PORTEUS: In other words, it must be a board or a commission, not a department. Now, this morning when we were concerned with that section which came from the Executive Powers Committee which is Proposal - - Committee Proposal No. 22—I think you'll find it on page 4, page 3 and 4—it made it necessary that all executive and administrative offices, departments, and so forth, and their respective functions, powers and duties, have to be allocated by law among and within not more than twenty principal departments. Now, then, once the legislature allocates one of these executive boards to a particular department, how is the legislature going to work out, do you have in mind, the question of who will regulate the activities? It seems to me that you have rather a pointless section if you say that you will have 22 divisions, but within those 22 divisions - - 20 divisions, you are going to have various executive boards and departments that will not be regulated either by the board that heads that department itself or by the administrative officer of that department. Therefore, you will have to try to find - - either you will have to put this executive board under some department that's handled by a single executive and say that this board doesn't have to listen to you, or you have got to get some sort of classification where you can put all these boards that rule on the duties and powers that have been given them specifically.

In other words, what I'm basically troubled with is, when you set up the 20 departments, how do you place in these various boards? Had you said, it must be left to a department, that would have left it open to the legislature to have utilized this department head or made them subordinate to someone else. But it seems to me that under this language the legislature, under your intent, would not be carrying out your intent unless it gave this executive board or commission full power without being subject to regulation by a head of a department in which it might be placed.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Castro wants to answer that.

CASTRO: Referring the delegate to page 4 of the committee proposal, as I read that, there is a provision that a board or commission may be the head of a principal department, so that I don't see that the point is well taken.

PORTEUS: May I point out to the last speaker that it says, "except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, when a board, commission or other body shall be the head of a principal department, the members," it provides how those members shall be appointed. That's all it does. You could have a department headed by a board. Let us suppose we have a department that is headed by a board, but under that department you have got to place one of these other executive boards. I'm not sure how you do it, with the proper flow of authority and regulation. That's my only concern.

CHAIRMAN: Would you two neighbors get together and see if you can understand the language and then maybe present it later.

RICHARDS: May I answer that particular point that is raised? If the delegate from the fourth district will remember, I raised that particular point last night during the matter of the discussion of the limitation to 20 boards or departments, and debated that when this committee came forward with its report and its proposal it was going to propose that there should be one or more executive boards created to handle the assets of the State. We do feel in the committee - - we discussed at great length the spelling out of a board or boards to handle these assets. We, however, felt, after full discussion—and by full discussion I mean many hours discussion—that it was a matter to be left to the legislature as to whether these assets should be handled similar to the example that was brought up last night of the Constitution of the State of Connecticut, where the assets were all under one board with departments or bureaus subservient to this one board, or whether they should be boards of equal standing. The committee feels that that is a matter for study by the legislature, and, therefore, is recommending that the legislature do place in one or more boards this particular function.

HOLROYDE: Could we have a short recess to see if we could reconcile this problem a little bit?

CHAIRMAN: All right, a short recess. Less than five minutes.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Meeting come to order. One minute more? Are you ready? Have you some new wording here that will satisfy the rest of them, Delegate Richards?

BRYAN: I would move to defer this paragraph. The intent of the committee was that these things should be committed to an executive-type board. That was their prime intent. Now, in the three-minute recess we didn't have time enough to work up any more suitable language. I therefore move that this paragraph be deferred.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Could you hold it a minute? There is a motion before the house to delete "full" and "all." It has been seconded.

SAKAKIHARA: I move we defer everything.

CHAIRMAN: Defer that as well? All those in favor say "aye." All those opposed. Carried.

Go on to Section 3.

RICHARDS: I assume that we also defer the second paragraph of Section 2 because that does relate very closely to the first paragraph.

J. TRASK: I move we tentatively approve the first paragraph of Section 3.

CHAIRMAN: Second to that?

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion? I'll read it. "All fisheries in the sea waters of the State not included in any fish pond or artificial enclosure shall be free to the public, subject to vested rights and the right of the State to regulate the same."

MIZUHA: A question. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee what he means by that phrase, "subject to vested rights"?

RICHARDS: In answer to Delegate Mizuha, the point is that there has been established by Hawaiian law the konohiki rights of fisheries, and those are vested rights according to law. If you will note later in the report, under part two of the committee proposal, Section 4, we are including or suggest including in the Constitution the mandate already in the Organic Act that all private fishing rights be condemned, so that eventually there will be no private fishing rights.

FONG: I notice this is only restrictive to the fisheries in the sea. Now, as I understand, we will be utilizing, developing and conserving the fisheries in the streams. It is conceivable that that is a natural resource. Now, did the committee consider that?

RICHARDS: The committee definitely did consider that, but that is tied up with water rights and is also tied up with the land on either side of the streams that govern those particular areas for the propagation of fish; and the committee felt that under Section 1 the legislature would be empowered to condemn if it's necessary, or to provide for the proper regulations to permit the public to operate and fish in those areas.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. Any other questions?

A. TRASK: Pursuing that same inquiry by Delegate Fong, in the first section you do not differentiate between sea and river waters, you just say "water," and yet in Section 3 you say "sea waters." Now, when I first saw the expression "water" in Section 1, I thought it had reference to all waters; ocean, sea and inlets and outlets and streams and rivers and so forth. I had occasion some time ago to represent some people who had—I think it was the Coney family in Nawiliwili Harbor, not the Coneys, but the other people who were poaching on the Coneys, in Nawiliwili Stream entering into the harbor there—and I believe they do have konohiki rights, and vested rights, so-called. It seemed to me, in view of that, I'd like to move if the committee would consider it, striking the word "seas," so that —"seas," Section 3—so that it would conform with the expression in Section 1 to be all-inclusive, all bodies of water.

RICHARDS: I feel that the committee discussed that particular point and it was felt by the committee that that might be unconstitutional under the Federal Constitution, as it might be depriving vested rights without due process of law and compensation therefore. That is the reason why we went ahead with Proposal No. 4 of Part 2, so that in case of any particular right being involved that the legislature would proceed with the proper condemnation thereof.

CHAIRMAN: Is that clear?

ANTHONY: I'd like to ask the chairman a question. Are there any rights of fisheries that are not vested rights that are not free to the public? Is that the idea of the committee? That there are some rights which the public may not enjoy?

RICHARDS: Oh, yes, as I recall - -

ANTHONY: That are not vested rights?

RICHARDS: I beg your pardon, I didn't get the question.

ANTHONY: That are not vested rights?

RICHARDS: You mean rights that are not vested rights.

ANTHONY: Yes.

RICHARDS: Oh, no, no, no; there is only vested rights.

ANTHONY: Well, then if that's - -

RICHARDS: That's been established by law.

ANTHONY: Well, then if that's the case, this is just a statement of the existing law. All it says is that the rights to fish in the sea shall be free to the public, subject to vested rights. In other words, that's a statement of the existing law.

RICHARDS: There is a slight difference. If the last speaker will read on to the end of the sentence, "and the right of the State to regulate same" is added because it is important in the matter of conservation, inasmuch as this committee was charged with the matter of investigating conservation, that the right of the State to regulate such fishing within the State areas should be preserved.

DELEGATES: Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, I believe I still have the floor. I asked the chairman a question. If that's a fact, then there is no purpose to make any rights free; it's a purpose to regulate vested rights, and the section should therefore be redrafted to say just that. Because, certainly, if they are not vested rights then they are free to the public, and if it is the intention of the section to make them subject to regulation, then it should be a simple statement that rights of fishery, even vested rights, are subject to regulation for purposes of conservation.

MIZUHA: I would like to ask the committee chairman a question. Isn't fisheries a natural resource as mentioned in Section 1?

RICHARDS: May I answer that question, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Go ahead.

RICHARDS: When one discusses fisheries, there are two particular parts of a fishery; one is where you catch your commercial size fish, and the other is where you secure your bait. Now, in the matter of conservation, it is important that the bait reserve be regulated. That is, I believe, the point. Does that answer your question?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

MIZUHA: The point - - Mr. Chairman, I believe I still have the floor. The point I'm asking is, if fisheries are a natural resource of the State, whether it is bait fish or eating fish or some other kind of fish?

CHAIRMAN: The Chairman rules they are a natural resource.

MIZUHA: Then I believe that Section 3 is unnecessary, that it is covered under Section 1 inasmuch as the legislature will have the power to regulate whatever bait fishing or commercial fishing they would want to have; and as far as vested rights is concerned, it will be taken care of under existing laws.

SHIMAMURA: May I ask the chairman of this committee a question? Doesn't this language in Section 3 follow very closely the language of the Organic Act?

DELEGATE: It does not.

RICHARDS: In answering that question, I believe it does. There is one other point which I have neglected to mention for the inclusion of Section 3, and that is that whereas there is a permissive part of this article to permit the leasing of the assets and the licensing of the assets of the State to private individuals, this particular section is in there for the purpose of precluding any such licensing to any individual. In other words, it's important that the fishing should be free to the public and should not be restricted by licensing to any private individual.

HEEN: It's quite apparent to me that the committee did endeavor to follow the language in the Organic Act. If you will read the section as proposed by the committee, I will read what appears in the Organic Act. Section 95 has this language—it's almost identical with that in the proposal—"All fisheries in the sea waters of the Territory of Hawaii not included in any fish pond or artificial enclosure shall be free to all citizens of the United States, subject, however, to vested rights." The only change there is change from "Territory of Hawaii" to "State" and change the term "citizens of the United States" to the word "public."

KING: There's a further change, "and the right of the State to regulate the same," which I think is important.

ANTHONY: The purpose of Section 9—Delegate Heen didn't read the next sentence—the purpose of Section 95 of the Hawaiian Organic Act was to terminate vested rights in sea fisheries, because the next succeeding sentence of the Hawaiian Organic Act says that within three years unless they are established they shall be terminated. Now I think that there's a subsequent section in this article which deals with that, carries on the same mandate. But I see no occasion for this unless it's simply a matter to regulate the rights of fisheries, and if that's the intention, it can be stated very simply.

LUIZ: I want to ask a question of the chairman. The last five words where you say, "State to regulate the same," is that referring to the laws of how you can fish, instead of using dynamite and lime and things of that sort?

RICHARDS: That does cover that, to avoid poison, dynamite and all of those other cases. It's a matter of regulation also, catching fish and lobsters out of season, all of those matters of regulation.

ARASHIRO: It seems to me that this is to make all sea water fishes free to the public, and so under that intention I wish to make an amendment by putting a period after "public" and deleting "subject to vested rights and the rights of the State to regulate the same."

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: A motion has been made and seconded.

KING: I was going to speak in favor of the section as it is. If the delegate who offered that last amendment will turn to the committee report and read Section 4 of Part 2, he'll see there is a very direct mandate to extinguish those vested rights. Now, we can't extinguish vested rights that have been established by law by striking those few words out in this article or in this section of the Constitution. If we are going to strike it out, there will have to be some further language directing the legislature to extinguish them. Well, that language is contained in Section 4 of Part 2 of the committee's recommendations, so I really feel the last amendment is uncalled for.

I wanted to speak for the approval of this section as written. It doesn't seem to me that any argument has been made against it. If it re-uses the language of the Organic Act and establishes in the Constitution of the State of Hawaii that same language, well, then, all the more reason why it should be retained. Then further on, the following section in the Organic Act is embodied in Section 4, Part 2 of the committee report.

Now, while I'm on the floor I'd like to say further that it seems to me rather unfortunate that we put a committee through the hoops here. After all, they have spent many weary hours and discussed this and have done the best they could and they bring their report out here. We should accept it as prima-facie in good faith, and merely attempt to amend or change it in a constructive way rather than in a critical way. As I look over the membership of this committee, I think they are very distinguished members of this body, and entitled to have their efforts considered in entire good faith and not be subject to such criticism and such questioning as to their reasons for doing this or doing that. I'd like to, if the gentleman who made the last amendment, I'd like to ask him if he read Section 4 of Part 2, and if he's prepared to withdraw his amendment. I make that suggestion.

ARASHIRO: Your suggestion is for me to withdraw my amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

ARASHIRO: I'll do so.

PORTEUS: May I point out that the section of the Organic Act, for those who are interested in looking it up, Section 95, and the heading of that is—I'd like to call the attention of the last speaker—is, "Repeal of laws conferring exclusive fishing rights." This was the section that was designed to repeal the laws of the Republic of Hawaii, and it's so definitely stated in the first portion, which conferred exclusive fishing rights upon any person or persons, and it says that those laws that conferred those rights "are hereby repealed and all," and it went on to show what happened after they'd repealed those rights, that it should be wide open as fishing rights were throughout the rest of the United States. I think that's the section.

KING: This section on fishing rights has been a "hot potato" in the political arena for many years. The legislature has deliberately, over the 50 year period, neglected to extinguish those private fishing rights. There used to be a gentleman in my fifth district who used to run repeatedly for office on the issue of the fishing rights. It seems to me that this section that will make the sea fisheries open to the public and the private sea fisheries subject to State control is a desirable feature of the State Constitution. Later, when we get to Part 2, we can act on Section 4. I have served on two appraisal boards appraising the value of the sea fisheries, turned in the reports to the attorney general, and nothing has ever happened to it from that time to this day.

PORTEUS: I'd like to point out something in connection with those fishery rights. The legislature has been making provisions and has on numerous occasions asked the attorney general's office to please report to the legislature the progress made. There was a report made within the last several years, naming which fishing rights, and naming the order in which condemnation process would be proceeded with. As the gentleman said, he was on an appraisal board and there has developed a situation, and I might inform him that in at least one of those, the case has been watched through the courts and distribution of money made to the owners, and in at least one instance that I know of, those fishing rights have been opened on the island of Maui. I think the gentleman was on that appraisal board.

KING: I'm very happy to stand corrected as to the record of the legislature in the last seven years. But that still leaves the preceding 43 years that haven't been rather - -

KAWAHARA: In regard to this statement here as to the fishing rights of persons, I'd like to ask the committee how far the fishing rights are extended to, whether the right includes only fishermen who are out at deep sea, in deep water sitting, crouching or standing on a boat, or does it, the fishing right, extend to those people who also fish from land? As we know there are two types of fishing, deep sea and shallow water fishing, and those people who are going to fish from land, I'm just wondering whether this section will cover those people or not, because some of us do come from communities where much fishing is done from land, I mean offshore fishing.

RICHARDS: May I answer that question? The feeling of the committee was that all the fisheries should be open to the public subject to reasonable regulation by the legislature. The point that the committee was interested in is that the fisheries that are restricted at present, that do have vested rights, are those shore fisheries which do not permit the public to always go in and catch certain types of fish. As I understand the law, it's either a perpetual taboo on one type of fish or the taboo on all fish for one month out of the year. The point is that we are interested, or rather the committee was interested in seeing that the public eventually secured all fishing rights so that they could fish from shore as well as out away from the present vested rights.

KAWAHARA: Do you mean then, that this section does take care of people traveling adjacent to the waters, that is, within the high-water mark? Does this section take care of people wanting to travel within those areas other than in private ponds? I'm interested in that particular phase of fishing.

RICHARDS: There is a legal point involved there, that most of the land titles where they are not by metes and bounds, do go to high-water mark. Now, there is a definite problem that was brought up in the committee by, I believe, Delegate Nielsen as to the difficulties that are occurred by fishermen on the Kona coast, namely that property rights going to high-water mark means they go over the edge of a cliff and that therefore there is no way of going from one particular beach to the next beach. We realized -- the committee realized that that is a definite problem, but it does involve the condemnation of property rights which are already vested in the individual, and that is a matter that the legislature for the public good could proceed to condemn a pathway along the front of somebody's property to permit the fishermen to go along.

KAWAHARA: In connection with what the chairman has just said, we have a situation there where every once in a -- every so often the boundaries adjacent to the waters suddenly change by volcano and so that it's a very difficult situation there. We don't know where the private property ends and where the public property begins.

RICHARDS: In answer to that, unfortunately we have a strange bit of law—I'm not a lawyer and the lawyers may correct me—but as I understand it, having owned beach property, there are two types of title to beach properties, one specifically by metes and bounds, and the other by metes and bounds and then the added phrase "and thence to high-water mark." Now, we have on this island a particular example down at—it used to be Pierpoint, and then it went to various and sundry hotel names, I forget what the name of the hotel is now, Niumalu, I believe—where there was a title of that particular kind. The legislature has provided that where there is that type of a title, the land owner may go before—I think it's the land board, although I do not know the details—and claim accretion under that particular law. Now, if on the coast of Hawaii where they do have lava flows there is a title involved, which is "and thence to high-water mark," then the owner of the property could go ahead and claim accretion, I imagine under the law. But where there is not that type of title and where it is a metes and bounds title, anything beyond those metes and bounds automatically becomes public property. I'm no lawyer, so if I'm wrong I'd appreciate the attorneys correcting me, but that is my understanding.

CHAIRMAN: Have you had enough fish stories, and are you ready for the question?

HEEN: I am in favor of the adoption of Section 3 as it is written. I'm in favor of that because of Section 4 of Part 2.

CHAIRMAN: Question? Are you ready? All those in favor of Section 3 say "aye." All those opposed. Carried.

APOLIONA: I now move for tentative adoption of Section 4.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Open for discussion. Shall I read it?

> The legislative power of the State shall extend to lands owned by the State and its political subdivisions, and to lands under the control of the State and its political subdivisions, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, but such legislative powers shall be exercised only by general order, except in respect of transfers to or for the use of the State or a political subdivision or a department or agency of either.

Any questions? Are you ready? All those in favor of Section 4 say "aye." All those opposed. Well, it's -- is there somebody who wants to discuss that? Delegate Kellerman, did you want to talk about that?

KELLERMAN: I wanted to suggest an amendment which I think will cut out some unnecessary language. It doesn't change the sense of the paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: The vote was tied, so we'll have to have it over again, so go ahead.

KELLERMAN: My suggestion would be to insert after the word "by" in the second line, "or under the control of," and then delete in its entirety the third line and the word "subdivisions." It provides exactly the same without repeating the language. It would then read, "The legislative power of the State shall extend to lands owned by or under the control of the State and its political subdivisions, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, but such legislative power" and so forth. It's a matter of just deleting a sentence because of repetition.

HEEN: I would like to find out what is intended by this language. "The legislative power of the State shall extend to lands owned by the State." Does that mean that the legislature may authorize the condemnation of land belonging to the State?

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Chairman, can you tell us where you got that?

HEEN: If the land is owned by the State, you don't have to condemn it in order to get it again.

RICHARDS: The main purpose of this particular section was to provide for the exercise and control by the legislature by general law except for the matter of transfer to or for the use of the State or various political subdivisions or departments thereof. It is put in so as to restrict possible special land exchange deals or things of that nature which as we know in the past have definitely caused a considerable loss to the Territory.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer you, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: I still don't understand the language.

ANTHONY: I've got a suggested amendment. In lieu of Section 4, I would suggest the following:

> The legislative power over the lands of the State shall be exercised only by general law, except in respect of transfers to or for the use of the State or a political subdivision or a department or agency of either.

I think that accomplishes what the committee wanted to accomplish and eliminates part of Judge Heen's objection. I make that in the form of a motion.

ARASHIRO: I second that motion.

RICHARDS: If I could hear that again, I think it might satisfy the committee.

CHAIRMAN: Could you read it a little slower.

ANTHONY: This is a little rough.

> The legislative power over the lands of the State shall be exercised only by general law, except in respect of transfers to or for the use of the State or a political subdivision or a department or agency of either.

Now, you'll note that that eliminates the first part of Section 4. I think it accomplishes what the committee had in mind and dissipates some of Judge Heen's doubts as to the section. I'd be glad to have that typed out if the body would like to see it.

CHAIRMAN: We have had a motion to amend and a second, but before we have that, could we have some more discussion in case there is something else you want to go in.

RICHARDS: I think the committee would be prepared to accept that particular amendment.

KELLERMAN: I would like to withdraw my motion to amend in favor of this one.

HEEN: I move that action on this section be deferred, so that the amendment proposed by the delegate from the fourth district may be put into writing.

LEE: In seconding the motion, I'd like to call attention to the person who suggested the amendment, the phrases "except as otherwise provided in the Constitution." How would that be reflected? So that I second the motion to defer.

CHAIRMAN: You mean adding that to Delegate Anthony's - -

LEE: No, I still don't understand this language, but referring to the amendment, I call that to his attention.

CHAIRMAN: I have to compliment the committee when they stumped three lawyers on language. Delegate Anthony, would you have that printed?

ANTHONY: It's not the lawyers' language that is being stumped here; it's the committee's language.

RICHARDS: May I state that the language was drawn by an attorney.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the house is to move that it await the language of Anthony. Are you all ready for the motion? All those in favor say "aye." All those opposed. I think the voice was loud, but always remember, the louder the voice the less the thought.

WOOLAWAY: I move that we adopt - - approve Section 5 tentatively.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Open for discussion, Section 5. I'll read it, while you are thinking about it.

SILVA: Point of order, first. The results of the vote was not even mentioned by the Chair. If there is any doubt in the Chair's mind as to how loud the voice can be, then perhaps the Chair should call for a show of hands.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, there was no question about the chairman's idea; he felt the number of voices that were soft outweighed the number who were loud.

SILVA: Then I ask for a show of hands.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor raise their right hands. This is for deferment of Section 4 while Anthony is typing. It's almost unanimous, which seems to infer the correctness of the louder the talk, the less the thought.

Section 5 is open for discussion. I'll read Section 5: "The public lands shall be used for the development of farm and home ownership on as widespread a basis as possible, in accordance with procedures and limitations to be established by law." Any discussion? Are you ready for the question?

SERIZAWA: I would like to have the chairman of the committee explain a little more in detail what Section 5 means. To me it doesn't seem very much.

RICHARDS: As the committee report states, Section 5 is the result of telescoping approximately six or eight pages of an original amended proposal that the committee discussed. Originally, the committee went into the point of discussing many of the restrictions and regulations contained in Section 73 of the Organic Act. Now, as I recall it, there are about five or six pages in the Revised Laws, 1945, that cover Section 73—it may even be longer—and the committee discussed all of these points wondering whether or not certain of the features might not be constitutional matter. It was finally decided by a majority of the committee that matters of that nature should be provided for by law; and, therefore, the committee came forth with this particular section, "The public lands shall be used for the development of farm and home ownership on as widespread a basis as possible, in accordance with procedures and limitations to be established by law," feeling that the legislature, taking into consideratic the remainder of the committee report, would provide for this proper distribution of the lands in accordance with H.R. 49.

ROBERTS: I have a question with regard to the language on lines three and four of Section 5. The last part of that section reads, "in accordance with procedures and limitatior to be established by law." Are you mandating the legislature to provide limitations on the use and development of farm and home ownership? The legislature may want to place limitations or may want to have no limitations. Wouldn't the same thing be accomplished by using the words "in accordance with law" and put a period there, and delete the subsequent language, "the procedures and limitations to be established by law"? "In accordance with law" would take care of whatever action the legislature may take dealing with procedures, limitations or anything else. Would that be satisfactory with the committee?

CASTRO: I think the delegate is correct insofar as he has gone. The committee went that far and went a little further. If you read the first phrase, "The public lands shall be used for the development of farm and home ownership on as widespread a basis as possible," if you put a period there—I'm trying to develop a thought—if you should put a period there that would be a wide and sweeping authorization to the point where it might even become dangerous, with all due respect to the legislature that has been eulogized by the delegate from the fifth district—and to say "in accordance with law" might also leave a wide open door.

It must be remembered that Section 5 is the section which takes the place of all of those various articles and phrases and sentences that might have gone in here, in this committe proposal, indicating how the public lands were to be used for development, and how many areas per annum, and how many acres in a homestead, and how many acres in a farm lot, et cetera, et cetera, those things which Section 73 of the Organic Act deals with. But in discussing this with Miss Lewis of the attorney general's department, we came to the conclusion that, in the first place, it would be improper material for the Constitution; and in the second place, it would be a patch upon a patch, that the land laws of the Territory today represent 50 years of patchwork and that a new set of procedures and limitations must be set down by the legislature of the State to take care of the loopholes that might exist, to look into the future development, to set up a schedule of distribution of the lands; else a careless but nevertheless sincere legislature could dispose of the lands to the point where mortgage values might be affected, to the point where people might be induced to buy and develop long before the land could be used because of lack of water source et cetera.

So this mandates, and the answer to the delegate's question is yes, it does mandate, it mandates that procedures of disposition and development be set up, and that limitations as regards possibly - - the limitations which they see fit, but the committee reports indicate that there would be limitations as to areas and number, those limitations would be set up. In other words, a system would be established by the legislature after due study, of which it is very capable, and then by general law the lands would be disposed of.

I might also say for the benefit of those who may not have looked into this question during the time the committee was studying, that there were several proposals brought before the committee asking for the condemnation of private lands along the lines that have been publicized to some great extent, along the lines of the mortmain statute, that famous statute of Puerto Rico. The point was brought out very clearly, we thought, that this Constitutional Convention should not appoint itself a policeman of private lands for private use when there is public land available to the people. This Section 5 is the attempt to make available as soon and on as equitable a basis as possible, the public lands that would be available to people for farm and home use, but on a systematic basis; and I hope that that answers the question of the delegate.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, are you satisfied? Delegate Ashford.

ROBERTS: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, if you don't mind.

ROBERTS: May I continue for a moment. This section as I read it deals only with the public lands. I'm not talking now about private lands. When we say that the legislature shall act in accordance with law, it seems to me that you leave it to the legislature to prescribe the conditions, the procedures and limitations or the nature of the limitations they care to put on it. Suppose, under the present language, the legislature says these are the limitations, but in actuality they may be very meager limitations. Now, it seems to me that if the committee doesn't indicate the nature of the limitations, or how far they are to go, I would therefore move that the words, "with procedures and limitations to be established by law," be deleted and the words, "with law," be inserted. So that the language of the section would read, "The public lands shall be used for the development of farm and home ownership on as widespread a basis as possible, in accordance with law."

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the question.

ASHFORD: Speaking not for the committee but for myself, I gladly accept that amendment. There has not been unanimity at all in the committee upon the method or whether any restraint should be put in the Convention here in the Constitution which we write upon that widespread settlement of farms and homes, and certainly some of the members of the committee are not in the least interested whether mortgage values fall or not.

KING: I'd like to speak in favor of the amendment. I've read the committee report and am not in accordance with the philosophy or the discussion of the committee report. It seems to me that what we need to do is to provide out of the public domain all suitable lands for small farms, house lots, ranches, as rapidly as possible; all the lands that are eligible for subdivision and homesteading. That was the spirit of Section 73 of the Organic Act and that should be the spirit of the State Constitution. I hope that the legislature, when it provides the laws to implement this section, will bear that principle in mind and not the discussion of the committee report.

FONG: In reading the sentence here, "The public lands shall be used for the development of farm and home ownership," now that conveys a thought as to what the committee is trying to do. As I understand, we have now the question of homesteading, the question of having some of the homesteads broken up into farms and fee simple farms, and some of the homesteads broken up into fee simple lots. Now, there are three questions there. One is a question of the fee simple title resting in the State with a 99-year lease, or whatever number of years lease, in the tenant. There are some homesteads that are built upon that basis, and many of the tenants prefer to remain upon the land for probably 99 years, not wishing to have a fee simple title for fear that they will be able to alienate it. There are other people who are asking for fee simple land from the public domain, that is, fee simple land for farming and fee simple land for home ownership. I was just wondering whether this sentence really conveys the thought of -- conveys those three thoughts. I was wondering if this would be better wording, "The public lands shall be used for homesteading, for the development of farm -- farming and housing on as widespread a basis as possible."

ASHFORD: The first part of the language used, up to "as possible," is the language from H.R. 49.

FONG: It may be according to the language of H.R. 49, but I'm just wondering as to whether this is conveying the thought of this Convention, that we have in our minds that there are various types of homesteading; fee simple homesteading, and homesteading on a tenant basis, that is, on a leasehold basis which many of our homesteaders are now holding their land, like the Molokai homesteaders. I understand that they have a 99-year title, a 99-year lease to their land, and that there is no possibility by which they may obtain fee simple title to these lands. Now, if those are the situations which we are now facing, let us write it very plainly so that we do intend to carry on the three types of ownership, that is tenant ownership, farm ownership in fee simple, and home ownership in fee simple.

BRYAN: I think the answer to that is, that same question came up in committee. The word "ownership" was left in in this manner because it takes care of those who want their land in fee. The word "development," the committee thought, would take care of long leases for both homes and farms. Also, I believe this is partly a mandate from H.R. 49 and that was the third reason for leaving the language the way it was.

FONG: In reading this language, it gives me the idea that the only thing you are saying here is that you are trying to develop it for farm and home ownership only, and that the question of homesteading is left out entirely. Now there is a very big section of our community here that have homestead lands which are not granted to them in fee simple.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion? Senator Heen.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

RICHARDS: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Wait, just one moment. You want to answer it?

RICHARDS: I would like to answer the delegate from the fifth district that the --

CHAIRMAN: You want to wait, Delegate Heen? Let Delegate Heen, maybe he'll answer the same thing.

HEEN: Delegate Bryan said that there might be persons who would like to own their own homesites in fee simple. Now, was it intended that while a person may own his homesite in fee simple, that there should be some limitations on that ownership? The language here as to limitations seem to indicate that some limitation must be prescribed by law or established by law even for homesites owned in fee simple, and I was wondering what that limitation might be.

RICHARDS: I can answer that and that question falls in line with the delegate from the fifth district's question. The idea of the committee was to provide fee simple ownership for home sites and homesteads. The limitation suggested was the question as to possible size of the homesteads and possible size of home sites, as to how much could one individual acquire of the public lands. There is also a prohibition in the Section 73 regarding corporations acquiring public land, and that is a point that I feel is definitely a matter of policy that the committee—some members felt it should be handled in the Constitution, and others felt it should be left up to the legislature—and the committee decided that matters of that nature should be handled by the legislature. It was not a question of limitation of ownership. It was quantitative rather than qualitative as far as it was concerned by the committee. Does that answer the question?

CHAIRMAN: Any questions?

FONG: Have you any objections to the words, "shall be used for the development of farm and home ownership and homesteading on as widespread a basis"? That would include those people that we will encourage on the homesteading where title will not be given in fee simple, but the leasehold on the land will be for a very long period.

RICHARDS: I don't think that there was any particular discussion on that point within the committee, Mr. Fong. The committee was mainly carrying out the mandate for a complete fee simple ownership. The proposal is in such a manner that there would be no restriction on the legislature if they wished to provide for these long term lease homesteads. That was one reason why the language was so broad.

Now, I would like to speak to one other point. The matter of using the words "procedures and limitations" is that the committee had pointed out to it the matter of what occurred at Waiakea and what also happened to occur to the Hawaiian Homes Commission on Molokai. It was mainly felt that this was a cautionary measure to the legislature to fully develop the land prior to its being cut up. In other words, making sure that the purchasers or the homesteaders taking over the public lands were not going to be placed in a position where they would economically suffer.

CHAIRMAN: I have a very serious request here, if we could just hold your discussion for a moment. I want the engineering department to put out these top lights here, because some of the delegates complain that their eyesight is being impaired by the reflections from the bald heads.

FONG: I was wondering why I was so confused; now I can see why.

I'd like to make a motion that we add the words "and homesteading" to the word "ownership."

CHAIRMAN: Second to that?

RICHARDS: The members of the committee would, I think, be willing to accept that amendment.

KING: I cannot understand "homesteading" to mean leasing. Delegate Fong's idea is that the word "homesteading" carries with it the implication of a lease. If we're going to have leased homesteads I would be in perfect sympathy with his idea, but it should be "developed homesteads under lease" or "leased lands for homesteading."

FONG: Well, what do we call the Hoolehua homesteads?

KING: Well, that's under a special act of the Hawaiian Homes Commission, but when we open up government lands for general settlement, they file on it a patent - - a preference right of purchase and they acquire a fee, and they are the homesteaders. All of those who acquired the fee simple title to the land at Kalaheo, Kapaa, Waiakea, or Halekou are all homesteaders.

FONG: What about Kalawahine up there?

KING: That's again under the Hawaiian Homes Commission. Those homesteaders do get a 99-year lease.

CHAIRMAN: It seems to me the discussion is getting outside of this question here. Are we?

KING: No, no, Delegate Fong has suggested an amendment that we include the word "homesteader" - - "homesteading" with the implication that that will be leased land, and I'm trying to point out to him that the use of the word "homesteading" will not automatically mean the land under lease. The homesteader, under our practice here, is a man who takes up a piece of government land on a right of purchase and buys the fee of it. If it's his intention to provide small farms and homesites under lease, then there's additional language needed in the proposed amendment to the amendment.

DOI: I think all this discussion here can be handled simply and directly by amending the first line there by deleting the word "use" and inserting in lieu therefor "shall be sold or leased for the development of farm and home ownership," et cetera.

BRYAN: I'd like to speak to that point.

FUKUSHIMA: I was wondering if the delegate from the fourth district would accept this amendment. Delete the words "home ownership" and substitute the words "homesites." That I believe will take care of ownership in fee and also leasehold. So that it will read, "The public lands shall be used for the development of farm and homesites," et cetera.

CASTRO: In answer to that and the previous suggestions, it would considerably weaken Section 5 to make a direct reference to leasing. The intent of the committee, I believe - - Now Miss Ashford points that this might not have been a very unified committee, but I believe that on this point the intent of the committee unanimously was that the public lands should be used on as widespread a basis as possible for ownership. Now, the question that Delegate Fong raised about leasing, in my humble opinion, is covered in the phrase "as possible." Now, if the government cannot find a market for a particular tract in fee, then it can certainly turn around and lease that land. It may be impossible to sell it in fee, possibly because of the demand for the market, or the lack of demand, but that would be the only time where it would be acceptable because it is the understanding of the committee, after speaking with several people who have been mentioned in the report, that the demand is for the ownership in fee of the land, and that the demand for lease is, as far as quantity goes, is incidental in number. I don't think that this section as it is worded excludes leasing. It merely points to the opening up in the fee.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer you, Fong? All right?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Question.

A. TRASK: The report of the committee—and in all due respect to the committee, I think it's done a fine job and I don't think our inquiry is any way derogatory of the wonderful work of the committee—Section 5 is without doubt lifted from H.R. 49, and the words "farm and home ownership" —and I'm addressing myself immediately to the suggested amendment offered by Delegate Fukushima who wants to strike out the words "home ownership" and put in "homesites"—the expression on page 13 of H.R. 49 as of March 8, 1950, among other things, "The lands patented to the State of Hawaii from Congress"—that's referring to the 180,000, among other provisions made for the proceeds—"shall be held for the development of farm and home ownership on as widespread a basis as possible and for the making of public improvements." Now, I think telescoping is a good word, but we must not, as I see, get the impression that all the 180,000 acres which we may be speaking about—which are, as I understand, the most tillable and usable and best agriculturable land—is to be devoted perhaps solely to home development when the proceeds and so forth are to "be held by such State as a public trust for the support of public schools and other public educational institutions, for the betterment of the conditions of native Hawaiians, as defined in the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act as amended, and for the development" and so forth of farms and homes.

So, I wanted to direct the attention of the Convention to the situation that this particular section, this particular expression, taken out of the context and its applicability with respect to lands patented to the Territory from the U.S., must be given its proper place inasmuch as Part 2, Section 2 refers and makes these other provisions with respect to support of public schools, et cetera, subject to legislative provisions.

Now, in one place you have a mandatory situation, namely as suggested in that same page 13 of the draft of March 8, 1950, of H. R. 49. You have in there that the "foregoing purposes with respect to the lands be handled in such manner as the Constitution and later the laws of said State may provide." Now, I certainly feel, and I think that's the general tenor of everyone here, to have farm and home ownership made immediately and as soon as possible and to be on as widespread a basis as possible, but at the same time, from a constitutional sense, should or should not, if you treat one section as a direct constitutional mandatory provision, should you not also consider Section 2 with respect to public school purposes, and the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act? Give it the same tenor and the same mandatory provision and action, I mean I submit that respectfully as consideration with respect to this Section 5 as relation in Section 2 in Part 2.

RICHARDS: May I answer the delegate from the fifth district? That was the particular point involved in the matter of including the phrase at the end of Section 5, "in accordance with procedures and limitations to be established by law." That was a caution to the legislature to make sure that the other provisions were taken care of and that, however the legislature is mandated, that as the demand developed, it shall make certain that the lands will be available for homes and farms in fee simple ownership.

Now, with regard to the matter of homesteading, I'm advised that the last legislature petitioned Congress to abolish the 99-year lease homesteads. I was not a member of that legislature, so I do not know, but I'm informed that. Therefore, it would tend to further the idea of the committee, we would like to see, for the best interests for the State of Hawaii, home owners and farm owners.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion? Are we ready?

FONG: Does the question include long term leases to homesteaders?

BRYAN: This section, I think Delegate Castro pointed out, was not intended to prevent that. We felt that the words "on as widespread basis as possible" and the word "development" would cover that.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question?

FONG: I'm afraid if we do not say anything about it, it will be construed as excluding it, so I'd like to make an amendment after the word "ownership," "and for long term leases to homesteaders."

DELEGATE: Second.

CHAIRMAN: A motion has been made and seconded for an amendment. Are you ready for it?

BRYAN: I'd like to speak against that amendment. I think that by putting that in there, you weaken, as has been stated before, you weaken the word "ownership." That means that the lands could be made available primarily for leasehold and not primarily for home ownership, and it was the intent of Congress and it was the intent of this committee to point strongly to home and farm ownership.

CHAIRMAN: Could I clarify my mind by asking Fong, why do you want homesteads in there?

FONG: The reason is that our public lands are now being put into various uses, and one of the primary uses is the leasing of it on long-term basis. Now, that is one of the primary uses of our homestead -- of our public lands, and as far as homestead is concerned, as far as I know, that seemed to mean 99-year leases. Now, I'm afraid that if we exclude it that the emphasis will be too much on home ownership, excluding those people who have leased the land for long-term basis, and there are quite a number of our Hawaiian people who prefer to have their land leased to them on a 99-year basis, rather than have the fee simple title.

CASTRO: Mr. Chairman.

SILVA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I think Silva did rise first, so give him a chance.

SILVA: I was going to say --

MAU: I've been standing here for ten minutes.

CHAIRMAN: Oh, I'm sorry I missed you. I apologize to my neighbor. I'll get to you after Silva, here, if I may.

SILVA: -- in reference to the 99-year lease, it should have come off under the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act from -- As far as I'm concerned, Section 5 as written by the committee is, in my opinion, very much in order, and I would like to move that the Chair put the question on Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: We have two more requests. Chuck Mau.

MAU: Mr. Chairman, it took you a long time to see me.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, apologetic.

MAU: I hope it isn't the reflection of light.

CHAIRMAN: I'm afraid it is. It made me not see you.

MAU: I'd like to ask the committee whether they looked into the subject of leases for farmers, and what is the demand in that regard?

BRYAN: You speaking to the term of leases for farmers?

MAU: No, whether or not in your investigations, any facts were brought out that farmers were interested, not so much in owning fee simple land, but rather in leasing land for farm purposes.

BRYAN: As it was stated before, we felt that this would not prevent that. However, we did want to point the way to home and farm ownership if the people were so inclined. If they wanted it in fee, they should have it that way. However, if they prefer to lease we felt that this did not prevent it.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer you?

MAU: I don't believe that the language unamended takes care of that proposition, because your statement here is "the ownership of farms and homes." As I listened to part of the debate, one of the speakers was of the opinion that the words "as possible" could be construed to mean that leases would be possible under this provision.

BRYAN: I think the word "developing" also covers that.

CHAIRMAN: That would be possible, as I understand it.

CASTRO: I am in complete sympathy with the thoughts of Mr. Fong and Mr. Mau on this that we must make sure that leaseholds are allowed. Now in view of the hour, I would like to suggest that we defer action with the thought that we will get to this thing and settle it amongst ourselves.

A. TRASK: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: I had a feeling we were almost ready to settle it.

CASTRO: Rather than have the wishes of Mr. Fong, which I, as I say, I sympathize, I would not like to see this section passed to the exclusion of a leasehold provision. But I am of the opinion that if you put this amendment in, you weaken the intent of this particular section. Which is why - -

CHAIRMAN: Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: The words "farm and home ownership," "ownership" includes leaseholds. When you own land, an owner of land and ownership of land includes a leasee, an owner of land.

CHAIRMAN: Does it include homesteads?

SHIMAMURA: Legally it does include leases.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer - -

SHIMAMURA: That can be so construed by the courts.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to call attention to the delegates who have been questioning this Section 5 as to leases, et cetera, the committee report went into quite some length on that, and it seems the sentiment of Judge Shimamura on the legality of the verbiage there was also substantiated in the committee report.

CHAIRMAN: I think what's been very evident here is that many delegates don't read the reports. The chairman would gently suggest that we all read them.

SAKAKIHARA: I would like to be enlightened as to the status of Section 5. As I recall, Dr. Roberts offered an amendment to Section 5 to read, "in accordance with law " period.

CHAIRMAN: I don't remember whether that was seconded. Was it?

SAKAKIHARA: Yes, it was seconded.

CHAIRMAN: O.K., then that's the amendment, and seconded. Ready for the question?

SAKAKIHARA: Is that the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: That was the only amendment we have before the house that - -

SAKAKIHARA: Then I ask for a previous question.

DELEGATE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Go ahead.

DELEGATE: There is a motion to defer, which has been seconded. That is what is before the house.

CHAIRMAN: Was it seconded?

DELEGATE: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: All right; question is to defer. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." All those opposed. It was lost.

NIELSEN: I think that this Section 5, the quickest way to explain it is to take the Territory out of the category of being a landlord; in other words, let's get the Territory itself out of being a landlord, and in the rental and leasing of lands, and then maybe we can attack the situations regarding the largest estates that are holding up land from homesteads and for small farms and so forth. That will probably occur in another 20 years, but the main thing is to get - - Now, in order not to just have the first legislature that looks over this Section 5 proceed to just dump all the land that the Territory owns on the market and therefore in that way depreciate realty values, that is the reason for adding "in accordance with procedures and limitations." I think the whole section is solid, sound and something that we should consider as a move in the right direction. Puerto Rico has passed a land law where the people have to sell the land, private land. Now let's get towards that, by saying the Territory must get out of being a landlord.

CHAIRMAN: All right, have we heard enough discussion? We have two questions; one, the first one is an amendment which ends with "in accordance with law." If that fails, then we can pass on the whole section.

ARASHIRO: I now move to the previous question.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Second the motion.

FONG: I don't agree with the previous speaker saying that the Territory should get out of the landlord business. There are quite a few of the people of the community that we have to protect; there are quite a number of people in this community that do not want to have their lands in fee simple. They want to be sure that they will be able to hang on to their lands. And if the land is given to them in fee simple - -

CHAIRMAN: The chairman orders this is out of order. You are discussing something that I don't think has to do with the present question.

FONG: I'm afraid that this is going down in history and many a time later on when the supreme court will look at this to see whether the home ownership is going to be included here, whether the leases are going to be included here, they are going to look at some of the debates here.

RICHARDS: May I answer the delegate from the fifth district's question? If he will notice the first paragraph of Section 2, the last sentence, it says, "and such powers of disposition thereof as may be authorized by law." And then if he will look at the bottom of page 9 of the committee report, "You will also note that provision is made for the sale or leasing of these assets as may be provided by law." I think the committee report covers that particular phase.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

FONG: I don't want that statement to go unanswered, that this Convention is not in full accord with his statement, that the Territory of Hawaii, or the State of Hawaii should go out of the landlord business. I for one feel that the Territory should remain as superlord over some of these lands, so some of these lands would not be alienated.

CHAIRMAN: I felt that was a private discussion that didn't have to do with this.

FONG: I feel as of the moment - -

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

FONG: I still have the floor.

CHAIRMAN: All right, I'm sorry, Fong, go ahead.

FONG: Since our learned friend, Mr. Shimamura here, stated that the word "ownership" includes "tenant," and I think that he is correct, I'll withdraw my motion with the understanding that that includes leasing of land.

PORTEUS: Mr. Chairman, may I be recognized?

CHAIRMAN: Go ahead.

PORTEUS: It seems to me that the discussion has not been completed and others want to talk. It's now half past ten and so I now move that this committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: A motion - -

MAU: Point of personal privilege. It will just take a moment. The other day when I asked a question on the hearing - - on the homestead - - Hawaiian Homes Act provision, I wanted to find out whether the committee had considered the public lands and the possibility of putting those lands into the market. I was called out of order by the President that day, but tonight I'm very happy to hear him say that these lands ought to be put out for farm and home ownership, and I appreciate that very much.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

KING: Also a point of personal privilege. The President has forgotten why he called him out of order, but if the President called him out of order, he evidently was out of order. Nevertheless, the President as an individual delegate is very completely sold on the idea that the public domain should be homesteaded in fee simple. I'm in full sympathy with the sentiments expressed by the delegate from the second district of Hawaii, and Hawaii as a - -

CHAIRMAN: All apologies accepted and recorded. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of - - is it adjournment or deferment?

SAKAKIHARA: Rise, report progress, ask to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor say "aye." All those opposed. The noes lost.

JUNE 22, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Meeting come to order. That's better. Is the chairman of the committee ready? We were discussing - - Is Mr. Anthony here?

VOICE: No.

CHAIRMAN: Not here yet. Shall we continue on Section 5? Let me read Section 5, so we'll get our minds back on the ball here. As it stands, "The public lands shall be used for the development of farm and home ownership on as widespread a basis as possible, in accordance with procedures and limitations to be established by law."

ARASHIRO: Isn't the pending motion to read as follows, "in accordance with law"?

CHAIRMAN: Well, that was one of the amendments. Is Dr. Roberts here? Was that amendment still in good standing?

ROBERTS: When we adjourned yesterday, to report on the Committee of the Whole, that proposal was still pending. I assume when we go back into the Committee of the Whole that that proposal and the amendments are still on the table.

CHAIRMAN: Were there any other suggestions on that, or discussions? The way it would read would be as follows, "on as widespread a basis as possible, in accordance with law," leaving out, "with procedures and limitations to be established by law." But as I remember it, the chairman and I think Mr. Castro gave certain reasons why they felt " procedures and limitations" should be included. Do you want to just repeat that? Was that Mr. Castro?

CASTRO: Yes.

HEEN: I think it should be left the way it is. After the debate and full discussion upon the subject, I believe this is the proper language to be used here. I was a little confused at first. I thought that the word "limitation" was to be considered as limitations in the way of restrictions, and I don't think it means that. I think it means just as was explained last night, I think by Delegate Crossley. You may—or someone else—you may want to limit the area to be sold or set aside for farming purposes. So I think this language is - -

CHAIRMAN: Leave as is. Any other discussion?

TAVARES: As one who was not here last night, for which I apologize, I would just like to see if I'm correct in understanding that this section does not mean that the public lands cannot be used under proper legal authorization for some other purposes than development of farm and home ownership. I would hate to have that interpreted as the sole use to which our public lands could be put. Is that understood?

CHAIRMAN: I think Delegate Shimamura can answer that. That's correct.

HEEN: After listening to the discussion and conferring with the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, I don't think that this section is exclusive, that it limits the disposition of public lands only for farm and home ownership. In Section 2 is the provision that, "The legislature shall commit . . . such powers of disposition thereof "—that is referring to natural resources, which includes land—"as may be authorized by law." In other words, they then can, as I understand it, can dispose of or lease other lands to those who may want to take leases instead of taking fee simple title.

SILVA: I personally believe that we've had enough discussion on this Section 5; we spent all night last night, now we're starting all over again. Most of us, I believe, are under the opinion that as written, Section 5 seems to suit the purpose which it was intended for. I now move the previous question.

A. TRASK: I think the inquiry made by Delegate Tavares needs a full answer. The situation is this. This language in Section 4 is secured from H.R. 49. Now, it has specific reference to the 180,000 acres, and those 180,000 acres, patents to be issued and income therefrom have four distinct public purposes. That's the answer to Delegate Tavares. In other words, support of schools; betterment of native Hawaiians, defined in the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act; development of home ownership and the making of public improvement. So I have - -

CHAIRMAN: Such as an air field, would you assume?

A. TRASK: Pardon?

CHAIRMAN: There would be no inhibition to developing an air field in that - -

A. TRASK: No, no; that's the situation and it has particular reference to this section of H.R. 49. So, to obviate at the same time the matter raised by Delegate Fong last night, I move for this amendment, that in Section 5, after the word - - the third word, namely, "the public lands," insert, amend "patented to the State of Hawaii." Now that language is taken from H.R. 49, Section 4, paragraph D.

CHAIRMAN: Would you mind telling us what would that accomplish?

A. TRASK: That would have specific reference - -

CHAIRMAN: We have one amendment before the house; so before yours is seconded, I think we ought to pass on the first one.

TAVARES: I wanted to say that the explanation has satisfied me.

CHAIRMAN: You want?

TAVARES: I'm satisfied with the explanation.

CHAIRMAN: O.K. One lawyer down, about three to go now.

A. TRASK: There's no other on the field.

ASHFORD: I think if the gentleman would look at Part 2, Section 2, his feelings may be a little relieved.

A. TRASK: Yes, I understand they are in there; but I think the consideration of that should have reference to the specific items in H.R. 49. And I do move this amendment, "public lands patented to the State of Hawaii."

CHAIRMAN: Would you mind waiting till we clear up this first amendment? We have one on the table. Delegate King, did you want to say something?

KING: In my opinion the language as is is quite all right. It simply reaffirms the general policy that the Territory has been carrying out under Section 73 of the Organic Act of opening up certain areas of government land suitable for farming, ranching or for house lots, for sale, right of purchase lease or special sales agreement. We've been doing it for 50 years; we've done it for about 10,000 applicants to the extent of 116,000 acres. Out of the remaining public domain there are suitable areas for homesteading, for cutting up into house lots, and this simply directs that the legislature shall continue that policy on as broad a basis as possible.

CHAIRMAN: Do you feel that the amendment by Mr. Trask is necessary?

KING: I feel it's unnecessary. I'm not out of sympathy with it. The delegate wishes to tie it down with little more explicit language. But it seems to me, there's no contest or conflict between this language and the language that's put into Part 2, Section 2.

SAKAKIHARA: I move to second the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: That's twice now. Hawaii is getting restless, so we better move before they get nervous. The motion before the house is an amendment by Dr. Roberts, which is as follows: "in accordance with law" in the last line. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of this amendment say "aye." All those opposed. The noes have it.

ARASHIRO: I move for the adoption of Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: We have a motion that hasn't been - - an amendment that hasn't been seconded, by Mr. Trask. Do you want to withdraw? No second to it; we'll go to the question. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of Section 5 as it stands say "aye." All those opposed. It's carried.

Do you want to go back to Section 4? We have two sections here. We have Section 2 that wasn't straightened out last night.

HEEN: I was just going to inquire what disposition was made of Section 2. I believe that action on that was deferred.

CHAIRMAN: Section 2 was deferred, as I remember. We are to discuss that now, I think.

HEEN: All right, Mr. Chairman.

WOOLAWAY: In order to expedite matters, I move that we consider Section 2, bring it up this time for tentative approval.

DELEGATE: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Now open for discussion.

HEEN: I have before me the first paragraph of Section 2, which has been rewritten by Miss Lewis of the attorney general's office. I think this will clarify the situation. May I read it then? No, it hasn't been printed yet.

CHAIRMAN: Do you want to read it, and then have it printed?

HEEN:

> The legislature shall commit to one or more executive boards or commissions full powers for the management of all natural resources owned or controlled by the State, and such powers of disposition thereof as may be authorized by law; providing that lands set aside for a public use, other than for a reserve for conservation purposes, need not be committed to the jurisdiction of such a board or commission.

This one brings out the word "land," whereas before I think it spoke of resources.

Now, the second paragraph reads:

> Resources which by authority of the legislature are owned by or under control of a political subdivision, or a department or agency thereof, are not covered by this section.

There's no change so far as that paragraph is concerned.

CROSSLEY: So we don't hold up work, how about deferring this section until the end, go on with other sections, and get this typed up and printed in the meantime. So moved.

DELEGATE: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of deferring this section for a short time say "aye." All opposed. Carried.

Then we are on Section 4, I think.

FUKUSHIMA: I move that we adopt tentatively Section 4.

APOLIONA: I second the motion.

CASTRO: Before he left last night, Mr. Anthony dictated an amendment to the section. Now it's my understanding that this amendment, as I recall, this amendment was read and seemed to have general approval, but the - -

CHAIRMAN: There's a new one on the table this morning.

CASTRO: That is correct, and the section was deferred to give Mr. Anthony a chance to make a final draft. So, in his absence, I would like to move now that the amendment which has been distributed, offered by Mr. Anthony, be adopted.

HAYES: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: May I read the amendment, so we are sure we know what we're - -

CASTRO: Yes, please.

RICHARDS: If there is no objection on the part of any member of the committee, I think the committee can accept this wording as a proposal rather than voting on it, if there's no member of the committee that has any particular objection to this.

CHAIRMAN: We would still have to vote on the section.

RICHARDS: I'm saving voting on the amendment.

KING: As a point of order, it would be simpler to just vote for the amendment to replace the language of the committee report.

CHAIRMAN: I'll read the amendment.

> The legislative power over the lands of the State and its political subdivisions shall be exercised only by general laws, except in respect to transfers to the State, a political subdivision thereof, or any department or agency of government.

MAU: I move that Section 4 be adopted tentatively as amended.

CHAIRMAN: Second to that?

CROSSLEY: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the question. Is there any discussion?

CROSSLEY: Point of order. I think you first have to vote on the amendment itself and then vote on the adoption of the section.

CHAIRMAN: We'll assume that there was such a motion made. Are you ready for the amendment?

HEEN: May I rise for information? What is the amendment, please?

CHAIRMAN: What?

HEEN: The amendment.

CHAIRMAN: You want me to read it again?

HEEN: Or is this the one - -

CHAIRMAN: This is the one I just read.

ASHFORD: I rise to a point of information. Is it the opinion of those who are endorsing this amendment that that would cover the lands which it is provided that the University of Hawaii shall own?

CHAIRMAN: Would you answer that, Mr. Chairman.

RICHARDS: That matter was taken up with Miss Lewis of the attorney general's department last night, and it was felt that there was no conflict.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

H. RICE: I don't quite understand this amendment, that "The legislative power over the lands of the State and its political subdivisions shall be exercised only by general laws except in respect to transfer to the State." What does the legislature have to do with lands transferred to the State? I don't understand that. Maybe some of the lawyers can explain it to me, but to me that doesn't make sense.

ASHFORD: I disavow the baby, but I think I know the purpose. I think it was so that there could be exchanges between the various subdivisions or the taking over of lands of subdivisions, and the interchange between various - - the State and its various subsidiaries, of lands other than by general law.

CHAIRMAN: But do I assume that even to you it's not clear?

HEEN: Could not there be a general law relating to exchanges between the State and private individuals? Or between the State and political subdivisions? You can still have a general law to cover those acts.

CHAIRMAN: Are you satisfied with the wording as is?

HEEN: No, I'm not altogether satisfied.

SILVA: You have in Mr. Heen's opinion, an authority on Territory laws in the audience here, Miss Ashford, I mean Rhoda Lewis. Maybe she could clarify that question for us here.

CHAIRMAN: Does the delegate wish to hear from the authority on this? All those in favor say "aye." Miss Lewis, could you clarify? Would you kindly step up?

I think when lawyers work all night, and they come in the morning, and they still can't understand it, how can we possibly understand it.

MAU: While we are waiting for Miss Lewis to get to a mike, I'd like to speak on a point of personal privilege. I want to say for myself that you have been one of the best chairmen yet. Last night when tempers were running high, your - -

CHAIRMAN: I blush very easily, so please don't continue it.

MISS LEWIS: Well, the section I would construe as referring to a special law which made a transfer of land that was owned either by the State or a political division, and was transferred to any government body, for instance, from the county to the State. That is, if the State took over tubercular institutions as had happened in the past, it could transfer from the county the title to those particular institutions and transfer to the State at the time it took over the management of them. Similarly, it could pass a special law transferring to a county lands such as the Waikiki natatorium, which was formerly managed by public works, but is more suitable a county park.

CHAIRMAN: Is that clear? Are we ready for the question?

FONG: I'm still confused as to what this section proposes to do.

CHAIRMAN: Can Miss Lewis tell us that?

SAKAKIHARA: It's only fair that the introducer of this amendment, who is now here, be given the opportunity to explain.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Anthony, could you rise to defend - -

SAKAKIHARA: I think he's about the only man who understands this.

FONG: I think that the thought is the thought of the committee, and not the thought of Delegate Anthony. I was wondering what the committee is trying to do here?

CHAIRMAN: Point well taken.

NIELSEN: In the fourth line, "laws, except in respect to transfers to the State, if it is between the State, political subdivisions thereof, or any department or agency," would that be more clear? I wonder if we could get something from Miss Lewis on that.

CHAIRMAN: Perhaps Mr. Anthony, who wrote this out, might clarify it. Could you?

NIELSEN: Because I think this is made to work both ways, not only to the State, but from the State to the political subdivisions and departments.

