms of government, inasmuch as they have to do all of these things. If the desire of the movant is to make sure that the legislature creates a single form of political government in a "political subdivision," the "shall" I agree with, but I'm afraid there will have to be other changes in wording to make it such that it won't be necessary to create all of these various and sundry subdivisions.

CHAIRMAN: Well, you do not accept the amendment as offered by Delegate Roberts?

RICHARDS: Not without further change.

ROBERTS: I'd like to offer the same language of the first part, as was agreeable to the delegates who were preparing this modification on the Sakakihara proposal, so that it would read, "The legislature shall create counties and other political subdivisions within the state and by general law" and so on.

CHAIRMAN: Eliminating the words "city, towns and." There has been no second to these.

CORBETT: I second the motion.

HEEN: I'm responsible for the use of the word "towns" and "cities" because those words appear in the Organic Act, and placing them in this particular section together with the words "and other political subdivisions" will show that they have always been considered as "political subdivisions." In other articles already adopted by this Convention, we use the term "political subdivisions." When we use those words in these other articles, they mean counties, towns and cities.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

HAYES: Point of information. I just want to know whether in the Richards' amendment whether the legislature can - - whether this part of the Sakakihara amendment is included that I think is very important, "No law shall be passed mandating any county, town or municipality to pay any previously accrued claim."

CHAIRMAN: That is not in the proposed pending amendment.

TAVARES: I think that hasn't been included, but I see no objection to including it. But going back to Delegate Roberts' amendment. As I recall the Sakakihara amendment, it said something like this, "The legislature shall create counties and may create towns, cities and other political subdivisions."

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, and that motion lost.

PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, I mean Delegate Phillips.

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, I'm not through yet.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me.

TAVARES: May I just add a - -

CHAIRMAN: Will you yield?

PHILLIPS: I yield.

TAVARES: I want to point out that this mandates the legislature then not only to create counties but to create towns and cities and other political subdivisions. What does that mean when you say they shall create other political subdivisions? It doesn't make sense. You should say "may" after these others; maybe we don't want "towns," maybe we only want a "city and county." Why should we compel the legislature to create them all.

ROBERTS: I agree with the previous speaker. What you want is that "The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions, within the state by general law." Delete the words "towns, cities" and substitute "and may create other political subdivisions within the state."

TAVARES: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment of Delegate Roberts reads as follows: "The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions within the state, and by general law provide for the government thereof." Is that a correct statement, Delegate Roberts? Are you ready for the question?

ASHFORD: No, Mr. Chairman. If you are permitting amendments to this amendment, I wish to offer an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: To the first sentence, Delegate Ashford?

ASHFORD: No, to the third sentence. I wish - -

CHAIRMAN: Well, could we hold that off until we direct ourselves to this first sentence? Is that agreeable?

ASHFORD: In other words, you are permitting amendments to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Just to the one sentence.

ASHFORD: Well, if you are permitting it to one sentence you should be willing to permit it to other sentences.

CHAIRMAN: Let's confine - - say that amendments to the pending Richards' amendment shall be considered as being one class and not pyramiding. Is that - - that's agreeable with the committee? Seeing no objections, that's ruled.

BRYAN: I think if the delegate from Molokai has an amendment to the amendment made by Delegate Roberts, her amendment would be in order. If it is to some other part of this proposal, I think it should be held in abeyance until Delegate Roberts' amendment is passed on.

CHAIRMAN: Well, it's agreed there would be no pyramiding and that it will all be considered as one amendment designated Roberts, Ashford or others. Are you ready for the question?

FONG: These words, "general law," now I'm afraid that we are going to have a lot of pilikia over those words. Now, as I understand it, the legislature has reserved to itself the power of appointing - - giving to the governor the power of appointment of police commissioners in the City and County of Honolulu and also within the City of Hilo. Now, does that mean that if we were to give powers to the government or to - - that they can exercise their powers only by general laws, that the legislature will not be able to say that as far as the City and County of Honolulu is concerned, the power of appointment of the commissioners of police shall vest in the governor and the powers in the appointment of chief of police in the county, say Hawaii, will be with the supervisors? Does that mean that?

CORBETT: May I answer that?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Corbett will answer that.

CORBETT: I think that situation is taken care of in the last sentence of this proposal, "Political subdivisions shall have and exercise such powers as shall be conferred."

FONG: I am referring to that. What is the meaning of that? Does that prohibit the territorial legislature from saying to the City and County of Honolulu, by special law, that your city and county police commissioners will be appointed by the territorial governor and the county police of the County of Hawaii shall be appointed by the Board of Supervisors?

CORBETT: That is the intention. However I - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen will answer that.

HEEN: I take it that under the language of the last sentence there, the legislature "may by general law" provide that all members of the police commission may be appointed by the governor, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, so long as that general law applies uniformly to all of the political subdivisions. That I take it would be a general law. Likewise, your legislature may provide that in its wisdom the matter of liquor traffic shall be controlled on a statewide basis, so as to provide that all the members of the liquor commission shall be appointed by the governor, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, so long as that general language applies to all of the political subdivisions.

Now, I think this grant of power to the legislature to provide by general laws for the exercise by the political subdivision allows classification so long as those classifications are based on some valid reasons.

FONG: Well, that answers my question. Now, another question on this question of mandates. As I understand it, the City and County Police of Honolulu, the commission has - -

PHILLIPS: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State it please, Delegate Phillips.

PHILLIPS: I believe that the Chair has ruled that we would confine our talk to the first sentence, and now we are talking about the third sentence or the second sentence or something like that. I believe that we should confine our talk to the first sentence.

CHAIRMAN: If you will confine it, Delegate Fong, I'd like to put the question.

FONG: This is germane to the issue, Mr. Chairman, it's about - - it still deals with general laws.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

FONG: Now, as far as the Police Commission of the City and County of Honolulu is concerned, the legislature has seen fit to mandate certain amounts of money to the legislature - - to the Police Commission and they have provided for the increase of the property tax from $6,000,000 to $8,000,000. Now, as I understand the City and County Police Commission, their budget varies from year to year. Now, when it varies in the next biennium, now how will this law affect that raise of the mandates?

TAVARES: As I read this provision, it will mean that any increase over the previously existing mandates will have to be either provided for by additional funds or they will have to get the consent of the governing body of the City and County in order for it to be effective, to increase the mandate.

FONG: Now, as far as the City and County of Honolulu is concerned we have given them the power of taxing property by increasing the taxation power of $2,000,000. Now, that $2,000,000 certainly is far in excess of what the mandate is to the commission. Now, if we provide for the increase of $2,000,000 and then mandate them only for say $250,000, will we be able to come back next year and say, "We have already increased you to give you the source of revenue by which you can pay for the commission; we want to increase this mandate." Now, does it provide for a situation like that?

TAVARES: I don't think it would. The word "previously" means at any one time. When a new law is passed, whatever existed "previously" then can't be increased without either the legislature providing additional funds to cover that increase or additional sources of revenue to cover that increase, or without the consent of the governing body of the county concerned.

FONG: That seems to be a defect, but it isn't a serious defect at all. I presume the legislature could provide means of circumventing it.

TAVARES: There is one other thing that can be explained later about appointments of police commissions which is covered especially by a sentence later on, which I think we should discuss later.

CHAIRMAN: Is the committee ready to vote on the question?

PHILLIPS: In speaking against the amendment for the first sentence, I'd like to point out to the Convention that the wording, "provide for the government thereof" is in essence exactly what we have in our Organic Act. If the legislature is going to provide for the government of the local subdivisions, then there isn't really any necessity of any of the rest of this. If they provide for the government, then we're taking away from the local subdivisions the American doctrine of self-government, the basic thing that our forefathers laid the whole plan down for. This provides for the government. It's a mandate from above in itself. We are mandating the legislature to determine just exactly how the counties and the cities will conduct their affairs; how they will elect their officials; how they will collect their taxes; how they will plan their cities. This is absolutely against and the antithesis of the American doctrine of self-government.

DOI: In calling for a vote on this, I would like to suggest a division of the question. I think all of us or most of us at least are in favor of the first part of the amendment. There is some dispute as to the last portion, "by general law." Therefore, I suggest that we vote first on the first portion, and then take another vote on the second portion. Otherwise we are defeating the whole thing because we don't like one thing.

CHAIRMAN: That's how we will proceed immediately now. Thank you.

SHIMAMURA: The City and County government of Honolulu was provided for by special legislation, as we all know. Is it the intention of the proponents of this proposed amendment that such special charter shall not be granted by the legislature?

ROBERTS: There is no intention to take away the power of the legislature to set up counties, but when they are set up, they ought to be set up along the same lines with the application of general law. So if we set up another county you ought to provide the same general application of procedures as was adopted by the City and County of Honolulu.

SHIMAMURA: That's just the point. As I understand this wording, "by general law," the legislature is prohibited from providing for the city and county government of Honolulu or any other county by special charter, or any other municipality by special charter. That's the result of this use of the words, "by general law."

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? The question is this - -

HEEN: Point of information. I'd like to ask Delegate Roberts as to whether he wanted the phrase, "by general law" to apply to both the counties and other political subdivisions?

ROBERTS: May I reply in part by a question to the senator? Would the senator suggest that as to other political subdivisions that the general law be applied; whereas to counties, they may set them up by special charter?

HEEN: Well, that's the way it reads to me. Whether your amendment or suggested amendment, by inserting the term "by general law" in the place where you have inserted that phrase, my question is whether you wanted that phrase, "by general law," you intended that to apply both to counties and other political subdivisions? Is that your intent, Delegate Roberts?

ROBERTS: That was my intention, but I'm willing to be persuaded otherwise by the senator.

HEEN: In other words, counties may be created by special statutes. Did you have that in mind?

ROBERTS: They might be, but they generally aren't; they are generally set up separately.

TAVARES: As I read this, there is nothing to prevent the legislature by special statute originally to set up counties, but after they set them up, then they must provide for the governing thereof by general law. That's the way I read it. Otherwise you would have your counties static now, and never could be changed in the future.

CHAIRMAN: Well, would Delegate Roberts consider perhaps inserting the words "by general law" to be inserted after the word "create" rather than -- so you would have the legislature creating more or less by mandates, and then --

ROBERTS: I think it's in a correct place, and I think that Mr. Tavares' statement of it was correct.

CASTRO: If Delegate Doi would make his suggestion for division of the question in a form of a motion, I would be very happy to second it.

DOI: I so move.

CASTRO: I second the motion.

ARASHIRO: In the proposed proposal, I mean amendment, is that word "that" still there in the first word of the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: That is stricken.

ARASHIRO: Oh, all right. Then, do I understand that we are now voting as has been suggested by Delegate Doi, only on the --

CHAIRMAN: On the first sentence.

PHILLIPS: I would like to further amend the motion to read, after "provide for the," to delete "government thereof" and in its place include "adoption of local charter."

CASTRO: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: There is no second, Delegate Castro. May I get that amendment first, Delegate Castro? Will you yield for a moment? What is that amendment again?

PHILLIPS: After the word "the," before "government" in the third line, it would read "provide for the adoption of local charters" in lieu of the words "government thereof."

CHAIRMAN: "Provide for the --"

PHILLIPS: "Adoption of local charter."

HOLROYDE: Point of information. How are we going to vote on all these?

CHAIRMAN: That's been seconded. Are you ready for the question?

HOLROYDE: Point of information. What are we going to vote on? You have about three amendments to this one thing.

CHAIRMAN: I'm afraid I'll have to rule that out of order for the time being.

CASTRO: I believe the proper thing to do at the moment is to recess until 1:30. I so move.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any objection to it?

NIELSEN: I think we have to rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

SAKAKIHARA: No, Chair has the right to put direct motion for recess.

CHAIRMAN: In as—just a moment please, I must make this -- convey this bit of information. I have been called to the Supreme Court at 2 o'clock and perhaps, under the circumstances, it would be better that the committee rise and report progress and ask -- beg leave to meet again.

PORTEUS: If you aren't able to be back at that time, I think you could either ask or designate someone else to take the Chair in the meantime.

CHAIRMAN: All right, if you want. Recess until 1:30.

Afternoon Session

[President Samuel W. King presided in the absence of the Chairman.]

CORBETT: May I make a motion to the effect that on this matter, that we rise and report progress and let the committee work over these many amendments that have been suggested on the floor?

WOOLAWAY: I'll second that motion.

PRESIDENT: Delegate Charles Rice made the same motion, so I'll consider it made by Delegate Rice and seconded by Delegate Corbett. Ready for the question? The motion is that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

KOMETANI: What would be the reason for delaying this matter this afternoon? Why not go right through with it? We'll have to come back to it anyway.

PRESIDENT: The Chair has no conviction except that the time might permit the committee and those who have various suggestions to make to agree on the common set of phrases or sections.

CROSSLEY: Wouldn't it be that we could go back into the Committee of the Whole on Miscellaneous and continue our work, without losing any time?

PRESIDENT: That is what the Chair had in mind. Now the substantial number who prefer otherwise might vote against the motion to rise and report progress.

APOLIONA: Before you put that motion to a vote, will you please ask the chairman of Local Government if we could meet tonight, the entire membership, and meet with the different people who have different amendments so we can have a common solution to present to this Convention as a Committee of the Whole in the morning?

PRESIDENT: Delegate Kauhane, did the chairman of the committee have that in mind, perhaps?

KAUHANE: In that case I'm agreeable to the suggestion that has been made, but in order that the suggestion may be carried out to its fullest extent, I think the Chair should direct the committee to meet and to meet with any others who are willing to sit with the committee and offer proposals or amendments to take care of the proposition of local government.

APOLIONA: That's what I had in mind. If we're going to put over this matter for that reason, then it's in good order.

SAKAKIHARA: I thought that we had an understanding here that we could work on various proposals here pending before the committee, whether it be Miscellaneous Committee proposals or the Local Government; that we have agreed upon working until late in the afternoon and dispense with the night meetings, so as to enable the Committee on Style to work on.

PRESIDENT: Well, the Committee on Style will be having a meeting this evening, and perhaps the assistance of some of their members could be obtained.

SAKAKIHARA: And I believe that if we should go into night sessions, I don't think we'll be able to give the Committee on Style sufficient time to work on the proposals pending before it.

CROSSLEY: I believe that Delegate Sakakihara misunderstood. As I understood, the night meeting was only of the committee itself, Local Government Committee, and such other people as wanted to propose changes. It was not a Committee of the Whole meeting, because it's true the Committee on Style is meeting tonight and has a full schedule.

SAKAKIHARA: I misunderstood; I thought the Committee of the Whole would return here tonight.

ASHFORD: Won't we again be meeting with the same difficulty? That is, there is a profound rift in opinion, and the committee apparently represents one theory and a substantial number of delegates don't go along with that theory. Won't we be faced with exactly the same situation tomorrow?

CORBETT: I believe that the hope is that now that we have the sense of the Committee of the Whole, we will better be able to draft a proposal that would meet with their approval. We really don't want to stick to our own ideas in a pig-headed fashion. We wish to present something that will meet with the approval of the group. We now have some notion of what the group wants, and we hope to expedite matters by this procedure rather than delay them.

PRESIDENT: The Chair understood that Delegate Kauhane suggested that together with the motion to rise, report progress and sit again would be instructions to the Committee on Local Government to review their own proposal and the amendments that had been offered by various delegates with the view of perhaps bringing forth a proposal tomorrow that would represent the consensus of the Committee of the Whole.

ASHFORD: One of the difficulties with that was that we were limited to amendments; that is, we were considering the first sentence of a given amendment, and there were very grievous complaints about the third sentence, to which no amendments had yet been presented.

APOLIONA: And further on that motion, that you will direct Committee on Local Government to meet tonight.

PRESIDENT: The Chair didn't get that point. The Committee of the Whole will direct the Committee on Local Government to reconsider its proposal in the various amendments and be prepared tomorrow to make some recommendations.

KOMETANI: I feel like the delegate from Molokai. After all, the rest of the amendments that have been proposed on the floor have not been given serious consideration by the Committee of the Whole. If it has already been done and discussed, then the Committee on Local Government can go into session this evening and have the rest of the amendment discussed; but until otherwise, I think we'll come back - - revert back to the original place when we come back from the committee meeting.

PRESIDENT: Let the Chair put the question. Those who feel we could go on this afternoon, vote against the motion. The motion is to rise, report progress and ask permission to sit again, with instruction to the Committee on Local Government to reconsider its own proposal and all of the amendments that have been offered thereto. Those in favor of that motion, please say "aye." Those opposed. The Chair feels the noes have it. Anyone desiring a different vote? The Chair will decide the noes have it. The Committee of the Whole will proceed to consider the - - SAKAKIHARA: I so move that the Committee of the Whole proceed with the deliberation on Committee Proposal No. 26, and amendments offered thereto.

SMITH: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT: It's been moved and seconded that the Committee of the Whole proceed with the consideration of the committee report from Local Government and the amendments pending thereto. All in favor say "aye."

Now, the Chair was acting really as chairman of the Committee of the Whole from the beginning of this issue substituting for Delegate Arthur Trask, in the absence of his brother and his own absence. Delegate Charles Rice, would you like to take the Chair of the Committee of the Whole? Delegate Arthur Trask said he would be back as soon as he can get clear of the court. The Chair will appoint Delegate Crossley temporarily. Delegate Arthur Trask is coming back from court and will take over the Chair, if you will just substitute for him in his absence. As a matter of fact, the Chair had appointed Delegate James Trask, but for some reason or other he has not returned on time. We are still in Committee of the Whole and Delegate Crossley will act as chairman pro tem.

Chairman: RANDOLPH CROSSLEY

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come to order. Can the Clerk tell me where we were?

HEEN: What matter are we on, if I may ask, Mr. Acting Chairman? Is this on local government?

CHAIRMAN: This is on local government. I'm only sitting temporarily here for the Honorable Senior Trask.

HEEN: Are you an amended chairman?

CHAIRMAN: I'm an amended chairman three times over.

BRYAN: As I understood it, when we recessed the motion before the house was an amendment which was originally one, broken then into two parts. The amendment of the proposal came out of the caucus this morning and that was to put the word "shall" in the place of "may" in the first line. That was the first part of that amendment. The second part of the amendment was to add other words in the third line, "by general law," and also I think an amendment, "may create other political subdivisions," in the second line. But that amendment was broken down and the one that was before the house when we recessed was for the change in the third word in the first line from "may" to "shall."

CHAIRMAN: And as I understand it, we are working on the Richards amendment. Is that correct?

CASTRO: I seconded a motion for the division of the question. My understanding was that the first half was the statement, which is an amended statement, "The legislature shall create counties, and may create political subdivisions within the state." I believe that was what was contemplated by the division of the question.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the Chair might state that we have since then - - Delegate Roberts amended the language in the first part by deleting the words "towns, cities," so that it would read, "The legislature shall create counties and other political subdivisions within the state, and by general law provide for the government thereof."

ROBERTS: In order to keep the problem simple, I will withdraw the words, "by general law," so that we can vote on the entire sentence without having to divide the question. So the delegates would be voting on the proposal of the first sentence to read, "The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions within the state, and provide for the government thereof."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that? That appears to be a new motion.

CORBETT: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we vote on the following language: "The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions within the state, and by law provide for the government thereof."

PHILLIPS: I believe that I had made a motion to amend the amendment, and that was seconded; so there is a motion to amend the amendment on the floor.

CHAIRMAN: I might say, that doesn't show on the record that I have here.

TAVARES: To simplify matters may we not vote only on those - - only on the first two parts without prejudice to Mr. Phillips and Mr. Roberts later adding further amendments to the rest of the sentence?

CHAIRMAN: I'm informed by the Clerk that the amendment offered by Mr. Phillips was ruled out of order. I wasn't in the Chair, so I can't say as to why, and it does not appear at this time. I think that if the gentleman will suspend for a moment, we can get this out of the way without prejudice to what amendments you would like to make.
Delegate Phillips still has the floor.

TAVARES: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: State the point of information.

TAVARES: I think that there is a little error about what the Chair stated to be the amendment. As I understand it, the amendment which is to be voted on now according to the agreement of Delegate Roberts was to leave out the words, "by general law," or "by law" before the word "provide" in the last line of that first sentence.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that's the way the Chair read it, "within the state."

TAVARES: "And provide for the government thereof."

CHAIRMAN: "And provide for the government thereof."

TAVARES: Yes, without prejudice to a further amendment later of the latter part of the sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

PHILLIPS: That's what I was worried about, that if we vote on this sentence here up to the third line, then that's approved, well that will have already been accepted. Then there will be no chance to amend it then.

CHAIRMAN: No, the Chair would rule that this is only tentative and this would not foreclose you from making further amendments.

APOLIONA: Your committee is in agreement with amendments made by Dr. Roberts changing the word "may" to "shall" and deleting the words "town, cities" and in lieu of, insert "and may create other political subdivisions."

CHAIRMAN: I want to be absolutely certain, Delegate Phillips, that you feel that your rights are preserved in this. Are you satisfied?

PHILLIPS: If we are only voting down to the end of the second line there will be no difficulty.

CHAIRMAN: That's right. All in favor of the amendment say "aye." Opposed? Carried.

PHILLIPS: In regard to the third line, as I had already made the motion, and I'm sure it's understood by this time, that after - - from the word "provide," I would include that "by general law," but I particularly wanted in there "provide for the" instead of "government thereof," "for the adoption of charters," "of local charters." Now I would like to support that if it's - - that is the amendment. I move - -

CHAIRMAN: Will you state the amendment now and where you would - -

PHILLIPS: The amendment would be that in lieu of the word "government thereof," these words would be substituted instead, "adoption of local charters." That's at the end of the third line.

CHAIRMAN: "Adoption of local charters"?

PHILLIPS: Yes, sir, and it would read, "provide for the adoption of local charters."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

CORBETT: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: All right. Would you like to speak on that now, Delegate Phillips?

PHILLIPS: I would like to speak very, very briefly on it. I would like to say this, that if the legislature provides the government, that is, provides who is to be elected; how the monies will be collected; how the city is to be planned; how the individual local unit is to be planned; then you really in truth have no measure of self-government. If you permit those in the local subdivisions to prepare a charter, to create a commission which will draw up a charter, and to set forth in that charter the things that will be of the local unit, then you are really providing a measure of self-government for the local unit. This is a tested, proven fundamental principle, as I said before, and I hate to reiterate, principle or doctrine of American government, that the individuals who constitute the government will not have somebody hundreds of miles away telling them and dictating to them what to do by special legislation. Now, if they are permitted to prepare their charter, the legislature will determine the means by which the charter or the so-called local constitution is created; how it is drawn up; how it will be sent out to the local people to be ratified, much in the same manner that we are preparing this Constitution here. Then we will have a measure of local self-government. To put in there to have a higher authority provide government for somebody in a lower unit is absolutely anti-American and I plead with the Convention not to let such a thing go through.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

APOLIONA: The committee disagrees with the last amendment as provided - - as stated by the Delegate Phillips. Maybe Delegate Phillips doesn't know what he is trying to do. You are trying to make us go into the revision of an entire financial and tax structure, if you ask for the passage of this amendment, and I ask this Convention to vote this amendment down.

PHILLIPS: I rise to a point of personal privilege.

CHAIRMAN: State the point of personal privilege.

PHILLIPS: It was said that I had advocated a financial structure. At no time had I specified that at all, nor do I intend that to mean that in the local unit drawing up a charter. That does not imply that at all. The manner in which the sovereign power, the State, will delegate down to that local unit how taxes will be collected has nothing to do with it drawing up a charter, nor does it have any bearing on whether that individual local unit will put into that local constitution anything about the taxing power. So I would like to say that I did not imply that we would change the financial structure.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that the delegates understand your position on that.

BRYAN: I would like to ask Delegate Phillips a question. Does that provide for the "adoption of the charter thereof"?

CHAIRMAN: Would you address your question to the Chair, please?

BRYAN: Yes, Mr. Chairman. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

BRYAN: In that case, would the movant like to substitute the word "government" in place of "charter"? Counties don't necessarily have a charter.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Phillips, do you care to answer?

PHILLIPS: I say, "provide for the adoption of a local charter" simply by the means that they would show how that "local charter" will be adopted, but I would go along thoroughly with Delegate Bryan in saying that if you were to place "charter" in there, you would take away the mechanics, I mean, that the legislature could specify the mechanics of how that charter would - -

CHAIRMAN: As the Chair understood the question, it was the substitution of the word "government" for "charter." Is that correct?

BRYAN: For the "adoption of the government," instead of "adoption of the charter."

CHAIRMAN: Would you accept the amendment?

PHILLIPS: I would accept that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Then your language would read, "adoption of local government" instead of "adoption of local charter."

PHILLIPS: You are twisting it around. It would be, "provide for the " - - Now, you couldn't say "provide for the charter" because that's what a charter is. A charter is a constitution - -

CHAIRMAN: Would you state the amendment then, please?

PHILLIPS: I believe it's being amended. I believe I was asked to amend my amendment, and I was asked to place the word, "charter" - -

CHAIRMAN: Would you repeat your amendment for me, please?

PHILLIPS: I'd be delighted to. It says, "provide for the adoption of a local charter," in lieu of the words "government thereof."

CHAIRMAN: That's the way the Chair understood it. As I understood the amendment, it was to substitute "government" for "charter." Is that correct? Therefore, it would read, "provide for the adoption of a local government." I believe the Chair was correct in stating that the amendment offered by Mr. Bryan would make your amendment read, "provide for the adoption of a local government."

PHILLIPS: I would like to speak about that and to show why it should not be "government" instead of "charter."

CHAIRMAN: Well, the question was asked - -

BRYAN: Point of order. That wasn't a motion. I just asked him if he wanted to consider it because we - -

CHAIRMAN: The question that was asked, would you accept the amendment? Would you accept the word or not? That's all I want at this particular point.

PHILLIPS: I'll accept the wording.

MAU: Then it makes it unintelligible. It provides for the adoption of the - - As I understand now, the movant has accepted the suggested wording which would mean, "provide for the adoption of the local government."

CHAIRMAN: "Or a local government."

MAU: "Provides for the adoption of the local government."

CHAIRMAN: "Of a local government."

MAU: "Of a local government." That doesn't make sense at all.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? Question is on the - -

MAU: I suggest that the movant do not accept the suggested amendment. I will - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura hasn't spoken on this yet.

SHIMAMURA: May I have that entire sentence read please, with the amendment in it?

CHAIRMAN: The sentence would then read, "The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions within the State, and provide for the adoption of a local government."

PHILLIPS: I would like to withdraw my acceptance of that because I believe it would change the substance of it materially. However, it would be better than the way it was before, but I would like to withdraw my acceptance of that and have it read as I had previously wanted to amend it.

CHAIRMAN: Fine, then the amendment reads now, "provide for the adoption of a local charter." Are you ready for the question? Roll call's been called for. Does anyone want roll call? No roll call. Ayes and noes. All those in favor of the amendment will say "aye." Opposed. The amendment is lost.

APOLIONA: I now move for the tentative adoption of the first sentence as amended.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded for the tentative adoption of that sentence we have all heard quite a few times. All in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried. Next sentence.

ROBERTS: I have a sentence which I'd like to insert before the next sentence, sentence 1A, to read as follows: "Each political subdivision shall have power to frame and adopt a charter for its own self-government within such limits and under such procedures as may be prescribed by law." If I have a second to that, I'd like to speak for it.

WOOLAWAY: Could we have that read once again before he speaks on it?

CHAIRMAN: As I understood the motion, it's "Each political subdivision shall have power to frame and adopt a charter for its own self-government within such limits and under such procedure as may be prescribed by law." Is that correct, Delegate Roberts?

ROBERTS: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: It's been seconded. Any discussion? Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak in support of this sentence. I believe that it does provide some basic acceptance of the concept of local self-government, but also recognizes that we have in the State here certain operations which are statewide in character and which have functioned well and effectively in the past. This gives the political subdivision the opportunity to frame and adopt a charter for its own self-government, but recognizes that the legislature in establishing the subdivision can prescribe and set the limits and the procedures under which such local charter may be established. It's not full local self-government or home rule, but it provides an opportunity for the development of as much self-government as is possible as our State develops. I, therefore, urge that the delegates support this proposal.

CHAIRMAN: Anyone else wish to talk on this? Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Question.

PHILLIPS: I call for a roll call vote.

CHAIRMAN: Anyone wishing a roll call will hold up their hands. That's not enough, so it will be ayes and noes. All those - -

SHIMAMURA: May I have that read once more, please?

CHAIRMAN: The motion made was for a new sentence to immediately follow the one we just adopted and to be known as 1A tentatively, and reads as follows: "Each political subdivision shall have power to frame and adopt a charter for its own self-government within such limits and under such procedure as may be prescribed by law." All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried. A new sentence has been adopted.

The next sentence. Are you ready - -

PHILLIPS: Now I'm worried about the wording of that last one because it is in direct opposition to what was stated just above that. Now, if the State is to provide for the government of the local unit, then on the next - - the next sentence why we permit them to provide for their own government, I'd like to know how we are going to bring those two together. Would they conflict so?

CHAIRMAN: Well, it would seem to the Chair that "as prescribed by law," is the thing that makes the second sentence work with the first and I don't believe that there is much confusion on that point. However, the sentence has passed, and we are now concerned with the next line and I would like to move on to it. Is there a motion to adopt the next sentence?

SHIMAMURA: I so move.

RICHARDS: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we adopt the next sentence. Mine reads, "The legislature shall provide sources of revenue for the operation of such government so created." Is that correct? Ready for the question?

C. RICE: We've got a new one in there that Delegate Roberts put in. Which is the one that the revenue is going to be provided?

CHAIRMAN: How does yours read now?

C. RICE: It says, "The legislature shall provide sources of revenue for the operation of such government so created."

CHAIRMAN: Well, that's the way my copy reads. Now, is there a correction on that?

C. RICE: We had two at beginning.

TAVARES: I think the original Richards' amendment says "each" not "such."

CHAIRMAN: Well, the one I'm reading says "such." Has that been changed to "each"?

RICHARDS: It was my purpose to have "each government so created."

CHAIRMAN: Will you change "such" to "each." Then it will read, "The legislature shall provide sources of revenue for the operation of each government so created." Is that correct?

C. RICE: Now, who is going to say if the legislature provides enough revenue? They are supposed to give enough, aren't they? It seems to me the word "enough" belongs in there. "Sufficient"? I don't think this means very much. The legislature can ham-string one of these local governments.

CHAIRMAN: As I read this sentence, it says "The legislature shall provide sources of revenue." That has nothing to do with how much. They have simply provided a source. What is your pleasure? Anyone else?

FONG: What I want to know is this, suppose the legislature says, "Well, this is your source of revenue," and the budget of the City and County of Honolulu exceeds the amount which can be realized from that source of revenue. Now is the legislature bound to find additional sources of revenue? I think this is a little ambiguous the way it's written.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, can you answer that?

TAVARES: As I read Delegate Roberts' sentence here as it was inserted, it says, "Each political subdivision shall have power to frame and adopt a charter for its own self-government within such limits as may be prescribed by law." I think that "within such limits" would allow the legislature to set limits to revenue.

NIELSEN: I'd like to amend the sentence, placing the word "sufficient" after the word "revenue," right near the end of the line, so it will read, "The legislature shall provide sources of revenue sufficient for the operation of each government so created."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

TAVARES: Was that seconded?

CHAIRMAN: No. Are you ready for the question on the sentence? All those in favor say "aye."

FONG: Have we got an explanation on that?

CHAIRMAN: There was no explanation offered. Delegate Richards, do you want to answer that?

RICHARDS: I think that the intent is definitely there. "The legislature shall provide sources of revenue for the operation of each government." If the legislature - - it should be assumed that if the government can't operate, the legislature is not fulfilling its duty. It doesn't mean that the government can go hog-wild, though, in what it seems to think is necessary for operation. I think that that's a matter where the legislature, by using common sense, that it theoretically is going to have - - will be able to take care of that.

FONG: We find many times that the City and County comes to the legislature and says they haven't got enough revenue, and the legislature says, "Why, this is your source of revenue and you operate within that budget." Now, does this mean that the legislature is mandated to provide sufficient revenue? Now, if the answer is negative; if the answer is that the legislature shall only say where your revenue is coming from and not say that it must be sufficient, then that's another thing.

DOI: Will Delegate Fong be satisfied should we amend that sentence by deleting the words, "sources of," so that it will read, "The legislature shall provide revenue for the operation of each government."

FONG: I think it remains about the same.

CHAIRMAN: It would be my own opinion that you'd want "sources" rather than leaving it out, if the Chair can state an opinion.

C. RICE: At present they allow the county governments to have the real property tax, yet the legislature sets the limits which - - how far they can go. The City and County of Honolulu wants $8,000,000 now. The County of Kauai is $600,000. I just want to know whether they have to take off all those limits, or anything; or if the county wants to be a spendthrift the legislature will have to provide the funds for them.

CHAIRMAN: Well, it seems to the Chair that this sentence would say that the same controls that now exist would be continued.

ASHFORD: It seems to me that that is surplusage. As a matter of fact, the sentence we just adopted seems to me to be surplusage because when you say, "under such procedures" - - "within such limits, and under such procedures as may be prescribed by law," you make it purely a legislative grant, and this again is purely a legislative grant. It seems to me that it doesn't direct the legislature as to just what shall be done. It still leaves it to the discretion of the legislature, and therefore, in my opinion it's unnecessary.

APOLIONA: If the movant will ask for a deletion of this -- to amend this motion to delete this sentence, because if you read our first sentence, the last line, "provide for the government thereof," then your State legislature must provide for the operation of your government that has been created. Doesn't it seem so?

CHAIRMAN: Of whom are you asking the question? The Chair?

APOLIONA: Chair to ask Delegate Richards.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Richards, would you like to answer that?

RICHARDS: Well, I see no particular objection if the first sentence stands. In providing the government, part of what is necessary to provide is income for that government. So I think the sentence could very well be deleted.

CHAIRMAN: Would someone like to move to delete that sentence?

FONG: I so move that that sentence be deleted.

NIELSEN: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the sentence be deleted. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Sentence deleted.

The next sentence reads, "The legislature shall not mandate, or increase the mandates, of expenditures from any previously provided sources of revenue of political subdivision, without providing sufficient additional funds or other sources of revenue therefor, unless the governing body of such political subdivision shall approve thereof."

ASHFORD: I move to substitute for that sentence --

CHAIRMAN: To keep our parliamentary procedure in order, would you move for the adoption of the sentence first and then we'll begin amendments.

HOLROYDE: I move for the adoption.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded.

ASHFORD: I move to substitute for that sentence the following, which was discussed at some length on Saturday, I think it was. "No law shall be passed mandating any political subdivision to pay any previously accrued claim."

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford, would you read that again, and slower so that we'll be sure and all be able to put it down?

ASHFORD: "No law shall be passed mandating any political subdivision to pay any previously accrued claim."

HAYES: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this amended sentence be in place of the one on the copy before you. Are you ready for the question?

RICHARDS: I am in a peculiar position. I do not speak against the inclusion of the amendment, but I do speak against the deleting of the present sentence. I feel that it's perfectly proper to include that as an amendment to the section, but I think that there are two different points involved, and I feel that we can act on that as an amendment whether this other sentence be deleted or not, or changed.

ASHFORD: The reason for moving for the deletion is that it is a major concern with every rural area that the power of the legislature to mandate should not be destroyed. If this sentence as proposed by Delegate Richards remains in, the legislature can -- all the revenues from the urban -- I mean, the rural areas could be diverted to the benefit of where the large part of the population is, and if the legislature mandates a just share to those rural areas, then the taxation increases and the rural areas have to pay twice.

RICHARDS: I understand that there is a definite difference of opinion regarding the inclusion or deletion of this particular sentence; but I would appreciate it if the delegate from Molokai would make a motion to that effect, and that we do not have this other point of mandating for past claims confused with this other issue.

CHAIRMAN: I think the delegate from Molokai has stated her position quite clearly.

SHIMAMURA: I don't see why this aversion against mandating expenditure of funds should be limited to "previously accrued claims." Why don't we say, "to pay any claims." May I have that explained, if there's a special reason, from the proponent of that amendment?

ASHFORD: I thought that had been explained at some length on Saturday. Unfortunately, in a more or less remote past, the legislature has undertaken to require counties or the City and County to pay claims for which perhaps there was some moral obligation, but which were investigated and rejected by the counties. That is a true over-riding and most unfair as applied to indebtednesses already created. That is, the indebtednesses were not created but were imposed. In other words, what in criminal law would be known as an ex post facto law, and in civil law as a retroactive law, and I think that that is most unfair.

SHIMAMURA: In other words, as I understand this amendment, the legislature may still mandate the payment of claims unaccrued. There may be an existing contract, and the payment of money, the claim, has not accrued under such a contract, and the legislature may mandate the payment of such unaccrued claims although it cannot mandate previously accrued claims.

TAVARES: As a matter of practical feasibility, the legislature is hardly likely to do such a thing. But I can imagine the legislature passing a law authorizing condemnation of property by a city and saying the city shall pay for these claims when they are incurred. That would be perfectly all right. And if you say they shan't mandate, then you are tying up the legislature to even tell the City and County when they give them extra power, so that when they exercise it they must pay for the damage they do. That's why we have not brought in future claims, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Could the Chair ask the last speaker, are you speaking in answer to the question or in favor of the amendment by Delegate Ashford or opposed to it?

TAVARES: I'm only explaining this section. I have no objection to it going into this amendment, either with or without the clause. I think if the other clause stays in, it possibly covers the new one that's been proposed. But I don't object to that clause going in.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to point out that Miss Ashford's -- Delegate Ashford's amendment is in lieu of the present sentence on this -- dealing with this subject.

FONG: In the last legislative session, the legislature mandated the City and County to float the sum of $2,000,000 in bonds for the use of the Parks Board. Now, they mandated the City and County to have that money for the Parks Board. Now, under this provision of the statute, nothing was provided where the source of revenue would come from. That bond will be liquidated probably in twenty, twenty-five years. Now, under those circumstances, what would we do with a provision like this? The Territory certainly couldn't set up the source of revenue for $2,000,000 worth of bonds to be paid during a period of say 25 years.

RICHARDS: I believe that is answered in the last part of the sentence. The legislature could perfectly well go ahead with authorizing the county to sell the bonds -- City and County to sell the bonds for the benefit of the Parks Board but without providing the necessary revenues to the paying off of those bonds, if the governing body of such political subdivisions shall approve thereof. So that still permits the county, the board of supervisors and the mayor to go ahead with it on the authorization of the legislature, but it does provide them with a veto power if the legislature does not provide revenue—not necessarily to the $2,000,000 at one time but to take care of the gradual liquidation of the bond.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? Question is the adoption of Delegate Ashford's amendment. All those in favor will say "aye." Opposed, "no." Seems to be evenly divided. All those in favor of the amendment -- Delegate Ashford's amendment which would substitute for this sentence, will please raise your hand. No. Ayes have it. The amendment we just adopted will substitute for the entire sentence.

The next sentence begins, "All officials of a political subdivision shall be appointed or elected locally in such manner as shall be provided by law."

APOLIONA: I move for adoption of this sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

DELEGATE: I'll second it.

BRYAN: I move for the deletion of it.

SAKAKIHARA: I second it.

RICHARDS: I will second the original motion.

CHAIRMAN: The original motion was already seconded. There is a motion now to delete. Is there a second to delete?

SAKAKIHARA: I second that motion to delete.

BRYAN: May I speak to the motion? I think that this would not be necessary in view of the amendment -- the additional sentence by Dr. Roberts which provides for a charter or method of self-government, and I believe that those things would be covered in that manner.

PHILLIPS: I disagree with the delegate, with Delegate Bryan, because as it says here, "under such procedures as may be provided" -- "such limits and under such procedures as may be provided by law." Now, if that's the case, then it would be up to the legislature to prevent the local unit from specifying, that is, either elect or select its own officials, and the legislature could appoint or take over the selection of local officials completely. So I don't believe that unless you expressly stated, as has been brought out before, it will not be carried into effect.

ASHFORD: A question. When you provide that, "All officials of a political subdivision shall be appointed locally in such manner as may be provided by law," does the appointment by the governor of a police commission of local residence comply with such provision?

WOOLAWAY: I would just like to say that as it reads here, I'd say, no.

CHAIRMAN: Any one else wish to answer this? Chairman of the committee? I was recognizing the committee here to see if they have any answer to this.

KAUHANE: We are trying to deliberate here whether we should accept the motion which was made or Delegate Roberts' theory wherein the local government shall have the power to frame and adopt its own charter and set up its own form of self-government. If that is the intent of Delegate Roberts' amendment, then we certainly don't need this sentence in, could be deleted, which will be taken care of by the charter and the government in setting up its form of local government.

CORBETT: Am I correct in assuming that it is not necessary for every political subdivision to form its own charter? That is the interpretation I put on it. They may if they want to but they don't have to and if they don't, then this clause, this sentence here, will apply. If they do not adopt their own charter, then they must be in a position to have all their officials appointed and elected, or elected locally. That is my interpretation and my attempt to answer the delegate from Molokai.

APOLIONA: Just some information that I wanted to get from Delegate Roberts. In the first sentence that we adopted, "the legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions within the State, and provide for the government thereof," now in 2A that section refers to the political subdivisions that "may" be created. Isn't that your thinking, Dr. Roberts, that each political subdivision that "may" be created by the legislature may—I mean, shall have the power to frame and adopt a charter of its own?

CHAIRMAN: Are you asking a question?

APOLIONA: I'm asking that question of Dr. Roberts.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, would you like to answer that?

ROBERTS: I'll try. It seems to me that the sentence, "All officials of a political subdivision shall be appointed or elected locally in such manner as shall be provided by law," is identical in language with the proposal of the Organic Act with the exception of the word "locally." Under the Organic Act the provision is made that the "appointment or election, as the case may be, shall be in such manner as provided by law." This merely emphasizes the fact that in the setting up of these political subdivisions the appointment or election of the officers shall be locally; that's the only advantage of retaining it. Actually, of course, it could be covered in the previous section, but it throws it out a little more in this sentence.

BRYAN: I'd like to speak in favor of my proposal to delete again. In any event, whether it refers to the ones who "shall" be created, such as the counties, or those that "may" be created, it's either covered by the sentence 1A or by the last part of the sentence number 1 which says, "and provide for the government thereof." I think it's entirely unnecessary.

FONG: By inserting the word "locally," it gives you various meanings. Now, does it mean that the official must be locally appointed? Now, if he's elected, he is elected locally. Now, if he is appointed he may be appointed by the mayor and the board of supervisors, or the chairman and the board, or appointed by the governor. Now, does it mean that the governor can't appoint him? When you say he must be "locally" appointed, does that mean that the board of supervisors must appoint him? Now, what is the meaning of this? It has several meanings.

TAVARES: I'm afraid I'm to blame for that. If it's that ambiguous to a brother lawyer, then I must take the blame. Of course, the original wording of that was by the county, or city and county, and the word "locally" was put in there so as to apply to all political subdivisions. If it's not clear, it should be clarified. I'm not now speaking in favor of leaving that sentence in, I am only speaking as to the explanation of it. In discussing the matter in a group during recess, there was controversy about that, so we simply agreed on the form and agreed to leave it to the floor to decide whether we'd have it in or out. But the intent of it was to require that, as to those officials of a political subdivision, they should be appointed or elected either by the electors of the subdivision or by the local government of the subdivision. That was the intention of that sentence, and if that is not desired by a majority of the delegates, then they should vote to delete the sentence.

CHAIRMAN: The question now is for the deletion of the sentence. Are you ready for the question?

FONG: In other words, Mr. Tavares, that means that if this is passed, the intent of the committee was to keep the governor out of the appointment. Is that right?

TAVARES: That is correct unless of course - - for instance the police, unless the Territory or the State, could avoid that situation by making all of the police commissions purely state commissions and taking over their support and expenses, in which case then it wouldn't be a county organization any more.

FONG: Now, your liquor commission, that is supposed to be a county - - on a county level? Isn't it?

TAVARES: Yes, those are what I would call "hybrid" boards where they are partially appointed by the governor and yet considered as county boards. They are somewhat of an unusual type of board and I call them "hybrids" for lack of a better term.

FONG: You say that if we raise it to the dignity of a territorial board, then the governor could appoint?

TAVARES: Well, I wouldn't say "dignity." I think they both have dignity, but I say that if you made them purely territorial boards by law, then they would not come under this provision. As it now stands, I think either by construction or by the wording of the chapters themselves on these particular commissions, they have been held to be county boards or commissions, even though the appointments may be made by the governor.

FONG: Can you see anyway by which the police commission could be raised to the territorial level?

TAVARES: I think so. I think that the legislature could provide that they were State boards and take over the expense of operation thereof, and in that case they would not be county boards.

FONG: And the police then would be under the jurisdiction of the Territory rather than the counties?

TAVARES: That's right, under that situation.

CHAIRMAN: May I ask the speakers to continue to direct their questions to the Chair. It's the only way on the tape recording that we can identify who is asking questions, who is answering.

FONG: I am through.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Delegate Fong.

MAU: What has transpired just a second ago indicates the concern of those who are interested in local government. Speaking on the police commission and the liquor commission, with certain of the senators sitting in this Convention excepted, the senators in the territorial legislature have been quite jealous of their power of confirming these appointments. It seems to me that is the only reason why those two commissions, for instance, are not in the hands completely of the local government.

But on this motion to delete, the second sentence which was added to this amendment to Proposal 26 would give the authority to the legislature to say how these county or city officials shall be selected. There is no question in my mind that unless this sentence remains in, the legislature will have complete control over the selection of city or county officials. It also seems to me that the last clause in the first sentence would provide for that, if this sentence before us now is deleted. So I think that if we are to give some measure of self-government to the counties and other local governments which may be created by the legislature, that this sentence ought to remain in.

C. RICE: The liquor commission is a territorial board. The employee of the liquor commission has to go through the territorial civil service. Their cars are all T.H. The only time they come in contact with the county is turning over the surplus. After they pay their expenses the surplus goes to the county and the county keeps the books. Police commission is entirely a local board. Everything is run by the county except the appointments. I think the legislature could make the liquor commission a territorial, and keep it territorial if they wanted to. I've been on the board of the police commission. I don't see that it makes much difference whether locally we appoint the chief of police - - I mean, the governor or the chairman of the board of supervisors. Originally, you all remember, it was made by - - the appointment was made by the governor to keep it out of politics, but if you want to throw it into politics, throw it over to the mayor and the chairman of the board of supervisors. Then why have a police commission? Let's elect our sheriff again.

CHAIRMAN: Any further question?

ASHFORD: I'm not necessarily speaking in opposition to this sentence, but if it is to do what it is intended to do, I think it should be rephrased. The governor has one aspect of divinity. He is everywhere within the State, and if he should go, for instance, to Maui and there make his appointments, he would be appointing locally.

CORBETT: I just wanted to say in answer to the delegate from Kauai that we have heard a very good many times on the floor that we mistrust the legislators. Now, it seems to me we're passing the buck on down and there is a good deal of mistrust of the members of the board of supervisors. If we are able to give the members of the board at the local level a little authority, a little responsibility, we will, undoubtedly, attract men of as high a caliber as those who now run for the legislature.

SAKAKIHARA: I thought that when the government employees were all placed under civil service law with job security, that that was to accomplish attracting more competent and able government employees. It seems that, from the line of argument advanced here by the proponents of the retention of this sentence, saying one thing from what was proposed when the civil service law was enacted into law.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state that we have in the audience today—inasmuch as we are in the Committee of the Whole and in informal session—Mr. Lane W. Lancaster, visiting professor from the University of Nebraska, who is teaching this summer at the University of Hawaii, state and local government. I wonder if Mr. Lancaster would be good enough to stand.

The Chair will declare a five minute recess so that we can find out how to solve this problem.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The pending motion before us is the deletion of this sentence. Are you ready for the question?

TAVARES: I don't think all of the members are back.

CHAIRMAN: I am going to wait just about 30 seconds.

TAVARES: I see several delegates. May the Sergeant at Arms notify the delegates, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: The question is the deletion of the sentence, "All officials of a political subdivision shall be appointed or elected locally in such manner as shall be provided by the law." All those in favor of the deletion will say "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt. All those in favor will raise their right hand, all those in favor of deletion. Opposed. Deletion carries. The move to delete carried. That sentence is now deleted.

We're now at the last sentence of this section, "Political subdivisions shall have and exercise such powers as shall be conferred under the provisions of general laws."

WOOLAWAY: I move for tentative adoption of that sentence.

CORBETT: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded.

SAKAKIHARA: I move to delete that sentence.

FONG: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this sentence be deleted. Are you ready for the question?

CORBETT: This last sentence leaves the power with the legislature to keep such things as the police department, the water board and so forth under their jurisdiction. In other words, the political subdivisions shall only have such powers as are conferred under the provisions of the general laws, which we have already discussed in the first sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion? Delegate Mau, did you wish to be recognized? Are you ready for the question? The question is the deletion of that last sentence. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The motion failed. Now, the question is the adoption of the last sentence. All in favor say "aye." Opposed. Ayes have it.

The question now is the adoption of this section, as amended. Is there a motion?

ROBERTS: I move that we adopt this section, as amended.

SAKAKIHARA: Before that motion is adopted, I think in all fairness to the members of this committee that that should be reduced to writing for the information of the members so we could vote intelligently on the amended section.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara, I'd like to point out that we have adopted this sentence by sentence. I believe that - -

SAKAKIHARA: It was tentatively agreed, wasn't it?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, tentatively agreed. Now, we are adopting this thing tentatively until the whole thing - -

CORBETT: Point of order. I believe there was no second. I would like to second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Second the motion to what?

CORBETT: To adopt this as amended.

SAKAKIHARA: I renew my motion. While this section was tentatively agreed, the motion now before the Committee of the Whole is to adopt the section as amended.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

SAKAKIHARA: It's only fair, therefore, to have these amendments which were amended from time to time to be written up so that we can vote intelligently.

CHAIRMAN: What is your motion, Delegate Sakakihara?

SAKAKIHARA: Therefore, I move that the amended section be written out and distributed to the members of the Committee of the Whole so that we may vote intelligently thereon.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to second that. We amended and put in other sections. I'd like to see how it all fits together now.

WIRTZ: I'd like to third that.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved, seconded and thirded that this all be printed so that all the delegates can consider the final section before voting on it.

ROBERTS: I'd like to withdraw the motion to tentatively adopt this section to give the delegates an opportunity to see the draft as agreed to, even though we did consider it carefully in detail. Some of the delegates feel that they are not yet able to see the whole thing. I think in all fairness we should do so.

CHAIRMAN: If the motion to defer and have it printed carries, why that will automatically do that. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

APOLIONA: I now move that we rise and report progress and beg leave to meet - - sit again, rather.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair inquire whether or not we have any unfinished sections to go on with?

ROBERTS: There are two more sections. I think they are relatively brief, and I think that there need not be too much discussion on them on the floor and we can adopt them and then come back to Section 2.

CHAIRMAN: While this is'nt my job, I have the feeling that we should continue on.

PORTEUS: Since the clerks may be the only ones that have this section as it has been amended, wouldn't a very short recess be in order, in order that they may send it to the room for printing?

CHAIRMAN: No objection, so ordered.

(RECESS)

Chairman: ARTHUR K. TRASK

CROSSLEY: I move for the adoption of Section 3.

CHAIRMAN: Any second?

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Section 3 to be tentatively adopted, of Committee Proposal No. 26. Question called for.

BRYAN: I would either like to speak against the adoption or move the deletion. I'll speak against the adoption. I think it would be the clearer way to do it. I think that this is covered pretty well by the outline of what the subdivisions may and may not do, and how they shall be set up in Section 2, which we don't have before us but which I think most of the delegates will recall. Therefore, I don't think we need Section 3.

FONG: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any further debate? Ready for the question Tentative adoption of Section 3.

TAVARES: I should like it clearly understood that if the motion to adopt fails or if this section is deleted, that that does not mean that the taxing power is not reserved to the State. It means - - it still means that under the other general powers, the State by general law can reserve the power of taxation to the State. That is correct, is it not?

CHAIRMAN: You are referring to what section of the taxation and finance proposal?

TAVARES: No, as I understand it, an opponent spoke against adopting Section 3 on the ground that it was already covered by previously tentatively approved provisions, with which I agree, but I should like the record to show that that does not mean that the taxing power cannot be reserved to the State by the legislature under the other general provisions that have been tentatively approved. I think it can, and therefore, if Section 3 is not adopted, that power still remains in the legislature to reserve the taxing power to the State or to the legislature.

SAKAKIHARA: I rise to a point of information. Wasn't this power vested in the State according to the proposal submitted to this Convention by the Committee on Taxation and Finance?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. In a general sense, it shall not be contracted away, and so forth.

TAVARES: I agree that the taxing power is reserved to the legislature.

SAKAKIHARA: Therefore, I'm in accord with the statement of the gentleman from the fifth district, Delegate Bryan. I therefore move to delete Section 3 from this proposal.

CORBETT: I believe the committee report stated that if this matter was sufficiently taken care of elsewhere in the Constitution, we would be perfectly willing to have it deleted from this particular proposal. However we did wish to express the committee's views and to insure understanding of the fact that we did not intend in any way to have the taxing power taken over by the units of local government.

CHAIRMAN: For the sake of the record, will Delegate Crossley read that provision in the taxation and finance proposal with reference to the particular matter at hand?

CROSSLEY: And I might say this is covered in the committee report.

CHAIRMAN: You withdraw your prior motion?

CROSSLEY: No, we have to do both of these in order to do it. I now move that this be - - I second the motion that this be deleted, and that would be the prior motion at this time.

ROBERTS: As I recall the section dealing with taxation and finance, that preserved the power of - - the taxing power in the State. It is not the intent, as I gather, of the Committee on Local Government to withdraw from that power, but this proposal does state, however, that the taxing power of the State stays there, but the State may delegate to the political subdivision some of those powers. It would seem to me to be a very valuable section to recognize that some of those powers of the State which reside in the State may be delegated to local subdivisions by actions of the legislature.

SAKAKIHARA: Speaking to the motion, if you'll read the first sentence of the amendment, "The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions, within the State and provide for the government thereof." They may in that bill, when the government is set up, delegate certain taxing powers, if they see fit to.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? The question is the adoption tentatively of Section 3. Pardon me. The deletion - -

KING: Before we vote on this—the motion now is to delete Section 3—I'd like to speak in opposition to that motion. Section 3 does do a little more than reserve the taxing power in the State, which is already reserved. I want to support the remarks made by Delegate Roberts that it offers an authority for the State to delegate such part of the statutory power it may see fit to do so to the counties. So it seems to me that this section has some value in order to be retained. I'm opposed to the motion to delete.

TAVARES: May I ask the last speaker a question? Is it not true that under Section 56 of the Organic Act, the legislature has allowed the counties to levy some license taxes or fees, and has also allowed them, of course, to receive the benefits of the real property tax?

KING: In reply to that question, I think it is true; but the levying of real property tax is still reserved to the territory under the Organic Act. All the counties do is submit a budget. The territorial treasurer and the tax assessor determine the rate and determine the assessment, but I don't want to get involved in a technical argument of that sort. There is a certain amount of duplication in this section, yet it serves a useful purpose and I see no occasion to delete it.

HEEN: I am in favor of deleting this section. I believe it's unnecessary. Without it, the legislature can do exactly what it says it might do here, and I will support the motion to delete this section upon the ground that it is unnecessary.

CHAIRMAN: Question? Are you ready for the question? The question is the deletion of Section 3. "The taxing power shall be reserved to the State except so much thereof as may be delegated by the legislature to the political subdivisions, and the legislature shall have the power to apportion state revenues among the several political subdivisions." Those in favor say "aye." Those opposed, "no." I'm inclined to think the noes have it. Show of hands. Those in favor of deleting Section 3, please raise your right hand. Twenty. Those opposed to the deletion. Twenty-five. Those not voting. The motion is lost, so the section is adopted tentatively, Section 3. Those in favor of formal adoption tentatively of Section 3 say "aye." Those opposed, "no." Ayes have it, except for two noes.

KAUHANE: I move that Section 4 - -

CHAIRMAN: Considering Section 4.

KAUHANE: - - Section 4 be tentatively agreed to.

CROSSLEY: I move that Section 4 tentatively be adopted.

DELEGATE: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? Those in favor of Section 4 reading as follows: "This article shall not limit the power of the legislature to enact laws of state-wide concern," vote "aye." Opposed, "no." Ayes have it. Carried.

The committee's attention is now called to Section 2, as amended, for consideration.

CROSSLEY: We deferred action on Section 2 until we could have the section mimeographed for us; we now have these. I therefore move for the adoption of Section 2, as amended.

> Section 2. The legislature shall create counties, and may create other political subdivisions within the state and provide for the government thereof. Each political subdivision shall have power to frame and adopt a charter for its own self-government within such limits and under such procedures as may be prescribed by law. No law shall be passed mandating any political subdivision to pay any previously accrued claim. Political subdivisions shall have and exercise such powers as shall be conferred under the provisions of general laws.

ROBERTS: Second.

CHAIRMAN: There is a second to the motion. Any consideration?

SHIMAMURA: In my humble opinion, the second sentence is inconsistent with the fourth and also with a portion of the first sentence. By that I mean that under second - - the second sentence says that any "political subdivision shall have the power to frame and adopt a charter for its own self-government," and then in the fourth sentence we say that the "Political subdivisions shall have . . . powers as shall be conferred under . . . general laws." The charter as we all can see would provide for the government of that particular subdivision and would provide for its functions and its powers, and it would not be by general laws but by special charter, by special legislation. Therefore those two sentences are inconsistent.

PORTEUS: I had an impression similar to that at first. However, it would be quite possible for the legislature to first create the counties and provide some sort of framework of government. In the meantime, before the political subdivisions actually as authorized get together to frame their form of government, you give them certain powers. You give them the power to handle zoning and the power to handle such matters as the senator from Hawaii and other things. So that I think that under this, that if the county was authorized to have a convention or some such matter as that, the convention could actually determine that they would have a board of managers with a city manager type of plan, rather than having an elective mayor, I believe, if the legislature in authorizing them would give them enough power so that they could determine to have one or have the other. On the other hand, if the legislature were to say that they were to set up a city form of government with an elective mayor and elective board of supervisors, of course those would be the limitations under which they would operate.

ASHFORD: Would it not be possible under this provision for the legislature to do what the Congress of the United States, we hope, is going to do. I understand there is a provision of H.R. 49. They are requiring our Constitution to be approved by the Senate first before we get statehood. And would it not be possible for the legislature, for instance, to say that the island of Lanai should become a county and should set up its own form of government, which should first be submitted to the legislature for its approval before it became a county. I think that with the smaller subdivisions which wish to become counties that would be very easily done and very satisfactorily done, and that is where that section would have real value.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, are you satisfied with the answer of Delegate Ashford?

SHIMAMURA: I can see the situation where a charter may provide for the bare frame of a government, that is, the mayor and council plan or the city manager plan; but the usual charters have included definite powers and functions to be given the governing authority of that particular state -- particular subdivision, political subdivision, and that is the reason I feel that there is an inconsistency between the second sentence and the fourth. If the fourth sentence were to be amended to read, "shall be conferred under the provisions of laws," instead of "general laws," I think there won't be any inconsistency.

CHAIRMAN: Well, Delegate Heen made a rather fine statement in the morning session in the committee room here, the caucus that you referred to, and I would like very much if he would repeat that sage advice with respect to this provision.

HEEN: I don't recall what it was in reference to, at the present time.

CHAIRMAN: You had referred to the vast study that would be involved in setting up the various intricate situations that confront the people here, and in our limited time here, to frame a broad constitutional provision would probably be wise, and you made some statement in favor of this—not this specific situation but your general attitude towards this provision—which would answer in some way the question posed by Delegate Shimamura.

HEEN: What I stated was this. I am opposed at this time to have written into the Constitution matters of detail with reference to the setting up of counties and other political subdivisions. I say this, that there are not many delegates here who are well enough informed as to how these counties and local units perform their functions, and how they are set up. Therefore, it would seem to me that we should use at this time some general language whereby the legislature may, after a more careful study, provide for the setting up of these various local subdivisions, counties, cities, and so on, and I am somewhat in favor of some general language along the lines set forth in this last proposed amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Section 2, specifically?

HEEN: Section 2, as amended.

TAVARES: Just to add further to the confusion, I would like to point out that we must bear in mind that we have one county, the County of Kalawao, which is called a county by law, but which I don't think we want to be covered by this. Now, that's just another one of the little problems that has to be worked out when you adopt a new provision. Now, I think maybe we can handle it by making it very clear in our Committee of the Whole report that the County of Kalawao is not a true county in the true sense of the word, and therefore is not covered by this provision giving them authority to frame and adopt a charter, unless that is what we mean. But there is another point that ought to be clarified, and before we adopt this section, I think it should be clarified. Now, if it is the sense of this Convention that the people of the County of Kalawao, instead of being governed by the Board of Health, as they are now, should have a right to adopt and frame their own charter, let's make that clear. But otherwise let's make it clear to the contrary that they are not covered at all.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? Question?

KING: I don't see there is any conflict. That sentence ends, "and under such procedures as may be prescribed by law," so that it seems to me there will be no conflict in regard to Kalawao or any other county.

HEEN: It would seem to me that there should be a comma after the word, "subdivision."

CHAIRMAN: On what line?

HEEN: So that the term --

CHAIRMAN: On what line, please?

HEEN: Second line. So that the term "within the State and provide for the government thereof" shall apply not only to the counties which shall be created, but also to those other political subdivisions which may be created.

CHAIRMAN: So the sole amendment suggested is a comma after the word, "subdivisions" at the end of the second line?

HEEN: That's correct.

TAVARES: I'll second that motion to amend.

CHAIRMAN: Will the movant accept that? The movant accepts the amendment so that no vote is necessary.

TAVARES: That there may be no mistake, since I apparently provoked no thought from this Convention on Kalawao I move that before we vote on this, that it is the sense of this Convention that the County of Kalawao is not covered by this section as to counties.

CROSSLEY: I would second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion made and seconded that it is the sense of this Convention that the County of Kalawao is not included in the term used herein for the suggested Section 2 with respect to counties, that it is under the jurisdiction of the Board of Health, and for all purposes shall continue to be considered as such. You ready for the question?

HEEN: In connection with that, the legislature might later on study instead of calling Kalawao a county, might call it a village, and to provide for the government of that village. So I don't think there is any problem there at all.

CHAIRMAN: Well, to obviate any -- the question, are you ready for the question? Those in favor say "aye." Those opposed, "no." The ayes have it, so the sense of the committee will be inserted in the Committee of the Whole report.

We are on Section 2, as amended, with a comma after the word "subdivision" at the end of the second line. Are you ready for the question? All of those in favor of adopting tentatively Section 2 as submitted, the amended section of Delegate Richards, say "aye." Those opposed, "no." Unanimously the ayes have it.

HEEN: In view of the fact that this --

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, will you yield a moment? Notice from Delegate Mau that it is not a unanimous adoption of Section 2, as declared by the Chair. The Chair is in error.

HEEN: In view of the fact that this last section which has just been adopted, I take it tentatively, Section 1 should be deleted. I move that it be deleted.

ROBERTS: I move we reconsider our previous action on Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: Is that matter -- there has been no second to it.

APOLIONA: I will second Delegate Roberts' motion to reconsider Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Delegate Apoliona.

ASHFORD: I thought it was agreed on Saturday that we didn't have to reconsider because we are just adopting tentatively.

HEEN: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. So the motion is for the deletion of --

BRYAN: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: -- of Section 1, namely, "The legislature shall create political subdivisions within the State and the method of establishing the same." Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the deletion of this section as read say "aye." Those opposed say "no." Unanimously adopted. So the same is deleted. So that leaves standing this new Section 2. Section 3 has been adopted. Section 4 has been adopted.

APOLIONA: I move that this committee rise, report progress and beg leave -- ask leave to sit again.

ASHFORD: Would it not -- I think we are almost there, but would it not be better first to renumber the remaining sections and adopt them all, and then rise, report progress and beg leave to sit again to consider the report.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. It's been brought to my attention by Delegate Crossley that there has been a Section 1A that has been tentatively adopted, and 1A reads as follows --

BRYAN: That was a sentence --

ROBERTS: That's covered in Section 2, so-called Section 2. I move that we tentatively adopt the proposed section on local government, as amended.

BRYAN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Specifically, that would be Section 2, as amended?

ROBERTS: Section 2, as amended which actually covers Section 1 and 2, and Section 1A, and Section 3 and 4. We can renumber it therefore, so Section 2 being Section 1, Section 3 being Section 2, and Section 4 being Section 3.

CROSSLEY: And that the Chair be instructed to draw up a report for final adoption by this committee.

BRYAN: I would second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, but there is a suggestion of Delegate Ashford that we should adopt this -- these entire sections as a whole. All of those in favor of the motion as made by Delegate Ashford and seconded say "aye." Those opposed. Unanimously adopted. Sections 2, 3, 4 to be renumbered 1, 2 and 3.

BRYAN: I move that we rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: Second it?

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor say "aye."

BRYAN: I think that motion should include the fact that the various chairmen should prepare a report.

CHAIRMAN: I accept the amendment. Those in favor say --

CROSSLEY: There is only one chairman in this committee, believe me. It's you.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you for the kokua.

DELEGATE: I rise to a point of order. There has been no second to that.

SHIMAMURA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is that this Committee of the Whole on Local Government will rise and report progress and that the chairman will make a report that this entire section has been adopted. Those in favor say "aye." Opposed, "no."

JULY 7, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole will come to order, please. Anyone desiring to move for a recess at this time to look over the report? Recess subject to the call of the Chair.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: We are considering Committee of the Whole report and the proposal as amended by the Committee of the Whole.

H. RICE: I move that the committee rise and report recommending the passage of -- that Committee Proposal No. 26 pass second reading.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

SAKAKIHARA: I have an amendment. After the first sentence and commencing with the words, "Each political subdivision," strike out the remainder thereof, of Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: Section 1. What line, please?

SAKAKIHARA: Third line, commencing with the words, "Each political."

CHAIRMAN: Is there any second to Delegate Sakakihara's determined motion? Hearing none - -

COCKETT: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: You heard the motion; the motion of Delegate Sakakihara was seconded by Delegate Cockett from Maui.

ROBERTS: This article has been adopted by the Committee of the Whole as amended. We can't amend it without reconsidering our previous action.

CHAIRMAN: Altogether correct. Any debate on the motion made by Delegate Rice?

DELEGATE: I move for the previous question.

ROBERTS: The motion is out of order.

CHAIRMAN: Sakakihara's motion is declared out of order Delegate Roberts. The pending question and motion here made by Delegate Rice is that we recommend - - the committee rise, recommend to the Convention the adoption of - - pass on second reading Committee Proposal No. 26 as amended. Question. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed Unanimously carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on HEALTH AND PUBLIC WELFARE

(Article VIII)

Chairman: KATSUMI KOMETANI

MAY 3, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: The delegates will have permission to remove their coats and smoke, if they wish to. The Chair will ask Dr. Larsen, chairman of the Committee on Health and Welfare, to come forward and discuss with you his committee proposals.

LARSEN: I also want to mention the fact that these are not conclusions. The committee felt that they want your thinking, your collective thinking, with the hope that you'll raise questions. You possibly will give us some new slants or you might have certain objections that might - - you might wish to be deleted. I might say that the last word in the "Fellow Delegates" message is "deliberations" rather than "deletions," if you would change that.

I'll rapidly go through this, and, of course, part of our thinking here is that perhaps, as the committee chairman suggested, that this is an experiment to try to get us to move a little faster perhaps. We, all of us, I think, are conscious of the fact that time is getting short, and we want to try every way possible to speed up without hurting the deliberations and try to get off our desks as soon as possible certain things that most of us agree on.

As a headline to this, we are suggesting a change. Rather than "Health and Public Welfare," we are suggesting "Health and General Welfare" as the name of the article, the question being public welfare has gotten to have a connotation that sometimes is not too good.

I'll read the first section, which has to do with public health, and then we'll raise any questions, objections or additions. After considerable debate, we got down to this. "A. Legislation for the protection and promotion of the public health, including preventive measures shall be made by the State in the interests of its inhabitants." Are there any questions on wording, or additions or the thought involved?

KANEMARU: I was just wondering whether the phrase "including preventive measures" could be left out due to the fact that "promotion" - - "protection and promotion" might cover all of that phrase there. Or does it have to be?

LARSEN: The thought is - - I might say there was considerable discussion on that. So much of the present public health department has to do with innoculations to prevent disease, sanitation, and things of that type that although they might be stretched into promotion of public health, we believe that perhaps "prevention" does cover a little broader field than either "protection" or "promotion." The objection, I think, is a good one, but after considerable discussion we thought perhaps it made it a little clearer with only the addition of three words. Any other objections to that one?

AKAU: I am wondering if we couldn't start off with a statement about the legislature since somehow, this has to be mandated. In other words, "The legislature shall provide by law for the maintenance and efficiency of a State Board of Health." While I don't disagree with the statement that we have here, I'm wondering if it will be clarified a little bit more to say that the legislature shall provide for a State Board of Health.

LARSEN: Did you want me answer it?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, Dr. Larsen.

LARSEN: We have two or three propositions before us, one in which it's suggested that a State Board of Health be formed and that the head of the Board of Health shall be appointed by the governor and so on. I would feel very distinctly that that is limited. At the present time we have a State Board of Health. It might be that within the next ten years there will be a different way of protecting and developing and promoting health. Although at the present time the detail is a State Board of Health, I can conceive of the possibility of a different organization, and then we would have it frozen. I think we all agree that the one thing we are trying to protect from is producing frozen legislation here that will prevent the evolvement toward something perhaps bigger and better.

ASHFORD: Dr. Larsen, is it not true that everything that is referred to - - that some legislation on all the subjects referred to in this article except the preservation of natural beauty and sightliness and good order, have already been done by our legislature under the provision of the Organic Act that reads as follows: "That the legislative power of the Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States locally applicable."

LARSEN: I think that's true. I mean, we could perhaps end all our deliberations right here and say, let's just adopt, as we already have adopted, the Constitution of the United States; and as we know, for 150 years we've evolved very well under that. As I see this, the State legislature is trying to define a little more detail for our local use and perhaps —as will in some of these other sections—perhaps are trying to beat a pathway with the hope that further legislation will enlarge the development of the protection and the rehabilitation of people that isn't, I believe, or it certainly wasn't recognized at the time of the writing of the first Constitution. And, therefore, as I understand it, my thinking is that our State Constitution should enlarge a little bit without hampering or without freezing our concept of the duties of the State to their people. Now, I say this because as I read over these many other constitutions, that has been the general custom of the state constitutions. What we're trying to do is limit it as to the number of words and still carry this broad concept of present-day ideas regarding the care of our people. Does that answer - -

ASHFORD: I think not. My point was that under the legislative - - the grant of legislative powers in the Organic Act, all these various activities have been already cared for in a greater or less degree by the legislature, and that they do not need specific mention. That in itself might be a freezing operation.

LARSEN: Well, we happen to disagree here. I feel it isn't freezing; and of course, since the Organic Act was written, I think as we discuss some of these other sections, some of these concepts have developed even since our own Organic Act was put into use. I think it's more, as I read and interpret these, that we are trying to define the philosophy of the care of the State for its members who are unable to care for themselves. However, that's one point of view. I would be very happy to hear any others.

FUKUSHIMA: As I read this section here and the following section, it is a mandate upon the legislature. I'd like to ask the chairman of the Public Health Committee -- Public Welfare Committee, how does the committee propose to enforce the mandate?

LARSEN: We feel it's not a mandate for detail; it's a mandate for the philosophy of care such as already, it's true, has been included through our Organic Act and through our various actions, but getting into our new Constitution that same concept. As far as how to put it into operation, it seems to me we leave it wide-open for future legislation, even to the question of the other delegates here, even to mentioning that a State Board of Health shall be appointed. We even leave that to the discretion and judgment of the legislature. As I see this, this is our concept. How it's to be done and the detail of its being done I think properly should be left to legislation.

FUKUSHIMA: Then isn't it the delegate's contention, the delegate from Molokai, that the Organic Act provides what you have provided here in five sections in two lines? Wouldn't that suffice?

LARSEN: I don't agree, of course. I believe that we need to define it. With our present concept of health, I believe we need to define it a little more than it's defined in the Organic Act. And, of course, as you realize, this will take the place of the Organic Act.

MIZUHA: I would like to ask the chairman of the committee --

CHAIRMAN: Will you please use your mike?

MIZUHA: Miss Ashford said that I was a subject of a good cartoon holding the mike, so I would like to refrain from holding the mike.

I would like to ask the chairman of this committee for some information or explanation of the language here in the first section as to whether the concept or philosophy expressed in this section will include appropriations by our State -- proposed State legislature for the welfare and the taking care of unemployed people?

LARSEN: If by taking care of unemployed you mean by giving them jobs, I would say "no." If the unemployed are sick and unable to care for themselves, they become dependents who shall be cared for by the State.

MIZUHA: Then the phrase "protection and promotion of public health" would mean the taking care of all people who are unemployed and who have no source of income?

LARSEN: No, I think Section A is more general than that. Section A doesn't cover that at all. It covers the whole present organization of the Board of Health. If you will take Section E, I think we can answer your question for the moment. "The legislature shall promote preventive measures, treatment and care of dependents, delinquents, criminals and psychopathic personalities, when necessary, in the interests of social welfare." If your unemployed became a problem of social welfare, I think legislation -- proper legislation could be passed to care for them.

MIZUHA: Then it is my understanding that the legislature must make a determination under these sections as to when the unemployed will become dependents.

LARSEN: I think so, and I think that's as it should be.

MIZUHA: Thank you.

SMITH: Looking over these sections I cannot help but feel that we would be adding a lot of things to our Constitution which, when you put it in your Constitution, right now might be perfectly O.K., but in the future they might be subject to some change. And always believing -- having faith in the people, I subscribe to a general provision in the Constitution giving the legislature full power to act for the government, the good order of the State, the health, safety and general welfare of its inhabitants, leaving the rest up to legislature.

NIELSEN: I'd like to know if the first sentence there, "Legislation for the protection and promotion of the public health," if any discussion was had regarding socialized medicine being covered by that part of it.

LARSEN: There was considerable discussion. Of course, I want to emphasize the fact that these are not conclusions. These are -- Just what we are getting is what we wanted. We wanted to see how the other delegates felt on these various problems. As far as socialized medicine is concerned, the nearest approach was perhaps—I think the committee members will allow me to say this—was regarding subsidization of all hospitals. But some of the committee members felt that was moving too far into specific fields and overruled me completely. The question I might ask the delegate from Hawaii is—the thing I'd be interested in—what his definition of socialized medicine is?

NIELSEN: Well, I meant the often-termed "government taking over the medical care of all the people." And that's the way I would read that first part of that if the -- it would mean that the State is assuming the responsibility for public health, and necessary legislation will be enacted so that everyone will be taken care of on cough, colds, etc.

LARSEN: I would answer that as a -- I feel that the gentleman is trying to needle me here, but I think I can answer that. Our usual concept of public health I think is so clear and, just as we've listened to many of these lawyers certain terms [that] were used have been used so much and have been clarified so many times that there won't be much danger of interpretation. I do have some clauses perhaps later on where you might well raise that question, but I think this one which is headed "Public Health" -- Public health has gotten to have a connotation of the things that our Department of Public Health is now doing. It has to do with such things as protecting labor from, say, lead poisoning, protecting labor from abnormal dust or abnormal injuries of all types, abnormal hazards. That's all included in our present concept of public health. That is an evolution, and I think from what I hear here, it might be well to leave some of these clauses simply to clarify some of these things that in our present day of thinking there has been considerable disturbance. I feel very distinctly that in our law courts or any other place that would not include our usual concept of socialized medicine, if by that we mean that type of medicine that's now going on in England.

SHIMAMURA: I asked what was the reason for the special use of the words "public health," instead of the general word "health."

LARSEN: For much of the reason that I just gave, that "public health" in this terminology has gotten to mean the public health department, which has to do with sanitation, food control, protection of labor, preventive innoculations, tuberculosis, anti-tuberculosis work, etc. That is usually accepted as going under public health. Why we wanted to change it in our headline was that at the present time in the philosophy of most states, we have gotten beyond just public health, we have gotten beyond that thinking even since our Organic Act was developed. Therefore, our first sentence does cover completely, I think, the present concepts of public health, but doesn't take the concepts in some of these other sections on health and general welfare.

SHIMAMURA: The reason I raised the point is this. I think you are unduly restricting, under this particular clause and section, the province of the legislature. If you made it a general term and said, for example, "The legislation for the protection and promotion of the health of the inhabitants of the state shall be provided by the State," you would have a much more general term there, and I think the province of the legislature under this section -- if you're going to have a special section away from the general clause on Health, Safety and Morals, I think your purpose will be better served.

LARSEN: My answer to that would be, if we did that we'd come right down to the delegate from Hawaii's angle, and there it could be interpreted as meaning exactly what socialization in England is like. Now, if we got into that debate, why I'm afraid I would be a little partisan.

CASTRO: Dr. Larsen, I have a question about the language, the construction. The term, "legislation shall be made by the State," I doubt whether that is quite the correct or the whole thought. I presume that you have examined the section on public health in the Model State Constitution, and if I may just read it to indicate the phraseology that I would myself prefer: "Provision . . . shall be made by the State and by such of its civil divisions and in such manner and by such means as the legislature shall from time to time determine." Now, I realize that that's a little bit more verbose than the way you have it, but I think it would carry out the sense of the philosophy a little further; and that is that the provisions shall be made by the State. While the legislature shall have the right to pass laws, there will be certain civil divisions of the government that from time to time without legislation would have the right to act. Was that discussed in committee?

LARSEN: Yes, the section you mentioned was discussed. We discussed also this "from time to time." We felt that is inferred here, that of course it would have to be "from time to time" as laws are made. We felt it left it wider open to leave it out. "The provision shall be made," I think there was purely a question of styling and the question that -- Some of us felt this covered the thought just as well with fewer words. Now there again, I think, that again would be taken care of by the Committee on Style. I think that answers you?

HOLROYDE: I don't go back to this subject with the idea of needling Dr. Larsen on it, because I have a great horror of socialized medicine, as it is termed in England. I would like to ask if in your committee discussions whether you discussed at all any possible restrictions in the Constitution as far as socialized medicine is concerned. I admit this is undoubtedly legislative but I'm rather interested in that program.

LARSEN: I think I can answer that honestly. Much as though I might interpret the comment, you must have put some restriction there. I'm sure my other hard-working committee members, even if I wanted to do it, they wouldn't let me.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no other discussion, will the chairman move on to Section B?

A. TRASK: Dr. Larsen, I was just trying to sum up in my own mind, having interpreted in your remarks to mean that this section on public health, "legislation for the protection and promotion of public health, including preventive measures, shall be made by the State in the interest of its inhabitants," is to be interpreted in our present thinking, as you say, not to include but to exclude so-called socialized medicine which is the type of legislation that is now pending before the Federal Congress. Now, my question is, does this paragraph include or exclude the pending federal legislation which has been labeled as socialized medicine by the Medical Association?

LARSEN: I would say definitely it doesn't exclude it nor does it include it. I think the question brought from Hawaii was that, could public health -- promotion of public health be interpreted as allowing a legislature the freedom to evolve along that path. If some lawyers interpret that to mean that, then it could. It's wide enough so that in no way would it inhibit, for instance, the Taft or the Wagner Act or any one of these others that are up for legislation. The Taft Act is one right now.

A. TRASK: Well in the interest, therefore, of making it certain that perhaps this will not exlude the pending federal legislation, without going across the Atlantic Ocean to England, wouldn't your committee consider this so-called amendment to read as follows: "Legislation for," strike out the words "the protection and promotion of," so it would read, "Legislation for the public health"; strike the next clause "including preventive measures," so that you read on "shall be made"; and strike out the words "by the State," read on "in the interests of"; strike out "its inhabitants" and insert the words "the people." So that you would have the amendment to read as follows: "Legislation for the public health shall be made in the interests of the people." To me, it would, therefore, have determinative for legislation the two key words, namely, "interests of the people" shall determine legislation for public health. It would seem to me that would be a broader approach, a more permissive elastic thing for the legislature to be gauged by rather than be confronted with refinements as to the word "protection," which seems somewhat inhibitory; the word "promotion," also inhibitory; the word "inclusive" [sic] to perhaps be a little elastic but still limited by the word "preventive."

LARSEN: May I answer him? I think this is bringing out exactly what we wanted, and I think it's something we are going to have to face with every committee. It's a question, how far are we going to define these? Are we going to limit it to the barest few words? I think the gentleman is correct that if we left "legislation for the public health in the interests of its inhabitants," perhaps making the correction that Mr. Castro made, [it] would cover this. I'll certainly present it to the committee in its meeting tomorrow.

KAWAHARA: May I ask the chairman a question here? In the first part of the provision for health and general welfare, you have the statements, "health and general welfare." In Section A, you used the word "public health," but in the provisions of the Model State Constitution as mentioned by the delegate from the fifth district, "The protection and promotion of the health of the inhabitants of the state are matters of public concern." In this Model State Constitution, the premise is first, that the health of the inhabitants is a matter of public concern. In this proposed section here, the wording "public health" is used first. I wonder if the intention there in Section A to include the word "public health," and exclude the word "public health" in the heading of that section, the intention was -- What was the intention?

LARSEN: The intention was that we were going beyond the usual concept of just public health. Public health, as I said again, covers the public health department. We feel the concept of State control has gone beyond that. Therefore, the heading we wanted was "Health and general welfare" because some of these other sections are included in these other concepts. And I believe that that is understood as we go through. Personally, I believe that a number one necessity of State control is this present concept of public health. I think that should come first because that has been accepted for 150 years.

KAWAHARA: Does it mean that it will exclude other provisions other than public health?

LARSEN: You mean the State? What did you have in mind there?

KAWAHARA: Well, in reference to the provisions or the statement in the Model State Constitution where it says, "The protection and promotion of the health of the inhabitants," I think the word "public health" and the "health of the individual inhabitants," I think you have there a distinction.

LARSEN: May I say this. Now we are between two fires and again I think it's bringing out certain things that we are going to have to argue, and I think the sooner we get it clarified the better perhaps. On one hand, I hear we should cut down these definitions. On the other hand, we want these long, verbose things from the so-called Model. I say "so-called" because remember, the Model Constitution has never been a constitution. It's an academic concept of a certain group of men who have not been in public office and have not been running a state. I believe we should recognize that this Model Constitution is not one we should cover because certainly it is verbose.

However, I think your meaning is the question of whether the total health of the people is protected, and I think as we go down through the sections, if when we get to the last section, you still feel as you do, I would like to hear your comment on it.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask Dr. Larsen if his committee felt that this would leave the door open for the legislature to decide whether or not socialized medicine as such could be provided. That's the same question that you got in a different way. Did you intend here that the legislature could, if they so desired, pass a law?

LARSEN: I don't feel there is anything here, as I said before, that would inhibit them. I was sure my committee members wouldn't allow it even if I had the intention. My feeling, of course, is very strong. When the legislature comes to the point where they feel we should have complete socialization of medicine and the community believes in it—because I believe it's going to come from the total public—why I believe we're going to have it. I don't think it's any use arguing that from my standpoint because I know I'm not going to be the one who will be able to say no. If the community wants it, I'm going to be sure -- well, I'll have to agree with the community. That is a democracy.

BRYAN: Well, from that viewpoint, then, I would like to suggest a slight rewording or two. Striking the first two words, "Protection and promotion of the public health shall be provided for by the legislature."

LARSEN: Why did you want to define the "protection and promotion of public health"?

BRYAN: I didn't define it.

LARSEN: You mean you want to just leave those few words?

BRYAN: I want the legislature to define that because you evidently have ceded to them that power already --

LARSEN: Yes.

BRYAN: -- in your discussion. I stated, "The protection and promotion of the public health shall be provided for by the legislature." They can define it and provide for it.

LARSEN: All right. Thank you. Any others? I think this is just what we want. Shall we move on?

CHAIRMAN: That's right. Will you continue?

LARSEN: May we go on then, if there are no other comments to the next question? "It shall be the responsibility of the State to make adequate provision for the assistance and rehabilitation of mentally or physically handicapped persons who are unable to provide the same."

KELLERMAN: Mr. Chairman -- Excuse me, did you want to explain that first before I ask a question about it?

LARSEN: May I? Here the modern thinking, and remember again we are trying to indicate our trends. For instance today, if we actually applied everything that we know to all our mentally ill, 90 per cent of them could again take their place back into activity. The thought, therefore, is that rehabilitation should come ahead of care. Prior to this, most of our concepts and most of our state constitutions have thought in terms of domiciliary care. I think we should take one step ahead and think in terms of when we are providing. Let's try to get them back into normal activity; therefore, "assistance and rehabilitation."

KELLERMAN: I'd like to ask, according to some recent articles which I have read, if I'm not incorrect, it says that about one out of 12 or 15 adults in the United States either is now a member of an institution because of mental illness or should be. Does "mentally handicapped" mean all of those persons suffering from temporary psycho-neurosis which make them for the time being incapable of carrying on a profession or living a normal life, or does it mean persons who were born mentally deficient or who are actually insane? I think if you take the broader definition of "mentally handicapped," we are going to find a financial burden on the community which may be impossible for us to meet. As I understand, a long range care and rehabilitation of those mentally handicapped can run to months and a great deal of money, and a great many people would not be able to carry that burden unaided, if they were given that complete hospitalization or care.

LARSEN: May I answer?

KELLERMAN: Yes.

LARSEN: That's correct, if we took our old concept, domiciliary care. If we take these people and just put them on a farm and crowd them together in rooms as has been done today in the territory, we will have a stupendous increase in burden. If we accept the new philosophy, "assistance and rehabilitation," we have the newer concept which we hope will prevent this over-burdening problem. However, I call to your attention the last few words, "who are unable to provide the same." And, I feel that any person who is mentally handicapped—and I would wish we can all leave out the word insane, another word that's obsolete; we shouldn't use it, and it carries a certain amount of stigma—where the mentally ill are just as ill as anybody else, they can be cured as anybody else if we give them proper treatment. And I feel even though they are only temporary—and remember, many of those who a hundred years ago or fifty years ago were considered hopeless and kept hopeless, today are returned to their families, homes and activities in a relatively short time—if they are unable to provide the same, I feel it should be the duty of the State to try to get these people back into normal activity. Now that would be my concept.

HOLROYDE: Dr. Larsen, in your wording here, the word "adequate provision," if the legislature determines that a certain care is "adequate," having that word in the Constitution, would it be possible for others to consider the legislative action "inadequate" and take action to have further --

LARSEN: I would consider that. I would certainly believe that the real power of the State is in the people. If the legislature doesn't carry out their mandates I believe they should have the right to object. When we do, as we do, crowd a thousand people into a room built for five hundred,

I believe that some of us should have a right to protest. I believe that we should ask our legislature to provide "adequate provision." That's been one of the damages of the past. It hasn't been adequate.

ASHFORD: May I ask Dr. Larsen a question in regard to his recent statement. Suppose someone who was mentally ill—and in my opinion the word insane means just that—suppose someone who was mentally ill and violent were committed to the Territorial Hospital, could not that commitment be attacked under the language of this Constitutional provision because the care there is not adequate?

LARSEN: No, I don't think so. They could put them in. We are going to have many times when we don't have "adequate provision," but if we leave it to the legislature, give them the power to give us "adequate provision," I think we might save some of our poor sufferers.

I would like to talk to the delegate from Molokai about the use of the word "insane."

I think that that would cover it.

KELLERMAN: Dr. Larsen, would it serve your same purpose then to have this provision a granting of power to the legislature "to make adequate provision," rather than in imposing by mandate upon the legislature the responsibility to make the provision?

LARSEN: That's a good thought, good thought, because that covers this point just raised and prevents a certain other objection.

WIRTZ: Dr. Larsen, I was just going to raise a similar point. By making this a direct mandate, coupling that with the first section, the broadness of the first section, Section A, how can we possibly escape mandating the legislature into socialized medicine?

LARSEN: That does come back. It shows it must be a present day time. Don't you think that the power "to make" would cover that? Remember, what we are talking about now are institutions, institutional care, and I believe where you come back, the little sentence that I think prevents this exploitive expense, which I consider the British system, I think it is covered, if at all, by the words "unable to provide the same." I believe in a free state wherever a person is able to care for himself, he should not demand care by public expense.

OKINO: Point of clarification. "Who are unable to provide the same." Who is to decide who is able and who is not able to provide the same?

LARSEN: General welfare will give you an excellent definition. They gave the committee a definition and I think that's been worked out fairly well. We are giving them grants now.

WIRTZ: Dr. Larsen, apart from the other question, don't you think that this section -- or does your committee think this section would totally destroy any initiative on the part of private institutions or organizations such as the Shriner's Hospital from proceeding in their good work?

LARSEN: No, I think, in other words, it would help them. Just let's take a little suggestion here that the Shrine Hospital got to the point where they only were able to pay for half. They were taking care of physically handicapped persons who were "unable to provide the same." This would allow the legislature, as I see it, the opportunity to assist them to continue their good care. I don't think it's inhibitive.

SMITH: Was there any discussion with regard to Section A, having included there the wording "promote the health and general welfare," including "general welfare" in the Section A?

LARSEN: I don't recall that exactly, but we can put it down for discussion. You would like to see included in the "public health," "general welfare." That's why I thought as long as it was covered in our wording at the top, "Health and general welfare," it included that, but I'll take it up with the members and discuss it.

A. TRASK: Learned Doctor, as a matter of fact, our only institution today for the mentally and physically handicapped is the Territorial Hospital in Kaneohe.

LARSEN: Not the physically handicapped. We have the Shrine - -

A. TRASK: What I want is a little background as to that. There is Shrine, there is the Territorial Hospital and there is Kula and Leahi Home?

LARSEN: Well, they come under our, I would say, our public health with - - They cover infectious diseases, that's covered under public health.

A. TRASK: In other words, there are other sections that are to follow this?

LARSEN: No, I think legislation for the public health would cover that, "public health" designating any type of disease that, unless it's cared for, might affect the total population.

A. TRASK: Well, what I want - - I'm leading up to, of course, is the Democratic Platform as described by the Waikiki wing of the Democratic Party. Here, I listened the other evening to Mr. Vance, and he made a suggestion which I drafted in the platform of the party as follows: "Institutional rehabilitation: to lift our public institutions from a level of custody and detention and make them vital centers of treatment, training and rehabilitation." Now, Mr. Vance's criticism of his present duties as the institutional welfare director is that they secure a person and just merely keep custodial charge over him. There is no rehabilitation, no care, and I just wondered whether or not this section is in line with that thought.

LARSEN: Yes, Mr. Vance talked to us in committee, and one or two suggestions we have here, I think, came directly from Mr. Vance. I think the "assistance and rehabilitation" does cover that. I might say, I see we constantly recur or go back to our Model Constitution which is verbose. We are trying to cover the same thoughts and ideas with fewer words, and I see a definite tendency here of these two things that are in argument.

SHIMAMURA: Mr. Chairman and Dr. Larsen. If you amend the words "public health" into the more general term "health," won't you have the same provision in Section A? Wouldn't that make Section B unnecessary?

LARSEN: Section B, of course, has entirely to do with the rehabilitation of people who are sick. Section A has to do with the prevention of people so they won't become sick. The second one has to do with people who are handicapped and sick, and we are hoping eventually, if our Section A goes into proper fulfillment, that we will not have many people under B.

SHIMAMURA: Dr. Larsen, I don't read Section A to be merely preventive. You have there very general terminology, "legislation for the protection and promotion of the health," and I say if you deleted the words "public health," and inserted the word "health" merely, a more general term, I think you'll have adequate provision there.

LARSEN: I think we'll have adequate provision. The only thought is, perhaps we'll have too much provision. Right away it opens it to this pet little phrase that I've heard here now half a dozen times, "socialized medicine." However, we'll take it into consideration and I'll discuss it with the committee.

PHILLIPS: Dr. Larsen, I'm not particularly afraid of any of these things that you have in here or even in the manner which you have them, but what I am afraid of is the fact that we have and we know that the biggest problem of the whole -- of every one of the 48 states in their constitutions has been the verbosity that you refer to as being in that State, I mean, in the Model State Constitution, on which I disagree with you, which is neither here nor there. But my problem is this, that if we are going to include this 175 words in the State Constitution, don't you feel that the federal government, which has been able to adequately provide for the same and defend, under the General Welfare Clause, defend themselves even against other provisions of the Constitution which restrict and hamper and completely take away the rights of the people, in the promulgation of legislation which would conserve and promote public health.

Now, I'll make that a little more succinct because I would like to establish the fact that I'm dubious of the value of placing 175 extra words in here when we could say it in two words, "general welfare." I would like very much to see that in there, and we know we have confidence in the development of government, we know how far state government has advanced. We know that the legislators are very much aware and very sensitive to public health, that they have provided very adequately in the past for us. There have been recent reforms which have caused them to do it. We also know that we have in progress right now state constitutional conventions which are reconvening for the purpose of eliminating this superfluity, this verbosity, which you referred to, out of their constitutions because it tends to hamper them.

I offer to you in evidence something that you said yourself in regard to this Section B. You said that in the next ten years there may be a different way of promoting health, a different method, a different means. Now doesn't that itself prove that this is an ephemeral law which -- man is constantly trying to solve and he does it best with the device known as the legislative process. Wouldn't it be better that we leave it up to the legislature to take up these problems of public health and have them work them out as they have been doing anyway and which is absolutely necessary to let them do, because only they can set forth the standards that are in there? Wouldn't it also be better -- and finally, wouldn't it be better to have in there under the general welfare clause that one thing, that "provide for the general welfare," rather than all this 175 words? Wouldn't it be better to let the State -- I mean let the future State of Hawaii have an opportunity to change these institutions as the need arises? We know that perhaps this problem as set forth in B may have all manner of differences before the thing is over, I mean, before ten years is over, as you referred to.

I'm trying to get down to this one final point which keeps eluding me, and that is that in the event you place 175 words in here and then the legislature chooses not to pay any attention to them, there's nothing—unless we have an automatic clause in our Constitution—that would mean that they would go ahead with this thing and carry it out in the manner that you see fit.

LARSEN: May I answer? In the first place, I appreciate knowing that there are 175 words, thank you.

In answer to this, it's so easy to start an argument on false premise; I think your premise was false, that they have been adequately cared for. The objection, and why so much has gotten in constitutions, is that whole groups of our people are not only suffering from inadequate care, but there are no provisions that care for them. They are the nidus for much of our crime, our disease, many of our difficulties, juvenile delinquency. It's the hope that this future State of Hawaii shall recognize the inadequacy that has actually been flourishing under our past state constitutions and make corrections for this group of people who are unable to help themselves, and to have us recognize that we do need a little more than the statement, "general welfare," because under general welfare they were allowed for the century to go on and suffer. However, I will take it up with my committee and ask them whether they would prefer three words or be able to shorten their 175.

WIST: I'd like to comment with reference to the statement made by my colleague from the fourth. He used 645 words to state that we were using 175.

I'm a little disturbed about the talk here about a brief Constitution or a long Constitution. What difference does it make whether our Constitution is so long or so brief? After all, our Constitution is to provide a frame of reference so that our legislature can enact laws under which we can live. Now, if it is necessary in order that our legislature shall enact the kinds of laws under which we can live well to state that we are to have legislation with reference to public health, with reference to general welfare, with reference to these other matters that are listed here, then why worry about the fact that it takes 175 words to do it? Why try to compress it into 30 words? That to me is not the significant thing at all. The significant thing is to get into our Constitution an adequate frame of reference for future legislation.

PHILLIPS: I'd like to answer this, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize Delegate Phillips.

PHILLIPS: I'd like to answer this. I would say that I may have spent an awful lot of words. I don't believe there were -- there might have been in there more than 600 words, but I say that there are three words in the Constitution that protect my right to say that and thank goodness for that. And it only takes three words, "freedom of speech," to permit me to use as many words as I want.

In any event, I would like to say this. In using all those 600 words, I attempted to induce evidences that would prove the very premise on which he based his arguments. I would say this, that there are at present many state reforms -- there are many state constitutions which are constantly going under reform simply because there was an individual among the group who thought that that particular provision could go in there with hundreds of words instead of having it confined down to two.

LARSEN: May I answer that just a moment. I'd like to compliment the delegate from the fourth on the fact that it seems to me that what we are trying to do is not to find out what other states have done. That always annoys me a little. We are a good cross-section of Hawaii. We want Hawaii to do something. My answer is merely there are people who haven't been protected and we believe, in the philosophy of today's thinking, they should be protected and given constitutional rights.

MIZUHA: I move that we go on to the next section, C, and debate be limited to two minutes per person under the rules.

A. TRASK: I am seconding that motion made by Jackson [Mizuha] from Kauai. I'd like to say with respect to the splendid statement made by Dr. Larsen that we should remember also, that as brief as the Federal Constitution is, that the development of the law and the understanding was largely a judicial review, judgment; that it wasn't really the written word. Let us understand that the judiciary had a powerful shaping of this Constitution in the way it went, and John Marshall, who fought and was in the Revolutionary Army, and these people had a great part in welding this language to mean it the way the country developed. So there is no respect for words, and I would say, and join everybody in saying, that the delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Phillips, his conduct was not contumacious.

CHAIRMAN: Motion before the house and seconded by Delegate Trask - -

CASTRO: Before the motion is put, is it my understanding that the committee will reconsider the use of the word "responsibility," Dr. Larsen?

LARSEN: The committee is reconsidering everything. I've tried to emphasize the fact that nothing here is final, that we opened this for exactly what we're getting, the feeling of a large number. This is just what we wanted. Now we will reconvene, now we will reconsider all the matters that have been brought up.

CASTRO: But as to my question, have you noted the point about the "responsibility of the State" to be reconsidered?

LARSEN: Yes.

CASTRO: Thank you.

FUKUSHIMA: I'm not coming to the defense of Delegate Phillips, but Dr. Larsen did suggest that Delegate Phillips proceeded on the wrong premise that the promotion of the public health, etc. are adequately provided for. Now, if they are not at the present time, what difference will it make, Doctor, whether we have all these provisions in if you have nothing to enforce the mandate, which is exactly what I brought forth when I spoke first. Now, if you don't have any mandates what's the difference?

LARSEN: May I answer?

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

LARSEN: Of course, I agree with the gentleman from the fifth here. We really don't need to do the job we are doing. We should have quit the first day and accepted the United States Constitution. Let it go at that. Copy it down. But in the usage of time, in the various states of the United States, the constitutions have indicated the philosophy and thinking of the people in that area. As I read these, and as we worked them out, I feel this is the line of thinking of most progressive states in the United States, that it wasn't adequately provided. Why? Because there was no path of philosophy along which the legislature could provide legislation. It's true they don't have to do it, but I believe the Constitution very definitely indicates a pathway on which - - along which we might march. And also, gives us, perhaps, a handle or a suggestion along which, if we are really interested and we find a group of people unprotected, where we can ask for protection under the Constitution.

PHILLIPS: I might say this, that in all deference to you, Dr. Larsen, that there are two things there that I can't help but bring out. On the one hand you said just previously that we do not need to look at other state constitutions in order to determine our course. Now I disagree with that and I find - -

LARSEN: I agree with you. We should look at them but not follow them.

MIZUHA: I rise to a point of order. There is a motion on the floor.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? The motion is that we move to the second - - the next section and the debate be limited to two minutes.

MIZUHA: Per section.

PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman, I still have the floor.

MIZUHA: The motion was debate be limited to two minutes per speaker per section.

PHILLIPS: I yield the floor, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of that motion, signify by raising your right hand. Contrary minded. Carried.

KAWAHARA: I rise to a point of order. In Cushing's Manual here on page 182, Section 305, when we sit in the Committee of the Whole, under Section 305 I understand it's unlimited debate and the person may rise any number of times to speak. Maybe my interpretation is not quite correct.

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman proceed with his next section?

LARSEN: The second section, or rather the third section, "The State and its political subdivisions may, in accordance with law, provide or assist in slum clearance and rehabilitation of substandard areas including housing for persons of low income."

May I just explain the thinking of the committee on this? The source of much of our crime, juvenile delinquency and disease, is in our slum areas. The reason for slum areas are people of low income who are unable to provide better, tend to crowd in more and more into the poor areas where they can get shelter cheap. When we discussed this, it was evident that today no private industry can actually clear out a slum area and build low cost income houses without assistance from the State. If we are going to help this particular area of disease breeding, which is present in all our cities, the committee felt we have to assist that group of people who will continue to live in these disease-producing houses unless the community helps them to build houses in which they can live. That's more or less the thinking. We put in the words "assist in or provide" with the thought that sometimes an industry might be able to clear and build if the community perhaps would give them tax free for a certain length of time, or perhaps help them to provide, and we felt in all due respect to private interest which we feel should not be inhibited, free enterprise, we left in the words "provide or assist. Any questions?

FUKUSHIMA: Is that why the word "may" was used instead of "shall," making it directory instead of mandatory?

LARSEN: That's right.

SHIMAMURA: May I respectfully suggest that if we added one small word in the second line there, after the word "provide," the preposition "for," it may be more accurate and more grammatically so. In other words, "in accordance with law, provide for or assist in slum clearance."

LARSEN: Thank you, I think that's a point well taken. Any others?

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman move to the next section, D.

LARSEN: Section D. "The natural beauty, parks and objects and places of historic interest and the public sightliness and good order of all property adjoining public highways shall be conserved and protected by the State and its subdivisions." I grant you there is discussion in this paragraph.

AKAU: I'm wondering if we might add at least one word before subtracting some other words. We do have many scenic points of interest here while they may not be exactly historical. I'm wondering if we might add the word "scenic." "The natural beauty, parks, objects and places of historic and scenic interest." That was one point.

The second point I'd like to raise is, "and the public sightliness and good order of all property adjoining public highways." Is it absolutely necessary to put that in? I think there may be some confusion in the minds of some of us as to the word "sightliness" whether it means unsightly or whether it means the positive side of it. I wonder if you could explain that phrase and also the possibility of inserting "scenic." Those two, please.

LARSEN: Number one, I would assume that "natural beauty" includes scenic, and I think the one word would cover that. However, we'll put it down for discussion. "Public sightliness and good order" was inserted after meeting with a group representing the Architects Association, the Engineers Association, the Parks Board and the Outdoor Circle. They feel, and I think they feel rightly and I think they are to be complimented on the thought, that we hope some day to produce the "Hawaii Beautiful." Today we don't do it. Public sightliness is something that does seem to be of public concern. In many of the cities, of course, it's still operating.

BRYAN: Dr. Larsen, I noticed that you asked the opinions of many people except the property owners of "property adjoining public highways."

LARSEN: May I tell you, they were all heavy property owners.

BRYAN: Well, I just think that this provision might be slightly out of order. In other words, the State is to protect the sightliness of all property on public highways, private or otherwise?

LARSEN: Private or otherwise.

BRYAN: I disagree with that.

LARSEN: O. K.

BRYAN: Thank you.

LARSEN: In this country we have the right to disagree in any way we want.

NIELSEN: I'd like to ask Dr. Larsen a question. Would this mean that the State would take care of the clean-up of vacant lots and various things along the highway at the expense of all of the people?

LARSEN: It might be - - No, it might be as is done in some states. If you are living in a very nice section and you own a lot there and it looks like the back end of somebody's trash heap, the State can notify you that you shall take care of it; if not, then they send you the bill.

NIELSEN: But it says in here that "all property adjoining public highways shall be conserved and protected by the State."

LARSEN: That's a little diffuse. We'll consider that. I see what you mean.

ASHFORD: Dr. Larsen, during the Victorian era, we had a type of construction that is no longer regarded as the last word in beauty. I was very interested to hear you say that the architects advised on this. Suppose you had an Hawaiian type of architecture on all the houses abutting on the public highway except some Victorian monstrosity, does that mean that the owner of that might be obliged to change his architecture and do away with his house?

LARSEN: That wasn't intended. If you as a lawyer would interpret it that way, we'd have to consider it carefully.

SMITH: Dr. Larsen, I'd like to ask, in a democracy there are a lot of individuals and if each individual has a right to do as he sees fit, if he has his own idea as to architecture or what he'd like to grow in his yard, would this prevent him from doing as he pleases?

LARSEN: Well, again, we - - I would not interpret it in that way. I think the whole philosophy behind this is how can we develop a more beautiful city or a more beautiful state than we have; and I would remind you that in a democracy individual rights are frequently submerged in the right of the greater number.

KELLERMAN: Dr. Larsen, might I suggest that your committee consider the following wording in lieu of the present provision. If you will start with the words, "shall be conserved and protected by the State and its subdivisions," delete that part and insert in lieu thereof, "are matters of public interest and as such are subject to reasonable regulation and control in the public interest."

LARSEN: Very good.

KELLERMAN: That doesn't impose upon the State the obligation of paying the bill.

HOLROYDE: Dr. Larsen, as a member of the Bill of Rights Committee, which you and I are, aren't we invading personal rights of some individuals when we can restrict what they do in their own yard, what they grow?

LARSEN: If it abuts on the public highway, I wonder if we shouldn't. We tax all individuals to make a sidewalk in front of their houses; we tax all individuals to pay for our school taxes, for our garbage and our other disposals. Why shouldn't we possibly begin thinking in terms of at what point should the individual be helped to think for the total good.

HOLROYDE: Idealogically I agree with you, but I'm wondering whether we're constitutionally correct or not.

LARSEN: Well, you word it and we'll consider it.

PHILLIPS: Dr. Larsen, I would like to ask one more thing. Could you define the "public highway" for me. I mean, I have gotten into accidents myself and any little parking area or even any little road that any person besides the owner travels on is considered a public highway, isn't it?

LARSEN: That's right, but I would expect the legislature and my good friends, the lawyers, to interpret the meaning of that.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask Dr. Larsen what distinction was made between public sightliness and private sightliness?

LARSEN: Private sightliness, I think, is well indicated, bringing up Holroyde's objection, that certainly we don't want the State to go in and interfere with how you keep your back yard if it doesn't bother anybody else. The public sightliness is that which affects the total public.

CHAIRMAN: If there's no other discussion, we'll move on to the final section.

PHILLIPS: I have one question. I'm dubious as to whether this should actually go into the health provision in our provision - - I mean in our Constitution.

LARSEN: May I answer him?

PHILLIPS: May I just finish it? I'll make it very short. I assure you I won't give you 600 words.

I was wondering if you could make by a constitutional provision any of these things have a quality that would be indicative of the people. I mean, if you had a park, it would be a park and it would be as provided in the Constitution, but the quality of how that park is arranged, et cetera, et cetera, can you really provide for that, Dr. Larsen?

LARSEN: I don't think we are arranging for the quality here. Why this belongs in the Health System, I think we accept health today as emotional health as well as physical health. I think natural beauty, parks and the public sightliness do affect health. I think people living in a community that looks like a trash heap are affected, both emotionally and physically. I believe that these parks also include playgrounds. I would assume it also includes all the other areas for recreation, even the hunting grounds, if they are put aside.

KAWAHARA: In regards to the section over here, the last two lines, in the last two lines, you use the words "conserved and protected." And in the other provisions, in the first provision, A of the Health and General Welfare section, there is the word "promotion." I wonder if by using just the words "conserved and protected," you would limit the creation of new parks, new beach areas, and the setting up of historic sites that people might discover in time to come.

LARSEN: I think that's a good comment. I was inclined to lean toward the wording of the delegate from the fourth, "are matters of public interest and are subject to reasonable control." I think that perhaps would cover better and perhaps we can reword that.

CHAIRMAN: Will you move on to the last section.

LARSEN: "The legislature shall promote preventive measures, treatment and care, of dependents, delinquents, criminals and psychopathic personalities, when necessary, in the interests of social welfare." You might want to ask the definitions there. I'd be happy to try to give them.

AKAU: In connection with "psychopathic personalities, when necessary, in the interests of social welfare," have we left out dependents, physically handicapped? I'm speaking of sight conservation and that group. If we use the word "dependents, physically handicapped," wouldn't that take care of those people?

LARSEN: In Clause B, we use "mentally and physically handicapped" and that would take care of that.

CASTRO: Dr. Larsen, I have the same quarrel with Section E as I do with B and D. There is a little bit too much responsibility and mandate placed upon the State to the point where someone who might have at a later date a quarrel with the manner in which the reasonable policing was being carried out, might point to the Constitution and indicate that the legislature must promote certain measures whether they be preventative or by way of treatment.

LARSEN: What is your suggestion?

CASTRO: Well, I really believe that the whole thing could be encompassed under the general welfare provision, but the suggestion is to delete the words "shall promote," and to possibly provide something that would allow the legislature - -

LARSEN: "May provide"?

CASTRO: "May provide"?

LARSEN: "May provide"?

CASTRO: "May provide," like the - - perhaps using the word "may" instead of "shall" would be acceptable.

J. TRASK: Dr. Larsen, the words "preventive measures," does that include birth control? Would it?

LARSEN: It might, but I don't think so. I don't consider that preventive measures.

J. TRASK: But it could mean, couldn't it?

LARSEN: It could, perhaps, if the community rises to the point where they feel that is a preventive measure. At the present time we have laws in some 26 states along that line where the legislature interpreted it, where they may. In most of those states it has not been carried out. I believe again we come back to interpretation and the will of the people.

MIZUHA: I move that the committee rise, recommend that the tentative proposals be referred back to the Committee on the Public Health and Welfare for further study.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

J. TRASK: Has the delegate from Kauai some place to go?

MIZUHA: I don't have any particular place to go. If there is further debate on this subject, I would then like to ask the Chair to declare a short recess. The clerks are kind of tired over here.

J. TRASK: There has been no second, so may I ignore the remark of the - -

MIZUHA: There is a second to my motion.

LARSEN: Let me remind you, we're almost at the end here. We are on the last section.

MIZUHA: I will withdraw my motion inasmuch as to give Dr. Larsen his last one more chance.

NIELSEN: I would appreciate Dr. Larsen indicating what "preventive measures," just what that would mean or could be construed in this section.

LARSEN: In talking to the men that we had before our committee, like Mr. Vance and several of the others who are thinking in terms of today's thinking, most of our criminals, for instance, delinquents and so on, should be considered as sick people. They are produced by their environment. They are curable. In the past thinking, it's been the question of putting them away. In this newer thinking, we are trying to promote every way possible of keeping these suffering individuals from becoming handicapped and returning them as well people to the community.

May I call to your attention the last one, "psychopathic personalities," suggested by Mr. Vance. We have a group of people who today are not under any care; they cannot be declared mentally ill, but they are personalities who are not responsible under certain circumstances for their behavior. Many of our sex crimes, many of our murders, are this type. Today, they cannot be taken care of in the interests of social welfare. If they are definitely declared as such, they - - society can be protected. That's part of the thinking behind this.

But I would like to call your attention, and I see the thinking here, which I appreciate, is—and I hope I can have one plea here—to think in terms of this newer concept, and it is new, but it's rising, it's growing rapidly, that in all the terms of general welfare, the usual connotation of our various laws of our various legislatures have not been along this line of prevention, treatment and then care. That whole section of our community, which has been actually a burden on the community, could, under certain ways which we hope the legislature may promote, be rehabilitated. So the thinking here is to interpret general welfare into the newer concept of prevention, treatment and care of many conditions that actually interfere with the public good and the general health.

BRYAN: I'd like to make a short statement for consideration by Dr. Larsen. I notice that he has included criminals, psychopathic personalities, people who are mentally ill, in the category of - - very similar to those with which he speaks of people who are physically ill, and maybe by providing for them as he has here, he is getting socialized medicine through the back door.

LARSEN: Of course, I realize I am thinking of them in terms of illness.

If that's all, I want to express my appreciation, and I'm sure my committee does, for the excellent discussion and the breadth of thinking that our group gave us, and I think it's clarified the air considerably, and I think it was an experiment well worthwhile to see how we think. I must say, if we are going to spend this long on each little section, we'll have to speed up our thinking, and I hope we can, perhaps with the next discussion, each one of us try to go over the clauses to be discussed and make little notes so we go down through perhaps, with a little more speed.

NIELSEN: As a member of the Kaneohe Democratic Party, I want to thank Dr. Larsen.

A. TRASK: I join in that great expression. We're certainly very happy to have the Doctor, altogether.

LARSEN: May I hope this augurs the great day when the Waikiki and the Kalihi will unite in happiness again.

CHAIRMAN: If that is all, will someone move that the Committee of the Whole report back to the Convention?

BRYAN: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Any second to that motion?

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded. All those in favor of that motion signify by raising your right hand. Contrary minded. Carried.

Chairman: EDWARD B. HOLROYDE

MAY 24, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee may be at ease.

The problem before this committee this morning is consideration of Committee Proposal No. 1 relating to health and general welfare. I would like to suggest as a procedure that we consider each section individually. However, in voting the approval in substance of each section, we do not preclude a later motion to combine in any way the sections. If that meets with the approval of the committee, I would suggest that we proceed in that manner. The first section, section on public health. I recognize Dr. Larsen.

LARSEN: Fellow delegates, if you would bear with me, I feel we should explain what we are. I'd like to have you all feel, whatever prejudices or whatever feelings there might be, to leave them out, that I'm not speaking as a doctor, I'm speaking as a representative of 11 individuals who worked very hard. We've had in with us a great many different authorities, and I feel that as I speak, it is with the idea that I'm speaking for these 11, who have worked hard to try to do the thing that we are all interested in, to make a clear concise document that speaks well for Hawaii. I've often been told by my friends that when I talk to anybody, I sound as though I am trying to bludgeon them into agreeing. I want you to all realize if it sounds that way, there's no meaning behind it, because what I feel I want you to do is lend me your minds so that together the 63 of us can write this particular little section into something of which we can be proud.

We first considered this question, and we have much precedent on anyone of these, should it be a Constitution of five pages, of five paragraphs, of five sentences or five words. Our five page one could well be illustrated by the New York Constitution with its 72,000 words. The five paragraphs could well be illustrated by the Model Constitution. I want to call your attention that ours - - that the Model has over one hundred per cent more words in describing these functions than ours. The Federal might well be illustrated as the five word type.

But what we were pondering was how can we make a clear concise proposition that covers the fields that we should express. We started off with ten fields, you might say ten paragraphs. We kept working these down, and as the experts came from these various fields, we considered and weighed, is this statutory or is it constitutional, and we came to the conclusion that we don't want anything statutory here, we want it constitutional. We think our five sentences are constitutional. Realizing, as a doctor, perhaps I had a little edge on some because I'd been in this field for a good many years, I tried as far as possible to start from scratch, and I feel my committee members started from scratch. We tried to build up what is constitutional, not what is it that a doctor might want into a document. We, of course, at all times had the help of the Reference Bureau.

Only yesterday I heard from a number of these experts and I feel it's only right that you should have the benefit of these on these propositions that were sent to them.

Wilbar wrote of the Board of Health, and that has to do with Section A, "I believe what has been written is excellent. I think it adequately covers the subject and any more detail would be getting into the field of legislation." The next one was from the Department of Public Welfare, Mr. Fox. He felt that his section as far as possible—and we agree with him perfectly—as much as possible make them concise and put in, if the meaning is clear, as few words as possible. He writes,

> It is a rare privilege to help formulate a statement expressing the responsibilities the people through their government should assume in advancing the health and well-being of all. I should be disappointed if this document fails to convey the great democratic concepts of human welfare which stand as achievements of government in the twentieth century. The statement which your committee has adopted permits Hawaii, when it becomes a state, to carry on the health and welfare activities it is now engaged in in the territory.

The Hawaii Housing Authority took our section on slum clearance and felt we didn't say enough. They felt it should be clarified. We have a communication from Mr. Guild and I would like to show you, and then I ask for your indulgence if that particular section doesn't combine—I think it does—what he suggests. He suggests that we make it into three sections. This is Section D on slum clearance. One, "To provide for public housing and housing undertakings by such means and on such terms and conditions as the legislature may prescribe." And Section 2 of that particular section, "To provide for the clearance, replanning, reconstruction, development, redevelopment and rehabilitation of blighted, substandard or insanitary areas in such manner and by such means and upon such terms and conditions as the legislature may prescribe." And 3, "To provide recreational and other facilities incidental and pertinent to both of the above."

Then he goes on to say if we adopt only one paragraph on that particular section, then he suggests—and this I would like to read simply to get your thinking on a great deal of this, and when we come to sections, I would like to ask your indulgence again, because we felt we wanted to save you as much time as possible. So in the course of the last four days, we have talked to a good many and we have had a good many suggestions; and my friends the lawyers—that I frequently wonder as they talk about words, whether they are like the story of the old maid, they always see a burglar under the bed—but I've been convinced that a good many times I had to agree with them. I realize that the statements some of them that we made, that they actually, when they put it in their own legal language, it did clarify it and made it less possible to confuse the issue. However, and then I'm wondering as I read this one whether it isn't a great deal of legislative language which we tried to avoid, when they make this recommendation for D. "The State and its political subdivisions may provide for, engage in and assist in any manner public housing and housing undertakings, slum clearance, development, redevelopment or rehabilitation of blighted, substandard or insanitary areas including recreatio al and other facilities incidental thereto."

I'm going to leave that to my friends the lawyers when we get that. But what I wanted to bring out was if it's a question of language—although I will present, as we take each section, some of the language suggestions made by some of our lawyer friends—that if it's only a question of language you have, remember we have our Committee on Style, and Committee on Style will decide for instance, whether the "State shall have the power," "the State shall be empowered" and expressions of that type. It seems to me we can save a great deal of time if we accept the fact that perhaps our expression, which the 11 of us felt were as good as we could come up with, isn't what might go into the final. We still have our Committee on Style to correct that.

So, I also want - - I've heard from these various members. I've also heard from the architects and the engineers, the Outdoor Circle, the Parks Board, and the City Planning Commission, and the City Planning Commission sent one in this morning which they recommend that we try. They also recommend that we accept that longer article of Archie Guild on slum clearance. In the field of the engineers, architects and so on, they are quite interested in making something that is outstanding, and they would like to suggest that we at least keep this thought of sightliness and good order as part of the general health of the community. I won't read these other communications, but they are there.

Now I also want you to, just to illustrate that I had some pet ideas—sure, I had some pet ideas, but the committee wouldn't let me put them over—I just want to read you one because it's still a pet idea. Of course I'm not asking you to accept it, but I want you to realize how I was beaten down in committee. I want you to - - this is what I wanted, "The State shall, in such manner as the legislature may provide, subsidize all or part of the stand-by cost of standard needed eleemosynary hospitals. Because of such subsidization, government may have a voice in, but not the control of the governing board of these hospitals." I felt there was a new principle there that's been more or less accepted, but I assure you my committee didn't even let me present it to you. That's why I shoved it in the back door here, but I'm not asking for its acceptance. But I wanted to show you that this is not my proposition. I want to assure you the eleven, really everyone of them, took an active part.

Then of course, the question is always should we enlarge, and for the sake of clarity, we felt we should designate, and if you read the accompanying text with these articles you will realize that we tried to show why we decided on five sentences, for the sake of clarity. Well, the senator reminds me we called them sections, but I want to remind you that when you read them, each section was reduced to one little sentence, with a subject, a predicate and a period. Those are the sections that I want to take up, the object I'm trying to get over right now.

So, for the sake of clarity then, I want to call to your attention that this is five major fields of great attainment in Hawaii. One, and each one of these five are separate distinct fields which have accomplished something in the protection of health through the territory and are quite separate. We have had called to attention that there is some overlapping between 1 and 2. I accept that; there is a little overlapping in 1 and 2, the others are entirely separate. But why I felt it was still important to separate was, one is, it's actually prevention and the other is actually treatment.