SILVA: I'd like to make a correction. I don't think the statement made by the Chair is correct or by Mr. Fong is correct. The amendment was introduced by Mr. Anthony, a delegate to this Convention; it has nothing to do with the committee. The committee has in its report - - the committee's interpretation of the language in Section 4 is written in their report and in Section 4.

CHAIRMAN: That's right, but the committee has accepted this amendment.

CROSSLEY: I move five minutes recess to enable Mr. Anthony and Miss Lewis to get together and speak on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: We'll make it four minutes; it's too early to have five.

(RECESS)

ANTHONY: Is the amendment to Section 4, first paragraph, before the committee at this time?

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

ANTHONY: I would move that the amendment which was offered by myself last night, the fourth line, read as follows—I'll read the entire line—"Respect of transfers to," then insert "or for the use of the State, a political - -" In other words, the words "or for the use of" are inserted after the word "to." Then the entire section would read as follows - - the entire paragraph would read as follows: "The legislative power over the lands of the State and its political subdivisions shall be exercised only by general laws, except in respect of transfers to or for the use of the State, a political subdivision thereof, or any department or agency of government."

Now that would simply accomplish this. It would permit the transfer of land only by general laws, and it would have the saving clause that there would be an exception in the case of governmental agencies, the State or any political subdivision; and it would work both ways—either to the agency or from the agency, or to the political subdivision or from it.

I offer that as an amendment.

MIZUHA: I would like to ask the author of the amendment a question. Would he consider the lands of the State and its political subdivisions, any lands held by the university fee simple title as being lands of the State and its political subdivision under the education article?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman, first I'll second the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Anthony, do you want to answer that?

ANTHONY: They are lands of the State in this sense. The delegate will recall that we adopted a proposition whereby the university should have title, upon trust, nevertheless. In other words, the beneficial owners of the university lands are the people. So in that sense it is lands of the State, but strictly the legal title would be in the university. Does that answer your question?

MIZUHA: O.K. I have another question. [Part of speech not on tape.] . . . this section, to take away certain lands from the university, to transfer into another political subdivision of the State, let us say the City and County, would the university receive remuneration for those lands?

ANTHONY: No, that wouldn't be necessary. The way I see that this would work out as to university lands, before this Constitution goes into effect, the chief executive would make up a complete review of his executive orders setting apart lands, not only for the university, but to other agencies of the government. Now as to those lands which the university wants to have title to in order that it may encumber them, they would stand in one kind of an executive order. As to other lands, strings could be put on those lands so that they wouldn't have the full title, they would be subject to a reverted condition. I think what is troubling the last speaker can be adequately met by a review of executive orders at the time the - - just immediately prior to the effective date of the Constitution.

TAVARES: May I try to answer that further, Mr. Chairman? As I interpret what we've done for the university, the result it seems to me would be this. If the legislature wants to provide for a special transfer of lands that are unconditionally owned by the university, to which the university has title after this Constitution goes into effect, the legislature can make a special law to that effect. However, since the regents, being a self-governing body or autonomous body to that extent, have title to their lands, the legislature would have to provide for the consent of the regents to that transfer. In other words, it might be an exchange authorized by law, under which, for one piece of land given to the university, if the regents transfer another piece of land, the Territory or the State would give them another piece. As I understand it, the autonomy given to the regents would prevent the legislature from, without their consent, taking away a piece of land, but it would permit a special law authorizing a transfer of land from the university to the State, or from the State to the university, or an exchange. That's the way I interpret this.

MIZUHA: The reason why I'm raising the question is because we have to have the record clear here in our adoption of this section or it will result in continued litigation between the political subdivision of this State, including the university.

As I understand it now, there are two types of lands that the university would receive under executive order. One which will not contain any conditions of reverter. They will own it entirely in fee simple which they can encumber for purposes of securing federal loans or other types of loans. And there will be other types of land in which there will be conditions of revertal, that the Territory may reclaim for its use - - for general use by other political subdivisions of the State. For the type of lands that under executive order are given directly to the university without any conditions attached thereto, in the event the legislature desires to take back those lands for use by other political subdivisions of the State or for the State itself, then remuneration must be made to the university on the appraised value, so to speak, of those lands. Is that my understanding, is that?

TAVARES: I will go as far as to say that the regents' consent would have to be given. I don't know necessarily if remuneration would have to be given. I think that would probably amount to the same thing because I can't imagine the regents, after they become autonomous, giving up anything without some quid pro quo.

MIZUHA: Then it is my understanding that, according to the educational article as written with reference to the university and with this section as proposed, that the legislature may have to pay the university for certain types of lands; and for other type of lands in which we have made certain reservations or conditions in the deed or the patent, or whatever it is, that on those lands the legislature need not pay the university. If that is clear for the record, I would like to have the record so state; when the committee rises and reports, that the committee report so state so that there will be no confusion with reference to land that may be turned over to the university when we become a state.

SHIMAMURA: I didn't rise for this purpose in the first instance, but I think one statement of one of the previous speakers should be cleared up, that is as to the possibility of reverter. Just because there is a possibility of reverter does not make the land necessarily less than a fee.

I think this is a very good amendment. However, the Section 4, Section 4 rather, as originally drafted, was in respect to lands owned by the State or any of its political subdivisions, as the language shows. Now as I say, the amendment is a good one, but by abbreviating it I think we've left it with possible construction that "lands of the State" would be construable as meaning all lands in the State. Therefore, to take care of the original intent of this section and the proposal and proponents of this section, I think to clarify it, it should be amended by inserting in the first line after the word, "over the," the word "public"; so that it shall read in part, "The legislative power over the public lands of the State." I so move it.

CHAIRMAN: Wait a minute. Mr. Anthony, do you want to accept that as part of your amendment?

TAVARES: The word "public lands" has a very technical definition in the Organic Act. I feel afraid to put that in. It doesn't even cover all the lands owned by the State. I'd be very much afraid of putting that word "public" in.

HEEN: I think the delegate will recall that when we dealt with the lands controlled by the University of Hawaii, it was to have title to those lands for public purposes, for the purposes of the university and with the power to administer those lands. I take the word "administer" to mean to manage and control, and it does not include the power of disposition by fair sale or exchange. When that is in the Constitution, the legislature will not be able to enact a law authorizing an exchange or sale of those lands. I have in mind that a time may come when some of the university lands may not be needed for the purposes of the university, and they might want to exchange that for other lands, lands belonging to private individuals. It seems to me that some consideration should be given to that aspect of the disposition of lands that might - - that come into the possession and control of the university solely for the purpose of administration.

CHAIRMAN: Do you want to make an amendment, Senator Heen?

HEEN: This is not the place for the amendment; it should be the other place.

A. TRASK: Point of information. May the chairman of the Education Committee read the provision with respect to the title of land having been vested in the University of Hawaii for -- to be held in trust. Now there were several amendments made by Delegate Anthony and Delegate Heen. Some were passed and some were not passed, and I'm a bit concerned about which one it is. May the Secretary, if that is available, read that, because it is my view that this matter is probably in conflict with the other provision.

CHAIRMAN: Could you read that? Tavares, do you happen to know what that is?

TAVARES: No, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: The one of the Education Committee that has to do with land?

TAVARES: No.

A. TRASK: I have a section here, but I'm not certain that it is it. It reads as follows: Section 5, as amended. "The University of Hawaii is hereby constituted a body corporate, and shall have title to all of the real and personal property now or hereafter set aside or conveyed to it, which shall be held in public trust for its purposes and administered in accordance with law." Now if that is the provision --

ANTHONY: That is the provision, and I don't see any conflict between that provision and the one we're debating here.

FONG: I have no fear about the transfer of land between our political subdivisions because the primary purpose in this provision here is to prevent the alienation of lands to private individuals. Now, as far as political subdivision is concerned, whether it's the university or the county, or the Territory, it still is for the public use. And as far as the public is concerned, the public still is getting its consideration for it. What puzzles me about this amendment here and this section here is, what is the purpose for which this provision is put in? As I construe the -- as I look over the report of the committee, it is for the purpose of preventing the alienation of the lands of the Territory to private individuals without proper consideration. Isn't that, Mr. Chairman, correct?

CHAIRMAN: Richards, is that correct?

RICHARDS: I didn't get the full question.

CHAIRMAN: Is the real purpose of this section to prevent alienation of lands into private hands?

RICHARDS: Yes, it was; that was part of the purpose. It was to prevent transfers by special law, I mean exchanges by special law which would work to the disadvantage of the State.

FONG: Following that thought, I think this section and this amendment does not carry out that intent. The intent here, which the committee is trying to convey to us, is that the Territory or the political subdivision has certain lands; therefore, they should not transfer it to other people by special law. Is that right?

RICHARDS: I didn't quite get the meaning of that question.

FONG: What I'm trying to say is this. That in the first instance, the Territory has certain lands; then you are trying to prevent the Territory from alienating these lands by special laws or by private exchanges. Now isn't that the intent?

RICHARDS: That is part of the intent, yes.

FONG: If that is the intent, why should we couch in language like this? "The legislative power over the lands of the State and its political subdivision shall be exercised by general laws." Why don't we say, that if you alienate land, you should have a general law? But even then, I'm afraid that you run up against obstacles. Now, I have in mind, for example, the exchange of land by the Territory with a private individual in a manner of condemnation. Do you say that if the law was passed, that the public lands commissioner could exchange private lands -- exchange government lands with private individuals if the government wishes the land for public use, and there were fair consideration? Would you call that a general law, or would you call that a special law?

RICHARDS: As I understand it, it could be a general law. It could be done in the way of a general law.

FONG: Then what do you accomplish here when, if you call that kind of a law a general law, when the legislature could say to the land commissioner, "You exercise your discretion in the matter, and if you feel that we are getting fair consideration, you can alienate the land." Will that be general law or special law?

RICHARDS: I feel that -- you see, this general law is to govern the commission or boards that handle the land. Now, if the legislature should pass the general law, as I believe is now in Section 73, that the commissioner of public lands may exchange lands up to a value not exceeding $5,000, I believe, or $10,000, or whatever the legislature wishes to put in, it still will permit exchanges. But that would be a general law. At least, that was my understanding.

FONG: That would be a general law, as far as you understanding is concerned?

RICHARDS: Yes.

FONG: Then under those circumstances then, this section is meaningless to the extent that the legislature -- you are trying to prevent the legislature from doing the very thing which you say it could do by general law, that is, exchange it with private individuals, the government lands. You feel the section here is put in only for the purpose to deter the public officials from exchanging land. If you say that that could be embodied in a general law, giving to the public commissioner -- land commissioner the right to exchange land, then you haven't got anything here. That's the way I've concluded.

TAVARES: I don't think that doesn't mean anything. I don't think the section of the Organic Act today that provides -- that limits exchanges to certain areas and values is meaningless. It's been very meaningful. It has stopped many a large exchange; and when we wanted to make specially -- exchanges larger, as we did for the Hilo flood sufferers, we had to get a special act of Congress to do it. I don't think it's meaningless. I think it means this. Even private exchanges can be the subject of grave abuse, if a special individual goes into the legislature and tries to get a special law to exchange a special piece of land for his special piece. Therefore it seems proper, under safeguard laid down by a general act of the legislature, to authorize the commissioner of public lands or some other department of government to make the exchange under those conditions. That does not prevent the legislature from passing special laws as it does today saying that the commissioner of public lands or some other public officer is authorized to acquire by condemnation, exchange, purchase or otherwise, a certain piece of land. Then the general law about disposing of government lands in exchange would apply to the exchange. But it wouldn't be a special law saying we are going to give this piece of public land for that piece of private land, which is what we want to avoid. And I think in that case, you have full effect to the provision about a general law, because you have a general law authorizing exchanges in general under certain conditions and then your officers follow that general law in making the exchange.

CHAIRMAN: And you feel this section accomplishes that?

TAVARES: I do.

FONG: Following that, Mr. Tavares, if the Territory of Hawaii desires to condemn a certain piece of property, and the land commissioner says -- desires to attain certain piece of property, and the land commissioner says that we could exchange land from Punchbowl for this piece of land, will that be prohibited by this provision in the Constitution?

TAVARES: It would not be prohibited if there is a general law on the books authorizing an exchange, and if the legislature has not -- otherwise, if that particular land to be exchanged has not been set aside. As I see it, there is nothing to prevent the legislature from saying land in a certain area shall not be disposed of by exchange. That would not be a disposition. It would be holding out from disposition.

FONG: You call that a general law, or you call it a special law?

TAVARES: That I think would not come within the meaning of this prohibition against dispositions except by general law because that is setting aside to the State.

FONG: Yes, but you are alienating government lands.

TAVARES: No, because as long as it's set aside -- Let me explain, perhaps I haven't made myself clear, that a law passed by the legislature, for instance, saying that the Punchbowl lands shall never be disposed of or exchanged is not a disposition. It's a retaining of natural resources; it's a retaining in the State; it's not a disposition of the land.

FONG: Now what I'm saying is this, that we have a piece of land and we must alienate that piece of land before we get another piece of land, which you are constantly doing, you are exchanging one piece of property for another piece of property. Now will this provision prohibit that kind of exchange?

ANTHONY: Will the speaker yield for a statement for just a moment?

We have on the statute books, under the Organic Act, a statute which provides that there may be sales and exchanges, this is the general law of public lands of the Territory, which do not exceed the sum of $5,000 nor 40 acres. Now within that general provision, day after day, month after month, the land office engages in investigating and executing exchanges. Naturally they're done with individuals, but that is a general law; it has the framework whereby the Territory can make exchanges. The valuations are passed on by the land board, and if they are fair and just, they are accomplished. That is the present section of the -- Section 73 L of the Hawaiian Organic Act. Now this section would permit just this sort of general law. I think the committee will bear me out on that. Certainly the language would permit it. Does that answer your question?

FONG: No, it doesn't, Mr. Anthony. What I'm trying to find out, as far as lands of the Territory are concerned, can you alienate the government lands by a special law if this provision goes into effect?

ANTHONY: No.

FONG: All right. Now if you can't, then can you exchange one piece of property for another piece of property?

TAVARES: The words, "under a general law," I tried to make that clear, it can be exchanged but under this provision the exchange would have to be done by -- under a general law previously made by the legislature, applying to all exchanges.

FONG: And what would this general law be?

TAVARES: Similar to Section 73 L of the Organic Act which says -- which authorizes exchanges not exceeding $5,000 in value, or 40 acres in area. Similar general laws could be passed by the legislature, laying down other restrictions for exchanges.

FONG: But if you have such a law, why, then this is . . . [inaudible].

ANTHONY: I think this debate is getting a little bit out of hand. The general law that we are talking about, the kind of general law, is a statute such as this. "No sale of land," and I'm reading from Section 73 L of the Organic Act, "No sale of lands for other than homestead purposes, except as herein provided and no exchange by which the Territory shall convey lands exceeding either 40 acres in area, or $5,000 in value shall be made," period. Now that is a general law. That will prevent any large exchanges, either large in area or large in value. Now, if they want to change those limits, the legislature could do it, but it still would have to be a general law.

FONG: As far as this amendment is concerned, the exception in respect of transfers to or for the use of the State, now that exception need not be in this amendment, due to the fact that as far as transfers between political subdivisions, there is no -- we need not worry because it is for benefit of the public. And under those circumstances, why should the legislature be circumscribed in their powers?

TAVARES: I don't think the question is well taken because this provision specifically authorizes the State -- the legislature to provide by special law for transfers between political subdivisions. That's exactly what this provision does do. Insofar, however, as providing for acquisition of lands not owned by the State and transferred to the State, that is covered by the general power of eminent domain, anyway.

MAU: I think the subject is getting so confusing that it might be wise to have the Convention appoint several of the individuals who feel that they can clarify this to work this problem out together with the committee. Involved also in this proposal from this morning's discussion, is another confusion resulting from the article on education giving the fee simple title to the university regents. If the delegates feel that there is any way, after once they provide for the fee simple title to the regents, that those lands can be disposed of as easily and as plausibly as has been said this morning, they are mistaken, because once that title is in the regents, they don't have to consent and those lands will remain with the university forever and ever, unless you change it by Constitutional Convention again.

CHAIRMAN: May I ask the delegate just a question?

MAU: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: Don't we have to assume occasionally that the regents of the university are men of good will and they are not going to do something crooked on that?

MAU: No, I'm not saying that. I agree with you, but I'm wondering whether the delegates realize that the thought expressed this morning that the regents would have to consent and the explanation given was so plausible that it would be easy. It won't be easy. They must know that once that title is given to the university, it stays with the university regents, regardless of whether it's held in trust or not, regardless of whether it's just a bare legal title.

But my point on this amendment proposed is this, it is so confusing, particularly with Section -- the last clause of the first sentence of Section 2 which we have deferred, that it is either a repetition or a taking away of what is said in one clause and repeated or pronounced in another clause. I submit it is confusing that we ought to appoint several of these individuals who think they can clarify the situation to work it out together with the committee. Otherwise we'll be here all morning. I don't understand what they've been trying to say.

CHAIRMAN: Just to encourage those non-legal minds, let me remind you that this problem has been going on since 1700 when Montaigne said, "How is it that our ordinary language, so simple for every other purpose, becomes obscure and unintelligible in a contract and a testament." It's still a problem. What is the wish of the committee?

PORTEUS: It's the same problem that is encountered where before man used to have an ache or pain, he now has any of 23 different hyphenated names which may be applied to his malady.

CHAIRMAN: But a good diagnostician doesn't take all morning to find out the cause of the pain.

PORTEUS: I agree with that, Mr. Chairman; it sometimes takes them several months with different experts and then they don't agree.

SHIMAMURA: May I suggest this amendment: "The legislative powers shall extend over the lands owned or controlled by the State and its political subdivisions, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, and shall be exercised only by general laws," and so forth. In other words, after the word "power" in the first line, I have inserted the word "shall extend over," and in the second line, after the word "land" delete "all," insert "owned or controlled by," and after the word "subdivisions" in the second line, comma, insert the words "except as otherwise provided in this Constitution." In my humble opinion, I think that will to a large extent meet the objections of some of the delegates.

CHAIRMAN: Now I'm completely confused. I wonder if Mr. Mau's suggestion wouldn't be a good one. If we get the five lawyers who have been arguing, perhaps they can get to one side and clarify the language and then we won't have to sit here and become more confused.

A. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Second the motion that a committee of five be appointed to straighten out the language?

PORTEUS: Up until now we have avoided this appointment of special committees within the Committee of the Whole. If people want to get together in an informal fashion and then submit something, let them do so. Otherwise we're going to have our Committee of the Whole broken down into all sorts of subcommittees. It may impede progress because we may have to wait for them to make a report. I'd like to proceed with the matter at hand, if we possibly could.

LEE: At first, I was very confused on this matter, but it seems to have been adequately explained by the two ex-attorney generals what "a general law" meant, and this merely is conforming with what has occurred in the past. There is a constitutional restriction in our Organic Act similar in effect to what is now being proposed, and how the legislature may take care of that situation. It seems to me we've had enough debate. I am opposed to the matter of a special committee at this particular time because actually what might be done is that, if there are some doubts in the minds of the delegate of the fifth district, we might defer this matter and then during a particular recess we might come over to the "supreme court" here and talk it over. But I think a special committee will merely add to the confusion.

SILVA: I would like to remind the delegates of this Convention that this Constitution is not to be written for attorneys, but to be written for the people of this territory, and the explanation given by the attorney general a moment ago -- the assistant attorney general, Miss Rhoda Lewis, was very plain and satisfactory to me, and I don't know whether the other delegates felt the same way. And I now move the previous question.

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Are you satisfied, Mr. Mau?

MAU: There is a motion that the Chair put --

CHAIRMAN: We have several motions here that we would have to dispose of. The first one is an amendment to the present section made by Mr. Anthony. After "transfers to," he added, "or for the use of the State."

ANTHONY: Point of order. That being by the original movant and I presume accepted by the second, does not have to be voted on. It's part of the proposed amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Is the second satisfied?

MAU: Then we have before us the amendment proposed by Delegate Anthony, without any other amendments to it. Is that correct?

At this time I'd like to amend the amendment by striking out the words appearing in the second line, starting with "and its political subdivisions."

CHAIRMAN: May we ask what you want to accomplish by it?

MAU: This Convention is giving the fee simple lands --

CASTRO: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

DELEGATE: I'll second the motion.

CASTRO: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Castro, what is it?

CASTRO: There has been a motion duly seconded for the previous question. I believe the delegate is out of order.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the delegate is discussing that motion, isn't he?

CASTRO: No, sir, the -- CHAIRMAN: All right, it wasn't recognized. We now have the motion before the house. I'm sorry.

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman, I'd like a point of order.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, I don't think we should -- I'm anxious as anybody to bring this matter to a head, but if the delegate has something to say, I suggest that the movant of the previous question give him the opportunity to say it.

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my second.

CHAIRMAN: O.K. Go ahead, Delegate Mau, go ahead.

SILVA: He was trying to amend. Not having something to say. He's trying to offer an amendment. I just wonder what -- is there an amendment to be offered, or something to say on the amendment, on the previous question? I don't know.

MAU: Well, I'm offering an amendment, Mr. Chairman. You would recognize me? Do I have --

CHAIRMAN: Go ahead, Delegate Mau.

MAU: I understand that that amendment to delete these words has been seconded. Speaking on that motion, we have in another article of this Constitution given the fee simple titles to lands to the regents of the university. There are certain other agencies of the government, municipal and otherwise, which might hold fee simple titles. I don't see why, if we can do that for the regents and make them autonomous, why the county governments should not receive autonomy. Why should their lands not be held in fee simple by the respective counties? Why should the legislature have any control over those lands if they don't want to control the lands of the university? It seems to me on the basis of autonomy to municipalities, on the principle of home rule that we've been talking about so much, that this should go out of the Constitution and that the lands owned by the county governments should remain with the county governments, and they can do with their lands what they will. It seems to me that's the only fair thing to do.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Anthony, do you want to answer that.

PORTEUS: Perhaps we can agree with the gentleman from the fifth district. The removal of this will permit the legislators to pass special laws interfering with the county land. Take the sentence, vote for his amendment, and you'll open it up to the legislature to deal by special law with this. This is a protection to the county by leaving it in. It means that the legislature may only pass laws of general application and not special application. So if you take it out, unless you can amend some other part of the Constitution forbidding the legislature to have the power, the legislature then can pass special acts. This is more protection.

MAU: I don't agree with that reasoning, because if we can look into the history of legislative acts insofar as the counties are concerned, they have not been responsive to the will of the people in the counties. They have not taken care of the counties in the way that the member of the House there has spoken of. I would prefer that they leave out any consideration about the counties insofar as the lands are concerned, that their land should remain in fee simple with the county government, and that's the way it ought to be. Here they have it within the power of the legislature to do what the legislature wants with the county lands, in each of the four separate counties.

LEE: Will the Delegate from the fifth district yield to a question? Would you mind explaining to the delegates and for my information, what is the status now as to lands held or administered by the county? Do they own the fee simple title land?

MAU: There have been condemnations, exchanges of land, and many other types of disposition of county lands without interference by the legislature, and I will assume that when the legislature meets without all of this in the Constitution, that the same laws will remain in effect. Highways, of course, are, even though condemned by the county and in the name of the Territory, all public highways.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Anthony, is that acceptable to you?

ANTHONY: Well, from the standpoint of drafting the article, I have no feeling one way or the other. It is a substantial change in the intent. The way this thing is drafted, it would prevent the State or any county from dealing, except by general law, with the public lands. I don't think that the problem of the public lands which are actually owned by the counties is a very large one, but I don't have the information that the last speaker has. I understood that their public lands were confined to the city hall and various sites for the offices of the county buildings. If that's all that it is, nobody is going to take them away from them, and I don't really see any vice to the proposed section. I don't feel one way or the other, but it is a substantive change.

MAU: We might terminate this. If that is the understanding, then I'm willing to withdraw my - -

CHAIRMAN: We'll write it into the report.

TAVARES: I don't know whether that is all the understanding, but I'd like to make this suggestion. When we were dealing with university lands, we put the provision in relating to the university. If it is the intent of this Convention later on when we consider local government to put in a freeze there so the legislature cannot touch any lands owned by a county, then let's put it in the local government section and not here. Then it will control this, but as this stands it would seem to me, it's perfectly clear and properly worded.

SHIMAMURA: As I said formerly, this is an improvement in abbreviated form, but in the process of abbreviation I think we've changed the substance and sense of that original section. As pointed out by a previous speaker, this original section provided for two things: first, the power of the legislature over lands owned or controlled by the State; second, it provided for the transfer of such lands, as pointed out by Delegate Fong.

SILVA: I now move the previous question, again.

SHIMAMURA: I still have the floor and I think it's not proper in the Committee of the Whole to move for the previous question.

SILVA: We have been acting out of order; we might as well go all the way back.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Shimamura has the floor. Go ahead.

SHIMAMURA: Now in the process of amending it, we've made it to read, "The legislative power over the lands of the State," which is construable as meaning all lands including private lands, because the word "of" is construable as meaning "in." In other words, the original purpose of this section was not to control all lands, public and private. But when I made my original suggestion to insert the word "public," Delegate Tavares had a point there that we should not use the word "public," and I think he is correct as to that. But we have still left it up in the air, and we have in effect included in this section control by the legislature of all lands, public or private. Therefore, the original language of this section should be inserted, which is "owned or controlled by the State." I think that's a serious matter here.

In the second place, some of the delegates have made the point that there is no exception as to university lands or as to county land. Therefore, we should insert back in this section the exception contained in the original Section 4, which was as follows, "except as otherwise provided in this Constitution." Then if you do that, I think you will substantially meet all the objections raised here.

Therefore, I respectfully move that this amendment be made, that the word "over" be struck out, be deleted in the first line, and the words "shall extend to" be inserted in its stead; and that in the second line, after the word "lands," the word "of" be deleted, and the words "owned or controlled by" be inserted; and that in the end of that line, after the word "subdivisions" and the comma following the word "subdivisions," the words "except as otherwise provided in this Constitution," comma, be inserted.

PORTEUS: May I point out that that's the language of the original section; and if you want that language, the best thing to do is to vote against the Anthony amendment. Following it just then, it seems to me it's the same thing that we had before.

SHIMAMURA: As I've tried to point out, the original section provided for two things; the power of the legislature over the land, and not over all lands in the State, private or public, but lands owned or controlled by the State.

PORTEUS: "Of" means "owned by." I think there was a long discussion on that earlier this morning. In substance, you are making the replacement. There is the section, then the amendment, then you are going back to the original section. If you want the original section, vote down this amendment.

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Wait a minute, Mr. Shimamura still has the floor.

DELEGATE: Point of order. I second this motion.

CHAIRMAN: What was the motion?

DELEGATE: To add - -

SILVA: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. I can't see how a man can second someone else's motion when he still has the floor.

CHAIRMAN: I don't either. Go ahead, Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: One of the delegates pointed out, and I think correctly, that this section as rewritten only provides for transfers of land; whereas in the original Section 4, there was definite provision of the power of the legislature over lands owned by the State. Now my first objection to this amendment is that we have not restricted this section to lands owned or controlled by the State, but we have widened it and expanded to include all lands in the State. And I said "lands of the State" is subject to two constructions; first, owned or controlled by the State, and all lands in the State; therefore there is an ambiguity there. If it is the - -

ANTHONY: Can't we just straighten that one point out? If I am referring to the lands of Dr. Shimamura, I'm certainly not referring to the lands of Dr. Larsen. And it's perfectly clear in this language, it's lands owned by the State, nobody else.

SHIMAMURA: If you mean lands owned by the State, well why don't we say so? It was in the original section as such, and I say "lands of the State" is construable in two ways, lands owned by the State, and lands in the State. Therefore why have such an ambiguity in this Constitution?

CHAIRMAN: The original section had "owned and controlled by the State."

SHIMAMURA: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Anthony, did I infer that you don't feel that's necessary?

ANTHONY: I do not, Mr. Chairman.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe Delegate Kellerman made that same amendment, and when she made it I thought it was a very good amendment. What Delegate Shimamura is doing is merely doing what Delegate Kellerman tried to do and she - - when Delegate Anthony made his amendment, she withdrew her amendment in favor of Delegate Anthony's.

CHAIRMAN: Have we had enough discussion on this?

FONG: One more question. I want to ask Mr. Tavares this one question. The land - - the State has a piece of land known as land A. I have a piece of property known as land B. Now say the value of these two pieces of property is such that no general law applies to it. Say it exceeds the sum of $25,000. The legislature feels that it's a good exchange, and I'm willing to exchange with the Territory; the Territory is willing to exchange with me, land A for land B. Will the legislature be able to pass such a law allowing the exchange, and will that law be a special law or a general law?

TAVARES: The first answer is no; the second answer is yes. It will be a special law and the legislature can't do it that way; it will have to be done under general law, if at all. But there is still the power of condemnation by which the State can acquire lands; and if the legislature has fixed a policy that, generally speaking, lands over a certain size and over a certain value shouldn't be exchanged, then I think it's perfectly all right to have it condemned, as we do now instead of exchanging, because over a certain size, you are, perhaps to some extent, whittling down your public lands.

CHAIRMAN: And you are not afraid of these fears that have been expressed here?

TAVARES: No, Mr. Chairman, not a bit.

FONG: The only purpose for that question is to get this clear as to what we are voting for, and what we are not voting for. Now I'm clear in my mind as to what we are voting for.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question?

HEEN: I think there is something in what Delegate Shimamura has said. Let's clear it up. I would move this amendment. After the word "lands," second line, insert the words "owned by or under the control." That will read "The legislative power over the land owned by or under the control of the State and its political subdivisions." Then there's no more room for argument.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Anthony, are you willing to accept that?

ANTHONY: That is exactly what it means, but I'll accept the amendment.

HOLROYDE: Point of information. Don't we have Delegate Shimamura's amendment before us?

CHAIRMAN: I think it wasn't seconded, was it?

HOLROYDE: It was seconded.

SHIMAMURA: I'll withdraw it as far as amended. The only thing, I'm wondering if the good judge will also concur with me that the words "except as otherwise provided in this Constitution" be included.

CHAIRMAN: Are you willing to accept Anthony's compromise here of leaving it out as they feel it's not necessary?

HOLROYDE: Mr. Chairman, will you then read what is before us at the present time?

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready to hear it? "Section 4. The legislature shall have power over the lands owned by and under the control of the State and its political subdivisions."

HEEN: That's not the correct - -

CHAIRMAN: All right, then, would you read it, Senator Heen?

HEEN:

> The legislative power over the lands owned by or under the control of the State and its political subdivisions shall be exercised only by general laws, except in respect of transfers to or for the use of the State, a political subdivision thereof, or any department or agency of government.

CHAIRMAN: Is it clear?

BRYAN: One question. What happened to the words "except as otherwise provided in this Constitution"?

HEEN: Those words evaporated.

BRYAN: Thank you.

A. TRASK: Point of information of the chairman of the committee. The word "land," does that include under the sea, over the sea, and over the land, in the air? It's not as facetious as somebody might think. We've had a very great contested case in the Supreme Court over the question of the oil lands under the sea of California and in Louisiana, and I'd like to see this - - If we're a deliberate body at all, I want to find that answer.

RICHARDS: I should imagine that the term, at least as far as the committee is concerned, is the use of the word

"land" as is normally understood. That if the State owns the land that's under the sea, it owns the land under the sea.

A. TRASK: Was any information given to the committee with respect to this situation? Because I'm concerned. We have now existing a situation with respect to coastal waters, navigable waters; of course we know they are under the federal government. But there are many situations that may arise in the future with respect to this matter, and I just wonder whether maybe Mr. Nils Tavares could say something with respect to that situation.

CHAIRMAN: Tavares, do you want to answer that? Seems to me if we had put in "owned by and under the control of," it covers that point.

TAVARES: In the first place, I don't think the amendment is necessary. In the second place, the word "lands" does mean lands whether under the sea or any other place.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? Now the question is that Section 4 as amended be accepted. Am I right? Because the movant accepted all the amendments. Right? Are we ready for the question?

ARASHIRO: Aren't we supposed to vote on the acceptance of the amendment at present?

DELEGATE: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: No, the movant of the motion accepted all the amendments as part of the motion.

ARASHIRO: But we have not voted on it.

DELEGATE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Go ahead.

CROSSLEY: The movant did accept all of the amendments.

CHAIRMAN: He did not?

CROSSLEY: He did, but we are now voting on the amendments, after which we will not -- In other words, the section offered by Mr. Anthony is an amendment. So that we are voting on Mr. Anthony's amendment with all of the other amendments pertaining to it included.

CHAIRMAN: I think that's understood. That is, what we are voting on is this paper with the additions. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." All those opposed. Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that Section 4 as amended be tentatively approved.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made and seconded. Are you ready for the question. All those in favor of Section 4 as amended say "aye." All those opposed. Carried.

WOOLAWAY: Now I move that we tentatively adopt Section 2, which has been deferred.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any debate?

ARASHIRO: Before acting on Section 2, do we have the appropriate language for Section 2 at present?

LEE: I believe there is an amendment that was proposed by Delegate Heen.

CHAIRMAN: Would you mind reading it?

LEE: Delegate Heen, would you mind reading it?

HEEN:

> The legislature shall commit to one or more executive boards or commissions full powers for the management of all natural resources owned or controlled by the State, and such powers of disposition thereof as may be authorized by law; provided that lands set aside for a public use, other than for a reserve for conservation purposes, need not be committed to the jurisdiction of such a board or commission.

The word "full" is not there in the mimeographed copy. That is the word "full" --

CHAIRMAN: You mean under "full powers"?

HEEN: No, no, omit "full."

> Resources which by authority of the legislature are owned by or under the control of the political subdivisions or a department or agency thereof, are not covered by this section.

CHAIRMAN: Is that clear? We had a lot of discussion on that last night. Are we ready for the question?

MIZUHA: I would like to ask a question of the movant of this amendment as to the construction of paragraph two. Does he presume that no political subdivision of this State can own resources by itself unless by authority of the legislature?

HEEN: This is the exact copy of that paragraph in Section 2 as submitted by the Committee on Lands. Perhaps some member of the committee can explain that.

BRYAN: I think that Delegate Mizuha may have misunderstood this. It just means that those lands which are owned or under the control of a political subdivision or a department thereof need not be committed to the boards or commissions which are set forth in the first paragraph. That's all.

MIZUHA: If that is the case, I have an amendment to make to the second paragraph. To strike out the words in the second paragraph, "which by authority of the legislature," and to have the second paragraph read as follows: "Resources owned by or under the control of a political subdivision or a department or agency thereof are not covered by this section.'

ASHFORD: I don't think that changes the substance of that paragraph. The political subdivision only has such authorities as are granted to it by the legislature in any event.

MIZUHA: The reason for this amendment -- it wasn't seconded, but I wish to point out very clearly that this Convention already has given to the university the fee simple title of certain lands as a body corporate. The political subdivisions and counties of this State will be perhaps, and it is not known at the present time inasmuch as we have not considered the article on local government, whether the counties can own lands in fee simple title. And that is, under this section, the second paragraph, it is presumed that they will not be able to own lands in fee simple title. If that is so, I believe we are giving to the university something that the counties are entitled to at the present time. Under a recent supreme court decision, it was made very clear that a county does not have the fee simple title to the highways. The question as to whether other lands where the water tanks are and where the county seat is and where the county buildings are, there is some question as to who owns those lands, but a strong interpretation of this decision of the supreme court reveals that perhaps the Territory of Hawaii owns all of the lands by the counties in fee simple title and that the counties do not hold a fee simple title. By adopting this section, the second paragraph, it presumes in the Constitution that our political subdivisions, those counties, will never be able to own the fee simple title of their lands, and only by consent of the legislature.

MAU: I second the motion.

LEE: If that is true, Mr. Mizuha, wouldn't it be better to delete the last sentence? Last paragraph?

MIZUHA: I would like to withdraw my original motion and move to delete the last paragraph of Section 2.

LEE: Second the motion.

TAVARES: I was going to second that motion. I think that's what the first paragraph means anyhow. It sets aside; if a county has it, I think it's set aside sufficiently so that it's not covered.

CHAIRMAN: So you don't feel this is necessary? Senator Heen, I think last night you made a statement that you thought possibly it was necessary. Are you willing to withdraw that? That last paragraph?

HEEN: No, I think it can be withdrawn. It's covered by the language in the first paragraph.

ASHFORD: I call the attention of the delegates to the fact, "other than for purposes of conservation."

CHAIRMAN: That's in the first paragraph.

BRYAN: I think that's correct. The delegate from Molokai has a good point there, that that would mean any lands of the county that are not set aside for conservation, would not be included. Is that correct, Delegate Ashford?

CHAIRMAN: What did you want to add to it?

TAVARES: I confess error. I think Miss Ashford is correct.

CHAIRMAN: Now as we stand, Miss Ashford, it means we should retain this paragraph. Is that correct?

ANTHONY: I was just going to remark that, doesn't the word "set apart for public use" include use of the counties? "For public use"? It seems to me that meets it with the deletion of the last sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Bryan, do you want to answer that?

BRYAN: I'm just a little bit confused, but I think that "set aside for public use" is modified by the words "other than for a reserve or conservation purposes." And I believe that the second paragraph is actually a protection for the counties.

ASHFORD: That was what it was designed for. In other words, it was the theory I think, of the committee that the counties might have conservation areas for water and other purposes as well as the State.

CHAIRMAN: And you feel it was necessary to protect the county interests.

ARASHIRO: I have a question for the committee as to the reasons why the word "executive" is there before the word "board."

HEEN: That word can be well deleted, but the Style Committee can eliminate it.

BRYAN: In the opinion of the committee, I'm quite sure that word cannot be deleted without a change in substance. It was the intent of the committee that these boards should be executive boards in nature, that the boards should appoint its executives. That was the prime purpose, actually, of this whole section.

ARASHIRO: Because to me, executive would then limit the board to only executive boards, whereas there might be a possibility of creating some advisory board, instead of an administrative board.

BRYAN: That was the point that the committee wanted to make in this section. The committee felt that this subject should not be committed to a single executive. It should be committed to a board, that the board would appoint their executive, and the executive would be subservient to the board. Now, it is possible, under this section, I believe, that this whole subject could be committed to one board, one executive board, which in turn could have subdivisions where you would have advisory boards or commissions, and so forth. But the intent of the committee was that this subject should be headed up by an executive board.

MIZUHA: I wish to withdraw my motion for the deletion of the entire second paragraph because upon further study of the second paragraph, it serves a definite purpose. But I wish to move for my original motion which would delete those words, "which by authority of the legislature," and have the second paragraph read as follows: "Resources owned by or under the control of a political subdivision or a department or agency thereof are not covered by this section."

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

OHRT: I'd like to pose a question. The board of water supply in the last ten years has purchased about $250,000 worth of land in the name of the City and County of Honolulu. That's in connection with forest reserves. We can't get anybody else to look after the forest reserves back of Honolulu except ourselves; so we proceed to buy this land, and we bought it in the name of the City and County of Honolulu. What is going to be the status of that particular land under all of this?

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Bryan, could you answer that?

BRYAN: I think the status will be the same as it is now. That's the purpose of the last paragraph.

TAVARES: In supporting the proposed amendment, it seems to me one understanding should be kept in mind—at least that's my understanding—that if, for instance, the legislature should provide for the temporary transfer of property to a county with a string on it, that so long as that control was in the county, this wouldn't apply; but if by chance, that land got back into the hand of the State, then the section would then - - the first part of the section would then apply again. That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: That would protect you, Mizuha. Do you want to withdraw it?

MIZUHA: No, that is correct. I think the amendment should stand but the understanding for the committee report I think is proper to avoid any confusion later on in interpretation.

CHAIRMAN: You withdraw the amendment?

MIZUHA: I'm not withdrawing the amendment, but I'm accepting the remarks of the delegate from the fourth district with reference to interpretation as to lands that may be transferred to the political subdivisions and later transferred back to the State.

BRYAN: I can't speak for all members of the committee, but I know that several have accepted the amendment as being O.K. I don't know about the other members of the committee.

FUKUSHIMA: I move for the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question? The question is an amendment to the last paragraph. Mizuha, would you read it as you got it? Slowly.

MIZUHA: The last paragraph would read as follows: "Resources owned by or under the control of a political subdivision or a department or agency thereof are not covered by this section."

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? This is an amendment to the last paragraph.

MIZUHA: To delete the following words from the last paragraph, "which by authority of the legislature are."

CHAIRMAN: Question. All those in favor of this amendment say "aye." All opposed. Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that the second paragraph of Section 2 as amended be tentatively approved.

WIRTZ: Point of order. The original amendment was Delegate Heen's amendment which is supplemental one for Section 2 which he moved for the adoption of. We've just passed on an amendment to that amendment; so that amendment, I think, is still before the house.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, could you read that?

BRYAN: I move the adoption of this amendment as amended.

CHAIRMAN: Well, could we get from Senator Heen, I don't - -

WOOLAWAY: That's right, I second that - -

HEEN: I think that procedure is correct, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready then for the paragraph? All those in favor say "aye." All opposed. Carried.
Now can we have a motion for the whole section?

A. TRASK: I move that we tentatively approve Part I of Committee Proposal No. 27 as amended.

CHAIRMAN: Section 2.

A. TRASK: Oh, Section 2 as amended.

DELEGATE: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Second the motion. Motion made and seconded that we tentatively accept Section 2 as amended. All those in favor say "aye." All opposed. Carried.

A. TRASK: Now I move that Part I of Committee Proposal No. 27 be tentatively approved as amended.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion? Otherwise we'll go to the question. All those in favor of accepting Part I say "aye." Opposed. Carried.
We're now on Part II.

RICHARDS: In explanation of Part II, this covers the requirements of H.R. 49, or at least it's supposed to provide for the different requirements in obtaining statehood under H.R. 49.

CHAIRMAN: May I ask just one question? Does H.R. 49 require this many words?

RICHARDS: Well, in most instances, we have quoted verbatim.

CHAIRMAN: Verbatim. Any discussion? Are we ready for the question?

ANTHONY: I don't see why this should go in the Constitution. If it is a requirement of H.R. 49, then it's one of these things of a temporary nature. Let's not put it in our Constitution. Let's transfer it to the ordinance section and let them put it in there, or maybe the Style Committee can handle it.

TAVARES: One of the most important things that we had to do when we went to Washington was to take care of these public lands. If this represents the draft, I'm sure it must have been prepared with the aid of the assistant attorney general. It's something that I would very, very carefully think over before I deleted it, and if there's any disposition to that effect, I'd want a recess to discuss it for a few minutes.

BRYAN: I think I can clear up this question.

CHAIRMAN: Wait a minute.

TAVARES: I thought I had the floor, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Tavares, a - -

A. TRASK: Point of order, point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Wait a minute.

A. TRASK: Point of order. There is nothing before the committee.

BRYAN: Right.

A. TRASK: Well I move, Mr. Chairman, that we tentatively approve - -

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, I thought I had the floor.

CHAIRMAN: You have the floor, I think, but - -

ANTHONY: I was interrupted by two speakers.

A. TRASK: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Wait a minute. Point of order. State it.

A. TRASK: There is nothing before the committee, so I move at this time - -

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, the chairman called for debate on it.

CHAIRMAN: I think that's correct.

ANTHONY: But that is before the committee.

CHAIRMAN: There's no motion made on the first section.

A. TRASK: Am I in order, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: I think he's in order. All right. The motion has been made. Second it.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded. All those in favor say "aye."

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Contrary, "no." Carried.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman. Right here.

PORTEUS: Mr. Chairman.

BRYAN: I think I can clear up this trouble.

PORTEUS: Mr. Chairman. You don't carry the motion. All you do is have the motion before the body in order that it may be discussed. So under this, we've already passed it. I think we'd better go back.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Wait a minute!

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, I think I had the floor. This question was put before the house. The Chair asked whether or not there was any debate.

CHAIRMAN: I think that's correct.

DELEGATE: Point of order.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman. May I finish, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Anthony, go ahead.

ANTHONY: I got up to debate on it.

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

ANTHONY: The Chairman ruled me out of order and permitted the motion to adopt the entire section.

KING: Mr. Chairman, point of order, please. Delegate Anthony was out of order, because no motion had been made tentatively to adopt Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: I think that's correct. The Chairman was out of order.

KING: It has now been seconded, and now the Chair can recognize Delegate Anthony to debate it, but the section is now before the Convention.

CHAIRMAN: The motion was not - -

LEE: In order to correct the present situation, I move that we reconsider our action on passing - -

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

ARASHIRO: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor - -

SILVA: Point of order, Mr. Chairman, point of order.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor - -

SILVA: In the first place, the Chair did not correctly state the question after it was stated. The motion did not carry. There was not a vote taken. All you have to do is rescind your action in saying that the motion carried.

CHAIRMAN: The Chairman rules that the motion was not carried. Section I is open for debate. Mr. Anthony.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan.

BRYAN: I think that if we may consider what Mr. Anthony did say was in order and before the house—at least we heard it—I can clear up some of his objections. It was the intention of the committee in dividing this into two parts that Part I would be in the Constitution and Part II would be either in ordinances or in the schedule.

CHAIRMAN: Will that be acceptable, Mr. Anthony?

RICHARDS: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Anthony has the floor.

ANTHONY: That's what I was trying to get over while the Convention adopted the whole section. With that explanation and leave it up to the Style Committee to put it where it belongs, why, that's satisfactory to me.

RICHARDS: May I suggest that the delegate from the fourth district read page 7 of the committee report, in which it says: "We recommend that Part I be incorporated in the main body of the Constitution as a separate article, and that Part II be incorporated in the schedule or ordinances, nomenclature to be determined by the Style Committee, which, although an integral part of the Constitution not subject to change by the legislature, is placed at the end."

CHAIRMAN: Is that acceptable, Mr. Anthony?

KING: Along the lines of the remarks made by Delegate Tavares, it is most important that we have this in our Constitution, either in the schedule or in the body of the Constitution. I believe the argument that it ought to be in the schedule is correct. However, we have read in the press just the other day that they have amended H.R. 49 in committee, but it has not passed out of the committee yet, to require that the Constitution shall be presented to Congress as well as to the President; so that we should comply with the various provisions of H.R. 49 definitely in the Constitution that we submit to Congress if H.R. 49 passes.

HOLROYDE: This is a rather lengthy section, and it deals primarily with the transfer of the material from H.R. 49 to this section and it's strictly for the legal minds to decide definitely whether this meets the requirements of H.R. 49. So I would like at this time to suggest a short recess while the attorneys go over this to make sure it does comply before we vote on it.

CHAIRMAN: May I suggest this. We have had four days, the attorneys have gone over this, and it seems to me from the discussion that they agree that it did cover H.R. 49. Are there any objections to that? Mr. Anthony agrees, the others agree, this is part of H.R. 49, it's supposed to be in the Constitution - -

A. TRASK: What Delegate Tavares had in mind, perhaps, is on page 13 of H.R. 49 which says, with respect to Part II, which does appear wordy, but it does provide in H.R. 49 that the foregoing purposes—and that's the four purposes that I enumerated this morning—must be provided in, quote, "in such manner as the Constitution and laws of said state may provide." Now the first word is "Constitution" and the next word is "law." Now whether or not that would be in the schedule, it may be so, it may be not; but I do think I should bring it to the attention of the assembly.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion? Are we ready for the question? The question that we once passed, see if we can pass it again. Are you ready for the question on Section 2 going in the Constitution? All those in favor - - Wait a minute. Mr. Anthony.

ANTHONY: I don't want the statement of the Chair to stand uncorrected. I don't know; I myself have not checked this carefully with the provisions of the latest print of H.R. 49.

CHAIRMAN: Would you rather defer it?

ANTHONY: It seems to me that we ought to get that before us before we definitely - - unless we all pass it with the understanding that when that print comes in, we'll be free to reconsider the thing and redraft it, if necessary.

CHAIRMAN: Could we pass it tentatively?

ANTHONY: That would be satisfactory to me.

WHITE: I'd like to move a 15 minute recess while this subject can be given some consideration, and during that period the Tax Committee can get together and complete their work.

FUKUSHIMA: I'll second Delegate White's motion.

CHAIRMAN: All right. A motion has been made for a 15 minute recess. The Tax Committee wants to get together for 15 minutes; so we declare a 15 minute recess.

KING: We are faced with this dilemma that we are trying to draw provisions in our schedule that will comply with H.R. 49. There have been amendments adopted by the committee that has H.R. 49 in consideration, and we have no present information as to what those amendments are. It would seem wise at this time to defer action on Part II and have the committee rise and report progress, and ask permission to meet again.

SAKAKIHARA: Will the President make that in a form of a motion? I'd be glad to second it.

KING: I was going to recite the little circumstances briefly first. And then perhaps, even go to the extent of instructing the chairman of the committee to bring in a report on Part I, so that we can treat the two parts separately, if that's agreeable.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. King, you don't want to discuss Sections 3 or 4 then?

KING: No. Section - -

CHAIRMAN: All right. Motion made - -

KING: - - one. I haven't made a motion yet, Mr. Chairman. Sections 1, 2 and 3 cover the same subject matter. Section 4 does stand by itself, but since it was proposed to put it in the schedule, it might be delayed until we consider the whole of Part II. I now move that we defer consideration of Section 1 of Part II and the remainder of Section 2 until some - - of Part II, I mean, until we've made - -

CHAIRMAN: Motion made and seconded by Sakakihara. Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

CHAIRMAN: We defer all of Part II. All those in favor say "yes." All those opposed. [Carried.]

BRYAN: I move that we rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

PORTEUS: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor - -

HOLROYDE: Before we vote on that, I'd like to amend that so that the chairman would be instructed to prepare a report on Part I of the committee proposal, so that the Convention could act on that if Section 2 is delayed for quite some time.

BRYAN: I accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Accept the amendment. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor say "aye." So carried.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: The committee come to order.

ANTHONY: We are dealing with Committee Proposal No. 27, Part II. Two amendments have been distributed. They are on the desks of the delegates. The one has been erroneously numbered as "Section 2, Amendment to Committee Proposal No. 27, Part II, RD 1." That should be changed, that number to "Section 1" in two places where it appears.

If I may, I will read the proposed amendment which I offer.

> Section 1. The United States shall be vested with or retain title to or an interest in or shall hold the property in the Territory of Hawaii set aside for the use of the United States and remaining so set aside immediately prior to the admission of the State, in all respects as provided in the act or resolution admitting this State to the Union.

Now, what that accomplishes is this. I move that that be adopted.

PORTEUS: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All right, go ahead.

ANTHONY: What that accomplishes is this. Part II, Section 1 of the committee proposal is an effort, and probably a pretty good effort, to paraphrase the requirements of H.R. 49. However, that is flexible and may change from time to time. This proposed amendment incorporates all of the requirements of that act as it now exists or as it hereafter may be amended, and it preserves the flexibility of that situation, which will require no further revision if H.R. 49 is revised. It will also take care of the situation if we are admitted to the Union by joint resolution. I have submitted this to the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, Conservation and Lands and also Deputy Attorney General Rhoda Lewis and it meets with their approval. I think this should be adopted.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of Section 1, Part II, say "aye." Opposed will say "no." Carried.

TAVARES: That was the adoption of the amendment. I move now that the section as amended be tentatively approved.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: You've heard the question. All those in favor say "aye." Negative, "no." Carried.

Section 2.

ANTHONY: Addressing ourselves to Section 2 of Part - - of Proposal No. 27, Part II, Section 2. Another amendment had - -

MAU: I move that we adopt Section 2 tentatively.

BRYAN: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: O.K., go ahead, Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: A proposed amendment which I now move has been distributed - - printed and distributed on the desks. I will read it.

> Any trust provisions which Congress shall impose, upon the admission of the State, with respect of lands patented to the State by the United States or the proceeds and income thereof, shall be complied with by appropriate legislation.

I move its adoption.

PORTEUS: Second the motion.

ANTHONY: If I may speak to that. The section of the H.R. 49 which this is an effort to comply with is not a mandate. I want the delegates to understand that. We do not have to have this particular section in the Constitution. However, in the minds of some of the legal fraternity, the act, H.R. 49, does require that the income from our school lands be held in a trust for certain purposes, as to be established either by the Constitution or by the laws of the State. This will be a clear acknowledgment that we are accepting and will perform the trust. It may look on first instance that this is an open-ended matter, but the Congress has been eminently fair with the Territory in regard to our public lands. Our difficulty has been only with the Department of the Interior. I would have no hesitancy in urging that the Convention adopt this, if they adopt anything, or the other alternative would be to delete Section 2 in its entirety.

ASHFORD: The matter of construction, should you say "with respect of," or should we say "in respect of" or "with respect to"? "In respect of " is better, I think.

HEEN: That could be handled by the Style Committee.

CHAIRMAN: Style Committee want to make any comment on that? Can we leave it to Style?

ANTHONY: It's a matter of style, I think. It can be corrected by the delegate. She's a member of that committee.

ASHFORD: I'd like to say that I shall vote against this for the same reasons that I stated in my objection to the report.

CHAIRMAN: Any other comments?

RICHARDS: There is one point I think should be clarified a little bit. The language as originally or at one time proposed for the committee was somewhat similar to this and at that time the committee felt that it was somewhat of a blank check in agreeing to terms and conditions which we didn't know might or might not be included in such an act. However, the chairman of the committee has been assured by the attorneys that we would have a reasonable chance of not having our pockets picked too much by Congress. Therefore, I'll go along with it.

CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion? Otherwise, question. All those in favor of including this say "aye." All those opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: I now move the adoption of Section 2, Part II, as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: You have all heard the question. Amended Section 2. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

CROSSLEY: I now move the adoption of Section 3 of Part II, Proposal 27.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion -- any comments?

ANTHONY: I move a simple amendment which likewise has the approval of the lady from the attorney general's department. In the third line after the word "Congress" delete "of the United States." There is only one Congress that we are talking about. Everybody agrees to that, I believe.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Do you want to carry it especially on that or will everybody --

CROSSLEY: That's an amendment. We will have to vote on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: All right; you know the amendment. Any other amendments? All those in favor --

ASHFORD: That's a matter of style, and I think the gentleman's a member of the Style Committee and can look after it there.

CHAIRMAN: I think the point is well taken.

APOLIONA: Anthony withdraws his amendment.

ANTHONY: I withdraw it.

CHAIRMAN: Now, we are ready then to vote on Section 3. Are there any other comments? All those in favor of including Section 3 say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: I now move the adoption of Section 4, Part II, Proposal 27.

WOOLAWAY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made and seconded.

PORTEUS: I'll only take one moment on this. I've discussed this matter with the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, Conservation, et cetera. Referring back to Section 1 [i.e. 3] of Part I, it stated there that "All fisheries in the sea waters of the State not included in any fish pond or artificial inclosure shall be free to the public, subject to vested rights and the right of the State to regulate the same." It seems to me that since Section 4 is the proviso which directs that the legislature have condemned and provide the money for the elimination of these various sea fisheries, that vested rights, rights in the sea fisheries, which under our law are vested rights, konahiki rights and so forth, that the provision with respect to the regulation of vested rights in that interim period could well appear in this Section 4 rather than in Section 3. Following the elimination of those vested rights, I think this is a matter which will -- this portion will then become functus, except for the statement that fisheries shall be free to the public, and I think that as with other public facilities, they'll be free anyway. But I'm satisfied, after talking to the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, that if the Committee on Style concedes that this is unnecessary, that they can easily rewrite it and that would obviate having a discussion and reconsideration. But I did want to point out that there is the possibility that the Committee on Style may consider that to be adequately covered ASHFORD: That provision for regulation refers not merely to regulation while there are vested interests, but after the vested interests have been condemned.

PORTEUS: May I add that the legislature will have the power to regulate in any event. They will have the right to regulate any of the resources, this in the interest of conservation, et cetera, and under the subject, rightful subjects of legislation. I deem it to be unnecessary but, as I say, I'm satisfied to leave it to the Committee on Style.

CHAIRMAN: Do I understand you, then? If Committee on Style feels they can incorporate the sense of this in Section 2, do so, and then we would eliminate Section 4.

PORTEUS: No. That would eliminate -- possibly the Committee on Style might eliminate Section 3 of Part I, and place the sense in Section 4 of Part II.

CHAIRMAN: And we'll pass it with that understanding.

ANTHONY: I suggest we just vote on the section. If there is a style question here which the Style Committee can wrestle with, the speaker will agree to that.

CHAIRMAN: Question. Any more discussion? All those in favor of Section 4 say "aye." All those opposed say "no." Carried.

APOLIONA: I now move tentatively for the approval of Part II of Proposal 27 as adopted as amended.

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the question. Is there any debate? All those in favor of approving Committee Proposal No. 27, Part II, say "aye." All those opposed say "no." Carried.

CROSSLEY: I now move that we adopt Proposal 27 as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of adopting the whole of Proposal 27 say "aye." All those opposed.

CROSSLEY: I move that we rise --

C. RICE: He didn't give the announcement.

CROSSLEY: What?

CHAIRMAN: I announced "carried."

CROSSLEY: I move that we now rise and --

CHAIRMAN: Report progress?

CROSSLEY: No, I believe that what we should do now is adopt the -- recommend that we rise and recommend the adoption of this proposal.