Now I just want to give you a little sketch because it's terribly important to keep in mind what's happened. The other day, Delegate Hayes gave me a book from 1882. In this book, I saw the analysis of Hawaii, the health of Hawaii in 1882, and I want to tell you it was something that was terrific. The infant mortality was frightful. 155 people died that year of smallpox. The maternal mortality was frightful. And so on down through. Then I skipped up into 1900, and I call your attention to a book called "Hawaii, Off-shore Territory" by Helen Pratt in which she describes the conditions of health in Honolulu in 1900, and I want to tell you they were something terrific. The death rate alone from tuberculosis was 350. Infant mortality was way up, maternal and so on.

Now I want to also call to your attention, in the last 25 years there has developed in Hawaii, due to a great many different people working at it, something that should be a beacon light and is a beacon light of health and welfare in the Pacific area. We have become the pride of the Pacific. Now I think it's a mistake when a State has accomplished something as outstanding as has happened in the last 25 years, in this total field of health and welfare, that we shouldn't designate it, and that with this we feel we can designate it in these five fields.

I might call to your attention for a moment that way back in 1805, there was a certain Britisher here who wrote up, and he studied the Pacific fairly well, but he wrote and said this, "The Hawaiians have a reputation throughout the whole Pacific area for their amazing knowledge of herb lore." Today, the Hawaiian Islands have an amazing standing in the field of health and welfare throughout, not only the whole Pacific area, but throughout the whole United States.

I also want to tell you - - call to your attention, this is an indication of our advance in civilization. When we are knocking at the door in Washington and say, "Gentlemen, we are, and we have developed the right to become a State," there is nothing that those men will look at with more interest and with more assurance that we have arrived than, "what are you doing in the health work."

If we leave it with five sentences, let the State have the responsibility to promote and advance health and welfare, we're not telling those fellows anything. They look at that document and say, "Why these birds haven't advanced in health any more than they did back in 1776," and then conditions were terrific. We want to indicate we have gone ahead. We want to be proud of our State, and when we knock at the door in Washington, we want to say, "This is an indication that we really have advanced; we know what you are talking about; we are giving our people the total health protection up to the very maximum of the enlightment of today."

I've taken two trips around the world, looking at just this thing in the various countries, and I can assure you, I could give you the level of civilization as soon as I went to the health offices of the doctor and said, "Give me the record of your health; what are you doing on this, that, and the other thing," and it always runs parallel.

So, I feel one other point why I'm anxious to have it in, and it's not because I'm anxious—I'm like you are. We want a Constitution that the people will accept. We want them to feel we have done a good job, but we want them to recognize that Hawaii does stand for something, and when we come to sell it to the people of Hawaii, I believe those five sentences that we are suggesting are going to be a better selling point than almost anything else.

Now, if we're willing and if the lawyers and the others are willing to stay by the Federa. Constitution and accept six words to tell how everything shall be organized, that's one thing. But I've read these books on state constitutions and they tell me that doesn't belong in a state constitution. It should be an indication of our advance, it should be a directional thing as to how we are traveling and on what road we are traveling. And I believe we try to say it in the clearest, the most concise and the shortest way in which we could say it.

Now just to show you, yesterday a doctor called me and said, "Why do you write it so long? Why do you put so many sentences?"

I said, "Okay, I'll bite; what do you suggest?"

"Well, there's a Model Constitution, why don't you copy that."

"Well," I said, "it just happens that the Model Constitution, to express in less clear terms than we have expressed these five separate fields, they have taken more than 100 per cent more words to express it than we have in our five sentences."

Gentlemen, we haven't copied anything. We've tried to make it concise, clear, to the point and certainly something that Hawaii can be proud of. So, we feel, and we recognize there are 63 different ways in which you can say something. There are 63 different ideas on every question, and I know there are 63 objections to every question. I think the real $63 question is going to be, "How can we get through on time and get a good Constitution." That's what I want you to be thinking of. Well, we are using 63, my dear colleagues, because we know there are 63 different ideas here, and I can assure you as I sat with the 11, there are 11 different ideas, and I'm sure there are just as many outside.

I want to also call to your attention that some of our ancestors, and one of my good friend colleagues in the law gave me a most amazing book that gave me a great thrill to read, that was the first constitution written by Massachusetts. And a great deal of discussion came up, and I think this is going to hold right through. Shall we mandate the legislature, shall we suggest to the legislature, shall we indicate to the legislature? Let me read you how the dear sweet things in Massachusetts in their first constitutional assembly suggested it to the legislature about such an important thing as the liberty of the press. "The liberty of the press is essential to the security of freedom in a state. It ought not, therefore, to be restrained in this commonwealth." Did you ever hear any more gentle language?

Now, we are trying not to mandate. We recognize that in this whole thing, unless the people of the territory are with us, unless the people of the territory become one and all part of this government, nothing that we write will have any influence whatever. Remember, we had a Huey Long and a few other high-binders under the wonderful document of the U.S. Constitution. So, we have to recognize, we believe and we will trust and we will have faith in our legislature, and whether we put a word in, as one suggestion came in, that we should "vigorously" defend so and so, I feel the wording isn't the thing.

Here we all are. I'm sure everyone of us are sacrificing something for the sake of government. Why do we do it? Because we believe in a strong state and we believe unless the citizens take an active part, democracy dies, and we don't want democracy to die. I'm sure that everyone of you feel we want to maintain not only a democracy, we want to maintain that type of democracy that has become recognized as the American form.

So, we feel we are looking forward to a horizon here, and this horizon is something that we hope we'll set it high. We feel in the Health Committee that we have set a horizon. We hope you will accept it, because it is our best thinking, but we want your, naturally your kokua.

We have given you in our text the reasons for this. We would like to carry on now, and take section by section, and I agree with the chairman, I think it's a good idea if we could go through section by section as to content, not as to whether we should combine one or two or shorten a few words. Then as we go through, I would like the privilege, after the Secretary reads the item as we submitted it, I would then like to read just the corrections, as we got it from many of our delegates, that seemed to clarify the intent.

And may I in closing, read just one wonderful little message from George Washington as he finished the Constitutional Convention. He said, "It is too probable," and listen, this is as if the Health Committee were talking to you, "It is too probable that no plan we propose will be adopted, but if to please the people, and to please some of the comments of the delegates, we offer what we ourselves disapprove, how can we afterwards defend our work? Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair."

The event, gentlemen, is in the hands of the delegates.

ANTHONY: The chairman took a half hour in making the statement. I think it's a wise thing that we have a full discussion like that, but I trust that other committees will have similar indulgence by the Convention.

MIZUHA: I move that the Committee of the Whole -- I recommend to the Convention the passage of Section 1 of Committee Proposal 1.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

HEEN: I think we ought to have further debate upon this proposal. I'd like to raise some questions here at the present time.

PORTEUS: May I interrupt one moment for a matter of convenience to the delegates? I think if you'll turn, you will find that you have a folder called "Committee Proposals." If you'll turn to that folder rather than to the folder on committee reports, you will have the material before you. There is a special file headed "Committee Proposals," and it's the Number 1 proposal in that book. Thank you for yielding.

HEEN: I take it that this article finally will be entitled "General Welfare," "Article on General Welfare," and of course, included in that would be the matter of public education. The first section there, the word "public health," that is a matter of general welfare. I would like to point this out. The section dealing with slum clearance, rehabilitation and housing, "The State and its political subdivisions may provide for or assist in slum clearance and rehabilitation of substandard areas including housing for persons of low income," they wanted to leave the political subdivisions with -- out of handling the public health measure.

"The enumeration in this article of specified functions shall not be construed as limitations upon the powers of the State government for good order, health, safety and general welfare of the people." I think if they had only that section, it would have been sufficient for all purposes.

I have an amendment to offer to this committee, to amend this article reading as follows:

> Article _____. Resolved that the following be agreed upon as part of the State Constitution: Article _____. General Welfare. The legislature shall have full power to provide for the good order of the State and for the health, safety and welfare of its people by all necessary and convenient means subject only to the limitations prescribed in this Constitution and in the Constitution in the United States.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, is that offered as an amendment to Section 1?

HEEN: It is offered for the whole proposal.

CHAIRMAN: Well, Senator -- Delegate Heen, we have a motion before the house and duly seconded that we act on Section 1 of this suggested committee proposal.

MIZUHA: Mr. Chairman, inasmuch as I was the mover --

WIST: The speaker who has just spoken used these words, "I take it that we will have a clause on general welfare which will include health and education." I trust he realizes that he is speaking for himself and not for the entire delegation, because I do not believe that we can, at this point, make any such assumptions.

MIZUHA: [First part of speech not on tape] . . . and that the committee recommend passage to the Convention as a whole that this whole article pass second reading. Then in that event, the delegate of the fourth district can make his amendment as he has done previously.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mizuha, the Chair suggested that we consider each article individually and there was no objection. So we shall consider - - we will continue in that manner.

MIZUHA: Then, Mr. Chairman, the amendment is out of order.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. There's no second to the amendment either.

LARSEN: In discussing this, I agree with Doctor - - Mr. Mizuha, that we can do this article by article to evaluate content and then the other can be discussed. I would like to answer Delegate Heen, that the article is not entitled "General Welfare," but the recommendation we are making is that it shall be "Health and General Welfare." In other words, this whole health field has grown to a point where it is very important. The first one, called "Public Health," as I said in my explanation, has only to do with the functions of the Board of Health, and therefore is something we have accomplished.

The Board of Health is, I might say, some objected to the word "preventive measures" –I want to assure you as the explanation shows, there is no evil connotation there. For instance, if you innoculate people for small pox, you are preventing a possible epidemic. If an epidemic breaks out, then you may have to protect the rest of the citizens. "Promote " does designate that we are advancing along these fields. I feel those three words, to explain what the present Board of Health and which the president of the Board of Health felt did cover it without legislative content, is important.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, as a matter of reference to your amendment before, I hope the Convention understands that there is nothing to keep an amendment such as this coming in, after we consider each individual article.

WHITE: Could I have the chairman of the committee explain to us the reason for the use of the word "responsible" in the first section as against "conveying power" in all the other sections?

LARSEN: The question of wording of that type–I have discussed it with a number of individuals–I think we should leave to Style Committee. We thought there was a slight difference, and in some of Senator Heen's comments, I feel there is a very distinct difference. As we come to the section, perhaps I can explain them. I realize, having lived in the field for more than 30 years, certain words mean a great deal to me that perhaps should be enlarged upon, and some of my lawyer friends did say that we should enlarge on our explanation. But the question, "The State shall be responsible," or "The State is hereby authorized" or, "The State shall have the power," I would like to feel that they should be, I think, straightened out perhaps into one style, if necessary, by the Style Committee. After the Style Committee has straightened that, as I understand it, we will still have an opportunity to change it if we want. But I think that's correct.

ANTHONY: I'd like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Public Health a question, if I may. That is, does the committee consider that it is necessary to have articles such as are contained in this proposal to enable the legislature to legislate in these fields? In other words, do they think it's essential that we have such an article? Or what is the purpose of it, if they do not think it's necessary, as a deposit of legislative power in the legislature.

CHAIRMAN: Would the chairman of the committee like to answer that?

LARSEN: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

I realize I can't use the clarity of langauge that is used by a lawyer, and therefore, apparently, I don't make it clear. I will try again. That, we believe, a State Constitution has a function; that function is to record certain advances, and these advances should be recorded in our Constitution, because that is what a Constitution is for. That in all these authorities on state constitutions, they recommend, and even our local recommends, that we not just keep the Organic Act, but that the State Constitution should be a re-emphasis of basic principles plus the directional trend, plus the recording of advances we have made.

Now, it's true, these things have evolved without this in the Constitution, but so has everything else. We could leave out the Bill of Rights. As I said at one of our committee meetings, we really could go home; all we had to do was take the first day and pass the Federal Constitution. That gives us a chance, but remember this, in these fields, when we're knocking at the door in Washington, and we have copied the Federal Constitution, I think we just give them the right to believe what many of them do believe–we are just a bunch of natives with a few of these beachcombers who couldn't make good in America, and therefore came out here, and here we are, and we couldn't even have enough originality, but we copied the Federal Constitution.

Therefore, I think this principle holds true, that we should indicate that we really are advanced, and my feeling is, there is no field where anybody who knows–certainly any scientist, and most legislators–will get indication of our advance quicker than in the field of health and general welfare, and we use the term advisedly. "Health and general welfare" connoting the physical, mental and happiness, health, emotional health, if you will, of the people of Hawaii, and we think that these five sentences do that better than if we just use one.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Health and Public Welfare a question. He just stated that it was his opinion, and apparently the opinion of the committee, that those gains which have been made over the past half-century or quarter-century, that are recognized gains should then be spelled out. I'd like to ask for a little clarity on that. Does he mean gains generally recognized in areas in which there are still no conflict, or areas in which there may be still conflicts of thought?

LARSEN: In these five fields, we have advanced; we are functioning; we are there. I think the principle we are talking about is, should our Constitution give an indication of our advance or should it merely repeat those words of the beginning. Our committee feels that we should indicate the advance, that there is - - these are not controversial points. The controversial point was the one I read about hospitals. My committee didn't let me get away with any controversial points. These five fields are already functioning in Hawaii. Now, we might use the one, but perhaps some legislature will come along and discontinue them. We believe it's important to have in the Constitution our advance and keep the advance.

CORBETT: It's my belief that these advances have been won by the people of the territory over the past 50 years by battles in court and in the legislature, and that if we don't reiterate and re-emphasize them at this time, we might conceivably lose them at some future date. There are people on the floor in this Convention who have taken part in those battles, and I feel quite sure that they want to insure to our people these social gains. We are dealing with people, human beings, who wish some assurance in their document other than the bare bones of the three branches of the government.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares.

(Clapping)

TAVARES: Thank you. I didn't know I had a claque right in the Convention. I'm very happy. I hope they'll - -

CHAIRMAN: That was for the last speaker.

TAVARES: Pardon me because the applause was a little late and I misunderstood.

It seems to me that the debate thus far boils down to this one thing, which I believe for posterity and for the help of the courts in interpreting this Constitution, should be made crystal clear in the debates, and I hope and understand that these debates are being recorded word for word. It is my understanding that the gist of the arguments in favor of the proposals -- proposal as worded in this manner is not that the more inclusive and general language of our Organic Act which does nothing practically but grant to the legislature power over all rightful subject of legislation, it's not the contention that that wouldn't cover these things, but that they prefer to say it in this manner. In other words, I would want it very clearly understood that when in another section, as we probably will, or in another article we grant to the legislature power over all rightful subjects of legislation, or words to that effect, it will not be considered that those words would not have carried anyway this interpretation and thereby by implication have these specific provisions limit the meaning of the general power.

It's my understanding that we are practically doing this out of an abundance of caution, perhaps, or out of merely a preference to restate in more specific terms some of the things included in the general grant of legislative power over all rightful subjects of legislation. That is one thing, it seems to me, we must make clear as we go along. If we are going to be specific about some things that today we are doing already under a general grant of legislative power, let's be very sure that we are not thereby by implication limiting the meaning of the general grant of legislative power. And if I vote for this, it will be with that understanding, and I believe, unless the members here contradict me, that they will be doing that too. In other words, we do not propose to limit a general grant of legislative power by all these specific enumerations of specific powers.

There are some areas where there is doubt. For instance, in the slum clearance and public housing field, doubt has been expressed in our legislature as to whether under our Organic Act in its general terms, we had all of the powers needed, and for that reason, we got through Congress a number of times, special acts practically ratifying what our legislature had done. Those situations would justify, perhaps, our being more specific in any event, whereas to many of these other areas, my understanding is that if we adopt this, we are not doing it because the general legislative grant of powers is not sufficient, but because we want what the chairman of the committee says, directional emphasis or the other types of emphasis which he has mentioned.

ROBERTS: Our section E or F, the last section in the committee proposal, states very specifically that "The enumeration in this article of specified functions shall not be construed as a limitation upon the powers of the State government for the good order, health, safety and general welfare of the people." I think that the point presented is fairly important.

I'd like to state that when I joined the Committee on Health and Welfare, I took the general position that we have one broad clause in the Constitution. The language was similar to the language presented by Senator Heen. After sitting through with that committee for 16 meetings, after hearing the individuals who came in to testify before us on the specific functions and problems of their particular areas, I for one finally accepted the proposal that there be five specific sections outlining fairly broad fields in the public health and welfare areas, and then put a general proviso at the end that this does not limit the State in its general powers to perform its functions.

I believe that with regard to two of those sections, the section on slum clearance and the section on public sightliness, there was a very distinct and definite problem in terms of the actual power of the State to act in those areas. I believe, if you examine some of the literature in that field, that in some states the question has arisen as to whether or not the legislature could properly act in those areas without a specific grant of power. Questions had come up in the courts with regard to the expenditures of funds. In those two particular areas you need some specific safeguard in the Constitution to permit the legislature to act in case of any question of constitutionality.

In the other three areas, the public health, the social security and the question of general welfare, which really gets down to the problem of the treatment of mentally and physically handicapped persons, in those particular areas, it was felt that sufficient progress had been made. The areas have been pretty clearly and well-defined as a matter of receiving public support for the final adoption of the Constitution, and in terms of specifying these things directly that that be included in the total section.

I believe we can establish without much difficulty that some states have gone to extreme lengths with regard to spelling out these powers. We have felt they ought to be specific, they ought to be simple, but they ought to indicate what the interests of the community are with regard to those fields. I believe that for those reasons, we ought to adopt the six sections proposed there. I believe we ought to continue with our specific materials on each of the sections.

I might point out, for those who are arguing generally about the necessity for a specific one sentence grant of power, that those particular areas can apply to any section of this Constitution. I have in mind particularly the Federal Constitution with regard to the judiciary. It seems to me that all we have to say with regard to that problem, if we adopt this general proposal, is that the legislature shall have the power, after you establish your supreme court, to set up such inferior courts and set out their jurisdiction. I am sure that when that committee reports in to us properly that we will have specific language, perhaps on the number of actual supreme court judges, in the Constitution, perhaps on the specific grants of power and jurisdiction, perhaps on the question of tenure, perhaps on the question of retirement. We could just as well leave all those matters for the legislature. It seems to me our Constitution ought to indicate where we are, or to indicate the things that we believe in, and the things that are fairly fundamental both as to our form of government and as to the accomplishments that we have already made.

MAU: Before I discuss this proposal I'd like to ask two questions of previous speakers so as to clarify the matters discussed. The delegate from the fourth district who raised some question as to whether the specific enumeration of powers in this proposal might act as a limitation upon the general legislative powers of the State, after having the other delegate from the fourth district speak on the last section in this proposal, is he satisfied that that limitation does not exist?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, would you like to answer that?

TAVARES: The answer is yes, but I wanted the record to reinforce that very strongly.

MAU: I would agree with the delegate of the fourth district; that would be my stand also.

I would like to ask the chairman of the Health Committee with respect to his suggestion which did not get into this proposal concerning subsidizing hospitals, now, is there any record in the minutes or in the committee report which could be used in interpreting this proposal, this proposed constitutional provision, which would limit the State from subsidizing hospitals?

MIZUHA: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

MIZUHA: This movant for the recommendation of the adoption by the Convention of the Whole of Section 1, asked the question as to whether we were speaking on Section 1 or on the whole article. If we want to speak on the whole article, I'll be willing to move that we are -- this Committee of the Whole recommend to the Convention the adoption of the whole article, and then we can go into the whole shebang. Now we are going from one section to the whole article and back and forth and we don't know where we stand here.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mizuha, I understand the meaning behind these questions or the reasons behind them. They want to get clarification so they can start through the different sections. I think their questions relate to, not only Section 1 maybe, but 1 or 2, but I think they are in order.

MIZUHA: But the question that was propounded by the previous speaker was on the subsidies to hospitals, as to why it wasn't included in the whole article here. I believe we are discussing the first section at the present time, and in order to expedite business, if we consider the whole article all at one time, then all these questions can properly arise and we can go to bat and even consider the delegate of the fourth district's proposed amendment.

CHAIRMAN: I think the delegate is just seeking clarification. I think he's in order.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau still has the floor.

MAU: I wonder if the chairman of the committee on health could answer the question I raised.

LARSEN: I think it's included in the minutes, without any question. It's also noted in the minutes that it was overwhelmingly defeated.

MAU: Of course --

PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau still has the floor.

PORTEUS: May I ask Delegate Mau whether or not he will not get a further clarification of that. To me, that is not an answer that I am satisfied with. Members of the legislature confronted in the future with a question of whether or not this article on health and public welfare will authorize or permit legislation whereby there will be either stand-by costs or so much a day paid to hospitals that are part of our hospital system of this territory will not be able to know from that answer whether or not it is clearly intended by the chairman and that committee that there is such power, but that the failure to express it specifically is not a rejection of the power of the legislature.

LARSEN: Mr. Chairman, I apologize for seeming to be facetious. The committee felt that this was such a new field that it shouldn't be in the Constitution. It was also expressed, and I think we had one of our legislative members in, who said that they had already gone on record to do this. In other words, they had accepted under the Constitution the idea that subsidization of hospitals could be done under our present -- that was a question raised, the question that I raised, I wondered could they go that far, but they . . . [Not clear on tape.]

MAU: As I understand it, the record of the proceedings in that committee do not indicate that because the subsidizing provision was not proposed in this Proposal No. 1 will create no prohibition against the State or its legislature from appropriating monies to subsidize hospitals. If that is correct, I want that to be in the record, and if there is any objection to that, any of the delegates should now make those objections known. I want the record to be clear on that. My interpretation of several of the sections in this Proposal No. 1, these provisions being broad, reading these provisions alone, do not indicate any such prohibition against the State or the future legislatures.

WHITE: May I state for the benefit of the delegate from the fifth district that that subject is now included in the proposal of the Committee on Finance and Taxation, so that the delegates will have the opportunity to pass on that subject at that time.

MAU: I would like at this time to amend the motion made, that this committee adopt Proposal No. 1.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that's the motion before the house. Will the Clerk -- We'll get clarification now, I think.

MAU: No, Mr. Chairman, the motion is limited to Section 1 of the proposal, as I understand it.

CHAIRMAN: Do I understand you to be amending the motion to include the whole proposal?

MAU: The whole proposal.

MIZUHA: I rise to a point of order. Again, that is what I've been harping on for the past half an hour. If this Committee of the Whole decides to consider the article as a whole, then we can expedite business; but you have limited us to just the consideration of the first section, and everybody that has spoken heretofore has been speaking on the whole article and all its ramifications.

MAU: By that proposed amendment, I am asking the delegates to consider that; consider its action that they will consider only section by section and take the whole proposal together.

MIZUHA: The Chair had ruled that the Committee of the Whole had decided that consideration shall be only on Section 1. You cannot reconsider -- You must first reconsider the action of the committee before you can entertain the delegate from fifth district's amendment.

HEEN: The Committee of the Whole did not go on record as to considering the proposal section by section. That was a suggestion made by the Chair. Now in order to clear the decks, there is a motion pending to recommend the passage of this proposal in its present form as a whole. I move that that motion be tabled.

MIZUHA: I had agreed -- I had informed the committee and the chairman that I was willing to restate my motion to include every -- the whole article --

ASHFORD: Mr. Chairman.

MIZUHA: -- and then if the committee wanted to consider that, the whole article, they could do so.

CHAIRMAN: To review the --

ASHFORD: Mr. Chairman.

MIZUHA: I withdraw my motion, Mr. Chairman.

ASHFORD: I second the motion of the delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Heen.

ROBERTS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman. Before that motion to table --

CHAIRMAN: May I ask clarification from Delegate Ashford?

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

TAVARES: There was no second to the motion. There is nothing to table.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

TAVARES: And may I say this. Let's not be too technical starting out. It seems to me that when we are discussing Part 1 of this proposal and we mention the other, doesn't it mean just this, later on when the others come up, we've had our say, we're not going to say it over again. So that we are really making progress. We illustrate our points, we bring out other things, we compare and so forth. But in the long run, I still think we are saving time even if we jump the fence once in a while, and it seems to me, if we do that, we are going to get ahead a little faster.

I just want to make two explanations that I think need to be made. One is with reference to the explanation of the chairman of the Committee on Taxation and Finance. It seems to me this really is the result -- this is the situation, that the ability or the power to subsidize private hospitals is implied in the general grant of legislative power, unless in our Committee on Taxation and Finance we place a limit upon it, and that is what is now being considered in the Committee on Taxation and Finance, whether we shall limit the power to apply government funds or property to the aid of other institutions. If we don't put that in, then I think the general grant of legislative power will include what we are doing today probably, unless the Constitution of the United States is later held to forbid it. If we do place a limitation, that will answer the question. I wanted to make that clear. That seems to me the situation.

The second point of explanation is this. In the Style Committee we have already tentatively decided that we are going to try to put subtitles to each section for convenience. Now putting a subtitle in is a very dangerous thing, because it's usually one word or two words or a few words, and it's impossible to compress all of the meaning of a section into one short subtitle, unless you make the subtitle almost as long as the section. Therefore, it seems to me dangerous if this committee, as I want to point out later, is including in its subtitle a word which is not included lower down with the idea that it will explain that. I think it's a little dangerous to do that and I'd like to have that borne in mind. I'm jumping the fence again, with apologies to the delegate from the fifth district, but those two explanations, it seems to me must be borne in mind.

MIZUHA: I wish to withdraw my motion.

ANTHONY: I think that the debate on this proposal is going to set a very important precedence in this Convention. This Constitution will have three principal articles. As a matter of constitutional law, whether as a matter of language, whether you are going to divide it into more, plus a Bill of Rights, everything that is in this proposal properly is a matter of a legislative grant of power. Now, I am not at this point opposed to any of the statements that are contained in here, but I'm just wondering whether or not we wouldn't advance our work faster if we should have the report of the Legislative Committee which will deposit a full grant of legislative power. Adopt that, and then after we have that before us, then after we have the executive and judicial branches of government before us, we can then proceed to sort of fill in the interstices by these other proposals that relate principally to matters of legislation. Now under the Organic Act, we're got simple language. Section 5: "That the legislative power of the Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States locally applicable."

DELEGATE: Section 55.

ANTHONY: Now there is no doubt about it that everything that's stated in this article could be done as a matter of legislative grant, under the language -- the simple language of the Organic Act. I have a great deal of sympathy with the chairman of the Health Committee that we should record our advances, but what I want the Convention to fully appreciate is that this is not adding anything, this is not adding anything to a general grant of legislative power.

Now it seems to me it would be more appropriate if we'd get our legislative article in shape and then we could discover after that how far we want a -- to make a declaration of advances, and how far we want to express specific items in the legislative section of the Constitution.

Now there is the danger, as a matter of constitutional law, the minute you start to enumerate these things you have the questions raised whether or not by the very act of enumeration, are you not saying that in substance and effect that these are the specific fields, and no further. You express one and you exclude another. That's the danger, I think, in the enumeration.

As I said before at the outset, I don't find any particular objection to any of these statements, but it does seem to me that we've sort of got the cart before the horse, where we're filling in without having the basic skeleton of the Constitution.

BRYAN: I actually agree with what the previous speaker has said as to the placement of this and the time of consideration, as far as the legislative section of the Constitution goes. I would like to heartily disagree with what he, and I think two or three others from the fifth district have said, and that is that I don't think the Constitution is to be made a history book. I think the Constitution is to set forth permissive powers, restrictive powers and give authorizations in these various fields; but I don't think that it's the place to put the history of the territory, or the history of any philosophy, and I'd like to make my stand very clear on that particular matter. I think, procedure-wise here, it might clear up the debate a little bit if we were to consider the substance of this report and ask that it be referred to the Legislative Committee. I won't make a motion on that, but I'll throw that out in line with what Delegate Anthony has said.

PHILLIPS: I'd like to speak on this business of history and what the American Constitution meant to us, as was set forth by Dr. Larsen. Dr. Larsen warned us that we should be against being unoriginal—by following the American Constitution. Therefore, I'd like to read here what another great legislator had to say about the American Constitution, and that is William Gladstone.

> The American Constitution is, so far as I can see, the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man. It has had a century of trial under the pressure of exigencies caused by an expansion unparalleled in point of rapidity and range. And its exemption from formal change, though not entire, has entirely proved the sagacity of the constructors and the stubborn strength of the fabric.

Now, therefore, I believe it's important for the record that rather being unoriginal, we are actually being intelligent enough to follow this document which has proven so well down through the ages. And I would like to say in support of that that one of the committee members in his talk, Dr. Roberts, brought out the fact that it ought to be specific and simple, and I don't believe you can find anything more specific or more simple nor more advantageous than those -- the health provision that is contained in the Federal Constitution.

KELLERMAN: I think we might all keep in mind with reference to Mr. Phillips, the gentleman from the fourth district's statement and others, that in dealing with a state constitution as compared with the Federal Constitution, we have two entirely different approaches. The Federal Constitution is a grant of specified powers by otherwise sovereign states, and the Federal Constitution limits the powers that can be expressed or exercised by the United States government to those powers specifically delegated. The Constitution of the United States also contains certain restrictions upon the powers of the state, which are binding upon all. But that is all the Federal Constitution is supposed to do.

Now we are dealing with the Constitution of a sovereign people limited only by those expressed grants of power or the limitations of power expressly given in the Federal. It seems to me that we could very well say, "Since we are sovereign people, we do hereby grant or recognize that our legislature has all power within any reasonable subject of legislation that is not specifically prohibited by the Federal Constitution," and go home. We do have all the powers; we are not arguing about the full power in the legislature to deal with all rightful subjects of legislation not limited by the Federal Constitution. But it seems to me, we are here to draw up more than an organization of government; we are here to express in our Constitution, the policies, the purposes and the hopes of our people within their State's sovereign power which no one denies them. For that reason, I do not believe in the concept of curtailing a state constitution to the three branches of government and general grants of power.

Now as to the matter of waiting until the legislative proposal comes out to see what it grants, we know it will grant full legislative powers. We don't need for such a proposal to appear on the floor to know that, and if we are going to wait for these proposals from the three branches of government to appear on the floor before we discuss these other proposals, I don't think we'll leave here until September, because we know that some of these committees are not anywhere near ready to bring in their final proposals and meanwhile we have to consider the reports of 14 different committees. So it's my suggestion that we go ahead with the proposal which has reached the floor first and discuss it on the basis that I brought forth.

SILVA: As I get it, the only thing before this Committee of the Whole is Committee Proposal No. 1.

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

SILVA: And that we're supposed to discuss this proposal section by section, or all the whole matter as far as that's concerned. Now my way of thinking is, do we or do we not in Committee of the Whole agree to the principle that "The State shall be responsible for the protection and promotion of the public health including preventative measures for all of its inhabitants." That's the only question before the committee now. Do we or do we not agree, and if we do, we don't have to vote on it. We can say we agreed to the principle, then we go on to the next section and so forth. Then if we care to refer this to some other committee, to the Committee on Legislative Powers, it can be referred to that committee. But going all over the place and talking about the rights of man and the Constitution and so forth is highly irregular and out of order at this time.

ARASHIRO: In line with the suggestion of the delegate from the second district, are we now discussing the proposal in its entirety?

CHAIRMAN: The motion still before the house is relating to Section 1, Public health.

ARASHIRO: And then, are we to act on that motion or are we going to discuss it? If we are going to act on that motion - - has that motion been acted upon?

CHAIRMAN: Motion has not been acted on. It's been seconded.

ARASHIRO: The reason why I ask this is that we have Proposal No. 1 before us, and if we are to discuss on the entirety, I feel that the chairman of the Health Committee has only presented his view as to the actions and the work that the Health Committee has taken and they have carefully worked on this proposal. I think they have worked for over a month now, and I think that there is all the reasons for having all these five sentences as the Chairman has stated I think we haven't had the presentation of the other four sentences and I think that if we are going to discuss on the entirety of the proposal, then we should listen to the presentation of the other members of that committee to give their views for the reasons of having the other five sentences. But if not, and we are only going to discuss on the one section, then we should act upon that motion that is before the house. And if so, I refer to the previous question - - I move to refer to the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: You move the previous question?

TAVARES: Before that motion is seconded, may I just say this. It is my understanding that when a matter is taken up in Committee of the Whole which includes several items and we approve each item, that does not bind us even to approve it on the final hearing. It is a tentative thing, and at the end, then we have to vote whether we adopt the whole thing anyway, or recommend the adoption of the whole matter. I hope the legislators will correct me if I am wrong. So that even if we tentatively approve each of these measures we are still reserving the right to have a reconsideration of everything as a whole when we get to the end. That might expedite matters a little bit.

WIRTZ: Before we vote on any of these proposals either individually or as a whole, I'd like to ask the chairman of the Health Committee whether certain suggestions that were made during informal discussion of this proposal have - - and amendments have been made or are going to be made? Or put the question the other way, is the proposal in its final form now?

LARSEN: No. We did have a meeting and I wonder if you would turn to your pages, we can rapidly show the type of suggestions and perhaps it will save some discussion. For instance, Section A remains as is. Section B, our lawyer friends urgently asked us and we agreed to remove the word "adequate" in the second line. We also suggested to put a comma after "measures" and a comma after "rehabilitation" to make it clearer. We also suggested that instead of the word "care," which seemed to be not quite clear, we add the word "service." Those are all suggestions made by fellow delegates. In Section C, one of our lawyers suggested, and there seemed to be no disagreement, that in the second to the last line, we cut out "in such manner and by such means" because he felt that was self-understood. So that was eliminated. Could I just go through? I might say that this is merely suggestions that you can vote on because we - - naturally we have to submit the committee report as it was, but I'm giving you the thinking of a large number of delegates and therefore as you vote you can make those corrections if you want, but just to save discussion I'm merely mentioning the changes that were suggested.

In Section D, it remained as is except the Housing Authority suggests this longer section which, if you come to it and feel it's clear, why I would be glad to submit the two of them. The committee report, as I say, stands as is.

On the Section E of public sightliness, there are two suggestions made by delegates and not several of them. In the reports that you have, we left out - - we left in the title "Public Sightliness and Good Order," and left it out in the body. The suggestion is, unless we put it in, it shall read something like this - and of course this is where - - I didn't read it this way but I can see how it can be read that way—"The State shall have the power to conserve and develop public highways and beaches." Well, that was not the intention at all. The intention, of course, was to put in that last line, "parks, public highways and beaches in the interest of public good order and sightliness." Also one suggestion was made that "cultural interests" were so broad that "historic and cultural" should be "historic and cultural importance."

If you make these notes, then when it comes to voting you can ask for such suggestions. And the final one in E and F, if you would mark it down, this also was - - I forgot who made this suggestion but I'm putting it down and it seemed to read a little more clearly as it was suggested. "The enumeration in this article in the fields specified shall not be construed as a limitation of possible future activities in these areas."

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

SAKAKIHARA: I don't think the chairman of the committee has answered the question propounded by the chairman of the Rules Committee.

WIRTZ: I'm concerned, not with all the suggestions that were offered, but the suggestions that were acceptable to the Health Committee. Are those - - all those suggestions that you have enumerated, Mr. Chairman, are suggestions acceptable to the Health Committee?

LARSEN: No, they are not. We found out yesterday that - - we questioned as many as possible, but we weren't able to meet since some of these suggestions were made. That's why I'm leaving them to those members who made them. If they want to make amendments, they may do so.

WIST: The question has been asked whether or not this article on health and general welfare will be adding to the grant of legislative powers. Personally, I don't think that that's the purpose of this section. The purpose of this article, the five sections in this article, is primarily to state principles, principles that we, the representative of the people, believe are sound. They are principles that are accepted. I think the issue really before this group this morning is not so much a question of the substantive matter of these various sections, because I think most of the delegates would agree that all of these things are sound, wholesome and good. I think the basic question is do we want to streamline it, to telescope it into a single short paragraph or do we want to state these principles in the order that the committee has recommended. I, for one, believe that there is certainly nothing wrong in stating them section by section. If we are going to state the principles, why not, if we believe in them?

FUKUSHIMA: I don't believe any one of us here entertains any doubt that the Committee on Health has done a lot of work, put out a splendid piece of report, but I feel like some of the delegates from the fourth district that we are not adding anything to the Constitution or to the legislative grant of power by spelling out these five sections. Then we have a final section which says that the enumeration shall not be construed as limitations. To me that doesn't sound like a constitution at all. It sounds more like some statutes, instead of a constitution.

In that regard, I attended a hearing of the Health Committee and the opinion was expressed by Mr. Fox that as far as he was concerned, these articles on the health and welfare sections should be as concise as possible, and in fact stated that perhaps one sentence would do it. And at that time he got a tremendous applause from the 100 people that were gathered there. I was just wondering whether the committee took that into consideration.

I also spoke to one of the other speakers, Mr. Tajima, who appeared before the committee, and he had a proposal in his hand which also had only one sentence for the entire thing. I believe the Health Committee relied somewhat on the speakers, especially Mr. Fox and Mr. Tajima.

In that regard, I also have an amendment to offer which I have here and I'll offer it at the proper time. I'll also have the men here distribute the amendments which I have had printed. This is in line with the provisions in the United States Constitution. It has been facetiously stated that if we copy the Federal Constitution, then we'd just as soon have copied the entire thing and have gone home the very first day. I don't concur with that. The Federal Constitution, as pointed out by Mrs. Kellerman, is entirely different, and for that reason, any section which has already stood the test of time as far as interpretation and construction are concerned certainly should have some bearing on this Constitutional Convention here. I don't believe that we should have in our Constitution merely a statement of principles. We're talking about directional trend and principle. Perhaps we should have it in the Preamble and not in the framework of our government.

LARSEN: I'd like to answer that because I feel we have answered it. We considered very carefully these various - - should it be six words, six sentences or six paragraphs? We have 200 constitutions, state constitutions to consider. We believe in good American practice that the state constitution does give directional trends, that the best authorities on state constitutions suggest we should note these advances.

As far as this applause we heard about, I'd like to give - - as we all know, six of us can look at one accident and will giv six different interpretations. My idea of the applause was, Mr. Fox is a very keen person and he gave a very good speech. The applause wasn't to include six sentences, because I've just read you here a series of letters that I got from the experts who were at the meeting suggesting not only that we limit it to what we had, but they even want more paragraphs to make sure that the legislature shall have a full avenue of advance.

ROBERTS: I'd like to answer the statement made by the speaker before the last on the question of the public hearing. In addition to that public hearing, we had 16 meetings of the committee. At that public hearing, Mr. Fox spoke on the general problem and there was tremendous applause, the only applause of the evening. I subsequently put the paragraph, the one sentence which Mr. Fox had proposed, which he was expounding, and as soon as I put that particular paragraph the answer was "No," and objections. It was his paragraph, the section that he had sold in his speech. Yet, when it came to actual specific language, that group would not support it. They would not support it because that language and that speech was put concretely in terms of a section of the Constitution. Each person there was looking to his own particular problems and his own particular needs.

The second point raised as to whether or not the Federal Constitution should be adequate for our needs, I find no section on initiative and referendum in that Constitution; I am sure that there are people going to be here who are going to argue for that. It seems to me that we're writing our State Constitution, and if we need to put things in there, then we write them in in terms of our own problems and our own concerns.

There's been some statements that this thing does not grant any power to the legislature. I suggested in my opening speech this morning that there were two specific fields where I believe that such grants have been given. One is in the public sightliness, on the question as to whether you can or cannot pass legislation dealing with billboards. That' a legislative grant. That's a grant of power to the legislatur The second one, it seems to me, is in the question of the field of housing. That question is an open field. A number of states have amended their constitutions – New York, for example, in 1938 – specifically on that point that the legislature be given that grant of power. So in those two areas you'll have specific grants of power to the legislature.

In the other three, I indicated perhaps there is no need to spell that out. It doesn't give them any power, but it does indicate the areas in which the State is now functioning. It seems to me that this Constitution has to go to the people for ratification. If there is sufficient support and concern and need about those areas, we have a problem of recognizing that need. It seems to me if no damage is done, it seems to me that we have a responsibility to consider those areas. The committee did and the committee suggested their inclusion.

On the last question, on the question of enumeration of powers, we have stated before that enumeration of powers in those five areas do not limit the State in such other areas as they may deem necessary to go, provided they are not in violation of federal law. It seems to me that the legislative grant is there; that was discussed at the opening part of our presentation this morning.

BRYAN: Nearly everyone who spoke has intermingled the idea of the substance of this and the procedure and whether or not it goes into the constitution. I think that to make any progress we'll have to divide that in some manner, and as I understand the motions that are pending—the motion to the previous question was not seconded—the only motion that is pending is for the adoption of Section 1 - -

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

BRYAN: I would like to amend that motion that the proposal be considered in substance section by section and when that is through we can discuss whether or not it goes into the Constitution in that form, whether it goes in as a paragraph or whether it's referred to the Legislative Committee. I would like to state on that point that by considering the substance only, we'll clear up this presumption that's been made that everyone is in agreement with it. Several speakers have said everyone thinks the substance here is fine but we don't know what to do with it, and there is argument on that point. Let's clear up the point of substance first.

I therefore repeat my motion that we consider the substance of this proposal section by section and when that is through we can consider further whether it's going to be referred, adopted for the Constitution, modified or whatever else can be done with it.

ANTHONY: The delegate from the University has touched on a point which I think is basic in this discussion. He stated that this - - some of these sections constituted an affirmative grant. Now I consider that that's an erroneous statement. I don't think that a single one of these sections would add anything to the simple statement depositing the legislative power to all rightful subjects of legislation. I don't think that this Convention should be voting on this proposal under the mistaken view of the law that this is an affirmative grant that goes beyond the existing power of the legislature. Now certainly that expression, "rightful subjects of legislation" has been interpreted by the highest court of the land, and in Balzac against Puerto Rico where the very words were interpreted, the Supreme Court said that that is a grant of power as broad as words can make it. Now let's not be misled by thinking that we're adding anything to the grant, the general grant of legislative power. If we want a constitution that is going to declare certain objectives, certain advances, then we'll put this sort of thing in. But what I want to make abundantly clear is that you are not adding anything to a general grant of legislative power by enumerating these six sentences, however desirable they may be.

KAUHANE: I'd like to second the motion made by Delegate Bryan.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

MIZUHA: I wish to withdraw my original motion.

KING: I understood the delegate from Kauai said he desired to withdraw his original motion that we consider Section 1 of this proposal. I believe the parliamentary situation would be then that the delegate from the fifth district, Mr. Bryan's motion would prevail as - - not as an amendment but as an original motion. That has now been seconded by the other delegate from the fifth district, Mr. Kauhane.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

KING: It seems to me that's the sensible approach.

With reference to the last speaker, I'm not certain that we are granting additional powers, but we are defining or subdividing the general grant. It seems to me that the argument that's already been made by the chairman of the committee and by the delegate from the fourth district, Delegate Roberts, that in these fields a specific statement of principle and of policy is desired by the public interest in those various areas, and that neither limits nor expands the general legislative powers. I feel that the committee proposal is an excellent one and would like to see the motion prevail that is now pending on the floor of the Committee of the Whole that we go ahead and discuss the sections item by item as to substance, and then vote on the whole either by approving it and requesting the Convention to approve it, or by voting it down, or by substituting one of these brief amendments that have been suggested, or by referring it to the Legislative Committee.

Now, the committees that are working on various provisions of the legislature, their final work might be incorporated in major divisions of the Constitution, but if we are going to wait until the Legislative Powers and Functions Committee report or the Judiciary Committee report or the Executive Powers and Functions report comes out, as another delegate has said, we'll be here until September. These provisions that these specific jurisdiction - - committees having a specific jurisdiction are going to make to us can be acted on, and can be coordinated in the Committee on Style, and can be so revised as to language as to fit in the reports of the other committees as they come out. So I would certainly like to see the adoption of the motion made by Delegate Bryan and seconded by Delegate Kauhane.

CHAIRMAN: To clear the record, the Chair would like to state that he recognizes the withdrawal of the delegate's motion, and the only motion before the house right now is the one of Delegate Bryan.

PHILLIPS: I move the previous question.

KAUHANE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Who seconded the motion?

KAUHANE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Previous question is before the house. All those in favor signify by saying "aye." All opposed. The ayes have it. Would you restate the motion, Clerk, please, before the house? Mr. Bryan's motion.

CLERK: "I would like to amend that motion that the proposal be considered in substance section by section, and when that is through, we can discuss whether or not it goes into the Constitution in that form, or whether it is referred to the Legislative Committee."

HEEN: That motion is not in proper form at the present time because the previous motion had been withdrawn; therefore the motion should be not one by way of amendment but a straight motion.

CHAIRMAN: I think that's correct. Renew the motion, please.

BRYAN: I wish to declare that as an original motion.

CHAIRMAN: Will the second accept that? All those in favor please signify by raising their right hand. There is enough. Motion is carried.

HEEN: Dealing with the section on public health, I would like to ask the chairman of the Health Committee why it was that the committee decided to use the words "be responsible"?

"The State shall be responsible for the protection and promotion of the public health." In the very next section, by way of explaining my statement, "The State shall have the power to make adequate provision." Why didn't they use uniform language; in other words, the first section should have read, "The State shall have the power to provide for the protection and promotion of the public health." I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee why there was that difference in language. There must have been some purpose for using different phraseology.

LARSEN: I'm afraid unless we get Freud in here, we probably can't quite explain why we made some changes. I thought, as I look at it and as Senator Heen spoke of it -- I think we used "responsible" in the first section because the State does have the responsibility. In the second one, "The State shall have power," now we are dealing in fields where they might or might not function and therefore, they have the power to work in those fields. However, as I called attention before, if the Style Committee feels that those reasons are not valid, they certainly shall change it. For instance, some feel that we shouldn't use the words, "The State shall have power," but "The State shall be empowered to," and use it uniformly in all sections. I think the committee has no objection to changes like that, but I think we feel it should go into Style.

PORTEUS: I think that that matter can perhaps be brought to a head. The Chairman has answered that question to a certain degree. To make it more specific, does the chairman of the Health Committee agree that it is a matter of style whether or not the language of the first section provides "The State shall have power" or "The State shall be responsible"? If Style Committee were to come out with entirely consistent language, would you feel that that made a difference in substance?

LARSEN: We, of course, felt that "responsible" was -- had a little different connotation than "The State shall have power." However, it seems to me --

PORTEUS: Well, Mr. Chairman, may I get a specific answer to the question because --

LARSEN: The specific answer is, if the Style Committee comes back with it, we'll probably be outvoted, but we did feel it was a little different. But our feeling is that such things probably would be for the Style to report back.

PORTEUS: I wish to make a distinction under our rules. Under our rules, after the Committee on Style has reported back, or rather the Committee on Style may make changes in style, not in substance. If this committee thinks that that change is a matter of substance, then I want to get at those words now. If the Committee on Health and Public Welfare will accept such amendments as being within the province of Style, then I don't have the concern with the particular language which is used.

LARSEN: I'm wrong on that. I agree that that's correct. I think the only two that we felt were different was number 1 and 2. The others, "shall have the power" or "shall be empowered to," we felt were style. But "shall be responsible," it seems to me, is more of a mandate than "shall have the power"; and "shall be responsible" I would consider substance.

PORTEUS: I think that's a very satisfactory answer. There is only one more matter within that first section which I have some concern with, and that is, the utilization of the words "including preventive measures for all its inhabitants." It would appear to me that if the Committee on Style were to come forward with a report that "The State shall have power to provide for the protection and promotion of the public health," period, it would cover the substance of that section. Now, is it in the minds of the Committee on Health and Public Welfare that the omission of the words "including preventive measures for all its inhabitants" is a change in substance? To me, it is not a change in substance, and within the province of the Committee on Style.

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman answer that?

LARSEN: I gave the illustration. If, for instance, the people were vaccinated against smallpox, that's preventive. If an epidemic suddenly strikes us, and then those people are isolated and put aside, that's protection. When it comes to the question of whether prevention could come under protection, it's a question that in my own mind, I don't believe it does. But, if the Style Committee would assure me that there is no change in substance by leaving out that last sentence, I would agree. I don't feel that's an important point.

CHAIRMAN: If there's no opposition, I would like to declare a five minute recess. So moved.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Committee will come to order.

HEEN: As I understand it, we're dealing with the first section entitled "Public Health." Now, I would like to suggest an amendment and if it seems agreeable, I will change that to a motion. Amend the first section by deleting from the first line the words "be responsible," and insert in lieu thereof the word "provide." Then in the second line and third line, delete all the words commencing "including," and the rest of that sentence; "including preventive measures for all its inhabitants." So that with those amendments, the section will read: "The State shall provide for the protection and promotion of the public health" period. In that form then it's a mandate upon the State to provide for the public health and promotion of public health.

BRYAN: I'd like to second the motion to amend.

LARSEN: I believe there is a definite difference here. Certainly in my connotation, prevention is quite different from promotion and protection. Now, maybe we could use promotion for everything. But it seems to me that the three great fields of public health as it developed over the past 100 years in America have been number one, promotion, that has to do with advertising, education and all that; then comes protection, which means that you have to protect the people within the community from certain things; and the third great field is prevention, where you innoculate and so on. Now, the committee here is not too adamant about it, but it seems to me that it does carry a distinct meaning and a recognition of the three great fields under which public health now serves.

PORTEUS: I can appreciate the doctor's point of view, although in dealing with sections with respect to the good order of a community it's always been to me the legislative point of view that measures designed for the protection of a community included, of necessity, preventive measures. When you are dealing with crime, it's not necessary that you wait until the crime has happened and then attempt to protect the community; the way you attempt to protect the community is to try to prevent crime from happening. Consequently I think that the word "protection" is one of the broadest words that you can use and I think certainly when it's used in a constitution it should receive a broad construction rather than narrow construction. To my mind the word "protection" is all-inclusive.

DELEGATE: Question, Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: I'd like to ask Doctor Larsen a question, and that is, in my opinion -- In the first place, I agree with this last speaker that prevention is included. If the matter was referred to the Committee on Style and that committee, we will say, eliminated that phrase on the basis that it was already included within the word "protection," would that satisfy your committee, Dr. Larsen?

LARSEN: That would satisfy us perfectly.

ANTHONY: I second Delegate Heen's motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been seconded.

KING: Well, merely a parliamentary point. The delegate from the fourth district, Delegate Heen, offered it as a suggestion and would offer it as an amendment if it were agreeable. I request that he now make the motion.

HEEN: That's correct; I made it as a suggestion.

CHAIRMAN: Is that correct? I understand it was an amendment.

HEEN: It seems to be agreeable to some of the delegates. I therefore move that the first section of this proposal be amended by striking from the first line, the words "be responsible" and insert in lieu thereof the word "provide"; and delete the words "including preventive measures for all its inhabitants" appearing in the second and third line and insert a period after the word "health." So that as amended, if the amendment is accepted, the section will read, "The State shall provide for the protection and promotion of the public health."

BRYAN: I'd like to second that motion again.

CHAIRMAN: Motion is made and seconded.

TAVARES: Before that motion is voted on, I'd like to move an amendment, that we add at the end of the motion, change the period to a comma, and add the following words: "upon the ground that this amendment does not change the substance of the original provision." So that if we adopt it, it'll be the sense of the Convention that that is the point.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded.

HEEN: That might get into the records by my stating that the amendment proposed by me does not change the meaning of that section.

KAWAHARA: In the original phrasing, the word "inhabitants" is included. As proposed in this amendment, the word "inhabitants" is excluded. Does the amendment tend to change the intent or meaning of that section?

PHILLIPS: The word "public," I believe, covers that there. "Public health" would mean - - the public being everybody, therefore you wouldn't need to specify the people.

TAVARES: In view of the clarification by the proponents, original proponent of the motion, I withdraw my motion to amend upon the understanding that if we vote in favor of this motion, we will be accepting that interpretation of it.

CHAIRMAN: You withdraw your second? The amendment is withdrawn.

ROBERTS: I'd like to talk in support of the proposal up for consideration now on the express understanding that when this matter is reported out from the Committee of the Whole, that that committee report, on the floor, that the intention is not to exclude preventive measures nor to eliminate the idea that it is applicable to all inhabitants.

PHILLIPS: I can't help but feel again that within this one small section there is an enumeration, the promotion, the protection and the prevention. In showing that there are three broad fields of health, it looks to me like it is a memo down to all health officers to remember that there are three broad fields. "To provide for the general health," would, to a health officer who is familiar with what he had to do and was going before a legislature, to get that would state or would be mindful of the fact that all those three are - - must be considered in forming any legislation. Therefore, to put it in, to keep on piling in even in this small section an enumeration of promotion, protection, prevention, you could go on forever, is only to make it more redundant. It is my contention there and I move that - - I move to amend the motion that the protection and promotion be deleted and therefore, it will then read: "The State shall provide for the general - - for the public health," and leave it there for this section. Later on I would like to say, "and well-being or welfare."

CHAIRMAN: Hearing no second to that amendment, are you ready for the question before the house? All those in favor signify by raising their right hand. Motion is carried. Any opposed?

ANTHONY: Section - - the next section - -

KING: Will the gentleman yield just for a minute. As a matter of procedure, is it necessary to adopt the first section as amended, or does the adoption of the amendment automatically adopt the first section as amended? I raise that as a point of information.

HEEN: I think the result of that motion carrying means this, that that section has been amended.

CHAIRMAN: That's the question the Chairman considered was before the House. I don't know.

KING: The question I raised was, does that now adopt the first section as amended?

LARSEN: Wouldn't it expedite matters to wait until all the sections with the amendments have gone through or not gone through and then have one motion to adopt all?

BRYAN: No. I'd like to speak to Dr. Larsen's suggestion. That's going to tie us up in a rather complex argument about whether we agree with the substance of the whole thing or whether we agree with the form of having it in five sections. Therefore, I would like to move that we adopt Section 1 in substance as amended.

ROBERTS: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: I think that is in keeping with our earlier motion that we were going to proceed in that manner. The motion is duly moved and seconded. All those in favor signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Motion is carried.

ANTHONY: I'd like to speak to the second section, and suggest this amendment: "The State shall have the power to," delete the words, "make adequate provision," and insert the word "provide," so that that section will then read: "The State shall have the power to provide for the development of preventive measures for treatment and rehabilitation as well as domiciliary care for mentally and physically handicapped persons who are unable to provide such care." I make that in the form of a motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is that a motion to amend the present proposal?

WHITE: I'll second that.

CROSSLEY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize the second by Delegate White first.

CROSSLEY: There's no motion to amend; there has to be a motion on the section itself before you can move to amend it.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

LARSEN: I move it be adopted as is, and then have the amendment come in.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion is duly made and seconded. Delegate Anthony, would you repeat your amendment?

ANTHONY: I have two amendments to that section. First, I move that the title be deleted to get a new title for that. I think the chairman of the committee has a title.

Second, I move that the substance of the section, the first sentence, be amended to read as follows: "The State shall have the power to provide," and delete the words "make adequate provision," so it will then read: "The State shall have the power to provide for the development" and so on, the rest of the section.

DELEGATE: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment is seconded.

PORTEUS: May I ask the person making this motion whether or not he feels there is an addition to this -- an important addition to this section, by the retention of the words, "for the development of preventive measures"? Would it not cover his idea to say that "The State shall have the power to provide for treatment and rehabilitation as well as domiciliary care," et cetera?

LARSEN: It seems to me again we come up to rather basic principles. If, and I might say this section is quite different from the first section, the first section provides public health for everybody, this second section provides care for those who are unable to provide it themselves, care, treatment. And we hope the program of prevention shall develop to the point where we will not need as much treatment and rehabilitation or domiciliary care as we now have. I feel it's quite broad there.

I would also like to add to the amendment, if I may, that the last line—this also comes from suggestions from delegates—I'd like to add, "who are unable to obtain such service except at public expense." And the title that we're suggesting is, "Care of the Handicapped." I'd also like to explain that "physically handicapped" includes all those who are ill, and that will be made clear in the explanation.

CHAIRMAN: That title is included in your amendment, I take it?

LARSEN: Yes, it was.

TAVARES: I think a clarifying question here is in order. Within the last four years, our legislature did a revolutionary thing; it adopted the principle of caring 100 per cent for tuberculosis patients, whether they were able to provide the expense or not, on the theory that it was a sickness that took such long duration and it was so dangerous that we were justified in incarcerating these people against their will in sanatoriums. As a result of that, in order to prevent the contamination of the public or the -- whatever you want to call it, infection of the public, we were justified in doing so; and as a corollary to that, we said, "Since we are going to compel you to go through this long course of treatment, since the rehabilitation takes a long time, the government is going to stand all the expense, whether you can pay for it or not." I am wondering if this provision is too restrictive to take care of the tuberculosis question. I think it's very important that it be properly cared for.

LARSEN: May I answer that? Under our present laws, tuberculosis is taken care of under Section A. Also, I think the criticism is perhaps valid, but I want to call your attention that a person who is well able to take care -- most people, at least 95 per cent, are unable to take care of one and two years of hospitalization. At the present time, they are allowed to pay what they wish. We have the same at the Territorial Hospital. However, I will accept the fact that that should be clarified, and we hadn't clarified it.

WIST: I think I can speak for the Committee on Health in saying that it is not our intention to exclude provision for tuberculars; therefore, this problem is really a matter of style. Secondly, in my judgment, this question of subtopics, or that titles -- subtitles is also a matter of style, and certainly that was recognized in the Health Committee.

LEE: I'm not sure whether I agree with Delegate Wist as to the matter of style and the matter of substance.

However, I want to ask Dr. Larsen this question, whether or not in providing for this section, entitled the "Care of Handicapped Persons," and in view of the fact we're running into this problem raised by Delegate Tavares, whether or not the first sentence in its broader terms and its broader aspects covers the care of the handicapped persons? It would seem to me that it does. I may be wrong on it.

TAVARES: Just one more thing and then I'll try to subside. It seems to me that, perhaps in their laudable zeal to see that this Constitution is not the Constitution of a so-called welfare state in its worse sense, they have put this qualifying provision, and it seems to me this is one of those qualifying provisions that might be too dangerous. Perhaps it would be better to take the chance that the legislature in this small field would err on the side of over-liberality and take out the qualification, "who are unable to provide such care," so as to just leave it an empowering section. I wonder what the chairman or the members of the committee would think of that. Since the field is so limited—it's only the handicapped— you're not going into too big a field in giving a legislature pretty broad powers, and not limiting it to only those who can't provide. Otherwise you have the question then of to what extent must a person be unable to provide for himself before he falls under the constitutional ban. That's a pretty hard question. If he has two radios, does he have to sell one? If he has a little home, does he have to sell a part of it? Or just how far do you have to go before you say he is unable to provide.

LARSEN: May I answer that? Number one, of course our public welfare, our City and County emergency, is all the time, every day, determining whether you can or cannot provide. That's a standard procedure.

However, I've talked to a few of my committee members here. I'm inclined to go along with Delegate Tavares. I have a feeling it's the one sentence that is perhaps closest to legislation that we have; I would accept that as a second one. However, I would like to make it clear what the intention of this committee was, and accept the fact that we did indicate that this State shall always stand for responsiblity to the State; that whatever rights are granted always go with responsibilities and therefore, if we make that clear, I think this correction would probably eliminate much of the objection to this.

TAVARES: To bring this matter then to a head, I move to amend the existing motion to amend, by adding thereto, a further motion to delete the words, quote, "who are unable to provide such care," unquote.

LARSEN: May I ask, why not delete the whole section? That would be safer.

DELEGATE: I'll second that motion, Mr. Chairman.

TAVARES: Well, if it's the -- With the understanding that by deleting that whole section we are not eliminating the power to take care of this situation under the preceding one which we have already adopted, I think I would -- I will second that motion.

ROBERTS: I think that the deletion of that section raises a question which ought to be discussed on the floor. In committee, the intention was that those individuals who are able to provide for their own care should do so; that those who are unable to provide, then the State had some responsibility toward it, if it is made sufficiently clear in our report as we come out that that is the intention. The suggestion then made by the chairman was for its complete elimination. Now I think it would be preferable to leave that section in, but make it quite clear that the intent is that those who are able and can provide for themselves shall do so, but that does not limit the kind of situation which was presented to us on the matter of tubercular care.