WOOLAWAY: Second the motion.

PORTEUS: It has been customary for us not to rise and recommend the adoption until the matter has been submitted to the Convention in an amended form and a report prepared. Therefore, I think the motion, to be correct, should be to rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again. In the meantime, the chairman will write that report and submit it to the Committee of the Whole.

CROSSLEY: That's what I started to say, but I thought we'd save time by --

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made and seconded that we rise and report progress. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

JULY 6, 1950 • Morning Session

[The first part of the debate was not recorded.]

RICHARDS: . . . the part that deals with H.R. 49.

HEEN: Point of order.

SILVA: Second the motion we adopt the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Castro made the second to that motion.

HEEN: There was a motion to reconsider and that motion was seconded, but no action has been taken upon that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion before the house to reconsider seconded by Senator Silva. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor, "aye." Carried.

SILVA: To put the question before the floor, I move we adopt the amendment.

DOWSON: I'll second the motion.

RICHARDS: The amendment is a minor amendment in the last part of that section in which the words to be deleted are, "in all respects as provided in the act or resolution admitting this state to the Union" to read, "in all respects as and to the extent set forth in the act or resolution providing for the admission of this state to the Union."

CHAIRMAN: You have all heard the question? Any discussion?

ASHFORD: Before the vote is called for, I'd like to explain my vote. I shall vote against it, not because I do not think that this is an appropriate amendment, but because I do not recognize the right of the Congress of the United States to dictate to us how we shall dispose of our lands or require us to cede any interest therein.

CHAIRMAN: We will record that sentiment.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to ask Delegate Anthony and Delegate Heen on this. What would happen in case the present bill didn't come up before Congress?

ANTHONY: This amendment is designed to take care of either admission pursuant to H.R. 49 or a joint resolution. As a matter of fact that's one of the reasons for the changes. You will note the language is in "all respects as and to the extent set forth in the act or resolution providing for the admission." Previously the language stated, "admitting this state to the Union." Now that would only be the act. Therefore, this amendment will cure that particular defect. I might state that the members, several members of the bar in the Convention have reviewed this with care and in consultation with the attorney general's office. We are of the view that this is an appropriate amendment.

ROBERTS: I'd like to second Miss Ashford's sentiments.

CHAIRMAN: There are times when you are caught over a barrel where you just have to take it.

ANTHONY: It is also agreed by the lawyers that we are going to draft this Constitution, so far as the land provisions, as we, the delegates, feel they should be drafted, and we'll fight out that subsidiary issue at a later date, if it becomes necessary.

CHAIRMAN: May I call attention to both Ashford and Roberts that in our report, we say to Congress that they have always treated us fairly and we expect them to continue in the same way. So that helps to cover it.

LOPER: Point of information. Is there a redraft of Committee Proposal No. 27?

CHAIRMAN: It's on your desk. It's amendment to Committee Proposal No. 27 and was passed out this morning.

RICHARDS: I don't know whether all the delegates may have the redraft. It was Redraft No. 1 that amended Section 2 that would pass before the committee - - passed by the committee and then later Section 1 was deleted, of the committee proposal, and, therefore, it became Section 1. Now there has not been a complete printing as yet because we were holding it up for the committee report.

CHAIRMAN: Could you read that?

RICHARDS: I could read the full section.

CHAIRMAN: Could you read the full section?

RICHARDS: The section is, "Section 1. The United States shall be vested with or retain title to or an interest in or shall hold the property in the Territory of Hawaii set aside for the use of the United States and remaining so set aside immediately prior to the admission of the State." And then the amendment would read, "in all respects as and to the extent set forth in the act or resolution providing for the admission of this State to the Union."

CHAIRMAN: Any more questions?

MIZUHA: Is there anyone in this Convention here, particularly those delegates that went to Washington advocating statehood for Hawaii, who could explain how subsection 7 of Section 3 was inserted into H.R. 49?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, could you tell us that? I think it was a request by Congress. Delegate Anthony or Delegate Heen or President King.

KING: Delegate Heen is best versed in this and I'm perfectly willing to yield the floor to him, but let me say that when we left Washington it was with the understanding that H.R. 49 was to be amended to comply almost exactly with what we were asking them to do with regard to the disposition of public lands. We had convinced the Department of Interior that our contention was right and the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs was very sympathetic. The press reports we got was that several senators in discussing H.R. 49 had made it very clear that they wished to be sure that Hawaii would retain title to practically all of the public domain.

Now the Committee Print C that arrived here the other day, the form of H.R. 49 that was reported out of the committee, had language in it that was quite a surprise to all of us, and did not carry out the understanding that we had at the time we left Washington. It looks as though some legal advisor of the Department of Interior had a change of heart in our absence. However, we're not in a position to contest it at this late date. The bill is on the Senate calendar and may be acted upon within the next two or three weeks. It seems to me that all we can do is make our Constitution comply with it with enough leeway so that we might be able to get a last minute amendment to H.R. 49 and still be in step with the enabling act.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, do you want to say something?

HEEN: Mr. Chairman, that is correct. At the time we left Washington we thought everything had been cleared. However, upon receipt of the last draft of H.R. 49 we found inserted something new. It's on page 12 of that redraft and it's paragraph seven which reads: "That said State and its people do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to all lands, title to which is held by the United States or subject to disposition by the United States."

There are some lands which have been set aside by act of Congress—referring particularly to the national park on Hawaii and Maui—set aside by executive order or proclamation of the President of the United States and the governor of the Territory of Hawaii to the United States or to the Territory; and by executive order of President Wilson, he vested title in the Territory of Hawaii in lands such as public highways, public buildings, and so on and also forest areas.

Now those lands which have not been so set aside, the title to those lands are still in the United States, but the United States holds title only in trust, for in the Newlands Resolution, we find language to the effect that these lands are ceded to the United States for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands. That is the way they hold title now to these lands which have not yet been set aside.

Later on in this very same H.R. 49, you will find provision to the effect that the United States shall continue to hold title to these lands which have not been set aside for a period of five years after the admission of Hawaii into the Union, and during that period of five years, a Joint Committee of the Senate and the House are to determine the final disposition of these remaining lands. Meantime, the State of Hawaii will have the right under the terms of this H.R. 49 to select 180,000 acres, and those lands are to be vested in the State of Hawaii. What remains over, if they are not disposed of within the period of five years, they'll all become vested in the State of Hawaii.

Now it is our contention, those of us who have made a study of this problem, that we can urge before that Joint Committee of Congress that these remaining lands, those remaining after the 180,000 acres have been set aside, really belong to the people of Hawaii because the title, as I said, in the United States is one only in trust. Meantime, the laws, the land laws will continue under the terms of the H.R. 49 and under the terms of the Constitution as we are writing it today, and may be disposed of, exchanged, leased and all the revenue, proceeds that arise from any disposition of those lands or any leasing of those lands become the property or the revenue and proceeds of the State of Hawaii. Therefore it seems to me that we have a good thing to present to the Joint Committee of the Congress when the question is brought to their -- considered by that Joint Committee.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, couldn't we incorporate that thought of what you just expressed in our Committee of the Whole report?

HEEN: Could be.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

H. RICE: It seems to me that the point that we could bring out—I'm sure that Delegate Heen would agree with me—is the case of Texas where Texas was a republic and owned all their lands before they became a part of the United States. There's no question, there are no federal lands to speak of in Texas. They are all Texas lands. The same would be true here in Hawaii.

HEEN: That's correct. When the Republic of Texas submitted to the Union, they kept all the lands that the republic owned except those that had been set aside for military purposes and other national purpose, and those lands did not become part of the public domain of the United States. And in that connection, it is our firm belief, firm conviction, that public lands of the Territory of Hawaii or the Republic of Hawaii did not become the public domain of the United States. They became public lands that were turned over to the United States for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands.

ASHFORD: Since Texas has been mentioned, I mention also Alabama, the lands of which were given to the United States to be held in trust pending the formation of a state.

CHAIRMAN: Any other addition? Are we ready for the question?

C. RICE: In the hearings at Washington—most of you have this, turn to page 22—where Senator Heen addressed the committee, you note there that the senators there asked Senator Heen quite a few questions. I think it would be advisable for all of us to read this over again so that we would know just where we stand. I don't want to see lands given just to get statehood. I think it's a pretty big price. I want to be sure that this is enough in this proposed amendment so that we could argue it with the Department of Interior. I leave it to those attorneys that drew this. First time I saw it, I read about it in the papers, the first time I've seen this amendment.

ANTHONY: There is no doubt about the attitude of either the Senate of the United States or the House of Representatives. In the recent hearings, as in hearings of 1946, those respective bodies have taken the position that it is not the Interior Department that's going to answer this question. It is the Congress of the United States, and they were very encouraging to the delegates who went forward in 1946 as well as those of us who went on recently. This amendment does have in it an inconsistency. We construe it one way, and it is possible that the Interior Department may construe it another. However, so far as those of us who have examined the proposed amendment, we have no doubt that when it comes down to brass tacks the Senate of the United States and the House of Representatives will recognize this problem for what it is. The title of the United States is a title in trust for the use and benefits of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands. That is our position and we are going to stand by it.

CHAIRMAN: Satisfactory, Delegate Rice?

RICHARDS: This particular section of the proposal still ignores this new amendment that was in H.R. 49. It specifically states it's only lands that are set aside for the use of the United States and remaining there and does not discuss the public domain at all.

KAUHANE: I believe that we should defer action on this amendment so that many of us would be familiarized as to its intent and purposes. I believe back in 1946 when the delegation was sent to Washington to appear before the public lands committee on the question of statehood for Hawaii, the same matter was brought to the attention of the delegation, and Senator Heen at that time strenuously objected to its adoption or inclusion in H.R. 49. I again see the same phrase or provision included in the present bill that is now pending before Congress and I think it is only proper that further time be had so that all of us would be satisfied and would be clear in our minds when we vote for the adoption of this proposed amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Just to avoid any delays, we had our three top men, who know more about this than any of us, consider it carefully over the weekend with Delegate King and this is the mildest they could come from what came from 49.

KAUHANE: I grant that is true; but at the same time, we who are so close to the people and not up on the higher bracket are concerned about this matter, so that when we vote we want to know what we are voting for.

KELLERMAN: I would like to ask a question. Does not this language in words renounce our interest as beneficiaries in the lands held in trust for the people of Hawaii? Is not that what the language says in spite of what we would like to have it say? Isn't that what it says?

CHAIRMAN: Well, that's what Congress is asking us to do.

BRYAN: I'd like that question to be clarified somewhat. Are you speaking of the amendment offered this morning or the amendment -- the last amendment to H.R. 49?

KELLERMAN: I gather that the amendment offered this morning was to conform with the requirement of an amendment in House Bill 49.

BRYAN: That is not correct, as I understand it.

KELLERMAN: Well, what is this? What is this we are renouncing?

BRYAN: This is actually a perfecting amendment. I think that Delegate Richards could probably explain the actual need for this change. As far as the last amendment in H.R. 49 appearing in Committee Redraft C or whatever they call it --

CHAIRMAN: We don't disregard it and yet don't accept it.

BRYAN: That is not concerned with this at all. This concerns the lands that are already set aside for the use of the federal government, this particular amendment that we have before us this morning.

KELLERMAN: I think this question is so serious that we had better postpone it until we have the draft of what we are approving in full before us and where the amendment applies and what it means. I don't think we should pass on it in this form.

ANTHONY: I agree we should not hurry into it, but just in order that the delegates may see a little more clearly what the problem is, the last reprint of H.R. 49—it's entitled Committee Print C dated June 26, 1950— laid down a new condition. Now if the delegates can find that particular reprint, if you'll turn to page 12, and the material that is in the large caps is the new material - -

CHAIRMAN: That was also published in the paper, I think.

ANTHONY: - - and that says that "Said State and its people do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to all lands, title to which is held by the United States or is subject to the disposition by the United States."

Now reading that section together with the subsequent sections of H.R. 49, setting up a joint committee which will make disposition of the lands after the five year period and the other provisions to the effect that lands set apart by executive order of the governor or the President to the United States shall remain in the United States, we come upon an apparent conflict. Now we are not providing in this amendment precisely the broad proposition that we disclaim title to all lands subject to disposition by the United States. We are not doing that. It is the view of the lawyers that examined it that this is an inconsistency in the draftsmanship, and that we might very well take the position that this particular section has to do with lands that are set apart to the United States by executive order. It does not interfere with the operation of the joint committee and the five year provision, pursuant to which we may get all of these lands back. And, therefore, the proposed amendment has been watered down, so to speak, not to comply with the inconsistency that is found in Committee Print C. In other words, we will ultimately go to the Congress, present our case as to what the disposition of these public lands will be, and I feel sure that we'll get a fair break before the Congress.

This amendment probably was the work of the Interior Department. There has been in the solicitor's office a certain individual who is consistently putting provisions in H.R. 49 which neither House nor the Senate of the United States were ready to accept. This particular provision came in after the delegation had left Washington, after we were assured that everything was agreed upon and nothing but certain minor perfecting amendments, so called, were to be adopted. I think it's the best we can do under the circumstances. I don't think it's going to jeopardize our case with the Congress.

HEEN: What we are really doing here is to disregard this new provision in H.R. 49.

KING: The adoption of this amendment in Committee of the Whole as an amendment to the original proposal will not bind the Convention's final action. The purpose of the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, Conservation and Land is to request the Committee of the Whole to adopt this and then to rise and report progress and ask permission to sit again. Then completed prints of Committee Proposal No. 27 will be available to every delegate before final approval of the committee report and the proposal is requested.

I think that it is correct to say that the selection of the 180,000 acres out of the public domain, to be vested finally and completely in the State of Hawaii, remains unchanged. Is that not true—may I direct my question to Delegate Heen—that the selection of the 180,000 acres is not changed?

HEEN: That's correct. That provision is still in the H.R. 49.

KING: May I ask another question, just to clarify it? It is also true that the balance of the public domain outside of the area that we select will remain in the name of the United States for this period of five years for a committee to decide whether it shall return to the State of Hawaii or remain in the United States. Is that not correct, Mr. Chairman?

HEEN: That's correct.

KING: So without arguing about too vital a matter, I would go along with Senator Charles Rice's remark that we don't want to pay too high a price for that. In the meantime, I request that Rhoda Lewis, the assistant attorney general, give me a synopsis of this new change in H.R. 49. We'll discuss it with those who are familiar with the subject, especially with Delegate Heen and Delegate Anthony and Delegate Tavares, and then perhaps write to Senator O'Mahoney, Senator Cordon and our counsel in Washington, former Senator Burke, and to Delegate Farrington, and express our point of view with regard to this change in H.R. 49. There is a possibility that it could be amended on the floor of the Senate or even in conference, as after the Senate has passed H.R. 49, it will have to go back to the House for agreement to the amendment. So I feel that we shouldn't delay action at this time on this particular matter.

CHAIRMAN: And if any delegate, such as Kauhane, wants to change this language, there would be opportunity later on.

KAUHANE: That's what I'm afraid of, changing at a later date; we may not be able to do so. This amendment, if accepted, is - - I think merits a serious consideration by the delegation. For instance, the question of our income-bearing property which may be vested with the United States government is the concern of the people of this State of Hawaii If they are going to take away our income-bearing property, then we should be concerned about it. If they are going to give us the pahoehoe land, we also should be concerned about it, too.

CHAIRMAN: I think there have been - -

KING: May I interrupt Delegate Kauhane to show him that the revenue from the domain would retain - - would be retained by the State of Hawaii. Is that not correct?

CHAIRMAN: And I want Delegate Kauhane to realize there was a great deal of thought put on that over the weekend. The attorney general has been working on it for several days and the committee has been concerned about it very much.

KAUHANE: I think we all are concerned. We all are concerned because in 1946, again when this question came up before the delegation that was sent by the legislature to appear before the public lands committee, the question of our income-bearing properties were considered and were thrown into the faces of those who appeared in behalf of Hawaii to request statehood. So much so that Senator Heen in his statement uttered that he would not sacrifice statehood by the giving up of our public lands, the income-bearing properties. And that public lands committee forgot about this particular provision that is now embodied in the redraft of H.R. 49. Certainly they had some gentleman's agreement in 1946, and when we went back there just recently, the same matter should have been brought to the attention of the delegation that appeared in Washington and the same request, immediate statehood for Hawaii. Why did they wait until we left Washington and this matter was brought up? The presentation of facts that was presented by the learned members of the delegation that appeared in Washington certainly were able to answer any question of this type that was brought before their attention.

I'm concerned about the taking of our income property by the United States government, whereby they will leave us pahoehoe lands on the Territory of Hawaii. We certainly would be beggars when we give up our income-bearing properties to the United States government. Rather than continuing in that case, I think we should hang on to all our income-bearing property, and we should take back all of the properties that we have given them on the executive order, either by the governor or by the President. We should request the taking back of those properties.

CHAIRMAN: I think that's what Committee of the Whole report is going to indicate.

SHIMAMURA: I'm in agreement with the original amended Section 1, also with the proposed amendment to Section 1, Part II, but I see the argument of the last speaker and also of the lady delegate from the fourth district, Mrs. Kellerman. As she put it, she understands that the United States is holding certain property in trust for the people of Hawaii. Now this Section 1 as proposed speaks of interest, not only title. I'm wondering if their objection would not to a large extent be met if we would delete the word in the second line of Section 1 of Proposal No. 27, "or an interest in." If we deleted those words, I think we get around the objection that we are possibly surrendering our beneficial interests in these properties and not only the legal title.

CHAIRMAN: I'll let Senator Heen answer that.

HEEN: Those words are necessary there because the United States does have easement over some of these public lands. That's an interest in land, and does not have the absolute title in the land over which these easements lie. Therefore, those words must be retained.

SHIMAMURA: I see the learned judge's point there, but I see nowhere in H.R. 49 "in any interest" or "interests." They only refer to title. I think by putting in these words "of interest," we are surrendering much more than we expected to.

ANTHONY: On page 14 - - I want to straighten out Delegate Shimamura. On page 14 of Committee Print C, "United States or the State of Hawaii or, subject to the Constitution and laws of said state, such political subdivisions, as the case may be, shall retain or become vested with absolute interest thereto, or an interest therein," that language is perfectly proper and quite necessary because they may have less than a fee simple interest; they may have a leasehold interest; they may have an easement; and so on. The controversy centers about to what lands does this disclaimer apply. We say that it does not apply to the entire domain, and we have not accepted in this particular redraft of the amended proposal the broad construction. We're going to have to fight that out with Congress because if that had been - - if we'd accepted that fully we would have surrendered to the language that I read to the body previously. We have not done that. We'll fight it out with them. We'll tell them we are not going to do that because the title of the United States is a technical title only, held in trust for the people of Hawaii.

SHIMAMURA: May I just point out to Delegate Anthony that that section he refers to, "or interest in," refers specifically to the five year period after which title shall become vested in the State of Hawaii or its own political subdivision or the United States. It doesn't refer to the title of which we say is in the United States. That's an altogether different section.

H. RICE: I think the President made a good suggestion, that we rise and report, recommending the adoption of this amendment and have same printed. That's a good idea, so we have it before us. Is that your idea, Mr. President?

TAVARES: I agree with that suggestion. I think that if members had before them this Section 1 which we are amending and studied it, they would see that the amendment we are making is a form or a perfecting amendment. There's no change in substance except this, that as it now stands, as we have already approved it, it refers to an act or resolution admitting this State to the Union. Now that may be the present H.R. 49 or it may be some other act or resolution. We want to know what we are agreeing to, so instead of saying "the act or resolution admitting this State to the Union," we mention "the act or resolution providing for the admission of this State to the Union." That's the only change.

It means, in other words, that it's H.R. 49 we are talking about and not some new act or resolution that they may pass in the future admitting us to the Union. It's simply a perfecting amendment. As far as "interest" and "title" is concerned, I think if Delegate Shimamura were to study the matter a little further, he would agree with us that we don't want to give United States title to all land that is now being set aside for them because, as Delegate Anthony has said, they may not have full title. They may have only a limited title, which is an interest in the land, and not the full interest. And Delegate Shimamura's amendment will give them more than rather than less interest in the land at the present time.

ANTHONY: There is one further thing I'd like to assure Delegate Shimamura. The section of the amendment to H. R. 49 that has caused the trouble, which is on page 12 of Committee Print C—it's entitled "7 "—is a command that we put this disclaimer in the Constitution. Now, we have not done that. We have not complied with the command of Congress. In other words, we're willing to take our chances. So, not having complied with that disclaimer, I see no reason why we shouldn't vote on this amendment.

SHIMAMURA: I don't quite agree with the learned previous speaker, Delegate Anthony - - Delegate Tavares. Judge Heen made it quite clear that under the Newlands Resolution, the United States government is holding in trust for us. It has the legal title to certain properties, and is holding in trust for the people of Hawaii certain lands. If that's true, they have the legal title, the bare legal title, but beneficial interest is in the people of Hawaii. Therefore, if you put in the word "interest," you will give it more than bare legal title.

CHAIRMAN: Are there any other disturbing thoughts?

TAVARES: I think the delegate is laboring under a misapprehension of what this Section 1 applies to. I think it's already been said, but may I again repeat. Section 1 that we are amending applies only to lands, the legal and beneficial title, both of which have now been transferred to the United States by executive order, and nothing else. It doesn't refer to the land we are going to choose from, and all the other provisions. It relates to land we have given for Pearl Harbor. Do you think the United States government is going to give Pearl Harbor back to us, where they built millions of dollars worth of docks? Of course not. This Section 1 applies only to that kind of land where we have expressly practically quit claimed all our interest in the land either through the presidential order, under act of Congress or our governor's order, and turned it over to the United States in absolute title for the United States' use and purposes, not to other lands.

ASHFORD: I would like to ask the last speaker a question as to whether those lands at Pearl Harbor, such lands as those at Pearl Harbor, are not expressly excepted by the Newlands Resolution from the trust.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, can you answer that? While you're looking that up, I'll recognize Delegate Arashiro.

ARASHIRO: Do I understand that the amendment made in H.R. 49 is an amendment made in the Committee on Insular Affairs in the Senate and that it has not been acted upon by the Senate or the House?

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

HEEN: May I read from the Newlands Resolution briefly? The Republic of Hawaii agreed and transferred > to the United States the absolute fee and ownership of all public, Government or Crown lands, public buildings or edifices, ports, harbors, military equipment, and all other public property of every kind and description belonging to the government of the Hawaiian Islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining ... The existing laws of the United States relative to public lands shall not apply to such lands in the Hawaiian Islands, but the Congress of the United States shall enact special laws for their management and disposition; provided, that all revenue from or proceeds of the same, except as regards such part thereof as may be used or occupied for the civil, military or naval purposes of the United States, or may be assigned for use of the local government, shall be used solely for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands for educational and other public purposes.

Not only do we have this document to sustain our position that we are the real owners of these lands, we have also committee reports of the Senate committee and the committee of the House dealing with the provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act relating to public lands, where they speak of this title as being a technical title, and the real title as being in the people, the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands.

ARASHIRO: May I...[part of speech not on tape] and then we have here the amendment submitted by Delegate Richards, which is an amendment to conform with the amendment that was made in H.R. 49 - -

CHAIRMAN: Not to conform.

ARASHIRO: Anticipate such an amendment if there should be one in a resolution or an act passed by Congress.

ANTHONY: The answer to that is no. The real purpose of this amendment was to provide for the disposition of the lands whether we were admitted by joint resolution or by the adoption of H.R. 49.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, doesn't it leave it wide open so that the lawyers could contest it if they tried to push the - -

ANTHONY: We have not complied with the mandate of the seventh section of H.R. 49 and we don't propose to.

CHAIRMAN: That answer your question? I also would like to call to your attention that Papa is always lenient to the most recent child and particular if it comes in the old age, and I see no reason why we have to be too suspicious that Congress is going to be too hard on Hawaii.

ARASHIRO: Does that mean that we are ignoring this section of H.R. 49, as far as conforming with H.R. 49 in the Convention? We are not - -

CHAIRMAN: Well, I think Anthony made it clear that we are not conforming.

ANTHONY: We are not. That particular section says that we shall put in the Constitution a provision that we disclaim all title, and we're not doing that.

CHAIRMAN: That's what this amendment is refusing to do.

BRYAN: I think it should be pointed out that that is a separate subject entirely. This amendment is, as I said before, and I think Delegate Tavares pointed out, a perfecting amendment and nothing more nor less. The consideration of the latest revision of H.R. 49 could come at a later time when we have more information and have more time to study it. Therefore, I think that much of this discussion has been more or less out of order.

CHAIRMAN: I think so, too, but I think it's better to let them air it out.

SAKAKIHARA: May I ask the delegate from the fourth district, Delegate Anthony, that if we are to accept his views on the proposed amendment to Proposal No. 27 as offered by Delegate Richards, which will not conform with Section 7 of the Committee Redraft C of the 81st Congress, by not specifically conforming with a disclaimer of the lands owned by the people of this Territory, and in the face of that requirement, namely Section 7 of H.R. 49, and the further fact that the Congress of the United States and the President of the United States, who will later review the Constitution of Hawaii, may reject or disapprove the Constitution which we may adopt here in Convention?

CHAIRMAN: Anthony, the answer is yes, isn't it?

ANTHONY: The answer is no. The answer is no because this seventh section is in conflict with subsequent sections in H.R. 49. We as lawyers can construe that as applicable to those lands which are set apart by executive order to the United States. Of course, as to those lands, we disclaim interest in Pearl Harbor. We have no use for Pearl Harbor, and the post office or any of the other federal army reservations. But the difficulty lies in the language that is used in the amendment. It is susceptible to two interpretations. We are taking the one which is favorable to the people of Hawaii, and we're going to stand by it, and we can convince any Senate or any House of Representatives that we are right about this.

CHAIRMAN: But technically we actually are not conforming to this other construction.

ROBERTS: I haven't spoken on this question. I'd like to make a few observations. I think our job in the Convention here is to draft a Constitution for the sovereign State of Hawaii. We get a Redraft "C" or a Redraft "D" or a Redraft "F." Those are committee proposals. You don't know what's going to happen to them on the floor of the Senate. You don't know what's going to happen after they have been adopted on the floor and when they go back to joint conference of the House. I think we ought to pay no attention to the redrafts and drafts. I think we ought to write our Constitution as we think it ought to be written. We think we're entitled to statehood. We don't have to beg for it. We don't have to go around and ask them to tell us what they want us to put in. Let's put in what we think belongs in there and let's go in and say we are entitled to statehood and let's get it.

It seems to me that we ought to continue with our job and we ought to complete it. We ought not to do anything which would thwart the possibility of getting statehood, but let's do the best we can with what we have before us. Let's not wait until we get all possible redrafts and try to conform our own language with something that may be incomplete and certainly may not be final.

I have, for example, some objection to the present Redraft C. It says specifically that we have to submit our Constitution to the Congress of the United States for their approval. There is no precedent for that. I don't see why we have to go to the Congress of the United States and have them check it over for us. Other procedures have been for the President to look over the Constitution and to adopt it. It seems to me that we ought to stick up for our rights and fight for them if we think we're right, and not to give in on every little point.

CHAIRMAN: You have no objection to the present amendment? Any other questions? Are you ready for the question? Would anybody want to make any other objections? Question. All those in favor of accepting this amendment say "aye." All those opposed. Carried.

Shall we report progress? Will somebody make a motion?

BRYAN: I move that the committee rise and report progress, and ask leave to sit again to consider the printed copy of the amendment.

RICHARDS: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

JULY 10, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole kindly come to attention. I recognize Delegate Richards.

RICHARDS: I move that the Committee of the Whole Report No. 22 be passed, and that Committee Proposal No. 27 pass second reading.

HAYES: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion made and seconded. You have all had opportunity to read over the report. Are there any questions?

ASHFORD: Reluctant as I am to throw a monkey wrench into the works, I do feel obliged to express again my unwillingness to concur in any report or in any action that gives the United States a blank check to impose conditions upon the return of our lands or recognizes the right of the United States to determine how those lands shall be dealt with. Alaska is being given millions of acres by the United States which paid for Alaska and owned every square foot of public land. All the public lands of Hawaii were owned by Hawaii when we went into the Union and have been held by the United States in trust for administration pending our becoming a state. I shall therefore, as usual, vote against the report.

CHAIRMAN: I know we all have the same objections, but is there anybody else who wants to express it? Are you ready for the question? If not, all those - -

NIELSEN: I want to express the same objection. I don't see why we should say "statehood at any price" to Uncle Sam. I think we should say, "This is what we want." When we say it the other way, why, we are going to get whatever they decide to give us.

TAVARES: I think the people that stand up and make that objection owe it to this Convention to stand up and point out wherein we have written that blank check. I think they owe it to this Convention. Where? What are the words that give that blank check to the United States, "statehood at any price"?

ASHFORD: I'll be glad to do so. Section 2 of Part II of this report. "Any trust provisions which Congress shall impose upon the admission of the State with respect of the lands patented to the State by the United States, or the proceeds or income thereof, shall be complied with by appropriate legislation."

TAVARES: That's not the report. Is it Section 2? Page 2 of what?

ASHFORD: The committee - - Here it is. That's the report that I have.

TAVARES: But the delegate said report.

ASHFORD: Well, that is - - I'll point it out in the report.

TAVARES: What page of the report is that, Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask?

ASHFORD: That's on page 9 of the committee report. And may I say further in regard to the committee report, reading from it, "Although this section seemed to put full trust in the Congress of the United States, this was believed justified since in the past Congress has always been very fair in its dealings with the Territory, and the members believed Congress would continue to deal in this way with the State of Hawaii." In my opinion, if we go to the Congress with a Constitution that expresses our wishes and not a submission to the ideas written in by some of the Department of Interior or perhaps even one or two of the members of Congress, we will be received as favorably as though we put in such a provision as this.

RICHARDS: There was a great deal of discussion regarding this provision in the committee. Also, if you remember, the Committee of the Whole in going into this matter spent a great deal of time. I forget how many pages of transcript.

CHAIRMAN: 139.

RICHARDS: Well, 139 was the total amount of time spent by the Committee of the Whole in going into this thing. I don't think there is a single member of the committee that likes it, but it has been pointed out by the attorneys that it was necessary to include some such statement; otherwise, it would be in complete violation of H.R. 49, and therefore it would be out.

FONG: I want to say as a member who went to Washington, speaking before the Senate Committee on Insular and Interior Affairs, we were more or less assured by the committee that they didn't want to tackle the problem but would await the entrance of the Territory of Hawaii into statehood, and after we have had our two senators in Washington, within that period of time which is allotted to us by the statute, about five years, that they will be able to get together with our senators and then decide on the future of the lands. There was no intention there of taking away our lands, but to leave it until we had our senators over there, and then at that time to decide on disposition of the lands.

AKAU: I wonder if Mr. Tavares would answer a question for me, please. This point has been raised here several times. May I ask, other states before they became states of the Union, did they have the same proposition regarding the land situation, like in Arizona, in Oklahoma, New Mexico?

TAVARES: Most of the states that came into the Union after the original 13 didn't have any public lands. Congress retained them, and made a gift of certain public lands to the states. There wasn't that same problem. They didn't own their land before they came in. Now Texas, however, did retain its public lands and ceded certain lands to the United States, but it kept its own lands. But, except for Texas, I believe that most of the other states, as I say, didn't have that problem, unless you say the original 13 colonies, and there they had some pacts about division of certain other land in certain states in the future. But in this particular case, of course, all of the lands were ours before we came in and they were impressed with the trust with certain exceptions. Some of those exceptions - - one of those exceptions being lands set aside to the use of the United States for purposes such as navy yard and so forth.

I think that this provision isn't as dangerous as it sounds because it applies only to lands patented to the State by the United States; in other words, land that the United States is going to give to the Territory. As several drafts of H.R. 49 have - - previous drafts have shown, those trust provisions are usually of the nature that we shall use the lands for the benefit of the people and so forth. I think previous to that time, this Part II as it originally read set forth the type of provisions that are usually included or contemplated in H.R. 49. The income and so forth shall be held or used for one or more of the following purposes as the legislature may provide, for the support of public schools or other public educational institutions, and so forth. We had such a provision in the Newlands Resolution and in the Organic Act, and I don't think they are going to be very different from that. I doubt very much, and I don't think there has been any indication that insofar as the lands transferred to us are concerned, Congress is going to put any undue strings on it except that we must use it for public purposes.

CHAIRMAN: I think it's amply clear that none of us are willing to give away the lands, and I think we have to assume the United States and men of good will are not going to cheat us of any land. It's on that basis, I believe, that all of us accept the report. Now, is there any more discussion? Are we ready for the question?

KELLERMAN: I'd like to raise a word of caution. I've worked in Washington in the same building with the Interior Department. I've seen standard government bureaus and I've learned something of their psychology. Anything that they add to their jurisdiction or retain in their jurisdiction builds up their offices. I say this in all sincerity. I think it's a dangerous thing to assume that you can declare away your rights and expect support of a government office to give them back to you.

I'd like to call to the attention of this body a recent Supreme Court decision which I do not put in the same category, but to show how dangerous it is to renounce, a recent Supreme Court decision on the ruling of the Texas marginal land oil properties. Texas was an independent country when it became a part of the United States, with complete sovereignty. It gave up a degree of its sovereignty to become a member of the Union. It did not give up the ownership of its lands. The Supreme Court has recently ruled apparently that the sovereignty carries ownership and that the Federal government owns the submarginal oil lands of Texas.

I think it would do us well to think twice before we renounce in general terms or agree in general terms to anything that might be imposed with respect to our Hawaiian lands.

ANTHONY: There seems to be some misunderstanding as to what is contained in this proposal. We have expressly not done what Delegate Kellerman says we should be careful about. There is a provision in H.R. 49, Committee Print C, which asks us to put into the Constitution this disclaimer, and we have not done it. That's why I'm in favor of the report. We'll take our chances with the committee on a proper construction of H.R. 49.

CHAIRMAN: I think we can, Delegate Kellerman. We can also bank on the ability of our lawyers to make this very clear if a fight comes up.

Are there any other questions? If not, I'm going to put the question. All those in favor say "aye." All those opposed. Very weak no. Passed.

RICHARDS: I move that this committee rise and report progress and recommend to the Convention the passage of Committee Report No. 22 and Committee Proposal No. 27.

HAYES: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion made and seconded. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on

HAWAIIAN HOMES COMMISSION ACT

(Article XI)

Chairman: W. HAROLD LOPER

JUNE 7, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole will come to order for consideration of Committee Proposal 6 and Standing Committee Report No. 33. I recognize the chairman of the committee, Delegate Hayes.

HAYES: I hope you have your report with you this morning, Standing Committee Report No. 33 on your desk and Proposal No. 6. Your committee considered a number of proposals, 51, 52, and 156, and also Resolutions 19, 21 and Petitions 4, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 20, 21. We also received many miscellaneous communications from individuals and organizations, a number of them opposed to the inclusion of the Hawaiian Homes into the Constitution and a large number for the inclusion of the Hawaiian Homes into the Constitution.

[Reads from Standing Committee Report No. 33]

After careful consideration of all the above proposals, resolutions, petitions and communications, your committee makes the following recommendations:

1. That the committee favors the privisions of Proposal No. 52, with certain amendments and submits herewith a committee proposal for introduction on the subject matter contained in said proposal. The committee recommends that Proposal No. 52 be placed on file.
2. That Proposal No. 156 be placed on file.
3. That Resolution No. 19 and Resolution No. 21 be placed on file.
4. That Petition No. 10 and Petition No. 11 be placed on file.

Your committee -- I've already repeated, I believe on Number 4, 8, 9, 12, and so forth. Second page.

Your committee has held eight meetings on the matters within its jurisdiction. It has had the active assistance of Miss Rhoda Lewis, deputy attorney general, Mr. Dan Ainoa, executive secretary of the Hawaiian Homes Commission, and Mr. Victor Houston, chairman of the Hawaiian Homes Commission. In addition, your committee held public hearings on the proposals and resolutions before it at Keaukaha on May 11th, Honokaa on May 12th, Waimea on May 12th, Hoolehua on May 13th, and Honolulu on May 18th. Your committee believes that it has gone into the question before it thoroughly and with full opportunity for all interested persons to be heard. The public hearings were all well attended and the committee has had the benefit of the views of almost every person in the Territory of Hawaii who is informed on the subject of the Hawaiian Homes project.

The Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, as amended, is presently part of the basic law of the Territory of Hawaii on the same basis as the Hawaiian Organic Act. It is an act of Congress and can only be amended or repealed by Congress. If Hawaii were to remain a territory, the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act would remain in force. If Hawaii were to become a state without any mention being made of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act or the Hawaiian Homes lands in the State Constitution, or in any enabling act passed by Congress, there would be an extremely ambiguous legal situation leading to endless confusion. We could no more adopt a Constitution from which all reference to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act was excluded, than we could adopt a Constitution from which all reference to the public debt of the Territory of Hawaii was excluded. During some 30 years of operations under this act, very extensive rights, duties, privileges, immunities, powers and disabilities have arisen by way of leases, loans, contracts and various other legal relationships.

According to the records of the Hawaiian Homes Commission, as of December 31, 1949 there were 1,337 lessees of Hawaiian Home lands, with leases covering 8,064 acres and a total population on such lands of 6,517 people. 5,480 acres of these lands were planted in pineapples under contract to several corporations, domestic and foreign. In addition, 103,150 acres were under lease through the Commissioner of Public Lands to private individuals. The Hawaiian Homes Commission had out on loans to lessees the sum of $1,000,199.74 as of December 31, 1949. Recalling of land from the Commissioner of Public Lands, subdivision and developing of lands construction of improvements, and promotion of private enterprises by lessees are all activities presently engaged in by the Hawaiian Homes Commission which are in various phases of completion and promotion.

It is therefore nonsense to propose, as some of the petitions referred to this committee have proposed, that this Convention exclude from the proposed State Constitution all reference to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, as amended. Something must be said and done about the Hawaiian Homes program in the transition from a territory to a state.

In recognition of this problem, the Hawaii Statehood Commission recommended, and H.R. 49, now pending in the United States Senate, now contains a provision that any convention formed under the provisions of H.R. 49 to draft a State Constitution shall provide in said constitution.

And the next paragraph relates to the section that is in [H.R.] 49, and I don't believe I shall read that section unless the members of this Convention wish that I should read it. We turn to page 4 -- 5.

H.R. 49 passed the United States House of Representatives with the quoted language included. According to recent news reports from Washington D.C., the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs has already considered amendments to H.R. 49 and has made certain amendments, none of which change or affect the quoted language. There is every reason to believe, therefore, that H.R. 49 as finally enacted will contain this requirement. If for any reason H.R. 49 should fail to be enacted into law, we have before us nevertheless the clear intent of Congress that any constitution for the proposed State of Hawaii shall provide for the continuation of the Hawaiian Homes program, and even the exact language which would be acceptable to the Congress in accomplishing this purpose.

Proposal No. 52 is a recognition of this anticipated mandate by the Congress. As introduced, it comprised three sections. The first section adopts the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, as amended as a law of the State and the language of H. R. 49 with such paraphrases as were necessary to fit it into a state constitution and to provide for the contingency that this language of H. R. 49 might be amended in some detail. The second section accepted the compact with the United States as a compact or as a trust and agreed to carry out the spirit of the Hawaiian Homes project. The third section prohibited any legislation conflicting with the provisions or purposes of the first two sections.

Your committee amended the first two sections of the proposal in certain technical aspects without changing their basic purpose and deleted the third section as unnecessary. The amended form of Proposal No. 52 submitted herewith will comply with any requirement of the Congress as presently discernible and will accomplish the purposes desired under H. R. 49 as that bill now reads.

Proposal No. 156 seeks to accomplish the same purpose by way of an ordinance instead of by way of incorporation directly into the State Constitution as a part thereof. Your committee considered this alternative approach carefully and decided to adopt the method of Proposal No. 52 instead.

Your committee's task, therefore, has been clear-cut from the beginning. It has not even been a legitimate matter for debate whether the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act should be continued in force. Congress required that this be done as a condition of achieving statehood, and has supplied the outline of the language it will accept in the accomplishment of this requirement.

Nevertheless, in view of the offering of Resolutions Nos. 19 and 21 asking the Congress to permit the liquidation of the Hawaiian Homes program, and of the receipt of several petitions obviously intending the same results if somewhat inartistically worded, your committee did go into the history, purpose and philosophy of the Hawaiian Homes project in order to determine the desirability of its continuance on the remote possibility that Congress might accept a State Constitution which provided for the termination of the Hawaiian Homes project.

The Hawaiian Homes program was conceived in Hawaii and officially proposed to the United States Congress by Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 2 of the regular session, 1919, Tenth Legislature, Territory of Hawaii. The resolution petitioned the Congress "to make such amendments to the Organic Act of the Territory of Hawaii, or by other provisions deemed proper in the premises, that from time to time there may be set aside suitable portions of the public lands of the Territory of Hawaii by allotments to or for associations, settlements or individuals of Hawaiian blood in whole or in part, the fee simple title of such lands to remain in the government, but the use thereof to be available under such restrictions as to improvement, size of lot, occupation and otherwise as may be provided for said purposes by a commission duly authorized, or otherwise given preference rights in such homestead leases for the purposes hereof as may be deemed just and suitable by the Congress."

Senator John H. Wise of Hawaii was the principal spokesman and advocate for this program. With him were many other leaders of the community including Prince Kuhio, Delegate to Congress. Their purpose in promoting this program was to rehabilitate the Hawaiian people by encouraging them to go back to the tilling of the soil. The evil sought to be corrected was the departure of the Hawaiian people from the soil and the consequent weakening of their structure of society under the impact of Western civilization. One of the basic causes of this evil was the complete change in the systems of land tenure whereby the Hawaiians were granted fee titles to land which they promptly alienated to a large extent through a lack of knowledge and understanding of the new land laws. An additional cause was the fact that the people did not actually receive one-third of the domain which was supposed to have been set aside for them at the time of the Mahele, so that many persons had no land of their own at all when the change from feudal land tenure to common law land tenure was made.

As a consequence of the agitation for this program, the Congress finally enacted the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act in 1920. The original act provided for an experimental period of five years on certain lands on Molokai.

I'd like you all to pay attention to this paragraph because I believe it will clarify some of the criticisms that have been made.

No further lands were to be colonized unless the Congress and the Secretary of the Interior of the United States were satisfied that the first project was a success. This first project was pronounced a success and the program approved for continued operation. The Hawaiian Homes Commission and the Hawaiian Homes program have been part of the life of Hawaii ever since.

Until very recently, there has never been any suggestion that the Hawaiian Homes program should be discontinued. Then the use of certain Hawaiian Homes lands at Waimea, Hawaii came up for discussion, and in the ensuing argument, some few persons brought into the question the very existence of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1920. The arguments raised against the act have been as follows: 1. It is unconstitutional. 2. It is discriminatory. 3. The Hawaiian Homes program is a failure. 4. It is time to liquidate the Hawaiian Homes program. 5. A majority of the people of Hawaii are opposed to this act.

The question of the constitutionality of the act was considered at the time of its original introduction. The attorney general of Hawaii, the solicitor of the Department of Interior, and the Congress were satisfied that the act is constitutional. These opinions are as valid today as they were then.

The act is not discriminatory. It is a very progressive piece of legislation designed to aid an aboriginal people to survive the sudden impact of the new and highly complex civilization on their lives. It was passed to meet a very real problem and the fact that this problem is not apparent today is the best evidence that the act is succeeding in its purpose. In some of the Polynesian areas, western government that took control enacted laws that no land could be alienated, as a measure of protecting the native people. In Hawaii, the effect of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act is to preserve only a very small part (approximately one per cent) of the domain for the Hawaiians, and to permit the ready transfer of other lands. It would be more discriminatory to repeal the act.

Those who claim that the Hawaiian Homes program is a failure are uninformed. The growth of the program from its inception to the present day is a matter of public record and is a sufficient answer to this claim.

So long as there are eligible applicants endeavoring to obtain Hawaiian Homes land, there is every reason for continuing the program. When no lands are left and when no applicants remain unsatisfied, then it will be time to raise the question of whether the Hawaiians have been fully rehabilitated.

The hearings, petitions and communications before this committee have demonstrated beyond any doubt that a majority of the people of Hawaii favor the inclusion of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, in the proposed State Constitution.

Then you have your copy and it gives you the names of those who supported the inclusion of the Hawaiian Homes and I've been asked to read them: Council of Hawaiian Civic Clubs on Oahu; West Maui Hawaiian Civic Club; Hawaiian Civic Club, Hawaii; Ewa Hawaiian Civic Club; Nanaikapono Hawaiian Civic Club; Hawaiian Civic Club, Hilo, Hawaii; Republican Party Platform; Republican Precinct Club, 13th Precinct, 5th District; Republican Precinct Club, 13th Precinct, 4th District; We the Women of Hawaii; Women's Division, Oahu County Committee Democratic Party of Hawaii; Imua; Honolulu Advertiser; Honolulu Star Bulletin; Maui News; Hilo Tribune Herald; Native Sons; International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union; Daughters and Sons of Hawaiian Warriors; Honolulu Chamber of Commerce; Molokai Community Association; Molokai Homesteaders Association; Nanaikapono Homesteaders Assocation; Halau O Keliiahonui; Hale O Na Alii O Hawaii, Helu 6, Kamuela, Hawaii; Council of Hawaiian Homesteaders; Waimanalo Homesteaders Community Club; Keaukaha Community Association; Kuliouou Lions Club.

Proposal No. 52

and that is [Committee] Proposal No. 6 now

as amended by your committee and as contained in the committee proposal attached preserves the present situation, complies with the apparent will of Congress, and continues the recognition by the people of Hawaii of the justice of the original enactment of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920.

Signed by all of the committee.

Shall we go into the proposal? I would like to - -

MIZUHA: I move for the adoption of the committee report.

COCKETT: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we adopt the report of the committee.

ASHFORD: I would like to ask a few questions of the committee chairman or, if she chooses, some other member of the committee. Is it the attitude of the committee that in the event the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act were not written into the Constitution that it would therefore be repealed?

HAYES: Will you be kind enough to repeat your question, please?

ASHFORD: Is it your position that if this act were not written into the Constitution, the result of it would be its repeal?

HAYES: Mr. Trask.

A. TRASK: The question goes beyond the scope of the committee's job. However personally we may feel about it, we are mandated by Congress under H.R. 49 to write into this Constitution a compact with the United States with the people of Hawaii. And however we may feel individually about the situation, I think the inquiry is immaterial.

ASHFORD: May I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that that matter was discussed by the chairman of the committee right here when she was reading the report.

A. TRASK: What section is the lady delegate referring to? Of the report?

ASHFORD: Here. "If Hawaii were to become a state without any mention being made of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act or the Hawaiian Homes land in the State Constitution - - "

A. TRASK: What page is that, please? Of the report.

ASHFORD: Three.

A. TRASK: Three?

ASHFORD: I listened to the report of the chairman, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford, page three, what paragraph?

ASHFORD: Well, the second long paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: The portion referred to is almost exactly in the center of the page.

A. TRASK: Well, however the committee's thinking may be, is the lady delegate suggesting that we can defy the Congress in not putting in this compact? The committee - - Let me say to the delegate, as I said before when the committee chairlady suggested the public hearings on the other islands, my position was that, what purpose could be subserved by having such hearings which would go into the very question that the lady asks? We are mandated to do a simple legal job and that is to file in legal language a proposal whereby the people of Hawaii - - of the State of Hawaii would enter in a compact with the United States Congress. That is the job. However, the committee has gone beyond that and to put before the Convention and seek to answer many questions in the minds of many delegates here, who were not completely acquainted with all the ramifications of this act.

ASHFORD: Then I assume that the committee does not choose to answer that question.

SILVA: I just beg to differ with the chairman. I'm for the embodying of this part in the Constitution, but I don't think we are mandated by the act because the act hasn't even passed the Senate and the Congress of the United States as yet. They may even delete it up there. I don't know. I don't think we are mandated.

A. TRASK: Well, maybe that's an inartistic word just then, but we are aware that as late as May 22, about - - a little more than two weeks ago, the last amendments that were included did not at all seek to delete from the section the compact that was necessary to be written in.

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford still has the floor.

ASHFORD: On that matter, may I call the attention of the delegates to the fact that in the amendments proposed by the committee, the Senate Committee on Insular Affairs, that provision was made that in the event the Constitution adopted by this body did not contain all the requirements of H.R. 49 as the same may pass, if it does pass, that we could then be reconvened to deal with that matter. That's just because - - I say that because the question has arisen.

I have some other questions I'd like to ask. Was the reason that this proposal reported by the committee is divided into two sections in the Constitution rather than composed in one compact a desire to prevent its submission as a separate ordinance to the vote of the people? Was that the reason it was written into the - - proposed to be written into the Constitution?

CHAIRMAN: Do you understand the question?

A. TRASK: The proposal is divided really into two sections. There was sought to have in addition to Proposal 6, which was divided into two sections—and at this time I think that for convenience they be numbered one and two, Committee Proposal No. 6. There was suggested a ordinance to be written by the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Laws, as the lady delegate recognizes. That matter was left after discussion as a legislative matter.

The first section was drafted by the attorney general's department to fully conform with the purposes of the act and Section 2 was to conform strictly with the sense of a compact, which is a common draft included in, I think, about 11 other states in their constitutions with respect to the Indian lands, and a compact with the Congress of the United States.

ASHFORD: May I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that in the present status of H.R. 49, the compact itself requires the adoption of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, as a law and that is separated from the compact by the provisions of this proposal.

I have another question, Mr. Chairman. What does the last sentence mean? Does that mean that the legislature shall not have control over the budget of the Hawaiian Homes Commission? Does that mean that the Hawaiian Homes Commission staff can be expanded to the -- without the instructions of the legislature to an extent of any other department of the State? And what does it mean when it refers to "other departments of the State"? What other departments of the State?

A. TRASK: The lady delegate is referring to apparently Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 6, the last sentence thereof which reads as follows: "Such appropriations for administration expenses of the Hawaiian Homes Commission shall never be less than, after due consideration of the receipts applicable to such expenses from the Hawaiian Homes Commission lands, will accord said commission equal treatment with other departments of the State in the funds available for its administration expenses." Unquote. That's a good question.

The other lady delegate from the fourth district also asked the question. The purpose of this—and the committee—the attorney general's department has gone over and widely into the matter, the fiscal policies of the Territory and so forth—the question is with equal treatment with other departments. The fear is real and it's tangible, and certainly the delegate is well aware of that and certainly my colleagues are aware of that, that there has been no other department that has come under such scrutiny for having this act destroyed than the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. There is no agitation to destroy the school department at this time. There is no agitation to destroy the land department at this time. There's certainly no agitation to destroy the records department or the treasurer's office or any other functionary department of the territorial government. But recently there is -- persistently there is of recent date an effort to destroy the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. So faced with that real and tangible situation, the committee, with its various aids, have considered the various avenues of attack by agile people who are concerned over this destruction of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. And one of the most tangible ways in which the act could be destroyed would be for the legislature to pass an appropriation for the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act which would be merely nominal, namely $100 or $10.00 or $1.00. In that case, you could destroy effectively whatever may be necessary in funds to be received from the legislature, as has been done for the past 30 years.

So in other words, to obviate any clever, shrewd move to destroy the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, this tangible, this loose, flexible language was used. In other words, should there be an effort passed by the legislature to appropriate just $100, whereas the previous years may show an appropriation of 50 -- $100,000, properly, third parties concerned would come into court with the proper remedy and action and seek to demand from the legislature, or any other appropriate means, equality of treatment consistent with the circumstances then existent and at least consistent with past appropriations for its administration funds, where we could show that the need was as great.

In other words, all we are concerned about is within the realm of reason. There should be a sense of equal treatment.

ASHFORD: Well, is that limited to the realm of reason? Is that not so wide that the Hawaiian Homes Commission without consultation with the legislature could immensely multiply its staff and come in and the legislature, without inquiring into the budget or anything else, be obliged to appropriate the sums called for?

HAYES: From my own knowledge, the provision of the Hawaiian Homes office is that, I believe, the receipts from all lands come up to about between $135,000 and $140,000 biennium. Isn't that correct, Charlie? And if and when we needed any more money we went to the legislature and asked the legislature to appropriate extra funds to meet with our other expenses—that is very important—which the legislature has from time to time been very agreeable. We have always been able to -- We have to present our budget to the budget bureau anyway like other department heads and we just wanted to carry out that same protection.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford has the floor. You yield?

HEEN: Yield just for one question. Just wondering whether or not failure on the part of the legislature to appropriate the necessary funds for the administration expenses of the commission, that the legislature would be subject to mandamus?

CHAIRMAN: Any member of the committee wish to attempt an answer?

ANTHONY: As a matter of law, that couldn't possibly be done. You can't mandamus the legislature and that's why I think the proponents of the bill are pushing the thing too far. A good many of us are in favor of preserving what would otherwise be characterized as a clear discrimination. It's part of our history and I think a good many of us accept it. We certainly don't want to have a provision whereby we are going to treat this department of government differently from other departments of government.

SHIMAMURA: May I be permitted to attempt to clarify a point raised by one of the previous speakers. The speaker inquired as to whether or not the provisions of H.R. 49 as to the provisions for the Hawaiian Homes Commission was mandatory. I don't think there is any question that it is mandatory. In the original bill, H.R. 49, it was imparted in Section 3; in the amended form before the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, it is amended and provided in Section 2. And the pertinent portion reads: "And said Convention shall provide in said Constitution... sixth, that, as a compact with the United States relating to the management and disposition of the Hawaiian Home lands, the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920 as amended, is adopted as a law of this State," and so forth.

C. RICE: I move the committee stand in recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

SMITH: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that we recess, subject to the call of the Chair. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

(RECESS)

ASHFORD: I thought I yielded for one other speaker, but apparently there are a lot of others. I don't wish to assume too much of this, but I would like to ask some other questions.

KING: I don't know whether the question that the delegate from Molokai had in mind is pertinent to this particular point, but I did want to offer at this time an amendment to the motion to approve the committee report, which I am informed automatically approves Committee Proposal No. 6. Amend that motion to adopt the committee report and committee proposal with the deletion of the last sentence of the first section of the proposal. In other words, cutting out the language, "Such appropriations for administration expenses of the Hawaiian Homes Commission shall never be less than, after due consideration of the receipts applicable to such expenses from the Hawaiian Homes lands, will accord said commission equal treatment with other departments of the State in the funds available for its administration expenses."

Before I ask for a second to the motion that - -

YAMAMOTO: Mr. Chairman, second the motion.

KING: That language was put in there by the attorney general's office, I presume at the request of the Hawaiian Homes Commission itself, and I feel that it has no particular value. It is an indirect order to the legislature which, as Delegate Heen has said, would have to be mandamus to—if it's possible to do so—to make them carry it out; and if they didn't carry it out, there wouldn't be anything we could do about it.

Now in the past the legislature has been very generous to the Hawaiian Homes Commission program. It has not only appropriated additional sums for administrative purposes, but considerable sums for development, and I feel that with the adoption of the program as a part of our Constitution, we can depend upon the legislature to do whatever is fair and just in the future as they have in the past. I do not feel that this particular provision destroyed the integrity of the proposal and the intent of the proposal. Now I say that as one who has been a champion of the Hawaiian Homes program for many, many years. So I would move that the motion to adopt be amended to include the deletion of that last sentence of the first section of the Committee Proposal No. 6.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Yamamoto, do you second the motion?

YAMAMOTO: Second the motion.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. I would like to inquire from the chairman of the committee, the Hawaiian Homes Committee, as to whether or not this committee proposal has been scrutinized by Miss Rhoda Lewis of the attorney general's office, whom I regard as one of the best authorities on the Hawaiian [Homes] Commission law, as well as to the relationship of that proposal here to the provisions of H.R. 49.

HAYES: It certainly has, Mr. Heen. The attorney general had drawn this up for the committee, Rhoda Lewis. We've had her assistance at every meeting.

KAUHANE: I'd like to speak against the motion that has been put for the deletion of the last sentence in Proposal No. 6. The Committee on Hawaiian Homes Commission Act went into this question and gave it due and careful thought. The idea as expressed in the language which is now being asked to be deleted from this proposal carries with it the intent, and sincere intent, on the part of Hawaiian Homes Commission to secure sufficient appropriation from the legislature so that they can carry out its work. This sentence means that the Hawaiian Homes Commission will be treated and given the same consideration with respect to appropriations as to other branches of government and that the Hawaiian Homes Commission should not be left out on the limb, and it is to continue its work. Certainly there is great need for needed appropriations to carry out the work of the Hawaiian Homes Commission.

If it is the intent of the legislature to see that the work of the Hawaiian Homes Commission is certain, and to such an extent that they are working, their work is comparable to other branches of government receiving a high appropriation to carry out its functions, then, therefore, the Hawaiian Homes Commission should be accorded the same consideration and thought. That they also should receive the same amount of money to carry out its program.