ANTHONY: I think there is a great deal in what both Mr. Tavares and Delegate Roberts have said, and I want to call the Convention's attention to this fact. I stated earlier that the minute you start to enumerate things, you are going to get into trouble. Now here the gist of this trouble is that with the deletion - - the amendment proposed by the delegate on my right, there is a feeling apparently on the part of that committee that that would open the way for socialized medicine. Now we know that that committee is not in favor of it, but that's the very point that I drove at earlier. The minute you start to enumerate these things, you are going to have some interpretation of that kind. Now I think it - - I agree with the chairman of the committee it might be well to delete the entire section on that ground.

CHAIRMAN: Is the motion amended before the house? Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Will you read the motion as it is now amended, the amendment.

KING: The last motion, as I understand it, was to delete the whole section. Is that correct? That was the motion suggested by Dr. Larsen, and I believe seconded by Delegate Tavares.

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

TAVARES: I seconded it. If I didn't, I thought I was seconding it.

KING: As a point of information, the motion that is pending before the Convention is, I believe, a motion to delete the whole section.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. I just want to have it stated to clear up any misunderstanding. I may have - -

HEEN: In deleting that whole section, then that problem included in that section can be taken care of under the general provision of the grant of full legislative power to the legislature. Well, this might not include public - - be included in the matter of public health, because you take a person who is blind, I don't think that is a matter of health; he's a handicapped person. So therefore, this problem here can be taken care of under the broad general grant of power to the legislature.

LARSEN: I have to withdraw my suggestion, as I talk to my committee members here, and I'm reminded of the discussions we had that this is an important section. It has nothing to do with public health, as Senator Heen has suggested, but it does have to do with treatment of a very broad section of people. It's a treatment proposition that's only come in recently in to this whole field of health, but I feel we can cover without - - I don't feel it's spelling it out as long as we indicate this is what its intention is. And remember, we are doing this right now; we're not limiting here, and our last section also makes it clear we don't limit. I would like to merely amend it to include the section, that would - - merely the word that makes it very clear it doesn't mean to limit legislation for certain people who are chronically ill.

KING: I would like to speak in opposition to the motion to delete the section. I'm not sure if I understand Delegate - - Dr. Larsen, the chairman of the committee - -

TAVARES: A point of order. Dr. Larsen has withdrawn his motion and I agreed to the withdrawal.

KING: Then that answers my question. Then the - - May I ask as a point of information, the motion before the Convention now, the Committee of the Whole, is on the amendment to the amendment - -

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

KING: - - to strike out the last few words, "who are unable to provide such care." Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: Is that correct, Clerk?

KING: If the sponsor of the original amendment accepts that amendment, then we have only the one motion before the Committee of the Whole, that is, to change the title to "Care of the Handicapped," and to have the section read, "The State shall have the power to provide for the development of preventive measures for treatment and rehabilitation as well as domiciliary care for mentally and physically handicapped persons," period. Is that correct?

DELEGATE: Question.

PHILLIPS: I would like to move that we further amend that section by - - in lieu of that section that we attach to Section 1 above, "and general welfare." I repeat that, that in lieu of Section 2 or B that all that be included in the two words by attaching to the "1" above, "and general welfare." "Public health and general welfare." Section above, our Section 1, and just put "and welfare," or "general welfare."

CHAIRMAN: Hearing no second - -

LARSEN: It seems to me we've gotten a little bit off the beam here. As soon as we leave this wide open, it does spell out no limitation at all. The committee felt very keenly that there should be limitation here, that we believe that there is a very great danger to the feeling that a great mass of the people of a community shall have complete benefits without working for them, actually. Now, perhaps if the committee members agree, as long as we make that clear in our explanation, that the intention is merely to provide such care for those who are unable to obtain such service except at public expense, that thought, I feel, is extremely important, and I still feel it can be clarified.

CHAIRMAN: Hearing no - -

KAUHANE: I would like to be somewhat clarified on some of the matters that were brought up in the discussion. I feel that the committee's intention is to provide treatment or rehabilitation for people who are mentally and physically handicapped. I'm also wondering whether or not the committee's intention is to take care of people who qualify as mentally ill, as well as those who are physically handicapped, as expressed by Delegate Heen when he said blind persons are classified as physically handicapped; or whether the words "mentally and physically handicapped" means that an individual must meet such requirements, he must be physically handicapped and mentally ill before such provisions shall be granted him by the State in this care, and also for treatment and rehabilitation.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Chairman, would you like to answer that?

LARSEN: In our explanation, I had this added note under handicapped, because somebody raised the question, "which includes all those who are incapacitated by illness or from other cause." As far as the "mentally and," it could read perhaps "mentally or." I think it would be perhaps clearer to the delegate from fifth district. I think, perhaps that would make the intention much clearer.

KAUHANE: I'm only trying to help those who may have to qualify under the requirements in order that they may be given such aid by the State, and I think the word "and" is rightfully used, but I think it should also read "or/and." That will take care of the people and groups of people that the committee intents to take care of.

TAVARES: The word "and/or," although we lawyers are using it, is one of the abortions of modern legal terminology, and we want to get away from it as far as possible. I think the word "or" will take care of the situation because it can then mean "or/and" in itself. If one is either physically or mentally handicapped, he comes within the definition. If he is both, he still comes within the definition. So I think the word "or" will cover the situation.

Now to bring that to a final head, I move then that the section in question be amended to read as follows: "The State shall have the power to provide for the development of preventive measures for treatment and rehabilitation as well as domiciliary care for mentally or physically handicapped persons."

And in that connection, I would like to say that if the chairman of the committee feels that by eliminating the provision about people unable to provide such care we are doing something that we shouldn't do, then the proper motion is to move that that section be referred back to the committee for further report and amendment.

SILVA: It would seem to me that about the only thing that's necessary in that section would be this, it should read thus: "The State shall have the power to provide for the development, treatment, rehabilitation as well as domiciliary care for mental and physical," without the words "preventive measures." Seems to me that you're going to buy a man a pair of crutches before he breaks his leg; that's what you are going to do.

ASHFORD: May I ask the chairman of the Health Committee a question? Isn't it the contention of modern psychiatrists and psychologists that we are all mentally handicapped?

LARSEN: I think the modern conception is that Democrats think that all Republicans are mentally handicapped and all Republicans, Democrats are. But, Mr. Chairman, could I speak to this?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Larsen still has the floor.

LARSEN: Who has the floor? Do I have the floor?

CHAIRMAN: You do.

LARSEN: It seems to me the question of preventive, of course, is entire -- The new concept of today is, let's prevent these things that have handicapped the State so much in the past. It has nothing to do with treatment and rehabilitation. We hope as we look forward, eventually, if we use enough of the preventive measures, we won't need either treatment or rehabilitation. That's really a sound concept, I believe.

But when we leave out, "persons who are unable to obtain such care" except at public expense, now maybe the legislators feel that that can't be misinterpreted, but to me that would be a very dangerous sentence in our present economic stage.

HEEN: If you leave that provision in there, or rather that clause, "who are unable to provide such care," then you might not be able to take care of tubercular people without expense, without providing for their own care, because a tubercular person is a person who is physically handicapped.

LARSEN: I think we answered that in that we added the provision, "shall not interfere with the care of the chronically ill."

SILVA: I move we defer action on this section, go on with the next section, and when proper corrections are made to this section, we carry on.

ANTHONY: I'd like to second Mr. Tavares' motion. It hasn't been acted upon, and I second it. In seconding it, I think we should -- I would like to make the statement [that] by the deletion of the words, "unable to provide such care" -- "who are unable to provide such care," it is not the sense of this Convention that we are therefore opening, and thereby opening the door to socialized medicine, but we are simply not attempting to curtail the powers of the legislature in certain specified fields. I think with that explanation, it would satisfy the medical profession.

LARSEN: All right, we accept.

DOWSON: Question. I'd like to ask Mr. Tavares to repeat the amendment, the clarification.

TAVARES: By way of amendment to the original motion, I move that Section B be amended to read as follows -- What was the subtitle? "Care of Handicapped." "Care of the Handicapped," that's the subtitle. That the section itself be amended to read as follows, quote, "The State shall have the power to provide for the development of preventive measures for treatment and rehabilitation as well as domiciliary care for mentally or physically handicapped persons," period, unquote.

DELEGATE: Since it wasn't seconded before, I now second that motion.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask the delegate from the fourth who just made that motion, if he would consider a further amendment to specify "mentally ill or physically handicapped"? Is that in there now? I beg your pardon.

Mr. Tavares, I'd like to ask him a question. Would you consider a further amendment to put the words "mentally ill" rather than "mentally or physically handicapped"? "Mentally ill or physically handicapped"?

TAVARES: I would accept that. I'll accept it. Will the seconder accept that?

CHAIRMAN: Does Dr. Larsen --

TAVARES: I wonder what the chairman of the --

LARSEN: Well, I feel it's an extra word. When a person is mentally ill, he's certainly mentally handicapped, even in the terms of --

PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares has the floor.

TAVARES: Well, in view of the statement of the chairman of the committee, who is also a physician, then I would like to ask the person who suggested the word "mentally ill," to withdraw that and delete from my motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan, will you withdraw that?

BRYAN: It wasn't an amendment of your motion and I refuse to withdraw my suggestion.

TAVARES: Well, then, may I withdraw my acceptance of the motion -- of the suggestion.

RICHARDS: I think there is considerable difference between being "mentally handicapped" and "mentally ill." Personally, I feel mentally handicapped in dealing with the "Supreme Court" over here in some of the problems in the discussions, but I certainly don't think I'm mentally ill.

PHILLIPS: The word "handicapped" has been bothering us a great deal and I had a chance to refer to Webster, and he said that it was "any disadvantage that renders achievement more difficult." Now I would like to ask the Convention, wouldn't that include colds, itch, arthritis, hangovers, or almost anything that would render us all a little bit less - more difficult of achievement?

LARSEN: That's okay. And if somebody has an itch that handicaps him and he can't pay for help, I think the State should help him and the State helps him right now.

CHAIRMAN: Question before the house. Are you ready for the question?

CASTRO: I have a question about wording here, of the chairman. The second line, "preventive measures for treatment and rehabilitation." Does "preventive measures" refer to rehabilitation or should it be "for preventive measures" comma "for treatment and rehabilitation" comma "as well as domiciliary care"? That's not quite clear to me. That's -- it's not a matter of style, I don't think, because it could very well be a confusing point if someone were to believe the "measure" referred to "rehabilitation."

LARSEN: We did have -- suggested rather, a comma after "development of preventive measures" comma "for treatment and rehabilitation" comma "as well as domiciliary care."

CASTRO: Well, then, I suggest that that be added to the amendment, if that's acceptable to the --

MIZUHA: I rise to a point of information before the question is put. There was a delegate in the fourth district who made a second to the motion with the understanding that it was this; he was seconding the motion to exclude socialized medicine. Now I'm just wondering whether that is part of the record and the understanding of the -- in the acceptance of the motion as originally put. Now, doesn't -- I, as a delegate here, I believe that we cannot exclude that sort of thing when the first section is all inclusive. If in future generations we find that is the desirable thing to promote the general health, the public health of the community and the State, I believe just by that insertion of a remark in the record to foreclose legislation on the part of the State to promote the public health will be something that the future State legislatures will be confronted with and will hamstring the legislature in promoting the first section of this article. I want that clear before the delegates of the Convention, in accepting this second section that they are voting for something that will permanently hamstring the legislature of the State of Hawaii as far as the first section is concerned in the promotion of public health, and it's a point -- it's a constitutional point which must be argued before we accept the second section, if that second and the condition to that second is inserted in the records.

ANTHONY: The purpose of my making the statement that I did was in order to satisfy members of the medical profession that by the deletion of the words, "who are unable to care for themselves," we were not thereby making an expression, an affirmative expression that this Convention was authorizing any socialized medicine. In other words, I wanted to put their fears at rest. If at some future date a legislature, a hundred years from now, would desire to go into a socialized state and socialized medicine, then of course, under the general powers of legislation which will be incorporated in the Constitution, there would be ample power to do just that.

MIZUHA: Then it is my understanding that the first section will grant -- will be the constitutional provision upon which that future State legislature may legislate for that type of a program, if the public health of the state so deems it necessary. Thank you.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe we've been wasting a lot of time --

CHAIRMAN: I agree.

FUKUSHIMA: -- without following the rules. I believe Mr. Heen and myself, in introducing or offering our amendments, were the only two delegates who followed the rule as to put in writing all amendments to any proposal.

KAUHANE: Mr. Chairman. Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Wait, he hasn't finished. Fukushima still has the floor.

KAUHANE: Will you yield the floor, Mr. Delegate? Mr. Chairman, he having yielded the floor, I think it is only proper then, upon the reading of the rule by the delegate from the fifth district, that this proposal be recommitted to the Committee on Health for further study.

PHILLIPS: Second that motion.

TAVARES: Point of order. I don't think the point of order is well taken. We are sitting in Committee of the Whole. Everything we do here is advisory. There will be no amendment of this section until we have come in -- back in to the full meeting of the Convention, and at that time, there will be a written report of the Committee of the Whole which will have those written amendments. So that in my opinion, and I submit that's correct, there is no requirement now that in Committee of the Whole we place these amendments in writing.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe when the rules were drafted specifically we did include Rules for the Constitutional Convention of Hawaii 1950. I am referring specifically to Rule 59.

CHAIRMAN: I think, Mr. Fukushima, Rule 23, "All amendments made to proposals, reports, resolutions and other matters submitted to the Committee of the Whole shall be noted and reported."

SILVA: To prevent the arguments over that point, I move we suspend the rules and now that we go into Committee of the Whole --

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion --

CROSSLEY: I move that the committee now rise, report --

SILVA: Mr. Chairman, there is a motion before the house. Motion has been made and seconded the rules be suspended and it's been duly seconded.

CHAIRMAN: I think the motion to rise is always in order.

CROSSLEY: It's always in order. Committee rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again.

MIZUHA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion signify by saying "aye."

PHILLIPS: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Opposed? So moved.

LARSEN: What's the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon?

PHILLIPS: What was the motion, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Motion was to rise, report progress, beg leave to sit again. Carried.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole will come to order. Please make yourselves comfortable.

To clarify the situation as it stands at the present moment, there is a motion duly seconded before the committee to adopt in substance the second section of the proposal. There is an amendment which has been seconded and that amendment reads -- it's in two parts, the first part is that the title shall be changed to "Care of the Handicapped." The section shall read, "The State shall have the power to provide for the development of preventive measures, for treatment and rehabilitation, as well as domiciliary care for mentally or physically handicapped persons." That amendment was made by Mr. Tavares and has been seconded. We start from that point.

LARSEN: I'm going to ask Mr. Anthony if perhaps he wouldn't be willing to accept the amendment as it was reworded during the recess lunch hour. The title, "The Care of the Handicapped," and then it shall read as it was passed out to you: "The State shall have the power to provide for the development of preventive measures, and for treatment and rehabilitation as well as domiciliary care for mentally or physically handicapped persons whose resources are inadequate to provide the same." The group who were talking felt if we didn't put that in, any small pressure group could demand sudden community expense that they otherwise couldn't have. And it seemed to me it was so all-inclusive that it wasn't restrictive in any way.

I wanted to answer the delegate from Kauai, that we tried very hard not to put in a restrictive clause, that if sometime in the future, be it the legislature or the people, if they want a medical-welfare state, they're going to have it whether we write it here or not. I don't think that's the important point. The point is we're trying to indicate here those things that we believe in as a principle in the care of our sick people.

May I clarify a little more, also clarifying Mr. Tavares' point, that the question of the care of tuberculosis and so on comes under Section A. That's a provision that takes care of everybody. The tuberculosis or infected people out in the community are - - the rest of the people have to be protected against them. I didn't make that clear. Section B takes care of those - - all those others who might be even temporarily sick. If, may I ask - - we could expedite it perhaps if Mr. Anthony would accept that as an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to point out that it's Delegate Tavares' amendment.

LARSEN: Well, as I understood it, you said there was an amendment that had been seconded on the floor regarding this section and I think Mr. Anthony made that amendment. Now, either - - I'm not asking him to do anything, of course, against his desire, which I know he wouldn't do anyway, but I was just wondering if he agreed on this second one, then perhaps he'd be willing to withdraw his first.

CHAIRMAN: The record shows that the amendment is by Delegate Tavares and not Delegate Anthony.

TAVARES: I accept the amendment to the motion which I originally made. I think as the last speaker read it, he didn't read it exactly as stated in the written revision which we have before us, but it was substantially correct. He put in one "the" where it doesn't exist in the present draft. I just want to make that clear because we are recording this argument along with the consideration of the written amendment.

As I understand it now, it is the opinion of the chairman of the Health Committee that under Section A, which we have already tentatively approved, the treatment of tuberculosis patients would be taken care of, that it is a part of the protection of the public health. I am willing to accept that; I think in the broadest sense of the term that is correct. Under those circumstances, it would not be necessary to remove the exception which I tried to remove from Section B.

CROSSLEY: May I ask one of the associates of the "Supreme Court," what difference is there in the language, "who are unable to provide such care," which the delegate from the fourth district moved awhile ago to delete, and, "persons whose resources are inadequate to provide the same," which he now accepts.

TAVARES: It seems to me that there might be this difference. The word "resources" I think, is quite frequently used in connection with assistance to various groups of persons who are now being assisted either for health or other reasons, and "resources" include the resources available from your relatives as well as yourself, whereas the other thing might be interpreted to mean that you yourself can't furnish the service.

CROSSLEY: Then may I ask further—and this is not facetious—how do you determine? I mean, I was in favor of the deletion of the section because I thought that it was something that was very difficult to determine. How do you determine this then; is it as determined by law or does there have to be another statutory provision to go along to make this operate?

LARSEN: May I answer that for Mr. Tavares? This has been done right along. There's no difficulty about that. We have boards, we have people today getting all kinds of assistance. We are merely - - that part I can assure you has been done so many times that we don't need any more statutes. This is actually recording progress and recording our philosophy in the care of people who are sick and unable - - who can't find resources sufficient to take care of it themselves.

ANTHONY: I think in answer to the delegate from Kauai's question, you've got to take a look at this section and see what you are endeavoring to accomplish. As I read this section, this does not deposit any grant of power in the legislature. All this is, is a declaration, as Mr. Larsen - - Dr. Larsen has put it, of a recorded advance in this specific field; and so whether we have this language or have not the language in the section, it would not curtail the power of the legislature to provide legislative programs. Obviously, this is not a piece of legislation, and if anything is done in pursuance of this declared policy, it would require implementation by statutes. I think that's basic in this discussion here.

In other words, we're not dealing with an added grant of power. We're simply stating a position in the legislative article, and the basic question is whether you want to state those things in the legislative article or do you want to leave it general. I think we should make it clear that we are not endeavoring to restrict the legislature in any regard by this particular section.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to point out that Dr. Larsen made an amendment to Mr Tavares' former amendment which has not been seconded. Mr. Tavares' amendment is still before the house.

ROBERTS: The motion is seconded.

TAVARES: I thought that I had accepted the amendment, which I think took care of the lack of a second.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

PHILLIPS: In regard to the word "resources," I wonder if we can be assured in the future that the future legislators or the court will interpret the word "resources" in the same manner that Delegate Tavares did. I have a feeling that they wouldn't do that.

TAVARES: I can give the delegate the same assurance of change or lack of change that I can give him about the interpretation of the meaning of "unlawful searches and seizures." It has changed over the years and it might change again as the United States Supreme Court or the courts decide it. There is no such thing as absolute certainty, but I do believe it lays down a standard which within certain reasonable limit the courts can follow in determining whether a law complies with this provision or not.

PHILLIPS: Then I would like to ask the delegate from the fourth district if he believes that his analogy is good in making the one word "resources" analogous to the long phrase that he gave, which is a whole doctrine of law. What I mean is that there are certain words that have been interpreted right straight down, such as the word "provide" which you have a great deal of [inaudible] on it and you can rest assured by using that term you will get a given effect out of it. If we confine ourselves to those terms, we can assure that we will get what we want by putting it in here. If we don't, then we'll have to throw it open to the courts to interpret in the future as they see fit.

LARSEN: I would accept very well both Anthony's and Tavares' explanation here, and especially, I think, Mr. Anthony made it very clear that this is actually recording here what we hope for; but notice, "The State shall have the power to provide." We assume a legislature in the future will now make statutes to cover this philosophy.

PHILLIPS: And then in regard to that, I'd like to point out to Delegate Larsen that he further said that since it only says that the legislators "will have the power to provide," meaning that they - - it is entirely up to their discretion to use it or not, and that therefore, he would have much difficulty convincing them to use this because they would not have to use it. And he also pointed out that because of that it would be ineffectual unless the legislators acted. Therefore, why put it into the Constitution at all because they have that power anyway if it isn't in there?

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is the amendment which I'll read.

HEEN: I would like to ask the chairman of the Health Committee just what is meant by this language, "The State shall have power to provide for the development of preventive measures for mentally or physically handicapped persons"? What is meant by that language, "preventive measures for mentally or physically handicapped persons"?

LARSEN: Preventive measures are coming more and more into vogue. We now, for instance, know that a great many people who are mentally handicapped and badly handicapped so they cannot even earn a living, if we applied certain preventive measures in their childhood, later on through life, environmental and otherwise, much of this that we now keep in the hospitals could be prevented. It's the idea that we should emphasize the preventive program just as well as the hospital care. That's the intent.

HEEN: May I ask this pointed question? Rather, may I ask the speaker to illustrate one preventive measure for a mentally handicapped person?

LARSEN: I would give you perhaps two or three. One, for instance, there are certain things that will blind the child. If we put in certain preventive measures, we can prevent that blindness.

From the standpoint of mental, for instance, we now know about certain repressive things in a child's environment. They have in certain schools, for instance on the mainland, they have psychiatric help that they feel quite sure prevents mental breakdowns later on. The whole preventive program is the hope of the future.

But if some of the men wondered, does that mean sterilization program, I feel it has nothing to do with that. If sometime in the future, the community or the legislature feels that such a program would be important, perhaps it could be worked in, but there's nothing inhibitive here, and there's nothing suggestive to produce such a program.

That's why I feel we're leaving it so wide open that the legislature can go along this way, but it does give them the right to develop what is coming more and more into vogue, a preventive program for these various conditions that formerly we kept endlessly in the hospitals.

PORTEUS: I had some question on that that was raised by my colleague from the fourth district, the development of preventive measures for mentally handicapped persons. If the person is mentally handicapped, it isn't preventive measures, it's treatment that they need. Preventive measures, therefore, are designed, I thought, to stop something from occurring. So it seems to me that that is an inappropriate modification, "preventive measures for mentally or physically handicapped persons." If you want to say "preventive measures in order to prevent people from becoming mentally or physically handicapped," I might agree with the good doctor; but it seems to me once those people are mentally or physically handicapped, then it's treatment, not preventive care that's necessary.

LARSEN: I think he is correct. The intent was there but I think he's correct. I think that if you may, and since the intent was there, I think a very short rewording would cover that, and I think perhaps the Styles would correct it so as to carry that meaning.

DELEGATE: No.

LARSEN: No? All right, then we'll do it right here.

CHAIRMAN: Five minute recess while they reword that.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole come to order.

TAVARES: I wish to withdraw my motion for amendment with the consent of the second.

LARSEN: I so do.

KING: In consultation with the chairman and other members of the Committee on Health and Public Welfare, and with Delegate Tavares, we have agreed that the following language covers the purpose of this section and I offer it as an amendment to the existing language.

[Part of speech not on tape.] . . . and proposed in the amendment offered by Delegate Tavares which has now been withdrawn. That is, it will be - - the section will be entitled "Care of the Handicapped." The section will read: "The State shall have power to provide for treatment and rehabilitation, as well as domiciliary care, for mentally or physically handicapped persons." Now, in support of that language, I personally feel that the grant of this power to the legislature carries with it the authority to engage in preventive measures and also carries with it, by implication or even by the greater grant of power than other sections of the Constitution, the authority to limit this care to those who are unable to provide it for themselves. So I feel that the purpose of the committee is carried out by this briefer language, and would like to offer it for adoption in place of the existing language.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the motion and the second. Is there any discussion?

PHILLIPS: Would you repeat that motion, please?

CHAIRMAN: Will the Clerk read the motion please, the amendment rather.

KING: The language would be "Care of the Handicapped. The State shall have power to provide for treatment and rehabilitation, as well as domiciliary care, for mentally or physically handicapped persons."

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the amendment. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Passed.

I will now entertain a motion - -

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 2 in substance.

CHAIRMAN: Section 2 as amended.

BRYAN: As amended. Correct.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is duly made and seconded. All those in favor signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Passed.

LAI: I would like to have a clarification on the words "provisions" and "persons" in this section. Does the word "provisions" mean social security, mean old-age pensions, or pension for the disabled veterans, or institutions who care for the same? And the word "persons," does that take in unemployed people, too?

ANTHONY: I'd like to move an amendment that will take care of delegate's - -

CROSSLEY: Which one is he on, C?

ANTHONY: They are on C.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order. There's no motion to adopt C yet, so it can't be amended.

ANTHONY: Well, for that purpose I'll move for the adoption of C.

LARSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

LARSEN: And may I add the amendment. Have you got this amendment?

ANTHONY: I am now moving the amendment. I move that C be amended to read as follows: "The State shall have the power to provide," and then we would delete the words "be authorized to make provisions," and continuing, "The State shall have the power to provide for persons unable to maintain a standard of living compatible with decency and health" period, and delete the remainder of the sentence.

BRYAN: I'll second that motion to amend.

CHAIRMAN: Motion is seconded.

FONG: I want to further amend that by striking out the words "Social Security" and adding the word "Public Relief," I mean word - -

CHAIRMAN: You mean as the title?

FONG: "Social Security" and add the words "Public Relief." I think this is really public relief rather than social security.

CHAIRMAN: You are referring to the title?

FONG: The title, yes.

LARSEN: May I suggest, we are trying to leave out words like "relief" and "handout," "Lady Bountiful." We're trying to express it in terms, and why we left out "public relief" was the feeling that relief has gotten the connotation of Lady Bountiful throwing out a nickel, whereas what we wanted was a sound policy of state that those who are handicapped, if they are helped, will again become good citizens. I mean that was the idea of "social security."

PHILLIPS: I second Delegate Fong's motion - - the amendment to the motion.

AKAU: May I ask the delegate from the fourth district, the "Bar Association," as to the difference between "have the power to provide" and "be authorized to make provisions"? Delegate Anthony had made that change and I wonder if he would clarify it because I just wonder if there is a difference.

ANTHONY: The amendment is a little shorter and is in conformity with the section that immediately precedes it.

TAVARES: May I again add a word of caution that I added before and I think it's being forgotten, and that is, it is very dangerous to depend on subtitles to determine meaning. They should not have a determining effect on the meaning of the provisions, and therefore, I think they are very immaterial. I think it should be left largely to the Committee on Style, with the understanding that the subtitles should not control the interpretation.

FONG: Under those circumstances I'll withdraw my motion, but actually it is not social relief. It is social and economic relief rather than social relief, and I hope the Committee on Style will consider that.

CHAIRMAN: You withdraw your amendment?

ASHFORD: What is the difference, if I may ask the chairman of the Health Committee, between "the legislature" and "the State"? Does he mean by - - does the committee mean by "the State" more or less than the legislature? Can other functionaries of the State aside from the legislature make these provisions, in the opinion of the Chairman?

LARSEN: Our thinking in that was that the State was a little broader, but we don't know. Some time in the future perhaps the governor would be the State or somebody else.

DELEGATE: Heaven forbid.

LARSEN: Yes, I know. I'm not saying it will be, I'm just giving a very vague supposition. You see our response here. Well, that's very healthy.

But the point was, and I will turn to them and just say, isn't it true that the term "the State" possibly has a little broader connotation than "the legislature"? The committee is not adamant on either one. If the group prefers "legislature," I'm sure we would go along.

LEE: I think Delegate Ashford has raised a very good point. There should be only one branch of government who would be able to provide for this clause, health and general welfare, and that's the legislature. I think we are using the terms here instead of using "the State" in order to preclude Congress from construing our Constitution as meaning that we are implying a possibility of a dictatorship government in a new State of Hawaii, that we'd better use the word "legislature."

A. TRASK: I think the chairman of the Committee on Health is correct. "The State" is the proper term. Obviously, the State is composed of the legislature plus the governor. He has the right of veto. Now, this doesn't leave him out of the picture even though certain persons of us must have some certain ideas. It is the State, and it's a cooperative situation that affects the passage of a bill, an act, which would provide public health for this purpose.

ASHFORD: I disagree with the delegate from the fifth. I don't think the State is composed of the governor and the legislature. We have three branches of government in our government setup. And as a second point, I suggest that the Constitution of the United States, which after all is the form of all constitutions, provides that "the Congress shall have power" and so forth.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe the word "State" is correct because we may still have the initiative.

TAVARES: Again I think we're straining at gnats. This is obviously a provision that has got to be given effect by legislation. When the legislature provides that, then all the agencies of the State will follow that law and the State will be providing what this provision says it will do; and in that respect, I think it's sufficient and definite enough.

PHILLIPS: I was reminded by another of my colleagues from the fourth district that when you say "State," you include all the branches of government; therefore, you include the executive. Then he, through his executive orders, could issue out something, and then there would be a danger here, in my mind, that a governor, being elected, might use this to make himself look a little good rather than really for the purposes that we intended it to be provided for.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to ask a question of the chairman on this committee. "The State shall be authorized to make provisions for persons," does that refer to those mentally or physically handicapped? If so, should it be repeated?

LARSEN: This section is entirely different. The previous one, B, has to do with ill and handicapped. This group has to do with those who are unable to live on the level of decency capable of maintaining health. If we don't give them care, they will undoubtedly slip into B, but we are hoping by these preventive measures to prevent them from becoming ill. I think the two are two entirely different groups of people. That's our thinking.

CHAIRMAN: There is an amendment before the house. Are you ready for the question? All those in - -

WIRTZ: Point of information. I don't think all the delegates got the full amendment. Could we have the amendment read again, please?

CHAIRMAN: Will Delegate Anthony restate his amendment.

ANTHONY: I'll read it as it's proposed to be amended. "The State shall have power to provide for persons unable to maintain a standard of living compatible with decency and health."

CHAIRMAN: You ready for the question? All those in favor of the amendment say "aye." All opposed. The ayes have it.

The motion is in order to move the passage of this section.

BRYAN: I move that we accept Section 3 in substance as amended.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that we accept Section 3 in substance. All those in favor indicate by saying "aye." All opposed. Passed.

Ready to go to Section 4.

DOWSON: I move for the adoption of Section 4.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded.

HEEN: I move that the words "its political subdivisions" be deleted, "and" - - the word "and its political subdivisions" be deleted.

TAVARES: I second the motion. The reason for this - -

SAKAKIHARA: Point of information. Will the Delegate from the fourth district at large explain the reason of the deletion of "its political subdivisions"?

HEEN: If you have that in there, then by leaving that same phrase out from the other provisions, it might be implied that no political subdivision can deal with health or other matters.

LARSEN: The committee members accepted that amendment.

TAVARES: A further explanation. By the words "The State may provide for" and so forth "slum clearance," that leaves it open for the State through the legislature to authorize the subdivisions to do this. You don't need to put them in specifically.

SAKAKIHARA: I now move that Section 4 as amended be adopted.

CHAIRMAN: Wait, there's an amendment before the house. Will you - -

RICHARDS: I would like to ask a question of the chairman of the committee as to why this should now read, "The State may provide," instead of following the language of the other sections, "The State shall have the power to provide"?

AKAU: I think "may" is permissive. There may be a time, either ten years hence or sooner than that, when we'll have no slum areas and no substandard housing, so it gives a - - it doesn't mean it's mandatory with the "shall" and the "must," but a permissive thing which is a little bit different since rehabilitation and substandard housing and that sort of thing isn't exactly like public health or general welfare or that sort of thing.

BRYAN: I think that the words, "The State shall have the power to provide" are equally as permissive as the word "may," and in view of keeping these consistent, I would like to further amend the motion to include that wording.

ANTHONY: I accept that amendment. I might point out to the delegate from the fifth district that as amended that is permissive. You compare that with Section A which we have already adopted. That is mandatory. Now when you say that "The State shall have the power to provide for," then that is simply a direction to the legislature in its discretion in the future to provide or not to provide, but the other is mandatory, Section A.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, read the section as amended now. Delegate Heen.

HEEN: I withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: So ordered.

HEEN: Amend the section to read as follows: "The State shall have the power to provide for or assist in slum clearance and rehabilitation of substandard areas, including housing for persons of low income."

ROBERTS: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Who seconded that? Delegate Roberts, did you second that amendment?

ROBERTS: Yes.

CASTRO: May I ask a question of the chairman of the Committee on Health, the intent of the words, "assist in"?

LARSEN: The reason for that was, and we gave it in an explanation that we made, the interpretation of "provide for or assist in" would permit the legislature to make appropriate laws allowing for, for instance, tax immunity for a certain number of years to private corporations who may be able to help in this work. A good example of this, for instance, was in New York City when the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company cleared certain slums and built apartment houses for low rental use available to people of moderate income. We believe that this section allows the legislature to pass appropriate enabling acts to cover such assistance.

CASTRO: I gather then that the intent is one regarding tax exemptions rather than outright grants and participation in private enterprise through grants of money. Is that correct?

LARSEN: Could be either, as I read it.

AKAU: May I ask the gentleman from the fourth district to - - ask him if he feels that "slum clearance" is not the same as "substandard areas." If we use the word "substandard areas," isn't the implication that there are slums? The reason I say that is that to some people the word "slums" has a very peculiar sound. If this goes to many states in the Union and people read it, I'm wondering if they are going to feel that Hawaii is full of slums or that sort of thing. I just raise that question about the word "slums" as being also the same as "substandard areas."

LARSEN: I believe truth can never be put under the table. I believe when we look at a thing, look it straight in the eye. We have slums. Let's say we have come to the point where we're going to get rid of them, and we also believe we can assist people in low areas to live more decently and prevent the development of future slums. I don't feel that we should -- I don't like the word pussy-foot, but I mean something along that line.

SAKAKIHARA: Correct. I wish to second the motion to adopt the amendment proposed by Senator Heen.

CHAIRMAN: It has been seconded.

MAU: I just want a point of information. In the deletion from this section of the words "political subdivisions," there is no understanding amongst the delegates that cities, even though not mentioned here and even if not directly authorized by the legislature, would be prohibited from taking into the field of activities including slum clearance, because all of the big mainland cities are doing it now. I want a clarification on that.

TAVARES: I think if that section stands, it will be up to the rest of the Constitution, in case there is a home rule provision that's broad enough, or else up to the legislature by general legislation or specific legislation, depending on what we decide to do about local government, to provide that. I don't think it prohibits the legislature from allowing counties to do so. In fact, it permits the legislature to do that, and unless and until we have laid down a policy of how much home rule we are going to give to the subdivisions, which I think is a separate question, I think it would be inadvisable to try to decide it here. Otherwise, we'd be deciding home rule, it seems to me, through the back door.

SAKAKIHARA: I move for the previous question.

DELEGATE: I second the motion. I also ask for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the previous question, signify by saying "aye." Opposed.
All in favor of the amendment signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Passed.

BRYAN: I move for the adoption of Section 4 in substance as amended.

CHAIRMAN: Any second?

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Second is recognized. All in favor signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Passed.

DOWSON: I move for the adoption of Section 5.

IHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded.

LARSEN: There is a very strong suggestion here of an amendment, and the amendment is this. Again coming back to what's been argued here that public sightliness and good order is the intent here, some of our lawyer friends again showed if we left it as it was, we would say something like this, "The State shall have power to conserve and develop public highways and beaches." That was not our intent at all. Our intent was, and it's supported by a great deal of interest in this, that "The State shall have the power to conserve and develop objects," and so on, natural beauty, parks, highways, beaches, in the interest of public good order and sightliness. And I would like to move the amendment, "in the interest of public good order and sightliness."

ROBERTS: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts seconds the motion.

LARSEN: I'll read the whole section. "The State shall have the power to conserve and develop objects and places of historic and cultural interest and the natural beauty, park public highways and beaches, in the interest of public good order and sightliness." "Public sightliness and good order, yes, that was it. I read it backwards. I'm probably left-handed.

KELLERMAN: May I ask a question of Dr. Larsen?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

KELLERMAN: This morning, did you not suggest to change the word "interest" to "importance"?

LARSEN: Yes, I did, and if you want to move that amend ment, why that's O.K.

KELLERMAN: I move that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Will you repeat --

KELLERMAN: I move to amend the motion made by Dr. Larsen. For further amendment, the word "interest" appearing on the second line be deleted and in lieu thereof the word "importance" used. "Historic" -- and it would read "historic and cultural importance" rather than "historic and cultural interest."

CHAIRMAN: I understood the doctor to say that he accepted that amendment. Is that correct?

HEEN: I'd like to make this contribution to this discussion. Just wondering whether or not that section might read as follows: "The State shall have the power to conserve and develop the natural beauty, historic associations, sightliness and physical good order of the state, and to that end private property shall be subject to reasonable regulation and contro

LARSEN: I think that comes from the Model Constitution and the committee discussed that at length. We believe that the legislature had the power to condemn and so on and so forth, and, therefore, didn't need to be stated. After much discussion, we felt that it was better to put the clause which Senator Heen has suggested at the end rather than at the beginning. We feel it's largely a question of wording and the one that Senator Heen just read is a little bit longer than the one that we have. I think the intent is exactly the same.

HEEN: As it now reads, that section does not extend to the regulation and control of private property. As I understand, the idea was to prevent perhaps unsightly billboards which are placed on private property. It's not a question of eminent domain at all.

LARSEN: Well, again, I would bow to -- if that isn't the meaning, the intent was there and the explantory notes show the intent was there. Our feeling was when "The State shall have the power to conserve and develop," that it seems to m that gives the legislature full power, eminent domain or any other of the things that are necessary to control the thing we are after.

TAVARES: I think that we can probably save a little time if we take another little short recess and let these gentlemen talk it over among themselves. I move for a short recess subject to the call of the Chair.

BRYAN: Before we recess, I want to give one thought out that you might dwell on while you recess, that is, the "power to conserve and develop . . . public highways and beaches in the interest of good order and sightliness," I don't think conveys quite the thought. I think there's a fine point. I think that "conserve and develop the order and sightliness" should be inserted before the word "public highways and beaches."

CHAIRMAN: I suggest that Mr. --

BRYAN: Does the chairman of the committee get my point?

LARSEN: Yes, I think I did.

CHAIRMAN: I suggest that Mr. Bryan take that up with the committee during the recess. There's no second for a recess.

BRYAN: I second the motion to recess.

CHAIRMAN: Five minute recess is declared.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The committee will come to order.

LARSEN: I withdraw my amendment and turn it over to Senator Heen.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize Senator Heen.

SAKAKIHARA: I object.

HEEN: I move that this section be amended to read as follows:

> The State shall have power to conserve and develop its natural beauty, objects and places of historic interest, sightliness and physical good order, and for that purpose private property shall be subject to reasonable regulation and control.

I move the adoption of the amendment.

BRYAN: I suggest that that be printed for each delegate and in the meantime we consider Section 6.

LARSEN: Could I ask -- Senator Heen, a moment. Senator Heen, would you mind, because it was suggested on a number [of occasions] and it was shown that it might be important, that where you have "historic," just add the word "historic and cultural interest"? We are thinking of things, for instance, like the Academy of Arts, a very marked cultural thing that we might want to assist.

HEEN: I accept the amendment.

NIELSEN: I would like to ask Delegate Heen a question. Would that so regulate private property so that the legislature would feel that they had an O. K. to restrict you as to the type of sign or the size of the sign you put on your building?

HEEN: I think it would.

NIELSEN: Oh, I think that would be kind of invading private rights, wouldn't it, of the citizens?

HEEN: Well, if it is invading private rights, the court would hold that invalid. There are things where private right give way to public interest.

ANTHONY: I'd like to answer that further for the benefit of the delegate from Hawaii. That if in the public interest, it is to the interests of this community, for instance, that we have no billboards over in Kona; the legislature should pass such a statute; they would point to this section and say, "There is an affirmative statement in the Constitution which authorizes just this sort of thing." Of course, it would be debated in the legislature whether or nor it was too great an invasion, and if it amounted to an actual taking of the property, then there would have to be compensation paid.

ASHFORD: I'm in entire agreement with the gentleman from the fourth who has just spoken. The purpose of writing this into the Constitution is to subordinate private property rights.

LOPER: I would like to second the motion made by the delegate from the fifth district that this be printed, but I'd like to ask that it be read once more before we go on.

HEEN: I withdraw my last motion and I now move that this section read as follows: "The State shall have power to conserve and develop its natural beauty, objects and places of historic and cultural interest, sightliness and physical good order and for that purpose private property shall be subject to reasonable regulation."

SAKAKIHARA: I now second the motion to adopt the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded. I think the motion by Delegate Bryan was out of order. There is a motion before the house. The Chair so rules. Delegate Heen, you requested the floor?

SAKAKIHARA: I now move for the previous question.

DELEGATE: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded, the previous question. All those in favor signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Carried.

All those in favor of the amendment as read, signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Carried.

BRYAN: I move the -- Is that already pau?

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

BRYAN: Move the adoption in substance?

CHAIRMAN: Yes. Ready for the question?

CROSSLEY: I move the adoption of that Section E, I believe it is, or 5, as amended.

DOWSON: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Second. You ready for the motion? All those in favor signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Ayes have it. Passed.

We are ready to proceed with Section 6.

ROBERTS: I'd like to talk to Section 6. There has been some suggestion made that perhaps this section might be left out until all other sections are in, and then have a general statement on the question of the powers of the legislature.

BRYAN: In order that the delegate will not be out of order, I'll move the adoption of Section 6 as written.

ROBERTS: Thank you. I second the motion. The section reads: "The enumeration in this article of specified functions shall not be construed as limitations upon the powers of the State government for the good order, health, safety and general welfare of the people."

HEEN: May I ask the last speaker the question, why was the word "government" put in there, "powers of the State government"? Why put in the word "government"?

ROBERTS: I believe we could eliminate the word "government."

HEEN: I should think so, too.

ROBERTS: "Power of the State."

SAKAKIHARA: May I offer an amendment? I desire to offer an amendment at this time to delete the word "government" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "in providing for the good order."

CROSSLEY: I'd like to second the motion of the delegate from the fourth district who, as I understand it, moved that this section be deleted for the time being, and that perhaps an all inclusive section be drawn at a later date.

ROBERTS: Well, perhaps I ought to clarify that. It was suggested that that be done. My thought would be that to leave it in, and then the Style Committee, if that same section appears in various other parts, may then have one section to cover all of it. I believe the section ought to go in.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair might point out that there is a motion before the house and seconded to adopt this section.

SAKAKIHARA: I desire at this time to offer an amendment to Section 6. In the third line, insert the words "in providing." As I understand, the word "government" has been deleted.

CHAIRMAN: There is no second to that.

DELEGATE: I'll second that.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakinara has the floor.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

SAKAKIHARA: I am very glad to yield the floor to Senator Heen.

CHAIRMAN: Senator Heen.

HEEN: I offer this amendment. Delete the word "government" appearing in the third line of the section, and insert in lieu thereof the words "to provide," so that the section will read as follows: "The enumeration in this article of specified functions shall not be construed as limitations upon the powers of the State to provide for the good order, health, safety and general welfare of the people."

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

PORTEUS: I move that the amendment be further amended so that the section will read, "The enumeration in this article of specified functions shall not be construed as limitation upon powers of the State" period. In my mind when you refer to the enumeration in these articles and say that they are not to be construed as limitations, I think you've done the job. You don't have to go further with descriptive words.

DELEGATE: Second the amendment.

KELLERMAN: I would like to move a further amendment to delete the word "functions" and insert the word "powers." It seems to me each of the sections has referred to a "power." The word "function" has not been referred to at all.

PORTEUS: I will accept that.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has been accepted by the movant.

HEEN: I accept the amendments which have been proposed, and with those amendments, my motion would be to amend this section to read, "The enumeration in this article of specified powers shall not be construed as limitation upon the powers of the State " period.

CHAIRMAN: Does that meet with the approval of those who amended?

SAKAKIHARA: I accept the amendment and I desire at this time to second the motion to amend as proposed by Senator Heen.

A. TRASK: Will the chairman of this committee explain why this provision or section was deemed necessary? I ask the question because I am just afraid that this type of section is just too hazy, indefinite and not specific. The Constitution should be an embodiment of specific rights and restraints. We have this situation that says it "shall not be construed as limitation."

Now, specifically I have in mind this situation. In the Taxation Finance Committee under Chairman White, we have the situation, and it was debated yesterday, that there shall be no specific grants given to any organization in particular reference to sectarian hospitals. That was the immediate consideration. Now, you are dealing with a question of health in the previous sections; you are dealing with the question of slum clearance; you are dealing with general welfare; you are dealing with safety. Now, to what extent and how wide or how brief or how limited or how unlimited is the supreme court to consider these previous sections? In other words, I am fearful that in the enumeration of specific functions we wind up with such a catch-all, apologetic grab bag of power, I feel we are not doing the magnificent job we are doing with the detailed attention given the previous sections. So I would want to know from the chairman whether or not - - why he has this section in.

LARSEN: I assure you all, we are not grabbing power, we are not trying to limit function, but my worthy colleague, Dr. Roberts, felt that this was essential, and I'm going to let him explain it.

ROBERTS: I think we discussed this problem in part this morning, that whenever you have an attempt made to spell out and to list certain powers, the implication given in interpretation is that those powers are limited to those specific areas spelled out. It was a purpose of this last section to assure the power of the legislature to act in the interest of the health and general welfare of the people even though in our enumeration of the five articles, we might possibly have left something out which in the future the legislature may want to act on. It was, therefore, important to put a proviso in which would permit the legislature - - which would indicate that the legislature had that power. Therefore, we have stated that the enumeration in the previous five sections of specified powers shall not be construed as limiting the powers of the State. That was the basic purpose. It was not to say that we have five sections and these are the only areas in which the legislature may act.

I would like to, also, while I'm on the floor, to suggest that we retain the language, "for the good order, health and general welfare of the people." We have no place in the previous five sections mentioned the general - - the concept of general welfare, and I believe in a section dealing with this that we ought to retain the words "general welfare."

BRYAN: I think the records should show, and possibly it might clear the question raised by my colleague from the fifth district, that this paragraph which actually grants license refers to this subject alone. Would that clear up your objection?

A. TRASK: No, it does not, Mr. Chairman, and my colleague from the fifth district. Who is to say what is a limitation? Who is to say what is not a limitation? In other words, we are going into the realm of saying, "Well, we have set these various things specifically in a very fine manner and we think we have done a good job; but just to excuse ourselves, we're going to throw in this grab bag construction as to how it's to be construed." I don't know, other than the Model Constitution, that such a provision as this is in any other constitution. I don't remember having seen one. I know it is in this Model State Constitution, but I am altogether fearful of something in a basic document which is so indefinite as this.

Now construction. This language is more or less repetitious in ordinary legislative work, and laws are drawn up with this type of clause and section, but in this Constitution, I think consistent with the work done on the previous sections I see no reason and cannot go along at all with the thought that the enumeration of these articles shall not be a restraint and limitation upon the full powers of the State. You have outlined the powers of the State. There is such thing as the powers of the State being restrained, and that is all - - to me altogether vital. It is the dignity of the individual, and I go along with the delegate from Kona on the question of private property and its limitations by sightliness and orderliness, as Judge Heen's amendment in the previous section provided.

We in Hawaii are probably the only jurisdiction under the United States flag which have extended our right to limit orderliness and sightliness by saying that there shall be a ban on signs, like that thing down here on Kapiolani, which I think is a positive disgrace, this Kodak. I think it is.

We all subscribe to it, but it is not a part of the law. I think it's good that it's in there, but we can certainly foresee that it is interfering with the rights of the individual. I see no historical support for such a section. I see no -- I'm fearful of it because of its indefiniteness, and I think our job here is to take something very definite and certainly to restrain the power of the government where that is possible and fair for the general welfare.

ANTHONY: I don't know whether Delegate Trask was here this morning or not when we discussed this matter. We decided to enumerate, or at least tentatively had decided, to enumerate certain recorded advances in the field of public health and general welfare. Now the reason -- the legal reason why this last section is put in here—it will probably come at the end of the legislative section of the Constitution—is a matter of law. When you start to enumerate all of the specific items, the reason or the result that the courts might reach, as Mr. Trask as a lawyer knows, that by enumerating specified fields or areas, the intention of this Convention was to limit the powers of the legislature. Now presumably, we will have a general grant of legislative power in the legislative section, depositing legislative power to all rightful subjects of legislation. Now, if we stop right there, the legislature could do anything within the limits of the due process clause. Now we start to enumerate these things, and as a matter of constitutional law, if we don't have some such section in that, then you'll cut down the breadth of your initial grant of legislative power. I think that's the reason for it, Mr. Trask.

In addition to that, when we get to the actual restraints on the legislature—that will come in the Legislative Powers and Functions Committee—they will be specific. "The legislature shall not do so and so," enact no divorces. And then the Bill of Rights, of course, will have specific restraints against State action in favor of individuals.

KING: The language is very simple and I think—in explanation to the delegate from the fifth district, Delegate Trask—is merely to safeguard the point raised by Delegate Anthony. And as was explained in the original by Delegate Roberts, if a similar or stronger provision is incorporated in some other committee report, it will replace this and the Committee on Style will be charged with the responsibility of merging the two similar provisions. So, there seems no objection to adopting this as a further grant in order to safeguard the possibility that the health and public welfare grants heretofore mentioned shall be considered as exclusive of any further grants.

SHIMAMURA: I agree with Delegate Anthony that where there is an enumeration of specific powers, there should be a reservation of general or other powers, and this is in line with the Federal Constitution where reservation is made under the Bill of Rights, at the end there.

HEEN: This particular provision was taken out of the Model Constitution where you find specific powers granted or made in this particular article on public welfare. Now, in an explanatory article on that particular article we find this.

> The Nebraska Constitution . . . specially authorized certain types of schools and institutions for children of a certain age. The State Supreme Court, on the basis of established standards of constitutional construction, said that in the absence of any provision the state would have had complete powers and that therefore the provision itself must be construed as forbidding the State to establish institutions for persons except those within the specified age group. Protection against such a contingency is provided by Section 1007.

That is the section that is now being considered.

CROSSLEY: Do I understand now that the adoption of this section would be on the basis that when we adopt other articles, that where it's possible to do so, that this section will be used to cover all such articles?

ANTHONY: This is a -- this properly would go in the section relating to legislation, legislative powers and functions, and I believe it will be proper some place at the end of that section on the powers granted to the legislature to have this particular section which we are now debating, and it should be put in in such a way that it would apply not only to what is immediately before us but it would apply to public health, labor, industry, education and everything else.

CROSSLEY: That's the point of my question and I don't believe that the motion, as it's so stated, does that.

PORTEUS: May I suggest that the motion does not do that, but that we are not in a position to make amendments, or suggest other than matters that are concerned to this proposal before us. Therefore, that will be the province of the Committee on Style in relating it over to all the other sections when they have everything before it.

KING: It seems to me the explanation made by Delegate Roberts at the beginning covered that point, that the suggestion that the committee wished to have this approved as a part of its report with the understanding that the Committee on Style would incorporate it in a broader provision that would be applicable to other committee reports. I feel that it would have a rather temporary value until such time as other committee reports have been discussed with similar blanket powers so as not to limit the defined powers of such committee report.

A. TRASK: If that's the view --

CHAIRMAN: I recognize Delegate Doi.

A. TRASK: Oh, I'm sorry.

DOI: I agree with Mr. King here that we should vote on this question here before us because it would be an expression of this group here that, insofar as health and public welfare is concerned, we believe that these specific statements of powers do not limit the broad powers on health and general welfare. Then later, if the Style Committee wants to combine that under the legislative powers, I see no reason why the Style Committee cannot do that. Therefore, at this time I would like to move for the previous question.

CROSSLEY: Second the motion.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: No debate on the previous question.

HEEN: In order to clarify the situation --

CHAIRMAN: You withdraw your second, Mr. Crossley? The previous question has been moved and seconded.

HEEN: Kindly withdraw that motion for a moment.

CHAIRMAN: Crossley or Doi.

A. TRASK: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Point of information. State the point.

A. TRASK: "The enumeration in this article," the specific word is "this article." From the discussion here made, what is the meaning of "this article"? Obviously, it means just to this health, welfare and safety situation. Doesn't it, Mr. Chairman?

HEEN: This article deals with the problem of general welfare.

CHAIRMAN: Senator Heen, I'm afraid you are out of order. They have not withdrawn their motion and the second.

HEEN: He asked for a point of information. I gave the information.

CHAIRMAN: I call for the vote at this time on the previous question.

HEEN: If the mover of that motion will withdraw that for a moment, I would like to make a little further amendment that will clarify the whole situation.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize Delegate Crossley.

CROSSLEY: I'll withdraw my second.

SAKAKIHARA: I withdraw my third.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen.

HEEN: As we all know this article deals with the problem of general welfare, and certain sections have been agreed to dealing with the general subject, general welfare. Now, my motion to amend this particular section is as follows: "The enumeration in this article of specified powers shall not be construed as limitations upon the powers of the State to provide for the general welfare of the people." Here you've got the whole thing.

ROBERTS: I'll second that.

LUIZ: I would want to ask a few things here for my own clarification. The word "good order," if I understand Delegate Garner [Anthony] right, he said that this would cover the whole situation. Now, what bothers me is this. Will this take in or cover the grounds of strike? In other words, I would be clarified in this fashion. If the sugar industry should go on strike, can this portion of the Constitution stop it from going on strike because it's in good order for the welfare of the people?

HEEN: My amendment has left out the term "good order."

LUIZ: Was your amendment seconded?

HEEN: My amendment was that it's not to be "construed as limitation upon the powers of the State to provide for the general welfare of the people."

LUIZ: Was it seconded?

ROBERTS: Yes, I seconded it.

CHAIRMAN: It was. You ready for the previous question? I mean, are you ready for the amendment? The previous question has been withdrawn. You ready for a vote on the amendment? All those in favor signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Carried.

BRYAN: I move for the adoption of Section 6 in substance as amended.

WOOLAWAY: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded by Delegate Woolaway. All those in favor signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Carried.

PORTEUS: I think I was recognized. It's now six o'clock. At seven thirty there are other committee meetings. There has been the disposition on the part of some of the members of this Convention, as expressed to me, that they would like to have this article printed and on their desks before taking a final vote. I think there is also to be offered, at least there was an announced intention by some of the delegates, to offer other amendments which would make a combination of all these. In order that we might have everything before us, I suggest that we rise, report progress, ask leave to sit again, and in the meantime, have the article as amended printed and placed on their desks.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

KAUHANE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize Delegate Crossley.

KAUHANE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

KAUHANE: I think, according to rules of the Convention, Mr. Crossley has talked too many times.

CHAIRMAN: Your point is out of order. He can speak any number of -- twice on each subject. Delegate Crossley.

CROSSLEY: This is the first time I've spoken on this subject. Inasmuch as it was only a suggestion, I now move that the Committee of the Whole rise and report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

KAUHANE: I rise to point of information. Section 3 of the proposal is somewhat left hanging without any qualifying statement. If we read Section 3 as amended, "The State shall have the power to provide for persons unable to maintain the standard of living compatible with decency and health," that is what we have agreed upon as to the wording of Section 3. Now, what are we providing --

CROSSLEY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order.

CROSSLEY: Section 3 isn't before this committee at this time.

KAUHANE: I'm raising Section 3 on a point of information and I think I am proper in raising this question on a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: I think Section 3 has been passed by the Convention and I think you're out of order at this time.

KAUHANE: Having agreed with that, Mr. Chairman, in the movant's hurry to move the previous question and the Chair's ruling, and also recognition of the previous -- the movant of the previous question was taken with sincerity and cutting out all other debates, those of us who have never had the opportunity to answer or give any testimony regarding Section 3 were cut off by the movant and the motion for the previous question. Certainly my rising to a point of information would also include the reconsideration of our action taken on Section 3, so that we will clarify the matter. As it now stands, we are not providing anything in Section 3 to take care of the things that you yourself agreed upon that Section 3 is valid.

ANTHONY: I believe that is exactly the purpose of -- one of the purposes of Delegate -- the Secretary's suggestion that we have a clean print and vote on this tomorrow. We can certainly vote for or against any particular section when we get the full print before us. That's my understanding KAUHANE: Well, rather than do that and to expedite matters, my only feeling is this, that since much talk is being made that committee proposals and reports ought to be sumitted by the 26th of the month, and in order to help get this issue out of the way so that other matters can be brought up for Committee of the Whole meeting, that if each of us look at Section 3 the way we have agreed, Section 3 shall be reported out and accepted, and we leave Section 3 hanging without providing something. You say that you shall "provide for persons unable to maintain a standard of living compatible with decency and health." Now what are you providing for them? Some care, some aid, or some support so that they will be able to live, in the very words that you now agree in adopting, the adoption of Section 3?

LARSEN: Mr. Chairman. I tried to answer that.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize Delegate King.

KING: The delegate from the fifth district, I think, has made a point, and although he made it as a point of information, I don't believe we can go back and clarify it today. I would like to suggest that the committee rise and when we have the clean print tomorrow, the delegate from the fifth district can remake that point. In amending that Section 3, we left it hanging in the air. It says they "shall have power to provide" without saying to provide what. Nevertheless, it's not a matter that I believe we can settle this late in the afternoon. And there was a motion, I believe, that the committee do rise, report progress and request permission to sit again, and by that time we'll have clean print. Is that motion pending? I'd like to second it.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has not been seconded.

KING: I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize the second. All those in favor of the motion, signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Carried.

MAY 25, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole will come to order. At ease. When the Committee adjourned yesterday, we had approved in substance the several sections of the report on health and public welfare as contained in Proposal No. -- Committee Proposal No. 1. There is called attention to the Convention that the first section was in error; and should read, "The State shall provide for the protection and promotion of the public health" period.

BRYAN: In view of the remarks that were made at the close of our Committee of the Whole yesterday, I would like to move that we reconsider our action on Section 3.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state that -- or ask the delegate whether he intends to make a change in substance or a change in wording.

BRYAN: I believe it could be interpreted either way. The wording leaves us without any substance as it stands now, if you want to look at it that way. Actually, what we wish to do is to write in what we intended when we wrote Section 3 yesterday. Does the Chair feel it would be unnecessary to reconsider our act?

LARSEN: I've gone over this with Mr. Bryan, and it's just to clarify it. There was a point that Delegate Kauhane brought up yesterday. It reads such as this: "The State shall have the power to provide for persons." The committee felt that that was rather all inclusive.

DELEGATE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State the point of order.

DELEGATE: There was no second to the motion for reconsideration, so I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has --

LARSEN: Thank you. Oh, I see. Better carry the motion; otherwise I can't go on.

CHAIRMAN: Are you --

LARSEN: I said you'd better carry the motion; otherwise I can't go on.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion as made and seconded signify by saying "aye." Opposed. Carried.

LARSEN: It's an insertion after "provide" of "assistance for." "The State shall have power to provide assistance for persons unable" --

HEEN: Point of order. There's nothing before the committee.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

PORTEUS: To get this before everyone then, I now move that subsection or Section 3 of this proposal be adopted.

LARSEN: I second the motion.

PORTEUS: I now move, or I'm willing to second the motion. Now, you move now that it be amended.

LARSEN: All right, I move it be amended to insert the word "assistance."

PORTEUS: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You've heard the motion; is there any discussion? All those in favor of the amendment signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Motion is carried.

NIELSEN: I now move that the word "assistance" be inserted after the word "provide."

CHAIRMAN: That was just carried.

NIELSEN: It wasn't specified where it would be put.

CHAIRMAN: I think it was. The Chair feels that the Doctor stated, "to provide assistance for" indicated where it was to go. I think we passed on the motion that --

BRYAN: I'll move the adoption in substance of Section 3 as amended.