This is only a fair request on the part of Hawaiian Homes Commission to ask that this sentence be left in the proposal. I see no reason why the members of the committee at this last instance, because of their failure to explain and to clarify the sentence so that the delegates of this Convention can amply grasp the idea of the inclusion of this sentence, now come and ask that it be excluded from its proposal. Certainly, we who sat in consideration of this proposal feel that this sentence is much needed. It's a must as far as the proposal that is to be considered by this Convention. It is a must on the part of the Hawaiian Homes Commission to ask the legislature to give them sufficient funds to carry out this work. Certainly the Hawaiian Homes Commission should not be left in the lurch, if the legislature can only see fit to grant them an appropriation less, or figuratively speaking, an appropriation of $50,000 when they need a $100,000 to carry on its work. That is the reason why this sentence was included so that in consideration of the allocation of the appropriation of funds for other comparable departments, that the Hawaiian Homes Commission should be given the same consideration and the same amount as far as funds are concerned to carry out its work; and I see no reason why the request is made to delete it. I move that that motion be tabled.

CHAIRMAN: Hearing no second - - Delegate Hayes.

HAYES: I was going to say that in our committee we have gone over this section very, very carefully and it was just felt - - they just felt perhaps maybe some legislatures wouldn't be kind enough to us and wouldn't appropriate the amount of money we would need. Mr. King in making that motion felt that we were mandating the legislature to carry out that they must appropriate this money, and many of the members here on the floor felt that it should be deleted. Personally myself, I haven't agreed on that. But, I feel that I explained it enough on the floor to say that we have gone as far as our administration's fund is concerned, that the legislature has always appropriated enough money to carry out our work with our own lease money that we receive from our land. Except once in a great while we do get in an awful jam.

Now for instance, this last legislature. What happened to us in the conference committee of the Senate? The revolving fund passed both houses and in order for us to get our revolving fund, we would have to vote for Waimea, and so we lost our revolving fund, lost the appropriation up here at Kalawahine and defeated the Waimea interests. I feel that your chairman is still worrying about whether it would be proper for me to agree to this or not.

MIZUHA: The last section under consideration, or the last sentence which is under consideration at the present time, is relative to appropriation for administration expenses. As I read the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, which will be incorporated into the Constitution, a ceiling is placed, or a method by which the appropriation - - money should be appropriated for the Hawaiian Homes Commission is defined in that act and if the legislature does not act, the budget submitted by the Hawaiian Homes Commission will automatically be effective not in excess of $200,000. So it seems as though it is a guarantee to the Hawaiian Homes Commission that they will get up to $200,000 in the event the legislature does not act on their budget, and that is written into the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. And hence, it is felt that perhaps a provision like this in the Constitution will be merely surplusage or redundant or whatever you may want to term it; and hence it is not necessary, but the bare fact that we have accepted the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act as a law of the State of Hawaii. And on that basis, perhaps, it is appropriate to delete this last sentence.

TAVARES: I think a slight correction of the implications of that statement might be in order. As I understand it, H.R. 49, if passed in the last form we've heard of, would permit our legislature to amend Section 213 of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act and change that. Now, if this article as proposed by the Committee on Hawaiian Homes Commission is adopted as a part of our Constitution, it seems to me—and that is my opinion—that one portion of it will eliminate the situation where any of the proceeds or the income from Hawaiian Home lands can be lapsed into the general fund of the Territory, and I am for that. I think the lands are trust lands and as long as we observe the trust, the income from the trust lands should stay with the trust, and that to some extent will be a guarantee that the project won't die because, in my opinion, the income from those lands is bound to increase in the future to some extent. Therefore, even if the legislature neglects the commission somewhat, there will be some mitigating circumstances in the increase of the income to the lands. I think that perhaps will clarify the situation a little bit.

Now, I would like to say very sincerely to the -- I know the very sincere delegate who has moved to table this motion although it's not been seconded. There are a great many of us who are very friendly to this Hawaiian Homes Commission project, but if that motion is seconded and it comes up, many of us who are for the act will be forced to vote against tabling. I really think a great deal more damage would be done to the project by trying to table this and I think the rest of us will unite to support the act with the sentence out which the delegate from the fifth district has moved to delete. I'm very strongly for that.

ASHFORD: Point of information, Mr. Chairman. Who moved to table what?

CHAIRMAN: Mr. President moved to -- Pardon me, Delegate Kauhane moved to table the motion to amend.

HEEN: But there was no second.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. Delegate Mau has the floor.

MAU: I want to ask the last speaker if he felt that if this last sentence on page 1 of Proposal -- Committee Proposal No. 6 were included, that the act might be declared unconstitutional. Or what was the feeling? How would it jeopadize the act itself?

TAVARES: I was not speaking of constitutionality. I was speaking of the attitude of the members, as I believe, of some members of this Convention who like myself believe that that sentence goes a little too far. It purports to give a guarantee of treatment to one department of the government which we are not going to include for any other department of government; and on the face of it, I believe sincerely that it's an unreasonable requirement, besides being unenforceable in any practicable manner.

MAU: But no question of legality or anything is raised with reference to this last sentence? It would not endanger the act except from a matter of policy?

TAVARES: I haven't given that enough thought to say whether I think it would be invalid or not, but I do think it would be utterly unenforceable in any event. And I think it's wrong in principle to give one department of government a guarantee of treatment that you don't give in the Constitution to every other department. That is implied anyhow. I sincerely believe that after this flurry of feeling the next -- succeeding legislatures are going to be just as fair to this department as any other within their means.

MAU: I'd like to ask another question. As I got the discussion, the full amount, the biggest amount that the commission would get, even if this sentence were left in, would be something like $200,000. Am I correct in that?

TAVARES: No, I don't think that is correct. Under H.R. 49, our legislature can amend that section to change that amount to any amount it sees fit.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau has the floor. Do you wish to yield to an answer here? Delegate Mizuha.

MAU: Yes, I'd like to get an answer from Delegate Mizuha.

MIZUHA: I believe H.R. 49 does not give our Territory -- the State legislature the right to change any amount that the Hawaiian Homes Commission should have as far as appropriations go. It only refers to changes in administration but not in appropriations of money.

TAVARES: I beg to correct the gentleman. The act of H.R. 49 very carefully mentions three funds, I believe, that the legislature cannot affect. It very carefully leaves out any mention of the Hawaiian Homes administration account, which is the account involved in this argument and thereby, by implication, leaves that open to amendment by our legislature.

MIZUHA: I have before me H.R. 49 which says as follows: "Provided that, 1. Sections 202, 213," which is under consideration at the present time, "and other provisions relating to administration only." It does not refer to appropriations.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau, does that answer your question?

MAU: Well, this last sentence does relate to administration expenses.

TAVARES: Yes, and I think somebody ought to get that Section 213 and read it and I will demonstrate to the delegate from Kauai that I am correct in my statement, if someone will produce that last amended section of Section 213.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen has asked for the floor. Delegate Heen, you asked for the floor a moment ago. Pardon me, Delegate Mau, were you through?

MAU: No, I'm not through, Mr. Chairman. While we're waiting, may I ask several other questions?

A. TRASK: Mr. Mau, if Delegate Mau will yield to a question with respect to this inquiry here --

MAU: I yield for that purpose.

A. TRASK: The latest H.R. 49, namely Committee Print, United States Senate, May 23, 1950, is in line with the expression made by Delegate Tavares, namely, that that $200,000 may be amended by the legislature either up or down. It says, in other words, that Section 213 in particular reference with respect to administration expenses, which is the matter in controversy as to the operational cost of the administration of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, may be amended by the local legislature and that is why the reference from the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act that an ordinance in addition to Proposal -- Committee Proposal No. 6 be adopted was not adopted, because the legislature may properly amend the act as it now stands under H.R. 49.

MAU: I just want to pose this question then to the Convention. So far as the discussion has gone, there seems to be no particular danger in permitting this last sentence to remain. Also in the discussion there is a feeling that because of the present laws which will be reenacted or remain in force, the funds of the commission would be sustained or will remain as they are today. Now, if that be so and there's no harm in leaving this last sentence in, I certainly would favor its retention, unless it's otherwise satisfactorily explained to me that it should go out and for a valid reason.

CHAIRMAN: If you are through, Delegate Mau, I'd like to recognize Delegate Heen at this time.

MAU: I have other matters to talk about, but I - -

CHAIRMAN: We'll recognize you again. Delegate Heen.

HEEN: You will note that the language used in the last sentence is mandatory in form and it cannot serve any useful purpose because the legislature is not subject to mandamus.

ASHFORD: I demurred on the ground of uncertainty and that hasn't been answered yet. It is customary in the legislature from time to time to cut the appropriations of one department and to raise the appropriations of another department. With which department should the Hawaiian Homes Commission be linked?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, you asked for the floor?

ANTHONY: Thank you. I think the proponents or the opponents of the present motion to delete are carrying this thing too far. In the first place, let's all recognize what we are doing here. This enactment into the Constitution of statutory material is a departure from what this Convention has tentatively accepted as a pattern of this Constitution. It is a departure which a good many of us feel is necessary by virtue of the historical setting that we find ourselves in. This particular act has become a symbol with the Hawaiian people and even though it is discriminatory, in my opinion, it is not so obnoxious that this Constitutional Convention should reject the incorporation of the act. Now when you go beyond that, go beyond what is mandated under H.R. 49 and attempt to insert language in there which must mean something—it either means something or it means nothing—I say that we are going entirely too far, and I think we ought to leave the act just where it stands. Hawaiians have never been injured under the administration of the act; they have been treated fairly and I think that the motion of the President should carry.

HAYES: Mr. Anthony - - Delegate Anthony, rather, I appreciate what you said in some of the things, and some of the things, of course you and I would never believe together. But I just want you to be very kind to us because we are taking the instructions of the attorney who has drawn this for us; and so therefore, the committee is not responsible for coming to this Convention and mandate this Convention to do this and that. Now, who do you think I'm going to look to for help and guidance except - - I mean for any proposals that come to our committee. I certainly respect those who helped us a great deal in the making of these proposals; and so, therefore, I hope you don't feel that the committee deliberately did this on their own feeling on this matter.

ANTHONY: I didn't mean to convey the impression that the committee was trying to mandate anybody. When I use the word "mandate" that is a mandate in the act of Congress. In other words, if we are going to have a Constitution pursuant to H.R. 49, we must put in a safeguard which will keep the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act as it stands unimpaired. Now I think that the proponents of that measure should accept H.R. 49 and take their chances with other departments of the government. They have a minimum guarantee with the trust fund and they have a minimum guarantee in the existing legislation, and there is no thought in anybody's mind, as I've been able to gather, to eliminate those guarantees, and the trust fund will remain unimpaired.

SILVA: I think at this time it would probably be fitting to make a request of the committee itself, that if they would withdraw that last sentence that is in controversy, that perhaps they can receive full accord of this Committee of the Whole. It would be nice if it would come from them themselves, if they would be glad to withdraw that rather than put it through a motion and have it to wrangle all over the place.

MAU: I merely want to correct an impression that was given both by the President of the Convention when he spoke last and the last speaker from the - - delegate from the fourth district when he said that the legislatures in the past have been generous with the Hawaiian Homes Commission. That might be true in the last few years, but since 1920 and up to a few years, I don't believe that the Hawaiian Homes Commission Acts have been carried out for the best interest and welfare of the Hawaiian people by the legislators themselves, because they have sent these people out, as an example, to Nanakuli without money with which to develop irrigation and domestic waters. How do they expect these people to make a fairly good living and a good homestead? I feel that there should be a guarantee that enough money will be made available to develop these lands if you expect these people to stay on their homesteads. I charge at this time that the administrations in the past years have not done their duty either in asking Congress for sufficient money to develop these lands or going before the legislature with a strong enough case and say, "Look, if this act is to be administered fairly and for the benefit and the best interests of the Hawaiian people, money must be made available for the development of these lands."

That's why I want these questions answered, to be sure that there will be certain guarantees that enough money is available for the full development of these lands. Otherwise, it's a useless gesture to say set aside some of these lands and then don't give them money to develop these lands. You can't live on these lands without having them have sufficient funds to build roads, to make water available, and to make irrigation water available so that they can make these lands fertile.

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of information. I believe the last speaker when he was first accorded the opportunity of the floor stated that he agreed that the last sentence should be left in the Constitution. If that statement is correct, then he has seconded the motion that I have made for the tabling of the motion to delete this last sentence.

MAU: Before I did that, I wanted the questions answered so that I would know how to vote on this last sentence.

HEEN: Will the last speaker yield to a question? Supposing those who are in favor of the Hawaiian Homes Commission law approached the legislature, made out a strong case that they should have $200,000 instead of $100,000 and the legislature appropriated $100,000. How are you going to force the legislature to give the other $100,000?

MAU: I'm not saying that we are going to force them either by mandamus or what else, but I want to know what guarantees have we that the commission will have sufficient money with which to operate these lands?

KAUHANE: Will the speaker yield so that I can answer Judge Heen? Mr. Speaker, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau, you have the floor. Do you yield to a question over here?

HEEN: I would like a direct answer to that question, Mr. Chairman. I still have the floor.

MAU: I thought I answered the delegate's question, and that is this. I know of no way in which you can force the legislature to make the appropriations. Then, of course, the answer is no. What is the effect of this last sentence if it remains? Does that guarantee the appropriations - - necessary appropriations?

CHAIRMAN: Do you yield, Delegate Kauhane?

MIZUHA: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kauhane has the floor.

MIZUHA: Mr. Chairman.

KAUHANE: I'd like to answer the delegate from the fourth district.

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kauhane has the floor.

KAUHANE: I'd like to answer the question put by the delegate from the fourth district, namely, Senator Heen. Certainly, all we ask as a guarantee from the legislature is a fair consideration as to administration funds for the Hawaiian Homes Commission. If you feel that $200,000 is being requested, you can only give a hundred, but to other departments you will give them the full amount, and we ask you to be fair with the Hawaiian Homes Commission in your consideration to give them the amount in comparable to other departments.

MIZUHA: May I answer the question of the delegate of the fourth district? As the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act is now written, if the Hawaiian Homes Commission in its budget asked for anything over $200,000 and the legislature fails to act, the $200,000 appropriation is automatic under the present Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. That is why I am raising the question at this time. There is a difference between another delegate of the fourth district and myself as to what the provisions of H.R. 49 contain at the present time. It is my contention that H.R. 49 - - the provisions in H.R. 49 does not change Section 213 to give the legislature of the State of Hawaii the authority to reduce the appropriations below $200,000. He contends that it does. If it does and limits the Hawaiian Homes Commission only to the $149,000 of income they receive at the present time, and if his interpretation is correct, then I am not in favor of the deletion of the last sentence in the committee proposal at the present time.

KING: I feel that the argument revolving about the interpretation of H.R. 49 and the proposal is not essential to the point at issue. The Committee Proposal No. 6 was drafted with the assistance of the attorney general's office, Miss Rhoda Lewis, and with the assistance and recommendations of the Hawaiian Homes Commission. And it does include a provision which I do not feel is essential to the spirit of the bill. And then let H.R. 49 provisions fall where they may. If the income is less than $200,000, and it's mandatory that it shall be $200,000, let that be the answer. If it's not mandatory, let the Hawaiian Homes Commission live on the income derived from its own land.

I'd like to point out in that regard that as these old leases expire, the Hawaiian Homes land will be released at higher rent so that the income in the future will be substantially more than it has been in the past. Senator Rice interpolates here that it will be over $200,000. So without trying to cut off debate, I don't feel that we are making any progress and I would like to move the previous question on the amendment, but I will not move it because others are seeking recognition.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares asked for recognition a moment ago.

TAVARES: Unless the members of this Convention want me to read that section, I won't say any more. I think that if the section is read on the Hawaiian Homes administration account, it might clear up some questions. Does anybody want to have that read?

DELEGATES: No.

FONG: A little while ago, the delegate from the fifth district, Mr. Mau, my very good friend, stated that the legislature has been very derelict in its duty towards the Hawaiian Homes Commission. Now if I were to sit here without answering the charges made by the chairman of the Deomcratic Party, I would be giving his statements the dignity of truth. Now I want to state to Mr. Mau - - but now Mr. Mau says except in recent years the legislature had been taking very good care of the Hawaiian Homes Commission. You mean in the past two years we have been taking care of the Hawaiian Homes Commission?

MAU: Will you yield for a moment? In my original statement, I said "except in recent years." I want to call the attention to the Convention, however, that the Hawaiian Homes Commission has come to the City and County government in the last four years for money with which, first to construct a water line to feed the Hawaiian Homes Commission lands in Waimanalo. We appropriated $35,000 for that purpose. Again when they opened up Papakolea, they asked us to give them money for their roads and they are asking money to put in lights. The City and County government has nothing to do with the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act or the Hawaiian Homes Commission itself. But you can see that when they needed money, they came to the county government, instead of getting that money either from the Congress of the United States or from the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii.

FONG: I just want to answer Mr. Mau to this extent, that as far as the legislature is concerned, the legislature has been very, very lenient and reasonable with the Hawaiian Homes Commission. I want to state, within the past four years there has been a Hawaiian heading the Finance Committee of the House of Representatives, and Mr. Joseph Andrews is one of the strongest backers of the Hawaiian Homes Commission. I want to state that as far as the House of Representatives is concerned—the senators can answer for themselves—the House of Representatives has been very reasonable to the Hawaiian Homes Commission.

ANTHONY: I'd like to get Assistant Attorney General Rhoda Lewis over here, and therefore I move for a five minute recess.

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

FONG: Mr. Chairman, I have the floor.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong has the floor. Proceed.

FONG: I thought that Mr. Anthony was going to ask me a question.

CHAIRMAN: I thought you were, too. Pardon me.

FONG: I just want to state that sitting here as a delegate from the fifth district, I had to answer Mr. Mau's statement that the legislature has not been fair. And I think the legislature will always be fair to the Hawaiian Homes Commission We have in the - - As far as the legislature is concerned, we have requests from various departments. Every department naturally would like to have more money. It is up to your legislature to distribute the money according to the needs and they can only distribute the amount of money that they receive and I know as far as the Hawaiian Homes Commission, the Hawaiian Homes Commission has received its proportionate share of the Territory's revenue. I think there is no reason why we can't expect as good a treatment for the Hawaiian Homes Commission as they have received in the past.

SILVA: The Senate's record speaks for itself. I don't need any political speeches, but I want to say I'd like to move this time for the previous question.

SMITH: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: We have been discussing the amendment, which has been duly seconded, to delete the last sentence of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 6.

DELEGATE: Roll call.

KAUHANE: Point of information. The previous question has been asked. I now raise a point which I raised previously. I believe that my colleague from the fifth district when he was accorded the floor, namely Delegate Mau, that he expressed the retention of the last sentence which - -

SILVA: I'm afraid my motion is out of order.

KAUHANE: It is not out of order. The previous question has been asked. He specifically stated that he favors the inclusion of this thing, which seconds my motion to table the motion put by Delegate King. The previous question, what is the previous question?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair rules that there was no second to that motion to table.

NIELSEN: A point of order. I think that President King's motion was that we approve the committee proposal deleting that last sentence. So I think that we had better refer to the notes on that.

CHAIRMAN: Will the Secretary refer - -

KING: As I recollect my motion, it was an amendment to the previous motion which was to adopt the committee report. I amended it to read to cut out the last sentence of Section 1; which, if the amendment were adopted, then the original motion would still be before the Convention on final action as amended.

CHAIRMAN: Shall we now put the motion to amend?

APOLIONA: May I ask for a short recess for the Hawaiian Homes Commission to get together.

CHAIRMAN: The question has been called for.

DELEGATE: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: How many are in favor of roll call? Seven. The required ten is not indicated. All those in favor of the amendment please say "aye." Those opposed. Carried.

ASHFORD: The motion was to put the previous question, and the Chair didn't put that motion first. The motion was not - - before the house was not for the amendment. It was whether the previous question should be put.

CHAIRMAN: I stand corrected.

ROBERTS: Point of information. I'd like to know whether the chairman of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Committee favors the deletion of that sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman answer the question?

HAYES: Delegate Roberts, I believe I stated my situation, that I was confused because of not being an attorney, in the first place. In the second place we have had faith and trust in Rhoda Lewis, who has been very kind to us, and maybe the committee should get together again with Rhoda before I could make up my mind as chairman of this committee.

LEE: In view of said confusion, I move that we recess for five minutes. I believe Mr. Anthony has called for Miss Rhoda Lewis to be here and perhaps it might resolve our differences.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

HEEN: I second the motion for the recess.

KING: A point of information. Has the previous question been ordered?

SAKAKIHARA: The Chair would have to put the motion.

KING: The previous question was put by the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: I think I made a mistake and put the amendment, and as a matter of fact, is it not true that the previous question cannot be put in Committee of the Whole?

KING: Well, then the motion for the previous question is still pending if the Chair did not put it.

HEEN: Point of order. A motion to recess is always in order.

KING: My point of information was whether the motion to order the previous question had been put. Now, the Chair put the wrong motion. I'm asking if the motion to order the previous question is still pending. If it is pending, then the gentleman's request for a recess is in order. But I want the parliamentary situation to be clear that there is pending a motion for the previous question.

LEE: Still pending. That is part of the confusion, and it seems to me, therefore, that the motion for recess should be put. It takes precedence of all - -

SILVA: I move that motion be tabled. That is always in order too, Mr. President.

PHILLIPS: I second the motion.

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of recess, please say "aye." Those opposed. The noes have it.

KING: The motion to table that motion to recess will have to be put first. I request the Chair to put first the motion to table the motion to recess.

PORTEUS: Point of order. Am I correct in assuming that the Chair put the question for a recess and that recess lost?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

PORTEUS: Am I not correct in assuming then that the question now before the house is to whether or not the motion to the previous question shall carry?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

PORTEUS: Will the Chairman please put that question to the house, please.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question - -

HEEN: I note that Miss Rhoda Lewis is here and I think it's proper and appropriate at this time that we ask her about her views upon this last sentence.

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

SAKAKIHARA: There is a motion before the Committee of the Whole, motion for previous question which was duly seconded. The Chair has failed to put the motion before the house.

CHAIRMAN: The previous question, as I understand it, is for the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 6.

NIELSEN: The question is, shall we move for the previous question? You put whether the previous question shall be moved for.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the previous question please say "aye." Those opposed. It is carried.

SAKAKIHARA: Now the question is to delete the last sentence of paragraph one.

KING: If those who desire a recess would like to make such a motion now, I would have no objections. The previous question has been ordered now.

LEE: Our feelings have been hurt, but we'll move for a recess just the same.

SAKAKIHARA: I object.

HEEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded for a recess. All those in favor say "aye." Those opposed. The ayes have it.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee please come to order.

KING: As I understand the parliamentary situation, the previous question has been ordered. I voted in favor of the previous question, and I move now to reconsider our action on the previous question. May I state that if we reconsider and cancel the previous question, the committee is about to accept the amendment I proposed as part of their report.

SMITH: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we reconsider the motion for the previous question. All those in favor say "aye." Those opposed. Carried.

MIZUHA: Inasmuch as the committee will submit another amended report, I wish to withdraw my motion for the adoption of the committee report.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been withdrawn.

KING: If it's necessary to clear the situation, Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the amendment I made to his motion. The only thing pending before the Convention -- the committee at this time is the committee report with no motion, and, Madam Chairman, may I request an adoption or approval of the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN: Both the amendment and the motion for adoption have now been withdrawn.

ASHFORD: In the reports of other committees we have not proceeded primarily upon the adoption of the report; we have proceeded upon the separate sections, and I wonder if that wouldn't be a better procedure here.

SILVA: The best method is probably to move for the adoption of the first section of the proposal, of the first proposal, and then discuss that. The latter proposals, we can report progress until it's finished. I move that we approve the first section of the proposal on the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act.

DELEGATE: Deletion.

SILVA: No. No. No.

KING: Well, the committee hasn't deleted that last sentence.

SILVA: No, the first section. The first section has -- does not cover that.

KING: Yes, it does.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, the sentence in question is in the first section.

SILVA: Well, we'll take up the second section then.

CROSSLEY: I would move the adoption of the first section of the committee report with the deletion of the last sentence.

APOLIONA: I second Mr. Crossley's motion.

CHAIRMAN: We have then a motion for the adoption of the first section of Committee Proposal No. 6 with the deletion of the last sentence.

KING: May I speak briefly for the committee—the Madam Chairwoman has asked me to do it—that they approve of that deletion and accept it as an amendment to their committee report.

ASHFORD: I'd like to ask another question concerning this section. In H.R. 49, the requirement is that the compact shall—what is that language?—adopt the Hawaiian Homes Commission as a law of said State subject only to amendment, repeal, so forth. Now the compact contained in Section 2 does not contain that provision and it has been separated into Section 1. What was the purpose of that?

CHAIRMAN: Would some member of the committee answer the question? Delegate Trask.

A. TRASK: That was legal convenience as drafted by Rhoda Lewis of the attorney general's department, to have the adoption of the act in one section and the compact, as the word requires, in the next section and that is the usual form that is used in other constitutions—11 of them—with respect to these other lands. Only this had to be done with respect to what we considered were funds, financial, the fiscal arrangement. In the other constitutional provisions in the other 11 states, they did not have, as we have in Hawaii with respect to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, the budgetary affairs, which may be secure from the legislature, and that's why that provision was made. With reference also to the peculiar arrangement whereby in Hawaii Congress can only amend or repeal certain provisions of the act, whereas the legislature may have access to amend some other provision of the act; whereas in the compact with respect to land, and these other states with respect to Indian lands, there shall be no amendments whatsoever by the state legislature.

ASHFORD: Since the question of Indian lands has come up, I would like to address myself very briefly to that subject. The Indian lands referred to in the various constitutions of the newly created states and compacts with the United States are an entirely different basis from the Hawaiian Homes Commission lands. When we became a part of the United States, the United States had no public lands here except those specifically designated for defense and so forth. The public lands were ceded to the United States and accepted under the Newlands Resolution subject to a trust; that trust was recognized when we became an organized Territory. The lands were put under our administration by the Organic Act. They remained our lands in the control of the United States pending the time we were to be admitted as a state.

Now, the Indian lands are upon a different basis entirely. Those were lands not for specific Indians, they were lands set aside either by treaty with the Indians or by an act of Congress out of the public unappropriated lands of the United States—none of which exists in Hawaii or have ever existed in Hawaii—and always under the control of the United States under the terms of the Constitution and under their absolute title. The terms of the Constitution of the United States provide for the regulation of commerce with the Indian tribes. Those lands were set aside from the control of the state, retained in the United States, and subject to the control of the United States; therefore, there was no infringement of the sovereignty of the state. In this case, however, the trustee of our lands, in returning them to us, is attempting to attach to them terms of trust as though it were the full order. That distinguishes these lands from the lands set aside in the various new states for Indian reservations.

There is another reason for the action of the United States in that regard and one which I, for one, could never accept as applying to the Hawaiian people who had a nation of their own and ran it beautifully for some 50 years. And that is, that the Indians are a simple, ignorant and inferior people.

HAYES: I'd like to say at this minute, that, isn't it true that the reason for the Hawaiian Homes Act as a basic law is because to right a wrong that had been done to the Hawaiian people? Therefore, I would like to move the previous question.

TAVARES: I think there is an answer to the argument just made by the delegate from Molokai. I agree with the statement that ordinarily since the lands are trust lands, Congress would not be reasonable in putting a string on it when it gives it back to us. Unfortunately, we, the beneficiaries, have agreed to that change of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act through our legislature. Not once, but many, many times. And in that respect therefore, we have the situation of the beneficiary having consented to the trustee changing the terms of the trust and I think that the argument, therefore, is not sound.

TRASK: I yield to Mr. Holroyde before any further statement with respect to the statement by the Madam Chairman.

HOLROYDE: I was just going to second her motion for the previous question.

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order. I think the previous question is out of order in Committee of the Whole. I think you pointed out to me this morning under Cushing. Both Roberts and Cushing.

WOOLAWAY: Point of order. I think that under the rules of the Convention, it is in order.

SAKAKIHARA: But this is not a Convention; this is Committee of the Whole.

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair say that having learned some of the rules of putting the previous question, there is still a difference of opinion among the delegates as to whether it's appropriate in the Committee of the Whole.

MAU: I wonder if the committee will consider adding to the list of organizations in support of inclusion of this act, the Democratic Party of Hawaii. Now please don't ask me whether it's the "stand fast" group or the "walk out" group. But two years ago a motion was made before the Central Committee of the Democratic Party, asking that this act be incorporated in the Constitution when it be drafted. I would ask that the report be amended to include the Democratic Party of Hawaii. Is the - - Will the committee agree to that, rather than my making a formal motion?

TAVARES: Point of order. My understanding is that a committee report cannot be amended in this manner.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Mau?

MAU: Well, I understand that there is a motion to adopt the committee report.

A. TRASK: Without identifying myself with any particular group of the Democratic Party, the motion is to the adoption of Section 1 of Proposal No. 6.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. The other motion may have included the committee report, but this has not.

MAU: If you'll look at the records, the original motion was made to adopt the committee report.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct, but it was withdrawn.

MAU: Oh, it was withdrawn.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, sir.

SAKAKIHARA: The reason I ask - -

MAU: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara has the floor.

MAU: Mr. Chairman, I haven't yielded yet.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me. Delegate Mau.

MAU: I'd like to ask the committee whether it had before it in its deliberations any members of the land board or the Commission of Public Land to get information as to the possibilities of public lands of the territory being opened up for agriculture uses through leases to the members of the public? Was any information like that obtained by your committee?

HAYES: That's not our kuleana. The public lands - - the commissioner has that right.

MAU: I understand that, Madam Chairman, but you realize that one of the chief criticisms against incorporation of this act by the opponents is that certain lands ought to be set aside in the territory for small farms. They have a point, and I wondered whether or not the committee in protecting itself and in strengthening its case, dwelled on that subject to report to this Convention that certain commitments or suggestions have been made by the members of the board of public lands.

ASHFORD: Point of personal privilege.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau, did you ask a question and waiting for an answer?

MAU: Yes.

HAYES: We have gone into that situation, Delegate Mau.

MAU: And what is the situation?

HAYES: Well, the situation will be referred back to the public lands and it's a program that we have to work out in the few years to come.

MAU: One other question. Has the Hawaiian Homes Commission itself considered this possibility? Where much of its lands may not be developed for several years, whether they would agree to make such lands available so that the income can be used by the Hawaiian Homes Commission to carry out its work. In other words, whether they have taken into consideration the possibility of making short term leases for agricultural purposes, until the time when they are ready to make use of those lands and develop them.

KING: I rise to a point of order. I dislike to raise a point of order against my colleague from the fifth district; but, nevertheless, he is not talking pertinent to the subject matter here, but the administrative jurisdiction of the Hawaiian Homes Commission and the administrative jurisdiction of the Commission of Public Land, and that subject matter is more or less under the - - that latter part is under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Agriculture, Conservation and Land, and the question they are asking is not pertinent to the subject matter or to the motion that is pending before this Convention.

MAU: I might state - -

KING: We could go along and discuss the entire program of the homesteading and settlement and FHA and everything else and delay action on this particular proposal, which is simply a proposal to adopt into the Constitution of Hawaii the substance of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1920.

MAU: May I be given an opportunity to clear what I'm trying to get at?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau, you still have the floor.

MAU: If an answer is given, there is no question that the committee will strengthen its position and that's the reason for asking these questions.

ASHFORD: A point of personal privilege. The delegate from the fifth district has said the opponents of writing this law into the Constitution do so on the ground that the lands aren't available to all the people. That is not my position at all. My position is twofold. First, that it writes into our Constitution an adoption of the principle that classification by the accident of race is appropriate, which seems to me the most dangerous principle we could possibly accept here. And, second, that the lands granted by the Republic of Hawaii and accepted by the United States, being ceded in trust cannot have trust strings tied to them when they are returned.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau, I, as chairman, rule that this is not germane to the motion which is for the adoption of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 6, with the last sentence deleted.

SAKAKIHARA: I would like to ask the delegate from Molokai a question. She has raised a twofold question here giving her reasons why she feels that this should not be written into the basic law. Does the delegate from Molokai feel that on those grounds that this proposal will be unconstitutional? In your opinion?

ASHFORD: Like another attorney I almost said, "May it please the court."

I think that the requirement by H.R. 49 of entering into a compact with the United States is absolutely invalid. This is land and this is a subject matter over which the United States, if we were a state, would have no control, and in requiring us to enter into such a compact, they diminish our sovereign powers. They, therefore, infringe upon that well settled interpretation of the provisions of the Constitution that new states shall be admitted upon equal terms with the old.

Now, I'll just read you some certain language from the Supreme Court of the United States which in its essence has been repeated often.

> When a new state is admitted into the Union, it is so admitted with all the powers of sovereignty and jurisdiction which pertain to the original states, and such powers may not be constitutionally diminished, impaired or shorn away by any conditions, compacts or stipulations embraced in the act under which the new state came into the Union which would not be valid and effectual if the subject of Congressional legislation after submission. (Coyle vs. Smith, 221 U.S. 559)

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Sakakihara?

SAKAKIHARA: Yes, yes. I have before me, Mr. Chairman, excerpt from Report No. 839, House of Representatives, 66th Congress, Second Session, Rehabilitation of Native Hawaiians, to accompany House Resolution No. 13,500, dated April 15, 1920:

> Constitutionality. In the opinion of your committee there is no constitutional difficulty whatever involved in setting aside and developing lands of the Territory for native Hawaiians only. The privileges and immunities clause of the Constitution, and the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th amendment thereto, are prohibitions having reference to state action only, but even without this defense the legislation is based upon a reasonable and not an arbitrary classification and is thus not unconstitutional class legislation. Further, there are numerous Congressional precedents for such legislation in previous enactments granting Indians and soldiers and sailors special privileges in obtaining and using the public lands. Your committee's opinion is further substantiated by the brief of the attorney general of Hawaii (see Hearings, pages 162-164) and the written opinion of the solicitor of the Department of Interior (see Hearings, pages 130-131.)

I raised the question because I was in a serious doubt as to whether incorporation of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act as a compact with the federal government will be class legislation in the opinion of the Madam Delegate from Molokai.

ASHFORD: Mr. Chairman, may I further answer that statement? In the first place, the opinions of a committee or the opinions of a solicitor general or anything else are just opinions. The Supreme Court is the interpreter of the law, and I think the Supreme Court has interpreted the law.

In the second place, to me, there is no -- as I have said, there is no comparison between Hawaiians and Indians. The Hawaiians are just like any other race and the Indians have been subject in tribal communities to the government of the United States because of inferiority, that is the language of the Supreme Court of the United States.

In the second place, the specific grants by general law to soldiers and sailors is a classification that is based upon service.

HAYES: Since a little -- I mean, since they talked about the Constitution, I'd like to make my own statement in regard to that. Certainly we are here to draft a good constitution. It must be good in the eyes of God and men. A constitution which fails to provide rehabilitation provisions for a native people who have lost the use of their land is not a good constitution no matter in what land this constitution may be devised.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to second the motion for the previous question.

SILVA: Point of information. I'd like to ask the delegate from Molokai, the word "native" deriving from the word "nativity," I just wanted to know what the true definition of the word "native" is. Am I a native of the Hawaiian Islands? Am I a native?

HAYES: I think unquestionably you are, but I do not think you are of the race who was present here when Vancouver and Cook arrived.

SILVA: I'm talking about --

CHAIRMAN: The Chair rules that this discussion is out of order. The previous question has been moved and now seconded.

FUKUSHIMA: I rise to a point of information. What is the motion now?

CHAIRMAN: The motion is for the previous question.

FUKUSHIMA: I mean the original motion, the principal motion.

CHAIRMAN: The principal motion is to adopt the first section of Committee Proposal No. 6, deleting the last sentence thereof.

FUKUSHIMA: Is that --

SILVA: The question was out of order.

FUKUSHIMA: Is that a committee motion or is that the motion by one of the delegates?

A. TRASK: It's the motion by --

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Crossley.

A. TRASK: -- Delegate Crossley of Kauai, seconded by Dr. Apoliona from the fourth district.

FUKUSHIMA: Isn't that motion in the form of an amendment?

CHAIRMAN: No, it is not. The other motions were withdrawn and this is a new motion made.

A. TRASK: The motion as made - -

FUKUSHIMA: Yes, but this is a committee proposal, Mr. Chairman, which has passed first reading.

A. TRASK: The committee as the delegates should know, did meet and the motion as made by Delegate Crossley is a committee proposal as amended, deleting the last sentence of Committee Proposal No. 6.

FUKUSHIMA: If that is so, that's not a proper procedure because Committee Proposal No. 6 as drafted and as before us now has passed first reading. And this is upon second reading and it's before the Committee of the Whole. If it's an amendment, it should be an amendment to the committee proposal and not as a committee proposal - - a committee amendment.

CROSSLEY: For the delegate's information, I made that motion because I understood that they wanted to take this entire proposal up section by section, but if it's caused any confusion, I'll withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion then to adopt this has been withdrawn, and the second has withdrawn his second leaving nothing before the committee at the present moment.

A. TRASK: At this time, on behalf of and at the suggestion of Madam Chairman Flora Hayes, the committee desires to amend Committee Proposal No. 6 by deleting the last sentence thereof of this first section reading as follows: "Such appropriations for administration expenses of the Hawaiian Homes Commission shall never be less than, after due consideration of the receipts applicable to such expenses from the Hawaiian Homes lands, will accord said commission equal treatment with other departments of the State in the funds available for its administration expenses."

NIELSEN: Well, I thought the proper procedure was to vote on the amend - - make the motion to adopt the section; then let someone amend it deleting that; then vote on the amendment and then on the section. I think that's the proper procedure.

CHAIRMAN: Will Delegate Trask withdraw his motion in order to - -

A. TRASK: That was my motion, that the last sentence thereof be deleted, and I did name expressly that the - -

CHAIRMAN: Has that motion been seconded?

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we amend Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 6 by deleting the last sentence thereof - -

A. TRASK: Of Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: - - of Section 1.

NIELSEN: There's nothing before the house right now.

TAVARES: In spite of all of this monkey business about procedure, isn't the question now this? That we move that when this committee rises, if it adopts Section 1, it recommend that the sentence in question be deleted. Wouldn't that be the proper motion?

HAYES: Thank you. That's just what I was going to say.

ANTHONY: I think most of the delegates are in agreement that the last sentence should be deleted. It seems to me that the appropriate procedure would be to move that the section be adopted. When that has been done, then there can be a motion to amend that motion to delete the last sentence; then you can vote on the amendment and the decks will be cleared. In order to make the - - clear the ground, therefore, I move that the section be adopted. Section 1.

DELEGATE: I'll second that.

BRYAN: May I rise to a point of information? Is it not the committee intent that they actually amend their proposal, so that what is before the house now is the adoption of Section 1 as the committee proposes it? And as they propose it, they leave off the last sentence. I think that's the point that - -

CHAIRMAN: In view of the technical points being raised, Delegate Trask, will you withdraw your motion so that we can get this before the committee?

A. TRASK: Expeditiously, yes.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony has moved that - -

A. TRASK: And I second Delegate Anthony's motion.

ANTHONY: I move that Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 6 be adopted.

A. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 6 be adopted. All those in favor say "aye."

KAUHANE: Mr. Chairman.

NIELSEN: Wait a minute.

KING: Mr. Chairman.

CROSSLEY: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman.

KING: That was merely to put the section before the Convention.

CROSSLEY: I move an amendment to the previous motion. I move that it be amended to delete the last sentence.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: We have now a motion to amend the original motion by deleting the last sentence to the first section of Committee Proposal No. 6.

DELEGATES: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Question has been called for. All those in favor of the motion to amend please say "aye." Those opposed. It is carried.

HAYES: I move Section 2.

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman.

APOLIONA: Mr. Chairman.

DELEGATE: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Hayes has the floor, unless you wish to relinquish it.

HAYES: I believe that we go on with Section 2.

NIELSEN: Point of order.

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. Point of order.

APOLIONA: Mr. Chairman.

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: I believe we've already acted on the motion to take them one at a time.

SAKAKIHARA: Now, therefore - -

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara. State your point.

SAKAKIHARA: Since the motion to amend carried, the proposal as amended must be adopted.

APOLIONA: At this time I move the adoption of Section 1 as amended.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded for the adoption of Section 1 of this proposal as amended.

KELLERMAN: Am I correct in my interpretation of these two sections, that Section 1 writes into the Constitution the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act as a law and that Section 2 makes a compact with the United States to write it into the Constitution as a law? Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: Will some member of the committee answer? Delegate Trask.

HAYES: It's my understanding that that is correct, compact with United States. Otherwise, we are making a treaty with the United States. The word "compact" would be a treaty.

KELLERMAN: May I ask a second question then? Why is it necessary to adopt one section writing into the Constitution the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act as a law and making a -- then adopting a second section agreeing with the United States government under compact to write it in as a law? It seems to me that we're doing the same thing twice and it would have the following consequences. Should there eventually be a change in the compact agreement, you still have the Constitution to deal with and certain provisions which are written into the Constitution which are not subject to amendment. You therefore have to amend the Constitution in addition to altering your compact agreement. Now is that the understanding and desire of this Convention to adopt -- Is it the understanding of the Convention that we are adopting the act as a law in the Constitution, which then would require an amendment of the Constitution to change it? Certainly this sentence just preceding the sentence that has just been deleted is an outright provision. It does not refer to amendment by the legislature or the Congress. In the second place, we are agreeing with the Congress to enter into a compact to adopt it as a law, and that compact could be changed with the consent of the United States. Now it seems to me we're getting unnecessarily involved in having it in the Constitution in one section and subject to the compact in the second section. I'd like to have that explained, any reason why that complicated procedure must be followed. It seems to be totally unnecessary and restricting any possible action that may be made, in some instances, even to amend the compact, because it's in the Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: A question has been put to the Chair.

HAYES: Delegate King will answer that, Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: The purpose of the proposal is twofold. One, the first section will embody the act in the Constitution. Standing alone, if that were just in the Constitution and nothing more, then by a subsequent action of subsequent conventions that section could be repealed. As I understand the draftsman, in order to remove that difficulty they have gone one step further and said, not only shall it be written into the Constitution, but there shall be a compact with the United States. Now, what Delegate Kellerman is concerned about is the necessity of the two sections. I as a lawyer don't think that two sections are necessary; the compact would be sufficient. But the purpose in having it in two sections, as I understand it, is, one, to put it in the Constitution, and that is not sufficient because a subsequent convention might change it. So they have added a second section which would require the entry of a compact between the United States and the State providing that it could not be changed without the consent of the Congress.

TAVARES: I think one further explanation will clear this up. If you will read Section 1 carefully, it has this proviso: "Provided further that if the United States shall have provided or shall provide that particular provisions or types of provisions of said act may be amended in the manner required for ordinary state legislation, such provisions or types of provisions may be so amended." That takes all the pilikia out of the situation, because if Congress in the future consents to have us amend that act, then we can amend it and we don't need to amend our Constitution.

HAYES: I was just going to say that that section complies with the apparent will of Congress and continues the recognition by the people of Hawaii of the justice of the original enactment of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act as of 1920. That is my interpretation from the attorney general's office.

KELLERMAN: It seems to me that this first section is unnecessary and it may get us in trouble. It looks to me like an open-end agreement that even after we have become a state and have entered into a compact as a condition precedent to becoming as a state, that we are agreeing that we may still abide by and consent to, in advance, provisions that subsequent legislation of Congress may request us to abide by under the terms of that compact. As I see it, that would be clearly unconstitutional and not what we intend to do. As far as I can see we are getting in trouble in the first section and this matter would be entirely cleared up if the provisions of the first section insofar as are required by Act 49, were incorporated in the second section, which is the compact section. For that reason when the vote is taken, I shall vote against Section 1, although I am not opposed to the compact on the subject matter involved.

PHILLIPS: I might point out here that during one of the committee meetings in Public Lands it was pointed out that there is constitutional interpretation on this business of bringing -- of letting a state into the Union under terms that were unequal with other states as they entered the Union. I refer specifically to Coyle vs. Smith in which a compact was made with the Congress whereby, I believe it was, the capital was at Guthrie, and it was agreed that for the next ten years the capital would not be moved from Guthrie, either ten or 20 years. Immediately after Oklahoma got its statehood, they proceeded to move the capital from Guthrie to Oklahoma City, where it is situated today. The decision on that in court was that there was no other state had been permitted to enter the Union under such conditions, and thereby they rendered it void. The same thing I believe applies here.

I believe it's an answer to Delegate Kellerman's question, and that is that Section 2 is at best just redundant. It wouldn't assure anybody of anything. There is no way we could insure a compact with the Congress to do something on the condition that we let -- that on the one hand we let Hawaii into the Union; and then, secondly, the Congress, because of the reserved powers, would not have any way of enforcing that after we did get into it. So it would be useless to have this redundant section even attached here. Section 1 covers everything.

MIZUHA: I move the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made for the previous question and seconded. All those in favor say "aye." Those opposed. Carried.

The question then before the committee is, as I understand it, for the adoption of Section I of Committee Proposal 6 as amended. All those in favor say "aye." Those opposed. Carried.

HAYES: I'd like to move for the adoption of Section 2.

HOLROYDE: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded for the adoption of Section 2 of Committee Proposal 6. Question has been called for.

TAVARES: I assume that since the committee members have agreed to numbering this section as Section 2, that the blank space in there should be filled in with a number one, and I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded to insert the number one in the fifth line of the second section.

CROSSLEY: It was my understanding that these sections were numbered one and two only for the convenience of speaking on them today. Is that correct?

TAVARES: Then, for purposes of the record, let it be understood that that blank space refers to the preceding section.

CHAIRMAN: Do you then withdraw your motion and leave it to the Committee on Style?

TAVARES: I withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: And the second?
We have then before us the adoption of the second section of Committee Proposal 6. All those in favor say "aye." Those opposed. It is carried.

HAYES: I move that the Committee of Whole report progress on Proposal No. 6 and the committee report - -

CHAIRMAN: We have the committee report.

HAYES: I move for the adoption of the committee report and the Proposal No. 6 as amended.

APOLIONA: I second Madam Chairman's motion.

TAVARES: In speaking against that motion, I should like to point out that it will be irregular. What we did with respect to the first health amendment was this. We prepared a Committee of the Whole report and we asked that the original report be filed and the Committee of the Whole report be adopted. This way, you are amending the report and I don't think that would be regular. I think that procedure should be followed and that the motion should be that this committee rise, report progress, ask leave to sit again; and in the meantime prepare a written report.

HAYES: I accept that. Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN: I understand you have withdrawn your motion and the second and that we have Delegate Tavares' motion.

SAKAKIHARA: I'll second Delegate Tavares' motion.

CHAIRMAN: That the Committee of the whole rise, report progress, and beg leave to sit again. Question. All those in favor of that motion please say "aye." Those opposed. It's carried.

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole please come to order. You will find a copy of the report of the Committee of the Whole, No. 3, attached to the agenda for the day.

HAYES: Many of the members don't seem to have their copies of the committee report and they are going over it now to try and locate it.

MAU: I move we take a recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that we take a recess subject to the call of the Chair. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. It is carried.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to call your attention to the need for a correction in the Committee of the Whole Report No. 3. Under numbered paragraph No. 1, which reads, "Begs leave to report that it has had the same under consideration and recommends: (1) that Standing Committee Report No. 33 be filed and its recommendations adopted," we should insert there, "with the exception of the recommendation as to Committee Proposal No. 6."

PORTEUS: I think the announcement by the chairman, since this is his report of that amendment, that no action is necessary by the Committee of the Whole as to the particular amendment and I think it's now in order for the chairman of the Committee on Hawaiian Homes Commission Act to move the adoption or the approval of your report.

HAYES: I so move, that we adopt the report of the chairman.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the Committee of the Whole Report No. 3 on the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act be adopted in accordance - - as amended by the Chair. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion say "aye." Those opposed. It's carried.

PORTEUS: I think under these circumstances that was equivalent to a motion that this committee now rise and the chairman then report to the Convention that the committee recommends the adoption of the committee report as presented by the chairman. I think it's now time for the committee to rise, if there's no objection.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that the committee now rise, having finished its work. All those in favor say "aye." Those opposed. Carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on

INDUSTRY AND LABOR

(Article XII)

Chairman: HAROLD W. RICE

JUNE 23, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: The committee sit at ease. What is the pleasure of the committee?

SAKAKIHARA: Will the chairman remove his coat so we could feel at ease.

CHAIRMAN: A little cold this morning.

PORTEUS: May I suggest to the delegates that the proposal number is 28, for their convenience, and that the standing committee report is 79.

CHAIRMAN: 79 and - -

PORTEUS: And 81.

CHAIRMAN: That's right. What is the pleasure of the committee?

MAU: Are we ready to proceed?

CHAIRMAN: We're ready.

MAU: I have the rather doubtful distinction of presenting the committee report. I think this committee report is unique in this Convention. The Committee on Industry and Labor is composed of 11 members. The majority report is signed by nine of the 11; there is a minority report signed by one of the members; and one member has signed neither majority nor minority report. Of the nine signing the majority report, four have filed an appendix stating their reasons why the right to organize and to bargain collectively should be placed in the Constitution—four out of nine. Five out of the nine, however, have also filed an appendix giving the reasons why this right should not be placed in the Constitution. I think in order to proceed as rapidly as possible, I would like to read the language of Committee Proposal No. 28 as supported by the nine members of the committee.

> Industry and Labor. Persons in private employment shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining, as prescribed by law. Persons in public employment shall have the right to organize, to present to and make known to the State, or any of its political subdivisions or agencies, their grievances and proposals.

To get along, I move at this time that Committee Proposal No. 28 be tentatively agreed to.

CROSSLEY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: You've heard the motion. Discussion?

MAU: We'd like to have the wolves get after this proposal right now.

ARASHIRO: I wish to offer an amendment at this time to - - at this time offer an amendment to delete the last four words of the proposal which read as follows, "as prescribed by law."

DELEGATE: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: That also would include a period after the word "bargaining" I think. The motion has been made and seconded to take out the words "as prescribed by law" in the third line and put a period after the word "bargaining."

LARSEN: I'd like to speak against the amendment. The committee went into great deal of discussion - -

HEEN: I rise to a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Point of information.

HEEN: I'd like to find out whether the comma still remains after "bargaining."

CHAIRMAN: No, they took it out and put a period after the word "bargaining."

HEEN: I didn't hear that.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, it was amended that way.

LARSEN: Most of the members recognized that this was merely a principle of government under which we are now serving, that labor does have a right to organize and labor has been given the right to bargain collectively. There were two groups of labor, one who accepted the principle as indicated here because they recognized that those neutral citizens who spoke before us wanted to show the community by this, "as prescribed by law," that neither industry nor labor should have full rights to go ahead on this principle without recognizing they were controlled by law in such a way that the neutral should not be abused. The neutrals were willing to accept that. Industry members, who felt strongly that this did not belong in the Constitution, finally were also agreed because they wanted to go with the majority or with the other two groups. They were willing to leave it in the Constitution if this little restrictive clause was left there.

Because these various groups were willing to sign if the clause were left in, I believe it should be left in, in recognizing the will of a large number of citizens who are concerned. This one small group, who have been an aggressive group, seemed to indicate during all their discussions that they weren't so concerned with majority opinion as they were of their own rights. And, therefore, they insisted and were not willing to reach this point of compromise. Doctor Roberts very well defined compromise as that small area where two groups who are definitely opposed can find some area of common agreement. The common agreement was reached by this clause.

However, this small aggressive group, who did not want to work with the majority, they insisted on their way or not at all. Since this is a compromise and since it isn't necessary actually, but since it was put in because it was a bow to a large group of citizens of the community who have worked hard and - - I think all the committee members felt, that labor - - we are hoping that all elements of labor will some day feel they are one and part of this same team, that they are playing on the same team, that they are working together, that we don't have chips on our shoulders. But we must recognize that unless labor and industry work together in harmony, even with disagreement, but willing to compromise because they can find areas of agreement, that unless we find this spirit of harmony between labor and industry, the community cannot progress well. And certain groups of labor accepted this principle. Industry accepted the principle, and we are hoping some day that this small group will also accept the principle, that they will play on the same team and not behave like the spoiled child who is not willing to give and forgive and forget. And, therefore, since this was a compromise, I urge strongly that we leave the clause in, and the reasons for it have been given. Thank you.

ARASHIRO: May I explain the reasons for my deletion of that word, "as prescribed by law," as has been submitted in Proposal 20. It says, "Persons in private employment shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining, as prescribed by law." When we say that, the right to organize and bargain collectively is recognized and yet it is not recognized, or it is not given until it is prescribed by law. It is like saying that you have the right to cross the street, but the right does not exist there until we have written a law stating that or describing that you now have the right to cross the street. But, if some other term can be used besides "prescribed by law," I may agree that it is a compromise and the intention of trying to regulate the right of collective bargaining; if it was written in such manner that the wording would be written that you have the right to cross the street but that the regulation we may initiate may be that you have to look on both sides of the street before crossing for your safety. But "as prescribed by law," to me does not mean that, and that that right does not exist until it is written in the law.

If you will look into Appendix No. 2, Minority Report, and on page 2, the report reads that "We oppose the inclusion of any such provision because we believe that it is apt to be construed by the courts to place limitations upon the regulatory power of the legislature to a degree adverse to the best interests of the public," and . . . [part of statement not recorded.]

. . . it was proposed to write into the Constitution a provision that persons in private employment shall not have the right to organize and bargain collectively. If it was the intent of the now -- as it has been written in this report, it says the minority but as it now stands, it is a majority report and I will refer to it as the majority report—that this majority first was opposed to the insertion of the right to organize and bargain collectively, but they have finally agreed that "as prescribed by law," is a compromise and under that condition they were willing to have this section written into the Constitution.

It goes on further and it says that "as prescribed by law" is meaningless. If it's meaningless, then I do not think there should be any objection as to the deletion of "as prescribed by law." But, I'm quite definite and positively sure that there is a meaning to "as prescribed by law." To me, that is not just mere language to regulate but language to restrict. And not only to restrict, but there might be a danger in the future if and when the legislature may be composed of a majority of labor representatives; then, if and when the labor representatives should write into our statute that you have the right to strike, but strike shall be limited to 30 days, and after 30 days the parties in dispute shall be forced to go into compulsory arbitration, then what would happen? Or other legislation that might hurt industry. In that case, the constitutionality, I feel, cannot be challenged because the law in itself is part of the Constitution because of the language "as prescribed by law" will mean that it is part of the Constitution.

Now, the part that says that the right to organize is a recognized issue and there need not be anything written into the Constitution to show that recognition; but, when our Constitution of the United States was written, I do think that the freedom of speech, the freedom of the press, the freedom of religion were recognized then, and that did not mean that because they recognized those freedoms, that those freedoms did not have to be written into the Constitution.

Furthermore, in our committee meeting they said that this collective bargaining should be regulated to some extent because there might be some danger. But I don't think there is any danger if we should insert a period after "organize," because that will leave a broad statement and when we leave a broad statement that does not restrict our legislature from trying to regulate that right. In fact, Amendment One of our Federal Constitution reads, "The Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petitition the government for the redress of grievances." It says that the Congress will not abridge. Over here it only says that "persons in private employment shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining." It doesn't say -- there is no such word as abridgment or abridging. We still are only giving them that right to organize and bargain collectively as long as they bargain within the laws. I think there must be some sort of a law that will regulate these rights and I do not see any danger at this time.

Now in the committee it was pointed out that it might discriminate the minority in the group. I do not see how it can discriminate. You discriminate people when you do not share with them, and you penalize them, but whatever things that labor organizations gain in any negotiation goes for all the employees, and they are not discriminated. None of these non-union members who refuse to become union members have refused to accept any gains made by labor organizations, and I do not think they are being discriminated against in any way. In reference to the discrimination, in freedom of religion, I do not think that the people who do not go to church are being discriminated because the right of freedom of religion has been given to the people.

And another thing, freedom of the press. It says in this report that this should not be in the Constitution because "'persons in private employment' constitute only a segregated group of the people for whom the Constitution is being written. Why should they be singled out for special treatment?" As far as collective bargaining goes, who are we going to refer to? We cannot refer to lawyers' associations or doctors' associations or any other group because collective bargaining only exists in this segregated group. When you say employees and employers, it only refers to employees, and that is -- in reference to that, when we say freedom of the press it only refers to people who operate the press and the people who want to use the press. But how about those people who do not use the press or are not part of the press?

So I do not think that when we write in such a clause in the Constitition, [it] is segregating any particular group, because when we refer to collective bargaining we are referring to a specific group.

Now the right to organize and bargain collectively is in the new constitutions of the states and those constitutions do not say that the right is to organize and bargain collectively "as prescribed by law." So I feel there is no need for the words, "as prescribed by law," but I probably might compromise on some other word whose language will clarify the issue to me that the right will exist and that right can be regulated in some manner, but not that the right is not there until it is written in the law.

LUIZ: I would like a definition from the "supreme court" of the Convention here as to the definition of "as prescribed by law," referring to this Committee [Proposal] No. 28 here, Industry and Labor. Just what does it mean? What does it mean in this section?