KAUHANE: So that the records and the motion be well understood by the delegate who raised the question as to where the word "assistance" was placed, I humbly request that we turn to the wire recording to satisfy the gentleman.

DELEGATE: I second the motion. I second Mr. Bryan's motion.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Bryan's motion?

LARSEN: I move we table that.

CHAIRMAN: Which motion are you moving is tabled? The only motion before the house, moved and seconded, is Bryan's motion.

LARSEN: The one that Kauhane moved; I didn't hear another one.

KAUHANE: It wasn't a motion, it was a suggestion.

CHAIRMAN: The only motion before the house is the motion to approve in substance Section 2 --

LARSEN: Three.

CHAIRMAN: -- Section 3 as amended. All those in favor signify by saying "aye." All opposed. The motion is carried.

A. TRASK: For clarity's sake, will the Secretary please read both sections?

PORTEUS: May I have the Chief Clerk read it.

CHAIRMAN: The Chief Clerk read the section as amended now. Section 3 as amended.

CLERK: Third section as amended reads as follows: "Section _____. Social Security. The State shall have power to provide assistance for persons unable to maintain a standard of living compatible with decency and health."

TAVARES: I now move that when this committee rise, it recommend the passage of -- on second reading of Committee Proposal No. 1 with the amendments which have been approved by this Committee of the Whole.

APOLIONA: Will the good Dr. Larsen -- I mean Delegate Larsen move for the approval of Section 5, or anybody else so I can put in a -- add an amendment to Section 5?

DOI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. I think the Chair will rule that a motion for reconsideration must be put first.

APOLIONA: Then will the good doctor please move for that reconsideration?

LARSEN: Just to expedite things, could we just go right down through 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and then it'll clarify it, because right now, we're confused as to what we're talking about, I think. I am, at least.

BRYAN: I don't understand the proposed procedure here. It seems to me that yesterday we amended each one of these sections and adopted in substance each section in this proposal. There was a correction in Section 1 this morning because of an error in printing. Section 3 has been amended this morning on the reconsideration of our actions yesterday. What the reference is to a change in Section 5, I have no idea, but if that's to be further amended, we should reconsider our actions and make the changes and then approve that in substance. Then the whole committee proposal will be before the house.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. Delegate Apoliona was attempting to, I believe, add an amendment to Section 5, but so far nobody has moved to reconsider it.

APOLIONA: I understand if I - - believe that I understood the motion yesterday that these different proposals as was so amended and corrected yesterday to be printed, and left before - - and placed before the delegates so that we can study it. I have studied - -

TAVARES: Just to clarify the situation, I withdraw my motion, and I move to reconsider Section 5 in order that Dr. Apoliona may have a chance to suggest his amendment.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion to reconsider Section 5 has been made and seconded. All those in favor please indicate by saying "aye." All opposed. The ayes have it.

APOLIONA: I have an amendment to offer.

CHAIRMAN: I would like to point out to the delegate that he is out of order. Somebody will have to move the adoption.

LAI: I move for the adoption of Section 5.

APOLIONA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion for adoption of Section 5 has been made and seconded. Any discussion?

APOLIONA: In Section 5 I have the following amendment. Between - - in the fourth line, between the words "private" and "property," insert in their lieu, "and public" and change the word "property" to "properties," so the section with this amendment shall read as follows: "The State shall have power to conserve and develop its natural beauty, objects and places of historic and cultural interest, sightliness and physical good order, and for that purpose, private and public properties shall be subject to reasonable regulation."

CHAIRMAN: I recognize Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: There's been no second to that - -

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

TAVARES: - - but in deference to the movant, I would like to explain what I believe would indicate no necessity for that amendment. If it's public property - -

KAUHANE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State the point of order.

KAUHANE: If the motion is not seconded, there is nothing before the house, so - -

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

KAUHANE: In order to allow the delegate from the fourth district an opportunity to explain his stand, I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: If the property is public, the government has a right to regulate it anyway, so that all you need to do is to have "private property." That's - - I believe that's correct, and for that reason, I don't believe the motion is well taken.

APOLIONA: I believe that to be true, and I agree with the delegate from the fourth district. But it seems to me that when your public - - when your property is private, everybody else has something to do with your private property, but when it becomes a government property, everybody else is afraid to touch it. I could see unsightliness in lots of government property as far as the buildings and projects is concerned, but why they do not go after the government property, I don't know, but they pick on the small fellows, they pick on private property. It is my wishes that what is good for private property, whatever regulations should be made against private property, it should have the same effect as against public property.

LYMAN: On the island of Hawaii, you have over in Kona one of the ancient heiaus that during the past six months - -

DELEGATE: We can't hear, I'm sorry.

LYMAN: - - during the past six months has been used as a rock pile for road building. Eighty per cent of this heiau has been torn up and conveyed to government rock crushers to be used as road surfacing material. During the past two weeks, you have read articles on Kalapana Beach, whereby the county has used such material for road purposes.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. I'd like to ask the delegate who spoke last whether that heiau is on public property or private property?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Lyman, would you like to answer the question?

LYMAN: That I could not answer, but I may be able to get that information for you by noon.

HEEN: If it's on public property, the legislature has power to prevent any further desecration of that heiau, or even the Board of Supervisors may enforce some regulation in connection with it.

CORBETT: I'd like to say that in our opinion that would be taken care of under the specified mention of the historic monuments that we have in this same section that we are discussing.

NIELSEN: I don't think that this is in order, that we should regulate private property. It violates the Constitution of the United States, and I don't think we should start our Constitution in this manner. And furthermore, I've never heard a satisfactory definition to the word "reasonable." "Reasonable" can be whatever the legislature wants to make it, and we're simply mandating the legislature by this, that private interest can lobby bills through and directly violate the Constitution of the United States.

TAVARES: I hope my friend, the delegate from the fourth district, will forgive me if I, in order to bring this to a head because of shortness of time, if I move to table his amendment. I so move.

DELEGATE: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Motion to table the amendment has been made and seconded. All those - -

NIELSEN: What is the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment is to insert after the word "private" and before the word "property," "and public"— "and public properties." There has been a motion made and seconded to table the amendment. All those in favor signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Carried.

DELEGATE: The noes carried.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the - -

TAVARES: I now move that when this committee rise - -

CHAIRMAN: I think there's a motion before the house now that has to be passed on before - -

TAVARES: Oh, yes. Well, then I think there is a motion. I will move again. I move that Section 5 be adopted.

CROSSLEY: As amended.

CHAIRMAN: In substance.

TAVARES: Yes, in the original form prior to the recent motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of this motion, please signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Motion is carried.

TAVARES: I now move that when this Committee of the Whole arises, it report recommending the passage on second reading of Committee Proposal No. 1, Redraft 1, as amended.

SMITH: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is made and seconded. Is there any discussion? All in favor of the motion, please signify by saying "aye." All opposed. The motion is carried.

CROSSLEY: I move that we now rise and report the findings of this committee.

CHAIRMAN: Any second to the motion?

PORTEUS: I wonder whether this procedure would be satisfactory to the Committee of the Whole. I think it combines all these various ideas. That is, that when the committee rise, that it ask leave of the Convention to present a written report the following day, tomorrow, because under our rules amendments have to be placed in writing. Therefore, I think we have to give the chairman of the Committee of the Whole time in which to put this in proper form in writing and present it as an amendment. Then, at the time that he presents that, he can ask leave to, at a later time, present a more complete report from the Committee of the Whole. That is to say, he'll place this in writing for tomorrow, recommending passage, but then, for giving all the reasons, we could wait until next week and gain a little time within which to prepare it.

At the same time, I think it's also necessary, since there was referred to this Committee of the Whole the report of the Committee on Health and Public Welfare, that it would also be well for us to recommend to the Convention as a whole in that report that the report of the Committee on Health and Public Welfare be accepted and placed on file. If that is satisfactory, I'll so move.

CROSSLEY: I'll second that. I was just trying to say it in a few hundred less words.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is made and seconded.

LARSEN: Before that's passed, we had a subsequent sheet here that made corrections in spelling, punctuation and insertion of words to clarify, and if there are no objections, our report will contain those few additions.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that that will have to be - -

SILVA: I couldn't get the Secretary's motion. It's quite a long one. I prefer to have Mr. Crossley renew his motion in less words. Do you mind renewing your motion?

PORTEUS: Well, the advantage that I might point out of making it in the long way, is you finally get everybody so confused, before long - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva has the floor.

SILVA: I made that request and I hope the Chair will recognize Mr. Crossley so that he can renew his motion in less words, please.

PORTEUS: Point of order. The maker of the motion does not yield on that matter. Thank you, Senator.

TAVARES: I move the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house - -

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

PORTEUS: The motion is that the Committee of the Whole rise - -

NIELSEN: Point of order. That was moved for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order?

PORTEUS: The motion has not been made, nor has it been seconded. Until seconded, the motion is not - -

CHAIRMAN: There's been no second to the original motion, so the motion for the previous question is out of order.

PORTEUS: The question is as to what is before the house. The motion is that this procedure be followed: the committee rise, report progress, recommend that as we have adopted this proposal, that it be recommended for passage; that the chairman of this committee be authorized to request the Convention for leave to make his report in writing on Friday; that at that time, in making his report in writing, he also recommend that the report of the Committee on Health and Public Welfare be accepted and placed on file.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

HEEN: I would make this suggestion, that when the committee rises and reports upon this committee proposal, that - - and makes the recommendation for the approval of the proposal upon second reading, that action be deferred upon that report, the whole report, until the written report is filed, so that all of the members of the Convention may have the opportunity to see what is in that written report, and I so move.

CHAIRMAN: There's a motion before the house duly made and seconded, I believe.

PORTEUS: I think the suggestion that was made by the senator is well taken. I think that that motion is in order, however, once we resolve ourselves back into Convention.

CHAIRMAN: Question? You ready for the question? All in favor of the motion as made by Delegate Porteus signify by saying "aye." All opposed. Motion is carried. Committee of the Whole will now adjourn.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on EDUCATION

(Article IX)

Chairman: YASUTAKA FUKUSHIMA

June 16, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come to order?

We have for consideration this afternoon in this committee Standing Committee Report No. 52 and Committee Proposal No. 11, relating to education. I shall now call upon Delegate Loper, the chairman of the Committee on Education, to briefly outline the procedure for this afternoon.

LOPER: I would like to make my preliminary remarks very brief, but would ask permission before considering -- taking up of the various sections one by one of Committee Proposal No. 11 to read the committee proposal through. I can assure you that that can be done in a minute and a half because I have just done it in less than that time. There are certain major matters to be called to the attention of the Convention, some of which were controversial in the committee, which will be mentioned after the reading, but I think it will be to our advantage to have before us the provisions of not just one section at a time but all of the sections. If you will turn to Committee Proposal No. 11, submitted by the Education Committee, you will find that there are five sections on two pages and that the first one reads as follows:

> The State shall provide for the establishment, support and control of a state-wide system of free, non-sectarian public schools, a state university, public libraries, and such other educational institutions as may be deemed desirable, including all physical facilities therefor. There shall be no segregation in the public educational institutions of this state because of race, color, or creed; nor shall public funds be appropriated for the support or benefit of any sectarian, denominational or private educational institution.
> Section 2. There shall be a board of education to be appointed by the governor, by and with the consent of the Senate, from a panel nominated by local school advisory committees to be established by law.
> Section 3. The board of education shall be empowered to establish policy and to exercise full control over the public school system through its executive officer, the superintendent of public instruction, who shall be appointed by the board and shall be ex officio a voting member thereof.
>
> Section 4. There shall be a board, to be known as the "Board of Regents of the University of Hawaii," to be appointed by the governor, by and with the consent of the Senate. The president of the university and the superintendent of public instruction shall be ex officio voting members of the board.
> Section 5. The board of regents shall be empowered to establish policy and to exercise full control over the University of Hawaii through its executive officer, the president of the university, who shall be appointed by the board. The board of regents of the University of Hawaii shall constitute a body corporate and shall have title in fee simple to all of the lands of the university.

The accompanying committee report is No. 52, and I believe we will save time if we refer to that report only in the process of answering questions which may be raised in connection with Committee Proposal No. 9. At the outset the Education Committee had a number of matters to consider on which there was little or no disagreement within the committee. For example, there was no serious effort or none at all, I think, made to divide the present single, centralized school system up into county school systems. We were unanimous in our support of a continuation of the present centralized control of the school system.

However, there was a sharp difference of opinion on the question of the election of school board members versus the appointment of school board members, and the minority has considerable argument on their side of that question. That question was resolved within the committee in accordance with the proposal in Section 2.

There was also a difference of opinion within the committee on the question of dual control of school buildings. As the delegates know, the territorial school system is operated in buildings that are constructed by the counties and maintained by the counties and that has been referred to as dual control.

So that the issues that took a lot of our time in attempting to come to the final point of being willing to sign this report, and I call your attention to the fact that all members of the committee have signed it although some did not concur in certain respects, were spent largely on those controversial matters and were resolved as indicated.

Now coming back then to Section 1, I would like to explain that the language in the fifth line, "including all physical facilities therefor," might appear to the casual reader as being unnecessary, because if you say that "the State shall provide" for a school system it might be assumed without saying that it should include all physical facilities therefor. However, the inclusion of those five words is deliberate and it appears in Section 1 instead of Section 2 in order to leave to the legislature the question of settling this matter of dual control.

I would wish to call your attention, also, to the fact that many things that might appear in this Committee Proposal No. 11 have been left to the legislature and have been mentioned in our report. For example, we haven't said how many members there should be on the board of education or the board of regents. We haven't said how many should come from each district, how their terms of office should -- how long their terms should be, that they should be overlapping terms, and so forth. We have left a great deal of the material that was discussed in the Education Committee to the legislature, and for that reason we do have a relatively short committee proposal. However, we have stated in our report, the first few pages of Standing Committee Report No. 52, the point of view of the Education Committee on the matter of a separate article on education and in support of a committee proposal at least this long, composed of five sections. We are quite aware that H.R. 49 requires that provision shall be made for education and that possibly Section 1 of our committee proposal meets that requirement. However, it was the feeling of the committee that we should go a little further than that and to ask that we include in the Constitution the thinking of the people of Hawaii on their public schools as of 1950. I would ask also that as questions are raised, we be permitted to call on various members of the Education Committee who are specially prepared to speak on one or another of the sections.

In order to open the discussion, then, to delegates, I would move the adoption of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 11.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 11 be adopted. Ready for the question?

KAWAHARA: In signing the report and then signing the proposal, I stated that I did not concur with Section 1. No reason was stated. I would like to state my reasons now. As I read the article, I get the inference that a free system, a free educational system shall be guaranteed in the first instance up to the word "public schools"; and after "public schools," it seems to me the words "state university," the words "public libraries," that is, the word "free" does not include those words, a "state university," "public libraries." In other words, in reading that section I get the idea that the common schools are free but the university is not free, and the public libraries are not free. In making the objection, I wanted a clarification on that point. I did not get a satisfactory answer in the committee; for that reason I objected.

Furthermore, as we read along down to the section which reads, "including all physical facilities therefor," the question of dual control comes in. Most of us were in favor of a state-wide system of education. However, it was felt by many of us that as to the details of handling and administering the educational system or the school system, that the counties should have some participation in that matter. For that reason some of us did not concur in that section.

CHAIRMAN: Would the chairman of the Education Committee wish to comment on what Delegate Kawahara just stated?

LOPER: I think it would be proper to restate here the answer, as I recall it, given in the committee to the use of the word "free" and then if there are others that can supplement these remarks, please do so.

As I read the sentence, "a state-wide system of free, non-sectarian public schools," it is true that the word "free" applies to the public schools, not beyond the comma after "schools." The paragraph does not say whether the state university and the public libraries are free or not. We also noted in our discussion and study of this matter that the word "free" may have two meanings. Free, historically, at one time meant open to all; it has come recently to mean tax-supported. I think that it is the opinion of the committee, the majority of the committee, that it probably belongs in that phrase modifying public schools and does not necessarily lead to confusion concerning the state university and public libraries.

On the matter of including "all physical facilities therefor," if that appeared in the second section, it would be deciding the question of dual control one way. It would be to eliminate dual control and place the full responsibility with the board of education. By putting it in the first section, which is a mandate to the State to provide, it leaves it to the legislature to deal with that problem and to delegate responsibility for the physical facilities to the board of education or to the counties, or to study and modify the present division of responsibility there in one way or another.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question satisfactorily?

KAWAHARA: Then by inference I get it that a state university is not free. In other words, a citizen is not free to enter a state university as provided by this Constitution. I may be wrong on that.

ASHFORD: I would like to express my opinion on the matter of "free" not being applied to the university. Anyone who has been around the legislative halls has seen the difficulty in finding money for all the functions of government, and if the university were wholly free, in the sense that no tuition could ever be charged, I think the result would be that we simply couldn't find enough money to run it as we wish it to be run, and that it is solely for the benefit of the students that the additional fees are charged.

WHITE: I question the inclusion of that phrase reading "all physical assets [sic] therefor," because it seems to me that that is a mandate to the legislature that they have to provide all physical facilities. There is no qualification there at all as to whether or not it's a matter of judgment as to whether - - what facilities should be provided. And I also question the part of the section after the semicolon, "nor shall public funds be appropriated." I don't think that that belongs in this section because that's contrary to the policy of public funds anyway.

YAMAMOTO: Being one of the members of the Education Committee, I did not concur on this first section but I would like to ask the Chairman, Delegate Loper, to clarify "all physical facilities therefor." I would like to put up this question because on the island of Hawaii the biggest problem is transportation and that transportation expense covers one-third of the appropriation for the school department. Now, if this committee particularly could clarify this "physical facilities therefor," does it include this matter?

LOPER: In answer to the last speaker, it would seem to me that a school bus might be regarded as physical facilities for public education. It might, on the other hand, be regarded as a service to be hired or let out on contract. As a matter of fact, where transportation is provided at public expense, it comes out of this special school fund which is managed by the counties.

In further comment on the previous speaker, "including all physical facilities," you took exception, Delegate White, to the word "all." Do you mean that some of the physical facilities should be provided by some other agency, other than the state?

WHITE: No, I don't mean that, but I do mean that you say "all physical facilities." There may be a question as to when facilities can go in. For instance, if you have a high school, you might have an auditorium in one place. Now does that make it mandatory on the legislature to provide comparable facilities at each school? That's a very broad term, "including all physical facilities." I don't think it adds anything to the paragraph as long as you are leaving it to the discretion of the legislature to provide it. I think that that part of the sentence is better left off.

LOPER: Well, as I explained at the outset, the reason for including them, these words, is related to the matter of dual control, and I would like to ask the chairman to recognize Delegate Kellerman on that point, but before doing so, I'd like to speak further to Delegate White's question concerning the last part of the section, "nor shall public funds be appropriated for the support or benefit of any sectarian, denominational or private educational institution." We very carefully said "educational institution" to get around the question of hospitals and I would want to know whether you were arguing support for funds for private educational institutions.

WHITE: Well, they are prohibited anyway under the Constitution, so that I say it's just superfluous to have it in here.

LOPER: You mean it's unnecessary here?

WHITE: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: Does Delegate Kellerman wish to be recognized?

KELLERMAN: I would like to speak with reference to the phrase "including all physical facilities therefor." In the first place, it does not say "including all necessary facilities" or "including all adequate facilities," it is not a mandate on the State to provide facilities, more at one school than another or any that it cannot afford to provide. It's simply a statement of all those that there are now, or at any time belonging to the school system, or used in the course of education, shall be considered a part of the state-wide system of the public schools. It is not a mandate on the legislature to provide any degree of facilities. There's no standard set as to how much has to be provided and that was certainly not the intention of the committee in writing that in there. But it was my understanding that the phrase "all facilities" included those that at any one time are used in the course of the public school system, which would include the buses that are used in transportation for children to public schools on the island of Hawaii. That's why the term "all physical facilities" was used rather than "state buildings and grounds," which would by inference eliminate the question of the buses, or would not cover the question of buses used as transportion for public school children.

The reason for writing it into the Constitution is this. We have under Section 56 of the Organic Act simply a provision that the legislature shall establish such counties and other political subdivisions as it shall deem or desire and give it such responsibilities and duties. It has been the practice for the last 19 years, or 18 years, for the counties to draw up their own school budget and to prepare the requests to the legislature for school buildings which they have not felt able to finance out of their own school or county funds. We have a system whereby the department of education, as a State agency, is responsible for the teaching, the curriculum and the school supplies. The county is primarily responsible for the buildings, the grounds, the financing thereof, their maintenance and upkeep. The result is that under four different counties, we have four entirely different standards of school construction, standards of facilities offered.

The reason for writing this into the Constitution was in a sense a restatement of the basic responsbility of the State which it has at the moment delegated; a restatement of the responsibility in the State to provide all phases of the school system; at least a responsibility for how it is being provided, rather than the sense of dual responsibility which has grown up in our community. Had there been no such dual responsibility I would agree that there would be no reason for writing this in, because it is a restatement of law, a statement of the actual responsibility of the State. But it is in a sense to counteract the concept of the existing practice, because dual responsibility in the opinion of many of us who have been deeply involved in the last few years in studying our school building picture, dual responsibility has resulted in a great many disadvantages and inequalities of opportunities to the children of the territory.

ANTHONY: I'd like to ask a question of the chairman of the committee. The language of H.R. 49, the latest committee print, page 9, says that the Constitution shall contain provisions "for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools, which shall be open to all the children of said state and free from sectarian control." I'd like to know why the departure from that, and why the use of the word "free" in the place that it appears in the proposal has been incorporated.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Loper, will you answer that question, please?

LOPER: I'm not sure that I understood your question. I have the language of H.R. 49. It's in our Standing Committee Report 52 on page 2. "Provisions for establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools which shall be open to all the children of the state." It was our concern that the present program of the public schools includes adult education, and there's a rapidly growing demand for that and it is one of the newer aspects of the public school system dating about five or six years ago. For that reason we didn't use the word "children" in our statement. I think that's only part of your question, Delegate Anthony. What was the other part?

HEEN: Another question I would like to ask, that in the system of adult education that you have now, do you charge fees against these adults?

LOPER: Yes. It's supported in part by appropriations and in part by tuition fees.

HEEN: Then, is it intended that no charge shall be made hereafter against these adults, under the language used here?

LOPER: No, it is not.

HEEN: Well, then you've got the word "free" in the wrong place.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to ask Delegate Kellerman whether this phrase, "including all physical facilities therefor," is actually a mandate to eliminate the dual system or whether it's a restatement of the philosophy that there should be no dual control?

KELLERMAN: As I see it, it is a restatement of the philosophy of State responsibility. The State has the authority to delegate such part of it as it sees fit, I gather under this language, "The State shall provide for." But by providing for, it can provide by the delegation of that. You have the same language under the present Organic Act that the State shall provide for a system of free public education, and under the language of the Organic Act, certain responsibility has been delegated to the counties, to take care of the buildings. But we felt that the time was ripe to have a restatement of the concept of State responsibility for all phases of the school system because a contrary thinking has grown up in the community because of the fact of the dual exercise of responsibility over the last 18 or 19 years.

I understand from our senior representative from Maui who was in the legislature in 1931 that up until that time all state school budgets were prepared in the legislature. It was not a matter of dual control, and buildings were approved from the legislature first. They did not come up as a matter of initiative or requests from the counties. But since that time, after the system of mandated funds has grown up, there has also grown up this concept of county responsibility from a legal standpoint, to the extent that in the City and County of Honolulu in the last three or four years, the City and County has been buying the land and taking title in the name of the City and County of Honolulu to school buildings, grounds, and presumably to the buildings erected on them in the sense of legal ownership and responsibility. Thus it was the intent to bring back into the forefront the sense of the state-wide responsibility and support and control of those schools. I gather it can delegate it if it sees fit.

WHITE: May I ask Miss Kellerman another question, and that is, if she's trying to get responsibility into the board of education as against the City and County, then wouldn't that be better covered under Section 2 and referred to as responsibility for the construction and maintenance of facilities, rather than to put it under Section 1 where you are mandating the legislature?

WIST: I think it belongs in Section 1 because in Section 1 we are stating a principle, namely that the State as a state shall provide these particular educational provisions. Now, we are stating that this responsibility for education shall include responsibility on a state-wide basis for the physical facilities. We're not saying that the State shall or shall not delegate these responsibilities to one group, mainly the board of education, or to the other group, namely the counties. We're leaving that for legislative consideration and action, but we are recognizing here a principle, namely, that the State is the responsible agency, we the people, for providing a system of public education, including the physical facilities thereof. Now, there is one thing that we might do here to resolve part of this issue and that is to delete the word "all" and include the word "the." Then, you'd have "including the physical facilities thereof," instead of "all physical facilities thereof," and that might clarify this issue a little bit.

KELLERMAN: In answering Mr. White's suggestion that we put it on the board of education: as to my personal opinion, I frankly would like to have it there, with the study that I have made of the question. But with deference to other members of the committee and the fact that we felt the legislature more able to go into all angles of the matter, and there are various angles of the matter, we were willing, as agreement among the members of the committee, to leave this to the legislature to make a final determination as to certain delegation. You will find in the committee report that it has been so written that it recommends a certain degree of delegation, the delegation of the maintenance and the care of structures utilizing county facilities, for various reasons, which I think are quite sound, which are set forth therein.

But that is my answer to Mr. White's question. If it were a matter of my own personal opinion, I would have it a direct mandate that it be under State control. But I think the report makes clear the general feeling of the committee and that we at least have concurred.

MAU: I want some information if I can get it. I understood that representatives of the City and County government appeared before the Education Committee to state their views. I'm wondering whether or not this is not true, that the legislature in its biennial sessions places certain mandates upon the City and County government—I don't know about the other counties—to make certain expenditures on the facilities for education under the control of the City and County government, and that, more often than not, the City and County government is called upon by the board of education to spend more than the mandate set up by the legislature. Is that a fact?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Loper, would you care to answer that?

LOPER: That is correct. The mandate stands at about $950,000 and the City and County spends about a million dollars a year more than that. There was a time, however, not so many years ago when the schools couldn't get an extra dollar without taking it from the fire department, the police department or the roads.

MAU: My next question would be this. Those who support the state-wide theory, including the furnishing of facilities for the schools, if they really felt that the school department or the school children would benefit more greatly through the existing system, why do they ask that the legislature, which has not placed enough money for school facilities, then to take away that power now from the various county governments, because they will have to call upon the county governments to assist them in the way of funds?

H. RICE: In 1919 through to '31 every legislature provided funds for new buildings, for maintenance, repairs and provided for additional grounds and so forth. We set a program of work throughout the territory, and under this, so far as Maui was concerned, we built for instance, Paia School, Wailuku School, Puunene School, Kahului School, Kam III School, and all those schools were provided. Funds were provided by the legislature. And they were in turn, they were used by the county. They were used by the county but the program was set by the legislature, and I think where the funds were provided, there were more than adequate funds at that time provided, and we had a continuing program. If in those days we had left it to the county, they wouldn't have gone anywhere. And this is just returning to the days when we, in the legislature, provided the funds and set up the program so that we wouldn't build these gymnasiums or auditoriums if the ordinary facilities were not provided for.

I happened to go back to Lahainaluna last week and they had an auditorium and gymnasium there that was quite adequate for the school that only cost them $17,000. I wish you could all view that. It was made possible by the funds provided by the legislature.

You know nowadays we provide a lot of funds for the counties to do with what they will under the gross income tax. It's no more than fair that we should have a state-wide system of education where all the facilities were carried on on a state-wide basis, not giving more than they should to any particular county but seeing that every county was carefully provided for. I think you can do this better on a state-wide proposition than you can on a county basis. It's just returning to the system we had prior to 1931. We have tried this new system and I think it falls down in the fact that some places you have requests for auditoriums and gymnasiums when in other parts of the territory you don't have the actual necessary facilities.

The State should be closer in touch with federal funds to take advantage of federal funds. A lot of people criticize the amount expended for Baldwin High School on Maui, but when you think that we got $650,000 free federal money because we took advantage of federal funds, that means a lot to the community. You have to, in the matter of education and facilities, study the needs of the future. You can't wait. If we waited to build the high school three or four years later, we couldn't have provided the facilities for the people in central Maui. It was looking ahead that did it, and I for one am very keen for this same system. Delegate Mau, the City and County should use those funds. Separate funds should be provided by the territory for specific purposes and a program lined up that will take care of all the territory.

MAU: I want to say that I'm in favor of a state-wide system of education. I' m just calling attention to the present method of handling facilities for the school children, that the schools have benefited greatly under the county regime because it spent many more millions of dollars than have been called for under the legislative mandate. However, if the report—as looking at it you find the place in which it is so stated, as one of the speakers has said—recommends certain delegations to the county government, it may meet with the approval of the county officials. However, I state again that I am in favor of the system of state-wide education, but it seems to me that the division of authority doesn't rest in the method of teaching or the real system of state education, it only goes to the facilities that are set up for the system.

ANTHONY: I wanted to address myself to the question of the word "free," but the debate has gone on to the next sentence and I will hold my peace until this is settled.

KAUHANE: I feel that the State should provide for the education of its children of the citizens of this state. In providing such education, I feel that the State should provide for free basic textbooks. The State should also provide, if transportation is provided for children attending public schools, that such transportation shall be provided for children attending sectarian or private schools. I believe also that those parents who send their children to private schools are taking away from the State some of the provisions by which the State should provide education for the children by establishment of private schools. Certainly the educational system, the State should provide such, then all accommodations should be made for parents who are taxpayers and citizens of the state whose children attend private schools. They should be compensated or some just return for their tax money that they pay to the public school educational system. They should be considered when they make requests for the use of public school buildings.

For instance, just recently St. Louis College, a private school under the control of the Brothers of Mary, made an attempt to secure the McKinley High School auditorium for graduation for the 1950 class. Because McKinley High School had a graduation exercise which was to be held on Sunday and the St. Louis College wanted to use it on Saturday, it was impossible for them to secure the use of that auditorium. Yet, those graduates whose parents are taxpayers of the Territory of Hawaii have contributed to the public school system, the education system, and yet are being deprived of the use of public school buildings, even if it's for gratis.

I bring you also the fact that they are assessed certain fees by the public school system. I feel, Mr. Chairman, that there is some merit to requests that public aid out of public money be given to sectarian schools or private schools.

We have before the Congress of the United States a legislation requesting federal aid for the educational system. And what is holding that bill up? The fact that the Congress cannot agree to include such aids and benefits to sectarian schools. That piece of legislation, which is much needed for the Territory of Hawaii and other states who seek federal aid for educational system is being held up in the Congress. We must pay attention to the aid of those schools where the citizens contribute to the educational system in the way of taxes in helping provide the public school system.

I feel, therefore, Mr. Chairman, that any facilities, physical facilities that may be accorded to the public school system should as well be accorded to the private schools or sectarian schools. I feel, also, that the committee should take into consideration some means or some possible means to include such aid to sectarian and private schools.

AKAU: I'd like to speak just very briefly in opposition to what the delegate from the fifth district has just said. I'd like to speak in favor of "nor shall the public funds be appropriated for the support or benefit of any sectarian, denominational" school. Not primarily because I believe in the separation of church and the state but for the very simple reason that those people who send their children to either parochial schools or private schools send their children there because they wish to send their children there. That is, it is a personal choice. By making a personal choice, sending their children to private schools and having to pay tuition and what goes with it, it is the prerogative of those people to do as they wish; and therefore, when they make the demand or ask that these public funds shall be extended to private schools, I think they're quite out of step.

SHIMAMURA: May I seek clarification on one point that seems somewhat indefinite? As I read Section 1, which provides for a state-wide system of public education, including State control of public facilities, and also read Section 3, which delegates to the board of education the function of formulation of policy and full control of the public school system, it is fairly construable that the board of education under these two sections shall have the control of the facilities of public education. I'd like to have that point clarified by the committee.

LOPER: The speaker has a point. However, I should call his attention to the fact that the first section says that the State shall provide for the schools including physical facilities. It doesn't say the State shall control the physical facilities. The conflict, if any, comes in the second paragraph where it gives -- or third paragraph where it gives the board of education full control over the system. Now, it depends on whether you include in your system the buildings or just the educational program and personnel.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Are you completed, Delegate Shimamura?

SHIMAMURA: Well I'll yield for a moment to the delegate from the fourth district. I'd like to be recognized again.

HEEN: I'd like to find out from the chairman of the committee what was intended when the word "free" was inserted in this sentence—free of charge or free from nonsectarian [sic] control, or what?

WIST: I'd like to answer that. I think that this word "free' has become sort of standardized; we're thinking of free public schooling for our children. However, since public education has been extending itself into the level of adulthood, perhaps we could resolve this, and I would like to suggest that we do resolve it by stating "The State shall provide for the establishment, support and control of a state-wide system of public schools free from sectarian control."

HEEN: Well, of course, that means free from that type of control, but still it's not free of charge so far as the children are concerned.

WOOLAWAY: I'd like to --

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment. Delegate Wist, would you care to answer that question?

WIST: Yes. What I was trying to say was that the concept of education free of charge to children at the support of taxpayers has become so universally accepted that I don't think it's a serious issue.

HEEN: Then if the language is changed as suggested by the last speaker, then it would leave it up to the legislature to say whether or not there shall be any charge, tuition fees, book fees, and so forth and so on. Is that correct?

WIST: That is correct. It's inconceivable to me, however, that a legislature would ever charge tuition of children attending public school.

HEEN: I'm in agreement with you there. Then, I think that that should be the amendment, as suggested by the last speaker. "A state-wide system of public schools free from sectarian control"; and then we might as well go on and make a further amendment by cutting out the word "all" before the word "physical." Just cut the word out, "all" out and then you've got it. I so move. I move that the first sentence be amended by deleting the words "free, non-sectarian" appearing in the third line and adding after the word "schools," before the comma, the words "free from sectarian control."

CHAIRMAN: All right.

HEEN: Insert that before the comma, and delete the word "all" after the word "including" in line 5.

CHAIRMAN: Deleting what, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: The word "all," just the word "all."

WIST: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the first sentence of Section 1 be amended by deleting "free nonsectarian" appearing in the third line and inserting after "schools" and before the comma "free from sectarian control," and also deleting the word "all" appearing in the fifth line of the first sentence.

KAWAHARA: I'd like to speak again in reference to the statement of the word "free." When I made my remarks in regard to that word, "free," I did not have any serious objection to incidental fees charged by the university or incidental fees charged by the various public libraries. I was speaking in reference to what is stated on page 2 of the Standing Committee Report No. 52 in which there is a statement as follows—as already stated by the delegate from the fourth district, Delegate Anthony—that "provisions shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools, which shall be open to all." If the schools -- public schools shall be open to all children, why shouldn't a state university be open to all who are interested in going to the university even if they do have to pay incidental fees? And that is the point I've been wanting to be cleared. I don't understand. If it's free for the children to go to public schools, why shouldn't it be open, likewise, free for young people to go to the state university?

ANTHONY: I think a proper interpretation of the section as amended would make all the public schools and the university open to all students of this territory. It would simply remove any doubt that the university and the public school system could charge the incidental fees. Notwithstanding the fact that, as I understand it from one of the delegates on the committee, that even with the word "free" in there, it has been upheld by the New York Court of Appeals that such fees could be charged. I think there is no problem there about everybody in the territory being eligible to go to the university or attend the public schools.

KAUHANE: I believe that it is the intent of the committee in submitting the proposal that a free public school system is to be provided by the State. If it is that intent that the committee has, then I feel that no educational system is free if and when we charge children rental for textbooks. Therefore, I feel in all sincerity, that the State shall provide such uniform service as basic textbooks free to the children attending public schools so that we keep in step with that intent of a free public school education system for the children of the state. Certainly, as admitted here, it is the universal intent to accept a free public school education. Public school education is not free when we charge the children attending a free public school fees for textbooks and other fees that are now being collected in the public schools. The State should provide for such textbooks and it should be a uniform service of basic textbooks, free of charge, for the use of the children attending public schools, and no other fees for such educational system should be collected from children attending the public schools in a free system of public education.

LOPER: I am very sympathetic with the remarks of the last speaker. It is possible under the present Organic Act to eliminate book rentals, fees for courses, by the mere act of the legislature appropriating funds to do that. If we attempt to write in here that the public school shall be free in the sense that the speaker intends, might it then not be considered unconstitutional to charge book rentals and fees and, therefore, the net result would be a curtailment of educational opportunity unless the necessary appropriations are made by the legislature?

KAUHANE: I believe that is the intent of this Convention when it sits here to draft a constitution and providing provisions by which the educational system of the State shall carry forth. I think it is with that intent that a free public school system means free and that the basic textbooks should be provided by the State and appropriations shall be made for such -- taking care of such incidentals. Certainly, we have left it to the legislature in the past, following the dictates and terms of the Organic Act. But we were unable to secure such a legislation from the legislature. We've never been able to pass it. Why? Because we have groups of individuals, organizations, who are fighting the passage of such free basic textbooks. Certainly, as I said, that if the educational system is to be free, the public school system is to be free, then the State should make it free by providing that the basic textbooks for children attending public schools should be free. Why should we charge them?

Today we have charged those children -- we have collected from those children attending public schools a textbook rental fee. We have been collecting that sum of money for a period of the past 20 years, and what is the ultimate result? For a classroom of 30 children, each child has been assessed a book rental fee. If the child has failed to pay, the parents have been forced to pay. And what has been the ultimate result in a free public school education system that we have today? We read in the Record, although the Record is considered a subversive newspaper, and yet we find glaring headlines that reads a graduate is not given his diploma because he has failed to pay some fees that are asked of him by the school which he's graduating from, a sum of $20 and he is being deprived of the right of securing his diploma. If that is a means of stopping a boy from getting his free education, then I say all fees that are now being collected by the public schools system, rather than having a continuation in the State of Hawaii, that such fees should be taken care and absorbed by the State. The basic textbook fees that are now being collected, are fees that have been collected for a period of 20 years.

In 1945, a survey was asked, that the number of public schools collecting such book rental fees and what basic textbooks were being furnished in schools. That report as submitted to the 1945 legislature shows in a classroom of 30 or 40 children, basic textbooks -- you find only ten basic textbooks, and yet each child has paid for a basic textbook so that he may receive a proper education under free public school system. And yet, they have collected all of this money and what has happened? Instead of receiving 20 arithmetic books, they have only ten basic arithmetic books. So, we find a system which I feel it's a spoil system as far as free education is concerned and I honestly feel that the government should provide the necessary basic textbooks for all children attending public schools free of charge.

SMITH: I would like to bring in the discussion right now that as far as I can find out there is no such thing as anything being really free, that with freedom goes responsibilities. If the last speaker can work out a system where the students will be responsible for books which would be coming from the taxpayers' money, I think that you'd find everybody going along with him.

HAYES: I feel that we have discussed a long time on this paragraph and therefore, I'd like to move for the previous question.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

SERIZAWA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Hayes, will you kindly withdraw the --

HAYES: I withdraw. I thought everybody had spoken.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Serizawa, did you wish to be recognized?

SERIZAWA: In reply to the delegate from the fifth district, the section as proposed by the Committee of Education leaves it open for the legislature; if they see fit to give free books to the school children, they may do so at their discretion. This section does not tie it down; it leaves a great number of the decisions to be made by the legislature. For that reason the committee felt these matters are legislative matters and it should be given -- the legislature should be given the authority to do so.

YAMAMOTO: I'd like to make a statement in reference to this matter of dual control. I did not concur on the Standing [Committee] Report No. 52, with a note, "I do not concur with section of report dealing with dual control." On page 10, second paragraph, it reads,

> Since the funds for new construction are, under our present system, requested by the respective counties from the Territory, the initiative lies with each county as to what and how much new construction, and where, when and how the county plans to build. The result is that one county has utilized Territorial credit to build facilities other than classrooms for its school children while in other counties the children have not sufficient classrooms in which to go to school, or in some instances are going to school in fire-trap structures.

The reason I object to this particular paragraph is this, that on the County of Hawaii, as you know, there's a joke, "You can forget your lunches but don't forget your umbrellas." Now, as far as the construction of the gymnasium, that's a very important factor because of the fact that during recess, you don't want your children to stay in your classroom and bicker around the desks. That is the reason why I objected to this statement - - to this paragraph. I wanted to have on record that is such.

OKINO: I move that we recess, subject to the call by the Chair.

SERIZAWA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I believe there was a motion for a previous question before I recognized Delegate Serizawa. Delegate Hayes.

HAYES: I so move.

SAKAKIHARA: A previous motion was put, but there was no second to that previous motion.

CHAIRMAN: There was a second but he withdrew it.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

APOLIONA: Will you kindly state the previous question?

CHAIRMAN: Question is shall the main question be now put. All those in favor should signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. Carried.

Question is on Delegate Heen's amendment which reads, amending the first sentence, the first sentence reads, as amended, "The State shall provide for the establishment, support and control of a state-wide system of public schools, free from sectarian control, a state university, public libraries and such other educational institutions that may be deemed desirable, including physical facilities therefor." Ready for the question? All those in favor signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried.

LOPER: Is it now in order to ask for the approval of Section 1 as amended?

ANTHONY: The second sentence of Section 1 is a duplication of what we have already adopted in the Bill of Rights and, therefore, I would move to delete it. For the benefit of the delegates, I will read Section 6 of the Bill of Rights, second sentence.

> No person shall be denied the enjoyment of his civil rights nor be discriminated against in the exercise of his civil rights because of religious principles, race, sex, ancestry or national origin.

A child is a person within the meaning of the Bill of Rights; therefore, this sentence is unnecessary.

CHAIRMAN: Was there a second to the motion?

KAWAHARA: Is there no second to that motion?

CHAIRMAN: I don't believe there was a second.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the second sentence appearing in Section 1 be deleted.

KAWAHARA: I move to amend the motion by inserting the words, in lieu of the words deleted, "There shall be no dual standard schools."

KAUHANE: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is that an amendment to the amendment, or is that an amendment to the section?

KAWAHARA: That's an amendment to the motion to delete the sentence.

CHAIRMAN: I don't believe that's an amendment to the amendment, and the Chair so rules.

KAWAHARA: It's an amendment to the motion to delete that section.

CHAIRMAN: That's out of order just at the moment, Delegate Kawahara.

SMITH: I'd like to make an amendment to that motion, leaving the first part of that sentence in and deleting only, "nor shall public funds be appropriated to the support or benefit of any sectarian, denominational or private educational institution." This right, "There shall be no segregation in the public education institutions of this state because of race, color or creed," I believe that was left out of the Bill of Rights provided that the Education Committee insert it in theirs.

KAUHANE: I understand the motion put by Mr. Smith. I second his motion.

CHAIRMAN: Will you rephrase your motion, Delegate Smith?

SMITH: That the sentence will be left in with the deletion, "nor shall public funds be appropriated for the support or benefit of any sectarian, denominational or private educational institution."

TAVARES: I object to that deletion. I think that's in H.R. 49; it's specifically prescribed. I think it should be stated there in those words.

KAUHANE: I move for the previous question and the motion made by Mr. Smith.

BRYAN: I'd like to talk to the motion made by Mr. Smith.

CHAIRMAN: Very well.

BRYAN: And also to the remarks made by the delegate from the fourth district, Anthony. I believe that in different states in the United States, segregation has not been claimed to be discrimination. In other words, by providing equal facilities they have claimed no discrimination and yet have upheld segregation, and that - -

ANTHONY: May I interrupt, will the speaker yield? That is not an accurate statement; in fact, as recently as two weeks ago the Supreme Court of the United States outlawed the time-honored segregation in the I.C.C. of separate diners, and the schools also.

KING: I'd like to speak against both the amendments, both the amendment to the amendment and the original amendment. It seems to me there's no harm done in repeating the language in this article that is partially repeated in the Bill of Rights, but this particular paragraph goes further than that, and puts in the ban that Delegate Smith is trying to accomplish by his amendment.

SMITH: To clear the atmosphere, I'll withdraw upon the understanding that if there is a duplication the Committee on Style will eliminate the duplication.

DOWSON: In speaking to this point about eliminating amendments and amendments to the amendment, I think it's highly important to recognize that one word in particular which was mentioned, the word "sex" should be left out of this section because Kawailoa School and the Boys' Industrial School at Waialae have classes maintained by the public school system. I don't have to explain that segregation as far as sex is concerned is highly necessary in that case.

SMITH: That is why the Bill of Rights [Committee] agreed to leave that "no segregation" clause in the public schools, leave it out of the Bill of Rights, because of sex and they put it in here "because of race, color or creed."

CHAIRMAN: Do you withdraw your amendment, Delegate Smith?

WIST: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Wist, state your point.

WIST: There's nothing before us. The mover of the original amendment has withdrawn his motion.

CHAIRMAN: Point is well taken.

HOLROYDE: I move for the adoption of Section 1 as amended.

KAWAHARA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Holroyde, will you withhold your motion? I believe Delegate Kawahara wanted to make an amendment. I believe he can do so now.

KAWAHARA: Well, in the committee the question of dual standards was discussed and nothing was actually done, partly because of the fact that we couldn't arrive at some reasonable language. I don't know that it's very important to include that item in the Constitution; however, I had in mind something like this. After the words, "because of race, color or creed," I thought of something like this: "There shall be no segregation in the public educational institutions of this state because of race, color or creed, or because of other conditions not inconsistent with the provisions of the Constitution."

In other words, there may be other conditions, other than race, color or creed on which discrimination may be based, and if we limit it to race, color and creed, it may leave the way open for a type of segregation that might not be consistent with the letter or the provisions - - the general provisions of the whole Constitution. I have no objection to the provisions here, "No segregation on the basis of race, color or creed," but, my question is, does it cover enough ground?

LOPER: In reference to the comments of the previous speaker, I'm very sympathetic with the purpose he has in mind, but he will recall that the committee felt that it was impossible to say that without making the section very long. As a matter of fact, there is a law now which authorizes and directs the department of public instruction to provide for the gradual elimination of the dual standard, that is English standard schools, and they are proceeding on that basis. But if you wrote in here that "There shall be no segregation because of race, color or creed, or ability in the English language," or something of the kind, you would make it illegal to section within a school on the basis of educational need and it would throw a block in the way of the educational program. It seems to me that that can be safely left to legislation. The present law is rather general and loose but we are proceeding under it. It could be made more specific at another session of the legislature.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. I'd like to ask the last speaker whether or not you at one time had a school especially established for backward children? Perhaps we still have that down at Kakaako way.

LOPER: Yes, we still have it.

HEEN: That would be a proper segregation there.

KING: I'd like to rise on a point of information. The language as it exists, now that it has not been amended, would not be satisfactory to cover the point Delegate Kawahara has in mind, recollecting and noting that the additional language you proposed might work against the schools for backward children, schools for people who are ill or other types of handicapped children? This language plus what the legislature might do in the future should eliminate the difficulty that you have in mind. Is that not so?

TAVARES: I should like to refresh the memories of the delegates here since Delegate Mizuha is not here. At the hearing on the Bill of Rights before the Committee of the Whole, I'd like to read what the minutes state, which I think is substantially correct.

> Delegate Mizuha said this: "Likewise the question of segregation in the public schools, it is proper at this time that the question be asked of the chairman of the Education Committee whether that would be incorporated in tne education article of the Constitution."
>
> Delegate Loper stated: "The committee proposal in its present form does include a sentence against such discrimination, but it has not yet been passed in its final form by the committee."
> Delegate Mizuha: "Then I believe that it is proper that the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole will include a provision for a clarification that that question should be considered raised again in the event that the education article doesn't contain that provision of segregation in the public schools, and I so move."

And later, Delegate Mizuha withdrew his motion but stated that he would offer it if it is not included.

Now in fairness to Delegate Mizuha, if we are going to exclude this, we ought to postpone this until he is here.

KAUHANE: I'd like to amend Section 1 in the following respect. After the words "a state university" - -

CHAIRMAN: We've already taken up the first sentence. Would you kindly hold it up, Delegate Kauhane?

President King, do you wish to be recognized?

KING: Well, I'd like to move we adopt Section 1 as amended, leaving all the language of the second paragraph of that section.

ANTHONY: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 1 be adopted as amended. Are you ready for the question?

NIELSEN: There's just one little change I would like to see made. It says "a state university." Couldn't we make that plural so that when we grow a little more we can have another university? Is that taken care of somewhere else?

KING: May I clear that? There is a further clause, "and such other educational institutions as may be deemed desirable." I believe in the committee report there was some discussion of junior colleges and other types of higher schools that can be established by the legislature.

HEEN: If the State of Hawaii - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kauhane is recognized.

KAUHANE: Am I proper now to request an amendment to the Section 1 of the proposal? I'd like to amend Section 1 of the proposal in the following respect. After the words, "a state university," include "junior college or colleges."

HEEN: I rise to point of order. Section 1 has already been agreed upon.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, a motion was made to adopt Section 1 as amended. I believe the motion to amend is proper at this time.

KAUHANE: I further amend Section 1.

HEEN: So far as the first sentence is concerned, that has already been agreed upon, there was an amendment to that sentence; and the only part that's subject to amendment, further amendment is the second sentence.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the point is well taken, unless the delegate asks for a reconsideration of the first sentence.

KAUHANE: Although we have adopted Section 1, which is true, but I think that the delegate from the fourth district does realize that further amendments can be made. We have done it in our legislative proceedings and I can't see any difference if we do it there when it's adopted and it's further amended that we can't do it here.

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

SAKAKIHARA: I'm in accord with Delegate Heen, that the first sentence of Section 1 has been agreed upon.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has so ruled, Delegate Sakakihara.

SAKAKIHARA: In order to enable the delegate from the fifth district, I now move that we reconsider our action on first sentence of Section 1.

KAUHANE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the first sentence of Section 1 be reconsidered.

SERIZAWA: Does not the phrase "such other educational institutions" cover that?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair thinks it does. Delegate Loper, can you - -

LOPER: Will you repeat the question, please?

SERIZAWA: I stated that does not the phrase "such other educational institutions" cover the question that the delegate from the fifth district raised?

LOPER: It seems so to me, yes.

TAVARES: I'd like to answer that. It may be so, Dr. Loper, but during the last session of the legislature we attempted to have passed [by] the legislature a bill creating or the establishment of junior colleges. Although one of your officials within your school department has agreed or was behind the establishment of junior colleges, we were unable to pass that piece of legislation in the '49 session. In sessions prior to that, attempts were made to have junior colleges established and we were unable to pass it through the legislature. I agree with you that the language here specifically takes care of that thing, but I would like to see the State provide such establishment of junior colleges, so that we definitely will have the establishment of junior colleges to take care of the number of children graduating from high school.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to ask the last speaker this question. Does he want in the Constitution a mandate that we shall have junior colleges whether we need them or not?

TAVARES: It is not a question of whether we need it. We do need junior colleges here. The people, the citizens here have demanded establishment of junior colleges by their requests of legislators to introduce such bills, not only the 1949 sessions [but] in sessions before 1949. There is great need for the establishment of junior colleges here. What is happening to a number of children graduating from the high schools who are unable to get into the University of Hawaii?

HEEN: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair was just going to put it. There is a motion to reconsider and I'd like to put the motion at this time. Ready for the question? All those in favor of reconsidering Section 1 - - sentence 1 of Section 1 signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is lost.

The motion pending is to adopt Section 1 as amended.

SAKAKIHARA: I rise to a point of information. If the remarks made here by the chairman of the Committee on Education is true, that "such other educational institutions as may be deemed desirable" will be considered as a catch-all phrase, then why did he specifically limit a state university?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Wist, would you care to answer that question?

WIST: The committee considered that very carefully. There's no disposition on the part of the committee to oppose the establishment of junior colleges. We recognized that the time is probably here when we'll have to give serious consideration to the establishment of junior colleges. There was a question as to who should control junior colleges. We purposely left that out because that is a controversial question; we don't know whether the control should be vested in the board of regents or the department of public instruction. We'd rather leave that for future decision, because at the present time we just don't know. Then, too, I think it's pertinent to point out that we specifically provided the phrase, "such other institutions as may be deemed desirable, to take care of this very problem that has been raised here by the two previous speakers.

SAKAKIHARA: We're not here to discuss who controls it. The question is, is there an immediate need for establishment of a junior college or colleges and if we are to spell out specifically here to provide for a state university - -

HEEN: I rise to a point of order. As I understand it, the delegate rose for a point of information. He got the information. There's nothing to argue about now. He's arguing about further amending sentence one.

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman, the delegate raised a question that he didn't realize and levied upon the question of who shall have the control, and admitted there was a need for a junior college.

WIST: There was one part of the question that I did not answer that I intended to. The reason we mentioned university specifically—because it is an existing institution. We might establish other institutions of higher learning, probably shall in time, junior colleges or full-fledged colleges.

HEEN: Point of information. There was an inquiry made about whether or not we might have more than one university. If we need two universities we can have one in Hilo and call it University of Hawaii at Hilo, same as the University of California at Los Angeles. That's only one state university.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of information. I'd like to know if the preamble of the Constitution for the State of Hawaii will read in substance, "We, the people of the State of Hawaii"?

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman of the Committee on Miscellaneous answer that?

CASTRO: The Committee has agreed to include the words, "the State of Hawaii."

KAUHANE: Include "We, the people of the State of Hawaii"?

CASTRO: That's right.

KAUHANE: If that is the preamble, then my point of information is this, that the people of the State of Hawaii do demand that the inclusion of junior college or colleges be made in this Section 1.

TAVARES: I again object on the grounds of point of order, that this is entirely out of order.

CHAIRMAN: I am putting the question now, Delegate Tavares. The question is, shall Section 1 be adopted as amended? Ready for the question?

NIELSEN: Just a point of information. In this "including physical facilities therefor," that doesn't keep the counties from the maintenance and repairs of the school buildings?

LOPER: No.

NIELSEN: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN: Now, ready for the question?

KAWAHARA: Do I understand that we are voting on this whole Section 1?

CHAIRMAN: Section 1 as amended.

KAWAHARA: Including the second sentence?

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

KAWAHARA: What is the disposition in regards to the question of dual standards? Is there going to be some remark made in the Committee of the Whole as to disposition of that question, made by delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Tavares?

CHAIRMAN: If the delegate wants that incorporated in the report of the Committee of the Whole, I believe we can take care of that adequately.

All those in favor of the question signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. Carried.

We have been at this for a little over an hour. I believe in fairness to the clerks, we should take a short recess.

(RECESS)

PORTEUS: As to the continuation of this article this afternoon, I do want to call attention to the delegates to the fact that the Legislative Committee has almost brought to a close some of its matters on reapportionment but they do have some troublesome problems on redistricting. Having examined some of the rest of the article and talked to some of the people, I don't think you are going to get through education this afternoon, in any event, I'd like to see a vote put now as to whether or not we rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again. I think we're not going to be able to finish this afternoon in any event, and I'd like to see the Legislative Committee get to work early this afternoon, so I now move that this committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

BRYAN: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that this committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

H. RICE: I think the Secretary is an optimist. I've watched that Legislative Committee for quite a while. I think we have a better chance getting through the educational proposal today.

PORTEUS: I've attended some of their meetings until eleven and I left here at twelve o'clock last night. It seems to me that in troublesome matters, as they have before that committee, it takes a little time to shape these things up, and they are shaping up; they are working out. I think that it's very important to let the chairman of that committee have an opportunity to bring this matter to a head in the committee because you cannot expect a report to be written under several days' time, and if he can get through most of these questions this afternoon, it will give him the weekend. Isn't that right, Mr. Chairman?

HEEN: That's correct, and after we resolve ourselves into the Committee of the Whole, I'll give notice now that I'm going to ask for an extension of time for the filing of the final report.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

HEEN: It's supposed to be filed today.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Rice.

C. RICE: [Statement not recorded]

PORTEUS: Well, I'm sure that if the delegate from Kauai wants to sit around here that nobody would have any objection to it. I think it might be very instructional if he would care to attend the meeting of the Legislative Committee. I'm sure the chairman of that committee would be delighted to have him.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Motion's carried.

JUNE 17, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come to order? When we rose to report progress yesterday afternoon, we had just completed Section 1 of [Committee] Proposal No. 11. It is now in order that we take up Section 2. Dr. Loper.

LOPER: The remaining four sections of this article or Committee Proposal No. 11, Sections 2 to 5 inclusive, each include one new idea or provision, except Section 4, which, I believe reflects the present situation.

Coming to Section 2, board of education, the new provision is contained in the last line following the comma, a provision for the governor to appoint members of the school board from a panel nominated by local school advisory councils to be established by law. Otherwise the appointment of school board members is as it is at present. This provision is the result of a long discussion of the pros and cons of an elected school board and the arguments on both sides of that question are on page 5.

KELLERMAN: A point of order. I don't think we have anything before the Convention. I move the adoption of Section 2.

NIELSEN: Second the motion.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 2 of Proposal No. 11 be adopted.

LOPER: Thank you, Delegate Kellerman.

Speaking to the motion, the arguments for an election of school board members include these: that is, that it's more likely to be a representative board, sensitive to the will of the people; provide for closer participation in school matters; more in line with our democratic concepts of republican form of government; and 85 per cent of the school boards on the mainland, that is local school boards, are elected. Against this is the possibility of drawing the school system into politics, and the belief on the part of many members of the committee that persons that would otherwise be available for board service would be unwilling to run -- spend the time and money to be elected to a non-paid position, and at the same time run the risk of being defeated. Furthermore, it was pointed out that state school boards on the mainland are typically either appointed or hold their positions ex officio.

However, it is recognized that there is a need for more local participation in school matters, and this need was reflected in the report of a survey of education made thirty years ago in these islands by the U.S. Office of Education. This provision for local advisory committees is not unlike the recommendation in that report of that survey. In that case, the recommendation was that local school boards be appointed by the commissioners of public instruction. In this case, we leave the matter of how the school advisory committee in each locality should be set up to the legislature. We add, also, one function that was not provided in that report of the survey, namely, that they shall submit names to the governor from which he would make his appointments on the school board.

Now admittedly, this is new and has not been tried, but I would call your attention to the fact that much of the provision for this is left to law. The committee discussed a number of ways in which these panels could be drawn up and the advisory committees or councils could be put in their positions. I think we might skip that unless there are questions about it.

One more point. If it should turn out that the legislatures in the future wish to give more local autonomy, the panel of names could be very short. If they wish to go in the other direction by providing for a long panel, several times as many names as there are board members to be appointed. You can see that it would leave the matter relatively wide open for the governor to appoint almost anyone available on a particular island.

I'm prepared to answer any further questions if there are any on this Section 2.

KAWAHARA: While I'm in accord with the provisions of the section as written, I have since then been wondering about the last phrase, "from a panel nominated by local school advisory councils to be established by law." As I get it, if the phrase is left as it is—I don't know whether I am correct in my interpretation or not—however, I get this implication that the law may dissolve such council. I don't know if this is a correct interpretation of the phrase or not. I would suggest that the phrase read something like this, "from a panel nominated by local school advisory councils" period; and then the statement, "established by law," be written in a separate sentence. That is, "The legislature may establish such laws to create such councils." I don't know what the delegate - -

LOPER: Does the delegate mean that you wish to remove the possibility of such councils not being provided for by the legislature?

KAWAHARA: No, this leaves the - - this gives the sole power to the legislature to create such councils, does it not?

LOPER: Yes.

KAWAHARA: And likewise to do away with such councils. If it can create, can it not do away with such council?

LOPER: Perhaps one of the lawyer delegates can tell us. It seems to me there is at least a suggestion of a mandate in there when we say, "from panels nominated by councils to be established by law."

TAVARES: It's my opinion that such a provision would be mandatory once a council is established. The legislature could not eliminate it without putting a substitute in its place. The only trouble might come if the legislature didn't initially pass the law. We might have a little trouble mandamusing the legislature, but once they did so, I don't think they could remove it without a substitute in its place.

CHAIRMAN: Is that a satisfactory answer, Delegate Kawahara?

KAWAHARA: I believe that's satisfactory.