LARSEN: While they are thinking that out, may I make one correction of the previous speaker and that is those labor groups who were not unionized accepted certain gains but they also recognized certain losses. They recognized the loss of freedom to choose a job wherever they wanted it; they recognized that they also lost their right to live without fear; they also recognized that the minority no longer had a right to speak up for themselves. These are certain losses that certain people want. However, we still feel it should be included as a bow to that group of labor who feels we should recognize they do play on this team of general community betterment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Frank Silva has asked a question -- Frank Luiz, excuse me, I didn't mean that. Dr. Roberts is recognized.

ROBERTS: I do not belong to the "supreme court," but I'd like to venture an answer in part to that question. As we discussed this problem in the Industry and Labor Committee, it certainly was not the intent of the committee, and it should not be construed by this Convention nor should the records show, that "as prescribed by law" means that the right to organize and bargain collectively does not exist until the legislature prescribes and recognizes that right. That was not the intent of the committee. The language as put in the constitutional section proposed by the committee to the Convention means that there may be reasonable regulation by the legislature, reasonable regulation by the legislature and no more. It recognizes the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining as a matter of policy. It does not mean that the legislature can take that right away, to remove that right. It means that when a problem arises and when the term "collective bargaining" is defined, that the legislature has certain responsibilities and "by law" means that it must be reasonable legislation by law.

LUIZ: Here again we run into the same trouble where the word "reasonable" is mentioned. The Supreme Court today has not ruled on the word "reasonable." Then we are up the same tree, "as prescribed by law" and then the word "reasonable."

BRYAN: One of the previous speakers asked if the words "as prescribed by law" meant anything; and if it did not, why should it be in there. Those words mean something to me. I agreed with some of the delegates in the committee that it would be impossible in a constitutional provision to adequately define those words, "collective bargaining." The meaning that I attach to the words "prescribed by law" means that bargaining collectively or collective bargaining will be defined by the statutes, because it's very unreasonable to expect a constitutional provision to define collective bargaining. The definition is not static; it has changed many times in the last few years; it may change in the future; and those words are in there for that reason, and I think it is not unreasonable to leave them there for that purpose.

ASHFORD: I'd like to call the attention of the delegates to the fact that I think there is a real point being made here. That is, "as prescribed by law" is a very much more intense and mandatory expression than the clause we have used frequently before in other articles, "in accordance with law."

CROSSLEY: I would like to speak against the amendment to delete the last four words of the committee proposal. When this committee first began its deliberations some weeks back, a number of us felt that there should be no inclusion spelled out of such a right in the Constitution. Now we felt this way because there already exists in the Constitution the right to make a contract. The freedom of contract is a right to all the people. Bargaining is not now and never has been illegal. Therefore, collective bargaining is not now and never has been illegal. If it was not illegal, then why write it in. The proponents of writing such a clause in said that if it already exists, then what is the reason for not restating it. The debate went on that subject for a considerable time, and the fears that were expressed were that while the right existed there also existed the right of regulation, and, therefore, if we wrote into the Constitution such a clause, such a section, without spelling it out even further, it might be as though we were saying just that and that it was an absolute right. Now, no rights are absolute, not even the right of free speech. Therefore, we felt that inasmuch as a very narrow majority, a six to five majority had said that there should be a provision included in the Constitution, that we would go along with the majority providing our fears were also protected.

Now on the one hand, these people had said that the only way that they thought they can get the right to organize and bargain collectively without going to the Supreme Court for a test was to write into the Constitution those words. If they already existed, then we would save them a lot of time in proving their point. By the same token, we said to them that if the right is subject to regulation and that is understood, then we want the same consideration that we will give you and that will be that the right is subject to regulation and that regulation is "as prescribed by law."

The next step was a definition of those two terms, "regulation in the public interest," or "as prescribed by law." It was the feeling, I believe, of a majority that "as prescribed by law" was a more simple mandate, a more simple term; that in defining in the courts "as prescribed by law" any regulation, it would first be determined as to whether or not -- or it would be determined rather, in making that determination, whether it was reasonable and in the public interest.

On the other hand, if the section read "regulated in the public interest," that would possibly be two definitions. One, was the law itself constitutional; two, was it in the public interest and reasonable regulation? Therefore, in making a determination of only one thing, the law itself, "as prescribed by law," all of the other things would be accomplished at the same time.

Mr. Chairman, this morning we had read to us a letter from the Central Labor Council asking that this be included in the Committee of the Whole discussions and, to comply with their request, I would like at this time to introduce the letter which they have offered to be made part of the record.

Now one of the previous speakers said the Constitution might say you have the right to cross the street, but if they add "as prescribed by law," you might be prohibited from crossing the street. I can't agree with that. The law could only say, as it does today, that you can't jaywalk, that you can't endanger your own life as well as jeopardize the rights and lives of others. To me, that's what "as prescribed by law" means. It means simply that you have the right to organize and bargain collectively, but you must do it in the interests of all people. Not a small group, a minority group, a class group, or any selected group. It must be done in the interest of a majority of the people.

I believe that I have answered most of the questions raised by one of the previous speakers. I have stated our own position; and, therefore, I would ask that this Convention vote against the amendment to delete the four words, so that the proposal as submitted by nine of the 11 members of this committee be adopted.

NIELSEN: I'd just like to have Delegate Crossley read the part of the letter he submitted in evidence and quote from it where they say that "as provided by law," they requested that that be included.

SILVA: I don't remember Mr. Crossley saying that. I don't remember Mr. Crossley saying anything to that effect. But I would like to say this -- I still have the floor, Mr. Nielsen, I have been recognized.

NIELSEN: Well, you were answering my question when I --

SILVA: I have the floor, if you don't mind.

NIELSEN: I'll let the Chairman rule.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva, Charles Silva, has the floor.

SILVA: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I want Mr. Nielsen to take note.

I would like to state at this moment that it would seem to me that, as pointed out by Miss Ashford, that the words "as prescribed by law" would give the impression that this Convention inserted those words with the idea of showing a little prejudice against any organization organizing for collective bargaining. It would seem to me that, even without those words, the legislature has the right to regulate. It does not in any way prevent the legislature from creating laws to regulate labor, as long as they do not infringe on the right of collective bargaining. How they are to enter into collective bargaining can be prescribed by law.

Personally the arguments for leaving the words "as prescribed by law" within the Constitution in a section on labor, in my opinion would give the impression that we entered into these halls with the idea of deliberately pointing our finger at organized labor, which I believe is not the intent. I think the legislature will have the power.

I opposed this amendment -- this proposal in the Bill of Rights. I thought that was not the place for it, and I at that time stated that it should be placed in another part of our Constitution. I see no reason why those words should be inserted unless it can be pointed out to me more clearly that it does not show that it is the intent of the committee to specifically point to any organization that enters into collective bargaining that the Constitution shows that it must be or almost "as prescribed by law." I think the legislature has that right as is, as pointed out by Central Labor Council's letter this morning.

DOI: I would like to speak in favor of the motion. The proponents of the committee proposals have stated that they recognize the principle of collective bargaining. Another proponent has also stated that there is no right in the Constitution which is absolute. Yet the same speaker has gone on to say that should we put in a clause for collective bargaining without limiting it, he is afraid that the courts -- the legislature might construe it as being an absolute right. I cannot see the reasoning, that type of reasoning. The right of free speech, press, they all are subject to reasonable regulation. They are rights, I believe some of us would say, are more fundamental than this right of collective bargaining, and much older and yet they are all subject to reasonable regulation. In our Bill of Rights article, we made no limitation as to these rights; we assume that they are subject to reasonable regulation. I see no reason for the limitation placed by the committee. In fact, the limitation as placed, I agree with the delegate from Molokai, is too restrictive.

MIZUHA: I am in favor of the deletion of the four words, "as prescribed by law." In the statement, or in the article on the Bill of Rights as noted by the previous speaker, we have listed some of the fundamental inherent rights of the citizenry of our country, and nowhere in the Bill of Rights, as far as I can recall, have we limited those rights by the phraseology, "as prescribed by law." If the Convention delegates here assembled believe that the right to organize and bargain collectively has in the history of our country developed to such an extent as being part and parcel of the philosophy of our industrial organizations and their relationships with the working classes, now is the time for us to recognize that right.

Hence, I am in favor of the deletion of those words, "as prescribed by law" because by the very insertion of those four words, the right will be limited by legislative action to any extent, and it will take years and years of litigation to determine how far the legislature could go in regulating collective bargaining.

OKINO: I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Labor and Industry two questions. I recognize in your committee report on page 7 the following statement: "The right to organize and to bargain collectively is recognized in national policy, both under the Wagner Act and under the Taft-Hartley Act. The right has been recognized by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States." My first question is, is there any similar provision in the constitutions of any other of the 48 states?

MAU: The answer is no, insofar as those four little words are concerned. The constitutions of the states of New York, New Jersey and Missouri, on the right to organize merely read, "All persons in private employment shall have the right to organize and to bargain collectively."

OKINO: Mr. Chairman of the Labor and Industry Committee, if the clause "as prescribed by law" is deleted from this proposed section, would it, as a matter of law, deprive the legislature from enacting any regulatory legislation covering this?

MAU: May I ask the speaker to restate his question? I couldn't get the question.

OKINO: My second question is this, Delegate Mau. If the clause "as prescribed by law" is deleted from this section, would it, as a matter of law, deprive the legislature from enacting any reasonable regulatory legislation?

MAU: The answer is obviously no, as has been covered by the debate and by the Supreme Court decision of the United States. Even the right to the press and free speech can be reasonably regulated. There's no question about that.

CROSSLEY: Mr. Chairman.

MAU: Mr. Chairman, I rise to --

CHAIRMAN: The chairman has the floor. Mr. Mau.

MAU: I'll let Delegate Crossley -- I yield to Delegate Crossley.

CROSSLEY: As I understood the first question of the delegate from Hawaii, it was whether or not the right to organize and bargain collectively was in any state constitution. Is that right, Delegate Okino?

OKINO: Yes, I merely wanted to know if there were --

CROSSLEY: Now, the answer from the Chair was not a "yes" or "no" on that question, but the answer of the Chair was, "not with those four little words." Now it seems to me that either we can play fair ball on this thing and answer the questions as they are put, or we can do our own interpolation, in which case, why then I would have to get up on a point of order and say that the question was not answered as it was asked.

MAU: I'd like to ask Delegate Okino to restate again his first question.

OKINO: My first question was if there are any similar provisions as your committee has proposed in the constitution of any one of the 48.

MAU: As proposed?

OKINO: As proposed.

MAU: I want to speak on a point of personal privilege. The gentleman from Kauai came up here in private to talk to me and in rather bitter tones and a cross face saying that I had misinterpreted that question and put in an answer -- words in my answer --

CROSSLEY: Point of order.

MAU: This is a matter of personal privilege, Mr. Chairman.

CROSSLEY: I am raising a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Mau is still recognized. He's not through.

MAU: And I assume that he came up here with that attitude because I'm chairman of this committee. It is for that reason I have not as yet entered into any debate. I am supporting the proposal of the committee, but if anybody attempts to dictate to me they have a long ways to go. That means both sides of the fence. I don't take any kind of threats, whether they be from the extreme left or the extreme right. I am going to conduct myself in what I consider the best, in my best judgment, for the interest of the community and it will be that way always.

CROSSLEY: Point of personal privilege.

CHAIRMAN: State it.

CROSSLEY: I did not threaten the chairman or even try to intimidate him, and the statement he has just made is absolutely wrong. I went up to him and I stated that the question was asked and I didn't think he had answered it fairly. There was no bitterness; there was no heat; I wanted to find out how this was going to be conducted. I would like the Clerk to read the original question because I got the words "collective bargaining" in the original question of Delegate Okino. If he stated his original question, as he restated it to the chairman, I'll apologize most humbly because then I misunderstood the question; but as I understood the first question, it was, "Do they have the right to organize and bargain collectively?"

HEEN: According to the debate so far, all sides seem to concede that there is a right to bargain collectively. Just wondering whether or not this language might take care of this situation.

CHAIRMAN: Take this down separately, Clerk.

HEEN: After the word "bargaining," insert "such right to be exercised in accordance with law," that phrase to be substituted for the phrase, "as prescribed by law."

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is keeping a roster of the speakers, and he expects to have all the members who want to be heard on this subject be heard before we enter into any debate.

HEEN: That sentence was not - -

CHAIRMAN: That's an amendment? Did you suggest - -

HEEN: I haven't offered it as an amendment yet, but I don't know whether or not it might clear up the situation. If that clause suggested by me is substituted for the clause reading, "as prescribed by law," then that sentence would read:

> Persons in private employment shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining, such right to be exercised in accordance with law.

I move that as an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen has offered an amendment. Any second? Delegate Hayes has seconded the amendment. Do you want to talk on the original proposal or amendment?

KELLERMAN: I should like to speak against both the amendments because I think what I have to say goes to both; first, the amendment to delete the phrase as "prescribed by law"; second, the proposed amendment, to insert the words "such right to be exercised in accordance with law." I think it essential to retain the original four words because I think the crux of the matter is in the definition rather than regulatory power. What do you mean by the language "the right to organize and bargain collectively"? We have accepted the fact that all people have a basic right to organize for purposes not unlawful as being a right we were born with, an inherent right, but to bargain collectively is a right that has been - - is to be exercised by statute definition. The big Wagner Act, our own little Wagner Act, the Taft-Hartley Act go into great detail to explain the method of collective bargaining. Collective bargaining is not a right; it's a tool, and the tool has been defined by statute.

Now if you don't have a definition of the tool, how can you say that you will grant the "right to be exercised in accordance with law," when the law, as I see it, must define what the right actually is. For instance, the Supreme Court of the State - - the Court of Appeals of the State of New York and the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri, in both of which constitutions have the right to organize and bargain collectively without the four additional words, those courts have both held that it was assumed there was no intention to render unconstitutional existing statutes and therefore, they would construe the meaning of the language in the meaning of the existing statutes of those states' own labor regulation.

That seems to me to point up a very pertinent question. Suppose circumstances arise whereby it becomes definitely a matter necessary to the public interest to alter materially the meaning of the language, "right to bargain collectively." Suppose labor in a certain group attains such a monopoly over a full industry that it becomes as harmful to the public as the public has decreed such monopolies to be harmful when held entirely by industry, by management. We have restricted managements power to monopolize an industry against the public interests. To date there is no labor legislation in the United States which forbids monopolistic control by a union over a full industry. However, we have been faced repeatedly in the last few years with the ill effects of such a monopoly in the hands of the coal union, being exercised by Mr. Lewis, John L. Lewis. There is now before the Congress a restudy of the Taft-Hartley Act with the possibility and the direction of writing possibly into that act, certainly altering the provisions to amend that act, to rule out the right of any labor organization to bargain collectively, where that means bargain collectively for an entire industry which would be a monopoly over that industry.

I submit that such a change in the concept of the language of collective bargaining would be a material change, a concept which is not now in existence in any labor legislation in the United States, and I think it goes to the definition of the term "collective bargaining." It does not go to the regulation of the method of exercising a pre-defined term, "collective bargaining." It actually changes its scope or its concept materially. It is my opinion that if the Taft-Hartley Act were amended to declare illegal monopolistic control by collective bargaining of a full industry, if we adopted this language in our Constitution without the four words added, and our Constitution were adopted before that change is made in the Taft-Hartley Act, it would be very likely, and I think a court would be entirely consistent in ruling that such a change could not be made in our little Wagner Act to conform with that material change of concept that would then be incorporated in the Taft-Hartley law.

I don't think we want to preclude our legislature from redefining the language of collective bargaining as the ever changing relationships of industry and labor present themselves. After all, we are here to write a Constitution, not for industry, not for labor, but for the people of this territory and it has been proved time and time again that monopoly is harmful to a free people. It was on that basis that Teddy Roosevelt got through his greatest, one of his greatest contributions to the peace and security and economy of the United States in the anti-trust laws which controlled industry. We now have no such limitation on labor and we know we are faced with the potentiality of labor monopoly that can be just as harmful as any industrial monopoly ever was, as far as the people of the state or country are concerned. Yet to date we do not have that concept incorporated in any labor legislation.

I submit that it is a matter of definition and the definition should be subject to growth, to change to fit the needs of the people. I don't think that it can be included entirely under the term "regulatory" or the method in which it, a predetermined right by definition, shall be exercised. I think we need, to assure the safeguarding of the public and the changes which our legislature may find essential in the public interest, to include the words "as prescribed by law."

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will declare a five minute recess as we have been working an hour on this problem already. We think we ought to have five minutes—that means five minutes, too.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Ladies and gentlemen, take your seats.

TAVARES: I have four questions that seem to me need to be answered before I vote on the proposed amendment -- on the first proposed amendment, to delete the four words, "as prescribed by law." I'd like to explain that since this territory exports most of its products, we are therefore engaged in businesses which the federal courts have held are interstate commerce in character. If, therefore, Congress should extend the Taft-Hartley law or some other labor law to cover agricultural labor, which it can do and may do someday, would not most of our labor be covered by the federal law? And if so, would it be wise to give our legislature less power to regulate business in local commerce than Congress has to regulate interstate commerce labor, especially when the labor organizations do not make a distinction in recruiting members between people engaged in interstate commerce work and people engaged in local commerce work. I wonder if the proponents of that amendment would care to answer that question. I have three others.

MAU: That first part of the question—it's such a long question, I didn't follow the second. The first part of the question, if Congress should extend the Taft-Hartley law to the State of Hawaii it would, of course, cover interstate commerce. In that event, what is left to the state would merely be intrastate.

TAVARES: That is correct. But then my next question was, under such circumstances, would it not be true that our industries are of such character that most of our labor would be considered sufficiently interstate commerce in character so as to be subject to regulation by Congress?

MAU: Not being a member of industry, I don't know; that would be a factual question.

TAVARES: Well, we export most of our sugar and pineapples. Would that not be the situation?

MAU: Of course, as soon as it starts into the flow of interstate commerce, no question that the Taft-Hartley Act would govern.

TAVARES: So then the next question is, would it be wise to give our legislature less power to regulate labor engaged in local commerce than Congress has to regulate labor in interstate commerce?

CHAIRMAN: Will Mr. Mizuha answer that question?

MIZUHA: The delegate from the fourth district has raised a good question. Undoubtedly if Congress sees fit to extend the provisions of the Taft-Hartley law, and prior to that from whatever it saved from the Wagner Act, to agricultural workers, the great bulk of our sugar and pineapple workers in the territory will fall under the provisions of the law, as passed by Congress.

However, we have many industries in Hawaii which are purely intrastate and that question was raised when the Bill of Rights Committee considered this section. We had representatives from industry here and it was agreed that the bulk of our utilities like the Honolulu Gas Company, Hawaiian Electric and some of the other utilities engaged in local transportation would be under the jurisdiction of any kind of labor-management relations act that would be passed by the territorial or state legislature.

TAVARES: In such a case, would there not be the situation where in the same union you would have members that could be regulated by Congress to a greater extent, if their powers are different, than we could regulate our own local commerce?

MIZUHA: Well, for the -- question was raised with reference to the Honolulu Gas Company who imported up to, and still does, I think, a large amount of crude oil for the manufacture of gas, cooking gas. It was said that those people associated with the handling of crude oil from the ship to the wharf and so forth would be considered interstate commerce. There is that likelihood that employees in certain industries or in certain organizations will come under the scope of the federal law, others will be covered by the territorial or state law. It all depends.

In other words, the idea back of the section as a whole was not to interfere at all with those aspects of the federal law which covered collective bargaining. The right to organize and bargain collectively was the protection for these people who are working here in the future -- who will be working here in the future State of Hawaii, who would not come under the scope of the federal law.

TAVARES: Then, I have the next question. Is it the opinion of the proponents of this amendment to delete these words that the section then, with the deletion, will give our legislature the same powers over regulating local -- labor engaged in local commerce as the Congress has over labor in interstate commerce?

MIZUHA: I cannot speak for the rest of the members of the committee who believed in this section, but I can speak for myself. I would believe that any legislative policy adopted by the future state legislature of Hawaii should be closely fitted to the pattern of the federal law with reference to collective bargaining.

TAVARES: But my question has not been answered. I am asking if it is the opinion of the proponents that the powers of our legislature will be substantially equal in their fields with the powers of Congress over the interstate field?

MIZUHA: If it is the desire of our state legislature—as I said, this is my own personal opinion—our future legislation with reference to workers in intrastate commerce should be the same type of labor legislation that the federal government sees fit to cover the employees who are engaged in interstate commerce.

TAVARES: Then, I assume I can interpret the speaker's answer as "yes." They would be substantially the same in their respective fields.

MIZUHA: That's my own personal opinion.

TAVARES: If any of the other proponents have a different idea, I think in fairness to this Convention they should so state, so that we will know what meaning they place on this amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Arashiro, you introduced the amendment. Would you like to reply?

ARASHIRO: I think I feel the same as the opinion as expressed by Delegate Mizuha.

CHAIRMAN: He feels the same way as Delegate Mizuha.

TAVARES: Well, then let me point out that under the Taft-Hartley law today the closed shop is prohibited. I take it then that answer means that if this amendment goes through, our legislature would have the power—although it may not be wise to exercise it, I'm not saying that it would be—the same power that Congress has over that particular subject.

MIZUHA: Speaking for myself again, I'm not going to speak on the merits of the closed shop or open shop or union shop, but whatever the legislature sees fit to do, I believe the legislature will legislate in the interest of the people, and if it sees fit to legislate out the closed shop, I believe the legislature has full right to do it.

TAVARES: That answers my question on that.

Now, one more question. I think it's already been answered in effect, and that is, there is talk now that Congress might extend the anti-trust laws to certain types of, let's say alleged excessive organization of labor, or excessive groupings of labor, let's say. If that is the case, undoubtedly Congress has that power. Would under this amendment our legislature, if labor organizations got so large that in the public interest it felt that the extent of organization should be regulated under some sort of an anti-trust provision, would our legislature under this amendment with the deletion of the words have the corresponding power that Congress has? In the opinion of the proponent?

MIZUHA: As I previously expressed, there is no doubt with reference to all the rights that are granted to the people under any constitution, the police power of the state will cross those lines and will authorize legislation in the interest of the welfare of the state. Congress at the present time is considering S. 2912, a bill to write into the Taft-Hartley law the anti-trust provisions with reference to labor monopoly. But it is well, and this is just a personal observation, the Secretary of Commerce [sic] Tobin testified before the committee and said, "I am opposed to any bill which will attempt to turn the clock back to the dark days when the anti-trust laws were regularly used to harass and destroy labor unions." That is the attitude of the Secretary of Labor.

If the state legislature desires to write into Hawaii's labor relations act for the people engaged in intrastate commerce, such provisions as the national Congress is endeavoring to write into the federal law, I believe the legislature has the power.

TAVARES: That answers my question. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. As I say, if the other proponents have any different ideas, I think they should state, in fairness to this Convention, whether they have such a different idea.

SHIMAMURA: The queries posed by the last speaker get us into the difficult realm of the priority of federal legislation and local state legislation, in the first place. In the second place, in case the federal government has acted by legislation regulating certain matters of legislation, whether this state will have the right at all. But may I state in addition that - -

MIZUHA: I rise to a point of information. Was the speaker asking a question or making a flat statement?

CHAIRMAN: No, he was making a statement.

SHIMAMURA: I made a statement there.

MIZUHA: I would like to have that further explained in fairness to all the delegates here on the question of this, whether or not when federal legislation enters the field of interstate commerce with reference to the affairs within state, that the federal law is supreme.

CHAIRMAN: I wish to - -

SHIMAMURA: I did not wish to take too much time.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, you have the floor. I hope you will not be interrupted again.

SHIMAMURA: That's all right, Mr. Chairman, but I did not wish to get into a prolonged discussion as to the sphere of federal and state legislation. But I wanted to point out that some of queries posed by the last speaker raised difficult questions as to the spheres respectively of national legislation or of state legislation, and the difficult question as to where interstate commerce begins and where it ends, et cetera, which is a very wide field.

But may I state that I am in favor of the right of collective bargaining on principle. However, I see some difficulty in the deletion of the words "as prescribed by law" from the legal standpoint. Some persons have spoken and said that this right is analagous to the right of free speech guaranteed in the Federal Constitution and in all state constitutions, and which will be guaranteed in our State Constitution under the Bill of Rights. Now the right of free speech has certain common law antecedents before our Federal Constitution was adopted and before our state constitutions were adopted. But collective bargaining does not have such a common law concept. It is not a common law concept to begin with; it's purely legislative. Now, if being purely legislative, we leave out the words "as prescribed by law," what would we have? We have a very fluid right here. That's the difficulty I see, and I should like to have that answered, if I may, by any member of the committee or anyone else.

FONG: As of this moment, I have not yet decided how I would vote. I had expected that we would get some discussion on the background of the labor movement, the background of what the Taft-Hartley Act is, the Wagner Act, and how it will pertain to this territory as far as the principle of collective bargaining is concerned. Now there has been no discussion here, and I'm quite sure that quite a few of the number of delegates here are quite confused as to what we are talking about. The word "collective bargaining" means a lot of things, and I'm quite sure a few of us do not yet have our finger right on the point.

Now, in conjuction with that, I'd like to ask a few questions. As I understand - - I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee a few questions and if he could explain to me and explain it to the delegates here, I think maybe we'll have a better idea as to what we're doing here. As I understand the Taft-Hartley Act, it deals with interstate commerce. Is that right, Mr. Mau? Only?

CHAIRMAN: Would you restate your question?

MAU: I think the answer is, I believe that's correct.

FONG: That's correct. The Wagner Act originally dealt with interstate commerce. Is that right?

MAU: That's correct.

FONG: And the Wagner Act exempted from its provisions the right of collective bargaining by agriculture workers, which means that the great majority of our plantation workers in the fields were unable to bargain collectively. Is that right?

MAU: That's correct, and that's why you passed the little Wagner Act.

ROBERTS: That's not a correct statement, in answer to that question.

MAU: In excluding certain agricultural workers? I stand corrected.

ROBERTS: No. The act did exclude certain agricultural workers from the protection of the statute; it did not limit the right of workers to organize and bargain collectively with the employers. The only question there was the question of the protection of the law in terms of the unfair labor practices. The employees have had the right to bargain collectively prior to the passage of the Wagner Act and the Taft-Hartley.

FONG: Probably I just didn't state it adequately.

Now as I understand, under the Taft-Hartley Act that group is given the power to organize and to bargain collectively which they have had; but on top of that, if they organized as a group and went to their employer through representatives of their own choosing, then the employer has to bargain with them. Is that correct?

ROBERTS: May I answer that question? Under the statute, under the Wagner Act and under the amended provisions of the Wagner Act, the Taft-Hartley law, the employer was required as a matter of law to bargain with the duly recognized collective bargaining agent of the employees in the appropriate unit.

FONG: Yes. Now, following that, if he did not bargain with the duly representatives of the employees, representing the majority, what were the penalties?

ROBERTS: Under the statutes, under both statutes, the employees through their representatives would file an unfair labor practice with the board. The board then would have a hearing and further adjudication, subject to the review by the courts, would then determine whether or not the employer did or did not violate the law. If he violated the law, an order would be issued by the court to require him to bargain. If he did not bargain, then he was subject to action by the court and contempt of the court.

FONG: I see. Now, following that thought, if we give the right to labor of collective bargaining, actually what we are doing here is to state what is already inherently theirs. Is that right, Mr. Roberts?

ROBERTS: The statements and the provisions of the section proposed, with the exception of the qualifying language, are now in both the Taft-Hartley law and our own little Wagner Act. That's correct.

FONG: If the legislature did not do anything, and labor having this right of collective bargaining, would it be able to impose upon the employer who refuses to bargain with labor, after the ratification of 'his Constitution with the provision in there that labor has the right of collective bargaining, will labor be able to impose upon the employer the pressure which it now has over the employer under the Wagner Act or Taft-Hartley Act, in respect to intrastate commerce?

ROBERTS: The purpose of the Wagner Act was to avoid industrial strife by providing machinery whereby the employer through an election would be required to recognize the employees and bargain with them. Prior to the passage of the Wagner Act, there were many disputes on the question of recognition, and the employees had to resort to force, had to resort to the strike. The Congress said that the purpose of the law—and that same language is in both the Taft-Hartley and Wagner law—it makes it very specific that this right is to be protected in order to do away with industrial strife, and that right is protected and recognized. You will find that the legislature—under the Federal Congress, of course, in the passage of the law—the legislature could regulate reasonably with regard to the concept of collective bargaining and its scope.

FONG: At the present time, dealing entirely with intrastate commerce, excluding interstate commerce, if a group of employees through their representatives by a majority vote went to the employer and tried to bargain with him, and he refuses to bargain with them, will the employer be subject to the unfair labor practice law?

ROBERTS: Yes, he would be if they represented the majority of the employees and if you had provision by law, as you do now, for certification. They would be a certified bargaining agent. Now the method of certification varies, but if they represent the majority of employees and they request the employer to recognize them for the purpose of bargaining and the employer refuses, then they have the right to file a charge under the provisions of the little Wagner Act in the territory.

FONG: That is under the intrastate - -

ROBERTS: Under your own little Wagner Act which the legislature passed in 1945, Act 215, S.B.72, Hawaii Employment Relations Act. The employees have a right to file a charge under that section, under that statute.

FONG: Well, if that little Wagner Act was not in existence in the Territory of Hawaii, would they still have that right?

ROBERTS: Well, that would be a question in terms of whether or not the Taft-Hartley law or the Wagner Act covered. If we had no Hawaii Employment Relations Act covering intrastate, I still believe that all activities which would provide for employee-employer relations in the territory, except those specifically excluded by the Wagner or Taft-Hartley law, would be subject to regulation by that act, if we are a territory. Now, the reason I say that, under the Wagner Act and the Taft-Hartley law, the jurisdiction, the scope of the act covers interstate commerce, and interstate commerce is defined as all commerce among and between the states and the territories; so, by definition the territories are included in interstate commerce. As a matter of administrative procedures, they did not take all of the specific little industries and actually prosecute cases. But there are certain specific groups excluded from the protection of the law, such as the agricultural employees originally, and those employees did not get the protection of the law, although they had the right to bargain with the employer.

FONG: Now, if we become a state, then we are excluded from the question of being a territory, and if this provision stays in the Constitution that labor has the right to bargain collectively, must the legislature enact laws setting forth what is unfair labor practice, probably what is the penalty for an employer to - - the penalty on the employer if he refuses to bargain collectively? Must that necessarily go into effect before this right of collective bargaining will be effective?

ROBERTS: I don't think so. You already have a law on the books; that law, it would seem to me, takes care of the problem if you become a state.

FONG: You mean the little Wagner Act?

ROBERTS: That's right.

FONG: Now, if the little Wagner Act was not in existence, then the legislature must act. Is that right?

ROBERTS: Well, I would assume that some statute would be enacted dealing with that problem. Yes.

FONG: Thank you, Mr. Roberts.

HEEN: It seems to me that the question before us is whether or not this right is to be a constitutional right or a statutory right. After listening to the debate and the discussion upon this proposal, I believe that it was the intent of the majority of the Committee on Industry and Labor that this provision was to be effective only by statute. In other words, it was to be made a right by statute. Is that correct? It's not a constitutional right, as I read it now, but would be a right only granted by statute.

MAU: If I get the question correctly, you are asking whether the committee, the majority of the committee, believes it should be in the Constitution or out. The answer is in the Constitution.

HEEN: You mean it's a constitutional right? If it's a constitutional right, then you can cut out the words, "prescribed by statute" -- "as prescribed by law."

CHAIRMAN: There's another member of the committee would like to reply to you.

BRYAN: I think the fair answer to that question would be—and I stand corrected by any of the members of the committee who would like to argue—it's a constitutional right, or an exercise of other rights which has formed a new right which is recognized in the Constitution to be exercised under statutory provision. Is that correct, Chairman Mau?

HEEN: If that is so, what I had proposed would be correct then. That is, it is a right to be exercised in accordance with law. Listening to Delegate Kellerman, I got from her remarks that it is not a constitutional right, but it is a right to be prescribed by law.

LARSEN: Could I just answer that? As I saw it, and again stand to be corrected, that why it was worded that way was it was a right, but it was so fluid that at the present time there was no definite definition; but it should be recognized that it was there to be changed as defined by law. Therefore, it couldn't be put down as something rigid and specific at the present time because there was no actual definition of "collective bargaining" at the present time.

MIZUHA: The reason I'm speaking on this section is because it was taken up in the Committee of Bill of Rights also. In the Committee of the Bill of Rights it was made clear that although the right to organize and bargain collectively had been recognized for a long time prior to the passage of the Wagner Act in 1935, no appropriate measures were taken by the Congress of the United States to enforce that right; and in the declaration and findings of the committees of the Congress of the United States with reference to the support of the passage of the Wagner Act in 1935, they did state that in order to correct certain abuses, labor abuses, the Wagner Act should be passed. And the Congress of the United States passed the Wagner Act and found constitutional basis for the passage of the Wagner Act on the basis of the interstate commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. Nowhere in the Constitution did they go to -- nowhere else in the Constitution did they go to when the government supported the fight in the case of the N. L. R. B. versus the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation. That famous case gave constitutional basis and validity to the Wagner Act, because the Supreme Court ruled that on the basis of the interstate commerce clause that law was constitutional.

In the philosophy of those states that have written into their constitutions in the recent revisions like New York and New Jersey and another state—I don't recall in particular now, Missouri I believe—this section was written into their state constitutions to protect any legislation that the state legislature saw fit for and on behalf of workers in intrastate commerce only, because it was felt that the federal government had already passed legislation with reference to those workers who were engaged in interstate commerce. In order to serve as a constitutional basis for the validity of legislation with reference to the type of legislation that Congress has passed for goods entering interstate commerce, these states passed these various sections in their constitutions on the right to organize and bargain collectively.

I believe there shouldn't be any fear at all on the part of those people who feel that there is in this section the creation -- there will be in this section the creation of a labor monopoly. Certainly, and it is my conviction at this time, the legislative power of this state, the future State of Hawaii, under its police power, following the pattern of the powers of the Congress will exercise and continue to exercise under the police power of the federal government, to so regulate collective bargaining in the interest and the welfare of all the people.

KELLERMAN: May I answer the judge -- the question put by Delegate Heen, having referred to my explanation of my position on these amendments. I was a member of the Bill of Rights Committee and sat in several times on meetings of Labor and Industry to hear this matter discussed. I asked the question several times, "What do you mean by the right to collective bargaining? What does the term 'collective bargaining' mean?" The answer given me by those who were in favor of the provision without the addition of the four words that we are discussing or those of Mr. Heen's amendment, the answer given was it must be defined in the light of present statutes. It seems to me that points up the very question. If you have a constitutional right to collective bargaining, and you don't know what collective bargaining means except by the statutes that have been enacted to define collective bargaining, then it seems to me the constitutional grant of a right is the granting of an absolutely indefinite and undefined right.

Now admittedly there may be no harm in writing in an undefined right if you add that it can be exercised only in accordance with law. There may be no harm done because if you have a right which cannot be exercised or can be exercised in only one way, it's immaterial if someone argues that the right means something other than someone else thinks it means. The right in itself is simply the declaration of an idea. The exercise in accordance with law is the meat of the matter.

But I do feel that the using of the term, "the right to collective bargaining" -- We all have the idea we think we know what it means. Yes, we see it, we have it exercised in the 48 states, it's been adjudicated in the courts, and the very fact of its indefiniteness that the courts didn't know how far it should go, that the Congress was impelled to enact a statute to define collective bargaining and that statute has been amended and undoubtedly will be amended again, it goes to the very definition of the language. It is an undefined and indefinite language.

It's for that reason that I feel we must have the additional language, either "as prescribed by law" because that includes the concept of the power of the legislature to define the very language we are writing into the Constitution. If we can put in Judge Heen's amendment, I don't think it will do harm. I don't think it frankly is as good as the original language of the committee; but since it says "such right to be exercised in accordance with law," if the right is not completely defined before then, by the time you prescribe how its going to be exercised, you can achieve exactly the same result of a limitation if necessary in the general interest. But I think that is the point that Judge Heen rose. Are you conceding a preconceived right to collective bargaining? I would say in a general undefined, indefinite sense, yes; but there is no definition except by statute and we must leave it open for the statutes to redefine as the change in labor relationships with industry change and progress.

HEEN: May I ask the last speaker a question? Supposing those four words were deleted, would it not then become a constitutional right?

KELLERMAN: I think it would become a constitutional undefined and indefinite right unless it would be construed by the courts to mean only that which we have now under existing statutes, and that is the construction that has been placed upon it by the Court of Appeal of New York and the Supreme Court of Missouri. I submit that type of definition which is the only definition that our courts will have to go by would be restrictive upon any subsequent change in the definition of that language which may become necessary in the public interest.

HEEN: That answer, as I understand it then, is this; that that right, no matter how indefinite, would be a constitutional right. As I understand it then, according to this language here, with the four words included, it was to become only a statutory right. And is that pointed question correct?

KELLERMAN: May I answer that? I would say this much, it does not become only a statutory right, only in the sense that it is the definition of what your language means. If you use something completely undefined as a right, you don't know what you are giving or how you can limit it. It's an indefinable thing.

If you ask John Doe on the street, "Do you know what collective bargaining means?" He'll say, "Sure, it means that the boys can get together with a union, hold an election by majority vote, then choose a bargaining agent and they can go in and bargain with management. Of course, I know what it means, everybody knows what it means."

But that's the point. What does it mean in law? What does it mean in the sense of the scope of its definition? Does it mean that only in one business can you organize and bargain collectively, or can you organize every business in the territory and one union involved collectively? What are the limitations? What is the scope? What are the methods that can be used?

HEEN: I want the Chair to get a yes or no answer, whether or not under this language here complete, whether or not it would be a statutory right or is intended to be a statutory right. Someone ought to be able to answer that question yes or no.

ARASHIRO: In answer to the last speaker, my objection to the deletion - - my motion for the deletion of the four words is because it changes that right from constitutional right to statutory right, and if we recognize that right as a constitutional right, then as we are changing and as we are progressing ahead, and we do not go backwards. We recognize that right and it should be a constitutional right.

Answering the lady delegate from the fourth district who said that word "collective bargaining" is not clear, well, when we wrote our Constitution, our Federal Constitution, I don't think the freedom of speech and freedom of religion and all those things were clear then, but it has been regulated and it's still not clear as to its interpretation. It has been always brought to court for a clear definition. And in fact, many of our English words are subject to clarification. In fact, a simple word like R-U-N, run, used to be limited as to its use. Today when you look into Webster, it has more than 90 definitions and uses. So those things can be interpreted and be regulated in some manner. That is the reason if collective bargaining is not clear it can be clarified through statute and it can be clarified through the courts. So as I have stated, a word like R-U-N, simple word like run, has been used in 90 different ways. So I feel that if this is a right that we recognize, it should be a constitutional right, and at this time, I move for the previous question.

GILLILAND: The Constitution of the United States provides for the right to organize, in the words and language, the people shall have the right to freedom of assembly. But the word "collective bargaining" is a creature of statute. It's up to this Convention whether they want to define the methods, so we can proceed with collective bargaining. If you want that in the Constitution, it's up to the delegates.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. White. I'm trying to give everybody a chance.

WHITE: I'd like to reply to the question which - - my answer is directly opposite to the delegate from Kauai. In my opinion, the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining is not a constitutional right, it's a statutory right.

NIELSEN: I'm not going to take much time. The reason I would like to see these three little words eliminated, or four words, is that what we want to do is write in this Constitution something for labor, and we want peaceful labor relations here in the islands. Nationally they have been shooting at the same target, and we have it in the N. L. R. B. and the Taft-Hartley. Now let's shoot at that same target by eliminating these words because without them, the State can still regulate abuse of collective bargaining. There is no question in anyone's mind but what abuses, the same as abuses of the press or speech or anything else, can be regulated by the State legislature. So I think that we should be about ready to take a vote on this on the principle that it is in the modern constitutions, that it is in our federal laws and that without these four little words in there we still have the power to regulate abuses of it, and it will be a good healthy thing for good industrial-management-labor relations.

YAMAMOTO: Under the Bill of Rights, the Bill of Rights is the declaration of the dignity of the individual as a member of the state. So, therefore, I feel collective bargaining is a constitutional right and is an economic right, so, therefore, I believe the phrase "as prescribed by law" should be out.

ROBERTS: I'd like to dispel some notions as to the purpose of this language in part and its import. We didn't write into this proposal a proposal dealing with statutory matter. This proposal is for the purpose of protecting the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining as a matter of constitutional right. We did recognize, however, that they are subject to reasonable regulation by the legislature, and the language that came out was "as prescribed by law." The suggestion made by Senator Heen is that that be changed to read "such right to be exercised in accordance with law." But that right is a constitutional right; that's the basis upon which I voted on the question.

I'd like to suggest, too, in answer to some previous questions, that that right has always existed. The right of collective bargaining is a right of collective action. There is nothing strange or confusing about the word. It has been defined by the courts; it has been defined in part by statute. But so have other things. The term "collective bargaining" is a changing term, that's true; but it changes as the courts change, and I've read a lot of constitutional decisions by the courts where for over a period 120 years they couldn't make up their minds. That doesn't mean that we cannot put down the language, "collective bargaining."

I might suggest from the point of view of American labor history, to reply to Mr. Fong's suggestion that we get a little labor history here, that we have certain basic rights in our Constitution, the right of assembly and certain rights which are now construed to protect the right to strike for specific purposes. Yet you find no longer ago than the middle of the last century that there was very definite action taken by the courts in construing what those rights of assembly were, what right of organization there was. And the courts said that collective action for the purpose of raising wages, for example, was a conspiracy in restraint of trade. It took us a long time to move from that area to the present time when, both under the Wagner Act and the Taft-Hartley law, it is recognized as a matter of federal policy that collective bargaining should be assisted and aided.

I might like to read, or suggest the reading of just one paragraph of the Taft-Hartley law—that language was identical with language in the Wagner Act and it wasn't changed. That section reads, "It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to eliminate the causes of certain substantial obstructions to the free flow of commerce and to mitigate and eliminate these obstructions when they have occurred by encouraging the practice and procedure of collective bargaining"—the right of workers to get together for specific purposes, provided those purposes are not unreasonable; that's why we say that the legislature may prescribe and regulate, but it has to be reasonable regulations and must not go contrary to the protection of that right—"collective bargaining and by protecting the exercise by workers of full freedom of association, self-organization, and designation of representatives of their own choosing, for the purpose of negotiating the terms and conditions of their employment or other mutual aid or protection."

Now there isn't anything nasty about collective bargaining. It doesn't take away the rights of individuals. Those individual rights are combined in an organization for the purpose of collective action. That's recognized by the Taft-Hartley law. I would venture to suggest to the delegation that we recognize the right, that we place it in our Constitution as was placed in the constitutions of the State of New York, the State of Missouri and the State of New Jersey, which have most recently reviewed and reorganized their constitutions.

Now the language, "as prescribed by law," or "such rights to be exercised in accordance with law," merely recognizes that the legislature has the right of reasonable regulation. I believe that right they have whether the words are there or not. That's been clearly shown in the State of New York when the courts acted and it was shown very clearly in the State of Missouri. But in order to get the agreement of the delegation, if those words would make some individuals feel that these are not to be unreasonable, then I say there ought to be no objection to the inclusion of those words, but we must recognize this to be recognized as a right, and whatever regulation there is must be regulation which is reasonable.

LEE: Will the speaker yield to a couple of questions? Apparently the nine member majority of the committee are in dispute as to whether or not this right is a constitutional right or a statutory right as it is now written, because as I understand it, Delegate White was a member of the committee who signed the majority report. Is that right, Mr. White?

WHITE: That's correct.

ROBERTS: We did not discuss whether it was a constitutional or statutory right. We wrote this section in for the Constitution, which makes it a constitutional provision.

LEE: It apparently is borne out from this discussion, and I am of the opinion at this moment, that as written it is a statutory right and not a constitutional right, so that the members of the majority who agreed with that report thinking it to be a constitutional right, actually were supporting it as a statutory right. Therefore, it would seem to me that this committee at any rate, and this is very important, that if we recognize this to be a constitutional right, we should say that it is a constitutional right, and the step suggested by Delegate Heen is in that direction, believing that the right is a constitutional right and not a statutory right. I also would like to ask the delegates -- I wonder if the chairman of the committee might care to remark on this position.

CHAIRMAN: Chairman yield?

MAU: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I believe that Delegate Heen was not quite satisfied with all the answers that he got. I couldn't get up here as chairman and make a categorical answer to his question because my committee is so divided. But speaking for myself, there is no question that what is stated here today is statutory right. We do want to make these statutory rights constitutional rights, otherwise we wouldn't vote to put it in the Constitution.

Now, insofar as the words "collective bargaining" are concerned, if we had a majority on this committee we would have defined what collective bargaining meant in the Consttution, but we preferred not to do that. Personally I did not want to do that, but to leave the method, the procedure of collective bargaining, to the legislature because the legislature will have to go into all of the situations that they may meet in this community and determine whether or not they want to follow federal procedures or whether they want to set up their own procedures and methods of collective bargaining. But the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining should be a constitutional right. That is the position of the majority of the committee.

Has the gentleman another question?

LEE: You haven't answered my question yet, Delegate Mau. As written, if we were to vote for the adoption of the proposal submitted by your committee, as written, wouldn't we be voting saying that that right is not a constitutional right but a statutory right?

MAU: The answer is absolutely no. Take your right to free speech, if you wanted to add, "as provided by law," "in accordance with law," "as prescribed by law," what would it be? Statutory, if it's in the Constitution? I don't see it at all.

LEE: Well, it seems to me that from the discussion brought out -- well, we'll leave that point.

MAU: No, let's answer that point. From the discussion brought out, there are two philosophies of thought, one, it should not go into the Constitution at all; the other, it should. That's all, it's as simple as that.

LEE: What have you to say to this point that was brought out, I believe by Delegate Kellerman, that the right of collective bargaining, collective action on the part of individuals, is a statutory right and therefore has no basis in the Constitution. I have -- My own feeling is that rights of man or groups of men can be born, not only from customs, mores of any society, but out of statutory action which can develop certain meanings to certain terms. For instance, in the section relating to due process clause, "No person shall be . . . deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law." The term "due process of law," Mr. Mau, do you not agree has changed from the time of its adoption in the Federal Constitution up to the present time as to its meaning?

MAU: Certainly, and so will the words "collective bargaining."

LEE: Is that your opinion? In other words, you disagree with the statement made on the floor of this committee that the right of collective bargaining being of statutory origin cannot be a constitutional right.

MAU: I don't agree with that, that it cannot be. In further answer to that, I might say this --

PORTEUS: On a point of convenience --

CHAIRMAN: This is not a debating society.

PORTEUS: -- to all the other members, since we have a limitation on this matter till 11:30, I wonder if the chairman would ascertain who wishes to speak from now until 11:30 and allocate the time. There are some of us I know who wish to speak who have not wanted to jump up and compete for the floor. We now have 25 minutes. I wish the chairman of the committee would ascertain those who haven't spoken, how many there are, and allocate the time to them so that - -

CHAIRMAN: There are 19 members of this committee that have spoken. There are some more that wish to be recognized.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe all of us here are talking sometimes about things that are not tangible. We talk about rights. Delegate Roberts has stated that the right to bargain collectively exists whether we have a statute or not. We cannot categorically state, as Delegate White said, that it is a statutory right. Simply because a few states supply the right of collective bargaining, that doesn't make it a statutory right. It's a right existing under that statute.

I think the question is a little deeper than that. If that inherent right, the right that exists before it is incorporated in a statute, is incorporated then, and you call that a statutory right, that's not proper. It's not a statutory right; it's merely a right existing under the statute. The question should be this, has that right, which has always been in existence and later incorporated into a statute, gained that dignity so that it should be more than a right just simply under the statute. If it's an inherent right, it should be a constitutional right if we place it in our Constitution.

I beg to differ with the chairman of the committee. Simply because we have it in our Constitution doesn't make it a constitutional right, if you provide restrictions by the legislature. I think we are talking about things which we can't even define. If we say that the right is inherent, whether we have it in our statute or not is immaterial. You have that right, it's not a statutory right.

Now we also heard that if we do have it in our Constitution, leaving out any thought about a statutory right, it will become an undefined right. I beg to differ there. It may be undefined, but so are a lot of the other rights which we have written into our Constitution. Certainly the word "collective bargaining" is not a word of art; certainly the words "due process of law" are not words of art. It's subject to interpretation, and simply because we cannot define it categorically and state collective bargaining is this, does not mean that it is an undefined right.

A. TRASK: I would like to simplify the thing as much as possible in my own mind. We have immediately the Central Labor Council's inquiry; it says, the last paragraph, "We urge your adoption of Committee Proposal No. 28," which is apparently the sentence under discussion. The inquiry from this letter is, they want to know, unequivocably, whether or not the legislature can, upon its convening when the Constitution is adopted, say to labor that you cannot organize to bargain collectively. That is the question that this letter poses. Now, whether it's a right given under the statute or by virtue of statute, whether you're going to call it a statutory right; whether or not it is printed in the Constitution, you are going to call it a constitutional right.

We have written such words as "public welfare" in the Constitution. Who's going to define "public welfare"? It's a word of equal magic or illusiveness. What's going to decide the situation? The courts. Under what cases? Precise concrete cases, as they come up. Controversies will decide the definition of words through the hot fire of the judiciary.

Now, is it constitutional or is it regulatory? As far as I see, the question would be more definitely pointed if we said here that we would suggest that the right given by congressional legislation, the right to collective bargaining to people in interstate commerce, that such right does not exist. If we put that in the Constitution, that would be a constitutional denial of a right.

Now what is the benefit, if any, in this particular sentence? The significance, if any, is something being conferred upon certain parties. Certain parties. Is it all the people? No. It doesn't apply to lawyers. It applies to people in private employment, and lawyers are usually in partnership, so they're not in employment as such. It refers only to a category of people. As I see the situation, since it is the consensus apparently here that we shall adopt and approve of this right, it seems to me, therefore, apparent that we say you have this right. It is now a right that we've enjoyed since Roosevelt's time in 1933, since Franklin Roosevelt, only 17 years ago. We have now come to appreciate and say and graduated to that sense that it is an inherent right. At this junction in our history, we're going to further dignify that right in putting it into our Constitution. It, therefore, as far as I can see, simplifying the thing in my own mind, it is a constitutional right.

Now in this community, in this dynamic society, is this right to be an unbridled right? Is this right going to a little group to be a right not to be regulated? It's as simple as that to me. And the words, "as prescribed by law," or the contribution by Delegate Heen, "such right to be exercised in accordance with law," the pertinent part about that situation is the reiteration of the word "such right." And that's the point at issue. Such right, such constitutional right shall be prescribed by law. I am voting either for that or the other, not for the deletion, because, and I say to labor, why shouldn't the community be assured that the power of labor shall not outgrow itself and become so powerful that the other people will suffer. The words are to put a brake, to put a safeguard, to make clear and assure the other people of the community who are not in private employment that, by jove, in this society we are against bigness and unregulation. We are for law, and we are - - we want to assure the legislature and assure the other people, not so much labor, but assure the other people of the community, who make and provide for labor's wages, to assure them and they are entitled to know precisely where they stand. It seems to me that the Central Labor Council should be assured and when they go along with this situation I think they are being fair-minded.

BRYAN: What I wanted to suggest was that the Committee on Industry and Labor have a short five or ten minute caucus to see if we can come together on a more proper solution. Is that agreeable with the chairman?

PORTEUS: If they are going to caucus, then the rest of us might as well. No use of us talking in the absence of the committee. We all might just as well take a recess.

CHAIRMAN: Ten minute recess is declared subject to the call of the Chair.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen is recognized. There are so many standing that I couldn't see him for the trees.

HEEN: In order that we may vote on the question of deleting the four words, I will now withdraw my amendment.

PORTEUS: I now move, in accordance with the amendment placed on the desks, to delete the words "as prescribed by law" in the third line of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 28; and substitute therefore the words, "such right to be exercised in accordance with law," as distributed on the desks.

DELEGATE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Heen's motion was the first. Is there any second to Senator Heen's motion?

HEEN: Mine was not a motion. I withdrew my amendment.

DELEGATE: I'll second Delegate Porteus' motion.

ARASHIRO: Point of order. The motion on the floor now is to delete the four words and the amendment is contrary to that motion. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will rule that your motion should be considered first.

LUIZ: Point of special privilege. The committee was not in unanimous agreement on that.

CHAIRMAN: The question is - -

PORTEUS: Can't we have a vote on the amendment as proposed? If you delete some words, it's fair enough to substitute some others in lieu thereof; if people don't want that, they can vote it down. We can get at this in some reasonable order.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would take it that was an amendment to the amendment, and I think you have to first put the amendment.

PORTEUS: No, Mr. Chairman, as you know from legislative experience, you don't put the amendment and then put the amendments that are pending to it. First, you put the amendments to the amendment and then it builds right on back to the original section.

J. TRASK: A point of order. I do not believe that Mr. Porteus' amendment was an amendment to the amendment.

PORTEUS: Yes it is.

CHAIRMAN: Would you state your amendment over again?

PORTEUS: I move to amend the amendment that has been presented by the delegate from Kauai, to read as follows: delete the words "as prescribed by law" in the third line of Section 1, Committee Proposal No. 28, and substitute therefor the words, "such right to be exercised in accordance with law," heretofore known as the Heen amendment.

J. TRASK: That is the exact motion that Mr. Arashiro made with the exception of the including of other words other than "as prescribed by law." So the motion as put by the chairman stating that Mr. Arashiro's motion was in order, that his motion should take precedent over the motion - - over the amendment made by Delegate Porteus, and I believe the Chair so moved.

CHAIRMAN: The question is whether we vote on Delegate Arashiro's motion to delete the four words.

BRYAN: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau, chairman of the committee.

MAU: In that event, if that is the procedure, I serve notice that after that amendment, if it passes, as chairman of the committee, I will introduce a motion to insert the words, "such right to be exercised in accordance with law."

CHAIRMAN: That's your privilege.

PORTEUS: Mr. Chairman, do I understand your ruling to be that the amendment offered by me is out of order.

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

PORTEUS: While I don't agree with the Chair at all, however, if that's to be the rule, we could appeal it but I see no point in that. In view of the statement by the chairman of the committee that he would offer this if it is deleted, I am satisfied to withdraw the motion at this time.

MIZUHA: As proponents of the motion, with the other fellow delegate from Kauai, I would like to have a few more remarks in closing before the question is put. We have been arguing on the floor all morning as to whether this was a statutory right or a constitutional right. I believe there were some misstatements made because the Supreme Court in the Jones and Laughlin decision, Chief Justice Hughes recognized that labor had the right to organize for collective action long before the Wagner Act was passed. The Wagner Act was passed in order to put teeth in and to enable the federal government to enforce that right. I believe that in the event that we have words in the Constitution - - on a constitutional right in the Constitution, "as prescribed by law," I will be mere folly to write it into the Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: All in favor - -

DELEGATE: I call for a roll call vote.

CHAIRMAN: Roll call has been asked for. All in favor of roll call, please show their hands. There's enough. All in favor of the amendment of Mr. Arashiro to delete the four words, "as prescribed by law," please vote "aye." Those opposed vote "no." Clerk, call the roll.

Ayes, 47. Noes, 11 (Apoliona, Bryan, Cockett, Gilliland, Hayes, Holroyde, Kellerman, Tavares, A. Trask, White, Wirtz). Not voting, 5 (Anthony, Castro, C. Rice, Sakai, Silva).

CHAIRMAN: The motion to delete these four words has carried.

MAU: I'd like to offer an amendment to the first sentence of Proposal No. 28 by adding after the word "bargaining" a comma, and in place of the words after the comma, "such right to be exercised in accordance with law."

CROSSLEY: I'd like to second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for roll call. Clerk, call the roll. Motion has been made - - Have you the words?

CLERK: To amend the Proposal 28 by adding after the word "bargaining" a comma and inserting after the comma, "such right to be exercised in accordance with law."

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the question. All in favor of this amendment say "aye." Opposed, "no." Clerk, call the roll.

Ayes, 29. Noes, 29 (Akau, Arashiro, Ashford, Corbett, Doi, Fong, Fukushima, Ihara, Kage, Kam, Kauhane, Kawahara, Kawakami, Kometani, Lee, Loper, Luiz, Lyman, Mizuha, Noda, Ohrt, Okino, Phillips, H. Rice, Sakakihara, Serizawa, St. Sure, Yamamoto, Yamauchi). Not voting, 5 (Anthony, Castro, C. Rice, Sakai, Silva).

CHAIRMAN: The motion fails.

LEE: I move that the proposal before the committee pass as amended.

ARASHIRO: Second the motion.

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman, I should like to change my vote from aye to no.

CHAIRMAN: Too late.

PORTEUS: I move that this committee now rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

J. TRASK: Have we got a motion before the floor?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, the motion is that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

J. TRASK: There was a motion to adopt the section as amended and seconded.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

LEE: It seems to me we could decide the question right here and then proceed with other matters. The matter of time is very important; we have a lot of other matters to consider.

PORTEUS: Mr. Chairman, it happens to be noon. We were to rise at 11:30.