One more question with the wording "local school advisory councils." The question was asked whether or not the word "counties" should be included somewhere. I'm not so sure that it should be included, the words "various counties." However, I think the word "local school" will take care of that.

LOPER: We used the word "local" deliberately because we didn't know how many counties there would be or whether it might be advisable to have more than one council on the Big Island, for example, or perhaps on this island.

MAU: The motion that was put this morning was for the adoption of Section 2. My understanding is that we only agree tentatively to the various sections and then go back again. Otherwise there would be no opportunity to deal with all of the remaining sections at one time. I have in mind, for instance, an amendment for purposes of discussion which might eliminate Sections 2, 3, and 4 and portions of 5. Now if we adopt Section 2, no opportunity would be given to make that type of a motion to amend or delete unless there was reconsideration. My understanding has always been that we just tentatively agree to it. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair believes that that will be agreeable with the chairman of the Committee on Education. Is that correct?

LOPER: The purpose of the Committee of the Whole is to get full and free discussion, as I understand it. The motion was to adopt, but on previous committee proposals we have tentatively agreed to. I leave it to the Chair.

MAU: Well if that is the understand - -

CHAIRMAN: The Chair believes that is the understanding and we shall proceed along that line, Delegate Mau.

MAU: May I ask a question on Section 2? Is it the intent of the Committee on Education to have panels from each of the islands or counties, and that the governor will have a free choice to choose from all of the panels from each of the islands, or did the committee intend to have - - to limit the governor in his selection from representatives in each island or each group?

LOPER: The intention of the committee is in line with your second position, but we're leaving that to be spelled out in the law.

MAU: Oh, I see. And does the - - is the intent covered in the committee report so that there is no question - -

LOPER: Yes, it is.

MAU: - - how the legislature shall pass that law?

LOPER: Yes, it is.

KING: I would only like to comment that historically these local advisory boards are not new in Hawaiian history. In the very beginnings of education - - public education in Hawaii they had such school boards even in the smaller districts, but transportation wasn't as speedy as it is now, and they had a good deal of jurisdiction and authority over the school activities in their respective districts and worked in conjuction with school agents, they called them in those old days. Is that not correct, Delegate Loper? So, this is not a novel idea. It's a return to an old idea that made the jurisdiction over public schools localized and in touch with the people whose children were going to those schools.

TAVARES: Perhaps I'm being a little technical, but the way I read this section it seems to me that this is the interpretation to which it is susceptible in its broadest implications. If a statute, or the laws providing for the school board, provides for a state-wide board without any particular residential requirements, it seems to me it would mean then that the local board would be a state-wide board to select the panel. If, on the other hand, the legislature by law provides for members of a locality - - people to have residence in a locality, then there would be advisory boards for those localities to pick a panel. It seems to me that that would make the statute as broad as, I mean that is the broadest implication I read into it. Now there is nothing here that necessarily says that the members of the school board shall be limited to localities. I am not sure that that was the intention. If it is, I'm not sure that that has been accomplished.

WIST: I'd like to answer that or speak to that. The thought of the Education Committee was that undoubtedly when the legislature sets up the board of education, which we regard as a statutory matter, that the board would have representation from the various islands. Our thought was that we would have a panel, and we have used the word in the singular there, that would represent the nominees from the various islands. The governor could select on a state-wide basis any individual recommended by any advisory committee from any island; but where he is appointing a local representative, he obviously would have to appoint somebody who represented the local district. Now if that is a county as set up by law, it would be a county.

LOPER: In further reference to that point, it is spelled out in considerable detail on pages 5 and 6 of our report in which we indicate the recommended number, nine; that they be for staggered or overlapping terms; and that they come two from the Big Island, one from Kauai, one from Maui, one from rural Oahu, one from Honolulu, and the others at large; and the local school council shall function as an advisory committee to meet with the local school board member and district superintendent; and that the panel be a combined list made up of specified number of names submitted by each of the local school advisory councils, from which the governor would appoint both the local board member from each county or district, and the board members at large.

NIELSEN: I think that this should be spelled out in some way so that the council in each district in which a board member is appointed is indicated in the Constitution. In other words, if a commissioner is to be appointed from Kona, the panel from Kona is the one that would put in the names of those they recommend. So that if after the word "counties" you insert, "in each district from which a board member is appointed as established by law," I think it'll take care of it.

HEEN: I was just about to speak along the same line, and this may solve the problem. After the word "by" in the third line of the first page of this proposal, being the last line on that page, after that word "by" insert the words "each of such." Then in the first line of the following page, substitute the words "as may" for the word "to," so that the section will read:

> There shall be a board of education to be appointed by the governor, by and with the consent of the Senate, from a panel nominated by each of such local advisory councils as may be established by law.

If that sounds good to the delegates, I'd so move by way of amendment.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

NIELSEN: Will that take care of the situation where the board member that is to be nominated and appointed for the county of Hawaii?

HEEN: Are you asking me the question, Delegate Nielsen? My thought there was this, that the legislature may appoint - - provide for the appointment of an advisory council, say, to represent West Hawaii, East Hawaii, Windward Oahu, and Leeward Oahu, Kauai maybe two districts and so forth and so on; and then each council would submit to the governor a panel from which the governor is to make his appointment to the board of education.

TAVARES: I am not sure that even that will hit the mark. It seems to me that if it is a good policy—and I see no objection to it, I'm for it—of having some geographical requirement or geographical distribution of the members of the board, we ought to write that in pretty clearly into this section. For that reason, I suggest that we defer action on this and let us think about it a little longer, and before the day is up I would like to present some wording that would more definitely tie down the legislature to seeing that there is at least partial geographic distribution or there is leeway in the legislature to give either entire geographic distribution to your board or part geographic distribution and part at large.

SERIZAWA: I second the motion to defer.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we defer action on Section 2 until later in the morning.

KAWAHARA: When Section 2 is to be reconsidered, I wonder if the following could be considered. Nothing in Section 2 at the present time states whether or not, as I can see it anyway, whether or not this board shall be non-sectarian or non-partisan. This is a separate section; I see nothing in there which definitely states that this board shall be non-sectarian or non-partisan. I wonder if those two phrases could be incorporated in that particular section?

CHAIRMAN: All ready for the question?

ANTHONY: That would be absolutely impossible. You don't want a bunch of eunuchs on the board. They've got to have beliefs of some kind.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question to defer action on Section 2? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. The ayes have it.

LOPER: If I'm not out of order, I'd like to call attention to the fact that the Education Committee made its article so brief that it is now being asked along "Barristers' row" that we make it longer.

CHAIRMAN: Shall we now proceed to Section 3?

LOPER: I move for the adoption of Section 3.

LARSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Will you kindly change the motion to tentatively approve Section 3, Delegate Loper?

LOPER: I withdraw the motion and remake it to tentatively agree to Section 3.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 3 be tentatively approved. All those in favor - -

WHITE: I have some question about the use of that word "full" in there. According to the committee report, it's not intended to cover every phase of it. In other words, I am concerned about whether that would cover full - - include all financial control as well, and whether the statement wouldn't be just as well - - the provision be just as well with the "full" out?

ASHFORD: I'm not in favor of the last clause of that section, "and shall be ex officio a voting member thereof." I think when the members are drawn from the several counties, the superintendent should be the executive officer of the board, but should not be a member. If he becomes a member, then it is a constant source of embarrassment to everyone concerned, in the event that the board and he disagree upon policies; and I think it will diminish the true control of the board over the education. I, therefore, move to insert a period instead of the comma after the word "board" and delete the last clause.

H. RICE: I would have agreed with the delegate from Molokai, but past experience has shown that it's a mistake - -

HEEN: Point of order. That motion has not been seconded. Nothing before the - -

MAU: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that a period be inserted after the word "board" and the rest of the sentence striken.

H. RICE: I say I would have agreed with the delegate from Molokai, but past experience has shown us that without the member being a voting member of the board, the school commission could go into executive session and go on on executive matters that really concern the school department and the professional people would not have a voice. We know from past experience that was true on the - - in the University of Hawaii. They got in a jam because the regents would - - the president and the executive officer was not a member of the board of regents and they would go into a huddle in different parts of Honolulu and then put through programs that were detrimental to the University. I am a member of the Territorial Aeronautical Commission. I feel that even in this case the director should have a voice so that he sits in and has a voice with the rest of the commissioners because in that way you keep the - - we could not go into executive session which they have done previously on that board, and it hasn't helped them out.

Practically you are correct, but - - I mean theoretically you are correct, but practically I don't think it works out. It's to the interest of the school department to have professional men represented at every meeting of the board and without his being a voting member of the board, as I see it, they could go into executive session and the professional people would be ignored and they might steer the Territory wrong in educational matters.

HEEN: Will the delegate yield to a question?

H. RICE: Yes.

HEEN: In the Aeronautical Commission you have, as I understand it, an executive director, and is that director a member of the commission?

H. RICE: No. I say it's wrong.

HEEN: Oh, I see.

H. RICE: I say it's wrong but that's the way the legislature set us up, and they could - - there's no reason why - - the commission might meet on Maui and without the director, and do something that was radically wrong. I, for one, would have - - want him to sit in always, and I for one want the executive department in this case to sit in with the board and have a vote. He does now and it's worked out all right. He's never used it. In case of a tie or when there is not a quorum present he has to vote.

HEEN: I suppose that if the director were a member of the board and the board wanted to discharge the executive officer, it would be very embarrassing, of course, to have that officer sit in with the rest of the members of that board. However, they can adopt what the political parties do—they hold a caucus —and they can hold a caucus, and then have it all decided and when they have a meeting introduce your resolution dismissing the officer.

H. RICE: And secret ballot.

HEEN: Either secret ballot or not.

WIST: I'd like to refer to two things. In the first place, in practice, the executive officer who is a member of the board never meets with the board when they are considering his appointment or reappointment. That's a common practice. Secondly, I'd like to point to the fact that our board of education is different from boards of education throughout the mainland in this respect, that it combines the responsibilities of both the local board, which has the general control, and the state board, which has oversight. Now, in state boards it is commonly the practice for the executive officer to be a member of the board. In local boards, however, the practice is the other way. But we have the situation here where the executive officer, the superintendent, is serving in the dual function. He's working with the board that has the function of control and oversight, and it's in view of that, largely, that your Committee on Education felt that the superintendent should be appointed by the board but remain on the board. It's worked out very well in university practice and we believe it's worked out well as far as the superintendent being a member of the board in local practice.

DOI: The fact that the present superintendent is a very excellent administrator, I believe, should not influence our thinking here. I think we should decide on principles. Should we examine Section 2 we will find that the superintendent is appointed by the board. In other words, he is not an equal with the members of the board of education. Also at this point I would like to inject and say that he is not a representative of the teaching profession as stated on page 9. He is an administrator of the teachers. He was not elected by the teaching group, and therefore the argument advanced on page 9, I think, is invalid. I believe the superintendent, if made a member, at the most, should not have a voting - - should not have a right to vote. I am, therefore, speaking in favor of the motion.

TAVARES: I have had occasion in the course of the last 20 years at least to observe the operations of two kinds of boards, and I think those ought to be borne in mind very clearly. One is the professional, well-paid board of persons who are chosen because they are specially qualified to serve on that board and are paid adequate compensation to do their job. For that kind of a board I am a hundred per cent with the proponents of this amendment. But for the type of non-paid, non-professional and sometimes ignorant members of the boards that run this type of a department, I am against giving them absolute power. The only professional man many times upon the board of education is the superintendent of public instruction himself. He is the man that should run that department and should be given almost a free hand. If he's no good, he ought to be fired; but if he's good, he ought to be backed up almost 100 per cent. And what do you have running him? A bunch of laymen—and I'm not derogating from their abilities—a bunch of laymen most of whom, if not all of them, are not educators, who are not acquainted with the theory of education, many of whom don't know very much about education, as a matter of fact. And even when you have local boards appointing them, you may be limited in your area as to not - - so as not to have a really highly skilled, professional man to put on that board. And, therefore, unless you put the superintendent of public instruction, who is probably the only qualified man on education on that board and let him tell them what his policies - - what the policies should be; give him an opportunity to argue with them every time before they make a decision; be sure that he will be at those meetings, and they can't exclude him; then I think you are going to have trouble running your department.

Furthermore, there is one other thing and that is the matter of pay. If you make this head of the department subordinate entirely to a board, the classification commission will rate him one salary rating lower than any other department head, and that is a very important thing in securing your superintendent of public instruction. That has been done in the past and it can happen again, where because a board is entirely over a man, they say, "Well, the board fixes policies; therefore, part of your duties are purely ministerial; therefore, you have a lower salary than the superintendent of public works," or the auditor or some other person who may not have any more work and any more responsibility really than this superintendent of public instruction. I urge the delegates here not to vote for this amendment.

KAWAKAMI: In your first sentence, "The board of education shall be empowered to establish," I'm not too satisfied with that word. Maybe some other word such as "formulate" may be a better word.

MAU: I'd like to ask a couple of questions. I wonder if the committee would be satisfied to make the superintendent an ex officio member without the right to vote?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Wist, will you care to answer that question?

WIST: We discussed that, but we didn't think it was too meaningful to have the superintendent a member without vote. In other words, if he's to have any prestige in his position—and certainly the superintendent as the executive officer and a professional leader should have some prestige—that prestige would come only if he also has the vote. In other words, putting him on the board without a vote is almost the same as not putting him on the board at all.

MAU: Another question. This goes back to what has been expressed many, many times in the early days of the Convention that certain matters which are legislative should be left to the legislature, and those proponents of the idea of a concise constitution and empowering the legislature to do many of the acts that we are trying to enact here in the Constitution, whether or not they gave thought to that theory in writing out Sections 2, 3, 4 and portions of 5 of this proposal? I wonder if the committee could answer that question. In other words, why shouldn't we leave these things to the legislature if you believe, as the delegates have often expressed, many of them have expressed, that certain matters should be left to the legislature to deal with?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Loper or any member of the committee care to answer that question?

LOPER: I would like to have you recognize another member of the committee on that point, or another delegate.

KAGE: This matter of having the superintendent a member of the board, that is a voting member, is a matter of principle and we believe that it should not - - I mean, it should be included in the Constitution and not be left to the legislature. And while I'm standing, I would like to bring to the attention of the delegates that in 24 out of the 39 state boards on the mainland, the superintendent is a voting member. That leaves nine; the nine other states do not have any state boards.

KAWAHARA: This argument that a certain number of states has a certain accepted practice, therefore, we should embody such practice in our Constitution, may not be as sound as it looks on the surface because 85 per cent of the local boards, local school boards on the mainland, are elected.

ASHFORD: I assume everyone else who wanted to has spoken. I'd just like to reply on the matter.

ANTHONY: I haven't spoken. I've risen several times, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: If you'll examine the document published by the - - "Studies of State Departments of Education"—that's a United States publication—you will discover that they are broken down into three - - four categories, that is the relationship of the chief officer of education to the board. The first is whether or not he is a member of the state board. There are 24 states that make him a member. The second is whether or not he is a secretary of the state board, and there are 21 states that make him the secretary. The third category is whether he is the chairman, and there are 11 states that make him the chairman. The last category is that he is the executive officer of the state board, and there are 26 states. So far as I can discover from this pamphlet, there is no state where he is not in some capacity a member of the board.

Now, it strikes me that we ought to follow our - - we ought to follow the best in education. You take a jurisdiction like Pennsylvania that has an outstanding school system, you'll find that the chief commissioner of education is a member of the board with full voting power. You find substantially the same thing in New York. The particular table that - - particular text does not state the voting power but it strikes me a very anomalous thing, if you are going to put him on the board, not to give him the power to vote. I certainly think he ought to have the power to vote if he is going to be on the board, and it seems to me that this survey clearly demonstrates that he should be, in the judgment of the wisest states, be on the board. Therefore, I am against the motion.

TAVARES: May I say just one more short sentence?

CHAIRMAN: I believe Delegate Mau wanted to be recognized.

MAU: The delegate who attempted to answer my question merely stated that he wanted to see that the superintendent of public instruction be made an ex officio member with voting rights, and that is why they want to see it in the Constitution. But mine went to - - my question went a little broader, not only to that but to the other sections which asked why they desired to spell it out so much in detail even to the powers expressed in the board of education and the board of regents. Now, I understand that in the committee report the statement is made that it is the desire of this Committee on Education to write a peoples' Constitution. Now, I'm wondering whether they had in mind a fear of the legislature.

WIST: I think the answer is in the fact that we had geared these basic principles to the concept that the legislature does have the power. We have not spelled out how the board - - the number of the members of the board and a lot of other things that we want to be left to legislative action. All we have done is to express in principle certain things that we think are sound.

MAU: May I at this time withdraw my second to the motion made by the delegate from Molokai.

SHIMAMURA: May I just inquire of the gentleman from the fourth district, Delegate Anthony, whether he said in the great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania the commissioner of education is a member of the board or not? He is? Thank you.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

OHRT: I'm against the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: There is no amendment.

NIELSEN: Point of order. I'll second that motion of Miss Ashford.

OHRT: I think this is a very important decision that we are about to make. I'd like to call your attention to the fact—the university has already been mentioned—but we have the board of health that now operates in this way, and we also have the department of agriculture and forestry that acts in this way, and I think they are functioning very well. Now the question of whether the executive should be the chairman of the board is rather important, I think. In talking to Mr. Wilbar of the board of health, he doesn't think that the executive should be the chairman because in presiding at meetings he thinks the chairman is busy enough watching the technicalities of the meeting then, and he should be given time to really present his own problems. I'm against the amendment.

TAVARES: Unless we write qualifications for membership on this board into this article so as to be sure that people with a very broad background that are really qualified to run a department all alone, are the only ones that can be nominated and appointed to this board, as is done for instance with the National Labor Relations Board or with the Tax Appeal Court or some other boards that have full-paid employees or members, I think that it would be very dangerous not to put the only man who is going to be qualified possibly on the board as a voting member. Remember the other members are non-paid, non-professional people who who are not going to be giving full time to even studying the problems of the school department, and I think they are going to need every bit of advice that they can get from the superintendent and they should be made to have him present at every meeting, and this is the only way you can be sure of that.

LAI: I move the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, I believe the movant of the amendment should be given an opportunity to answer some of the arguments.

ASHFORD: I think the arguments here have resolved themselves again into the same argument that has been brought out here repeatedly. We say that all power resides in the people and we are afraid of them. We want to qualify some exhalted persons or else the people are not to have a word to say. Now, it's perfectly obvious from the argument what the purpose of this is. It is to put a man in there that will override the opinions of the various members of the board.

KELLERMAN: May I talk on that point just a moment? I, in committee, was opposed to the superintendent having -- being a member of the board and having a vote, but it was on the basis of principle. It seemed to me that a man who was appointed by a board did not sit with or could not be in an equal position. He is employed under a contract or by appointment and he would not be on an equal basis, as I could see it, legally or psychologically with the board which appointed him and had the power of removing him from office. But I do not believe that there is any more opportunity for the superintendent of public instruction, whether a member of the board or not, to control the board. In other words, I don't think it comes down to his being a member or having a vote. He only has one vote out of nine. He obviously, as the executive officer and the representative of the department of public instruction, will be the professional advisor of the board. If he is that strong a personality, even in his executive capacity, he can control the board. I don't believe control of the board would come from his being a member with a vote when that vote is one out of nine. I think that will come down entirely to his personality and the personality of those who are put on the board, and not to whether or not he has a vote on the board.

CHAIRMAN: Question now is, shall we adopt Delegate Ashford's amendment.

KAM: In Section 3, "The Powers of the Board of Education," they have the power as I see it to appoint the superintendent of public instruction. But I think we should be consistent. If they are appointed, all these department heads that are appointed should be appointed by the governor and upon confirmation of the Senate. I don't see why they should have the board appoint the superintendent. May I have somebody from the committee answer me that?

KELLERMAN: I'll attempt to answer that. Our feeling was quite strong that the board of education should be as independent a body as possible and should have the administrative control of the department of public instruction, as well as the power to establish policy. If it does not also have the power to appoint the superintendent of public instruc tion, it is giving it power in law but without power in fact. Under the present circumstances—and, of course we are not discussing personalities—but under the present law the superintendent of public instruction is appointed by the governor. The board of education is appointed by the governor, or the commissioners of public instruction as they are now called. Under the law, the commissioners have the responsibility for establishing policy and administering the school system. However, they do not have direct power over the superintendent. The result is possibilities of conflict and the actual fact of not having the degree of control which the law pretended or intended to give them in the language set up in the statutes. The power of control through an executive officer can be recognized and can be effectuated through the power of appointment and the power of removal, and not simply through the opportunity under the law to ask advice or to give orders which they have no real effective power of carrying out because they don't have the power over the person who does the carrying out. This was intended to give the board of education greater power in carrying out the policies and the administrative procedures which it approves.

If I may say something further, somewhat in contradiction to Mr. Tavares' argument for highly trained or professional people on the board of education. It is the opinion of most of us, and also of the educators who have appeared before our Committee on Education, that the board of education should be a lay board. The board of education should not be made up of professional educators. Its purpose is to correlate the social and economic and political thinking of the community as parents of the children going to school with the professional group who carry out those policies, that it should not be a board made up of professional educators who maybe have professional points of view to put into effect which may at some time run in conflict or not be in accord with what the parents and the citizens of the community feel they want their children to learn and how they want them to be taught. Education is essentially the developing of citizenship and carrying on the social, political and economic thinking of a people. It is basic, and in that sense a lay board is a protection to any community as against any professionalized group, in any regard, who may be carrying out those policies It is for that reason that we do not intend or have not intended that the board of education be made up of professional educators, but all the more reason for having one professional educator there at all times, as I quite agree on that point, to present adequately and fully the professional point of view.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kam, does that answer your question?

KAM: That was very good, but I don't see it. We should be consistent in our appointment of department heads, and I was just talking to Dr. Loper. In the present setup now he is appointed by the governor. He has a much freer hand to do what he wants. But as it is, by appointment by the board, the board would control his actions. I believe that we should -- something should be done with the appointment of the superintendent of public instruction.

KING: I raised a point of order, but it seems to me the delegate from the fifth district, my colleague, is speaking to another subject entirely and not the pending amendment. What he has - -

CHAIRMAN: I believe it is - - President King, I believe it is part of the section. It deals with the appointment of the superintendent of public instruction and it's germane to Section 3.

WIST: I'd like to supplement what the delegate at my right has just said by making this statement. In the time that I've been in the islands, nearly 40 years, there has been several surveys. In 1920 there was a survey of education made by a commission representing federal government. Then we had a survey of industry and education in 1930 promoted, I believe, by our local industries. Then we had a survey in 1940 promoted by our own legislature, through the holdover committee. Then we had a survey in 1943 conducted by Dr. Draper from the University of Washington. Every single one of those surveys reported the recommendation that the superintendent should be appointed by the board and should be the professional executive of the board.

CHAIRMAN: If there's no objection, the committee stands at recess.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: At the time of the recess, Delegate Mau wished to be recognized, and I now recognize him.

MAU: I was going to propose an amendment in regard to the appointment of the superintendent, but after the recess, I am convinced I should not make that amendment. But I have another question to raise on the motion. If this superintendent is given the power to vote, assuming you had a board of nine and the rest of the members of the board, the eight members, desired to remove this officer, what would be his status? Would he have a right to vote still? I think he would. Wouldn't there be difficulty in the event that you had a man in there not like our distinguished executive officer of education now, and I think he's an excellent officer. You'd have a great deal of . . . [rest of sentence not recorded.]

AKAU: I'd like to answer the delegate from the fifth district's question, if I can or may. It would be rather unethical for the member who's being talked about to be there to vote for himself or against himself. It has been the practice in the past, certainly at the university and I'm sure on the board of commissioners in the school department, if such a matter presented itself—and it has in the past at the university—that the president is not there. It will be unethical. And so, to answer your question, he would not be there to vote either for himself or against himself just on general principles.

MAU: I would agree with the last speaker that if Dr. Loper were the individual involved that he would absent himself from such a meeting. But I'm not so sure that that has happened in the past. You recall that there was a great shake-up in recents years at the university. There was also a great deal of stew in the department of public instruction about 10, 12 years ago.

AKAU: May I just pursue that one step further and answer fully? The situation referred to at the university was just exactly what Mr. Mau said. In other words his answer - - his question is the answer to the argument. The 10 or 12 years ago to which he refers was the time when the executive officer, that is, the president, did not have a vote. That was the situation and since that time it has been changed and so the president does have a vote now. That's why the situation was so smelly.

WHITE: I'd just like to say for the benefit of Mr. Mau, there's nothing novel about this. This happens in corporations quite often. They always seem to get by with it.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment before the committee now is this. The insertion of a period after "board" and the striking of all that follows the word "board." The question is shall the amendment be adopted. All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. The noes have it. The motion is lost.

The question before the committee now is shall Section 3 be tentatively approved.

WHITE: I'd like to propose an amendment to Section 3, and that is, in the second line to eliminate the word "to" and in the third line to eliminate the word "full," so that the sentence would then read: "The board of education shall be empowered to establish policy and exercise control over the public school system through its executive officer," and so forth. I move that it be amended that way.

H. RICE: I second the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the word "to" in the second line following the word "and" be deleted, and the word "full" appearing before the word "control" in the third line be deleted.

LOPER: I think that that amendment is a good one. I see no objection to it, and I believe that is the opinion of the committee. Some question has been raised about the use of the word "establish" and there may be a preference for the word "formulate" before "policy." If there is a feeling that that word should be changed, it might be incorporated in this amendment or in a subsequent amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That's not in the form of a motion, Dr. Loper?

LOPER: It might be left to the Style Committee. I'm not changing the amendment.

SAKAKIHARA: Following up that statement by the last speaker, I believe the question of establishing policy is the power vested in the body which creates the board of education, and I believe the proper language for that would be to establish - - to administer policy or formulate policy rather than establish policy. I move that the amendment - - I move that we amend the word "establish" to read "administer."

NIELSEN: I second that motion.

HEEN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

HEEN: Point of order. I think we have an amendment pending now, and it's hardly germane to that amendment. It can come afterwards, if necessary.

SAKAKIHARA: I bow to the suggestion of Senator Heen.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the amendment proposed by Delegate White? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. The ayes have it. The motion is carried.

SAKAKIHARA: I now move that the word "establish" in the second line of Section 3 be amended to read as "administer."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

NIELSEN: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that the word "establish" appearing in the second line of Section 3 be deleted and the word "administer" substituted in lieu thereof.

LOPER: I think I understand the thought back of that amendment, but I would like to call attention to the fact that the matter of formulating policy is primarily for the legislature. But beyond that, the board - - the very purpose of the board is to establish further educational policy or formulate it so long as it is not contrary to existing law. That is one of the provisions now and it is one of the functions of the school board of the State, I'm quite sure. We have, for example here, a policy manual in which the policies laid down by the school board as well as those by the legislature are printed for the use of the schools. If you say administer only, you don't cover the whole thing.

SAKAKIHARA: In that case I wish to withdraw my original amendment and substitute the word "formulate" in place of "establish."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

KAGE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the word "establish" be deleted from the second line and the word "formulate" be substituted in lieu thereof.

KAWAHARA: I wonder if it's in order to ask a question here. We're giving the board a lot of power, a lot of control, and also we have given the superintendent voting power on the board, and yet we haven't quite agreed on Section 2 as to the composition of the board, how many members shall the board be composed of or whether - -

CHAIRMAN: Are you speaking to the amendment, Delegate Kawahara?

KAWAHARA: Yes, because of the fact that the word "formulate" policy or "establish" policy has a very serious implication in my opinion. When I asked the question, shall clergymen or persons of holy orders be allowed to sit on the board, I had the section here, Section 3, "establish policy" in mind. If we empower the board to "establish policy" in our Constitution, it's going to mean that the board may establish such policy from time to time as guaranteed in this Constitution. If we are going to do that, I think it's necessary for us to establish the board first and find out what this board is going to be composed of: how many members, who is going to serve on it, are we going to pay them, so forth and so on. Where are they going to come from?

AKAU: I was going to raise the question of which comes first, the chicken or the egg ? Do you establish something first and then formulate it afterwards or is it the other way around? I don't know. I raise the question because there may be a fine line of demarcation, but I don't see it.

SAKAKIHARA: In reply to the inquiry or statement of the delegate from West Hawaii, I think Section 2 of the proposal takes care of that. That left it to the legislature.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Trask, did you wish to be recognized?

A. TRASK: Yes, if you please. I just wondered whether or not in Section 3 the question is to establish and to have - - exercise control. Those words "establish"—I'd like to ask this of the chairman, perhaps—the word "establish" and the word "control," they have reference evidently to the public school system. Now, doesn't that refer altogether to the intellectual program and really not to facilities and other things which are connected apparently in Section 1? In other words, the word "establish" and the word "control" have, do they not, reference to the public school system which refers to the intellectual program which may change from time to time, and that's why you have people on the board from every phase of life?

LOPER: I'm not sure that I follow the question entirely but I agree with what I believe you mean. The laymen who are members of the board would establish or formulate policy within the law for the control and governing of the schools. Now, the question of the control over the physical facilities is referred to in the first section and can be delegated by the State or the legislature either to the school board or to the counties, as it is at the present time. I'm not sure that I answered your question.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Trask still has the floor.

A. TRASK: The legislature, according to Section 1, will make provisions with respect to physical facilities and so forth, and other matters. And the power of the board, it seems to me in this Section 3 if I understand it, is limited to the intellectual program of the school system, which may change from time to time. Is that what the words, "public school system" mean? It doesn't include the physical facilities obviously because that is in Section 1, and is it not therefore true that the words "public school system" refers to the intellectual program?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Wist, would you care to answer that question?

WIST: Yes, I think Delegate Trask is quite right. The intention here in this particular paragraph is to give to this board of education the responsibility for formulating internal policies and that would refer, of course, to any responsibilities that had been given to it by the legislature. Now if the legislature has not given to the board the responsibility for the maintenance of school plants, which we have left entirely up to the legislature, then it would not include those.

A. TRASK: Well, what I have in mind is this, more graphically stated perhaps. If the legislature, it seems to me, pursuant to Section 1, sought to interfere with an intellectual program for the public school system, it would seem to me that it would violate the powers given to the board in Section 3, and therefore any legislation to that effect would be unconstitutional.

Now, I am putting to me a very real question. Say the legislature would advocate, well, let's say communism - -

LOPER: May I rise to a point of personal privilege in connection with this inquiry? I think I see the point that you are making. It certainly was the intention that this formulation of policy should be subordinate to policies laid down by the legislature. It was not intended that anything enacted by the legislature should be unconstitutional because of this language. I think then that perhaps we should say, "The board of education shall be empowered to formulate policy not contrary to existing law," or something of the kind.

HEEN: May I ask the speakers to yield a moment?

LOPER: I'll yield.

HEEN: I have an observation to make. This part of this section might be amended to read as follows:

> The board of education shall have control over the public school system.

When they have control, they certainly have the power to formulate policies and everything that goes with that control; and if that is accepted, why we can eliminate all further arguments.

CHAIRMAN: Is that merely a suggestion, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: Well, if it sounds good to the delegates, I so mov that after the word "shall" in the second line, delete all the words up to the word "control" appearing in the third line, and insert for what is to be deleted the word "have."

My position is this, that if you give the control of the school system to the board of education, they certainly can decide and establish or formulate policies.

WIST: As one member of the committee, but not speaking for the committee, I would gladly accept that amendment because I think it covers the problem without us encountering the difficulty that the senator from the fifth district has raised.

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

A. TRASK: Point of order, please.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Trask, state your point.

A. TRASK: Will the delegate from the fourth district, Judge Heen, restate his amended section, please in full?

HEEN: After the word "shall," delete the words "be empowered to establish policy and to exercise full," delete those words and substitute for them the word "have" so that that part of the sentence shall read: "The board of education shall have control over the public school system through its executive officer."

SAKAKIHARA: I second that motion of the language as proposed by the delegate at large from the fourth district. I would like to ask him this question. Won't that give the absolute control of the public schools to the board of education?

HEEN: I didn't quite get the purport of that question.

SAKAKIHARA: According to your amendment, you will vest the entire power of the - - over the public school system to the board of education - -

HEEN: That's correct.

SAKAKIHARA: - - by constitutional mandate, and that the legislature will have no power whatsoever other than to make available funds for the public school system.

HEEN: No, I don't think that follows. In order that that board may function, of course, the legislature will have to appropriate the necessary funds.

SAKAKIHARA: But you would deny the legislature the power to formulate any policy under the terms of your amendment?

HEEN: No, the legislature still has the power to formulate - - form policies.

SAKAKIHARA: Or establish policy for the education system? You say here, according to your amendment, the section will read, "The board of education shall have control over the public school system through its executive officer."

HEEN: That's correct, and with that control, of course, they will have the right to formulate policies.

SAKAKIHARA: I beg to differ with the gentleman. It will be a paradise for the courts and lawyers to go to court to struggle out and fight it out as to the interpretation and intent of that amendment. When one - - perhaps you say the board of education shall have control over the public [school] system, and I beg to differ with the delegate at large from fourth district. In my opinion, I believe that we are throwing the entire power of the policy to the public school system to the board of education. I think that should be reserved to the legislature and its duly elected representatives of the people.

LOPER: There can be no question about the soundness of the position taken by the last speaker. One of the chief functions of the State board of education is to carry out and to enact - - be responsible for carrying out the laws on education enacted by the legislature, but I think that a slight modification of the wording might take care of that.

TAVARES: It seems to me this is one of that type of word which is sufficiently, shall we say, ambiguous so that by a report of the Committee of the Whole interpreting it in accordance with what has been agreed to be the proper interpretation, that this does not prevent the legislature from passing laws to fix policy, that we can then accept the section now with the amendment suggested by Delegate Heen.

KAWAHARA: I wonder if the word "empowered" could be left in there and a possible amendment like this: "The board of education shall be empowered to exercise control over the public school system," eliminating the word "full," eliminating the words "establish policy." If they are going to control, they are going to establish policy anyway. However, I think the word "empowered" should be in there.

A. TRASK: I am very, very much concerned about this word "control" with reference to the power of the board of education over the public school system. I'm thinking about a concrete situation where the legislature would say, as a matter of policy, that the school system of Hawaii shall teach American history from a particular slant that may be agreed upon by the legislature, and then the school board would be defiant of such a program. Now the concrete question is whether or not the powers given to the board in Section 3 are specifically broad so that the legislature would be embarrassed and could not formulate such a program of intellectual planning. It seems to me that the words "control over the public school system"– and I take the words "public school system" to mean an intellectual program–that it would give the board power. The legislature might be embarrassed in telling the board what to do.

Now, of course, maybe it's one of those words that Mr. Nils Tavares refers to, as to power and how far it can go and how far it's going to be limited. I'd like to think that the legislature would have some participating control over the establishment of policy since in the motion now pending, the words "be empowered to establish policy and to exercise full" have reference really to legislative participation in the policy of the school. So I am troubled.

HEEN: May I relieve you of that trouble, Mr. Speaker?

A. TRASK: Well, I'm just convalescing.

HEEN: Another observation. That clause might read this way:

> The board of education shall have power to administer the affairs of the public school system.

How does that sound?

KELLERMAN: May I go a little bit into the history of these two phrases? It was the discussion of the committee and its discussion in the committee records that to "formulate policy" and to "exercise control" mean, in a sense, two different things. That the board should have the power to formulate policy, to exercise control through the superintendent of public instruction, the control being administration, control of administration through the superintendent of public instruction, not to formulate policies through the superintendent of public instruction. There is a basic difference in theory of power between the two terms. I'm not now discussing the inter-relationship of the power of the board with the power of the legislature. I'm speaking of the power of the board with the power of the superintendent of public instruction now and the way the system works. We deliberately chose to "formulate policy" and "to exercise," to draw a distinction between those two ideas. The formulation of policy is independent of the superintendent, other than in his vote or in his relationship with the board, but the exercise of administrative control of the public school system is to be exercised through the superintendent.

Now, to make that clear–it may sound like just language to most of you–but the educators have this in mind, and those of us who have been - - had some relationship in studying the school system, there has been criticism frankly of members of the board of school commissioners - -

HEEN: I rise to a point of personal privilege. I withdraw my motion.

SAKAKIHARA: May I make this suggestion? By amending Section 3, after the word "empowered" in line 2 thereof, and after there insert, "as authorized by law to formulate and administer policy."

DOI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded.

H. RICE: Mr. Chairman.

SAKAKIHARA: May I speak on the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Rice.

H. RICE: With the exception of the amendment made by Delegate White, I'd like to have the section stand as is. I think the delegate from the fifth is unduly exercised over the reading of this section. The board of education has to "play ball" with the legislature; the cash comes from the legislature. They look after the affairs that the legislature wants them to, they have to "play ball" and it's been my experience that they always bow to their wishes. Therefore, I am against amending this section in any other way but by the original amendment by Delegate White.

SAKAKIHARA: I offered the amendment so that there will be an expressed understanding. It says, in reading the amendments, that the legislature - - the powers reserved to the legislature, it empowered in accordance with law or as authorized by law.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara, will you withdraw your first amendment, then?

SAKAKIHARA: All right. I'll withdraw my first amendment, with the consent of the second, to read "empowered in accordance with law."

WIST: May I say in answer to that particular point that that is exactly what the committee intended when it used the word "empowered." Somebody has to empower the board, and the body that would empower the board is the legislature. That's why we used the word "empowered."

SAKAKIHARA: To me - - I beg to differ with the last speaker. The wording as used here, "empowered," is an expressed power delegated to the board of education by this Constitution, and is entirely different from that as delegated to it by the legislature. I'm willing to lay those two amendments to the committees' pleasure, either as "authorized by law" or "in accordance with law," to establish policy and so forth.

KING: Some members have to leave to keep appointments between now and noon, and I was anxious to bring the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act up for third reading; so I move now that the Committee of the Whole rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again in order that we may take up the Hawaiian Homes Act on third reading; then again resolve ourselves into the Committee of the Whole.

PORTEUS: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again. All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried.

Second Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come to order.

SAKAKIHARA: I at this time make a motion to amend the second sentence of Section 3 after the word "empowered," insert the following: "as authorized by law"; and in lieu of the word "establish," the word "formulate."

DOI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 3 be amended by inserting, after the word "empowered," "as authorized by law," and substituting the word "formulate" for the word "establish."

SHIMAMURA: May I speak to that amendment? I don't think it's wise, in my humble opinion, to make that "as authorized by law" because if you did that the board's powers would be considerably restricted. We should have it, I think, in the original wording of the delegate from Hawaii in which he said "in accordance with law," which would be a much happier and much more accurate, I think, wording. If you have it "as authorized by law," the construction may be possible that—and I think it would be so construable—that for every act of policy-making, the legislature must have specifically authorized it. To make it "in accordance with law" will be more accurate.

WHITE: I feel the same way about it. To put in "as provided by law," you might as well eliminate the whole section. There's no need for it.

DOI: I have heard some discussion on this amendment before we recessed, and I believe Delegate Wist did express some sentiment of the committee. I think this addition here, the amendment here, only makes clearer the intention of the committee in the first instance.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion? All those in favor - -

HEEN: I think the suggestion made by Delegate Shimamura is the better one. That is that "The board of education shall have power to establish policy in accordance with law." That would give the legislature some measure of control over the policies that might be formulated by the board of education.

SAKAKIHARA: As movant of the amendment, I accept the suggestion offered by Judge Shimamura.

DOI: As second, I also accept the suggestion.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment is now the insertion of the words, "in accordance with law" after the word "empowered in the second sentence; and substituting the word "formulate' for "establish." Ready for the question?

LOPER: Is there any difference between inserting that after the word "empowered" or inserting it after the word "policy"? "The board of education shall be empowered to exercise or formulate policy in accordance with law."

CHAIRMAN: I believe that's a matter of style, don't you, Delegate Loper?

HEEN: I think the two words "be empowered" should be changed to "have power." "The board of education shall have power to establish policy in accordance with law."

CHAIRMAN: Hearing no second - - there is no second. The question is on Delegate Sakakihara's amendment.

LEE: Mr. Chairman, I believe - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kage.

LEE: Oh, Delegate Kage is recognized.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the amendment - -

LEE: Mr. Chairman, I thought you said you recognized Delegate Kage.

CHAIRMAN: He seconded the motion, Delegate Lee. It's been moved and seconded that Delegate Sakakihara's amendment be further amended to read as follows:

> The board of education shall have power to establish policy in accordance with law, and exercise control over the public school system through its executive officer, the superintendent of public instruction, who shall be appointed by the board and shall be ex officio a voting member thereof.

SAKAKIHARA: May I speak to the amendment?

HEEN: Will the gentleman please yield just a moment? Was it the idea that even in the matter of control that that control shall be in accordance with law? If that is the intent, then the amendment should be "The board of education shall be empowered in accordance with law to establish policy and to exercise control." In other words, the legislature will then have some measure of legislating in all matters concerning control and also concerning policy.

SAKAKIHARA: That's what I was going to talk to, the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Will all the movants of the amendment withdraw the amendments so we'll have only one amendment on the floor then?

HEEN: My amendment would read this way: "The board of education shall have power, in accordance with law, to establish policy and exercise control over the public school system," et cetera.

CHAIRMAN: Is that acceptable to Delegate Sakakihara?

SAKAKIHARA: That is acceptable.

ASHFORD: Then the word "formulate" drops out? Is that it? It's still "establish"?

CHAIRMAN: It's still "establish."

SAKAKIHARA: Senator Heen, would you accept an amendment to that amendment? Instead of "establish," "formulate."

HEEN: In order to avoid any further argument, I'm willing to accept that amendment.

SAKAKIHARA: So that it would read "to formulate policy."

CHAIRMAN: There is now only one amendment on this floor. It reads, "The board of education shall have power, in accordance with law, to formulate policy and exercise control over the public school system through its executive officer," et cetera. Ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Question.

KELLERMAN: Before we vote on that, may I ask a question, information? What happens if no law has been passed on a policy? Is it understood by this Committee of the Whole that in that instance the board of education is free to adopt a policy? There may be many things that will arise on which policy questions will have to be determined when the legislature is not in session and has not passed upon it at all.

It seems to me that you are restricting the board there. It may feel under this authority that it must wait until the legislature meets and formulates the policy and in accordance with that it can go ahead. It seems to me that you make it very difficult for the board to operate unless we as a committee make it very clear that the board in absence of any law on the subject is entirely free to formulate policy. Otherwise we are putting them in a very difficult situation.

LOPER: In answer to the last speaker, as I heard the amendment read, it said that "The board of education shall have power, in accordance with law." It seems to me, "in accordance with law" refers back to the power, not to policy in accordance with law. That was the point, I think, of Delegate Heen's moving it back to its original position in that sentence.

Further commenting on this amendment, as one delegate not speaking necessarily for the committee, although I have a slight preference for the original wording, I see no serious objection to this amendment. I think it goes to the matter of whether the Convention wishes to place pretty full responsibility for the school system on the board of education or to indicate, specifically, as suggested by the amendment, that what we do is and must be in accordance with law. I assume that in either case, laws passed by the legislature affecting education become the responsibility of the board of education.

SHIMAMURA: I believe that the words "in accordance with law" are certainly construable to mean also "not contrary to law," so that in the event that there is no law, then the board may formulate policy in the absence of any law; and also, where there is law, not contrary to law.

WIST: I wonder if the mover and seconder of this motion to amend would accept that wording, "not contrary to law." Perhaps that would clear this up.

TAVARES: I agree very heartily with Delegate Shimamura that in the absence of a law covering a specific area on which decision has to be made by this board, they would have the power to make that decision as long as it is not contrary to law. That's the implied power of every department head or board, that where it's within the area that he is authorized to act in and the legislature hasn't specified a controlling policy, he exercises discretion.

DOI: As the seconder of the motion, I would not accept the suggestion made by Delegate Wist. I would rather see the suggestion in the committee report.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

KAWAHARA: I'd like some information on this statement here. Is there a great difference between the words "shall have power" and "shall be empowered"? The amendment, "shall have power," to the previous statement, "shall be empowered," was made --

HEEN: May I answer that question? I did that because in the article on health and general welfare we used that term throughout, "The State shall have power," and "The State shall have power" down all along the line. It's just for uniformity of language.

KAWAHARA: That is what I had in mind, because in reading the sections in health and public welfare, each section starts out with "The State shall." In the provisions of this section on education, the first section starts out with "The State shall provide" and the second section does not say anything about the State. I wonder if some clarification could be made on that point there for not putting in the word "State," or is it really necessary to put in the word "State" in each section when the word "State" was used in the various sections in the article on health and public welfare?

HEEN: If the delegate will look at that article on health and welfare, he will find that in the first section of that article a phrase that reads, "The State shall provide for the public health" and so on, instead of saying "shall have power." So in this first section you use the same style, that is, "The State shall provide for the establishment," and so forth and so on.

CHAIRMAN: Are we now ready to vote on the amendment? All those in favor of the amendment signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. Hearing none, the motion is carried.

TAVARES: I move that we take up Section 2 now.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment. I think it is proper now to have a motion for the adoption of Section 3 as amended.

HEEN: I think that there should be another amendment to that Section 3. I will state it at this time and if it appeals to the delegates of the Convention, I will move to reconsider the action which has just been taken on that section. Going down to the last clause, commencing with the word "who" in the fourth line, "who shall be appointed by the board," I think there should be inserted there somewhere as to the power either of removal or as to the tenure of the superintendent. My suggestion would be that that phrase should read as follows: "who shall be appointed by and serve at the pleasure of the board and shall be ex officio a voting member thereof."

CHAIRMAN: There's nothing before the - -

ASHFORD: I would like to second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded - -

HEEN: I then move - -

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: There's no motion. I think it was only a suggestion.

HEEN: That was a suggestion, and if there is any merit in it, I would move now that we reconsider the action taken on Section 3.

CHAIRMAN: We're still on Section 3, Delegate Heen.

HEEN: Oh, I thought that that was approved.

CHAIRMAN: No.

HEEN: Oh, very well. Then I will move that after the word "by" appearing in the fifth line of that section, the following words be inserted: "and serve at the pleasure of." I move that amendment.

ASHFORD: I second that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we insert the words "and serve the pleasure of" after the word "by" appearing in the fifth line of Section 3.

TAVARES: If there is one thing that's certain in the common law, the decisions of the courts, it is that the power of appointment includes the power of removal at will. It's utterly unnecessary to put that in here.

WHITE: I raise the same question. Are we going to do that with every officer or every executive officer of a board? In the provision under, or in the article on executive powers and functions, this very problem comes up in connection with every board appointment and the head of every executive department. It seems to me it's lot better covered there than in each individual section.

HEEN: I'd like to ask the chairman, or rather the last speaker, whether or not there is a general provision covering this particular point? If there is, then you don't need it here.

WHITE: There is a - - there are two types of - - there is a majority report and a minority report but both of them deal with this particular situation. One recommends that the removal of the - - I think both reports recommend the removal or that they serve at the pleasure of the board.

HEEN: I might state that this particular phrase, "at the pleasure of," is found in the Organic Act in connection with the appointment made by the President of certain officers - - appointments made by the President of the United States of certain officers in the Territory.

TAVARES: The effect of the amendment, if it is adopted, will be this : if the legislature, later on, would like to give the superintendent enough tenure so as to require his removal to be only for cause, you will prevent the legislature from inserting such a protection. In other words, you are cutting down the power of the legislature to regulate this subject. And if you don't say anything, then impliedly the power of appointment includes the power of removal unless and until the legislature otherwise provides. And what's wrong with that?

HEEN: All right, then, I'll withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: There is nothing before the house at the present time except a motion to adopt Section 3 as amended.

APOLIONA: I so move.

LOPER: I second the motion.

SHIMAMURA: I think the use of the expression there, in the third line, "through its executive officer," is not a happy one for this reason. You give the board of education, in the first place, the power to establish policy and to have control of public education, and then you initially at the very beginning, delegate that power to the executive officer. Therefore, I move to amend that section by inserting a period on the third line after the word "public school system' and then start a new sentence there as follows:

> The board shall appoint an executive officer, the superintendent of public instruction, who shall be ex officio a voting member thereof.

LOPER: The use of this particular language - -

CHAIRMAN: There's no second, Dr. Loper.

NIELSEN: I'll second the motion.

LOPER: The use of this particular language was deliberate and for good and sufficient reason and it is in line with the Connecticut study of revision of constitutions, the idea of centering the responsibility for the administration of policies established by the board in its executive officer. I think you will find the same language in a later section with respect to the president of the university and the intention is that the executive officer in each case will be responsible for carrying out the decisions and the policies made by the majority vote of the board in each case. I, therefore, would ask a very careful consideration for retaining the present language.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask the committee chairman, if I may, whether it is the intention of that committee to delegate outright at the beginning the function of establishing policy and having control over the school system, to the superintendent, the executive officer, at the outset?

LOPER: In answer to Delegate Shimamura, the answer is no. The responsibility of an executive officer is to carry out the decision, to implement the decisions made by the board sitting as a committee of the whole and to carry out the policies of the board. He has no authority in his own right except as he exercises the vote.

SHIMAMURA: I understand from many executive officers that he does carry out the policy as established or formulated by any board, and that he does have administrative control over the functions of any corporation or any board, as the case may be. But here, my objection to the terminology, the phraseology, is that it delegates at the outset to the superintendent of public instruction, the executive officer, these functions. In other words, you establish a board and give that board certain powers, and then in that same provision you delegate it to an executive officer. It seems to me it's understood that when you establish a board which has certain functions, that is, policy-making and control over its system, that the executive officer shall, as the administrative officer, carry out those policies.

TAVARES: I think the sense of this is clear. We don't want non-paid, part-time members of a board to be running - - doing the administrative work. The biggest trouble that the board of regents and the board of education in the past has had is when some board member, instead of leaving the carrying out of the administrative policy to the executive officer, went around and tried to monkey with it himself, or herself. [Laughter] I'm trying to be impartial. It seems to me that this is designed to do exactly that, to serve notice that we want these board members to fix policy and then we want them to let the administrative officers carry it out, and if he doesn't, they should either -- they should fire him. If they can't get a board member who has enough of their confidence and who will carry out those policies properly, they should fire him; but they shouldn't be monkeying in these administrative matters over which most of them are very unqualified to act.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Akau, did you wish to be recognized?

AKAU: I just want to -- pursuant to what Mr. Tavares said, the executive officer, who is the superintendent, is there every day. The people from the commission meet once every two weeks or once every four weeks; therefore, the superintendent has to really be on the job and that's why it's worded just as it is—through the executive officer. That's just a clarification of what actually happens. You don't have the people on the commission going every day and sitting in a meeting.

MAU: I think that the speaker from the fifth district is correct in his analysis of the language. He is not against the control through the executive officer, but he is speaking to the formulation of policy through its executive officer. I'm wondering whether or not there shouldn't be a comma after the word "policy" and then the words go on "and to." In other words, reinsert the preposition "to," which had been stricken through a former amendment by Delegate White. Then it would read, "The board of education shall have power to formulate policy, and to exercise control over the public school system through its executive officer." I think that would clarify it.

WHITE: That's correct. I think it would even be an improvement if you went back and -- Excuse me.

MAU: Well, if that has merit, I move the amendment.

LOPER: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Did Delegate Loper second the motion?

SAKAKIHARA: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara, will you state your point?

SAKAKIHARA: I believe this committee of the whole has agreed to amend the second sentence of Section 3 after the word "shall," to read, "have power in accordance with law."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau, that was in the --

MAU: I didn't -- The words are in my handwriting, but I couldn't read it. I agree with that and that should be included.

CHAIRMAN: It has now been moved and seconded that Section 3 be amended to read as follows: "The board of education shall have power, in accordance with law, to formulate policy, and exercise control over the public school system, etc." Is that correct?

MAU: "And to exercise."

CHAIRMAN: "And to exercise control." Ready to vote on the amendment? All those in favor of the amendment say "aye." Contrary minded. Hearing none, the amendment is carried.

MAU: One more question; I know we've been at this a long time. In empowering the board of education to appoint the superintendent of public education, I am wondering whether or not there is an existing precedent for it; and if not, whether the creation of this will be a precedent, good or bad, so that thereafter all boards might be empowered to select their department heads or executive officers.

LOPER: There is ample precedent for the appointment of the superintendent on the mainland in local school boards and in some state boards. It is not nearly as common in state boards, but it's quite common in local city and county boards.

MAU: I'm sorry I didn't make my question clear. I meant any other boards or commissions within the Territory.

TAVARES: I think I can answer that question. Not many years ago the board of health setup was created exactly that way by the legislature and, in my opinion, very ill-advisedly, on the request of Governor Stainback, was then restored to the present system. I think it was a step backward, but it has been done in this territory with the board of health.

CHAIRMAN: We have now before the committee a motion to adopt Section 3 as amended. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. The motion is carried.

We come now to Section 4.

TAVARES: May we go back to Section 2? I have the amendment ready that I was going to suggest. It's on the desks of all the members. A proposed amendment to Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 11: insert after the word "education" in the second line of the section the following, comma, "at least part of the membership of which shall represent geographical subdivisions of the state" comma.

KELLERMAN: I'll second.

TAVARES: I think this actually carries out what the report of the committee wants to be done. I think it reinforces their desire that there be at least in part a geographical distribution of the membership in various geographical areas throughout the state, so as to have local representation. It gives body to the later requirement of the same sentence that there be a panel which nominates -- local school advisory councils which nominates the members of the panel.

LOPER: I would like to speak in support of that amendment. I think perhaps we were a little too brief in our statement. It's fully covered in the report. It was the intention that geographical representation should be provided for.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment -- Are you ready to vote on the amendment?

A. TRASK: Just a question. Does the geographical subdivision, asking Delegate Tavares, refer to the island situation or does it -- would it have reference to perhaps political, representative, senatorial subdivisions?

TAVARES: I purposely used the words "geographical subdivisions" to be broad enough to cover any kind of subdivision the legislature saw fit to make.

CHAIRMAN: The question is shall we vote to adopt the amendment as proposed by Delegate Tavares?

LOPER: One question. Does "political subdivision" mean counties or is it broad enough to include or mean "school administrative districts"?

TAVARES: The word "geographical subdivision" is broad enough to cover any kind of a subdivision, whether it's a school district, representative district, senatorial district or any other type of district.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment now reads:

> There shall be a board of education, at least part of the membership of which shall represent geographical subdivisions of the State, to be appointed by the governor, by and with the consent of the Senate, from a panel nominated by local school advisory councils to be established by law.

LEE: If the word "geographical subdivision" is as broad as I understand it to be, it doesn't mean anything then. In other words, we might just as well leave it out. What is there to be gained because the legislature, or the governor rather, could take them from every -- could take them from the City and County of Honolulu and say, "Well, one was from Nuuanu and the other from Waikiki; that's a geographical subdivision."

HEEN: In answer to that, I don't think the legislature would be that foolish, while my colleague is still in the Senate, to divide up Oahu, for instance, "All that part north -- west of Nuuanu shall constitute one district," and so forth and so on. What the legislature would probably do is this, that one district would be the County of Hawaii, another would be the County of Maui, the County of Oahu -- City and County of Honolulu, and the County of Kauai. That could be done under this general language, and I think the legislature would be intelligent enough to do that.

LEE: I'm sure the legislature would be intelligent enough to do that, but the governor would not be restricted, unless the legislature acted.

HEEN: The governor would be restricted if we passed a law stating so and so and he approves it, and if he doesn't we override his veto.

ASHFORD: May I call to the intelligence of the legislators present that possibly this language might provide for an appointment of someone from Molokai.

KELLERMAN: The committee had in mind two very definite concepts with reference to this board. We carefully omitted all details for fear we would run afoul of the prescription against legislative matter. But Mr. Tavares has ably pointed out the need for calling to the attention of the legislature the committee report which spells out how we would like the board of education to be appointed and from what districts.

On the same theory, I would like to propose a brief further amendment to introduce, after the word "appointed," "for staggered terms." We are very anxious to have the board of education a continuous body. Now if that is legislative and the other is not, I am perfectly willing to accept it, but I want to bring to the attention of this body, and if necessary have it in the report of the Committee of the Whole, that our intention was a continuous body to give it a greater continuity of purpose and of policy and independence.

HEEN: I don't think you need that provision in the Constitution. That can be taken care of in the legislation itself and that has been done quite frequently in all of these -- many of these boards.

LEE: I agree with my learned colleague on that, that the legislature can provide that, but in the Committee of the Whole report we might mention it, and that goes for the amendment. That same argument that my colleague, distinguished colleague sitting next to me, has argued could certainly apply to the amendment because it's in so broad a general term that the intention of the Constitution makers could be incorporated in the committee report. That's where it belongs instead of lengthening the verbiage of the language in Section 2.

TAVARES: One more thing and that is, if, as I believe, you are going to have a Senate controlled by the non-Oahu districts, they will jolly well take care so that the geographical subdivisions will adequately represent the different subdivisions.

LEE: Leave it out.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment, say "aye." Contrary minded. Hearing none, the motion is carried.

We will now proceed to Section 4.

HEEN: No, no, Mr. Chairman. I have another amendment which I did propose at one time, but it didn't seem to appeal to the members. That was in the third line after the word "by," insert the words "each of such"; and then on the next page, change the word "to" to read "as may," I move that amendment.

WHITE: I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded --

HEEN: "From panel" --

CHAIRMAN: May I state the question, please? It's been moved and seconded that the words, "each of such" be inserted after the word "by" in the third line of Section 2; and the words, "as may" be substituted for the word "to" in the fourth line of Section 2.

HEEN: That's correct.

CASTRO: It seems to me that the amendment completely changes the sense of the committee report. "A panel nominated by each of such local advisory councils" would mean to me that each local advisory council would have to nominate a complete panel to the board of education, and as I understand the committee from speaking with members of the committee and reading the committee report, the idea is that the local school advisory council would submit names as a representative of the geographical area which it represents. I think that the amendment is not well taken.

LOPER: Speaking not for or against the amendment, because I think it will work out the same either way, but speaking to the purpose of clarifying the language, we tried to decide whether to make the word "panel" plural and have names submitted on four or five panels and then put them together in one list, and we discussed that in our report, or to leave it singular. The intention is that each local council will submit names and from the names submitted by that council, the appointment of the board member from that particular district would be made. Then if there are two or three board members to be appointed at large, those appointments would be made from the remaining names on the combined list submitted by all of the committees.

KAWAHARA: I'm inclined to agree with Delegate Trask in his interpretation of the word "made." This whole phrase from the words "from a panel" to "established by law" was inserted there because of the position taken by many members of the committee, some members of the committee, that the local units, the local geographical units of people in the various localities should have some representation. If you are going to water that section down, I see no reason why we shouldn't water the other section down, which has something to do with appointments. I think by inserting the word "may," it leaves it up to the legislature to establish such council. I think it should be stated so that the councils -- the panel shall be by this Constitution set up so that people may choose and nominate people on this board of education.

H. RICE: Originally when they drafted this section it said, "from a panel nominated by the county school advisory board," and I objected to the word "county" because I wanted to take in local school boards such as Molokai, Lanai. They would all be able to set up a panel and have some representatives on a panel, even if it was one or two names they may suggest. Because, as you could see, if it were county-wide, why Wailuku might absorb the entire panel. But I think the wording as it stands is O.K., and I agree with the other member of the Education Committee. I think we should leave this as it is.

WIST: I'd like to speak in support of what Mr. Kawahara said. I think it was definitely the consensus of the committee that this was to be a mandate upon the legislature to establish or set up these advisory committees, and if we use the word "may" instead of "shall," we would simply make it permissive rather than mandatory.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares. Delegate Heen, I'm trying to get all the other speakers before recognizing the movant.

HEEN: No, I think I can clear this up now because it's been made clear to me that while you may have panels from various localities where advisory councils are set up, that you need not appoint from that particular district. Therefore, I withdraw my motion and suggest this - - make this suggestion. Delete the word "a" in the third line of that section before the word "panel" and change the word "panel" to "panels." "From panels nominated by local school advisory committees to be established by law." I make that as a motion. The only change would be to delete the word "a" in the third line of the section and change the word "panel" from singular to plural.