CROSSLEY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

CROSSLEY: When this committee resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, it did so until 11:30. That time has now passed.

DELEGATE: Point of order.

CROSSLEY: It's incumbent upon us to follow the mandate that was made to this committee when we were seated.

CHAIRMAN: As the Chair has stated before there was no mandate; it was just a suggestion.

SILVA: I was going to answer that. There's no motion to that effect. I would suggest that the Chair put the question.

MIZUHA: Put the question as to the adoption of the article.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question. Question.

DELEGATE: Point of information. What is the question?

CHAIRMAN: The question is on the article as amended with those four words out.

DELEGATES: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the roll call? The question is on the amended article without the -- as you know it was amended and the four words, "as prescribed by law," were taken out and a period was put after the word "bargaining." The question is now on the article as amended. All in favor will answer "aye"; opposed, "no." Clerk, call the roll.

Ayes, 51. Noes, 7 (Bryan, Cockett, Hayes, Holroyde, Kellerman, Tavares, White). Not voting, 5 (Anthony, Castro, C. Rice, Sakai, Silva).

SAKAKIHARA: I at this time move that any motion for reconsideration be indefinitely postponed.

DELEGATE: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will rule that out of order. We haven't done it heretofore, unless the Convention feels different.

J. TRASK: I move that the committee rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again.

MIZUHA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the motion. All in favor of the motion to rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again, please say "aye." The ayes have it.

JUNE 28, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee come to order.

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman, has the report been printed? Is it here somewhere?

CHAIRMAN: The reports are not on the desks. This is simply to take it up so as to give it a number and then it will be printed, and then take it up later. Do you make that a motion that the --

KING: I understood that Delegate Crossley wanted to be recognized to incorporate in the Committee of the Whole report, perhaps, a statement with reference to the report.

CROSSLEY: I hope that I can have the full attention of the delegates because I would like to speak on this subject, on industry and labor. I'd like to do it without prejudice to any of the actions which we have taken. I'd simply like to make a statement, not representing big business because I don't represent big business; not small business because I'm not small business; I'm the man that's caught in between. I'd like to address my remarks to those who are not directly involved in industry or those who are not directly involved in labor as such or industry as such; school teachers, the man on the street, the person who does not understand the position, the strong positions taken by either side on this.

After we had taken action the other day and had defeated the majority committee proposal, after we had defeated Delegate Heen's amendment, I became quite concerned again as to what industry's position was because labor's position was pretty well spelled out. I wanted to know if we had written in a section which was to be titled "Industry and Labor," simply a statement for labor. I talked with a number of judges. I wanted to find out for myself what this could mean to me as a member of industry. The first question I asked was, does this give labor any rights they do not now have. The answer was an unqualified no. I said, does this in any way jeopardize industry in the rights that they now have. The answer was a qualified no. I asked further what the qualification would be. They said that on a permanent basis, the answer could be an unqualified no, but that the answer couldn't be given in that way, and this is what I would like to bring before the attention of the delegates here.

The answer was simply this. That if "as prescribed by law," "authorized by law," "in the public interest," "regulation in the public interest," or any such phrase as that [is left out] that if the legislature at some future date enacted a law, that probably a union could go in and enjoin the attorney general, whoever it might be, from putting that law into effect until it had been determined whether or not the legislature had that power. I asked then what would be the case if the words "as prescribed by law," "authorized by law" were in there, and I was told that probably the court would rule that it was, unqualifiedly, the right of the legislature to do those things because it set it forth.

Now then, they also said, that right will exist whether those words are there or not, but there could be an injunction issued; not necessarily, but there could be. That would be a question the courts would have to rule on at the time the business was put to them, and I'm thinking now of what that could mean in terms of my own industry, in terms of pineapple. At this time of the year pineapple ripens at the rate of about three to four per cent of your total crop a day. Almost any delay would be disastrous to an individual company as far as their pack was concerned for that season. In the case of a company the size of ours, smallest in the industry, a delay of ten days -- As I understand it, they have 48 hours to file their first injunction, there's 48. If an injunction is filed, there's 48 hours to answer. It easily could go into a minimum of five days and into a maximum of ten days, and I multiplied ten days times our crop and I could see ruin for a small company like mine.

Therefore, my appeal to the delegates is simply this, that if in their judgment there is no difference between putting some words in there that spell out a right that everyone says exists, if by doing that we could prevent a disastrous delay in getting a ruling that in the final analysis is going to be the same ruling, it's simply going to be delayed, that shouldn't we give further consideration to it? I am not going to move for reconsideration; I'm not going to speak again on the subject. I, however, wanted to put into the record my own search into what this would mean and what it might do to industry in the islands if it is left the way it is.

Now, maybe I'm being overly pessimistic, maybe the injunctions wouldn't be granted, or maybe they could be adjudicated in the course of 48 hours, which would certainly not be too disastrous. I'm not trying to throw a fear complex into anyone. I'm not saying that the words of the men that I talked to are final in themselves, and that others couldn't have different opinions. I did tell them that in a discussion of this it was generally agreed, and I don't think it was ever disagreed, that the section in itself was assumed to mean that the legislature would have, under all circumstances, the right to regulate, to reasonable regulation in the public interest.

Thank you all very much for giving me this opportunity to speak.

ARASHIRO: Can I say a few words in line with a statement made by my colleague from Kauai?

I, who stood up and backed up for the insertion of this clause, did not stand up because I felt that it was a Magna Carta for labor or a protection for labor or anything particularly for labor, but because I felt that it was something for the future State of Hawaii, and that is the reason why I backed it up. And my reason for the deletion of "as prescribed by law," as I previously stated, as it is in the record now, was that that meant statutory rights. So I felt that if we are going to have anything in the Constitution, it should be constitutional rights and as the word stands today, it is a constitutional right and it does not restrict the legislature. Again, for the record, I wish to reemphasize my stand by saying that these do not restrict the legislature from reasonably regulating any future labor and industry legislation for the good of the State of Hawaii or the public.

CHAIRMAN: Anybody else got anything to say? Otherwise - -

FONG: I move that we adopt the committee report.

CHAIRMAN: Well, I think that you would want the committee report printed and be on your desks first, wouldn't you? Tentatively approve the committee report, is that right?

KING: The committee report is fairly short. I don't know whether the Convention wants to wait until it's printed and distributed. It's not really necessary. The Clerk could read it and if we adopt it today and pass the article on second reading it would then go to Style for any further changes in phraseology and be ready for third reading. I second the motion made by Mr. Fong.

HEEN: I would like to read that written report. I think it's very important that every delegate should inform himself or herself as to what the contents are.

J. TRASK: I move for a short recess subject to the call of the Chair.

HEEN: I move that this committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: In the meantime we'd have the report printed. I think that's better.

PORTEUS: On that understanding, I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You've heard the motion. All in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The ayes have it.

JUNE 30, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: The committee will come to order. The Committee of the Whole Report No. 12, on the last page of this report the Chair has made an amendment so that after the words, "For the reference hereinabove set forth your Committee recommends," and "(a)," I have amended it to read "that Standing Committee Report No. 79 be adopted, with the exception of the recommendation as to the adoption of Proposal 28 as submitted by the standing committee." The Clerk is getting this mimeographed and I think that is all in order now. You have read the report and a motion is in order to adopt the committee report.

ASHFORD: I move the adoption of the committee report and that the article be recommended for second reading.

LAI: Seconded.

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the motion. All in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on

MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS

(Articles XIII and XIV)

Chairman: ALEXANDER H. F. CASTRO

JUNE 26, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee please come to order. Mr. Porteus.

PORTEUS: Delegate Porteus to you, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the chairman for his courtesy in loaning to this Convention the bell of the Junior Chamber of Commerce in order to signal when people have exceeded their time and have spoken too many times on the same subject. Yet I've had very little opportunity to utilize the bell. Our only hope is that when the bell is returned to the Junior Chamber of Commerce, it does not effect the Junior Chamber with the air of debate that has been so extensive around here.

CROSSLEY: Mr. Chairman, may I say that whatever the Chair wishes to call the honorable delegate from the fourth district, you will be sustained, Mr. Chairman.

PORTEUS: A point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, Mr. Crossley.

PORTEUS: If the ex-chairman will remember his own request that no one speak until recognized, I think the progress of the deliberation for this Committee of the Whole will be facilitated. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. Thank you very much, Mr. Porteus. I hope you don't have to use that bell too often.

C. RICE: I'd like to know if the Secretary has a stop watch or is he running by that clock?

CHAIRMAN: The Secretary has a watch which I've observed is keeping perfect time.

C. RICE: Stop watch?

CHAIRMAN: Now we have before us, you will notice in the general orders of the day, several standing committee reports with their accordant committee proposal. The chairman of the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters, Mr. Yamauchi, has asked that we consider these in the order that they are on the general orders of the day for Monday, June 26, and the first Standing Committee Report is No. 62 with Committee Proposal 18.

YAMAUCHI: The Standing Committee Report No. 62 and Committee Proposal No. 18 pertain to the distribution of powers. The committee has agreed to the final article which reads as follows:

> The powers of government shall be divided into three separate and distinct departments, legislative, executive and judicial; and no person or persons belonging to or constituting one of these departments shall exercise any of the powers properly belonging to either of the others, except as otherwise expressly directed or permitted in the Constitution.

This article was agreed upon after - -

J. TRASK: So that we might have something on the floor, I so move that we tentatively adopt Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 18.

APOLIONA: I second the motion.

YAMAUCHI: In writing this article, we have referred to the Model Constitution, Article IV, and to Article III of the New Jersey Constitution and found that this article of the distribution of powers is found in 41 state constitutions. We feel that it is traditional and basic that these three powers of - - three branches of government have separate powers, and that there be no over-concentration of powers in any one branch; that the separation of these powers would provide for independence of each branch of the government; and also that in the event that the powers be granted to one particular branch which in principle is not their own, such powers should be expressed in the Constitution.

However, before going further, the committee would like to make an amendment to the original article by changing- - by deleting the word "departments" on sentence two and four and insert the word "branches." This is in - - this change was made by the New Jersey Constitution when the new Constitution was drafted.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion to amend. Is there a second?

SMITH: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is to amend the section so that the word "departments," appearing on the second and the fourth line will be deleted, and inserted in lieu thereof the word "branches." Any questions?

HOLROYDE: The "departments" appears also on the - - three places in that section. Shouldn't it be replaced in every instance?

CHAIRMAN: Where is the third place, Mr. Holroyde?

HOLROYDE: I stand corrected. I'm reading the wrong section.

SAKAKIHARA: On the fourth line.

RICHARDS: I believe the punctuation is wrong; in the second line after the word "branches," there should be a colon and not a comma.

CHAIRMAN: Do you move to insert a colon in lieu of a comma?

RICHARDS: I so do.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second? It's been seconded. That a colon on the second - -

ROBERTS: Couldn't we leave that to Style, instead of putting commas and semicolons in, if it's the sense of the committee?

CHAIRMAN: Well, the motion has been made and seconded now.

BRYAN: Point of order. I don't think that has anything to do with the motion before the house to amend by putting the word "branches" in and I think it should be held if it's to be made. I believe it's out of order now.

CHAIRMAN: Chair stands corrected. The motion before the house - - Will you withdraw that motion for a moment,

Mr. Richards. The question before the house is the insertion of the word "branches" in lieu of the word "departments" on the second and the fourth line. Any questions as to that motion? All those in favor? Opposed. Carried.

TAVARES: I would like to ask the members of the committee whether the Federal Constitution has any such specific provision about separation of powers?

CHAIRMAN: You ask that question of whom?

TAVARES: Of any member of the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any member of the committee that would like to answer that question? Mr. Yamauchi.

YAMAUCHI: I'd like to ask the sub-committee chairman on distribution of powers to answer that. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Just a moment; I'll get that.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Lai, do you want to answer the question?

LAI: Is this article right now approved? Did we vote on this?

CHAIRMAN: No, no. The vote, Mr. Lai, was to substitute the word "branches" for the word "departments" where it appears on the second and fourth line. We are now considering a question that has been asked by Mr. Tavares.

LAI: Well, may I ask another question?

CHAIRMAN: There is a question that we are waiting on right now, Mr. Lai. While we're waiting for that, Mr. Lai, do you have another question? Mr. Tavares, if you will wait a moment.

LAI: I don't see any necessity of having this article in the Constitution. I don't know what is the purpose behind this, the intent of the committee in having something like this.

SMITH: I am not able to find that, but it calls for three distinct branches of government. All we are actually intending to do here is reiterating that there should be three branches of government having separate powers, "and that there be no over-concentration of powers in any one branch. This is to preserve the principle of check and balance which is the very essence of our representative form of government; that these powers so delegated be distinct and not overlapping insofar as practicable."

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Yamamoto, do you wish to add to that answer?

YAMAMOTO: I just want to clear one item. This article, I see it in the State of New Jersey, page 6, "Distribution of powers of government." It's in there.

TAVARES: It is my recollection that there is nothing in the Federal Constitution specifically requiring separation of powers, yet the courts have within reasonable limits protected the separation of powers because of the theory implicit in the document. Now, it is not true that three departments can operate as though each is in a vacuum of its own. They overlap over large fields. The governor has a veto; therefore, he exercises legislative power to some extent; and so on down the line. Each department has to do a little overlapping.

Now, when you have a general document that gives legislative power to one department, executive power to another department or branch, and judicial power to a third branch, you have implicit in the document the separation of powers. But when you put a specific provision in there, I think you are heading for trouble. The Federal Government has had no trouble over a hundred and fifty years without such a provision. The Model Constitution, as I recall it, doesn't have such a provision. At least, I can't find it. Just because New Jersey put it in I don't see the necessity for it, and I think we are borrowing trouble by putting it in.

CHAIRMAN: Do you wish to move for the deletion of the article, Delegate Tavares?

TAVARES: I think that we should vote not to adopt this. I shall therefore vote against adoption of the article.

WIRTZ: I'd just like to state that I had some hand in this inasmuch as this originated in Proposal No. 100. I examined many of the constitutions of the various states, and I would say offhand without subject to check that it appears in three-fourths of the state constitutions, this very statement. As far as the objection raised by the delegate from the fourth district, we have this exception, "except as otherwise expressly directed or permitted in the Constitution." That covers the veto power.

FONG: May I ask Delegate Wirtz this question. The Board of Health sets forth rules and regulations; that is the power of the executive. In setting forth rules and regulations, they legislate. How are we going to attack that by this provision?

WIRTZ: I think that the delegate from the fifth district knows how I feel about rules and regulations of the various boards, but I think that that is permitted in the - - would be permitted in the Constitution.

FONG: Well, it says here, "except as otherwise expressly directed or permitted in the Constitution." Nothing in our Constitution permits it, expresses it.

WIRTZ: Doesn't the executive article - -

CHAIRMAN: If you will please confine your remarks to the Chair so that we can get this on the tape recorder.

FONG: There is nothing in our Constitution which expressly permits the Board of Health to make rules and regulations. That is a statutory function, and the power is given by law. Now if we pass this proposal, then I can feel we're going to be up against a lot of difficulty.

WIRTZ: I agree with the delegate from the fifth district, unless we have something in either the executive or the legislative article. Unfortunately, I missed the debate on the executive article, and I haven't brought myself up to date yet. But it was my impression that that subject would be covered.

FONG: I move that we delete the words from "and no person or persons belonging to" and so forth right down to the end, leaving, "The powers - -

CHAIRMAN: The Chair didn't get the deletion. Where does it start?

FONG: Leaving only the first two and a half lines, "The powers of government shall be divided into three separate and distinct branches, legislative, executive and judicial," and delete the rest of the sentence.

CHAIRMAN: That is your motion?

FONG: My motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara seconds. Any discussion on the motion to delete? Place a period on the third line after the word "judicial," and delete the balance of the paragraph. Any discussion? Call for the question. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it.

HOLROYDE: I move that Committee Proposal No. 18 be adopted as amended.

SAKAKIHARA: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded to adopt the article as amended.

ROBERTS: I'd like to call the attention of the delegates to the fact that there are some things in our Constitution which don't quite conform. I would suggest, therefore, that some proviso be put in there as was in the second sentence, "except as expressly provided in this Constitution." So that the first sentence would read, "The powers of the government shall be divided among three distinct branches, the legislative, the executive, and judicial, except as expressly provided in this Constitution."

Now there may be some overlapping of powers. Usually the overlapping of powers is in terms of assignment of individuals, but it also may deal with the assignment of functions. And I have some concern, similar to that expressed by Mr. Tavares, to the effect that there may be situations where you have some overlapping of functions, and you don't want it to be declared unconstitutional where that is done. We do want, however, to keep the basic premise and basic content that we ought to have three distinct branches from the point of view of separation of powers and balance of power. But we have to be careful that we don't tie our hands on that.

CHAIRMAN: Do I understand that to be a motion, Delegate Roberts? Do I understand that to be a motion to amend?

ROBERTS: I'd like to suggest that to the delegates as an amendment.

KAWAHARA: I second that motion.

ASHFORD: The more I read this, the more I'm concerned. I do think when you say "distinct," "separate and distinct branches," you are really running contrary to present day facts. We know that the executive branch of government is more and more empowered with legislative functions by the legislature itself; and we know since the New Deal that there has been a great deal of judicial legislation; so that we do have a merging of functions in many instances. I think the use of the words "separate and distinct branches" will lead to confusion and litigation.

CHAIRMAN: Do you propose to delete them, Delegate Ashford?

ASHFORD: Yes.

A. TRASK: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: There is an amendment by Delegate Ashford to delete the words "separate and distinct" in the second line, which has been seconded. So that the first part of that sentence would read, "The powers of government shall be divided into three branches, legislative, executive and judicial." Now, if I may suggest - - if the Chair may suggest, we have a previous amendment which has not yet been voted on, and so I believe that I must ask you to withdraw the amendment for the time being, Delegate Ashford, and we'll discuss the amendment which is an addition to the amended article, adding a comma after the word "judicial," and adding the words "except as expressly provided in the Constitution." Any further discussion on that amendment? The Chair will put the question.

TAVARES: Before we vote on that, it seems to me that with or without Delegate Ashford's amendment and without Delegate Roberts' amendment, if our Committee of the Whole report very strongly states that this is simply declaratory of the general rule of division of powers set forth as the scheme is embodied in the Federal Constitution, and is intended to be merely declaratory of that, we could probably take care of it without these other amendments.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house now is whether to add the words "except as expressly provided in this Constitution." All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt. All those in favor please raise their right hand. Pardon me, would you get them up again please? Opposed? The ayes have it.

PORTEUS: Having voted with the majority, I move to reconsider the action. I think this should be debated a little further.

CHAIRMAN: Your motion is to reconsider for the reason of wanting to debate further?

TAVARES: Yes. I don't think it's been adequately considered.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to it?

TAVARES: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Delegate Tavares. It has been moved and seconded to reconsider our action as to this amendment. All those in favor. Opposed. The question is open.

PORTEUS: I think that the delegate from the fourth district, Delegate Roberts, had in mind that unless you added these additional words, that it would be more restrictive than our intent had been. But I think that if those words are not put in, and if then we turn to the amendment offered by the delegate from Molokai with respect to the deletion of "separate and distinct," we will then have this proposal in such form that it will not be too restrictive, and it will not cause us trouble in the future. It will be a clear declaration by the Convention that it subscribes to the theory that there are three branches of government, legislative, executive and judicial.

It is true that there has been a great overlap between the various ones. Many people in the executive departments are actually performing legislative functions with the rule-making power. At the same time, many of those in the executive department are exercising judicial or, as people like to say, quasi-judicial powers. They are making regulations and they are sitting in on the interpretation of their own regulations to see whether people have observed them or have not observed them. Board of Agriculture and Forestry, the Board of Health, many of the other departments of government have been clear examples.

So I think that we would do better not to adopt the amendment offered by the delegate from the fourth district; then proceed to the addition - - the deletion of these other words. Since there is only one amendment before this Convention and since this argument seems to presuppose that we will then move on to Delegate Ashford's amendment, I think it'd be quite in order to move that the words as suggested by Delegate Roberts be deleted and that the words "separate and distinct" also be deleted. I so move.

CHAIRMAN: If I may call your attention to the fact that the amendment is by way of an addition. Your amendment - -

PORTEUS: I move that it be further amended so as to provide that the only things that will be - -

CHAIRMAN: I believe, Delegate Porteus, that you must confine yourself to speaking against the amendment. A move to delete is equivalent to a move to table.

PORTEUS: I think you're quite correct.

CHAIRMAN: You are speaking then in opposition to the amendment?

PORTEUS: I am speaking in opposition to the amendment and I must admit that my opposition to the amendment also presupposes the support for the elimination to the words "separate and distinct," as proposed by the delegate from Molokai. But I think that if we do take that out, do not adopt the phraseology suggested by Delegate Roberts, that we will then have this in such form that we agree that we really want it.

KAWAHARA: In speaking for the inclusion of that amendment, I'd like to point out to the Convention here the words, "powers of government." As I see it, if we leave out the proposed amendment, it would mean that powers of government be divided only to the three departments. As I see it, our Constitution is going to be drawn up so that there will be one section, for example, on the Bill of Rights. If I look at that section, I see that there is a statement to this effect, that all government is founded on this authority, that is, "All political power of this State and the responsibility for the exercise thereof is inherent in the people." I'm wondering then if by deleting or not including this amendment, does it mean then that the power in government is restricted only to three departments in government? Does it mean then that the sections on suffrage and election, the sections on Bill of Rights, does it mean then that those sections do not apply, that the power of government is not inherent in those sections?

CHAIRMAN: You ask that question of whom? Mr. Tavares, do you wish to answer it?

TAVARES: The more I think about this, the more I fear adopting any part of this article. I realize that work has been done by a committee on it. However, without criticizing the committee at all, I would like to say that the report does not clear up in my mind a number of questions which are beginning to bother me quite a bit. For instance, today we have a separate tax appeal procedure and a tax appeal court. Will that be invalidated by this provision? They are not made a part necessarily of our courts, but there is a final appeal. But there might be such a thing as making the tax appeal court final on valuations which is desirable because then you can put experts on it and not have ordinary judges who just do all kinds of legal work passing on real estate valuations. We have boards today exercising quasi-judicial functions, revoking licenses after hearing, granting licenses after hearings, and doing a lot of things after hearings; acting in a quasi-judicial capacity. What effect is that going to have, this provision on those boards?

I do not have the answer in the report and I suppose that for the time available, the members of the committee probably won't have it either. We've got to remember we've got a lot of eggs here in our basket that might be broken if we put the wrong kind of gadget down inside of them that doesn't quite fit, and I am not sure that it fits.

For that reason, I feel it's very, very dangerous to put this kind of a provision in without again a very intense study as to the effect it will have on the existing setup of our governmental machinery. For that reason, with all due -- with apologies to the hard working committee, I hope they won't feel offended at my saying, I think we should not adopt this.

CHAIRMAN: You are speaking, Delegate Tavares, against the adoption of the entire article?

TAVARES: Yes. I have changed my mind after thinking the matter over.

CHAIRMAN: I'd like to ask the delegates to confine their remarks to the amendment, so that the faster we can dispose of the question on the amendment, the sooner we can get to the question on the entire article.

HAYES: Point of information. I would like to know from the chairman of the committee whether the office of the attorney general has been at their meetings and advised them on these proposals.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Yamauchi, do you wish to answer that question?

YAMAUCHI: I have appointed a sub-committee chairman who has looked into the matters and he will make a report in regard to this article. I'll turn it over to Mr. Smith.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Smith will answer that question.

SMITH: We did not have Miss Lewis in on the committee meeting. But I'd like to state the object of this separation was not simply to block action, it was to promote more wholesome action by segregation of incompatible functions and placing responsibility for each function on the organ best capable of discharging it.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion on the amendment?

HOLROYDE: Is a motion in order to delete the whole section?

CHAIRMAN: Not at the moment. The amendment was by way of an addition. I believe we have to dispose of the question as to the amendment before we can vote to delete the entire section. The Chair so rules.

ASHFORD: The discussion here seeming to favor the amendment which I offered and which was withdrawn for this, has convinced me that the entire section ought to be written into the Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: The entire section should be written in? Now, there is an amendment before the house.

CROSSLEY: Point of order. I believe that a motion to delete would always be in order. If anyone wanted to make that motion, it would be in order.

CHAIRMAN: The motion to delete the entire article?

CROSSLEY: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: Despite the fact that there is an amendment pending?

CROSSLEY: If the motion to delete the entire article carries, then the other would be academic. Therefore, that motion is in order, if the Chair wants to accept it.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the Chair feels that while you may possibly be correct, that would be at the present moment unfair to those who have debated the amendment.

KING: I would speak in favor of the pending amendment. However, there is some difference of opinion and it might be better to defer action on this particular proposal. The committee followed, I think, the precedence established by the constitutions of New Jersey and Missouri, both of which state --

PHILLIPS: I second that motion.

KING: -- both of which states and many other states have similar articles. The phraseology might be amended to more clearly reflect the desire of this Convention. I therefore move that we defer action on Committee Proposal No. 18 and proceed to consider the next proposal that the committee wishes to offer.

PORTEUS: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we defer action on Committee Proposal No. 18 for a later date and move on to the next committee proposal under Miscellaneous. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

We will now take up Committee Proposal 19, which is covered under Standing Committee Report No. 63.

YAMAUCHI: I move that the Committee Report 19 -- Committee Proposal 19 and Standing Committee Report No. 63 be tentatively adopted.

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to adopt Committee Proposal No. 19.

ASHFORD: I'd like to move an amendment to that. Change the period following the word "ability" within quotes, to a comma, and add the following, "and that I do not advocate or belong to any party, organization or association which advocates the overthrow by violence of the government of the State of Hawaii or of the United States."

YAMAMOTO: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that an amendment by way of an addition be placed. Would you read it once more, Delegate Ashford, slower.

ASHFORD: May I say, incidentally, that that is the language used in that amended H.R. 49 that came to us some weeks ago.

CHAIRMAN: I see. Now would you read that again, please? Thank you.

ASHFORD: "And that I do not advocate or belong to any party, organization or association which advocates the overthrow by violence of the government of the State of Hawaii or of the United States."

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion on the amendment?

YAMAUCHI: The committee concurs and is willing to accept such amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The committee accepts the amendment.

KING: Before the question is put, I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law if such an oath has been handled by his committee. May I restate the question? I just wish to ask the chairman of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law if he has covered the same subject, or is it agreeable to him to have it covered in this particular proposal?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, you wish to answer that question?

SHIMAMURA: May I state that there is no section in ordinances and continuity of law that provides for an oath. It does provide that no person who belongs to a party -- who advocates or belongs to a party, organization or association which advocates the overthrow by violence or force of the government of the State of Hawaii or of the United States shall hold any public office of profit or public employment.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate King?

KING: Yes. There's no conflict; it covers two phases of the same problem.

HEEN: May I ask whether any action was taken on that particular provision? It seems to me I've seen it somewhere, perhaps in a proposal submitted by your committee, Delegate Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: There is no provision on an oath, but there is a similar provision preventing any person who advocates or belongs to any party, organization or association which advocates the overthrow by violence of the government of Hawaii or of the United States from holding public office or public employment.

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

HEEN: Where can we find that? Under what proposal?

SHIMAMURA: There is no action taken on such an oath. It never was presented. The committee proposal is --

KING: While Delegate Shimamura is looking up the exact committee proposal, the proposal was originally introduced, I believe, by Delegate Trask and referred to the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law. They have adopted and reported out a proposal that covers employment. This covers the oath, so it really will cover the subject on two sides.

TAVARES: That ordinance is, rather, proposal is Committee Proposal No. 24, Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: Committee Proposal No. 24?

TAVARES: Section 1. That provides for the disqualification to hold office or employment. It doesn't provide for the oath.

A. TRASK: Delegate Ashford says that she will accept an amendment to -- as follows: after the word -- the third word, "officers," insert "and employees"; so that the commencement of the section would read "All public officers and employees." And further, that after the word "respective offices" --

CHAIRMAN: Will you speak into the mike, please?

A. TRASK: And the further amendment, after the words "respective offices" in the second line, under the word "public officers," insert "and employment."

CHAIRMAN: After the word "respective offices" --

A. TRASK: Insert the words "and employment."

CHAIRMAN: "And employment"?

A. TRASK: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: I understand this is part of the amendment of Delegate Ashford?

ASHFORD: I will accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: As I understand the amendment, just to clarify it in everyone's mind, on the first line after the word "public officers," there is to be added the words "and employees."

A. TRASK: Correct.

CHAIRMAN: And on the second line, after the word "respective offices," to be added the words "and employment."

A. TRASK: Correct.

KAWAHARA: The word "Constitution" there, "the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the State of Hawaii"—this is just a matter of style—I wonder if the word "constitution" shouldn't be spelled with a capital C?

CHAIRMAN: I think we can leave it to the Style Committee.

TAVARES: Again I'm wondering if we aren't going a little too far here. I want to point out a situation where it may be necessary and desirable for the State to employ even aliens or non-citizens to do certain things for the State, perhaps outside of the State; or to get experts in some field, in a particular epidemic or some kind of a very intricate scientific situation, who would not be citizens of the United States or citizens of the State. And, therefore, we might have trouble. I am thinking now of commissioners of deeds. In foreign countries, we may not be able to get a citizen. There are many people who employ a citizen of the United States as a local consul for a foreign government. If they make them take that oath, they are likely to make them eliminate their citizenship. If you are going to hold it for officers, I think at least I wouldn't put it in for employees because of that situation. You may, for instance, appoint a fiscal agent in New York who isn't a citizen of Hawaii. Should he be sworn to uphold the Constitution of the State? I don't know. Or a Constitution of the United States? In case you have a fiscal agent in some foreign country, is he going to be asked to uphold the Constitution of the United States? It may be we should make some exceptions here.

KAGE: In reference to the amendment to - - I'm opposed to the amendment to include the word "and employees." If Delegate Trask would read the report of the committee, he will notice that it includes all public employees also, and I am not of the legal profession but I think the legal interpretation of all public officers takes in all those things.

A. TRASK: In response to that inquiry - - statement, I'd like to say that in the consideration of the section with respect to the employment of people who are in parties, associations or other subversive organizations who are being excluded from the—that's the amendment of Senator O'Mahoney—we expanded the expression "officers" and adopted additionally the word "and employees" so that there will be no person in the government of the State of Hawaii who would be either an officer or an employee of the government who would belong to any subversive organization.

LOPER: I'd like to call to the attention of the previous speaker that if you put "and employees" in the first line and in the second, he has also to put it in line 6.

CHAIRMAN: Perhaps it would be well for the Chair to read the entire article as proposed to be amended.

> All public officers and employees shall, before entering upon the duties of their respective offices and employment, take and subscribe to the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear or affirm that I will support and defend the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the State of Hawaii, and I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of ____ to the best of my ability; and that I do not advocate or belong to any party organization or association which advocates the overthrow by violence of the government of the State of Hawaii or the government of the United States." The Legislature may prescribe further oaths or affirmations.

Now at the moment, the question before the house is whether or not we will adopt the article as just read.

BRYAN: I think as you read that, there should be a comma after the word "party" and before "organization," so it would be "party, organization or association."

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. "Belong to any party," comma, "organization or association."

A. TRASK: In response to the observation made by Delegate Loper, he is in order. It would therefore, be necessary, to be consistent with the amendment at the commencement of the first sentence, on the sixth line, which reads as follows, "I will faithfully discharge the duties of," should be inserted "my employment or"; then it would read on "the office of ____." That would be in order. Would Delegate Ashford accept that?

ASHFORD: I would, but I think you need in brackets, "as the case may be."

A. TRASK: "As the case may be," that's correct, or a slant.

CHAIRMAN: Let me get this straight. Have you accepted a form of amendment, Delegate Ashford, to your proposal?

KING: The chairman of the committee accepted Delegate Ashford's original amendment, but now Delegate Ashford is being asked to accept amendments to her amendment, and the chairman of the committee hasn't had an opportunity to express his opinion. I suggest the Chair recognize the chairman of the committee to see whether those amendments are going to be accepted; otherwise, we are going to be voting on amendments to her amendment, and her amendment has already been accepted by the sponsors of the original article.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. The Chair stands corrected and I do feel that we should vote on the amended section up to the present time, to clear the way for further discussions. However, the Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Delegate Yamauchi.

YAMAUCHI: The reason for accepting the amendment by Delegate Ashford is, originally the committee considered the sentence, "The legislature may prescribe further oaths or affirmations," would cover the loyalty oath that has been mentioned this afternoon. However, we accepted the amendment. That's all.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that there has been sufficient discussion on the proposed amendment so far, and would like to put the question.

LUIZ: Point of information. I would like to understand this thing here. You have two parts, "All public officers and employees." Are you breaking that down into two different parts with the amended section from Delegate Trask?

CHAIRMAN: Your question is whether or not that is included in the amendment that is about to be put in the question?

LUIZ: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: It is included at the present time. The Chair has recognized the amendment.

KAGE: I don't think the word "and employees" is included in this amendment we are voting on now. The committee did not accept "and employees." We only accepted the addition after "my ability"; so we are not voting on "and employees."

J. TRASK: I'd like to speak in favor of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, Delegate Trask. On the point brought up by Delegate King, that is correct. So the latter amendment, the addition of the words "and employees" in the first line and the addition of the words "and employment" in the second line has not been accepted by the committee. Is that correct?

KAGE: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, the present amendment—and the Chair would like to ask the cooperation of the delegates at the moment to get the first amendment out of the way so that we may more intelligently discuss the others—the only question before the house at the present time is the addition to the oath in quotations, and that addition reads, "and that I do not advocate or belong to any party, organization or association which advocates the overthrow by violence of the government of the State of Hawaii or the government of the United States." The question is whether or not to add that to the section.

SHIMAMURA: Under the requirements of H.R. 49, and under the proposal in line with H.R. 49, in the section on ordinances, the words "force or" appeared before "violence." I wonder if the delegate lady from Molokai will accept that amendment and also the chairman of the committee.

CHAIRMAN: You are quoting from the requirements of H.R. 49?

SHIMAMURA: Requirements of H.R. 49. Include the words "force or" before "violence." I think that should be so amended.

ASHFORD: I think that's a paraphrase of "vi et armis" and I accept it.

CHAIRMAN: You have accepted. How about the committee?

YAMAUCHI: We also accept it.

CHAIRMAN: Accepted. Any further question on this proposed amendment?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Now, are there any further amendments to be offered?

A. TRASK: I move for the amendment, as indicated heretofore, that after the third word in the section, insert the word, after the word "officers," "and employees." Then on the second line toward the end, after the word "offices," insert "and employment." And then in the sixth line, after the word "duties of," insert "my employment (or)."

FUKUSHIMA: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to amend the article as stated.

A. TRASK: The reason for this, I feel certainly that all of us would certainly want Dr. Reinecke to take this oath if he becomes an employee. He won't be an officer of the Territory, but he certainly would be an employee, and I think he should be confronted with this oath, so that there would be no doubt in the minds of anyone here. Under no circumstances would Dr. Reinecke as an employee of the Territory of Hawaii be considered an officer. Officer of what?

I want to say to the committee, it doesn't appear from your record—and, Delegate Kage, I have looked at your report—I want to say that there are decisions in our court, particularly with reference to election laws, that officers are given a certain category as distinguished from employees, and certain laws apply to officers which do not apply to employees. So, out of caution and so forth, as we say, to the amendment of Senator O'Mahoney, to H.R. 49, with respect to subversive people not being in the employment of the State, I believe it is altogether pertinent that we include these expressions, "employees." That's why I'm for the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the amendment?

KAGE: My source of the information is the attorney general's office. When the question "all public officers" was brought up, I went to the attorney general's office and I asked them for the clarification of the words "all public officers." And this is what he gave me. "All public officers" applies to political, as well as executive or judicial officers of the State, and so forth. I think that is an over-all, general phrase that catches everything. And I would say that quite a number of these things that we are talking about, employees and things of that sort, they would be statutory.

TAVARES: I am very sorry to differ with the gentleman who has just spoken, but I am very certain that the word "office" is very definitely not held by the courts to include employment. It is a very, very -- one of the very strong rules of construction of the courts. The interpretation given the gentleman meant officers of a county, officers of a municipal subdivision, officers of any lesser agency of the State, but they still are officers. They didn't say employees and from the citation read by the gentleman, employees isn't mentioned. And there are thousands and thousands of decisions, I think, that distinguish between office and employment, and many in our own Territory have distinguished between the two. There is a very clear distinction between office and employment.

CHAIRMAN: You are speaking then in favor of the amendment?

TAVARES: Yes, with the qualification I made that -- We have one little matter that I don't know just how to take care of, but I'd just call it to the attention of the delegation.

YAMAUCHI: If you would read the report there in the last sentence, it says,

> As relating to this proposal, the phrase "all public officers" applies to political, as well as executive or judicial officers of this State, to officers of the political subdivisions, i.e., counties, cities and counties, municipalities or other subdivisions of this State and to all employees therein.

HEEN: When we speak of officers, we mean officers. In the Organic Act there is a provision that no person holding public office shall be eligible for election to the legislature. That has been interpretated by the courts here. For instance, the notary public is an officer, and he cannot run for election to the legislature unless he resigns that particular office. There have been employees who have run for election to the legislature and they have served in the legislature. For instance, employees, take of the County of Hawaii, have been elected to the legislature without resigning from their positions of employment, as distinguished from officers. So there is no question that there is a marked distinction between the term "offices" and "positions of employment."

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the proposed amendment? The Chair will now put the question.

YAMAUCHI: The committee accepts the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The committee accepts the amendment. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Now we come to the original motion which is to accept the article. I think that motion should be amended to accept the article as amended.

ASHFORD: I confess myself very much concerned over the remarks of Mr. Tavares on the commissioners of deeds and so forth. I think that some consideration should be given to that before we adopt the section irrevocably.

CHAIRMAN: I think, Delegate Ashford, in the absence of any discussion, that if you feel that way the thing would be to move to defer.

KING: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

KING: I think it's pretty clear that we are in favor of the article as amended, but we do want to cover the point raised by Delegate Tavares, so I move that we defer action on Committee Proposal No. 19 till a later time.

YAMAMOTO: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we defer action on Committee Proposal No. 19. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Next committee proposal before the committee is Committee Proposal No. 15, covered by Standing Committee Report No. 56.

YAMAUCHI: I move that Committee Proposal No. 15 and Standing Committee Report No. 56 be tentatively adopted.

APOLIONA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to adopt Committee Proposal No. 15.

APOLIONA: Speaking for adoption of the proposal, your subcommittee on boundaries of the Miscellaneous Committee went into this boundary subject in all detail. The services of the legislative bureau, the services of Mr. T. Awana and James Dunn, of the survey office, and the services of Miss Lewis of the attorney general's office were had.

The committee followed as much as possible the language of the Organic Act. In Section 2 of the Organic Act, it says

> That the islands acquired by the United States of America under an Act of Congress entitled "Joint resolution to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States," approved July 7, 1898, shall be known as the Territory of Hawaii.

But your committee has improved on the language so that it could leave no doubt in the interpretation of the boundaries of our future State of Hawaii. The language as proposed in the article,

> The islands and territorial waters heretofore constituting the Territory of Hawaii shall be known as the State of Hawaii is the language that has been adopted by the subcommittee on boundaries. We have before us - - I think each delegate was presented with three maps prepared by our Territory of Hawaii [Survey] office showing the islands, and the islands were to include islets, reefs, rocks and whatever you have.

So at this time, I ask that the chairman put the question.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

TAVARES: The report is splendid and the article is just about the best that you could have.

CHAIRMAN: Glad it has your blessings, Delegate Tavares. If there is no further discussion, the Chair will put the question.

NIELSEN: It says nothing here about any additional land contributed by Mauna Kea or Mauna Loa.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried, unanimously.

Now move on to Committee Proposal No. 21, covered by Committee Report No. 65.

YAMAUCHI: I move that Committee Proposal No. 21 and Standing Committee Report No. 65, be tentatively adopted.

DOWSON: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 21 be adopted. Is there any discussion? Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: Just a minute. I haven't found my copy yet.

CHAIRMAN: We are now discussing Committee Proposal No. 21, covered by Standing Committee Report No. 65. The proposal reads as follows:

> Whenever in this Constitution the term "person," "persons," "people," or any personal pronoun is used, the same shall be interpreted to include persons of both sexes.

It's been moved and seconded to adopt this section. Is there any discussion? Delegate Tavares, have you found the proposal?

HEEN: I think this is one place where we can take care of the use of the term "state." That has been used several times with reference to those qualified to vote, with reference to being eligible for appointments to the bench, with reference to being eligible for election to the legislature. In various articles, you find the term that no person shall be eligible for appointment to the supreme court or to the circuit court unless he shall have lived in the state for three years or more. Now, when the Constitution is adopted, there will be no one here living in the state for three years prior to election or prior to appointment to these various offices. So, therefore, there should be some saving clause here under this provision that perhaps, "The word 'state' whereever used in this Constitution shall apply to the Territory, unless obviously repugnant."

I've just been handed a provision perhaps which would take care of this situation.

> When a term of service or of residence under or in the state is required, the time of service or residence under or in the territory shall be construed as under or in the state, and continuity of operation of the territorial and county retirement, civil service and classification systems under the state and the counties shall be preserved until otherwise provided by law.

Now the latter part of that I had nothing to do with it. I don't know whether that will create more confusion or not. But I was just talking about residence in the state.

CHAIRMAN: Do you offer this as an amendment?

HEEN: Somebody handed this to me, I'd like to have that party be responsible for it.

PORTEUS: I agree with the chairman of the Legislative Committee. I think when the committee drafted that article, as well as when the Committee on the Judiciary drafted that article, I think there they required that attorneys be admitted to practice before the supreme court of the State for about ten years, if I'm not mistaken. Now, somewhere along the line, we have to agree that when we refer to the state, when we talk about qualifications - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Porteus, if I may interrupt you, the amendment has not yet been offered.

PORTEUS: That's what I'm trying to forestall, Mr. Chairman. The thing is that I think that this should properly be handled in one of the ordinances of the Constitution rather than in the Constitution. It's certainly not something that is necessary for the continuing framework of our government. After a certain number of years, it really ought to drop out of sight; and as an ordinance, I think it could be more easily be dropped out of sight than by writing it into the Constitution and having to specifically amend the Constitution later in order to get such terminology out of the way.

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

HEEN: If I may suggest, it might be included in the schedule where that schedule contains a lot of provisions which sooner or later will become functus. That's where it properly belongs, but somebody will have to remember it when we get to schedules.

CHAIRMAN: I take it, therefore, that the amendment is not going to be presented? Is there any further discussion on the article as it stands?

TAVARES: A matter of clarification. Naturally I am not in a position to examine every article, every provision as to whether this fits, but I take it that it is understood that this definition isn't intended to force the legislature or the State to treat women and men absolutely the same in all situations.

CHAIRMAN: Heaven forbid, Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: That there is going to be a power of classification.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, I am sure there will be.

TAVARES: I say this because, while I think the provision is unnecessary, I am not going to oppose it.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the article?

HEEN: It says here, "or any personal pronoun is used, the same shall be interpreted to include persons of both sexes." In a lot of places in the articles which have already been adopted, you find the personal pronoun "it," so shall that be construed as being him or her?

CHAIRMAN: I don't believe that's a personal pronoun, Delegate Heen.

HEEN: Personal pronoun is - - oh I see, that refers to persons, is that it?

CHAIRMAN: That is a pronoun.

DELEGATE: Maybe Dr. Larsen would like to clarify that.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion on the article?

NIELSEN: I question the last two words. How can a person be of both sexes?

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion on the article? Delegate Larsen, will you answer Delegate Nielsen's question, please?

LARSEN: There are people who have both sexes.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you very much. I thought so all along.

AKAU: I just wanted to clarify two things. In the first place, "it" is neuter, so it might not refer to either. And, I think, "interpreted to include persons of both sexes," perhaps there should be some parenthesis put down, "or either sex" when it refers to one. It just would be more clarification, but it isn't absolutely necessary. I think as it is, it's all right.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the call for the question? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it. Carried.

Now I believe it is the intention of the committee to continue until 6 p.m. or thereabouts. The Chair will therefore call for a very brief recess.

KING: I was going to suggest that we maybe finish one more proposal and then rise. We have some little business on the desk, so that we'll conclude by about 5:30 or 5:45, but I have no objections to a five minute recess.

CHAIRMAN: Five minute recess is ordered.

(RECESS)

H. RICE: I move for the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 13.

SAKAKIHARA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to adopt Committee Proposal No. 13 which reads:

> State flag. The emblem of the Territory of Hawaii known as the Hawaiian flag shall be the flag of the State of Hawaii.

Any discussion?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Adopted unanimously.

ASHFORD: I now move that there be inserted in one of these reports something that hasn't been covered yet and is imperative to cover. When the judiciary article was up, I talked to Mr. Anthony, the chairman of that committee, about it, and he said he thought it should go in Miscellaneous, so I have here provided it. May I read it?

CHAIRMAN: I believe, Delegate Ashford, that we are committed to taking up these various proposals as they come up. Have you determined that they don't belong in any one of those places?.

ASHFORD: I move to amend that proposal by adding another section to it.

CHAIRMAN: Which proposal, Delegate Ashford?

ASHFORD: The one we just - -

CHAIRMAN: Would you like to add it to the next one that was coming up?

ASHFORD: Well, I'd like to - -

SILVA: I would like at this spot to move that we reconsider our actions so that Miss Ashford can get her amendment in.

C. RICE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: I wasn't trying to stop Delegate Ashford. Delegate Ashford, I was just trying to find out, do you want to bring in an entirely new proposal or an amendment to a proposal?

ASHFORD: I can't bring in an entirely new proposal; therefore, it must be an amendment and it can - -

CHAIRMAN: There is no proposal before the committee. That's what I'm trying to point out.

ASHFORD: Well, may I have the consent of the Convention to read it; then anybody who wants to can - - the Chair or anybody else can decide where it should go. It should certainly go in.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

ASHFORD:

> The style of all process in the State courts shall hereafter run in the name of "The State of Hawaii," and all prosecutions shall be carried on in the name and by the authority of the State of Hawaii.

That is the language of the Organic Act excepting from Territory to State. It must go in the Constitution, in my opinion, and I don't know where else it should go now except - -

KING: May I ask Delegate Ashford, would that provision not properly come under ordinances or would it more properly come under miscellaneous matters?

ASHFORD: It shouldn't come under ordinances because ordinances are of a temporary nature and this is permanent.

KING: If Delegate Ashford would preserve her amendment for a moment, we could ask the chairman of the committee to bring up Proposal No. 12, which is the seat of government and her suggestion would very properly come as an amendment to that, as an additional paragraph to this section. Is that agreeable to Delegate Ashford?

CHAIRMAN: Do you feel that at the time that Section 12 is brought up, that Committee Proposal No. 12 is brought up, that that would be the proper time for such an amendment?

KING: I understood the chairman was about to ask to have that considered next.

CHAIRMAN: I see. Delegate Yamauchi.

YAMAUCHI: I move that [Committee] Proposal No. 12 and Standing Committee Report No. 53 - -

CHAIRMAN: I don't believe it's necessary that you make a motion. I think that as chairman of the Committee on Miscellaneous you indicate that that is the next proposal that you wish to take up; the Committee of the Whole will go along.

YAMAUCHI: Would it be necessary to make any motion?

CHAIRMAN: Not necessary as far as the Chair is concerned. The next committee proposal to come before this committee is Proposal No. 12, along with Standing Committee Report No. 53. Is there a motion to adopt?

YAMAUCHI: I move that we adopt Committee Proposal No. 12.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

KAGE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to adopt Committee Proposal No. 12 which reads as follows:

> The seat of government of this State shall be located at the City of Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, unless otherwise provided by law.

Any discussion?

ASHFORD: I move we delete that section and insert instead the amendment which I read.

KING: Will the lady delegate yield for a question? I thought Delegate Ashford was going to add that on as an additional phrase.

ASHFORD: Yes, but I don't like the original section, so I moved to delete that.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

KING: If Delegate Ashford offers her proposal as a substitution, she is likely to lose the proposal.

ASHFORD: I'll offer this as a second section, and ask that the second section be voted on first and then perhaps we can move it up to Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: You are offering an amendment? Are you in the process of offering an amendment, Delegate Ashford?

ASHFORD: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: Well, would you please read it then, thank you.

ASHFORD:

> The style of all process in the State courts shall hereafter run in the name of "The State of Hawaii," and all prosecutions shall be carried on in the name and by the authority of the State of Hawaii.

I have copies that could be distributed.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: There is a second to the motion to amend. Would the messengers please distribute.

SMITH: I don't believe that's germane to the section. Therefore, it should be put in a separate part of this proposal, if the chairman so thinks.

CHAIRMAN: It is added, I believe, as a second section of the proposed article.

SMITH: I believe that this new addition is properly or more germane to the -- coming under general provisions. That was one that we had in the Constitution, statements like this which we want to have in, we could insert.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion on the amendment? May I ask for a copy of that amendment?

AKAU: Is it legal terminology to use the word "run"? I'm not familiar with it and I just simply asked.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, the Chair didn't get your question, Delegate Akau.

AKAU: Delegate Ashford answered it really. I was asking about the legal terminology of the word "run." I didn't know how it was being used here, but apparently it is a legal term with which I am not familiar.

CHAIRMAN: The word what?

AKAU: "Run," the second line.

HEEN: That's correct. That's one of the 90 meanings that can be used in connection with the word "run," as pointed out by Delegate Arashiro the other day.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion on the amendment?

PORTEUS: I'm not satisfied that this is an essential amendment. I'd like time to look into it. I don't know in what other style the process in the State courts would run, save in the name of the State.

ASHFORD: In many courts it runs in the name of the people.

PORTEUS: Well, so long as the process runs effectively in criminal prosecutions, I don't think it makes much difference whether it runs in the name of the people of Hawaii, or whether it runs in the name of the State of Hawaii. That to me is not particularly a constitutional matter.

ASHFORD: Well you're wrong. It was considered necessary and desirable to have it in the Organic Act. It seems to me that when we're starting with the State, the very day after we become a State we should know how that process should run.

PORTEUS: I think we can handle that in ordinances. Incidentally, if the Organic Act is a test, I think we'd better spell out all the homesteading laws, because the homesteading laws are spelled out in detail in the Organic Act. But I don't know if the Organic Act always is the best thing to turn back to.

In order to give time to look into this problem, I move that action on this committee proposal, or rather, on the amendments be deferred. Then we can see whether we wish to adopt the question of the seat of government and following that, we can come back to this Committee Proposal 12 at some later time. I move that the proposed amendment and Committee Proposal No. 12 be deferred till a later sitting of this committee.

YAMAUCHI: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair's understanding is that you are asking for deferment of Committee Proposal No. 12 and the proposed amendment. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried. Committee Proposal No. 12 is deferred.

Delegate Yamauchi, you wish to take up Committee Proposal No. 14 at the present time?

YAMAUCHI: No, we would like to make a change in here.

CHAIRMAN: What's that? Fourteen?

YAMAUCHI: We would like to make a change in here in the order.

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

KING: I suspect there will be considerable discussion on this next proposal, the State seal. There seems to be two schools of thought. The discussion may run a little long. I would like to suggest that that proposal not be called up at this time.

YAMAUCHI: The Committee would like to take up Committee Proposal No. 17.

CHAIRMAN: Committee Proposal No. 17 has been called for by the chairman of the Committee on Miscellaneous, so that is before the house. That goes along with Standing Committee Report No. 58. Is there a motion to adopt?

YAMAUCHI: I so move.

DOWSON: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is to adopt Committee Proposal No. 17, which reads as follows:

> The legislature may provide for cooperation with the United States, or other states and territories, and political subdivisions in all matters affecting the public health, safety and general welfare, and may appropriate such sums as may be necessary to finance its fair share of the costs of such activities.

Is there any discussion? Delegate Larsen, did you wish recognition?

LARSEN: Well, I was just wondering why it was necessary to spell it out. "Public health, safety and general welfare," whether that could be eliminated. I'd like to ask the chairman if it's necessary, because I can conceive of matters relating to shipping and so on, business, that might not be; of course, it probably would be general welfare.

YAMAUCHI: Call on Dr. Kawahara to explain that.

KAWAHARA: Dr. Larsen's last quotation hit it right on the head there. It is covered by general welfare.

CHAIRMAN: It is covered by general welfare in your estimation. Any further discussion? No amendments? The Chair will put the question.

TAVARES: I have no objection to this section; I think it should be understood, however, that if we find that this doesn't fit some other provision, that we will reconsider it. Some question seems to be raised as to whether this will fit into some of the other articles that have not yet been considered. But I believe that there should be no difficulty in reconsidering, if we find that there is some language that we need to conform to other articles.

CHAIRMAN: That is the general understanding of the committee. All those in favor of the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 17 as submitted by the committee, please say "aye." Opposed.

A. TRASK: Point of information. A question of the chairman of this committee. I just wonder whether or not, say under the question of public health, whether there is -- would be some legislation in Congress providing for, well, sterilization, and that from Congress, now would this article provide a coercive effect on the legislature that such things must be -- such a conformitory expense or charge must be made? And if it isn't made, why, some action may be taken in the legislature or courts of some, some nature? I am quite concerned about that situation.

YAMAUCHI: I think that Delegate Roberts can inform you in regard to that paragraph over there.

ROBERTS: The section reads, "The legislature may," and "may appropriate." It doesn't require them to appropriate.

HEEN: This article reads, "The legislature may provide for cooperation with the United States, or other states and territories, and its political subdivisions." The word "its" refers to what, may I ask?

YAMAUCHI: The word "its"? The intention of the committee in regard to the word "its" referred to the State.

HEEN: You have states there and territory.

NIELSEN: Point of order. There is nothing before the Convention.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, there is, Delegate Nielsen. The Chair --

HEEN: I think the word "its" is incorrectly used. It should have been, "their political subdivisions."

CHAIRMAN: The question is as to --

AKAU: A point of being purist -- On the excuse of being a purist, United States, it may be considered not as a collective thing, collective word; therefore, you could very well use "its."

HEEN: Well, what are you going to do about the words "states and territories"?

AKAU: In order to be interpreted --

CHAIRMAN: Has your question been satisfied, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: No, it has not.

CHAIRMAN: Your question was what does "its" --

HEEN: I move that that word "its" be deleted and the word "their" be substituted for that word.

NIELSEN: Second the motion.

KING: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: There is -- the motion is to delete in the third line the word "its" and substitute in lieu thereof the word "their."

YAMAUCHI: The committee accepts it.

CROSSLEY: I move that we defer action on this section until tomorrow and that we rise, report progress and beg leave to sit again.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: If you will, Delegate Crossley, I believe we can get through this section in just a moment.

CROSSLEY: Well, there seems to be a lot of question on some of the words in here; that's why I made it a two-part motion, because we would have to defer action on this in order to rise. There seems to be quite a bit of controversy about some of the words. I thought that would give some of us a chance to look them over.

CHAIRMAN: I believe, Delegate Crossley, the only word that's been questioned is this pronoun which has now been amended. Now, if there are any other questions, the Chair isn't aware of it at the present time.

A. TRASK: I want to know what cooperation with states. Does it mean the northern states or does it mean the southern states?

CHAIRMAN: I don't believe that that question is in order.

HOLROYDE: I'll second Delegate Crossley's motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made to defer action on Committee Proposal No. 17; to rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Will those in favor please raise their right hand. Opposed. Carried.

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole will come to order. Delegates may sit at their ease. When we rose yesterday afternoon, we had just deferred Committee Proposal No. 12. The Chair would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters whether or not he would like to take up Committee Proposal No. 12 now or pass on to 16.

YAMAUCHI: We would like to defer No. 12 and take at this time, Standing Committee Report No. 55 and the Committee Proposal No. 14, and Resolution No. 29.

CHAIRMAN: We will then turn to Standing Committee Report No. 55, which covers Committee Proposal No. 14, and along with the Committee Proposal there is in your separate book on resolutions, Resolution No. 29.

YAMAUCHI: I move that we tentatively adopt Committee Proposal No. 14.

OKINO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Okino seconds the motion.

APOLIONA: Speaking for the adoption of the State seal incorporating the present seal of the Territory of Hawaii, your Committee on Miscellaneous Affairs begs leave of this Convention to accept the present Territory of Hawaii seal. But at the same time, the committee knows that another seal has been proposed by a fellow delegate of this Convention and as we know, a committee proposal is always on the defensive. So, at this time, your Committee on Miscellaneous Affairs on the seal rests its case, the defense rests.

CHAIRMAN: For the benefit of the delegates - -

LARSEN: Mr. Chairman - -

CHAIRMAN: One moment, please. For the benefit of the delegates, the seal proposed by the committee is the smaller of the two copies of which you should all have, and the other seal referred to is the larger, copies of which you should all have. The Chair will recognize Delegate Larsen.