KAM: Second that motion.

AKAU: Would that mean then that, say, the island of Oahu could suggest six panels or eight panels rather than a panel? It seems to me that we are changing the sense of the thing when we eliminate the word "a" and make "panel" plural, which might be interpreted to say that one island could present any number of panels and the people could be chosen, rather than from each island. "Panels" I think could be misconstrued.

LOPER: On that point, it may be to the advantage of the school system to have an advisory council on the island of Lanai, another advisory council on the island of Molokai, and still another on the island of Maui, and yet not have that many board members from that county. So I think the change suggested by Delegate Heen is good, to say "panels nominated by local school advisory councils." My question then goes to the point raised by Delegate Kawahara. "To be established by law," or, "which shall be established by law." If the language, "to be established by law," is a mandate, then it is all right as it stands.

NIELSEN: Going back about an hour and a half, I made the suggestion that after the word "councils" we should insert "in each district from which a board member is to be appointed." This amendment that we agreed to awhile ago regarding geographical subdivisions to me doesn't mean a thing, and I would like to see that the councils are from the districts in which board members are to be appointed because that's the sense of the whole thing and we might as well spell it out so there can't be any misunderstanding.

TAVARES: I think now we are going into too much detail. The legislature by law will take care of all of those details. We placed here a bare skeleton and pointed the way to which they must go. I think you can safely leave it to the legislature to take care of those other details, and I think the amendment is proper. I think the amendment means exactly what the committee wanted it to mean as it stated in its report.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? Question is on the amendment proposed by Delegate Heen. The amendment is this: to delete the word "a" appearing in the third line before the word "panel," and to substitute the word "panels" for the word "panel." All those in favor of the amendment say "aye." Contrary minded. The amendment is carried.

TAVARES: I now move that we tentatively approve Section 2 as amended.

KAWAHARA: I'd like to second the motion. However, before we second that motion I'd like to - -

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

A. TRASK: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 2 be tentatively agreed to.

KAWAHARA: In setting up this board, or rather I should say - - start by saying that in the various proposals proposed by various members of this Convention, in one of the proposals at least, there was this statement, "that no clergyman or persons of holy order shall be members of the board." In looking over the report here, No. 52, I may be incorrect, however I fail to find an explanation of that provision. I should think that some provision or some statement should be made in this Section 2 as to whether or not clergymen or persons of holy orders may serve on the board here for this reason. In Section 3 we are giving the board power, in accordance with law, to establish policy and to have control. If we have people, clergymen, persons of holy orders, while I do not say that their judgment may be unsound, if we have such persons on a board of education, it may be that in some future time these people may formulate policy and exercise control over the intellectual pursuits of the children in the public schools. For that reason I believe it's necessary in our article on education that some statement be made to that effect in one of these various sections, and I think that Section 2 is the logical place for that statement to be put in. Therefore, I would suggest that an additional amendment be made - - an additional statement be made after the words, "established by law" in Section 2 to read as follows: "No clergyman or person of holy orders may serve on the board." I so move.

BRYAN: Is there any second to that motion?

C. RICE: I second it.

BRYAN: I believe that that's well covered elsewhere. And I think that the fact that the "established by law" is in here that that law would include the Constitution. I think we have sufficient safeguards against what the delegate is worried about in other sections of the Constitution. I also think that there are many localities where the people that he was mentioning might be very valuable members of the board.

KAWAHARA: Certainly I agree with Delegate Bryan that members of holy orders and clergymen may be valuable members who may serve on the board. I do not disagree with that viewpoint. If I remember correctly in the Organic Act there is some provision as to whether or not clergymen or persons of holy orders may serve on the board. I think this provision is very important. For that reason, I move that Section 2 be amended to read as follows: "No clergyman or - - "

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kawahara, it's already - - you've already made the motion and it's been seconded.

TAVARES: I rise to speak against that motion. I think that's a matter of qualifications which can be fixed by the legislature and is now fixed by Section 1703 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii, 1945, which says: "No person in holy orders nor a minister of religion shall be eligible as a commissioner." I think we're going a little bit too much into detail in putting this provision in, and I submit that we should leave it to the legislature, if it so chooses, to eliminate that, and I think the legislature can be left to take care of that situation.

CHAIRMAN: Ready to vote on the amendment?

LOPER: In answer to the first portion of Delegate Kawahara's remarks as to where the proposal appears, it is in Proposal No. 10, Section 1, and it's referred to in the report on page 19 in the following words: "The board of education to be part appointed, part elected." This was filed in view of the committee proposal on Section 2. That's all that is said about that particular thing in our committee report. I just wanted to clear up that point.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment say "aye." Contrary minded. The noes have it. The motion is lost.

The question now is, shall we adopt Section 2 as amended? Question? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded.

HEEN: That's a tentative adoption.

CHAIRMAN: Section 2 is tentatively agreed to.

LOPER: Section 4 has to do with the board of regents of the University of Hawaii and provides nothing new. It provides for a board to be known as the board of regents of the University of Hawaii and the manner of their appointment and two ex officio members of that board of regents as at present.

KELLERMAN: I move for the adoption of Section 4.

LOPER: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that Section 4 be tentatively agreed to.

BRYAN: I have one question. I didn't see it in the committee report. Is it the recommendation or the intention of the committee that the board of regents shall appoint the president of the University?

LOPER: In answer to that question, the answer is yes. It's covered in the next section.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question?

C. RICE: Present law has it that regents shall be appointed from the different islands. Will this do away with it, unless the legislature reestablishes this section?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Wist.

WIST: No, this would not do away with it. We certainly do not want to do away with it, but we felt in the committee that that too is a matter that should be left to statutory law, that in all probability the same statute that is now on the books will be reenacted.

C. RICE: I think just leaving it here would do away with the present law.

PORTEUS: I think we will want to keep in mind that the existing statutes of the Territory of Hawaii, except as they are inconsistent with the Constitution and thereby ruled out by the Constitution, will remain in force and effect. In other words, if there is a law on the books now that isn't inconsistent with any provision of this Constitution, it's going to take action by the legislature and be subject to the veto of the governor in order to remove that statute from the books.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Doi, you wished to be recognized?

DOI: I would like to amend the section by inserting in the last line of the section, between the words "ex officio" and "voting" the word, "non-voting members of the board."

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 4 be amended by inserting the word "non" after the word "officio" appearing in line 5 of Section 4.

ASHFORD: In regard to the remarks of the delegate from the fourth district about the law as it now stands relating to representation from several islands or counties, does not the law also contain the provision that the president of the University and superintendent of public instruction shall be ex officio voting members of the board?

PORTEUS: That's correct.

ASHFORD: Then that would be equally properly a method -- a matter for the legislature to care for.

WIST: I think this has already been answered. In other words, we acted in terms of the position of the superintendent to place him on the board as a voting member. Now we made a change there in terms of the position of the superintendent, to conform with the practice that we now have with reference to the president of the University. In other words, what we are stating here is that we would like to have in our basic law the same principle expressed with reference to the president, and I think that by all means he should remain a voting member of the board and that the superintendent should be also an ex officio voting member of the board in order that there can be a tie-up between the public school system and the University.

KAM: In Section 4 we had talked about the superintendent of public instruction -- in Section 3, as being ex officio voting member. I think that should be left out in Section 4.

VOICE: It's a different board.

KAM: I know but, "the president of the University shall be an ex -- " Just leave out the superintendent of public instruction. Just a suggestion, because you have it above in Section 3.

DOI: With the consent of the second, I would like to change my motion so that it will provide for the deletion of the last sentence in Section 4.

IHARA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the last -- the second sentence appearing in Section 4 be deleted. Delegate Rice.

H. RICE: It seems to me we ought to provide some liaison between the public schools and the University. The public schools should know what is going on in the University because after all the University is teaching the teachers who come out from the University to take positions in the public schools with the board of education. There should be a liaison between them.

CHAIRMAN: Ready to vote on the amendment?

CASTRO: Seems to me that when an amendment as far reaching as this is made, that the maker of the amendment should give his reasons therefor. I, therefore, rise to a point of information and ask the delegate from Hawaii why his amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Doi, will you kindly supply the information that Delegate Castro desires?

DOI: I'm sorry, I wasn't listening to the question.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Castro desires to know the reason for your amendment.

DOI: I think it's best to leave the question as posed by the last sentence in Section 4 to the legislature.

TAVARES: I think we've already established the principle in our other vote on public instruction of having the executive officer also be a voting member of the board. It seems to me that if one is sound, the other is, and since the majority of this Convention has established the principle of allowing the superintendent of public instruction to be an ex officio member of the commission of public instruction, we should permit the president to be a voting member of the regents. For liaison purposes, which is very necessary, we should make sure that the superintendent of public instruction has a vote on the board of regents. It has not always been so.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, the amendment does not go to the voting or non-voting of the president or the superintendent of public instruction; it's for the deletion of the entire sentence.

TAVARES: Well, that accomplishes the result. It takes away the power of the president to - -

CHAIRMAN: He will not even be a member, Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: Well, that includes it.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask a question of the Committee on Education, especially its chairman? Wasn't it the intent of the committee to include the last sentence so that the president of the University of Hawaii and the superintendent of public instruction shall not be left to the whim of the legislature?

LOPER: It was the intention of the Education Committee to provide for the appointment of a certain number of regents, and the board of regents to include ex officio the president of the University and the superintendent of public instruction, as at present. That was the intention, and if you leave that out, the members of the board of regents would then be appointed by the governor, and it would not be possible, it seems to me, for the legislature to provide otherwise.

SHIMAMURA: In other words you want - -

CHAIRMAN: Ready to vote on the amendment?

SHIMAMURA: - - you wanted to be sure that the president of the University and the superintendent of public instruction shall be members of the board of regents?

LOPER: That's right.

SHIMAMURA: I think that's a very good provision.

WIST: May I say that this practice is in conformity with practice throughout the country. It is difficult for presidents of boards of - - presidents of universities to be members and voting members of boards of regents. We have had the experience in Hawaii where, when the president is a member of the board of regents and a voting member, things ran rather smoothly. We've had the experience that when he is not, they do not run as smoothly. Why should we depart from practice that is traditional in our country and which has worked out well here.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready to vote on Delegate Doi's proposed amendment?

NIELSEN: As long as we have gone thoroughly into Section 3 on the method of appointing the superintendent of public instruction, why don't we follow the same on the president of the University? I think the arguments are very sound in Section 3 and I don't - - I'd like to know from the chairman of the committee why the same procedure wasn't followed with regard to the president of the University?

LOPER: Delegate Nielsen, I think you must be referring to Section 2 because Section 4 and Section 2 are the similar sections providing for the establishment of the board of education and the board of regents. I'd like to suggest that the Chair recognize Delegate Wist on that point, if he's willing to answer.

WIST: Just what was your point there?

NIELSEN: The question was why wasn't the same procedure used in naming the president of the University as in naming the superintendent of public instruction?

WIST: In other words, you're asking why we didn't suggest a panel for the selection of the board of regents? The reason for that in the opinion of the majority of the committee was simply this, that we feel that public schools are very, very close to the people. The people have all had experience with elementary and secondary education. Higher education, however, is in a different category. Relatively few people have that experience with higher education. We feel, therefore, that if you are setting up machinery for advisory boards or something of that sort which would provide a panel restricting the governor in his selection of board members on the one hand or regents on the other hand that you do not have analogous situations. And when I say this, I don't want to be challenged with the idea that I do not have faith in the people because that isn't the point at all. I think we have expressed the idea that we do have faith in the people because we've insisted, and insisted rather vigorously, on the panel idea for the public school system. But when you get into higher education, the people have not had the same kind of experience. The experience throughout the country has been, not only in Hawaii, but elsewhere, we get our best University, the university could develop and grow and it can be a pride to our community when the board is selected in accordance with the method that is now prevailing in Hawaii.

KAWAHARA: I would like to speak to Section 4 in regard to the statement made by Delegate Rice from Kauai. I think we should be consistent in our various sections - -

CHAIRMAN: Are you speaking to the amendment, Delegate Kawahara? The amendment is simply this, the deletion of the second sentence appearing in Section 4.

KAWAHARA: Yes - - no, no. I'll speak to that later.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? The question is on the adoption of Delegate Doi's proposed amendment. All those in favor of the amendment say "aye." Contrary minded. The noes have it. The amendment is lost.

OKINO: In response to the suggestion that was made by Delegate Charlie Rice from Kauai, I should like at this time to move an amendment to this particular Section 4. I move at this time to insert the following words, after the word "Hawaii" appearing in the second line, "at least part of the membership of which shall represent geographical subdivisions of the State." I see no reason why this particular phrase which has been incorporated - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Okino, do we have a second to the motion?

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

OKINO: May I now speak to the amendment? I see no reason why this particular phrase or clause which has been incorporated into Section 2 of this article is intentionally—that's the way it appears to the speaker—left out from Section 4. I believe there are competent and some capable men to represent the outside islands to serve on the board of regents, and I believe the practice heretofore has been so.

LOPER: I'm in agreement with the last speaker. However, I'd like to point out that the omission was not intentional because it was also omitted from the other section. We left it in both cases to the legislature assuming, of course, that they would provide for the membership from the other islands. I see no objection to the amendment; it makes it consistent with the other section.

A. TRASK: I have no objection to the amendment as made, but I do object strenuously to the idea that if we don't provide such geographical subdivisions, Oahu is going to take everything. It seems to me there's a campaign here to establish the fact that Oahu is going to get everything, and the other islands nothing. I don't - - I'm not possessed of that thinking and I think it's awfully wrong and I'm certain the delegate from Hawaii doesn't intend that. But constantly we hear that Oahu is ganging up on all the outside islands. I don't think - - I think that's awfully provincial thinking; that's thinking that belongs to the Territory of Hawaii days.

I like to think that we should have a forward thinking and that we are all united and that there are many people on Oahu that love the outside islands, and circumstances prevent them from living on the outside island.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Okino, do you wish to rise to a point of personal privilege?

OKINO: I appreciate very much the suggestion that was made by Delegate Trask, but I feel that a certain degree of trust should be reposed in our legislators. I think that thing -- that particular point has been quite adequately explained by the delegate, Judge Heen, and I hope that Delegate Trask at this time will not insist upon the particular suggestion which he has made.

SHIMAMURA: Speaking to what the delegate from the fifth district said a few moments ago, some of us are wondering if the outside islands, neighbor islands, aren't ganging up on the island of Oahu.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready to vote on the amendment? All those in favor of the amendment -- proposed amendment say "aye." Contrary minded. Amendment is carried.

NIELSEN: I'd like to make an amendment due to the fact that the university is a land grant college and agriculture is one of the most important things we have in the territory. For that reason I'd like to amend the second sentence to read, after the word "president of the university," put a comma and include "the commissioner of agriculture," and then go on "and the superintendent of public instruction." I so move.

CHAIRMAN: I didn't get the motion, Delegate Nielsen.

NIELSEN: The motion is to, after the word "university" -- "president of the university," place a comma and add therein "commissioner of agriculture," then go on, "and the superintendent of public instruction." As this is a land grant college, agriculture is foremost, and I think there has been quite a lack of cooperation that we can get into a workable situation on agriculture by including the commissioner of agriculture. I so move.

PHILLIPS: I second that motion.

HEEN: I don't think there is anywhere in the articles which have been proposed for the appointment of a commissioner of agriculture. So, therefore, it has no place here, whereas, right in this particular article you provide for a superintendent of public instruction, you provide for a president of the University of Hawaii.

NIELSEN: Well, it's coming up.

HEEN: You might leave that until later, then. However, that can be taken care of by legislation if it appears to be wise. I do have -- I call for the previous question on that motion.

DELEGATE: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded. The previous question has been called for. Shall the main question be now put? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried.

Question is the proposed amendment by Delegate Nielsen, which is this: the placing of a comma after "university" appearing in the fourth line and inserting "commissioner of agriculture," comma, in the same line. All those in favor of the amendment say "aye." Contrary minded. Amendment is lost.

BRYAN: I would like to ask the Committee of the Whole if they would include in their report a recommendation so that should the commissioner of agriculture be set as an officer in the government --

H. RICE: Do you make that as a motion?

BRYAN: -- he will be appointed. I will so move.

H. RICE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that the report indicate that the commissioner of agriculture be -- whoever it is.

NIELSEN: If that's the situation, why don't we include it in and if we don't have a commissioner of agriculture, the Style Committee will certainly cut it out.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has already been voted on, Delegate Nielsen.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion made by Delegate Bryan say "aye." Contrary minded. The noes seem to have it.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I haven't made a ruling yet, Delegate Heen. The ayes have it. The motion is carried.

HEEN: I am going to propose an amendment to Section 4 --

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman.

ROBERTS: Mr. Chairman. Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts.

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, I appeal from the ruling of the Chair. I think the noes had it.

ROBERTS: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, will you state your point of information.

ROBERTS: I didn't hear the ruling of the Chair. Did the Chair rule that the ayes had it?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair ruled that the ayes had it.

ROBERTS: I would like to, therefore, to have a question of show of hands. It seems to me that there is some doubt, there was some doubt in the Chairman's mind. I think we ought to get this question clear. It's fairly important.

CHAIRMAN: There is no doubt in the Chair's mind, Delegate Roberts.

SAKAKIHARA: Then I second that motion.

TAVARES: Then I appeal the Chair's ruling to the floor, then.

SAKAKIHARA: And I second the motion made by Delegate Tavares.

KAUHANE: I believe you have stated your position and that you have stated your position in such a manner that it is your opinion that the ayes have it and I, therefore, feel that there is no ruling from the Chair's decision.

PORTEUS: I think it's been customary where we've been voting by voice that sometimes there are some people who vote a little more loudly than others, and sometimes those that have voted in the majority have voted in a little quieter fashion. Up till now it has been the practice, if people haven't been very sure and some people haven't voted at all, to have a show of hands or some other division. I see no particular harm in doing that at this time. I don't think it's a question of sustaining the Chair; after all he's in the position of making his ruling as he hears the sound, and I think it's the fault of the rest of us for not making our desires fully known. But there may have been some who didn't express themselves and if the Chair would be willing to call for a show of hands, we can settle it without any more debate.

C. RICE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is certainly willing to do that if that is the wishes - -

C. RICE: Having voted in the affirmative, I move for reconsideration of the vote, so that we could have a show of hands.

PORTEUS: I don't think the motion is necessary, if the Chairman is willing to call for a show of hands. I think it will dispose of the matter.

CHAIRMAN: Vote by a show of hands. All those in - -

ROBERTS: I'd like a point of information, please. Do I get the intent of the motion that we include in our report a recommendation that a commissioner of agriculture, if one is established, shall become a member of the board of regents? Is that the question?

CHAIRMAN: I believe that was the motion. Is that correct, Delegate Bryan?

ROBERTS: Well, it seemed to me that we have already voted on that question and the question was put as to whether we should have one. This committee voted no. Unless they want to reconsider that question, it seems to me that that question can then be properly put. We already voted on that problem once.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, this is merely including in our committee report that such an officer be a part of the board. It's not part of the proposal. We have not voted upon the question. Delegate Porteus.

PORTEUS: I don't think this matter should be subject to debate just now. I have some feelings on the subject. The Chair is courteous enough to ask for a calling of the hands. I think that we will have to go through a motion to reconsider if we want to debate it further, but I think that the thing should be disposed of now on the Chair calling for a show of hands.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor - -

HEEN: If the majority of the Convention is going to vote upon this motion in the affirmative, that means that they wish to have a commissioner of agriculture or similar officer to be a part of the board or a member of the board of regents. If this is so, then we might as well do it now instead of leaving it to the legislature.

PORTEUS: Let's have the call on the vote on a showing of hands. No more debate. If we're going to debate this matter, we will have to move to reconsider. Now let's have the show of hands, please.

NIELSEN: This is a very important thing. Agriculture is the backbone of the Territory - -

PORTEUS: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: I'll now put the motion. All those in favor of Delegate Bryan's motion, please raise your right hand. Contrary minded. 24 ayes and 22 noes. The motion is carried.

HEEN: I have an amendment to propose to Section 4. Section 1 provides that the State shall provide a state university and now we might as well state here in Section 4 that the University of Hawaii is hereby established as a state university. In other words, add a new sentence at the beginning of that section reading, "The University of Hawaii is hereby established as the state university." I move that as an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Will you please restate your motion, Delegate Heen.

HEEN: I move that Section 4 be amended by inserting the following sentence at the beginning of that section: "The University of Hawaii is hereby established as the state university."

PHILLIPS: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 4 be amended by including this sentence: "The University of Hawaii is hereby established as the state university."

TAVARES: We have a whole chapter establishing the University of Hawaii which we are going to continue in effect by a subsequent section of this Constitution. I think we again are going needlessly into detail. This by implication fits right in with the existing state university and I think it's not necessary to go that far.

HEEN: I just wanted to get away from that, not to depend upon implication; have a direct statement there, and you don't have to indulge in any implication.

BRYAN: I would ask the movant if you would consider making a separate section of that, rather than have it go into - -

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

HEEN: It fits right into that same section.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready to vote on the amendment? All those in favor of Delegate Heen's proposed amendment, signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. The amendment is carried.

LOPER: I now move that we tentatively agree to Section 4 as amended.

BRYAN: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 4 be tentatively approved.

HEEN: I move an amendment to that section. Delete the words "be empowered to establish" appearing in the second line and insert in place thereof - -

CHAIRMAN: Just a minute, Delegate Heen. Is that on Section 5?

HEEN: Five, Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: We have not voted on Section 4. Will you withhold it just for a moment? All those in favor of the motion - -

SERIZAWA: Point of information. We took a vote on the assumption that if the commissioner of agriculture is established, then he shall be a member of the board of regents. Does that mean that Section 4 will automatically include the commissioner of agriculture if such office is established?

CHAIRMAN: That is not the understanding of the Chair, Delegate Serizawa. It's merely to incorporate in our Committee of the Whole report that if such an office is created, then we shall recommend that the commissioner of agriculture be on the board of regents.

All those in favor of the adoption of Section 4 please signify by raising - - by saying "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried. Section 4 is tentatively approved.

LOPER: I now move for the adoption of Section 5.

J. TRASK: I second it.

HEEN: I move an amendment to that section. After the word "shall" in the second line, delete the words, "be empowered to establish," and insert in place thereof the words "have power, in accordance with law, to formulate"; and in the third line delete the word "full."

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 5 be amended by inserting the following after the word "shall," "have power, in accordance with law, to formulate policy and to exercise control."

HEEN: Comma after policy.

CHAIRMAN: I'll read the sentence over again. "The board of regents shall have power in accordance with law, to formulate policy, and to exercise control," etc. Is that correct, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: Except that there should be a comma after "power" - -

CHAIRMAN: And after "law."

HEEN: - - and comma after "law," as you read it at first. I move that amendment.

DELEGATE: Question.

KAWAHARA: May I ask a question? Is a comma necessary after "control"?

HEEN: No, I don't think so.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the proposed amendment say "aye." Contrary minded. Amendment is carried.

HEEN: I have another amendment to offer. Line 5, after the second "the" in that line, delete the words "board of regents of the" so that that sentence will read: "The University of Hawaii shall constitute a body corporate" and not the regents be a body corporate.

DOI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the second sentence of Section 5 be amended as follows: after the word "the," the words appearing "board of regents of the" to be stricken.

WIST: I personally have no objection to that. I just want to point out that this phraseology is the typical phraseology of other constitutions and statutes that refer to this particular matter, namely the corporate body, that is, the board being a corporate body. But I think the meaning is the same in either case.

HEEN: The meaning is not exactly the same or anywhere similar. The other constitutions may have that type of language; but the university itself is an entity and it is the corporation, and the board of regents are what might be termed the directors of that corporation, and you don't make the directors a corporation.

KAWAHARA: Speaking to that amendment, in discussion in the Committee on Education, the word "body corporate" was discussed and it was stated very clearly by one of our members that the interpretation of the words "body corporate" would mean that a body corporate in so many words means an artificial person. I don't know. If that is true, then the University of Hawaii may be liable to suit and so forth, and that we might place the whole university in liability to suit. I'd like to know if we changed the wording from "board of regents" to just the "University of Hawaii," I'd like to know what the effect of that change would be.

HEEN: If there is any suit to be brought, the board of regents as a corporation might be sued for any damage that the board might incur, or rather, that is, when a damage is caused by it. If the university as a corporation does any damage it might be sued also in a competent court of - - a court of competent jurisdiction. But I have in mind this. Generally speaking, you don't constitute a board of directors, a corporation. A corporation is an entity created by law and the university itself should be that corporation and that the board of regents could then be, well, be regarded as the board of directors of that corporation.

PHILLIPS: I don't exactly know how wrong I am here, but I have the feeling that changing it in this manner would make it necessary for the university in anything that it did to have a - - it would make the university have to have a legislative act in order to empower it to do anything. I happen to know that the board of regents as they are now empowered, and as I have been able to determine by reading other constitutions, that they can administer the land, be responsible for the land, make improvements to the land, over and above anything that does not involve legislative appropriation, such as the housing that they have on the agenda up there now. I feel that to take it away from the board of regents would be to cut down the power of them to give us a more progressive university.

TAVARES: It seems to me it's a matter of choice or preference here, what we want to do. It's been done by law both ways. The City and County of Honolulu is created under the name of City and County rather than the board of supervisors of the City and County of Honolulu by Section 6501 of the Revised Laws and 6503. The latter section says: "The City and County is created a municipal corporation under the name of the City and County of Honolulu." Now, in my humble opinion, the only difference between the presen form of the section and the method - - amendment suggested by Delegate Heen is in one case the name of the corporation will be board of regents and so forth, and the other case it will be the University of Hawaii.

KELLERMAN: I don't think it makes any - - possibly any difference at law, but historically it has been that the boards of regents or the boards of trustees of universities for hundreds of years have been the incorporated body. I have here the original constitution of the State of Massachusetts adopted in 1780 with respect to Harvard College and it is declared—this is from the Constitution of the State of Massachusetts, 1780—"It is declared, that the PRESIDENT AND FELLOWS OF HARVARD COLLEGE"—that's set up in double caps—"in their corporate capacity, and their successors in that capacity," and so forth and so forth, shall hold, have title, and so forth, it goes on. It dates back to the English universities. The boards of trustees of the respective colleges at Oxford and Cambridge are incorporated in the capacity as, I don't want to use the word trustees, but in the language of the governing body and not the language of the university itself. I think it's a matter of historical precedent. I don't know that it makes any other difference.

A. TRASK: May I ask the last delegate, what university she was referring to? Harvard? But wasn't that a private rather than a public state university? That's the difference.

KELLERMAN: I don't think that makes any difference. It happened it may have started originally as private, but it's set up in the constitution and it gives them full corporate powers. But you'll find the same language in other universities that are state universities, in the other constitutions.

A. TRASK: I speak in favor of the amendment by Delegate Heen. There is a question in my mind, in addressing myself to Delegate Kawahara's inquiry. It would seem to me that if we left it the body corporate, namely, the University of Hawaii, it would be more invitational to some people who, looking at the responsibility of a board of regents of the university, may say, "Well, I might have a personal liability to a suit at law." Now it would seem to me if the "board of regents of the University of Hawaii" means the same thing as the "University of Hawaii," it would seem to me to be better and more invitational to people who are available to have the words "board of regents of the" stricken, since there seems to be some doubt about it. I am particularly concerned about this situation because the latter portion of the sentence says that this body corporate "shall have title in fee simple to all of the lands of the university."

Now referring - - addressing ourselves to Section 1943 of the Revised Laws, we have this concluding sentence at the end of that paragraph, quote, "All lands, buildings, appliances and other property so purchased or acquired shall be and remain the property of the Territory to be used in perpetuity for the benefit of the University," unquote. Now under the present situation, therefore, at the University of Hawaii it seems to me—and I'm addressing myself to the inquiry by the delegate from Hawaii—the University of Hawaii apparently cannot be sued because you would have to have permission to sue the Territory or have - - get a settlement from the legislature with respect to any claim. With this sentence, it would seem to me when you give the University of Hawaii a body corporate entity, and you give it the property; therefore, if a suit is filed successfully against the university and a judgment is received, it may very well be that execution may be made upon the buildings and properties of the university and then the university would be closed down.

I'm addressing myself to two situations here, and I feel that right off that the title to the property should continue in perpetuity in the name of the Territory for the benefit of the university. Otherwise, we might - - or I might or the delegate from Molokai might execute against the property of the university and pilikia. So I'd like the chairman or Dean Wist to clarify that or the Secretary, who is regent at the university.

PORTEUS: I think there is going to be, from what I've been informed by the various delegates, some extended discussion on the subject raised as to the title in fee simple. I think the motion before the Convention at the moment is purely with respect to the name. Now, whether you want to vote on the name now or later, I think the disposition of many of the delegates is for the moment to rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again. It's 20 minutes after 12:00.

SHIMAMURA: Before we do that, may I be permitted to correct an impression - - mis-impression that may have been been given by the remarks of one of the previous speakers. I'm not necessarily speaking against the amendment, I might say. Naming the board of regents as the body corporate would not make them liable individually and personally. They would be liable merely in a representative capacity and they certainly would not be legally responsible personally or individually.

C. RICE: I agree with Delegate Trask, and I want to point out to the members before we take a recess that you should read page 17 and 18. This making the university a body corporate and having title to its lands, they want to borrow a lot of money. Now I want to know how much has been invested in bonds for the university. I want to know how they are going to be self-liquidating. That's what they are after. I'm seconding the motion to take a recess.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved - -

HEEN: I rise to a point of order there because we're not dealing with that particular phase of that sentence at the present time. We were dealing with the matter the name of the - - as to whether the university itself should be the corporation or the regents should be a corporation.

CHAIRMAN: That is my understanding of the amendment.

PORTEUS: I think there are some requests to act on the name now; let's act on the name, then I'll make the motion - -

WIST: May I say, before we act on that that I don't think the committee has any strong preference either way. It chose this wording because that's the historical wording, but if it's the feeling on the part of the majority here that the word "university" be used instead of "board of regents," I'm sure that we wouldn't feel offended in any way.

LOPER: I would like to rise to a point of information and ask the maker of this amendment who is included under the title of "University of Hawaii" that is not included under the "board of regents of the University of Hawaii"? You are either talking about persons or groups of people or some legal fiction. The board of regents will be a group of men and women, eight or nine, as determined by law, and if you cut out board of regents and say the University of Hawaii, who are you including that are not regents? Are you including the professors, the staff at the university?

HEEN: Under my proposed amendment, the university itself would be the corporation. Then all of the administration of the affairs of the corporation would be in the hands of the board of regents who would, if this were in business, be the board of directors of that corporation. When you prepare a document, a contract of any kind, you would start with saying that this contract is entered into by the University of Hawaii, a corporation, and so and so and so and so, instead of saying that the board of regents, composed of the following members, a corporation, shall enter into this contract. It would be very much simpler to say that this is - - the University of Hawaii is the corporation.

DELEGATES: Question.

HOLROYDE: Move the previous question.

A. TRASK: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Question? Question is shall we adopt Delegate Heen's proposed amendment. All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried.

TAVARES: I think the matter should be reconsidered. I have just read the section - - the chapter on the University of Hawaii, and I think there are some provisions about trusteeships which ought to be studied before we do this. We are apparently reversing ourselves.

CHAIRMAN: I'd like to - - Delegate Tavares, the Chair would like to inform the delegate that we merely acted on the name alone.

TAVARES: I think then we should - - I move to reconsider and defer because there is a section which provides that the regents shall be trustees for gifts, and we may have some gifts already held by the regents as trustees.

DELEGATE: I second the motion to reconsider.

PORTEUS: If I can get the floor, there's going to be - - We can leave the reconsideration to another meeting and let the attorneys look into this matter in the interim, and come back more fully informed than we are at the present. The motion is - - will be in order at the next meeting. So I now move that we rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again. All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried.

JUNE 19, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: When the Committee of the Whole rose to report progress Saturday noon, we had just concluded taking action on Delegate Heen's amendment to Section 5, the last sentence of Section 5. The Chair recalls that the section was amended to read "The University of Hawaii shall constitute a body corporate and shall have title in fee simple to all of the lands of the university." The amendment was the striking out of the words, "board of regents of the."

LOPER: Was there also a proposed amendment in the last line after the word "lands" to add "now or hereafter assigned to," striking out the word "of? In any event we have over the weekend studied rather thoroughly the wording of this last sentence, and have before the delegates now a two and a half page mimeographed statement concerning new wording for the last sentence, the second sentence of Section 5.

In order to get this before the Convention, I would move the deletion of the second sentence in Section 5 and the substitution therefor of the second paragraph in the mimeographed statement which is before you in quotation marks, which reads:

> The University of Hawaii shall constitute a public corporation and shall have legal title to all the lands of the university, which it shall hold in public trust and administer in accordance with law.

HEEN: The amendment that I offered just before the close of the session of the Committee of the Whole, the last hearing, was one that is applied only to the first part of that sentence and did not extend to the matter of title. And the amendment that I offered was upon motion made and seconded, carried; that motion carried.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

HEEN: But I let alone the last part of that sentence. The last part of that sentence, as I understand, is now open for discussion and perhaps for amendment.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the second sentence appearing in Section 5 should be now amended to read:

> The University of Hawaii shall constitute a public corporation and shall have legal title to all the lands of the university, which it shall hold in public trust and administer in accordance with law.

HEEN: That is a further amendment of the first part of that sentence, which would require a motion to reconsider.

CHAIRMAN: As I understood it, the amendment on Saturday was merely the changing of the name, "The board of regents of the University of Hawaii" to "The University of Hawaii." It was not taken up as a substance but merely the change in the name. Wasn't that correct, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: That's correct. The amendment was that that sentence -- first part of that sentence read, "The University of Hawaii shall constitute a body corporate." Now, this amendment says that "The University of Hawaii shall constitute a public corporation." So that is an amendment of the wording which was employed in the amendment that I offered, is to "constitute a body corporate" and not "a public corporation." So it seems to me if you want to change that language you'd have to have a motion to reconsider. I think Doctor Loper is more concerned with the last part of that sentence which relates to title.

LOPER: I would be glad to accept the amendment going back to the wording as it was on Saturday as far as the first part of the sentence is concerned: "The University of Hawaii shall constitute a body corporate and shall have legal title to all of the lands." And at that point I would like to suggest the additional wording formerly suggested by the previous speaker, after the word "lands" to add "now or hereafter assigned to," striking out the word "of."

CHAIRMAN: Any second to the last amendment?

ROBERTS: Second.

ASHFORD: Is the word "assigned" correct? Is that what is intended? Wouldn't it be "conveyed"?

LOPER: I was using the language that I wrote down as Delegate Heen proposed an amendment which I don't think was put in the form of a motion on Friday or Saturday, and I got it "now or hereafter assigned to."

WIST: I'm not personally too concerned with where these particular words come in the section. The thing that I think is a matter of concern before this Convention is the question of how this provision with respect to land ownership shall be set up in the Constitution. And as proposed in the amendment which Delegate Loper has made, it has to do with granting the university legal title instead of all-inclusive or fee simple title to lands and then stating that the university shall hold this in public trust and administer it in accordance with law. Now maybe that wording isn't the exact, the best wording, but I think it conveys the idea. And the mimeographed sheet, titled "The University and Land Ownership," has been prepared to present the argument so that the position of the university is more exactly stated and overcome the objections that were made to this feature at the last time we met.

LEE: As I understand now, the amendment to Section 5 would read as follows: "The University of Hawaii shall constitute a body corporate and shall have legal title to all the lands now or hereafter assigned to the university which it shall hold in public trust and administer in accordance with law." Is that it?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

LEE: That is the present amendment?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

LEE: There's only one amendment then?

CHAIRMAN: There's only one amendment before the committee.

LEE: And that's been moved and seconded?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, Delegate.

LEE: All right, Question.

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, I still am a little bit lost here. I'm sorry I got here late. As I understand it that leaves the first sentence, as amended, unchanged, of Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: The first sentence in Section 5 as amended is still the same.

TAVARES: And that reads now, "The board of regents shall have power, in accordance with law, to formulate policy and to exercise full control over the University of Hawaii through its executive officer, the president of the university, who shall be appointed by the board." Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: The only difference is the word "full" has been deleted.

TAVARES: Yes.

LOPER: I rise to a point of information. If it should be preferable to change the wording in the first part of the second sentence, instead of reading, "The University of Hawaii shall constitute a body corporate," to read as follows: "The University of Hawaii is hereby constituted a body corporate," would that change be permissible in the Committee on Style or should it be made here?

HEEN: I think that is not a change in substance at all, just a matter of phraseology, and can be handled by the Committee on Style.

NIELSEN: Doesn't this -- Can't this be handled by the legislature, the transferring of legal title to the lands? I'd like to have that answered.

CHAIRMAN: Does anyone care to answer that?

NIELSEN: Couldn't this be a legislative matter?

ANTHONY: The purpose is to secure to the university the title to the lands which it now has, and those lands which are hereafter set apart by executive order or otherwise to the university. In other words, that will then place the university in a position where it can take advantage of certain public enactments of Congress and borrow money, for instance, on a bond issue, and without that we would require further legislation. It seems to me that this is a highly desirable thing, to put the university in the situation which it really should be so that it can take advantage of whatever program is offered by acts of Congress.

WIST: I would like to point out one other thing, namely, that as a land grant institution, without this wording it would not be possible for us like other state universities to own income-producing land which might be located outside of Hawaii. Many state universities had lands which belong to the universities which are not located in the state where the university itself is located, and that to me is a rather significant thing.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask a question, please? This sentence speaks only of legal title to all lands. What is the position as to personalty, that is, personal property?

ANTHONY: I think the situation as to personalty ought to be exactly the same as the personal property of any department of this state. There's no need in my judgment to have the title to the typewriters and the paper and pencils vested in the body corporate. I don't know whether Doctor Loper has other views on that, but I should think the general territorial law would apply there.

LOPER: Is it your position, Delegate Anthony, that lands is sufficient without saying "real and personal property"? There was some discussion over the weekend as to the advisability of substituting for the word "lands," "real and personal property." I see no important problem involved there.

SHIMAMURA: Perhaps I haven't got a clear picture, but I thought the main reason for giving legal title to the university was so that it may be enabled to mortgage and hypothecate its property so that it may secure a loan. If that's the case, then what about personalty?

LOPER: As I understand it, if at any time the lending agency should be in a position to foreclose, it would not be a foreclosure in the usual sense. It would be a matter of taking over and operating the property until it paid out, and then it certainly would involve not only the land and buildings, but the equipment in it if it happened to be a dormitory. So I personally have a preference for "real and personal property" in the language there.

SHIMAMURA: If there's to be a mortgage or hypothecation of this property, wouldn't the university be in a better position to affect such loans by mortgage or hypothecation if personalty were included? That's my only concern. And also presumably by construction, land will include buildings, but wouldn't it be clearer to say "real properties" instead of just "lands."

WIST: I think if the delegates would turn to this mimeographed statement, Item 3, "Legal title to its lands would enable the university to avail itself to federal loans without pledging the lands themselves." The next sentence, "Mortgages are so written - - " Now this isn't speculation, this is the way they are actually written by federal government. "Mortgages are so written that if the university should fail to meet payments, federal government would take over the operation of the individual project (not the university) until such time as the obligation should have been met." In other words, that's the way the federal government operates in these matters. All that is really pledged is income from the self-liquidating project.

TAVARES: I think the only reason why today the university doesn't have legal title to its land is the Hawaiian Organic Act which says that the Territory has legal title to all public lands and that they may be set aside by executive order of the governor, which of course is revocable. That's the whole trouble. So that a great deal depends on what we're going to have in our public lands section. The university should have the fullest possible power to acquire any kind of interest in land, not just fee simple. I am a little afraid that mentioning legal title or fee simple title is actually limiting because the university may want easement sometime. They may want equitable interest or they may want to acquire all kinds of other interests and it should be made as broad as possible.

Isn't it true that what the university needs today is legal title to the land that it is now using and the right to acquire title in the future in the manner provided by law? Wouldn't that be much more proper? I suggest that we ought to get the attorney general over here - - Assistant Attorney General Lewis to give us the language that whatever land the university now has under executive order or that has been acquired under condemnations for the university shall - - is transferred now by way of legal title to the university.

As to the future, leave it wide open as to whether the Territory by its laws will give title to lands in fee simple or on condition or any other way that it sees fit, because I think if you require legal title to be acquired to all the lands the university gets, it will deter the Territory in the future through its legislature from authorizing further lands to be transferred. Perhaps the legislature [sic] will want to have just the right to use land for a limited period. The Territory will hesitate and say, "We can't give you a lease; we've got to give you fee simple title; we've got to give you legal title."

Therefore, I think we should split it into two parts, one, a present grant of what the University now has; and second, the right to acquire in the future in the manner provided by law. Then I think you'll have the well-rounded system.

LOPER: I have three suggestions to make. Perhaps they should be submitted as separate amendments if they meet with the approval of the delegates. One is to strike out the word "legal"; the second is to change the word "lands" to "real and personal property"; and the third is to change the word "assigned" to "conveyed." I have no concern over the order in which those things are taken up, but it seems to me that that would cure the defects of this sentence.

ANTHONY: I have a suggestion that may meet with the approval of the body. First, as to whether or not the use of the expression "title" will preclude the university from acquiring less than a fee, I think in law as well as in mathematics, the whole includes the parts. If the university has the right to acquire title, it can acquire any kind of a title. Therefore, I would suggest this amendment, if it meets with the approval of the body. "The university is hereby constituted a body corporate - - University of Hawaii is hereby constituted a body corporate and shall have title to all of the real and personal property now or hereafter set aside or conveyed to it, which shall be held in public trust for its purposes and administered in accordance with law." I can have that - - If the body would like to look at it, I could have that mimeographed and circulated in a few minutes.

LOPER: I'd like to second that motion - - amendment.

LEE: We don't need to have it printed. Read it again.

ANTHONY: What are the wishes of the Chairman? Shall I read it again or get it printed?

CHAIRMAN: I think the reading of it should suffice.

ANTHONY:

The University of Hawaii is hereby constituted a body corporate and shall have title to all of the real and personal property now or hereafter set aside or conveyed to it, which shall be held in public trust for its purposes and administered in accordance with law.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Loper, will you withdraw your first amendment?

LOPER: Yes, I withdraw the first amendment, and I'd like to second the motion to amend as made by Delegate Anthony.

CHAIRMAN: There is now just one amendment before the committee, and that amendment has just been read by Delegate Anthony.

NIELSEN: I didn't get a direct answer, if this could not be legislative action. I question very much the advisability of turning over the entire setup to the board of regents. In the past we've had a lot of difficulty. In fact, the board of regents have even ignored the legislature. In the 47th Session we gave them $400,000 for a chemistry building, they went ahead and put wings on it and spent another $264,000 and then came in and asked for a deficiency appropriation of $264,000. At present I've had to fight with them for the last year trying to get a small building in Kona built for $15,000; and in the Special Session, having been ignored by President Sinclair and the board of regents, I had to put in another bill and make it exclusively for the extension service because they said that they didn't think that was the intent of the first appropriation. At the present time, they went ahead and have drawn plans and they included the experimental station in this building as to laboratories, coffee drier and so forth, absolutely ignoring Act 39 of the Special Session. So I think that we've got to give more power to the legislature to hold these fellows down out there.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that the answer -- the question of Delegate Nielsen was amply answered, but if Delegate Anthony wishes to amplify on the matter - -

ANTHONY: Just one statement. I don't know the exact facts of the legislative history, but this is true; without this kind of a provision in the Constitution of the State, our university will not be placed on a footing with other state universities. In other words, it will be hamstrung. Certainly this will not prevent the legislature in the future, if they want to have a wing on a coffee establishment in an experimental station at Kona, appropriating funds expressly for that purpose. The university couldn't do anything about it. All this does is to put the university in a position where it can, on a parity with other great state universities, take advantage of the right to borrow money on its property. In other words, you are going to fetter them if you don't have this kind of provision in the Constitution.

NIELSEN: May I ask a question? Doesn't this allow the university to hypothecate every bit of land they have and every bit that they'll ever obtain title to?

WIST: It does not.

TAVARES: I think, after reading this over again, that it might fill the bill if the report of the Committee of the Whole makes clear a number of ambiguous situations. For instance, if this property is to be held in public trust, there may be some question about the right of the university to dispose of it. It should be made clear in the report that if, by law, the university is authorized to dispose of some of this property, which isn't under some kind of a private trust that can't be changed because of a matter of contracts, that the law can authorize it to do that, and the words "public trust" will not make that inalienable. In other words, that should be made clear in the report.

I think it should also be made clear that the word "title" includes this situation. If the university wants to get some land from a city or a county or the Territory, and the Territory or county is only willing to give a limited interest to the university, that will not prevent them from doing that. In other words, I wouldn't want it to be - - appear that "title" means only the legal title. Any interest can be transferred in the future. And I think if that's taken care of, then except for one thing, you've taken care of the situation.

I think this still leaves it then up to the legislature to make an initial transfer of this land to the university because I'm not sure that this language will itself convey the land now held by the university to the university in any particular kind of title. I wonder if the other delegates have any ideas on that last question?

ANTHONY: I think what Mr. Tavares said is correct. I endeavored to accomplish one of his statements by inserting the words, "shall be held in public trust for its purposes. In other words, if one of its purposes includes the selling of a typewriter, or disposing of anything, obviously they would go ahead and dispose of it. I think the report also should make clear that the use of the word "title" includes any kind of a title: leasehold, easement, or anything. But after that you've got to - - if this is adopted there probably would have to be an executive order or legislation confirming and implementing the constitutional provision. That is the point that Delegate Tavares raised, and I think he's quite accurate in that.

HEEN: I was just wondering whether or not personal property should be included in this proposed amendment. We know there is a general statute which applies to disposal of personal property. I think there is a disposal commission which passes upon the disposal of personal property. In other words, all personal property - - the title to all personal property is now in the Territory of Hawaii so far as territorial departments are concerned, and when they are to be disposed of or destroyed, they must go through - - you must go through a certain procedure. Therefore, personal property should be left out of this proposed amendment and they should be held and may be disposed of according to law.

ANTHONY: I think the last sentence - - I agree that we don't want to depart from the disposal provisions of existing law, but "administered in accordance with law," means just that, in my judgment. Does not that reach the question that the last speaker had in mind?

HEEN: Well, I'm not so sure whether it does take care of that situation or not. Matter of administration may be broad enough to do just that, but I'm not too sure.

H. RICE: I agree with Senator Heen that you should leave out the word "personal property" because real property takes the building and the land and so forth, and I think it is better that way. If you'll accept the amendment taking out personal property, I think it's better.

TAVARES: I think that you are running into the question of what the lawyers call expressio unius. That is, if you are going to only express the power to take title to real property, you are going to, by implication, run into the danger of having the power to take personal property excluded. As far as that board of disposal statute, Section 1661 of the Revised Laws, is concerned, it says that, "The proceeds of such sales, where not otherwise provided by law, shall be paid into the general fund of the Territory as territorial realizations." Now what's going to happen to the personal property held in trust? Is it going to be turned over to the Territory as general realization? I think we should specifically cover them both. If we're going to cover one, I think we should cover both.

FONG: I don't think I necessarily concur with Delegate Wist in his answer to Delegate Nielsen's question. Delegate Nielsen asked this question, "Does it mean that the university can hypothecate its lands?" Is that right? And Dean Wist said, "No." Now, from my understanding of this, it seems that this is the purpose of making it a body corporate and giving it title to the land. If the university can't convey its land, what's the use of giving it fee simple title to all these lands? I understand that the purpose of this incorporation of the university and putting the title of the property in its name is for the purpose of hypothecating some of its property so that it may build dormitories.

Now, if it is going to be construed in the same position as a trust, and it needs the official sanction of a court or the legislature, then let us put it in. But let us not say that this does not mean that he will not be able to hypothecate his lands.

LOPER: In further reference to the objections raised by Delegate Nielsen and by the previous speaker, it was the intention in this language, the last four or five words, "to be administered in accordance with law," to establish definitely in this section that the university would be limited in what it could do with its lands by laws passed by the legislature.

FONG: Does that mean that everytime the university wants to hypothecate something that is not provided by law they would have to go to the legislature?

PORTEUS: I think the bill that we personally -- we supported in the Legislature of 1947 would still be an appropriate piece of legislation whereby we authorize -- whereby the University was authorized under act to borrow for certain specified purposes provided that they were self-liquidating projects, such as dormitories. I have been interested in this language, too, and I think that the new wording is designed to spell out or to indicate that the power of the university to borrow on land will be subject to such statutes as the legislature may, from time to time pass, such as the Statute of 1947, which gave this power of borrowing. And rather than leave it that the university shall have legal title to land, and putting a period after that, so that there might be cause to wonder whether or not the university could pledge, not only the liquidating project but the rest of the university resources, the language was devised over the weekend to add, "administer in accordance with law." Then write into the report that the intent was to make it subject to legislative act.

FONG: Now that is the definition. Now, let us go one step further. It says that "real and personal property now or hereafter set aside or conveyed to it which shall be held." Now the holding of it is in accordance to law. Does it prevent the university from going out and buying a piece of property? As I understand it here, the holding of it is according -- will be in accordance with law. Now, nothing here prohibits the university from going out and buying a tract of land—say a thousand acres—and come to the legislature and say, "Here, we've purchased this piece of property and we're going to hold it according to law." There's nothing here that prohibits the university from going out and buying a piece of property. Now I'd like to ask the movant of this motion here as to whether that prohibits the university from going out and buying a thousand acres of property, and still be within the provision of this motion.

ANTHONY: Obviously, there would be no prohibition. If the university can get a donation from one of its distinguished alumnus, such as the last speaker, of $100,000 --

FONG: Thank you.

ANTHONY: -- it can go out and buy a fine piece of land with the $100,000.

FONG: The only reason for asking the question is to make it clear so that we know what we are voting on.

BRYAN: I wonder if it would clear up part of the question raised by Delegate Fong and Nielsen if we should clarify the point. We are providing for conveying land to the university. Does that mean the legislature, in turn, will have power to return the land elsewhere or to disenfranchise the university from the use thereof?

ANTHONY: The answer to that is no.

NIELSEN: One more question, and I'll hold my peace. The question is, doesn't this make it so that the university can go into the laundry and dry cleaning business or anything they all want to, according to the way a lot of universities on the mainland are doing these days?

ANTHONY: The answer to that is "administered in accordance with law," and any statutory prohibition against the laundry business -- and, incidentally, the Tax Court has recently given NYU a kick in the teeth on that very business. It is no longer tax exempt for the macaroni business, I think it is. The legislature could prohibit or regulate any such thing.

TAVARES: I think it's important that in this Committee of the Whole debate, we lay a broad foundation for the interpretation of this section and, for that reason, I hope the members will excuse me for just a few more statements. One is that the answer of the last speaker, or one of the last speakers, that the legislature cannot take away land from the university once given, I think needs to be qualified to this extent. If, at the time of the conveyance to the university there is reserved a right to take back by law or otherwise, of course that right can still be enforced. However, if there is an unconditional grant to the university, of course then the legislature could not, under this section, take it back without the university's consent. I think that the speaker agrees with me in that.

Secondly, I think the report of the Committee of the Whole should show that if any provisions in this article relating to the university in any way alter an existing private trust, that that is not to be effective. I think that's the rule, but I think it should be made clear so that if property is now held by the regents in trust, and we say from now on the university shall hold title, as far as that property already acquired is concerned, the regents will continue to hold it in trust, if that is necessary to preserve the trust. I think the minutes of the report of this committee should make that clear.

CHAIRMAN: Are we now ready to vote on this amendment?

MAU: I think that the concensus is to make the University of Hawaii as excellent a university as possible, particularly because of its situation in the Pacific; but the difference, I think, is on the method of accomplishing that result. As I said on Saturday, dealing with the board of education, many of the delegates had mentioned the role that the legislature should play in the government in the new State of Hawaii and those delegates who earlier in the session wanted to leave much of the powers with the legislature now are taking a different tone. They are playing a different tune entirely. I'm wondering whether or not all of this is not legislative. Now if the university was not able to borrow in accordance with this explanation which was just handed us under the authority of Act 141, was it because of a defect in that act?

Isn't it better for these people who want to have such a university to put their problems before the university -- before the legislature and accomplish that purpose? I'm wondering whether or not all of these questions that have been raised are not questions that can be easily and readily handled by the university. If not, is it because they are afraid, again, I say, of the legislature? Really, shouldn't these problems be handled by the legislature? Are we to sit here in this Convention writing a Constitution and say which one of the branches or agencies of the government shall or shall not have title to certain lands or personal property? Aren't we going into details that should be left to the legislature?

I want to call attention to the Convention that two or three years ago under the master plan for the Island of Oahu, certain lands near St. Louis Heights and adjoining, I think, certain lands of the university now held by them in trust were set aside for park purposes for the community in that area. The City and County condemned the land, and the university, through the Territory, took the case to court. Now is it a case of wanting to say that the university shall be free and independent of all other agencies of government so that it is untouchable, not even by the legislature, because you are going to detail its powers, its holdings and everything else? Now, if that is the purpose, let us be frank about it. If you want to create an agency which is entirely free of the legislature, then why don't we say so? I think that many, many things that are coming up in the next few days will be matters of legislative concern only.

PORTEUS: To those of us who have attended the university and have its interest at heart, we have been supporting the university for many years, not only in the legislature, but out of the legislature. We are concerned with putting this university on the same standing as other land grant universities on the mainland. The regents of the university and those that have gone to that school have the feeling that as other land grant colleges have been established, universities, so should this one be put on the same basis. The mainland universities in land grant areas, such as this university is, have provisions whereby they hold title to land.

The questions that were raised with respect to the fee simple title were in large part raised on Saturday and the days earlier by people who wished to support the university in its legitimate aims and ambitions. We raised questions as to whether legal title meant the power to borrow money. Was that power to borrow in anyways limited? If we intended to limit the Territory of Hawaii, why should we give unrestricted power of borrowing to one of its agencies? Was it the intent to have this agency or this university subject to no control by any other branch of the government? We also raised the question if they could borrow money, was it borrowing from government sources or from private sources as well? If it was from both public and private sources, what of the capacity to place liens on the various projects? Would those liens extend only to the projects which would be self-liquidating or would they extend to all the lands and assets of the university? Those questions were the ones that were posed. Those are the questions to which we wish to be able to give people a direct and flat answer, a "yes" and "no" answer to a direct question. This amendment presented this morning answers those questions.

It is clear from the distribution of the little write-up entitled, "The University and land ownership," that there is no intent to put the university superior to all branches of government. The university, of necessity, will need to come to the legislature and get its appropriations as any other department of the government will be. It will however, like other state universities, possess title to its land, which will enable it to be on the same status as other universities on the coast. It will be able to approach the Federal Government for the purpose of borrowing money at low interest rates, under authority as may be passed by legislation of our State legislature.

There is no desire to put them all out in compartments by themselves where no one can reach it at all. In fact, I believe Delegate Fong's question with respect to the purchase of the land was a question directed to the record only to amplify this record of the Committee of the Whole to indicate that if the university were to obtain money from private sources given to the university for the purposes of acquiring land, that the university could legitimately expend that money for the purpose for which the money had been given. But that if it were public money, the university would not have the right to go out and, with no restraint on its discretion, buy such lands as it might determine it wished to purchase; but rather any public moneys would be expended under limitations established by legislative act. Now that, as I understand it, is the answer that the delegate from the fifth district and a strong supporter of the university wanted in the record, and I wanted that in the record, too.

I think that the language as has been suggested in the amendment puts the university on a better status but does not remove it from control; does permit it to have the power to borrow money, but it will be subject to legislative restraint

HEEN: It seems to me that the regents are concerned about the matter of being able to borrow money for the purpose of erecting dormitories on some piece of land. Now, why not do this. Instead of giving the University of Hawaii title to personal property and real property, why not provide that the legislature may vest title in real property for the purposes prescribed by it. So that if they need to borrow any money upon a mortgage of some real property, give the legislature the power to do that very thing. Vest the title in the University of Hawaii for the purpose of erecting their own dormitories and authorizing the university to secure a loan, secured by such real property. All the rest of the property as set aside for the university, the title should remain in the Territory and not in the university. The title to all personal property should remain in the Territory and not transferred to the university.

Now, with reference to the statute relating to the disposition of personal property, it says this: "No personal property belonging to the Territory shall be sold, exchanged or otherwise disposed of except in accordance with the provisions of this chapter." Then it describes the procedure by which property may be exchanged, sold or destroyed. Now all personal property belonging to the University of Hawaii should be treated the same way that other personal property in the hands of other departments are treated.

So it seems to me that the title to all property, personal or real, shall remain in the Territory of Hawaii. Give the legislature the power to vest title in some particular real property in the University of Hawaii with authorization on the part of the university to borrow money upon that real property.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment - -

FONG: Delegate Bryan asked a question in which - - whether there would be a possibility of reverter. Is that right, Mr. Bryan? And it was answered by Delegate Tavares that the university - - that the legislature could do that. Now, as I understand, upon the ratification of this Constitution, this clause will be self executing. The clause, the motion made by Delegate Anthony, that "the university is hereby constituted a body corporate and all real and personal property now or hereafter set aside," now as I understand it, upon the ratification of the Constitution this clause will be self executing and there will be no possibility of reverter unless we take care of it here. Now, if we wish to give the legislature the right to write into the conveyance the possibility of a reverter there, we should strike out the word, "hereafter held" - - I mean, "now held."

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, may I answer that question specifically? There are a number of ways that that situation could be taken care of. We, of course, don't have before us in this Convention the several executive orders setting aside territorial lands to the university. I gather the way to handle this thing would be for the executive to make up a schedule of lands before the Constitution actually goes into effect, and then do what the executive will have to do with any number of executive orders, rearrange those things. In other words, take those executive orders and put what conditions there need be put in the executive orders, so that if any particular land should - - they would want to put any strings to it, they could put the strings to it, right in the executive order, before the Constitution goes into effect.

I'd like to answer Delegate Heen's statement in regard to the disposal statute. Obviously, the university would have to comply with the disposal statute, and any property that it administered has to be administered in accordance with law. That means disposal in accordance with law. It couldn't go ahead and ignore the disposal statutes. I think the amendment as proposed is all right.

H. RICE: I want to wholeheartedly support the amendment. You can leave certain things to the legislature but sometimes the university has gone through on - - skimmed through on pretty thin ice. I remember one time when the president of the university came to me and asked me whether you wanted to have a University of Podunk or the University of Hawaii. That's the way they were heading. I think that we've got to be fair to the university, and I think that they have vision of - - better vision of what they are supposed to do at the university than the average legislator has. Fortunately, they were cared for, but I had the president talk to the Ways and Means Committee the same way he talked to me when I was president of the Senate. I told him, "You go down there and tell them that you are going to be the University of Podunk if things don't go better than they're going now." And they did. This is far-reaching.

The subject of this chemistry building, that's been a must at the university for a long time. Delegate Ashford showed me where we are going to be more and more in the control of chemical matter so far as land is concerned. They are going to inoculate the soil with nitrogen.

HEEN: I was just going to say this, in reference to the problem of personal property. As I stated, the statute says that "No personal property belonging to the Territory." When you say, "belonging to the Territory," that means the title is in the Territory; and here you say that the title is in the university. Where is the title, in the university or in the Territory of Hawaii?

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, may I answer that? The title is in the university, but under the words, "to be administered in accordance with law," the legislature can amend this statute or pass another law saying that the university shall not dispose of personal property except in a certain way. I see no danger in that.

HEEN: That's correct, if the Territory will expand the statute relating to territorial personal property. That's correct. It can be taken care of that way. But as I said before, the Territory - - I mean, the University of Hawaii should not have title to all of the real property set aside to it or to the personal property. All that they want as I understand is this, they want to hold title to some real property for certain purposes. Why not, then, let the legislature have that authority, to vest title in that real property. Here is the amendment that I would suggest. "The legislature is authorized to vest in the University of Hawaii title to real property for such purpose as it may prescribe."

NIELSEN: I'll second that motion.

ANTHONY: The trouble with that is that the legislature may never get around to doing it. Now the question is whether or not we want to make this university on a parity with the great state universities of this country. It's a land grant college without any land. Are you going to sit here and write into this Constitution a perpetuation of that situation? I think not. I think you want this university to be as good as any other state university and the way to do it is to put it on the basis with other state universities. The object of - - the objection as to the personal property can be readily taken care of by any statute. "Administered by law," in my judgment, already takes care of it. But if that's not enough, then legislation can be added to the disposal statute. That takes care of the personal thing.

Now, as to the land that is actually now set aside, if anybody thinks too much has been set aside, or there should be some string to that which has been, the time to do it is when the executive reviews all the executive orders and put it right in those executive orders.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

SAKAKIHARA: The amendments offered without - -

[Microphone did not work.]

PORTEUS: I'd like to invite the representative from the - - delegate from the first district to use my mike, provided, however, he is going to support an extension where I'd like to have support.

SAKAKIHARA: The amendment proposed by Delegate Anthony in my mind is a very serious amendment. I have served in the legislature for many sessions and it contains merit. The University of Hawaii is entitled to land grant matters and yet it is not a land grant university. The legislature holds strings to the university. On the other hand, I do subscribe to the argument advanced here by Senator Heen. He has offered another amendment to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: There is no amendment, Delegate Sakakihara. It was merely a suggestion.

SAKAKIHARA: No, no. Senator Heen made a motion and seconded by Delegate Nielsen.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair didn't think it was a motion, Delegate Sakakihara.

SAKAKIHARA: All right. In that case I believe that in all fairness to the 63 or 62 delegates present here this morning that the amendment offered by Delegate Anthony be printed before we act on the amendment. In my opinion, it's a very serious amendment to the committee proposal; and I for one would like to have a printed amendment so that we could go over the amendment very carefully. I move at this time that we take a short recess to have the amendment printed.

NIELSEN: I'll second that motion. And can we have Miss Rhoda Lewis over here to go into this?

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we take a short recess. All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come to order.

HEEN: I have had prepared an amendment to the last sentence and that amendment, I believe, is on the desk of all the delegates at the present time. The amendment is - - rather, reads:

> The University of Hawaii is hereby constituted a body corporate. The legislature is authorized to vest in the University of Hawaii title to real property for such purpose and with such power as it may prescribe.

LARSEN: I would like to speak against this amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has not yet been put, Delegate Larsen. There is no motion yet.

HEEN: I move that as an amendment.

SAKAKIHARA: I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we adopt Senator Heen's amendment to Delegate Anthony's amendment.

LARSEN: The thing, it seems to me, that we're arguing here is, shall we have faith in the men of the university so as to allow them to go ahead and develop a magnificent university of the state as has been developed in many other states? It seems to me this amendment goes right back to the fact where all the legislatures have been hamstrung. It is not with the men perhaps that we have here from our legislature, but the possibility that men who have not such good will might be in there and then they would hamstring it. It seems to me that if we accept and believe in the good will of university men, which I think has been shown rather generally throughout the country we can depend on, then I believe we should vote for the one that Anthony first proposed.

KING: I'd like to speak in opposition to the amendment offered by Delegate Heen. It seems to me that the previous suggestion safeguards the State and its interests and grants sufficient power and authority over the University of Hawaii as a body corporate because it reads, "shall hereby constitute the body corporate, have title to all of the real and personal property now or hereafter set aside or conveyed to it, which shall be held in public trust for its purposes and administered in accordance with law." That gives the legislature ample supervisory power over the new corporation. The other amendment, the one offered by Senator Heen, would make the university dependent on the legislature conveying to it certain property which may take some time to do.

Now, I was up at the university the other day and have realized that it's grown into a tremendous plant and it will be more important in our life, cultural and academic, as time goes on. We should not hamper the authority of the board of regents in the administration of this university to fill the great purpose for which it was designed and which it is beginning to fill more and more every day. So I would speak in opposition to the amendment to the amendment.

ANTHONY: The only reason advanced for the proposed amendment now before the assembly is that it may include some lands which the university might not want to hypothecate. That objection can be readily met by a change in an executive order prior to the effective date of this Constitution. The word "now" in the proposed amendment offered by myself refers to the date of the effective date of the Constitution. So if there is any land presently assigned to the university which it does not require to have the title to, then an appropriate amendment can be made to the executive order.

This particular amendment offered by Judge Heen will put the university in the same morass that it's in at the present time; namely, it will put it in an inferior status to other state universities and I am against that. The university is supposed to be the cultural and intellectual center of this state and anything we can do to encourage that should be done right here and now. We shouldn't make them come with their caps in their hands to the legislature every time they want to turn around.

KAUHANE: I think much emphasis has been made here that the legislature has not made an honest attempt to help the university out in its purposes. If we looked at Act 141, the 1947 Session, we find that the legislature has been very liberal with the University of Hawaii, liberal to the extent that they can borrow money for housing units under the authorization of the adoption of a resolution by the board of regents. We also find that the legislature has been very lenient with the university, when we write in the statute, Section 1945, "The board shall have the authority to sue in its official name." Here we have a proposal that takes away the right of the board to sue for some obligation that the board may feel just in collecting some money.

The only question, I think, that is in the minds of those who are attempting to have this Convention adopt this amendment is because of the fact that the university has not received the right of mortgaging the property. Certainly, I think the amendment offered by Judge Heen shows clearly that the legislature has never attempted to hamstring the university in its purposes, and that the legislature has done all it can to grant the university all requests that they have made to the legislature, in relation to its purposes as set forth.

I move the previous question on the adoption of the amendment offered by Senator Heen.

GILLILAND: I am entirely in accord with the statement made by the delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Garner Anthony. I think the University of Hawaii should be given the opportunity to expand. We shouldn't be thinking pennies when it comes to giving the university a chance to really educate our youth in the territory. We want to be proud of our people, our children. In the - - Back in the old days when an education or college education wasn't appreciated, we didn't send all our children to a university at all. It was only growing then. But now if we want to advance, we shouldn't stop letting it advance. I'm in favor of Mr. Anthony's amendment and against Judge Heen's amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Are there any other delegates that wish to speak on this question before the Chair calls on the movant?

ROBERTS: I haven't spoken on the question, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to express my views. I'd like to speak in opposition to the amendment which was proposed to the previous amendment offered by Mr. Anthony, Delegate Anthony. I think we are forgetting one very important problem in our discussion and that is the basic function of the university in our community. I think that we've got to recognize that the university is not only a cultural and intellectual center. The university serves as a basis for the advancement and development, economically and agriculturally, of the entire community. Our future in the territory in large part rests on the kind of citizens that we develop, the kind of educational opportunities we afford and the kind of training that we give these individuals when they go out into the community. It seems to me that anything which will develop and help the university, helps and develops the community. It's not a question of individuals. It's a question of an institution and the function it plays in our society. Therefore, it seems to me that it is extremely important that the delegates view the problem in terms of the future of the State of Hawaii, and the training which they have to receive, and the university affords through its various avenues.

We do not know in the future what grants-in-aid the federal government is going to provide, what type of laws are going to be passed, what kinds of funds are going to be made available, which we could avail ourselves of. Putting the university on the same footing as other land grant colleges, on a technical basis, it seems to me would provide the opportunity in the future to permit us to develop at least as well as the mainland universities. It seems to me that our problem here is a little more serious and, therefore, the university ought to be given every opportunity to develop for the benefit of the entire community, because the university does not exist apart from the community. They train the individuals for that basic purpose.

I therefore hope the delegates will vote against the amendment.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to second the motion for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to give the movant a closing opportunity. Delegate Heen.

HEEN: Those who are speaking in favor of the amendment offered by Delegate Anthony are using that to oppose the amendment offered by myself. Look at the amendment offered by Delegate Anthony. There is nothing in that amendment which authorizes the University of Hawaii to sell those lands or to mortgage those lands, and they cannot expand the University of Hawaii except by legislation on the part of the legislature, whereby the legislature may appropriate money for the expansion of the university or perhaps whereby the legislature may authorize the university to mortgage some of their lands in order to secure sufficient funds for improvements. There is nothing there whereby, as I said, the university itself can automatically expand the University of Hawaii without the aid of the legislature. So when they talk about these land grant universities, I believe those were grants whereby these universities could sell and mortgage those lands and use the proceeds for the establishment and the expansion of the universities.

Now, what I have in mind is this: that the title, the legal title to all territorial land should remain in the Territory and if legal title is to be transferred to any department of government, let the legislature do that.

You take the board of forestry. They control perhaps a million acres of land for water resource purposes and they don't have the legal title to the land. It's been set aside to be used for water resource purposes, and placed in the control and possession of the board of forestry. Take the lands that are under the control of the superintendent of public works. He doesn't have the title to the land. The title still remains in the Territory. Same with other departments of government. So I say this, that this amendment proposed by Delegate Anthony does not give the university the absolute right or any right at all to sell any land or mortgage any land unless authorized by the legislature.

A. TRASK: Will the gentleman yield to a question? Is the title to the land in the board of water supply of Honolulu, in the name of the board as distinguised from being title in the name of the City and County or of the Territory of Hawaii?

HEEN: I don't know exactly where the title is, but it's somewhere and it's being used for the benefit of the people of the City and County of Honolulu.

OHRT: The title is in the City and County of Honolulu.

TAVARES: We should insist on the previous question, I think.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Holroyde is now recognized.

HOLROYDE: I second that motion for previous question.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question has been moved. Question is shall the main question now be put? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Carried.

The question is shall we adopt Delegate Heen's proposed amendment to Delegate Anthony's amendment? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Amendment is lost.

Question before the committee now is, shall we adopt Delegate Anthony's proposed amendment to Section 5, second sentence of Section 5?

ANTHONY: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: It's already been moved and seconded, Delegate Anthony. All those in favor of the amendment say "aye." Contrary minded. Amendment is carried.

LOPER: I now move that we tentatively agree to Section 5 as amended.

HOLROYDE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 5 be tentatively approved.

SHIMAMURA: Before that question is put, I think the record should be clear as to the meaning of the word "now" on the third line of the amended clause, "property now or hereafter set aside." I think Delegate Anthony several times referred to that word as meaning "on the effective date of the Constitution," but it's obviously subject to several different constructions and when the Committee of the Whole makes a report, it should be made clear that "now" means the effective date of the Constitution and not any other date.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? All those in favor -- The question is, shall Section 5 as amended be adopted? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Section 5 is tentatively approved.

LOPER: If it is in order now, I would move that we adopt the Committee Proposal No. 11, as amended.

LARSEN: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 11, as amended, be adopted.

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of order. There is an amendment to Proposal No. 11 on the Clerk's desk which was submitted Saturday.

PHILLIPS: I prepared the amendment to Proposal No. 11, which is an amendment to add another section to Proposal No. 11.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kauhane, is that the amendment you are referring to?

KAUHANE: Yes, this and another one that I submitted myself to the Clerk. I yield the floor --

CHAIRMAN: We shall first take up Delegate Kauhane's amendment. Delegate Kauhane. There is nothing before the committee at the present time except the adoption of Proposal No. 11, as amended.

KAUHANE: I'd like the Clerk to read the amendment that I offered whereby I request that a new section be added to Proposal No. 11.

CHAIRMAN: Kindly read it.

CLERK: That Committee Proposal No. 11 be amended by adding thereto the following section:

> Section _____ . The State shall provide and adopt a uniform series of basic textbooks for use in the e public schools throughout the state. That such textbooks be furnished and distributed by the State free of cost and any charge whatever to children attending the public schools of the state.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kauhane. Hearing no second, the Chair recognizes Delegate Phillips.

PHILLIPS: I have on the Clerk's desk an additional section to amend Proposal No. 11.

CHAIRMAN: Will you kindly read the amendment? Delegate Phillips, will you kindly read your amendment?

PHILLIPS:

> There shall be no law denying or abridging the teaching of any language, the establishment of private schools for such purpose, or unreasonable interference with their administration, curriculum or methods insofar as their endeavor does not in any manner teach or advocate the overthrow of the government of the United States.

I'd like to speak in support of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Phillips, there is no motion. There is nothing before the committee.

PHILLIPS: I move that this be adopted by the Convention.

SAKAKIHARA: To enable the delegate to talk on this amendment, I'll second the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Delegate Phillips' amendment be adopted.

PHILLIPS: The chief reason why I have submitted this amendment is that I had the good fortune of seeing the language teams that functioned in the last war in the South Pacific and it is my firm belief that without the language that had been taught in the language schools before the war that there would not have been available to the national government this very valuable intelligence function. Those men performed well down there; their song is unsung. They have done a fine job.

I might say that while they were down there, those same language schools that taught them and made them available to both the state and the nation, the legislature passed a law that closed all those language schools up. Nothing was done about it at the time, but when the war was over, litigation was initiated—not carried through, but initiated—costing in the neighborhood of $25,000. This litigation is one of the chief reasons why I would like to see such a section be in this particular article. It is hard -- it is difficult on people to have to initiate legislation and start legislation against an act which is prima facie unconstitutional. It is common knowledge that when the legislature passed this bill it was unconstitutional at that time. There had been other Supreme Court decisions handed down showing that it was an abridgment of the civil rights of the individual to do so.

I might also say that there are some who feel that this is covered in the civil rights or in the Bill of Rights. This, I feel, is not true or if it is true, it would not have happened during the war, I mean the legislature would not have passed such a bill during the war. This litigation works a great onus on the individual who has to prove that something is unconstitutional just because of the stress and strain of a period.

I would say now that this language has proven to be a great asset to the nation and especially to the state. It is one of Hawaii's assets. They are not -- I'm not only referring to any particular language, I am referring to all the languages. We do not know what the future holds. We only know that during the stress and strain of war, there are people who—under duress, due to prejudice, due to various other of their own reasons, they are either grinding axes or what it might be, but in any event, they aren't thinking—will cause prejudice to become rife, thereby cutting out some of the basic rights which are assured us in the national Constitution.

I would say, then, that if the Convention -- if anyone in the Convention might feel that this is redundant and not pertinent at the time, that education, especially this particular asset to Hawaii, is just as valuable as any one of the other welfare proposals which have been placed before the Convention and been accepted. I thereby beg the Convention to consider this particular amendment and agree to place it in our Constitution.

KAWAKAMI: According to the old Chinese philosopher, Confucius, he say that you can say lots but not say anything at all. I think this provision is not necessary in our Constitution. In the past, two groups, namely the Japanese and the Chinese, brought up the test case on the constitutionality of this provision and decisions rendered were in their favor. Therefore, I feel that it's not necessary for us to incorporate such a section in our State Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to correct the delegate from Kauai that the question was not decided on the merits.

ANTHONY: I think, in the first place, this should be rejected. Most of it is statutory.

Turning to the constitutional issue, the challenge that the language schools would make to the establishment of any law regulating a language school would be either under the Fourteenth Amendment or under the First Amendment, freedom of speech. In the early case, Meyer vs. Nebraska, Nebraska endeavored to outlaw German, and that was upheld in the Supreme Court. Later, we had a case following World War I, Farrington vs. Tokushige, which was a pretty rough piece of legislation. That ultimately went to the Supreme Court and that statute was declared invalid. The latest legislation which has been carefully drafted in an effort to require the learning of the English language before a person attends a language school, has never been decided, as the chairman has accurately stated, on the merits. It went to the Supreme Court and it was dismissed.

Now the reason I am against this is that I'm in favor of leaving to legislation as much as we can leave to legislation. If it is in the public interest to regulate the attendance at language schools, then the legislature should be free to do so within the limits of the Federal Constitution, and if we leave it out, we will have just that situation. We'll have all the guarantees of the Bill of Rights plus guarantees of the Federal Constitution. Therefore, I would vote against this amendment.

BRYAN: I'd like to speak against the incorporation of this provision in the Constitution, not because I am not in sympathy with the thoughts expressed by the movant, but because I have had some experience in this line myself. I think that it would prevent the legislature from passing necessary regulations in the public interest.

The movant mentioned public welfare or general welfare provisions in the Constitution. I think one of the laws on the books now is a limitation on the number of hours per week that can be spent in such institutions and I think that that's looking after the health and welfare of children in the territory. I think there are many other reasons why this thing should be left to the legislature, although I am in sympathy with the reasons for his asking that it be included in the Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no one else that would like to speak for or against, I'll call on Delegate Phillips.

PHILLIPS: I'd like to answer the delegate from the fourth district's contention that it isn't necessary because it's statutory material. I'd like to say this, that it's been my experience in this Convention and especially in regard to the welfare clause, of which the education provision which we are right in the middle of now, is an example of statutory material being poured into the Constitution. There are other examples of where they have choice pieces of sightliness and other articles, such as health, and mental incapacity have also been poured into it.

Now, I would say this, that where this has an effect or will have an effect on in excess of 200,000 people living here in the Territory, insuring them of their right; insuring them not only of their rights, but insuring them against litigation and the spending of vast sums of money in order to prove something which was unconstitutional and passed by the legislature -- would be passed and then cause them to go through all this furor. An example of that was in this last case where the Chinese groups spent $25,000 in litigation -- initiating litigation. In the interim, the legislature realized that the law was unconstitutional after it had been on the books for three or four years and then they took it off and it wasn't necessary to press the indictment.

Now I think that on the one hand, this is statutory material. I agree with that one hundred percent. But by the same token, every other article in this educational provision is statutory material and every article and everything that has to -- pertains to the generic term, "general welfare." Just as the federal government saw fit to cover it in seven words, there is no necessity to having these others in here. This is an important piece of legislation and I'd like very much to see it in.

CHAIRMAN: The question is, shall we adopt Delegate Phillips' amendment?

SHIMAMURA: May I ask the proposer of this amendment if he would consent to the following amendment. On line four, on the last line, rather, after the word "through" insert the words, "by force or violence"; and after the word "government of" - - no, pardon me, after the word "United States," the words, "or of this State."

PHILLIPS: May I answer that? I accept that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

NIELSEN: I think that it'd be better to put a clause in the Constitution where we urge that the Russian language be studied in the schools rather than an amendment like this. I don't see where this belongs in the Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Question is shall Delegate Phillips' proposed amendment as amended be adopted? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Amendment is lost.

Question now before the floor is shall Committee Proposal No. 11, as amended, be adopted?

OKINO: Before we vote on that motion, I should like to direct the attention of the committee to the expression, "appointed by the Governor by and with the consent of the Senate," appearing in Section 2 and Section 4 of this proposed article.

The proposal for the establishment of the judiciary, which we have already considered, provides for the appointment of justices by the Governor "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate." There is a difference. In the United States Constitution, the expression covering this matter is expressed as follows: "He"– meaning the President–"shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint." This expression which appears in the Constitution of the United States is also set forth in our Organic Act in Section 80. Now, I have been wondering if all these expressions mean the same thing, so that there is no difference in substance, so that this matter is simply a matter of form and style. If all these expressions mean the same thing, I think it would be for the benefit of the Style Committee to know it so that a uniform expression covering this matter may be followed by the Style Committee.

PORTEUS: I agree with the delegate from the island of Hawaii that it is a matter of style.

CHAIRMAN: The question is shall we adopt Committee Proposal No. 11, as amended? All those in favor signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried.

LOPER: I now move that the Committee of the Whole adopt Standing Committee Report No. 52, with the exception of the last sentence which recommends the adoption of Proposal No. 11, because Proposal No. 11 has been amended and that is not reflected in the language. The motion, then, is to adopt Standing Committee Report No. 52, except for the last recommendation.

PORTEUS: Would the delegate add to his motion, "and that the proposal, as amended, be adopted."

LOPER: Yes, that is correct. "And that Proposal No. 11, as amended, be adopted."

PORTEUS: I think that's the sense of the meeting but would it not be correct for us to adopt that as the sense of the Committee of the Whole, but the motion be to rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again in order that the chairman may be able to submit his report?

LOPER: In that event I withdraw my motion.

PORTEUS: I move that the "Debating Society" rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again. All those in favor - - President King.

KING: With the understanding that the chairman will submit a written - - chairman of the Committee of the Whole will submit a written report of the committee as a whole, when the committee sits again. Is that the understanding?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

NIELSEN: A point of order. I didn't know this is a debating society. That is the way the motion read.

PORTEUS: I don't know where you've been, I might say. I think the Chairman correctly stated the intent of the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried.

JUNE 24, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole please come to order. The Committee of the Whole has for consideration Committee of the Whole Report No. 10 recommending the passage of Committee Proposal No. 11 as amended and adoption of Committee Report No. 52.

LOPER: I move for the adoption of Committee of the Whole Report No. 10 on education.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded the Committee of the Whole Report No. 10 be adopted. Ready for the question?

NIELSEN: In the powers of the board of regents I thought there was a different wording regarding the title of all real and personal property. Wasn't there a change in that? Would title be fee simple?

CHAIRMAN: I don't get the import of the delegate's question.

NIELSEN: On page six under, about the sixth or eighth line, "The University of Hawaii is hereby constituted a body corporate and shall have title to all of the real and personal property." Has that been changed?

CHAIRMAN: It formerly read "title in fee simple," but that has been changed and the amendment is as shown on the Committee of the Whole report on page six.

NIELSEN: Well, I just wondered if by having title, it is supposed to be held in public trust; but if they have title to it, the last part of that paragraph still applies? That they can only hold it in public trust?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that it does. All those in favor of the adoption of Committee of the Whole Report No. 10, please say "aye." Contrary minded. Motion is carried.

LOPER: I move that the Committee of the Whole rise and report the adoption of the Committee of the Whole Report No. 10.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on

AGRICULTURE, CONSERVATION AND LAND

(Article X)

Chairman: NILS P. LARSEN

JUNE 21, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the meeting kindly come to order. In my youth I was graduated from the Massachusetts Agricultural College, so you see why I'm here as chairman. I'd like to call on the committee chairman to open the discussion of Committee Report, [i. e. Committee Proposal] No. 27.

RICHARDS: I am not prepared to give a long speech recommending the adoption of this committee report. Prior to going into the discussion, I would like to give this Convention a few of the highlights of what the committee has gone into. The committee had a total of 16 proposals submitted to it and one resolution. It also received nine letters covering the subject. Twenty-one citizens and five delegates also appeared before the committee to support some of the particular proposals in which they were interested or which they differed with. We also had, in addition to the attorney members of the Convention, the assistance of Miss Rhoda Lewis, assistant attorney general, who gave us a great deal of advice. We had 25 committee meetings and they lasted for two hours or longer. In fact three of them were evening committee meetings and they lasted for considerably longer than two hours.

I would like to suggest that we follow the pattern that has been adopted previously in this Convention and take up the proposal paragraph by paragraph in their respective sections. I am assuming that the members of this Convention have read their committee report. If they have not and sufficient of them wish the chairman of this committee to read the report, I would be very glad to read the report, but otherwise I will assume that they have read the committee report. I would therefore like to suggest that there be a motion to consider Section No. 1 of the committee proposal.

CROSSLEY: I move at this time that we tentatively adopt Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 27.

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion made and seconded on Section 1. While you are thinking of possible checks, shall I just read it? "The legislature shall promote the conservation, development and utilization of agricultural, mineral, forest, land, water, fish, game and other natural resources."

RICHARDS: May I speak on that for a moment? We feel - - the committee feels that this is a general statement of principles and should be incorporated in the Constitution, as it is a matter of philosophy which applies to all the natural assets of the territory. I would like to have it noted that there is no restriction to just state-owned lands or state-owned assets. That is the idea of the committee that for the public good this general principle should apply to all natural resources of the territory.

HEEN: I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture as to why we left out animals. He said, "mineral, forest, water, land, fish, game and other natural resources." Animals ought to be included there, domestic animals. You speak of wild game there. I take that to mean wild deer, wild goats or wild birds. You left out a very important item there of animals.

RICHARDS: In answer to that question, the committee felt that agricultural - - the term "agricultural" also included all of these bovines, and the pigs and chickens and the rest of it were also taken care of in that particular point. If we had wished to go to the extent of using Latin terms we should have referred to "piscis" instead of fish.

CHAIRMAN: Is that agreeable, Senator Heen?

HEEN: I move an amendment. I move that the words "of agricultural" - - no, that the words "agricultural, mineral, forest, water, land, fish, game and other" be deleted, and insert in lieu of those words the word "all," "of all," so that that section will read: "The legislature shall promote the conservation, development and utilization of all natural resources." And add at the end of that sentence, "of the State."

ANTHONY: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Does the chairman want to explain why they spelled it out?

RICHARDS: There is some question in our minds as to when we refer to a fish, not knowing what the boundaries of the State are, that unless we mention the word "fish" we are somewhat uncertain. As far as natural resources the chairman, without speaking for the committee, can agree that possibly there could be some shortening of that particular paragraph. But we do feel that fish, without knowing the boundaries of the State, is something that we are interested in even if we have to go over to Japan to get those fish. The vice-chairman has something to say on that point.

BRYAN: When the question came up of adding the words "of the State" at the end of that section, some of the members wondered what the boundaries of the State would be and whether, if that was in there, it would be possible for the legislature to provide funds for exploration of fishing, deep-sea fishing possibilities. For that reason the words, "of the State," were left out so that funds could be appropriated to investigate deep-sea fishing outside of the three mile limit.

ASHFORD: I think there was another reason for leaving out the words, "of the State," and that was that there is some question in putting in "of the State," whether that referred to natural resources within the State or owned by the State. The purpose of the committee was certainly not to restrict the promotion of conservation and development only to State-owned resources.

RICHARDS: I wish to also reiterate what the delegate from Molokai has stated. That point was definitely brought up in the discussion in the committee.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion?

KAWAHARA: May I ask a question of the committee as to why the word "legislature" was used at the beginning instead of probably the words, "The State shall promote." I notice in all the sections - - the various sections you have "The legislature shall promote"; Section 2, "legislature shall promote." Is there any particular reason why you use the term "legislature" instead of "The State shall promote"?

ASHFORD: May I answer that? It is our opinion that the correct expression is the legislature and not the State. We are following the very excellent example of the Constitution of the United States which requires that the Congress shall promote.

CHAIRMAN: Could we leave discussions like that perhaps to Style Committee? Would that be agreeable?

RICHARDS: I don't think it is a matter for the Style Committee. When you refer to the State, you have all components of the government of the State. Now in this particular section we felt that it was a legislative matter. This committee feels that much that we have proposed tonight is for the matter of the legislature and therefore we feel the legislature has the power to promote these various things.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion?

SHIMAMURA: I see no very serious objection to the section as drafted by the committee. As a matter of fact it follows very closely the language of the Model Constitution.

LEE: In determining how to vote on the amendment, I believe the words, "of the State," should be eliminated. On the other hand, the amendment which uses the words, "all natural resources," instead of enumerating the same, the question is whether all of these subjects are natural resources. If they are, then the amendment seems to be well taken except for the words "of the State." Can the chairman answer that point?

RICHARDS: There is some question and that was one reason why it was enumerated. The point is, is a forest necessarily a natural resource? Many of the forests here in this territory, state to be, are planted forests, and there is some question as to whether it might be constituted a natural resource. I believe one of the members of the committee, Mr. Crossley, has something to say on this point.

AKAU: I was going to ask also the question about fish. Don't we have certain fisheries that we really don't have as natural fisheries? We put the fish in there and raise the fish. Now in this interpretation, could you call that a natural resource?

RICHARDS: I think that point is covered in the committee proposals and also in the committee report. We provide for the fact here in Section 3 regarding the rights of the citizens to fish. We also provide in Part 2 of this report, which I perhaps should have amplified on in my preliminary remarks, a part of the Constitution which is put into the so-called schedule of ordinances, yet is still a part of the Constitution, that private fishing rights should be condemned by the State for public purposes.

LEE: I haven't finished or released the floor at this time. Then I am to conclude that it was the concensus of opinion of the committee that there is a distinction between the items mentioned there and the term "natural resources." Was that the feeling -- the opinion of the committee?

RICHARDS: I doubt if that is the opinion of the committee. We wish to enumerate everything in which we could consider that there might be some doubt, and then also put in the additional catch-all to get all the rest of the natural resources.

LEE: Well, when I read the phrase, "and other natural resources," I have the feeling that all of the items previously mentioned are items of natural resources. That is the reason why I raised the point. If it is, then the amendment is proper. If, however, there is a distinction and a possible doubt on the thing, then I say that the possible enumeration would be proper.

CROSSLEY: May I answer that? I'd like to answer Delegate Lee --

CHAIRMAN: All right, fine.

CROSSLEY: -- in speaking to that point, I think Delegate Lee has raised a very good point and I think that there is a feeling in the minds of the majority of the committee at least that these are something over and beyond natural resources. That's the reason that they were spelled out. Now some of these things undoubtedly could be classified as a natural resource, but when you begin to spell out for us fish and game, those are not natural resources in the true sense.

CHAIRMAN: May I ask, are pineapples natural resources?

CROSSLEY: Fortunately not.

LEE: The point that was previously raised also concerning the term, "The legislature" instead of "The State," I remember that I argued that the term, "The legislature," should have been used in the health and welfare section. But the Convention by majority felt that the term, "The State shall promote." Now I'm questioning whether or not that is a matter of substance to be dealt with by this committee or whether it should be left to Style to make it uniform, as far as the entire Constitution is concerned.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the committee chairman here in this case felt it should be "legislature."

ANTHONY: If you will read the language you will find that the items enumerated clearly indicate in the mind of the draftsman that he was enumerating natural resources. Just read it. "Agricultural, mineral, forest, water, land, fish, game and other natural resources." In other words a clear construction of those words is that they are referring to all things which are natural resources. That being so, the amendment should carry, I think. You don't have to enumerate these items but adopt the amendment proposed by the delegate from the fourth so that the section would read: "The legislature shall promote the conservation, development and utilization of all natural resources of the State."

BRYAN: May I answer that question please, or speak to that point? If you are going to assume that the amendment should pass just on the construction of this, or to draw the intent of the committee from this construction, it could well be that the committee felt that none of those were natural resources except game, and the thing would read as it is written now. There was some doubt in the committee's mind whether they were all or some natural resources.

ASHFORD: I just wish to say this, that if that amendment is accepted, it seems to me it would be all right if the report of the Committee of the Whole referred to the fact that the Committee of the Whole considered that the words deleted were within the term "natural resources."

CHAIRMAN: And your interpretation of "natural" would be anything that grows on the land or in the water?

ASHFORD: My interpretation is that all those things enumerated are natural resources, but I think that might be subject to construction; and, therefore, if they are to be deleted, I would like very much to have put in the report the fact that the committee regards them as unnecessary because repetitious.

RICHARDS: I agree heartily with the delegate from Molokai. We have a particular problem that is now being discussed in the papers at great length. That is the matter of transporting deer from the island of Molokai to the island of Hawaii. Now, it is not a natural resource on the island of Hawaii now, and yet if it is transported there as game, should or should it not be considered a natural resource? The point of the committee's report was to make sure that it was all-inclusive. If this Convention -- this committee wishes to make certain that in the committee report it is so stated, that all natural resources will include the items which are going to be deleted, regardless of how they might have their original start, it is perfectly all right with the committee, or at least with the chairman of the committee, to have these specific items eliminated from this report.

CHAIRMAN: O.K. Any other discussion?

HEEN: That word "natural" might be deleted. "All the resources of the State." Or you might add after that, "natural or otherwise."

RICHARDS: May I answer that? There is some question. Of course, the geologists tell us that there is no chance of finding oil or some other items that are not specifically enumerated here, and yet I would still consider that a possible natural resource as differentiated between pineapple fields.

DELEGATE: The committee - - several members of the committee have given the reasons for not putting the last three words "of the State," in here. The movant of the amendment continues to read the amendment with that in it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, do you want to take off those three words, after the discussion? Well, just a question of getting it into one sentence. The question was whether you wanted to leave off "of the State."

HEEN: I'm not taking those three words out. They should be in there. All fish within the three-mile limit would be within the state; when they swim out of the three-mile limit, they are out.

RICHARDS: In answer to the delegate from the fourth district, does he wish to preclude the legislature from appropriating any money to investigate the fishing resources of the whole Pacific area, which could be a supplier of income to the State?

HEEN: That would not prevent any legislation along that line. The legislature - - or the legislative power extends to all rightful subjects of legislation, and this is not a limitation on the power of the legislature. In fact, the whole section should be deleted. Under the legislative powers, the provisions of the legislative powers extend to all rightful subjects of legislation and would take care of all these things.

CROSSLEY: I don't know how the other delegates feel about this, but it seems to me that when a committee meets, week after week, and puts in the time that this committee put, to have a section taken and considered so facetiously—to me it sounded facetious—it's like some of the amendments that went - - one of the amendments that went around here today, to amend the Constitution. There has been an awful lot of work go into this thing. Now, if there is a good reason this should be deleted, let's have a good reason, and not, "I think the whole thing should be deleted. We don't need any of it."

LEE: I don't think that's called for. There should be a little humor now and then. I think we all appreciate it. On the other hand, I feel that we appreciate the work of the committee, but apparently that is the treatment that is being given all committee reports. It is not prejudice to - - only to the Committee on Agriculture.

CASTRO: Point of information. Would the movant state the amendment - - state the manner in which the section would read with the amendments that have been - -

CHAIRMAN: I can read it off. "The legislature shall promote the conservation, development and utilization of all natural resources of the State." Am I correct, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

CASTRO: I would like to ask my colleague from the fourth district if he would accept the amendment to delete the word "of" and substitute in lieu therefore the word "within" or "in"?

HEEN: I think that has the same meaning.

CASTRO: I'm thinking now in terms of that second paragraph in Section 2 which discusses the natural resources under the control of a political subdivision.

HEEN: I think that second paragraph in Section 2 is all wrong.

CASTRO: Well, that isn't the point. The point is that I think "within the State" is a broader phrase than "of the State"; "of" indicating control directly by the State, and it is possible some of these natural resources would not be under the direct control "of the State," but would be within the geographical boundaries.

CHAIRMAN: That would preclude deep-sea fishing.

CASTRO: We have no jurisdiction over anything outside of the State boundaries, so we are begging the question if we discuss anything outside.

RICHARDS: I beg to differ with the last speaker of the fourth district. The point involved is whether we are permitted as a State to promote fishing outside of the particular three-mile limit. If anyone in this Convention did attend the committee meeting at which we had representatives of the fishing industry; aside from bait, there is nothing within the three-mile limit that is of any commercial value at all. Now, if we are to promote the fishing industry of the State of Hawaii, we should permit the legislature—I don't say this thing mandates the legislature, it merely permits the legislature—to appropriate funds when, as and if they see fit to investigate fishing possibilities in the Pacific Ocean close enough to the State of Hawaii so that they can be of economic value.

PORTEUS: I don't think that this section is the sole source of legislative power. It certainly had better not be. The words "all rightful subjects of legislation" are so broad that it would let us cover almost every purpose for which legislation may be rightfully written. Here, however, like with other sections of the Constitution, there is a desire on the part of many to point out that agriculture plays a large part in the life of the Territory, and as with health, some recognition should be given to that in the Constitution.

I believe that the legislature, after this Constitution is written, can, as I believe it has done in the past, provide money to assist in research with respect to fish. That research and the people that are hired do not - - the research is not confined to Hawaii nor the attention of the people confined purely to the Territory of Hawaii, because it is recognized that in order to get the fish, that it's necessary for the fisherman to go far beyond the bounds of our territorial jurisdiction. Once caught, however, the fish so captured are returned to the territory and taken to canneries, canned, put on the market, sold and eaten.

Now, I think that as the Chairman has said here, that he sees - - does not believe that any great violence is done to this section if the wording that has been suggested in the amendment is made with a provision in our report that we believe that the words, "all natural resources," cover this. I prefer to see usually, speaking for myself, a broad word used rather than to get into the enumeration of a number of specific ones. It seems to me that when you say "all natural resources," that it covers all of these things. When you speak of the natural resources of a country, if you were to go to some unknown land to appraise and to report on them, you would report on the topography, you would report on the location, you would report on the climate, you would report on what animals were there, what the rainfall was, what the forests, what the cover was. You would report on the minerals, on the animal life; you would report on the water, the fish, the game; all the things that are specified here, and I think you might even go further into some other matters not here referred to, such as climate, and as I said, the topography of the area. So, I think that this will do the trick, if we use the amendment.

I understand the concern of some when they say that they object to the words, "of the State." In the minds of some, they prefer to, as I understand it, skip the use of that wording because it seems to imply owned by the State. "Of the State," I think, is used in a more general fashion here, and what it means is resources found within the boundaries, those things possessed by the State and within this area. I think "of the State" is fairly accustomed language under such conditions.

KELLERMAN: I wish to speak against the amendment. It seems to me that we would like our Constitution to be self-explanatory, and I think it's stretching the term "natural resources" very far to say that it includes agriculture. I notice that the speaker who just preceded me, in enumerating what any foreigner visiting a country and reporting on its natural resources, he did not use the term agriculture. Agriculture is not natural, it is the result of the work of man. If we are going to adopt the provision and have to resort to a committee report for its interpretation, when we admit that agriculture is possibly the most important factor in our economy, it seems to me that it's quite foolish to delete the language that makes your intention clear, and then say -- resort to a committee report to find out what we intended.

I think from that standpoint, also, "of the State," as long as that is ambiguous and can be construed in two different ways, why not omit it, as the committee quite intentionally did omit it. We obviously are not going to develop and conserve the natural resources of any other state except Hawaii, and if we can aid -- if we can conserve, develop or utilize or investigate the fish without the three-mile limit, it seems to me that does not need the enumeration of "of the State" or limitation in any way. I think the original language of the committee is quite clear and I don't think the use of the term "other" makes it ambiguous, because there are certainly some items in this enumeration that everyone will admit are natural resources.

ANTHONY: The word "agriculture" is not used, that's the trouble. There is an adjective used here, and the adjective defines natural resources.

H. RICE: It seems to me in this we ought to have an all-inclusive sentence here. "The legislature shall promote the conservation and development of all the resources of the State." Because I can see in the future, if we want to have full employment, we should develop other things than natural resources. There are by-products in the sugar industry that should be developed and other things. They are not natural resources; they are resources that we should promote, though, to get our country into a better economic state.

CHAIRMAN: Do you make that a recommendation to change the amendment?

HEEN: No, delete the word "natural" from my amendment.

H. RICE: That would make it, wouldn't it?

HEEN: That's right.

H. RICE: It should read: "The legislature shall promote conservation and development of all the resources of the State."

CHAIRMAN: Will you accept the "all," Delegate Heen?

HEEN: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question?

HEEN: No, the word "utilization" in there, that should remain.

RICHARDS: Point of information. I notice that they said, "promote the conservation and development," and did not use the word "utilization." Is "utilization" to be left out in this amendment?

CHAIRMAN: I think they meant to leave it in. That right? I'll read it as it will --

H. RICE: If you develop something, you utilize it.

HEEN: Have the section read, "The legislature shall promote the conservation, development and utilization of all the resources of the State."

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question?

ROBERTS: I am in general accord with the idea that the State or the legislature, as they case may be, take appropriate steps and action to protect the best interests of the State, whether it be in natural resources or elsewhere. I think we're talking in this section, basically, about agriculture and natural resources. If we put a very broad grant of power in here and it goes beyond the natural resources, I think it could be very effectively argued that human resources, which to me are extremely important and vital, might also be the base for action in this section of the Constitution. Putting in very broad language, such as we suggested, "all of the resources of the State," human resources are the most vital, in my mind, resources of the State.

Are you granting a general broad power to the legislature to take any action with regard to resources of any kind? I don't think it's the intention, certainly; I think that that language could be so construed. I think you want a confined language dealing with the specific problem before you, which is the natural resources of the State. Now, other sections have taken care of the health resources, and there will be sections going beyond that within the legislative powers, which are quite broad. I certainly would be careful about putting such broad language in the section dealing with agriculture.

RICHARDS: May I speak on that particular point? Whereas I as an individual have no particular objections to the utilization of all resources available, I feel that that is completely beyond the scope of this committee. This committee was dealing with agriculture, conservation and land, and if you try to write into this particular report the handling of all resources, I feel that that is completely without the scope of this committee's report.

The other point that I would like to bring out is, if it is definitely the feeling of the movant and the seconder and the amender that "of the State" means within the State and not confined to merely the ownership of the State, that is something that I think the committee would probably agree with; but we do wish to make this section broad enough so that it is not confined just to the assets owned by the State.

CHAIRMAN: Now, are there any other opinions? Are you ready for the question?

CASTRO: No, Mr. Chairman. If we mean natural resources, let's say "natural resources." If we mean within the State, let's say "within the State." I don't see that this deletion of the word "natural" gets to it at all. I would move then to amend further and to place after the words "all the" the word "natural." This is an amendment, adding the word "natural" before "resources" and deleting the word "of," and placing in lieu thereof the word "within," so that the section would read: "The legislature shall promote the conservation, development and utilization of all the natural resources within the State."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, will you -- are you willing to accept that as a --

HEEN: No, I'm not. The word "natural" was deleted in order to take care of agriculture and other resources that are not natural. The committee said it was intended to cover both.

PORTEUS: I would like to see this matter brought to a vote. I second the amendment made by my fellow delegate from the fourth district, because I believe that there is a disposition on the part of many of the delegates here who wish to retain - - disposition to retain the terminology "natural resources." Now, if the amendment doesn't carry, we go on to the amendment as suggested. If it does carry, we've got that question behind us.

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: The question is then, you want to move first on Castro's amendment. Do you all know what it is, the difference between one and the other? Instead of - - what we are moving on now shall be: shall we include "natural" and "within the State"? Are you ready? All those in favor of this amendment say "aye." All those opposed. Sounded like more ayes. Do you want to show hands?

DELEGATE: Is it a ruling of the Chair the ayes have it?

CHAIRMAN: That's what the ruling was.

DELEGATE: Well, that's sufficient. We'll abide by the ruling of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.
Then are you ready for the next amendment, Delegate Heen's amendment?

PORTEUS: That will be Delegate Heen's amendment as amended?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, that's right. Are you now ready for accepting Section 1 as amended?

ROBERTS: Will the Chair please read the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment as it stands now reads as follows: "The legislature shall promote the conservation, development and utilization of all the natural resources within the State." Are you ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." All those opposed. I'm afraid the noes have it.
Are you now ready for the question? The question is as follows: "The legislature shall promote the conservation, development and utilization of agricultural, minerals, forest, water, land, fish, game and other natural resources."

HEEN: I move an amendment by deleting the word "other," and substitute for that word the word "the."

CHAIRMAN: You get it? You take out - -

HEEN: The word "other" and substitute for that word the word "the."

CHAIRMAN: Did you all get it? The last line will then read, "and the natural resources." Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE: A point of order, please. There's no second to the motion to amend.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: I think there was.

CROSSLEY: May I ask the movant a question? Delegate Heen, what do you think that that will do that this language doesn't?

HEEN: Because all that is stated before that, all of the various items before that, ties up with the word "other." "Agricultural, mineral, forest, water, land, fish, game and other natural resources." They are all supposed to be natural resources, what goes before those words, "other natural resources."

CHAIRMAN: May I ask Delegate Heen, would that then sort of infer that agriculture, mineral, land and so on are not natural resources?

HEEN: That's correct.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? The addition of the word "the," the elimination of the word "other." All those in favor - - Delegate Roberts, go ahead.

ROBERTS: I suggest that some of the items listed obviously are natural resources. It seems to me that leaving the language as it is meets the problem. It covers those items and covers other natural resources as well as those mentioned within the paragraph. I think we ought to adopt Section 1 as proposed by the committee.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion?

MAU: Point of information. I wonder if the committee would explain the word "agricultural" as it relates to natural resources. Could there be better language than that? I think maybe those who have been trying to amend this are calling attention to the fact that agriculture is not considered a natural resource. How do you tie the two - - those three words together?

BRYAN: May I answer that? If the delegate would tell me if there is no such thing as an agricultural natural resource, I might agree with him.

CHAIRMAN: Satisfied? Any other questions? Are you ready for the question? Ready for the question? The amendment is to leave out "other" and put in "the." All those in favor say "aye." All those opposed?
[Motion did not carry.]
Are you ready for the question? Section 1 as submitted by the committee. All those in favor say "aye." All those opposed. Section 1 is carried.

ARASHIRO: I now move tentatively for the adoption of the first paragraph of Section 2.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded.

LEE: I move to delete Section 2. I don't think it's needed. The first paragraph anyway is not needed in this particular section about setting up executive boards. That's all covered in the article on executive powers and functions.

FUKUSHIMA: I second that motion.

RICHARDS: If we are to delete Section 2, we might as well delete the balance of the committee proposal. And if that is the wish of this committee, the Committee on Agriculture, Conservation and Land must naturally expect it to be deleted.

SAKAKIHARA: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Wait till we hear a little discussion here. Delegate Roberts.

RICHARDS: I still think I have the floor on this particular point.

CHAIRMAN: I thought you had finished. Go ahead.

RICHARDS: The point, if the members have read the complete committee report, is that the committee feels that there is a definite feeling of trust that should be exercised regarding the natural assets of the State to be administered to the best interests of all of the people of the State. In the committee report of Executive Powers and Functions we noticed, as we passed on today, that it does provide for executive boards. The department of education feels that it is essential to have a particular executive board, and there is a feeling that in dealing with the assets of the State which are expendable that there should be more minds than just one in handling such a disposition. Naturally, it will be handled by law under the manner of - - by the legislature, general laws passed by the legislature, as is taken care of in other sections in the proposals. This particular point merely raises it before the Committee of the Whole to decide whether the disposition of the assets of the State and the administration of those assets—and by disposition I mean leasing, licensing and other problems to be handled by the State—should be handled by a board, an executive board, or should they be left to an executive official appointed by the governor, confirmed by the Senate, who has no further responsibility thereafter.

CHAIRMAN: Any more discussion?

ASHFORD: I think one of the reasons the committee felt that this should be boards or commissions was after hearing particularly from the land board. I think we are pretty well convinced that we, the committee certainly was, that the land board over the course of years has done an excellent job. Their complaint throughout was that they were hampered by not having full authority. One of the points that they brought out was that, particularly in the matter of handling the public lands, there were immense pressures brought to bear. And they felt, and we felt, that those pressures could best be withstood by a board than by an individual.

CASTRO: As I understand it the reasons for the motion to delete this section had to do with the fact that a similar section or adequate provision is made in the proposal for legislative powers and functions. Now, this, of course, we have not yet seen.

It is true that one of the most important items of interest to any person in Hawaii is the land. I don't think that this statement can be made only of Hawaii, but in Hawaii particularly, which is an island, the question of land utilization is so important that it becomes a matter that you cannot always deal with, with only direct reasoning and fact. It becomes almost a sentimental thing, and we thought, after going through all of Section 73 of the Organic Act and meeting with the attorney general and with the members of the attorney general's staff, I should say, and with Mr. Tavares and his vast experience with the public lands, that this first paragraph of Section 2 is a very minimum of provision.

I call attention to the lines, the fourth line, "and such powers of disposition thereof as may be authorized by law." Now the disposition of the public lands is something that will come up later this evening, or at least later in the discussion of this committee proposal, but to indicate that there must be proper powers of disposition of the public lands is very important. Now, whether or not this section stays as it is in view of some coming proposals by the Legislative Committee is something that perhaps we can take up later on. But I suggest to the delegates here that we consider the proposal before us, in the light of what has gone before, and not what we may anticipate as coming in the future. If it develops that there is some inconsistency, some overlapping, I'm sure we can take care of it. Therefore, I think the motion to delete should be defeated.

LEE: Technically the sentence following the statement that the legislature shall commit to one or more executive boards, which reads, "The legislature need not commit to such boards or commissions the jurisdiction over resources set aside for public purposes other than those of conservation," doesn't mean a thing. It's purely redundant. The legislature doesn't have to do that anyway. Also the following sentence, "Resources which by authority of the legislature are owned by or under the control of a political subdivision, or department or agency thereof, are not covered by this section," things of that sort could be well covered in the report. I can't see any need for the cluttering up of the Constitution by such language.

RICHARDS: I thought - - the first point, I thought we were discussing this paragraph by paragraph, and we are now cluttering up our discussion with entering into the second paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: Point is well taken. We will proceed.

LEE: Point of order, please. The motion was to delete Section 2.

CHAIRMAN: No, the first paragraph of Section 2, I think. That was under discussion. Any other - -

RICHARDS: As regards to the question raised by the delegate from the fourth district on the second sentence, namely, "The legislature need not commit to such boards or commissions the jurisdiction over resources set aside for public purposes other than those of conservation," that was to take care of the assets that were set aside for the Aeronautics Board; for the assets that were set aside for the buildings, public buildings; for the assets that were set aside already for public parks. This merely gives the legislature the opportunity not to put into a particular board assets already set aside for other public purposes. It's merely a clarification of the first sentence. And the "other than conservation" means that land set aside for forest reserves, which are a conservation purpose, must be submitted to a board.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion?

AKAU: I'd like to say that I think it's not only redundant, but certainly inconsistent. The first sentence, as has already been explain by the chairman, says something "shall" be committed, which is a positive statement; and then the second sentence, "The Legislature need not," while it is a sort of proviso, it says yes and it says no. I would like to say that we vote on this because it doesn't make sense even to me.

FONG: May I ask the committee a question? I want to ask what is the purpose of Section 2? Is it primarily for the purpose of restricting the power of legislature, or is it a reiteration of what has been done?

CHAIRMAN: Bryan, you want to answer that question? Or does Castro want to answer it?

CASTRO: I'd like to answer that. The purpose of Section 2 primarily is to insure that the boards or commissions which are set up to oversee the natural resources of the State have full powers as opposed to the situation in the land board today where, as you know, the board of public lands does not have full power over the management of the land under its, quote, "control," unquote. That is a prime purpose. So long as that purpose remains in this section, I'm sure that amendments to the wording are possibly in line. But that is the main purpose.

FONG: In other words, you are telling us that, with this section, you will force the legislature to place all natural resources in a board. Is that right?

CASTRO: By "us," you mean the legislature?

FONG: Beg your pardon?

CASTRO: By "us"?

FONG: I mean the legislature. We here who are drawing up the Constitution are now telling the legislature under Section 2 that they have to deal with natural resources in this manner; that is, they must set up a board to take care of the natural resources. Is that right?

CASTRO: That is correct.

FONG: Then it is a limitation upon the powers of the legislature, is that not right?

CASTRO: If you wish to interpret it that way, that is also correct.

FONG: Yes, then there's another way of telling the legislature, we don't trust you; you've got to do it this way.

CASTRO: That is incorrect.

FONG: I see, thank you.

BRYAN: Delegate Fong, I think that this was put in here, not primarily out of fear of the legislature, but more out of fear of the governor. Therefore, I should think you should be very much in sympathy with this.

A. TRASK: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Just a minute, Mr. Trask. Fong, want to answer that?

FONG: Fear of the governor, and yet it says, "The legislature shall commit." Now, if you fear the governor, then you put - - insert in this section here something about the governor, but here you start off by saying, "The legislature shall." Now when you say "The legislature shall," the legislature must; and when the legislature must, the legislature has taken away powers from itself. That's what you are doing. You are not reiterating what the legislature has done. If you are reiterating what the legislature has done by saying that the legislature has done a good thing by putting the water resources on the water board, and the agriculture and forestry under the board of forestry, then I say that it is redundant, it need not be here. But if it is your purpose to tie the hands of your legislature and say that it must be done this way, then you have something here. The only thing I have to do is to vote against it.

KELLERMAN: It seems to me that that is one of the purposes of drafting a constitution. The Federal Constitution so limits the hands of the Congress in many respects. If the legislature were deemed to be trusted in all circumstances for all things, there would be little need of writing a constitution. It seems to be perfectly legitimate and reasonable, and it's one of the purposes for which we are here, at times to restrict the powers of the legislature in whatever fields we feel that is essential for good government.

A. TRASK: I want to - - was quite attentive to the remarks of the delegate from Molokai when she said that experts from the department of agriculture and so forth came to the committee and made observations on how their work was being hampered. Well, that's one viewpoint. I wonder how many people of the legislature were called in to give their own particular viewpoints, and how other people from the other sections of the island who are affected by this legislation or this grant of power are going to feel about this situation. The viewpoint of the people who are attentively attending to their own work will always complain about the lack of power, that's not strange at all; and the purpose of the Constitution is to restrain such things, rather than to give more expansive power.

It seems to me, if you agree—and this I address to the recent speaker from the fourth district—if you say that, "The legislature shall promote the conservation, development and utilization of all natural resources," you are saying to the legislature: "Here, take it all, how and in what manner you do from time to time, or how you may change the law from time to time, is your business." But after giving that full plenary power, you come to the second section that says, "But, legislature, please transfer this full power to boards and commissions who are not responsible to the people directly." And I am against this second amendment, and I am supporting its deletion.

DELEGATE: Correction, Mr. Chairman. There is no "please" in the sentence.

RICHARDS: I feel that there are certain points which have been raised which should be answered. I believe that the delegate from the fourth district who spoke last was considerably in order regarding the point of a constitution is a matter of restriction. However, I do want to assure the delegate of the fifth district that this particular section was not put in primarily to curb the hands of the legislature. He particularly pointed with pride to what the legislature has done regarding natural resources. I grant they have done considerable regarding water and some of the others, but they haven't done a single thing regarding land because they didn't have the power to. It was handled entirely by the Congress of the United States, with their land commissioner and their setup of a land board. We are - - the committee was trying to make a setup which would give the legislature power to create boards to handle the natural resources. You will note that the committee report does not say everything shall be committed to one board or another board or another board. That is entirely up to the legislature.

The feeling of the committee was that it should be - - the assets should be committed to a board, so that no one appointee of the governor, similar to the present commissioner of public lands, would have the exclusive power that the commissioner of public lands now does hold under the territorial setup. We are interested in seeing that there is a control, but a control that can be exercised for the benefit of all the people of the State without having a single dictator.

CHAIRMAN: May I generally suggest that we leave out of our discussion the tone that the legislature is fighting the Constitution, and the Constitution is fighting the legislature. Let's work together on the idea, let's make a Constitution that is for the whole community.

Are you ready for the question? The question is, it has been moved and seconded that we delete Section 2. All those in favor of this say "aye."

DELEGATE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

DELEGATE: Isn't it paragraph one of Section 2?

CHAIRMAN: I stand corrected. Paragraph one of Section 2.

ANTHONY: Isn't it the first sentence?

CHAIRMAN: No, it's the whole section. The whole paragraph, I'm sorry.

ANTHONY: I'd like to speak to that last sentence.

CHAIRMAN: All right.

ANTHONY: It's saying what the legislature need not do. Now, the legislature need not do a great many things. They need not go out and set fire to the police station. Why put this in the Constitution, that they need not do anything? That sentence is absolutely meaningless.

CHAIRMAN: If this motion passes, that goes out with the other.

BRYAN: I'd like to answer that, clarify it. If we put in the Constitution the legislature must set fire to every building in Honolulu, but we want to leave out the police station, then we put in they need not set fire to the police station. That should answer your question. It says here they shall commit to the board natural resources, but they need not commit certain ones as described in the second sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion? Are you ready for the question? The question is the deletion of the first paragraph of Section 2. All those in favor of deleting this paragraph say "aye." All those who want the paragraph remaining say "no." The chairman is at a complete loss as to which side has the motion.

PORTEUS: Can we test this by sight, and not by sound?

CHAIRMAN: All right. All those who wish Section 2, paragraph one deleted, would you kindly stand. I get 23. All those -- would you kindly sit down? All those who favor retention. I get 27. 27 to 23. The motion to keep the section in -- I mean the deletion motion is lost.

ANTHONY: I move to delete the last sentence of the first paragraph.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion on this motion? Question? All those who want to delete the second sentence of Section 2, paragraph one, say "aye." All those who wish to keep it. The ayes have it. Is there any objection or do you want a show of hands?

APOLIONA: I now move for the adoption of Section 2, as amended.

DELEGATE: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been seconded. All right.

ROBERTS: On line two of the first paragraph of Section 2, they have the words "full powers." I suggest that the word "full" be deleted. "To one or more executive boards or commissions powers for the management of."

CROSSLEY: I second that motion.

RICHARDS: The committee will accept that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: It's accepted.

FONG: You will note that Section 2 reads as follows: "The legislature shall commit to one or more executive boards or committees full powers for the management of all natural resources." Now, it seems to me that the English is not correct there. "The legislature shall commit to one or more executive boards full powers -- of all the natural resources." I think the meaning which is -- which the committee is trying to convey is this, that the legislature shall commit to such boards such powers over such natural resources as it may deem necessary.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Do you want to make an amendment?

FONG: Well, I just haven't got my finger on it.

BRYAN: I think it would help the construction of this thing if we took the word "all" out, with the committee report stating that the intention was that through these boards they would cover all natural resources.

CHAIRMAN: Do you want to make that as a motion, Fong? Remove "all" and "full"?

FONG: Beg your pardon?

CHAIRMAN: The question is, do we want one amendment to remove "full" and "all"?

FONG: Yes, I think that is better. I so move.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any more discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those who wish these two words --

ANTHONY: What is the question, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: The question is another amendment on Section 2, paragraph one, removing the two words "full" and "all." Therefore, it will read, "The legislature shall commit to one or more executive boards or commissions powers for the management of the natural resources owned or controlled by the State, and such powers of disposition thereof as may be authorized by law." Are you ready for the question?

ANTHONY: I wonder if the Convention appreciates the fact that this would abolish the superintendent of public works. Would the chairman want to answer that?

CHAIRMAN: How?

RICHARDS: I don't see where the superintendent of public works goes out. We're discussing natural resources. Now, I don't suppose that a bridge, a street or a highway or a building is a natural resource.

ANTHONY: I thought we had that all out when the Convention over-rode the objection to the first sentence. I was endeavoring to confine it to natural resources, but the body did not agree with that.

CHAIRMAN: I think you are wrong. I think natural resources won out.

ANTHONY: Yes, but the word "land" is in there. Land is not a natural resource.

DELEGATE: What?

DELEGATE: What is it?

RICHARDS: May I remind the delegate from the fourth district that at his instigation the second sentence, which would cover his particular problem, at his motion was deleted from the first paragraph.

ANTHONY: Well, Mr. Chairman, I thought I had the floor.

CHAIRMAN: You have.

ANTHONY: This sentence, if adopted, will do just exactly what I said it would do. Now, I don't think we want to take the jurisdiction away from the superintendent of public works for instance, over land and put it in some board. I suggest to the Convention we have already adopted an executive article this morning, it deals with the departments of government. We don't need this, in any respect.

BRYAN: I think that the chairman of the committee on this article already answered the question. Delegate Anthony, the reason that the proviso was put in in the form of the second sentence was to cover just the objections that you now raise, and at the time that you raised that question and there was a motion to delete the section, the first reaction of the chairman of the committee was, "I wonder if he knows what he has done?" The next question we heard was, "Does the committee know what they have done?"

ANTHONY: Yes, but the difficulty is we have already taken care of it in the executive section. Then this committee comes along and puts into its proposal something that's already been adopted by this very Convention this morning, creating executive departments of government. I think we ought to delete the entire section.

RICHARDS: As I recall the action taken this morning, the action did provide, regardless of the various amendments which were offered on the floor, that the legislature may create executive boards. We are merely committing to one of those executive boards which the legislature may create certain assets and natural resources of the State.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the amendment?

PORTEUS: I'd like to ask a question. I don't want to be taken as trying to harass the committee, because that's certainly not my intent, but I would like to know whether or not we might not find language a little more suited to our purpose than possibly that which is used now. The point I have in mind is this. "The legislature shall commit to one or more executive boards or commissions the full powers"—but I think if you take out "full," then if you give it to - - you can divide the powers apparently between more than one board. As I understand it, however, it will be necessary to have a board. You cannot use a department where you have a single department head that will administer one of these matters, but rather than that, the legislature must set up a board or a commission. Isn't that so?

RICHARDS: That is correct. The idea of the committee was that the legislature should commit to one or more boards.