LARSEN: I always hesitate to get up after a committee has made a proposal and suggest some changes. However, I appreciate what the delegate said, and I also appreciate that we should continue this coat of arms, that carries with it a great deal of tradition. Therefore, I want you to note, on this large seal, that it is the coat of arms of Hawaii. As you know, this has gone through various changes. It was first adopted in 1896, and then in 1900 made into the territorial seal. I want to call the committee's attention, however, that now I speak for the sake of better art. I would like to ask our chairman, who just recently crowned Miss Hawaii, how he would have felt if she went to Atlantic City garbed in the bathing suits of 1896. I'm sure he would have blushed; I'm sure he would have felt unhappy; and he would know very well that Miss Hawaii could never expect to win with the bathing suit of 1896.

CHAIRMAN: She never would have gotten kissed, Delegate Larsen.

LARSEN: I'm sure he wouldn't have enjoyed sizing her up as well either.

However, I now call to your attention that this seal is merely taking off the bathing suit of 1896, and putting on a modern streamlined one. It's the seal as it was.

There has been some objection, too, to the fact that Kamehameha stands there, with his hand down. Could I read for you just a moment, a newspaper of the nineteenth century, faded with age, but in which it tells the story of the coming of the statue. It says, "It has an odd fault. The artist familiarized himself with the Hawaiian type of physique and there is besides every reason to be assured that the likeness of the subject is excellent in every detail. The flaw is with the upraised hand. The Hawaiian gesture is always made with the palm of the hand downward. In this case, the palm is upward." That's really the only change.

The other suggestion made by one was that perhaps Liberty should be - - the Statue of Liberty, familiarly called Columbia, should be holding the American flag for a State seal; and if she does, then we would have to put Liberty on the right side, and Kamehameha on the left. This is the State of Hawaii, and I feel as the old seal shows it, the flag should, be on the left. Now, so much for the seal.

With everything remaining except the suggestion that the star, which was put in in 1900, with the hope that we would become a star of the flag of the U.S., should now contain the number, whatever numbered star it is, 49 or 50. The date "1950" down below is shown in 23 seals of the United States states.

I might also say, I compared this seal, I mean our old seal, the seal presented by the committee, with the seals of all the states and all the territories, and with all these—what the artists call garbage that was used as the baroque style of decoration in 1900 and in 1896—removed, we now have the present seal. I want to also call your attention to the fact that the rays around of this rising sun represents 23; there are 23 islands in the Hawaiian group we adopted yesterday.

In other words, I think everything else has been explained, and I've tried to give as much evidence as I could so we wouldn't have to discuss too much. You either want it or you don't want it. But may I suggest two ways of doing it. For instance, the State flag is only in one constitution, that is Florida. The State seal is in some 33, I think it is. However, to do a proper seal, this should be done completely. This that you have here is done by one of our outstanding artists of Hawaii, but is merely a sketch. It should be done carefully, in proper color and so on, as to become the coat of arms. To do a proper type of sketch, which this State really should have, and in none of our previous seals we've had true art, it should cost anywhere from $300 to a $1,000. I've asked various artists and I know. This committee is not ready, I believe, to spend that sum, but I don't think we should be niggardly about this. And there were two suggestions made. One was that we adopt this in principle and pass it on to the legislature; and the second, that we adopt it as a seal along this line, but hoping that funds would be found to create this proper seal.

Now I ask you, that this result of a happy hour might end in your hands in an abortion, but I'm hoping that it will become the real child of Hawaii and live on in its more beautiful style. The turning out is deliberate, because it means a broad horizon, rather than a narrowed horizon. I rest my case.

APOLIONA: Your committee has very little to say against the good work of Dr. Larsen. But our committee's proposed seal, as is represented by the blue one here, has been the tradition of the people and the government of Hawaii and of its people. Dr. Larsen's seal, as he has stated, was drawn by one of the foremost architects in town. I am sorry to say right now that your Committee on Miscellaneous Affairs did not have the facilities to go to one of the good architects.

Now, Dr. Larsen's seal has some good points, and so has the old Hawaiian seal. Maybe we can get together with Dr. Larsen, and compromise on the certain things that should go in our new seal. We submit that the shield, Hawaiian shield as presented in the old - - in our present seal, is much better than the one proposed by Dr. Larsen. Also the figure of Kamehameha as illustrated in our Hawaiian seal, is the same as the statue that you see in the front there, in the front of the Palace on King Street.

Dr. Larsen has stated that Kamehameha with an upraised hand, palm turning out is asking for something. In old Hawaiian tradition, the Hawaiian people have always raised up their hand with the palms toward the heaven and invited you into the home. The missionaries found that out. Dr. Larsen has stated that he wants his palm to be turned downward. To me, it means that King Kamehameha the Great wanted all his subjects to bow. That is not the case. Kamehameha, as we want him to be and as we want him to act, with his palm raised up to the heaven, is a welcome sign to all of his subjects and to his people and to his friends.

We submit that Dr. Larsen's seal, with all the different industries—sugar, pineapple, flowers, coffee, fruits, cattle, fish, kukui, calabash, coconut, banana, taro and hala are represented in his seal—but I want to ask him whether that represents all of the things that are Hawaiian. It is true that the figure of Kamehameha, as represented in our Hawaiian seal, is sort of a chunky little fellow, representing the menehune. Maybe the figure as illustrated by Dr. Larsen is much better. But the present seal of the Territory of Hawaii has been on all important documents from the very existence of the government here. The people of Hawaii, as your committee has gone out and found out, wish to retain as much of the old Hawaiian tradition and principle which they have learned to know. And, therefore, and now, Mr. Chairman, I ask that you and this Convention will consider the present seal of the Territory of Hawaii as the seal for the State of Hawaii.

HAYES: I'd like to present another seal, but I'm not quite prepared this morning to present it, and so, I'm hoping that the Convention would defer this matter until a little later. The seal that has been presented by the committee is the seal that was presented in 1894 during the -- assigned by President Dole when we became a territory [sic]. It's a seal that the committee has worked on. Though there is an error that I see, which the Hawaiians have often mentioned, that the two in the white sections here, they represent the puloulou sticks or the tabu sticks, and it doesn't -- it's not a true picture of the tabu stick. You should have -- that could be taken care of when the committee meets to go over these different proposals. And I see that another proposal has also been talked about, and it hasn't been presented this morning. So in view of the fact that there are two others, that perhaps the committee can get together, and I'll present mine this afternoon.

CHAIRMAN: Do I understand, Delegate Hayes, that you are asking for deferment of the consideration of Committee Proposal 14?

HAYES: Yes, I do, because I have also a seal to offer to this committee.

ASHFORD: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion to defer action on the Committee Proposal No. 14 has been made and seconded.

SILVA: What I'd like to know is, I know that the question to defer is not debatable but the question is, until when? I would suggest, probably we should move to defer action for another month on this seal matter. The question for that deferment is that, I really feel there is no place --

CHAIRMAN: The Chair understood that Delegate Hayes would have the seal completed in a matter of a few hours, which would mean that this would come before the committee perhaps today, perhaps at another time.

SILVA: Well, another time can mean next year; it can mean tomorrow; it can mean next week. I'm just trying to save time, that's all. Otherwise I was going to ask for the absolute deletion of the seal in the Constitution because I really believe that men like Reverend Judd, perhaps John Lane and a few of those people should get together and draw the seal. If we are going to be here without knowing just exactly what it is -- It seems very funny to have two-thirds of the people of the whole territory, three-fourths, to change the seal. So I think it should be purely legislative and let the authorities of Hawaiian lore draw up a seal.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the motion has been made to defer action.

HAYES: I just wanted to present mine this afternoon, so that they will all go to the committee and should be referred to the group of people that has been recommended, I mean mentioned by Delegate Silva.

LARSEN: Personal privilege. The worthy delegate from Hawaii seems to think we haven't put any time, authority or energy into this. I beg to differ.

SILVA: Point of order. I just asked for deferment till a certain time. The debate can be argued on the deferment up to a certain time, but the question to deferment is not debatable.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, Delegate Larsen.

LARSEN: However, I was asked a question by the committee and if they are going to take it up, may I have the privilege of answering that question?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

LARSEN: The chairman asks the meaning of the border. The meaning of the border represents the health of the Hawaiian soil, as shown by the ancient agriculture, as well as the modern agriculture, as well as the protein, as well as the vegetable. But you'll note that doesn't really have to do with the coat of arms. That is merely a lei of blood, sweat, tears and joy that surrounds the seal of Hawaii and that has made Hawaii great. And to recognize this in the border, I feel adds that much to our seal.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion to defer. The Chair will not permit any further argument on the seal. All those in favor of the motion. Opposed. The Chair will ask for the vote again. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed say "no." Carried.

We turn now to Resolution No. 29. The Chair will recognize Delegate Yamauchi.

YAMAUCHI: I move that we adopt Resolution No. 29.

CHAIRMAN: I'll ask the Clerk to read the Resolution No. 29.

DOWSON: I second the motion to adopt the resolution.

YAMAUCHI: May I explain that Resolution No. 29 which was amended --

CHAIRMAN: We will ask the Clerk to read it first, Delegate Yamauchi.

CLERK:

Resolution [No. 29, RD 1]: Whereas, each state has a heraldry consisting of symbols reflecting its past and present; and,

Whereas, Hawaii has a very unique code of symbols from its royal background; now, therefore,

Be it resolved that the Legislature of Hawaii be, and it is hereby respectfully requested to enact appropriate legislation for the adoption of the following heraldic symbols:

1. That the motto shall be: "Ua mau ke ea o ka aina i ka pono." The translation of which is "The life of the land is perpetuated in righteousness"; and

2. That Hawaii's official song shall be "Hawaii Ponoi," with the same music as in the past, but with words bringing it up to statehood; and including an old Hawaiian motto which indicates our present harmonious amalgamation of races: "Maluna a'e o na lahui apau, ke ola ke kanaka," the translation of which is "Above all nations is humanity."

3. That Hawaii's official flower shall be the ilima, the flower of old royalty; and

4. That Hawaii's state colors shall be orange (from the ilima and suggestive of the soil) and deep blue (our sky and ocean); and

5. That the official birthstone shall be the olivene. (This dates back to the birth of Hawaii when it crystalized out from the hot lava.)

YAMAUCHI: Originally the resolution included the seal and the flag, but the committee felt that in the event the Convention takes positive action as to include the seal and the flag in the Constitution, that portion which was in the original resolution should be deleted. Thereby the redraft has been made.

ASHFORD: I'm in great sympathy with this resolution but there is one question that disturbs me, and that is making the ilima the State flower. The reason it disturbs me is that it is almost impossible to get an ilima lei, and I go further than that and say impossible to get an ilima plant. All you can see is the false ilima.

CHAIRMAN: Perhaps it would be better, in view of the fact that there are five sections, to take them up one at a time and go into a tentative agreement on each. So we'll turn our attention to Section 1, as to the motto. Is there general agreement on the adoption of a motto? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Tentatively agreed to.

On Section 2, the official song shall be "Hawaii Ponoi" with the added words. Delegate Yamauchi, would you like to indicate where in the song those words would appear?

YAMAUCHI: We have not discussed it; we left it up to the legislature in regard to that point. We have not taken any positive action, but Dr. Larsen, who is the introducer of the resolution, might be able to give you a better idea on that.

LARSEN: Again I realize tradition means a lot.

CHAIRMAN: There has been a suggestion that you indicate in the verse where the words would appear.

LARSEN: Well, I'll just read the translation as it is.

Hawaii's own true sons
Be loyal to your chief
Your country's liege and lord
The Alii.

Hawaii's own true sons
Look to your lineal chief
Those chiefs of younger birth
Younger descent.

Hawaii's own true sons
People of loyal hearts
Thy only duty lies
List and abide.

Father above us all
Kamehameha e
Who guarded in the war
With his ihe.

The idea is not to change; anybody who naturally wants to sing those words, they can, but it does seem as though we should add some words, and I have my suggested ones, but some feeling is that with something like this, we shouldn't pass on it right now. We should leave it perhaps to a contest, to let somebody suggest two new verses, and in that way, just pass the resolution as is, but with the suggestion that, as is in the resolution, that sometime in the future, words that really do bring it up to date or verses that bring it up to date should be adopted. Now that doesn't mean we do away with the first three verses. They still stand as history, but we could add one or two verses to show that history has marched on.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

COCKETT: There is a correction to be made here in this Hawaiian section here, "Maluna a'e o na lahui apau, ke ola ke kanaka." That is wrong as a Hawaiian sentence. I'd like to insert "o"; "ke ola o ke kanaka." That would make it -- Yes, grammatical error. It may be acceptable.

CHAIRMAN: You make a motion to amend?

COCKETT: I do.

APOLIONA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is that acceptable to the committee?

YAMAUCHI: Perhaps it might be a slight clerical error, that part over there. I myself am not an authority on that, so I can't say one way or the other, but the committee accepts the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Fine. Any further discussion on this section?

AKAU: I think it's a very nice idea to want to add some more verses, and all that sort of thing. "Hawaii Ponoi" is "Hawaii Ponoi." It was written by a particular person and the music was written especially. Therefore, it would be taking poetic license to assume the idea of somebody else writing some extra verses because that is a particular song, and we consider it as such. I would say that "Hawaii Ponoi" should be the official song, period.

Now, then, if any suggestions wish to come eventually, through, shall I say, the legislature or something, I don't see any harm in that. But to me, it's heresy to change something that has been so much tradition over a period of years and accepted so wholeheartedly by all of our people.

CHAIRMAN: Does the Chair understand that to be a motion, Delegate Akau?

AKAU: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

SMITH: Second it.

LARSEN: May I call the attention. It's not changing the song, it's merely adding two verses as a State song.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me. Did you second that motion?

SMITH: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Section 2 be amended to read as follows: "That Hawaii's official song shall be 'Hawaii Ponoi,'" period; delete the balance of the paragraph. Any further discussion?

KING: "Hawaii Ponoi" is the song that was adopted in the days of royalty and glorifies the crown. Now, we have some of the same proposition in our American background where we sing "America, 'tis of Thee," I think it is—I've forgotten the title of it—

CHAIRMAN: "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

KING: -- to the tune of "God Save the King," but we don't keep on singing "God Save the King" in our American song. The words of "Hawaii Ponoi" would be a little bit inappropriate for a state of the Union. I feel that Section 2 is all right the way it is.

CHAIRMAN: Anyone wish to discuss the amendment further? The Chair will put the question. All those in favor of the amendment please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Amendment is lost.

Any further discussion on the section as submitted by the committee? All those in favor of the section please say "aye." Opposed. Section is carried.

Section 3, "That Hawaii's official flower shall be the ilima."

ASHFORD: I'm not making an amendment; I'm merely saying that we can have it as an official flower, and then we won't be able to get any official flowers to decorate our guests with.

CHAIRMAN: You have no substitute flower?

LARSEN: The substitute flower was the lehua. The idea was to pick a flower that was distinctly Hawaiian. It was either the ilima or the lehua; and I feel as soon as we begin to use it, certainly on Oahu, we will find plenty of ilima. I feel if it becomes a State flower, there will be plenty of them grown.

CROSSLEY: I don't know if it would be appropriate at this time to suggest a change in the ilima, but if it is, I would like to suggest that it be the vanda. I have no pecuniary interest in such. It's a beautiful flower and it's prolific; it's easy to grow and there are plenty available to decorate visiting dignitaries.

CHAIRMAN: Is that an amendment, Delegate Crossley?

CROSSLEY: I didn't offer it as an amendment, only as a suggestion. I wouldn't presume to offer it as an amendment.

APOLIONA: Will the delegate from Kauai specify what type of vandas?

CHAIRMAN: I see we have an argument amongst the orchid lovers.

DOWSON: I believe the types of orchids which are being referred to are imported plants. They are not traditional to Hawaii. Hawaii has a few native orchids which are very small and not noticed at all. The flowers are so small that people don't even look at them. They grow wild near some of these arid places. The so-called ilima which is the false mallow, I mean the mallow plant or false mallow, is a native endemic to Hawaii. So is the flower that comes from Hawaii which Dr. Larsen picked out, the lehua. The lehua comes in several colors. Just above Hilo is quite a bit of the yellowish and orange lehua, besides the red. There is a tradition behind the lehua. If one picks a lehua blossom, there is sure to be rain. Perhaps that should be remembered, too.

SAKAKIHARA: I wish to offer an amendment to Section 3. Insert the word "lehua" in place of the "ilima." We only have one Hawaii, and that Hawaii is the island of Hawaii.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the motion?

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that in Section 3, the word "ilima" be deleted, and the word "lehua" be inserted in lieu thereof.

WOOLAWAY: Before we vote on that subject, I would like to have this body of able persons consider roselani before we make the mistake of voting for the last amendment.

HAYES: I'm afraid I would have to oppose the lehua flower as the flower of the State, because from the history of Hawaii, ilima has always been the color for the - - and it also represents the section in the seal, the color yellow. I believe that I wouldn't be able to go with any other flower for the State of Hawaii but the ilima. While I'm not prepared to go into further details of the ilima, I have been approached by many, many old families, the old Hawaiian families, and requested that - - they hoped that we would keep to the ilima flower as the State flower of Hawaii.

PHILLIPS: I would like to speak in favor of the motion on the floor right now. I remember when I went to Hawaii, I was told that the lehua only grows on a volcano, and I would feel - -

DELEGATE: Oh, no!

PHILLIPS: It's not true? Well, I got that from a native on Hawaii, so you can take it for what it's worth.

CHAIRMAN: You didn't have the right - -

SAKAKIHARA: I was shut off when I made a motion to amend the resolution when you recognized the delegate from Maui. As I was about to inform this committee, we do have various varieties of lehua. As Delegate Dowson ably put before the committee, we have yellow lehua, we have dark red lehua, light-shade red lehua, green lehua. Any one of them would symbolize the flower of Hawaii. Naturally, Oahu delegate Madam Hayes, is very sentimental, like all women, and I don't blame her for wanting to retain lehua for Oahu. I believe this Convention can truly be broad-minded enough to recognize the outside island, your neighbor island, in the various symbols apparently we are going to enact now. We have considered, almost unanimously, over the protest of some of the neighbor islands, the seat of government for Honolulu. Lehua symbolizes the island of Hawaii, its mountains, Mauna Loa, Mauna Kea, Hualalai and Madam Pele. I believe that this flower should be given some consideration.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion? If not, I'll put the question on the amendment.

C. RICE: I want to ask the last speaker how often the lehua blossoms and in what month?

SAKAKIHARA: It's once a year, around August, I think.

C. RICE: On Kauai we have a lot of lehua. Lehua-makanoe, in a swamp up back of Waialeale, the lehua is only two feet high, three, and the blossoms are five inches across. But there, as I remember, there was only bloom in summer. I want to get a flower for Hawaii that blooms all the year around. How about your ilima?

HAYES: The ilima blooms all the year around.

C. RICE: I think the lehua only blooms three months of the year.

A. TRASK: I think there is a good bit of merit in what Delegate Ashford called attention to, namely, that there aren't very many plants on the islands; but, when I was a boy I remember that almost every family had lehua [sic] bushes around the place. It just so happens that the passage of the last few years, the people are not going in so much for lehua, I mean ilima. But I do believe this is maintained as the official flower and it's always been. It should be remembered that when there's a Republican Convention or a Democratic Convention, what do you send there to the delegates? You send the ilima leis. I mean, it's always been symbolic of Hawaii—ilima leis. I'm sure that in the Convention here, the leis that have been worn by the ladies here, in many instances, have been ilima.

I haven't seen yet in this hall a lehua lei, that has been advocated. On Oahu, I think there are about one, if not two lehua trees on the Pali road, and they bloom, if they do at all, I don't think I've seen at any one time, more than three or four flowers in the entire Pali area. In the entire Koolau, I haven't yet seen a lehua flower except on a bush in our yard down at Kaneohe Bay which my mother planted; but that was not the lehua flower that the delegate refers to, it's the cultivated type of lehua.

I believe that if the ilima is made the official flower, we'll have a lot of people planting it, so that there will be more flowers. I want to say to the Delegate Ashford from Molokai, that if possible, I would secure for her, ilima flowers tomorrow.

LYMAN: The lehua is a seasonal flower; it does not bloom all the year around. I would like to speak against the lehua. The lehua, as you all know, is a flower that is not ordinarily picked because Hawaiian superstition says that when you pick the lehua, it rains. On the island of Hawaii, we have many lehua flowers and that's the reason it rains so much. The people are always picking those flowers. However, I would like to suggest that we think of the maile as the official wreath, the maile and the ilima. If we cannot use the true ilima flower, we have substitutes that can be used—the paper lei, the cloth lei, and those leis can be shipped to the mainland and could be used for occasions when you really want the official wreath of Hawaii. I, therefore, suggest that we consider the maile and ilima as the official wreath of Hawaii.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the committee is whether or not to adopt the amendment; that is, the lehua shall be flower of Hawaii. The Chair would like to put the question.

SILVA: [The delegate's microphone was not functioning, and the following statement is taken from the minutes.] He stated that he was of the firm conviction that all these things, including the seal, the song, the flower, should be referred to the legislature, and a committee could then be appointed to look into the merits so that the whole territory might participate in these decisions; and he so moved.

CHAIRMAN: I believe you will find, Delegate Silva, that that is the purpose of this resolution.

SILVA: Beg your pardon.

CHAIRMAN: That is the very purpose of this resolution, as stated in the third paragraph of the resolution.

SILVA: To refer it to the legislature?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

SILVA: Then why are we wasting our time?

CHAIRMAN: There is a question before the committee, and I'd like to ask the question now, that is the adoption of the lehua. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Lost.

This is the original question. That Hawaii's official flower shall be the ilima. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

Paragraph 4. Hawaii's state colors. Any discussion? All those in favor of the paragraph as written, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

Paragraph 5, as to the birthstone being the olivene. Any discussion? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Is there a motion to adopt the resolution?

YAMAUCHI: I move that Resolution No. 29 as amended be adopted.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is for the adoption of Resolution No. 29. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Adopted as amended.

YAMAUCHI: I move at this time that we take up Committee Proposal No. 16 referring to the civil service.

CHAIRMAN: The call is for Committee Proposal No. 16, covered by Standing Committee Report No. 57.

YAMAUCHI: I move that we tentatively adopt Committee Proposal No. 16, Standing Committee Report No. 57.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to accept Committee Proposal No. 16 which reads:

> The employment of persons in the State civil service, as defined by law, shall be governed by the merit principle.

Is there any discussion? All those in favor of the proposal, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The ayes have it.

YAMAUCHI: I move that we adopt -- tentatively adopt Committee Proposal No. 20 and Standing Committee Report No. 64, which pertains to the preamble.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 20 be adopted, which reads as follows:

> We, the people, of the State of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, and with pride in our Hawaiian heritage, reaffirm our belief in a government of, for, and by the people do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

Is there any discussion?

LARSEN: I would like to offer an amendment. May I speak on the amendment or do I have to make it? I move for the amendment as is on the delegates' desks.

> Preamble. We, the people of Hawaii, hereby reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, and do express in the words of Kamehameha First our reverence to God; also our respect for the big man, the small man, the aged man, the women and the children, who may ever walk the highways, or sleep by the wayside, without molestation. We, therefore, with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth, do ordain and establish this Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the proper procedure would be to -- have they been circulated?

LARSEN: Yes, it's been circulated. I so move.

APOLIONA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, I don't have a copy. The Chair can't follow you.

CORBETT: I'd like to second the motion.

LARSEN: May I speak on this for a moment?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, would you?

LARSEN: As you all know, we've been working on it for a long time. Again I apologize to the committee for offering an amendment, but the committee knows, and committee has been cognizant of this right along. I think the committee report very wisely states, you can't confuse amendments, you either -- I mean preambles, you either take one type or another. I think it won't take too long. We either want it or we don't want it.

However, I would like to call your attention to the fact that, as we all know, most of our Constitution is not an original document, is not something that -- but comes from the Model Constitution, from New Jersey, from Missouri, and so on. In our preamble, we have an opportunity to present something a little different. I'd like to call your attention to the fact that there are two great ideals of government presented here. The first—and I might say, one of the delegates suggested the correction—instead of combining by, for and of the people, he said, "You can't improve the words of a great man. This great emancipator said to this group at Gettysburg, 'in a government of the people, by the people and for the people,'" and this delegate felt we should use the words as they came from the great man. This emancipator, as you know, at the end of a long and bloody war, combined and reunited the United States.

In the second part are again the words of the great conqueror of Hawaii. At the end of a long and bloody war, he brought the Hawaiian Islands together under one rule. But the great thing that he did do was recognize that force can never produce a good nation; there must be justice. And so, this particular clause, one of the great documents of expression of government, and the greatest expression of government that has been put out in the Pacific, was put out by Kamehameha the First. It's a question of keeping that; it's the one part where we might recognize the greatness of Hawaii philosophically in the line of government, and something that, I believe, will bring more attention to Hawaii than anything else in our Constitution. In today's terrible upset in the world, this is the philosophy, this is the principle, that's more necessary than anything else that's being done. I feel we have in a small way, this opportunity to show the world that Hawaii recognizes principle.

The words, "We, therefore, with an understanding heart" are also the words of Kamehameha the First, and, I feel, quite important because certainly we inside of our little corral here, where we're champing at the bit to get through with this, we have shown the world that it is possible. We take it for granted that all the races of the world can work amicably, peaceably and together to produce a document. We would like to record that because we all know that in many parts of the world, this type of assembly would be impossible. And so the expression, "Therefore with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this world," I feel is extremely fitting for Hawaii.

Therefore, the few extra words are not so important as are we producing and are we giving this mission, this philosophy, that we have stood for so long, and combining with the philosophy of the great emancipator. Between the two, they express the principles of government that we hope someday will actually be regarded as the real government for all nations.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the amendment?

YAMAUCHI: The suggestion that was made by Delegate Larsen, another preamble to substitute the preamble that was submitted by your Miscellaneous Committee, was considered by the Miscellaneous Committee. We have taken into consideration by putting that phrase, "and with pride in our Hawaiian heritage." We felt that that particular clause would cover the intent that is being brought forth by Dr. Larsen.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion? The Chair will put the question on the amendment.

PHILLIPS: I would like to offer an amendment, too. I feel that the more of these individual items that the Convention has an opportunity to inspect, why the broader will be its view on it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Phillips, I believe in this particular case, the Chair would be correct in asking that the vote be placed on this amendment. It's not a single word, you want to submit another preamble?

PHILLIPS: I have one on the desks of the delegates at present. However, it was suggested that we adopt the other one tentatively, and then I make an amendment to that.

[Part of the debate was not recorded. Delegate Phillips introduced the following amendment. After it was seconded by Delegate Hayes, he spoke in support of his amendment.]

> Preamble. We, the people, the supreme political authority, proclaim our sovereignty and create this State in this sacred covenant and Constitution; we shall ever be grateful to our Creator, perpetuate our Hawaiian traditions, defend our constitutional rule, and follow the American way of liberty, justice, equality, and freedom. We are gathered from the earth's every corner in brotherhood and unity to teach and be taught, each by the other, the blessings and burdens of our singular democracy. We, therefore, do in solemn mutual faith, ordain and establish this declaration of rights and frame of government as the Constitution of our beloved Hawaiian State.

PHILLIPS: . . . our beloved Hawaiian State, but as you know the people on the outside that would read this would realize that we are fond of our new State and we don't mind telling everybody about it. I rest my case.

YAMAUCHI: I would like to talk in regard to the proposed amendment made by Delegate Phillips. The committee had considered Delegate Phillips' proposal -- preamble, rather, and we have incorporated the words, "We, the people, are the supreme political authority." It is implied that the people are the supreme political authority and we felt that the words "We, the people, of the State of Hawaii" would be sufficient. And under section 2, it's also taken care of; the words, "being grateful to our Creator," is also in our committee preamble. The third part which pertains to the perpetuation of the Hawaiian tradition has also been considered under the phrase, "and with pride in our Hawaiian heritage." The other portion pertains to the government, which reads "defend our constitutional rule, and follow the American way of liberty, justice, equality and freedom." That phrase is taken care of by the committee proposal which states that "We . . . reaffirm our belief in a government of, for and by the people."

Thereby the committee felt that the language should be simplified where the students can acquire the preamble which may be recited in the schools. We would like to make it as short as possible so that every individual can understand, as well as make it a part of the school curriculum.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the committee is the amendment to the preamble, Committee Proposal No. 20, as offered by Delegate Phillips.

AKAU: I wonder if Mr. Phillips would accept the amendment so that in the first line, "We, the people" and add "of the State of Hawaii," even if it does down below say "beloved Hawaiian State."

PHILLIPS: I mentioned already that I felt that that should be changed to "We, the people, of the State of Hawaii."

CHAIRMAN: Then you accept the amendment?

PHILLIPS: Oh, well, excuse me, please. "We, the people, the supreme political authority of the State of Hawaii." Now, is it all right to speak -- to discuss that briefly?

CHAIRMAN: As I understood the request from Delegate Akau, "We, the people, of the State of Hawaii."

AKAU: Yes, but it could also fit in the other place, so I would say it could be -- the amendment might be "of the State of Hawaii" after the "supreme political authority."

PHILLIPS: May I address a question to the Chair for Delegate Akau? Would it be satisfactory if we were to strike out the fourth line of the first verse and then spread it out in that manner?

While I have the floor, I wonder if I'd be permitted to answer the committee chairman's question about whether the words "supreme political authority" --

CHAIRMAN: The Chair doesn't have any answer to the question yet. Do you accept the amendment, "We, the people, the supreme political authority of the State of Hawaii"?

PHILLIPS: "Proclaim our sovereignty and create this State," leaving out the fourth line. I'll accept that amendment.

Now, I would like to say, I feel in the Bill of Rights, the very first section, will state right there that the supreme political authority of the State rests in the people. That is the fundamental doctrine of American constitutional law. Consequently I think it's good that we set it forth and let them know in Washington; and the people of this territory, let them become familiar right away with the fact that we are aware of it, too.

CHAIRMAN: The question is on the amendment. Any further discussion on the amendment? Call for the question.

KELLERMAN: What is the order? Do we vote on Mr. Phillips' amendment first, and if that fails, we vote on Dr. Larsen's?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, Delegate Kellerman. The question before the committee now is whether or not the preamble as submitted by Delegate Phillips and amended by Delegate Akau shall be adopted. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. The amendment fails.

The question now before the committee is the amendment as offered by Delegate Larsen.

HAYES: I would like to speak in favor of the amendment offered by Doctor Larsen, for many reasons. First, I feel that it speaks for Hawaii, what we have done, and what the Hawaiian people believed in. He says here, "We, the people of Hawaii, hereby reaffirm our belief" and I feel that we, in this Constitution, feel that the past record of our provisional government and of the present situation is being reaffirmed in the government of the people, by the people and for the people. We therefore express in the words of a great king who brought these islands under one form of government, and in the reference to the Almighty God our respect.

Here in the next paragraph, he gives the law of the land, that great law which was obeyed by every citizen of Hawaii, or, otherwise, those who did not believe or those who did not - - who went against the law and did not abide by the law set by Kamehameha the First, had no other reason for not abiding by such law, and death was the penalty.

I recall some time back during the Massie case here in Hawaii, one of the strongest points that was brought up in favor of the people of Hawaii was the law that was set by King Kamehameha, "for the big man, the small man, the aged man, the women and the children, who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without molestation. We, therefore, with understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth, do ordain and establish this Constitution." In Hawaiian I would like to just interpret those words of King Kamehameha. "E hiki ka elemakule, a me na makuahine, a me na keiki, ke moe i ka alahele"; that is, they may be on the wayside, they may be on the road, but no one dared to molest them. I, therefore, would like to support this preamble.

SMITH: As a member of the committee who worked out this proposal, who had gone over the different preambles submitted, we couldn't help but feel, looking over all the different preambles in other constitutions, where we found very, very long preambles and very, very short preambles. Some were as short as saying, "We the people of this State," whatever it was, "grateful for Divine Guidance, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii."

We felt that the preamble should be brief and concise and carry out our traditions and beliefs. We are very sentimental people and would love to have such wording as Dr. Larsen's, which is very, very nice, but I feel that it's a lot of words. I believe the rest of the committee felt that by putting it down in as brief and concise a form as we possibly could, and then present it to the committee for them to decide on, that we had a preamble which carried all the thoughts and views of the preambles presented.

"We, the people of the State of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance." There was great argument as to whether it should be "our reverence to God" or there are many forms, but in Hawaii with all our different religions, we felt that the wording "grateful for Divine Guidance" would be more proper. "And with pride in our Hawaiian heritage" everything that goes along with it. A child that studies Hawaiian history will be reading and the people who live here will be believing in it. "And reaffirming our belief in a government of, for and by the people, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii." This carries everything; it's brief and concise, and I, as much as I liked the two or three preambles presented—they both had their points—as a Convention, I felt that without adding too many words which would carry the same thought, that the preamble of Committee Proposal No. 20 would be sufficient.

CHAIRMAN: We're having a little trouble with the public address system so the Chair would like to call a brief recess while the necessary repairs are being made, and also in the hopes that there will be possibly an amalgamation of some of these ideas.

BRYAN: My microphone is working, and I'd like to speak on this subject.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, Delegate Bryan, but all of the mikes on this side are out and I think that possibly we'll call a brief recess subject to the call of the Chair.

(RECESS)

BRYAN: I don't think that in the interests of brevity or keeping our Constitution's preamble short that we should throw out these beautiful words that no state in the Union could find an equal to it. Any of the 48 states could rightly write a preamble similar to the one that's submitted by the committee, which I agree is a workable, usable, and very good preamble. But what state in the Union could say in the words of Kamehameha the First, "our reverence to God, also our respect for the big man, the small man," and so forth? Not one out of the 48, or the forty-ninth if it should be Alaska. Hawaii is the only state or possible state in the Union that can have a preamble in those beautiful words.

I'd like to say also that those words appeal to me because they are simple words. They are words that the people themselves can read and understand. I think one speaker said that many of the people may not read the Constitution, but certainly they will read the preamble, and I think that this is a preamble they can understand. I think it's beautifully said. I think that it really goes to the heart of the people who have their territory and have had for a long time, and I think that the proposal by Dr. Larsen warrants the support of this Convention.

CORBETT: I would like to speak in favor of the amendment offered by Delegate Larsen. I, too, feel that this is a very individual preamble. The other one, while workmanlike, is the sort of thing that could have been written in New York City or Buffalo or any place else. People on the mainland think of Hawaii as a land of poetry, and this is something of poetry to write into the workmanlike document that we have toiled on so diligently.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the amendment?

A. TRASK: I like this because I think the life in Hawaii is simple. The life of Hawaii is simple and everybody wants to be a kamaaina. The malihini, if you call anyone who has been here about two or three times, who visited here, he insists he is a kamaaina. Everybody wants to be a kamaaina.

The simplicity is just simply wonderful. I think there's warmth; I think there's a glow; I think there's a feel and there's a beauty and there's the startling loveliness of the ilima about this thing, and I'm all for it. Thanks to Dr. Larsen.

COCKETT: I am too in favor of this preamble given by Dr. Larsen. I think there's a lot of history pertaining to it. It's good for people now and also for our future generations to think and to know the people who lived here, and something about our King Kamehameha, the kind of king who brought the islands together under one government, and who believed in God, and also in serving the people; not only one class of people, but the big man, and the small man, and even the children, women and so on. So I am heartily in favor of this preamble by Dr. Larsen.

ASHFORD: If this could be put in the original Hawaiian, I think it might be better, but I'm wondering, I would like to ask a question of the proponent, whether the Committee on Style would have any leeway if it were to check with an Hawaiian scholar to see if the interpretation were correct. For myself, I think that - - I intensely dislike, "for the big man, the small man." I think that as a matter of style, that could be improved upon.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Larsen, would you care to answer to that?

LARSEN: Yes, I must say that we did try to get the very best interpretation. I got the two best authorities on interpretation, Mary Pukui and Maude Jones at the Archives, and this is the correct interpretation. Now, as far as changing the words is concerned by the Style Committee, it seems to me that if we're quoting a person, then we should quote him, and that's what we tried to do.

KELLERMAN: I would like to speak in favor of Dr. Larsen's amendment. I suppose I am really a malihini. All those who have spoken in favor of it so far can claim, I think, the islands as their place of birth. I've been in these islands only ten years. To me this quotation from King Kamehameha would be a contribution to the culture of the United States. It expresses in simple and beautiful words the entire concept of social morality which is the basis and the only living basis for a republican form of government.

It also, in the last two lines saying, "We, therefore, with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth," that is the same meaning that we have—or did have when I was there on the mainland—with respect to America, the haven of refuge for people from all over the world. On the mainland, it has largely been a haven of refuge for people from across the Atlantic. In these islands it is truly a haven for people from all over the world, and our islands have expanded the generosity of that thought in the fact of our tremendous diversity and unanimity and harmony living together.

I feel that rather than use a fairly stereotyped and simple preamble which, as Mr. Bryan has pointed out, could well have been used anywhere by any of the states, this is a contribution which we should hesitate not to give to our American constitutional and political thought.

CHAIRMAN: Further discussion?

ANTHONY: I wonder if the proponent of the amendment would tell us where the quotes are from the statement of Kamehameha.

LARSEN: Sorry, I've given away all my copies, but it starts with - - it ends with "with an understanding heart."

ANTHONY: No, the quotes, I mean, where is the beginning?

LARSEN: It was toward all his people, not toward all the peoples of the earth; therefore, it begins with Kamehameha expresses "our reverence to God, also his respect," and so on down to "with an understanding heart toward all his people."

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to know where the quotes start.

CHAIRMAN: Where do the quotes begin, Dr. Larsen?

LARSEN: "Our reverence to God," and ends with "with an understanding heart toward all our people."

ANTHONY: In other words, the quotes are before the word "our" - -

CHAIRMAN: And after the word "earth." Is that correct? Does that answer your question, Delegate Anthony?

ANTHONY: I have a good deal of sympathy with the expression here, but - -

LARSEN: Could I correct that for a minute? It's not - - "earth" is not there. It's "with an understanding heart toward" is really the end of the actual quotes; it was toward his people, not all the people of the earth. That's the change we made, because in the evolution of Hawaii that's the change we would like.

CHAIRMAN: The quotations, then, are after the word "toward"?

ANTHONY: It should be, if you are going to put quotes, I think it should come after the word "heart." But what I wanted to call the body's attention to is, while we may want this bit of Hawaiian law in there, we don't want to be misunderstood. We don't want the people on the mainland to think we are a bunch of savages sleeping in the jungles, such as Mr. Bennett of the Hearst press reported during the Massie case. Also, you can't sleep on the wayside now; it's against the statutes. I'm being serious about this. I think if we are going to adopt this sentiment, we ought to make it perfectly clear that we are quoting from some ancient document, and we are not endeavoring to express anything that exists in Hawaii today.

LARSEN: May I answer my worthy opponent from the fourth district. I agree with him. I hope he'll make the amendment that the quotations will go after "toward" and beginning with "our reverence to God."

The other thing, the question of sleeping by the wayside, that's historic. The thing that's going to happen is, once you adopt this, throughout the states you are going to have the story of Kamehameha the First, the story of the splintered paddle, the story of Mamalahoa Kanawai. This is a great story of Hawaii, our greatest contribution, I believe, toward the peace of the world.

And, sleeping by the wayside, we're still sleeping by the wayside. I have a house that sits right by the wayside, and I like to feel I can sleep in that house with my doors open and not be molested, and we can translate it today. If Mr. Hearst misinterprets something, Mr. Hearst hasn't got half the standing in America that Kamehameha the First has, and I think Kamehameha the First's words, we want given.

I might say somehow the press apparently was interested in this story, so much so that two of my friends on the mainland, one from the Arizona Times, and another one a professor of public health in San Francisco, sent me clippings where the paper had written out the full story, in Arizona and California, about Kamehameha the First and the "law of the splintered paddle." It apparently appealed to them. I'm quite sure, as a number of these delegates have said, this is our great appeal and this is something that we can contribute to American culture.

KAWAHARA: I've been wondering all morning about the difference in the statement between the two proposals, the proposal proposed by Dr. Larsen and the proposal as proposed by the committee. In the proposal as proposed by the committee the word "Divine Guidance" is used, and in the proposal suggested by Dr. Larsen, the word "God" is used. Do I understand it to mean that we are going to put in our Constitution the words, "in the words of Kamehameha the First, who said 'our reverence to God.'" Does it not mean his reverence to God? Does it not mean that perhaps his idea of God and some of our ideas of God may be different? If we are going to use the word "God" in this proposal and use the words "Divine Guidance" in the other proposal, there must be some difference.

Now, then, I have no objection to using the words of a great man. I have no objection to using the words of Washington or Lincoln or Caesar or anybody else, but in a document of this kind, I'm wondering whether we should place the name of a person. In looking over the preamble of our Federal Constitution, I see no reference to the word "God." "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity." Now, I have no objections to reference to God, except that perhaps many people have many different ideas as to what they believe the word to mean, and, of course, people may say well, if they believe differently, it's their own privilege and there's no harm done in putting that phrase in there.

I think we tend to confine ourselves too much to one man. Secondly, by putting the word "God" there, instead of some other word like "Divine Ruler" or "Divine Providence," we confine ourselves to one word, "God." For that reason I'm wondering about this proposal that Dr. Larsen has proposed.

LARSEN: May I answer that, please. I think we've evolved to the point where we no longer accept a two by four God that's good for Americans, another one good for Germans, another one good for somebody else. The amazing thing in reading the story of old Hawaii is that Kamehameha as a youngster grew up at the heiau. Every morning he got up on this heiau and prayed to the great Spirit that rules over all. Call that Divine Guidance, call it God, call it the Great Spirit that rules over all. As we are evolving, we are not trying to specify which God and what God. We recognize how ridiculous our own concept is when, during the first World War, I picked up a prayerbook by the Germans, where each German solder was reading and he was praying to God to help his arms to overcome the Americans; and the Americans were praying to their God to overcome the Germans. We should go beyond this concept and recognize this philosophy which so many people believe in, that there is something up above and higher than just human worth—Divine Guidance, if you will, God that rules over it all. The concept, "God," covers everyone's concept of something above man's laws. I also would call attention to the fact that this is a quotation, and that this was the quotation that Kamehameha made.

KAWAHARA: According to your statement, Dr. Larsen, you are inferring and implying that I should believe the way you do as far as God is concerned.

CHAIRMAN: Would you address your remarks to the Chair, please?

LARSEN: I didn't get that question. What was the question?

KAWAHARA: By the inference in the statement, you are inferring that perhaps I should believe in the same God as you do. I don't know enough about religion to know the difference; however, I think many people have their own beliefs as far as religion and God is concerned, and for that reason I - - the word here "God," capital G-O-D, in comparison to the other statement here, "Divine Guidance," I think there is a marked difference between the two. I would prefer something like "Divine Guidance," or "our Divine Creator," or something to that effect.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak in favor of the amendment, but I would like to offer a few suggestions in the form of amendments which would bring the proposal of the committee closer to the proposed amendment, and include the basic ideas which are set forth in the committee proposal. I'd like to offer the following amendments. I'd like to read them first and the article, and then I would like to speak to the question, if I receive a second.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

ROBERTS: "We, the people of Hawaii," and add the words after that, "grateful for Divine Guidance," "grateful for Divine Guidance, reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people - -

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, Dr. Roberts, do you mean - -

ROBERTS: That's the same language, I'm reading the section.

CHAIRMAN: - - to leave the word "hereby" out?

ROBERTS: Delete the word "hereby," and substitute "grateful for Divine Guidance." Then continue the same language down to next to the last line and delete the word "our reverence to God, also"—we have taken care of that by putting the words "grateful for Divine Guidance"—and then put a quotation mark before the word "our." Then you have a quotation mark "our respect for," and that goes down to the word "molestation" and a quotation mark should be placed at the end of that word. Then the last line, add the word "hereby," "do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution," and add the words "for the State of Hawaii." Now that gives you the language of the committee proposal, plus the basic ideas presented by Dr. Larsen, with some slight changes in language.

[Part of discussion not recorded.]

KELLERMAN: . . . The preamble is basically a style instrument, but it is also, and it seems to me, it should be combed very carefully. I don't think Style should be allowed to change on that basis.

KING: A request has been made already to have Delegate Roberts read the form of preamble, the amendment that he proposed to Delegate Larsen's proposal. I'd like to have Delegate Roberts read that again more slowly and we can all copy it down.

CHAIRMAN: Would you read the amendment to the preamble, please?

ROBERTS:

> We, the people of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and do express in the words of Kamehameha the First "our respect for the big man, the small man, the aged man, the women and the children, who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without molestation." We, therefore, with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

ASHFORD: May I make another suggestion? Why do we have to say Kamehameha the First? When Kamehameha is referred to, it always means the Great Kamehameha.

CHAIRMAN: Do I understand that to be an amendment?

AKAU: May I analyze this very briefly?

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, Delegate Akau. Do I understand that to be an amendment, Delegate Ashford? Is that acceptable to Dr. Larsen? Delegate Larsen. Then we don't have to vote on it? Delegate Larsen.

LARSEN: I'm sorry.

CHAIRMAN: Is the deletion of the word "First" after "Kamehameha" acceptable to you as the maker of the amendment?

LARSEN: Does Delegate Ashford want "Kamehameha the Great"? Because there were many Kamehamehas.

ASHFORD: My point was that when Kamehameha is referred to, it always means Kamehameha the Great or the First, the others are the minor Kamehamehas referred to as the Second, the Third or what not.

LARSEN: Having been at Queen's Hospital for 20 years, we talked about Kamehameha the Fourth all the time, and it might be confusing. I think maybe the other thing, "in the words of Kamehameha the Great," does Delegate Ashford have any particular objection to "the Great"?

CHAIRMAN: You are willing to incorporate the words "the Great" after "Kamehameha"?

LARSEN: "The Great" is all right, yes.

TAVARES: When we are making a speech and we want to quote a philosopher, we don't say, "In the words of" and give a long history about the man. We say, "In the words of Kant," or, "In the words of Lincoln." We don't say Abraham Lincoln or which Lincoln it was. There was only one man who said those words, and, therefore, when you say "In the words of Kamehameha," anybody who wants to find it out will look which Kamehameha said that. So I don't think you need "the First."

LARSEN: I'm willing to accept that, especially when I get a legal opinion on it.

AKAU: While I realize that this quotation has been cut down somewhat, I say that it isn't a question of style, it's a question of content and substance. You have a quotation here, if I may be very technical, but you have nothing that it hangs on to. In other words, you haven't any verb, any action. You've got here, "our respect for the big man, the small man, the aged man, the women and the children, who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without molestation." That's the end of the quote. While I realize you go down there and say you do ordain something, by cutting this down you have taken out something that it needs. This can't stand up accurately in the form of English.

CHAIRMAN: Do you have a suggestion, Delegate Akau?

AKAU: I have no amendment to make, but I do think that we've lost something by eliminating our verb.

BRYAN: I'd like to answer that. The words "do express," I think adequately take care of that. "And do express our respect for the big man, the small man, the aged man, women and children," and so forth.

KING: As a matter of historical fact, there was only one Kamehameha. The others used the name as a title, just like King George, the First, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth. They had their own individual names, while Kamehameha was the name of the first Kamehameha; it was his personal name. I think that the elimination of the word "First" and the addition of no other word, would be quite all right. I would like to change the quotes - - the quotation marks, and put it after "our respect," beginning "for the big man." Quote, "for the big man, the small man" and so on. That possibly - - that quotation comprising five short lines there could be put in Hawaiian, and get the actual language that Kamehameha used in the famous law of Mamalahoe Kanaiwa.

CHAIRMAN: Is that suggestion acceptable to Delegate Larsen?

LARSEN: Perfectly O.K.

CHAIRMAN: Quotations be moved to in front of the word "for" at the top of the second column.

LARSEN: That's perfectly all right.

ASHFORD: Point of information. I would like to ask the proponent whether the words substituted by Delegate Roberts would not be a proper translation of the words of Kamehameha. "For the great man and the small."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Larsen.

LARSEN: You mean "Divine Guidance"?

CHAIRMAN: No.

ASHFORD: "For the great man and the small" instead of "the big man and the small man."

LARSEN: Well, that to my mind is poetry. To me, we're talking in the terms of the countryside, the big man, the small man. We're not trying to make it sound great. I think it's a question of what it means, and to me the very simple, almost, words from the grass roots, have that much more clarity and poetry, than trying to bring in a word that possibly came from Harvard.

TAVARES: Do I correctly understand that Dr. Larsen has accepted removal of the words "our reverence to God" also?

LARSEN: Correct.

TAVARES: May I lighten the moment a little by an old story of World War I when across the trenches in the cold wintry weather, a German soldier hoisted up a sign reading "Gott mit uns," meaning "God with us," and an American soldier on the other side hoisted up another sign, "We got mittens too!"

CHAIRMAN: Is there any further discussion on the amendment as amended?

NIELSEN: I have a suggested amendment if it will be accepted. In this whole preamble we have stated nothing about our own constitutional liberty, which I think is, if not not on a par with Divine Guidance, it's certainly the thing that has built America. I'd like to ask if the proponents of this bill would accept to follow the words "grateful for Divine Guidance," the words "and our Constitutional liberties," because I think we should have something in about what we stand for and what we believe in. I think we believe in that just as much as in Divine Guidance. How about that?

LARSEN: May I ask Mr. Nielsen if he doesn't think that the great words of the Great Emancipator that "we reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people," doesn't cover our constitutional liberties?

NIELSEN: That's a question of interpretation. I'd like to see our constitutional liberties spelled out.

CHAIRMAN: Do I understand you propose an amendment that the words "constitutional liberties" be incorporated after "Divine Guidance"? Would you restate your motion.

NIELSEN: After the words "Divine Guidance," "and our constitutional liberties."

CHAIRMAN: Is that acceptable to the maker of the amendment?

LARSEN: Well, no. To me it just kills the point that we are quoting a great American on constitutional liberties, and we are quoting it in his words, not our words, but we reaffirm our belief.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the amendment?

PHILLIPS: Second the amendment.

NIELSEN: Speaking about what Mr. Larsen just said, he said we are speaking about a great American. I don't think Kamehameha the Great was a great American. He might have thought as we did, but - -

LARSEN: I was thinking of Abraham Lincoln.

CHAIRMAN: Gentlemen, please. I'm asking if there is a second to Delegate Nielsen's amendment.

PHILLIPS: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: There is a second. Is there any discussion on the amendment? All those in favor. Opposed. The amendment is defeated.

AKAU: Would you kindly give us, when you're giving, "all those in favor," say what we are in favor of?

CHAIRMAN: There has been an amendment proposed by Delegate Nielsen, and seconded, that after the word "belief" "grateful for Divine Guidance" -- pardon me—after the phrase "grateful for Divine Guidance," there be added the words "and our constitutional liberties." Everybody get that? Now for the question again. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. The amendment fails.

PHILLIPS: I would like to speak on the amendment that includes "grateful for Divine Guidance." I notice that the Federal Constitution does not include any reference to Divine Guidance, a Creator, a God or anybody else. It depends on the men themselves to make their government function and to devise those devices of government which will make it function. Now, that reminds me of a story I heard about a farmer who was looking at his fields and talking to a friend from the city, and his friend from the city said, "What a terrific job you and God have done with this land." And the farmer replied with, "You should have seen it before I helped God out. There was nothing but weeds here at that time." So I would feel that our government would be very much the same thing. There will be nothing but weeds in our government if we don't do it ourselves, and, therefore, we remain on the subject. I, therefore, move to delete the phrase "grateful for Divine Guidance," as it is in the Federal Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second? There is no second.

ROBERTS: I was going to speak against that, and point to our Declaration of Independence which was signed on July 4, 1776, which ends, "And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor."

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

IHARA: I would like to ask the proponents of the amendments whether we are to respect the great man, the small man, the aged, women and children, who do not walk the highways or sleep by the wayside?

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, I can't hear you.

LARSEN: I heard it, Mr. Chairman, if I may answer. I'll call your attention, it not only respects them when they are in their homes, but it hopes that when they go outside "who may ever walk the highways," who may, if they wish; if they wish to stay home, they may. I think that's fairly clear, and to me, of course, it's beautifully simple. But I think that was the idea he had in mind, wasn't it? It doesn't limit it; there's no limitation here.

CHAIRMAN: Is the committee ready for the question?

KAUHANE: May I beg indulgence of the Chairman that we take a five minute recess, that we get the proper Hawaiian language from which this preamble is taken to satisfy the other delegates.

CHAIRMAN: I understand you are moving for a five minute recess?

KAUHANE: That's right.

ASHFORD: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion for a five minute recess. All those in favor. Opposed. The ayes have it.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole come to order. There is being printed a revised copy of Delegate Larsen's amendment to [Committee] Proposal No. 20, which will be distributed in a moment. Now, is there any further discussion on the proposal?

C. RICE: I think the committee's proposal is the best of the two. I don't see why we have to put Kamehameha's words in here. Kamehameha never conquered Kauai. No, he never conquered Kauai. He wasn't the ruler of all the people.

KING: Mr. Chairman, if I may reply to Senator Rice. Kamehameha did rule Kauai by cession from the last king of Kauai, Kaumualii, who ceded the kingdom of Kauai to Kamehameha and was retained as viceroy for Kamehameha after that cession.

C. RICE: Well, he enticed him on a schooner and really didn't conquer Kauai. Twice they sent in invading fleets of canoes, but the weather was with Kauai, and they got a Kona storm each time, and we killed five thousand at a time. These were the invading forces.

Now, the committee report - - I think they are only seeing sentiment in this other. I think the committee report—the one in the committee report is much better.

SILVA: Can I ask Mr. Rice a question?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva, proceed.

SILVA: Mr. Rice, would you answer a question?

C. RICE: Gladly from the Senator from Hawaii.

SILVA: The question is this, "Was you there, Charlie?"

C. RICE: I was there in spirit.

LARSEN: May I also just remind you that Kamehameha was a contemporary of Washington, Jefferson. In the story that we're going to tell on the mainland, to think that this great contemporary of our great men who formed our nation should have expressed in these simple words the great rule that everyone is after.

[Part of discussion not recorded.]

CHAIRMAN: . . . by Delegate Larsen, and the amendment has just been read, and the question before the committee is whether or not to adopt the amendment as just read by the Clerk.

HEEN: I suggest that we adopt it in principle, so that if we do that, I think we can still improve upon the language.

CHAIRMAN: The suggestion is to adopt it in principle.

FONG: I am in sympathy with traditions and I am in sympathy with the words expressed by Kamehameha, but I'm speaking against this preamble because I feel that it does not express the sentiment of the people of Hawaii. Now, we are gathered here for the purpose of framing a constitution. We are here for one purpose and that is to concentrate the political philosophy that we know best, the political philosophy as it has evolved through the ages, the political philosophy as it now stands as far as the people of Hawaii can, in their very developed state of mentality, express to the people and the world. Now, to me, these words of Kamehameha, although uttered by a very great man, do not in a way represent a very matured political thinking. It is difficult for me to accept this preamble the way it's written. "Respect for the big man, the small man, the aged man, the women and the children, who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without molestation." Now, people may pick up this preamble and make fun of it. What do you mean by "sleeping on the wayside without molestation"? Do you mean that the drunk can sleep on the wayside? That anyone can sleep on the wayside? To me, it represents not the best or the most developed political philosophy which we are capable of.

Now, we are writing this preamble which will be read by the 48 states of the Union, which will be read by 150 million people. To me, our preamble should be stately, should conform with the high ideals of the philosophical thought that we are capable of, and to express it in these words would not be in keeping with the spirit and with the purpose for which we are gathered here, that is, to write a Constitution in the best political theory that we know how. And certainly, in writing a preamble with these words, we are not expressing what we are capable of in our very highly developed society.

A. TRASK: I am rather surprised that the learned previous speaker does not see in this brief preamble two great spirits and two great names. Here we have, joining hands, two great contemporaries of world history and political thought, and that is Abraham Lincoln and Kamehameha. "Government of the people, by the people and for the people" unfortunately is a statement that the Republicans claim; and if the gentleman from the fifth district cannot see the great words engraved in simple language that are enshrined in the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, which I'm sure he has seen, I am rather surprised.

FONG: Point of order. I did not refer to the first part of this preamble. The first part of the preamble is also in the preamble which was presented by the committee. I am just talking about the second, the latter part.

A. TRASK: I'm afraid the gentleman is backing up on this matter. He refers to the preamble -- his entire objection to the offered amendment is the entire front face [of the] preamble. "The government of the people, by the people and for the people" are words enshrined so much, and how old they are we all know. We have without even quoting Lincoln -- and I would submit to an amendment if he wants "the words of Lincoln" in there, that's perfectly all right with me, but I'm sure he doesn't. The question is one of historical significance, of Lincoln and his expression, and we don't even have to mention Lincoln; any student with an elementary knowledge of history would know the words of Lincoln.

But to those who don't know the words of Kamehameha, and the great history and tradition and culture of Hawaii -- and let us remember, please, that it's only about as old as the Constitution is, about 1776, thereabouts, that the first white man, Captain Cook, came to Hawaii's shores. Let us understand that we have had a civilized government. Certainly any country in the world that has created people as big in stature, big in heart, as big in mind, with poetry and love, to create flowers and to have a word "Aloha" so magnificently loved by people all over the world, and the song enshrined by Queen Liliuokalani.

However, we may have advanced with respect to industrial and Flowers of Hawaii, enterprise and so forth, I'm sure we would be very hesitant to say that with respect to that great number of people—400,000 population in Hawaii at the time of Kamehameha, according to Vancouver's count or Captain Cook's count—there was no importation. We had a population almost as great as it is today supporting themselves and living off the land and the sea and the air. Can we in Hawaii do it today? We cannot. And were the people as little as I am today compared to the bigness of mind and heart of the people of those days?

I think, as Delegate Kellerman properly said, this preamble shows a continuity of history of these islands, and the culture and intellectual continuity that goes from Lincoln to Hawaii and back to the United States of America in the adoption in writing of what the Hawaiians had achieved here, had achieved and are continuing to achieve and to accomplish, the aspirations of America as defined in the Declaration of Independence. The greatest argument for statehood is that we have achieved completely in Hawaii the amalgamation of the races, all men are created equal. And for the delegate to say that we have not expressed in this poetic preamble something that embodies the very soul and heart and accomplishment of Hawaii is an extremely surprising statement.

APOLIONA: I am a Hawaiian and I pay my respects to that great alii, Kamehameha, but in reading over this amendment to our preamble, I find that the main essence in thought is Kamehameha and his law. It is because of the words of Kamehameha and his law that the people reaffirm their belief in that type of government. That's not true. We should not glorify one man in our Constitution, but we should give the people of the land the credit for the greatness of the land as it is today. The Constitution of the United States provides in its preamble for a more perfect union, towards a better understanding. We should not go back into the thinking of ancient history to look for contents to be put into our Constitution. The able delegate from Kauai has said that Kauai has never been conquered by Kauai -- I mean Kamehameha, pardon me. Kauai is going to be a part of this State of Hawaii. The people of Kauai are going to be part of the State of Hawaii; so, therefore, I say to you, Mr. Chairman, and this Convention, give to the people of Kauai, who are also the people of the State of Hawaii, the law of the land and the thinking of the people of the land and not the thinking of one man.

DELEGATE: Question.

ANTHONY: I think there is a great deal in what my brother Hawaiian has just said. We must remember that Kamehameha was a savage. He was a great man. We all recognize that. He lived in a Stone Age. Now I think that if we are going to incorporate this in the Constitution, we don't want language in there that's going to subject us to ridicule. I think if we're going to put that in at all, we certainly should take out the stanza, "who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without molestation," because if that's in there certainly people will wonder about what kind of life we have here. So I, therefore, move an amendment to delete the words, "who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without molestation."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the amendment?

KAWAHARA: I second it.

HEEN: I have this contribution to make.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me a moment, Delegate Heen. Was there a second to Delegate Anthony's -- It has been seconded. Proceed, Delegate Heen.

HEEN: This should read:

We, the people of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and mindful of the words of Kamehameha that the law of the land shall be for the big, the small, and the aged man, the women and the children who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without molestation, we, therefore, with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of the earth, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, is that an amendment?

CROSSLEY: That was an amendment, and I second it.

HEEN: That's an amendment.

LARSEN: I accept the amendment. I'd like to talk on it for just a minute.

CROSSLEY: I would like to say -- Am I recognized?

CHAIRMAN: I just wanted to make sure that everybody had the additional words of Delegate Heen.

TAVARES: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

TAVARES: I thought it was the understanding we were just going to vote in principle. Now we are going back to amending the words again.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. The Chair would like to rule that the question is whether or not to accept this preamble in principle, and that the words do not alter the sense of the preamble, and I believe the call for the question is in order.

CROSSLEY: It would seem to me that in voting on the principle then, I would have the right to speak to the principle?

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

CROSSLEY: I think the principle as just expressed by the delegate from the fourth district, who made the previous motion, would perhaps clarify in the minds of quite a few of us as to how this would work. Therefore, I would now be in favor of this amendment as just changed, because I do think that it changes the sense considerably; and in adopting a principle we also would like to know the intent of the words and that would give us a guidance as to how they would work. Now, most of the people who have spoken against "who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without molestation" are people from the City and County of Honolulu where you just pound the gutters, the streets and hot pavements; but it's still true, especially on Kauai, that people do walk the highways and that they do sleep by the wayside. You can see it any day, and they do it without molestation. I think the trouble is too many people live in the city, and I'm in favor of this thing, and I do not think it will be held up to ridicule to read those words. I think they mean something different to people who live in rural areas.

HAYES: Point of privilege.

CHAIRMAN: State your point, Delegate Hayes.

HAYES: I rise to personal privilege in regards to a statement just made by Garner Anthony. I don't believe he really meant what he said, that Kamehameha was a savage. I would like to say that there would be no Statehood Convention today if the history of Hawaii had been one of hostility instead of hospitality.

[Part of the discussion was not recorded. The following is from the minutes of the committee.]

ANTHONY: May I clear the record by retracting that remark; what I meant to say was that I think he was a pagan; the President told me he was a pagan.

Delegate Larsen quoted from a nineteenth century journal an article on Kamehameha.

Delegate King stated that the question was on the amendment offered by Delegate Heen.

Delegate Larsen accepted the amendment.

Delegate Kauhane read what he said were the true words of King Kamehameha when he issued the law of the broken paddle, which he quoted. He said: "He speaks of the small man, of the little children when he refers to them as --" (read in Hawaiian and gave the English translation of the law of the broken or splintered paddle.)

[Recording resumed.]

KAUHANE: . . . when we say in this preamble, "in the words of Kamehameha the First, our reverence to God, also our respect." Kamehameha had never, in the utterance of the "Law of the broken paddle," said a prayer to God before he uttered those words. Certainly we read in Hawaiian history where Kamehameha has always paid homage to God. The Hawaiians had their own gods before the white man came to these islands. They had Lono who was the god of fish; they respected Hina; and the gods spoken of by the Hawaiians most frequently were Lono and Hina. So that when they went to pray and pay homage to their gods, they paid homage to Lono and Hina. It was the white men who came to these islands, who brought the Bible with them and took the Hawaiians away from the gods, their respected gods, Lono and Hina, and told them that there is a Divine God in heaven. That's why we have in the Hawaiian Bible the phrase "Praise to Almighty God," which is "Ka Makua ka Lani." When the Hawaiians open their prayers by saying such Hawaiian words, "Ka Makua ka Lani" they mean "the God in heaven," and that was taught to them by the white man when he came to these Islands.

So I see no reason for us to continue saying or trying to put in the preamble the "Law of the broken paddle." Let us express that in the committee report through our sincerity in carrying on that great homage to that "Law of the broken paddle" rather than write it in the Constitution as a preamble. I believe the committee report is sufficient when we say, and embody the same thinking that was expressed by Kamehameha, when we say this in the preamble, "in a government of the people, by the people, and for the people." Those are the very words by inference Kamehameha said when he laid down the "Law of the broken paddle." Even though some have said those are the words spoken by Abraham Lincoln, it is true that no truer words were spoken by Kamehameha when by inference he said the law is the government of the people, by the people, for the people, when he laid down the "Law of the broken paddle."

I feel that the committee proposal is proper, and if we want to make any reference to the "Law of the broken paddle" as laid down by Kamehameha, let us put it in the committee report and I believe everyone will respect the words of Kamehameha.

LOPER: I have a suggestion that might help solve this problem. By rearranging the language, if we would make it read something like this, I think it would be more accurately an expression of our thought.

We, the people of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance and mindful of the ancient words of Kamehameha's law of protection "for the big man, the small man, the aged man, the women and the children, who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without molestation," reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people; and with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

ANTHONY: Thus far, we have asked what the version of the Hawaiian is. We've gotten two, and the proponents of the amendment to the preamble have not been able to furnish us with the Hawaiian text. It seems to me that we should have that text here, and then translate it. Now, the translation of President King is different from the translation of the proponent of this amendment. I think that this matter ought to be deferred until we've gotten more information so we can vote intelligently on it. If we have the text, we can get a Hawaiian dictionary and find out what these words mean.

ARASHIRO: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Do I understand that to be a motion to defer, Delegate Anthony?

ARASHIRO: Second the motion.

ANTHONY: Yes, I move to defer.

LARSEN: Could I speak on that for a moment? The one way not to translate Hawaiian is by taking a dictionary and trying to get it word by word.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, Delegate Larsen, the motion to defer does not allow debate. All those in favor of deferring the amendment to Proposal No. 20, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is lost.

LARSEN: I think we're ready to vote on it and I would like to call for the motion.

SERIZAWA: Are we voting on the question as to whether we accept the principle as written by Dr. Larsen and one by the committee?

CHAIRMAN: The question before the committee is whether or not to accept the preamble offered by Dr. Larsen as an amendment to Proposal No. 20 and as amended on the floor.

SAKAKIHARA: Can I further amend the amendment, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

SAKAKIHARA: I would like to amend the proposal -- the amendment of Delegate Larsen in the following way:

We, the people of the State of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, mindful of our Hawaiian heritage, reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

KAUHANE: I second the amendment.

LARSEN: That misses the point entirely, of course. I would like to call for a motion, because we either accept the idea of expressing these two great principles of government in quotes, or we don't. I feel that Sakakihara's goes back to the original of the committee. It seems to me what we're voting on is whether we accept that simple language, you might say the ordinary, or whether we use the quotes.

CHAIRMAN: You are speaking against the amendment which you do not accept. Is that correct?

LARSEN: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN: Then any discussion would be on Delegate Sakakihara's amendment.

ARASHIRO: Was there a motion to the previous question?

CHAIRMAN: No, there was not. The question before the committee now is the amendment as offered by Delegate Sakakihara. Call for the question? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The Chair is in doubt. I will ask for a show of hands. I believe that will be sufficient.

SAKAKIHARA: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: Call for a roll call. How many in favor of a roll call? Roll call is ordered.

CROSSLEY: Before the roll call is taken, a point of information, please. As I understand it, we're not voting on Mr. Sakakihara's amendment or any other amendment, we're voting on the principle as to whether or not we want the language as proposed by the committee and quite similarly proposed by Delegate Sakakihara, or the language proposed by Delegate Larsen and amended by Delegate Heen; the two principles, as I understand it, that we're going to vote on.

CHAIRMAN: That is not correct, Delegate Crossley. The amendments up to now have been acceptable to Dr. Larsen as the maker of the original amendment. This amendment is not acceptable, and the question now is whether or not the amendment will be accepted by the committee. So I'd like to ask the Clerk now to read the preamble as it would sound amended by Delegate Sakakihara.

TAVARES: Before that happens, may I ask a further question, and that is, it seems to me that first of all we should decide in principle, and then we should have it understood that we can further amend whichever language is adopted in principle, because I'd want -- if the Sakakihara amendment is adopted, I would want to suggest a further amendment to it.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair at the moment is powerless to do anything unless Delegate Sakakihara wishes to withdraw his amendment. A roll call has been asked for, and I'm going to ask the Clerk to read the preamble as amended by Delegate Sakakihara.

HAYES: I move for a five minutes recess.

CHAIRMAN: I don't think it would be necessary, if you'd wait until --

CLERK:

We, the people, of the State of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, mindful of our Hawaiian heritage, reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

A. TRASK: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

A. TRASK: This is not an amendment. This is not an amendment at all. It's nothing else but the original article of Committee Proposal No. 20. Only one word "affirm," and it's altogether the same. It is not a proper amendment, and I say that therefore that leaves with us the amendment of Dr. Larsen, which is in truth an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair rules that it is an amendment.

SERIZAWA: It is an amendment because the words -- additional words have been added to it.

CHAIRMAN: Will the Clerk call the roll.

J. TRASK: It is my understanding that if we vote "aye" we'll be voting for the amendment as submitted by Delegate Sakakihara.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. Roll call, please.

LARSEN: And if you vote "yes," you vote against including any of Kamehameha's words, is that right?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct, even though you are out of order, Dr. Larsen. Roll call.

Ayes, 28. Noes, 26 (Ashford, Bryan, Cockett, Corbett, Crossley, Hayes, Heen, Holroyde, Kellerman, King, Kometani, Larsen, Loper, Lyman, Mizuha, Ohrt, Porteus, Roberts, St. Sure, Tavares, A. Trask, J. Trask, Wirtz, Woolaway, Yamamoto, Castro). Not voting, 9 (Gilliland, Lai, Lee, Mau, Phillips, Richards, Sakai, White, Wist).

CHAIRMAN: The ayes have it. The - -

LARSEN: Mr. Chairman, the noes have it.

CHAIRMAN: What was that again? 28 ayes.

LARSEN: I thought that you said the ayes have it.

CLERK: 28 ayes, 26 noes, 9 not voting.

LARSEN: Sorry, I - -

CHAIRMAN: The ayes have it.

ROBERTS: I'd like to offer an amendment to the proposal, in line four after the word "people," add the following words, "and with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth," and continue, "do hereby ordain and establish."

YAMAMOTO: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that after the word "people" in the fourth line, the following words be added, "and with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth," and then proceed with "do ordain and establish." Is that correct?

ROBERTS: That's correct. May I speak in favor of that?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

ROBERTS: The delegates seem to feel ready to vote on this thing. I assume that they mean they will vote in favor of it. All right.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed, Dr. Roberts, if you wish. Is there any discussion on the amendment as proposed? All those in favor?

ANTHONY: Can we hear the amendment? Will the Chair have the Clerk read the amendment, please?

CHAIRMAN: Will the Clerk read the amendment?

CLERK: In line four, after the word "people," add the following words, "and with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth."

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Anthony? Call for the question?

HAYES: I would like to speak against this amendment, and I would like to reaffirm my stand on why I feel that Kamehameha the Great should be a part of the Constitution of the State of Hawaii.

SILVA: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Do you have a point of order, or don't you?

SILVA: She isn't speaking on the amendment; she's speaking on the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair rules she's speaking on the amendment. Proceed, Delegate Hayes.

HAYES: My reasons against the amendment which I'm speaking on; from New York, the State of New York to the State of California, each state, I believe, has its own background and history and reasons why they believe that in their constitutions certain principles should remind them of the old grand State of New York or of California. For the same principle, I feel that Hawaii should maintain her historical spot, the most important thing that Hawaii has presented to other nations. Hawaii is different from any other state, and the reason why I say she is different is because she is the only territory of the United States that ever had a king rule the territory. No other state in the Union has had that privilege and, therefore, the people of the United States do look to Hawaii as one of the historical and most interesting territories.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Hayes, may I interrupt? Would you confine your remarks to the amendment. The question of whether or not Hawaii is included is not germane to the amendment.

HAYES: The reason why I'm trying to compare the difference between this amendment, which has ignored that great Kamehameha - -

CHAIRMAN: That has been voted.

SILVA: Point of order. I asked a moment ago and you ruled that she was in order. Then you finally say that she's out of order.

HAYES: May I say just say one more word, and then I'll stop. I would just like to say to the chairman and the delegates of this Convention that Hawaii would never be known to any other state. Why? Other states have everything which is in common with one another, but Hawaii doesn't because of her great king, her people, the historical background that we should have in this preamble of the new State of Hawaii.

CHAIRMAN: Does everybody understand what the amendment is?

ROBERTS: I'd like to state that the amendment which I offered is on the assumption that the previous motion was made and lost. I was in complete sympathy and supported the proposal presented by Delegate Larsen; but once the proposal has lost, it seems to me that this amendment is in order and proper and does provide some language, and therefore, ought not to be opposed by those who have favored the previous proposal.

I'd like also to state that the language, "government of, for and by the people," is essentially the language of Lincoln and drafting of that in terms of language could be left with the Style Committee.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

ANTHONY: I'm a little bit confused here. What is the status of Delegate Sakakihara's amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara's amendment passed by a vote of 28 to 26. To that amendment has been added the phrase after the fourth line, after the word "people," comma, the phrase, "and with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth," and then proceed with "do ordain" - - "do hereby ordain and establish."

ANTHONY: I'm substantially in accord with this; I'm substantially in accord with the expression of the ancient doctrine of protection as enunciated by Kamehameha. What I did object to was the attempt at a literal translation of words which we didn't have before us. Now, it seems to me that if we take a little time on this, we can get that thought that Dr. Larsen wanted to get in without putting words in that are not true translations.

SILVA: I rise to a point of order. That motion has been lost. The only thing before this Convention now in the Committee of the Whole is Dr. Roberts' amendment.

ANTHONY: I move for a deferment.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

A. TRASK: I second - -

BRYAN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kometani, did I hear you second the motion to defer?

A. TRASK: I did second that.

CHAIRMAN: Was that Delegate Trask?

A. TRASK: I second the motion of Delegate Anthony to defer this matter.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made and seconded to defer the Committee Proposal No. 20 as amended. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

KING: I move the committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

HOLROYDE: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor say "aye." [Carried.]

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole come to order. Delegates may sit at their ease.

When we rose to report progress, prior to lunch, there was still being debated Committee Proposal No. 20. The chairman of the Committee on Miscellany has asked that the Committee of the Whole turn its attention to those committee proposals which yesterday were deferred. So, in accordance with that request, the Chair would like to request that the committee turn its attention now to the committee proposals in the following order: 18, on distribution of powers; and then after that, 19, 17, 12 and ending with Proposal No. 20 on the preamble. So we will now turn our attention to Committee Proposal No. 18 on the distribution of powers. The Chair recognizes Delegate Yamauchi.

YAMAUCHI: The committee still feels that there should be an article in regard to the distribution of powers and we haven't come to an agreement after talking to some of the members. I would like to ask Delegate Smith to talk on this matter.

CHAIRMAN: Possibly before we hear from Delegate Smith, I'll ask the Clerk to read the Committee Proposal No. 18 as it stands amended, just to make certain.

CLERK:

> The powers of government shall be divided into three branches; legislative, executive and judicial, except as expressly provided in this Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: That is the way the committee proposal stands with the proposed amendment, "except as expressly provided in this Constitution."

SMITH: Going to the Legislative Reference Bureau and getting more information, I tried to get as much information as I possibly could. It seems to me that among the 41 states that have this provision, it's a matter of statement of philosophy that there shall be three distinct branches of government, and apparently the majority of them have the same wording. I thought I'd read a couple of them to show you the same trend of thought. "The powers of"—this is from Alabama—"The powers of the government of the State of Alabama shall be divided into three distinct departments, each of which shall be confided to a separate body of magistracy, to wit, those which are legislative to one, those which are executive to another, and those which are judicial to another." They all have the -- practically all of them are the same in thought, that there should be some expression in the constitution of the concept of having three distinct branches of government. I'll read one more and that is from Missouri: "The powers of government shall be divided into three distinct departments—the legislative, executive and judicial—each of which shall be confided to a separate magistracy, and no person, or collection of persons, charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of those departments, shall exercise any power properly belonging to either of the others, except in the instances in this constitution expressly directed or permitted."

From all the information that I could gather, it seems that it's just a statement which has been brought down through the years and as far as the different states following them, there are not very many. In writing the Model Constitution, they tried to put it right in the Constitution in making three distinct branches of government.

I am quite sure that in all the literature that's written up that you will find that the sentiments are these. The doctrine of the separation of powers, inherited from a political theory long since discredited, is soundly enunciated as a matter of course, the phraseology varying but little from state to state. During the last century and a half Americans have gradually been learning that they must concentrate authority in order to prevent the diffusion of responsibility. But the doctrine in very explicit language still has a prominent place in most state constitutions, even though, as one commentator remarked a number of years ago, it is rapidly falling into a condition of harmless senility.

But the way we have it worded as amended, I haven't been able to find any constitution that has that wording because it's just knocking the teeth out of it. Now I know that there will be persons objecting to it thoroughly, that there will be instances where certain things will be unconstitutional, but it's the very fact that we have three branches of government which we wanted, with separate powers, so that the lawmakers will not be -- the ones making the laws will not be carrying them out.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on Committee Proposal No. 18 with its proposed amendment?

TAVARES: I agree with what has just last been read, that this business of trying to put each department of government into a separate vacuum, sort of a contained compartment, is impracticable and unworkable. I say again that the Federal Constitution has no such requirement of -- express requirement of separation of powers and yet the courts have at times held that actions which went too far in attempted exercise by one department of powers which by the Constitution are given exclusively to another department, were invalid.

Now, I'd like to point out some of the difficulties you get into with an express provision like this. Here's American Jurisprudence that says this. Here is one decision that is cited. "If the removal of a sheriff by the governor is an executive function, a statutory provision for review of his action by the courts would be unconstitutional as an attempt to invest the judiciary with a function of the executive department." That's American Jurisprudence, page 888. Another statement, "It is the rule in some jurisdictions that under a constitutional provision that the three departments of the government shall be distinct and that no one branch can interfere with the duties of the others, a writ of mandamus will not lie to compel official action by a governor, whether the act is of the kind regarded as ministerial or otherwise. Under this view, such a writ is not issuable against an executive for the purpose of compelling him to perform a duty even though such duty is imposed upon him by statute."

That is the danger that we run by putting an express provision and tying every department up so that one can't interfere with the other, by an express provision like this. And when you say that the governor shall perform ministerial acts, some courts have said that kind of a provision prohibits the courts from making him do his duty. I warn the members of this Convention, therefore, that if they put in a provision like this, they are likely to run the risk of this kind of court decision in the future, instead of leaving it to the well-interpreted separation of powers implied in the Federal Constitution and implied in this.

ANTHONY: Will the speaker yield just a moment?

TAVARES: I'll yield.

ANTHONY: What this endeavors to do is to incorporate in a sentence the basic doctrine that came down from Montesquieu, which was incorporated in the Federal Constitution, of the doctrine of the separation of powers. As Brother Tavares has pointed out, that is a well-understood doctrine in constitutional law, and we know what that means. There is certain danger in endeavoring to state it in a brief sentence like this. It seems to me that we will have the doctrine of separation of powers without incorporating it in so many words. Therefore, it seems to me unnecessary that we should incorporate a statement in the Constitution to that effect.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

TAVARES: For the benefit of the lawyers, may I make one more—there's various others—but I'll quote one more citation from American Jurisprudence, page 910. "An act creating an executive tribunal with power to adjudicate disputes arising out of motor vehicle accidents on the highways of the state contravenes a distributive constitutional provision. In one jurisdiction laws establishing the Torrens system of land registration,"—that's the land court—"and providing for an examination by the recorder of deeds or registrar of titles of the facts in relation to the title to land and for the issuing of a certificate of ownership, have been held invalid as constituting an unconstitutional conferring of judicial power, even if the effect of such certificate is only to start the running of a statute of limitations. There are, however, contrary rulings on this point . . . " and so forth. In other words, the courts are in dispute over the meaning of that type of term.

CHAIRMAN: Is the committee ready for the question?

A. TRASK: May I ask Delegate Tavares, if the judicial decisions in the cases referred to, that the constitutions of those states had such a provision in their constitution?

TAVARES: In one or two of those citations, it did state that there was an expressed - - such an express provision. I rather think that most of these are states which have that express provision. That's the impression I get from reading, but I haven't checked - - double-checked the decisions; I didn't have the time since yesterday, except to find the general citations in the search books.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your query, Delegate Trask?

A. TRASK: Yes, certainly. I feel similarly to Delegates Tavares and Anthony. I feel—and attorneys are not much respecters of themselves as a class—I think it would be - - it would give unscrupulous lawyers a great opportunity to hamstring a lot of legislative matters that ordinarily would fall within that zone between the various departments.

I am inclined to be in favor of it, but in appreciation of the committee's work I would not move, but I would suggest that for them to consider that after the word "government," to consider, "The power of government is," insert, "is declared to be divided into three branches, legislative, executive and judicial." Primarily, the question is one of declaration; that there is certainly a judicial declaration that we recognize the historical and continuing construction of the form of government, that it is divided into three parts. And this would be merely declaratory of a principle. Now, it seems to me that it would put it therefore in a liquid state and not make it as concrete and distinct and rigid as the form of the article now appears. But for the safety of all, I would be in favor of having the matter altogether deleted.

CHAIRMAN: You then do not - - you do not propose that as an amendment?

NIELSEN: I'd like to ask Delegate Smith a question. How many states did you say had a similar provision as Proposal 18 in their constitution?

SMITH: Forty-one.

NIELSEN: Forty-one.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the committee proposal, with its proposed amendment? Are you ready for the question?

ROBERTS: I have a question to ask some of the lawyers. Would the deletion of this section which states very succinctly the separation of powers, would the deletion of this section prevent a suit by a person claiming that one branch of government was usurping the authority of another.

CHAIRMAN: Is there an answer?

TAVARES: I would say not within the limits that have already been established by the federal courts in interpreting the Federal Constitution. They have struck down some infringements where they went beyond a reasonable twilight zone between the two departments. The courts have said that there is a separation of powers, that that is the effect of the Federal Constitution. For instance, if Congress, I believe, assumed to try a judicial question, a case pending before the courts, and tried to pass a law saying that the judgment shall be thus and so, undoubtedly the Supreme Court or the federal courts would strike it down as being an invasion of the judicial power.

ROBERTS: I'm talking now about the State Constitution.

ANTHONY: There was an instance in recent years which I think Delegate Roberts has reference to. That involved a statute passed by the legislature, I believe it involved a claim. It went to the courts and the courts threw it out. It went to the Supreme Court of Hawaii. The same statute in modified form was again readopted and the Supreme Court of Hawaii held—in my judgment erroneously—that that action of the legislature was a usurpation of the judicial power. I think that's the sort of thing that Mr. Roberts is talking about. Now, I wouldn't be particularly in favor of this provision to correct that sort of a decision. It seems to me that the place to correct that is in the courts themselves rather than to try to do it in a rigid statutory - - constitutional provision.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Roberts?

ROBERTS: Yes, it does. May I make a statement now?

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

ROBERTS: It is my general feeling that when we set up our Constitution we are providing for the separation of powers. We have provided for three branches of government, very specifically; so that whether we put this section in or leave it out, there is still the basic concept that there has to be a separation of powers. If the legislature were to take on responsibilities or to divide responsibilities in contravention of that basic policy of separation of powers, it would seem to me that the courts could strike that down, even if we did not have this particular paragraph. It is, therefore, my feeling that there is no objection to the inclusion of this section, which does point out that from the point of view of our government that we do recognize that there are three branches of government, that we do not want one branch of government to operate the entire government. Therefore, I would suggest that that section be retained in the Constitution, even though the courts ultimately do have the responsibility of construing it. But if one branch of government takes upon itself too great powers, it would seem to me then that there is a proper safeguard, in terms of our basic philosophy, that there are and should be a separation of powers as between judicial, legislative and executive.

TAVARES: Am I correct in my recollection, we have already struck out the latter part of that article, "and no person or persons belonging to or constituting one of these departments shall exercise any of the powers properly belonging to either of the others" and so forth?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

TAVARES: And also the first sentence has been amended to read as follows: "The powers of government shall be divided into three branches: legislative, executive and judicial." Is that the way it now reads?

CHAIRMAN: After "judicial" there is a comma, followed by the phrase, "except as expressly provided in this Constitution." That was an amendment by Delegate Roberts yesterday.

ANTHONY: I'd like to have an explanation as to the exceptions. I didn't know there were exceptions. Would the delegate who made that amendment explain the exceptions.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, would you like to answer that question?

ROBERTS: When the original proposal submitted by the committee was amended to delete the words, "No person or persons belonging to or constituting one branch, etc." My feeling was that some exception ought to be made for those sections in the Constitution where we have, in fact, recognized that there is an overlapping of power. Unless those things which we have written into our Constitution, which recognize that - - are expressly that this section shall not apply to the things which we have expressly written into our Constitution.

ANTHONY: That does not quite satisfy me. I didn't know what the express exceptions were. It seems to me that if we want to express the political philosophy of the separation of powers, you can do that very simply by saying, "The powers of government shall be divided into three branches: executive, legislative and judicial," period.

CHAIRMAN: Do you amend to delete the clause?

ANTHONY: I would move to make the amendment that I have just stated. "The powers of government shall be divided into three branches: executive, legislative and judicial," period, and to strike out the rest of the language.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the motion?

A. TRASK: I second that motion, but is the pending motion, that of Delegate Roberts, with respect to the words, "except as expressly provided in the Constitution"?

CHAIRMAN: No, Delegate Trask, the pending motion is whether or not to adopt the article to read, "The powers of government shall be divided into three branches: legislative, executive and judicial, except as expressly provided in this Constitution." The amendment by Delegate Anthony deletes the words, "except as expressly provided in this Constitution."

A. TRASK: I second the motion of Delegate Roberts - - I mean Delegate Anthony. And I say with reference to the deletion of the contribution by Delegate Roberts, "except as expressly provided in this Constitution," those words, I feel, are very dangerous. He has not referred himself or addressed himself specifically as to any particular necessity for this thing and I see danger in it.

In our Constitution, as in the Federal Constitution, the courts have interpreted great implied powers in the Congress to do this, that and the other thing. It may very well be that the supreme court of Hawaii may, by looking over the Constitution from all corners, decide that there are certain implied powers, and certain implied powers may be given to certain departments of the government. Now, if you have this situation, where there is some question with reference to the executive having some power that may border on a legislative matter, like with respect to delegation of power or with respect to quasi-judicial determination, this expression, "except as expressly provided in this Constitution," when you are faced with only an implied power, it would be very doubtful in my mind whether or not "except as expressly provided" could spell out effectively an implied power. Therefore, I think it should be left out altogether.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? The question before the committee is as to whether or not - -

HEEN: I think the word - - the use of the word "into" is wrong. "The powers of government shall be divided into three separate branches."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, we would like to have the expression of the committee on the deletion of the phrase, "except as expressly provided in this Constitution," after which time, I think the discussion of the word "into" would be in order.

The amendment is for the deletion of the phrase, "except as expressly provided in this Constitution." Those voting aye will vote to delete that phrase. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried unanimously.

The amended section before the committee now reads, "The powers of government shall be divided into three branches: legislative, executive and judicial," period.

HEEN: Instead of using the word "into," I think we ought to use the word "among." "The powers of government shall be divided among three branches of government."

ANTHONY: I accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Will you make that as a - -

HEEN: I so move, that the word "among" be substituted for the word "into."

CHAIRMAN: I believe, Delegate Anthony, the proper motion is to second.

ANTHONY: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the word "into" on the second line be deleted and in lieu thereof the word "among" be placed.

HEEN: I move to strike the words "separate and distinct."

CHAIRMAN: That has been stricken.

HEEN: That's been stricken?

CHAIRMAN: That has been stricken.

HEEN: How does it stand now?

CHAIRMAN: With your amendment, it would read, "The powers of government shall be divided among three branches: legislative, executive and judicial," period.

HEEN: Between the word "three" and the word "branches," I move that the word "fundamental" be inserted so that that sentence would read, "The powers of government shall be divided among three fundamental branches: legislative, executive and judicial."

CHAIRMAN: Is that further amendment seconded?

ANTHONY: I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: After the word "three," the word "fundamental" be inserted. Is that the extent of your amendment, Delegate Heen? Is there any discussion on the amendment?

ROBERTS: I have a question. The way the section now reads it provides that "The powers of government shall be divided among three fundamental branches." Does that mean that you can divide among three branches in such form that you can give the judicial certain executive powers? I have in mind, for example, an action in the supreme court of the State of Michigan dealing with an arbitration statute. That arbitration statute provided that a member of the judiciary be permitted to sit on the court dealing with certain executive functions, an arbitration tribunal. The supreme court of that state held that that was contrary to and in violation of the separation of powers. This section permits the setting up of any functions in any branch of the government. The original language of the committee provided for three separate and distinct branches, so whatever functions were allocated must be allocated in the appropriate division of government. This would give you a hodgepodge, an opportunity to divide your functions instead of maintaining your separation of powers.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, I understood that you rose for a question?

BRYAN: I think that the answer to his question is that you have -- Dr. Roberts? Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Dr. Roberts, there is a question being addressed to you instead.

BRYAN: Is not the answer to your question that the word "divided" provides that it be divided into three departments? I don't think if you divide anything three ways that you can have a hodgepodge.

ROBERTS: You can divide functions among three powers, and give each power part of it.

MIZUHA: At this time I would like to move for the deletion of this entire article.

KAWAHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the entire article be deleted. I believe that we have agreed in the committee that we would vote on the merits of the motion and not to delete. The amendment before the committee is that the section should read, "The powers of government shall be divided among three fundamental branches: legislative, executive and judicial." The Chair is ready to put the question.

MIZUHA: I rise to a point of order. When did we agree that we could not delete this article?

CHAIRMAN: I would like to ask the delegate to withdraw his motion so that we may vote on the proposal as presented.

MIZUHA: Would the defeat of the previous motion result in the deletion of the article?

CHAIRMAN: The question before the house is the amendment, Delegate Mizuha.

MIZUHA: Well, I believe that if the motion to delete the article is put and carried, then the article will be defeated and we don't have to vote on the amendment.

J. TRASK: Point of order. I think the delegate from Kauai is wholly out of order. We've already got a motion and a second to the amendment to the proposed section. The Chair has recognized the motion and the second. So the question on the floor is the inclusion of the word "fundamental" and the Chair has ruled that that motion is in order, so we should proceed along those lines.

BRYAN: Wouldn't it be -- The motion to amend would be purely academic if the motion to delete would have carried.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, and the Chair is willing to put the motion to delete. Ready for the question? The motion has been made by Delegate Mizuha and seconded by Delegate Kawahara to delete the entire article.

ROBERTS: May I speak in favor of that?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

ROBERTS: I was for the inclusion of this article in such a form that it spells out the separation of powers. I believe that the separation of powers exists whether we have this article or not. Rather than see it go in this form, I'd just as soon have it deleted.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to delete please say "aye." Opposed. Motion is deleted -- The proposal is deleted.

The Chair feels, however, that those delegates who feel that these articles should be deleted should speak up early in the debate rather than to waste an hour of the committee's time.

HOLROYDE: On that point, I moved to delete that section yesterday but you wouldn't let me.

CHAIRMAN: We'll now move to Committee Proposal No. 19. I'll ask the Clerk to read the proposal as it stands with amendments.

CLERK:

> Oath of Office. All public officers and employees shall, before entering upon the duties of their respective offices and employment, take and subscribe to the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the State of Hawaii; and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of my employment or the office of ____ to the best of my ability; and that I do not advocate or belong to any party, organization or association which advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the government of the State of Hawaii or the government of the United States." The legislature may prescribe further oaths or affirmations.

CHAIRMAN: What is the pleasure of the committee?

KAGE: I am speaking against the amendment to include the word "employee" and also to amend the oath --

CHAIRMAN: May I ask -- there is no motion to accept the proposal before the committee.

KAGE: That motion was made yesterday.

CHAIRMAN: No, the motion was to defer.

HOLROYDE: I move for the adoption of this section.

BRYAN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

KAGE: We are specifically speaking of the oath of office in this particular proposal and when we end it with the sentence, "The legislature may prescribe further oaths and affirmations," we are speaking of the oaths of loyalty. If we were to include the word "employees" and request that he take the oath of office, we will be having a rat catcher or a janitor trying to faithfully discharge the duties of his office. The committee feels that the office -- the oath of office and oath of loyalty are two separate and different matters. If you try to combine the two oaths into one, you are trying to put two things into one basket. The committee further feels that the oath of loyalty is a statutory matter and that it should be left to the legislature.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the proposal? Ready for the question?

TAVARES: Just what is the proposed amendment now? May we get it?

CHAIRMAN: The proposed amendment is - - The proposal as amended reads:

> All public officers and employees shall, before entering upon the duties of their respective offices and employment, take and subscribe to the following oath or affirmation, "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the State of Hawaii, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of _____ to the best of my ability; and that I do not advocate or belong to any party, organization or association which advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the government of the State of Hawaii or the government of the United States." The legislature may prescribe further oaths or affirmations.

BRYAN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan, state your point of order.

BRYAN: I don't believe that the amendment to include the word "employees" was ever voted on yesterday, was it? I believe the rest of the amendments were.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair's understanding is that it was, but I - -

A. TRASK: I made the amendment and it was considered and debated upon and then at long last the committee said that it would accept the inclusion of the words "employees" and "employment," and "my employment or," Now, is it that the committee today is not accepting that amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kage, would you - -

KAGE: The committee did not accept "employees" and "employment."

CHAIRMAN: The committee did not?

KAGE: Did not.

CHAIRMAN: I see.

TAVARES: Can't we start all over again and consider now that the amendment is being proposed and vote on it that way?

A. TRASK: I do move that after the third word "officers" we have inserted the words "and employees"; and on the second line after the word "offices," insert the words "and employment"; and on the sixth line after the word "duties of," insert "my employment or."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the motion to amend?

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

TAVARES: In opposition to that motion, I should like to add my voice. I feel that when a person takes an office, it is proper to require in the Constitution that he take an oath of office. I feel that when you come down to employees, that should be left to the discretion of the legislature and I don't think it is necessary. We actually do have a loyalty oath now for all officers and employees by law. I do feel that in a Constitution you shouldn't go into too much detail and the officers are the ones that perform the important functions of government. The employees only take orders from somebody else. I think there is a distinction between an oath of office for officers prescribed in the Constitution and trying to prescribe an oath for all employees.

CROSSLEY: I have the original language which has been amended. I now have another amendment on my desk which is written out and my fellow delegate over in the fifth has proposed a third. I wondered if we couldn't have a few minutes recess to get these all correlated so that we can find out whether the committee is far apart on these others and then have a committee proposal or a committee report as to how they feel on these amendments. So I would move that we have about a five minute recess.

A. TRASK: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the recess say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole come to order, please.

ANTHONY: Point of information. What's before the house at the moment?

CHAIRMAN: Before the house is the amendment offered by Delegate Trask calling for the insertion in the first line after "officers," the word "and employees"; in the second line after "offices," the words "and employment"; and in the third to the last line after "duties," the words "my employment or."

ANTHONY: I understand the delegate may withdraw that.

A. TRASK: These amendments were offered because of the oath that has been offered by Delegate Ashford and that's why these were made, but if the other portion is going to be left out, I at this time withdraw the proposed amendment.

CHAIRMAN: You withdraw your proposed amendment?

ASHFORD: I've been advised that everything will be much simplified if the amendment which I offered yesterday and which was adopted was dropped out as being an appropriate matter for the legislature to take care of. In view of the fact that the ordinances will contain a provision that no officers shall be eligible - - that no one shall be eligible for office if he advocates or is a member of an organization, and so forth, advocating the overthrow of the government. So I, therefore, move the reconsideration of the amendment I offered, which was adopted yesterday.

NIELSEN: I'll second that to clear the deck.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the amendment which was adopted yesterday, offered by Delegate Ashford, which was adopted be reconsidered. That amendment was in the second to the last line after the word "ability," a comma and add the words "and that I do not advocate or belong to any party, organization or association which advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the government of the State of Hawaii or the government of the United States." Do you wish to reconsider? All those in favor of reconsideration please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Now is there a motion - -

TAVARES: Before the final motions are adopted, I was going to offer an amendment but I changed my mind.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, if you will hold a moment. The purpose of the reconsideration was to allow for the withdrawal of the amendment.

ASHFORD: May I now withdraw my motion to amend?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford has withdrawn the amendment which we have voted to reconsider.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares had the floor.

TAVARES: I would yield to Delegate Anthony.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: I move that Proposal No. 19 as brought out by the committee be adopted.

TAVARES: I second that motion, but in seconding it I would like to state that I was about to offer an amendment but changed my mind when it was shown to me that Section No. 19 of the Hawaiian Organic Act applies to all offices of the government of the Territory of Hawaii. However, I believe that the committee report, or the record at least here, should show that there have been exceptions to this rule in cases where we have had to appoint someone outside of the territory, say like a commissioner of deeds, and so forth, where he isn't a citizen of the United States, that this would not prevent the State from appointing in cases of necessity when we couldn't get a citizen in a foreign country to serve as a commissioner of deeds or some officer like that for the State. We would not require him to swear -- support the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of the State of Hawaii because in so doing he would be asked to commit an act of disloyalty perhaps to his own country. With that understanding, I will not offer the amendment which I was going to, making an exception in just such cases.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will see that is incorporated in the report of the Committee of the Whole.

DOWSON: The committee has concurred on that matter and we are heartily in accord that it be included in the report of the Committee of the Whole about the non-citizens, the exception about taking the oath by non-citizens in special cases.

CHAIRMAN: It shall be done that way. Question before the committee --

HEEN: In line six of the proposal as printed, I would suggest that we delete the word "the" following the word "discharge" and substitute for the word "the," the word "my."

CHAIRMAN: The word which?

HEEN: "My," M-Y. And delete the words "of the office of" at the end of that line and substitute for those words, the word "as," A-S. So that, for instance, if you were to appoint members to a board, then it would read: "My duties as a member of the Board of Regents." It would be easier to use for different situations. "As a member of the commission." I move the adoption of my amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second? There is a second that in the sixth line after the word "discharge," the word "my" be substituted for the word "the" and the word "as" be substituted for the phrase "of the office of." Any discussion on the amendment? The question before the committee is on the amendment. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Now the committee proposal as amended is before the committee.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Call for the question.

DOWSON: I move the adoption of the committee proposal as amended.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made.

H. RICE: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of adopting the committee proposal as amended, please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

We will now turn our attention to Committee Proposal No. 17 relating to intergovernmental relations. When we deferred action on this proposal yesterday, one amendment had been offered and that was in the third line to substitute in lieu of the word "its" appearing before "political," substitute in lieu of the word "its," the word "their," t-h-e-i-r. The Chair's understanding is that that amendment was accepted by the committee. Is that correct, Delegate Yamauchi?

YAMAUCHI: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, so that the committee proposal is before the committee now. Is there any discussion?

LOPER: Do I understand that there is now a motion for the adoption of this section before us?

CHAIRMAN: There is not yet.

ANTHONY: I move that the word "all" be deleted.

CHAIRMAN: May I have a motion to adopt the committee proposal?

DOWSON: I move for the adoption of [Committee] Proposal No. 17.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded.

ANTHONY: I move that the word "all" be deleted in line three of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN: That is, the word "all" to be deleted in the third line before the word "matters."

NIELSEN: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to delete the word "all."

KANEMARU: The committee accepts the deletion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kanemaru, the committee does accept the deletion of the word "all" in the third line. Any further discussion?

LOPER: I rise for some information. I would like to ask the committee chairman or a member of the committee why this section is necessary. It would seem to me that this can be assumed to be true without putting it into the Constitution at all.

KANEMARU: As a member of the subcommittee on Miscellaneous Matters, if you will allow me I will attempt to clarify this matter to the honorable delegates of this Convention. I'm not an authority on this, so I will quote a few paragraphs [from a letter from the Legislative Reference Bureau.]

> The proposed section on federal-state relations is necessitated by the growth in recent years of programs involving actions by both levels of government, typically entailing the use of grants-in-aid by the federal government. Some of the constitutional obstacles which have been encountered by states, and which in large part would be obviated by adoption by Committee Proposal No. 17, are set forth in the Manual on Federal-State Relations of the Missouri Constitutional Convention of 1943, at pages 35-37.
> The authors of the Model State Constitution also noted the necessity for a provision similar to Committee Proposal No. 17. The fourth edition of the Model State Constitution explains the advocacy of such a provision as a means of overcoming the barriers to federal-state cooperation created by state courts:
> > . . .Recent developments have clearly indicated the desirability -- indeed, the necessity -- of such provisions, for the states now have important relations with the federal government on the one hand, with their own local units on the other, and with each other. The questions which arise in this field are so numerous and are frequently so pressing that provision should be made in advance to insure the constitutionality of such measures as may be thought necessary by responsible legislative and executive officers in dealing with them.

The provision of federal-state relations is a direct answer to those barriers to federal-state cooperation erected by the courts of a number of states in the early thirties. It has the backing not only of leading authorities in constitutional law but of actual experience. There would normally be no question regarding the right of the legislature to establish agencies for interstate cooperation, as provided in . . . the section on interstate relations, but questions have arisen in a number of states as to the right of the legislature to appropriate for the support of agencies of an interstate character. If the development of interstate cooperation is to be promoted as it can and should be, under present day conditions, this is one obstacle which should not be permitted to arise.

The proposed section would also facilitate cooperation between Hawaii ahd mainland states. It would remove any possible constitutional barriers to participation by Hawaii in such interstate activities as the Council of State Governments or the National Conference on Commissioners on Uniform State Laws; entering into compacts with other states; or, more generally, joining in the growing movement towards cooperation and reciprocity by the various states.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Loper?

LOPER: Thank you very much.

H. RICE: Why shouldn't this proposal read, "The legislature shall" instead of "may"?

CHAIRMAN: There is a question of the committee. Any member of the committee wish to answer?

ROBERTS: There might be some agencies with which we don't want to cooperate. This merely provides for those when we do want to cooperate and want to expend funds, that we don't run into any difficulties. But if this requires that we "shall," then we may be required to join all of the various operations of a character of this type and would be required to cooperate with them, even though we're not in accord with some of their policies.

KAWAHARA: May I ask a question of a member of the committee here? I notice a similar provision in the Model Constitution and in that constitution the words, "The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment of such agencies as may be necessary and desirable to promote cooperation on the part of this state with other states of the Union." And I noticed in the committee proposal the words, "The legislature may provide for cooperation." I wonder if it's possible for the legislature to directly provide for cooperation without passing certain statutes or certain laws.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a member of the committee that would like to answer that question?

KAWAHARA: Because this seems to be an outright grant of power that they may provide for cooperation, and that seems to be a very difficult thing to do, as far as I can see here.

CHAIRMAN: Is there an answer to the question of Delegate Kawahara?

KAGE: I think if he were to read the word "for," I think that clarifies the situation. You do not provide cooperation, but you provide for the cooperation. What we are trying to do in this article is bring about cooperation between the state and Union, between state and state, between state and city, between city and city.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Kawahara?

NIELSEN: Would you read the article now, the section as amended.

CHAIRMAN: The article reads as amended:

The legislature may provide for cooperation with the United States, or other states and territories, and their political subdivisions, in matters affecting the public health, safety and general welfare, and may appropriate such funds as may be necessary to finance its fair share of the cost of such activities.

CHAIRMAN: Call for the question.

RICHARDS: I have a question to ask. I was not here when the amendment was made changing the word "its" to "their." I think there is a distinct difference in meaning between those two points. If it's the legislature providing cooperation between the political subdivisions of the State of Hawaii, the term would be "its." If it is referring to the State to cooperate with political subdivisions of other states and territories, then "their" is the proper word, but I don't think that the two are synonymous in this case.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the Chair can indicate the reasoning there. It was brought out by Delegate Heen yesterday that the reference in the pronoun is to the United States and, therefore, the word "their" is used - - and other states and territories, "their" is used in reference to United States, other states and territories.

RICHARDS: Well then, the legislature by inference then may not provide for the cooperation between one of its political subdivisions and the political subdivision of another state.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any - -

HEEN: When we had a ban on the exportation of orchids, there was a situation where they might have had some cooperation between the County of Hawaii and the County of San Francisco. So it would seem to me that the language to be used here should be broad enough to take care of a situation of that kind. In order to do that, and in order to conform to the idea that Delegate Richards has in mind, that first part should read: "The legislature may provide for cooperation on the part of this State and its political subdivisions with the United States, or other states and territories, and their political subdivisions, in all matters affecting the health" and so on.

CHAIRMAN: Now you move an amendment then.

HEEN: That seems to be satisfactory. That will take care of cooperation between counties.

RICHARDS: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, will you restate your amendment for the benefit of the committee as well as the delegates?

HEEN: "The legislature may provide for cooperation," after the word "cooperation," insert the words "on the part of this State and its political subdivisions."

CHAIRMAN: Is that amendment agreeable - - acceptable to the committee?

YAMAUCHI: The committee accepts the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The committee accepts the amendment. There is a call for the question? Committee ready for the question? All those in favor of the Committee Proposal No. 17 as amended please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

YAMAUCHI: I move for the adoption of this proposal as amended.

CHAIRMAN: That was the motion that was just carried, in view of the fact that the committee had accepted the amendment. I'll ask the committee to turn their attention to Committee Proposal No. 12 regarding the seat of government. The committee proposal reads,

> The seat of government of this State shall be located at the City of Honolulu on the island of Oahu, unless otherwise provided by law.

Is there a motion to adopt?

DOWSON: I move for the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 12 relating to the seat of government.

KING: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded.

ASHFORD: I think that was moved yesterday and I moved an amendment. I wish now to withdraw the amendment. I think it was in an improper place.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford has withdrawn the amendment which she offered yesterday.

C. RICE: Why do we have to put in the words "unless otherwise provided for by law"?

CHAIRMAN: Would a member of the committee care to answer the question of the delegate?

C. RICE: Let's have it once and for all.

YAMAUCHI: I didn't get the question.

CHAIRMAN: The question is, why should the words "unless otherwise provided by law" be included?

YAMAUCHI: I think that was explained in the committee report. In the event the legislature feels that the capital should be shifted to another area, then the provision should be made for such change.

BRYAN: I think there's another good reason for that, too. The Legislative Committee is going to report out a section which will include in the event of disaster and so forth, the capital may be moved temporarily.

YAMAUCHI: I would like to explain further that in the event, "in case of invasion, insurrection, conflagration, epidemic, or for other emergency resulting from an act of God, the legislature would be empowered to move the seat of government to a temporary location." And I believe that is taken care of by the Legislative Committee. Also, "the phrase 'provided by law,' shall authorize the legislature to establish methods to employ in determining the location of the seat of government."

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question, Delegate Rice?

YAMAMOTO: I'd like to add a little bit on this. I prefer to have the words left in because of the reason that, as you know, there is a chance that the capital city at the present time, we haven't got enough room, and in the years to come, you might have to expand. That is the reason why I would say that these words must stay in. It wasn't very well stated in this committee report that just because you have the population on the island of Oahu, the capital city must be here, because in the State of New York, I would say that New York City has a population over eight million people, while your capital city is in Albany where there is a population of 130,000.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion?

SAKAKIHARA: I move for the previous question.

SILVA: Second the motion for the previous question.

HEEN: I was wondering why they didn't use the word "capital." In other words, if that word is used, it might read "Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, shall be the capital of this State."

CHAIRMAN: Do you move that as an amendment to the proposal, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: I do.

HAYES: I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the proposal should read: "Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, shall be the capital of the State, unless otherwise provided by law."

HEEN: Correct.

KAGE: I think both the amendment and the proposal, the intent are the same. I think it's a matter for the Style Committee to take it up.

HEEN: To me, my amendment is more fashionable than the other.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment, please say "aye." Opposed. The amendment is lost.

SILVA: Previous question, I so move.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will now call for the question.

NIELSEN: I want to explain my vote. I think it should be in Kona, so I'll have to vote no.

CHAIRMAN: All right. The question before the committee is whether or not Committee Proposal No. 12 as brought in by the committee shall be adopted. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

The Chair will ask the committee now to turn its attention to Committee Proposal - -

HAYES: Personal privilege. Sitting on this side, it sounds as if the same crowd says "aye" and the same crowd says "no."

CHAIRMAN: That sounds the same way up here, Delegate Hayes.

Before the committee now is Committee Proposal No. 20 regarding the preamble to the Constitution. Prior to the recess, the amendment by Delegate Sakakihara carried, so that the preamble would read:

> We, the people of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, mindful of our Hawaiian heritage, reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

Subsequently, there was an amendment proposed and seconded, proposed by Delegate Roberts, to insert after the word "people" in the fourth line, the word - - the clause "and with an understanding heart towards all the people of this earth." That amendment is before the committee at the present time. Is there any discussion?

ANTHONY: During the noon recess there has been distributed three or four versions of the attempt of Dr. Larsen to put into the Constitution the Law of Kamehameha. In order that we may consider those versions, I now move that we reconsider our prior actions on Dr. Larsen's amendment.

MIZUHA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion to reconsider our action on the amendment. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it.

DELEGATES: Roll call.

SILVA: There is a request for roll call.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has ruled, Delegate - -

SILVA: A roll call is always in order, if you know your rules. The Chair is out of order.

CHAIRMAN: How many in favor of a roll call. Roll call has been ordered. The question before - -

LOPER: I rise to a point of personal privilege. I believe the purpose of the roll call is to publicize the way people vote. I suggest that they vote so we can hear. I think I missed at least 12 last time.

KING: As a matter of information, I'd like the Chair to state that the roll call is on the motion to reconsider, is it not?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

KING: I'd like to speak to that point of reconsideration. It is made in good faith by one who voted against the original proposition offered by Dr. Larsen - - Delegate Larsen and amended by several versions of the same proposal. It meets the feeling on the part of a good many of the delegates that the preamble to the Constitution of the State of Hawaii should pay some attention to our unique and exotic background in history and make some reference to the traditions that make Hawaii a little different from any one of the other 48 states.

SILVA: I rise to a point of order. I think the speaker is out of order.

KING: Well, I'm speaking on the point of information that the reconsideration will nullify and abolish that effort to give those an opportunity to rephrase their amendment to meet the feeling of the majority. The amendment as originally proposed was not acceptable, but the various versions that have been worked out since might be acceptable. So a vote against reconsideration would estop any effort to meet the majority opinion of the delegates, and I feel that the vote against reconsideration should not carry.

SILVA: I would like to know - -

ANTHONY: Can't the Chair ask those who requested the roll call to withdraw it. It's only fair; work has been done on it; let's take a look at it. It's not going to hurt anything.

SILVA: It always seems that fairness lies in the minority. There was a vote taken; the majority ruled against it. Then you ask for reconsideration and you say, well the minority will rule this Convention.

ANTHONY: I voted against it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva, I believe you stand to be corrected. Delegate Anthony voted with the majority and he has asked for a reconsideration. Now the Chair rules that the motion for reconsideration is in order. There has been requested a roll call and a roll call is now in order unless the motion is withdrawn. I presume the motion will not be withdrawn. Further debate is out of order.

APOLIONA: I'm not going to debate on that question. I voted against the adoption of Dr. Larsen's motion. As a matter of courtesy, I will vote yes to reconsider that question.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. Will the Clerk please call the roll. The question is on whether or not to reconsider the action on Committee Proposal No. 20.

KING: Mr. Chairman, may I ask - - make a motion to have a five minute recess?

CHAIRMAN: The roll call hasn't been announced, the results.

Ayes, 42. Noes, 10 (Akau, Doi, Fong; Kanemaru, Kauhane, Kawahara, Luiz, C. Rice, Serizawa, Silva). Not voting, 11 (Arashiro, Fukushima, Lee, Mau, Okino, Phillips, Porteus, Sakai, J. Trask, White, Wist).

CHAIRMAN: The ayes have it. Delegate King.

KING: I now move for a five minute recess.

A. TRASK: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Recess has been called. All those in favor. Opposed.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole come to order.

It is now 3:45. If we can confine our debate to the essential points, I think we can get through with Committee Proposal No. 20 and Committee Proposal No. 14 which relates to the seal and that will conclude all the miscellaneous matters and possibly we can adjourn by 5:00.

We now have before us Committee Proposal No. 20 and the motion to reconsider the action of this morning was carried, so that we have before us the amendment to Committee Proposal No. 20 as originally offered by Delegate Larsen.

KAGE: As I see it, we have five amendments to the committee proposal and the committee proposal makes it the sixth. In other words we have six different versions of the preamble. I am not expressing the views of the committee; I'm just expressing my own personal views. If we were to, as the Convention, work on these six versions of the preamble, I think we'll stay until doomsday to decide on one and we'll never get anything done. I am not in favor of that, and so I would like to move that these six preambles be referred to the Style Committee and be reported out.

CHAIRMAN: Your motion is to refer. Delegate Kage, actually we have only one amendment before the Committee of the Whole. There are several typewritten sheets on the desk of the delegates, but the amendments have not been placed formally before the committee.

KAGE: I'm sorry.

LARSEN: Could I just tell the chairman that the number who put out these various propositions, I think they boil down to one that Senator Heen has and that I think that all those who want Kamehameha's law expressed have that. If that's voted out after Heen gives it, then we go to the committee proposal and then we're through.

CHAIRMAN: If I may bring out the matter before the committee. The amendment before the committee is the amendment as originally offered by Delegate Larsen. Now if there is to be an additional amendment, it is in order at the present time; otherwise, action on Delegate Larsen's amendment is in order. Is there any - -

KING: I think the motion to reconsider carried with it the abolition of all preceding amendments. I'm not sure that that is the parliamentary situation, but I'd like to suggest now that we start from scratch with the committee proposal pending before the committee and the amendment about to be offered by Delegate Larsen or Delegate Heen to the committee proposal will be considered as the first amendment. If that is the proper procedure, I would suggest that the committee move a pro forma adoption of the committee proposal to bring it before the committee.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is in doubt as to whether that is the correct procedure, but possibly if Delegate Larsen at this time would withdraw his amendment - -

LARSEN: I'll be very happy to.

CHAIRMAN: That places before the committee, Committee Proposal No. 20 without amendment, and that is the matter before the committee at the present time. What is your pleasure, gentlemen?

YAMAUCHI: I move that Committee Proposal No. 20 be adopted.

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 20 be adopted. Any discussion?

HEEN: Delegate Larsen has asked me to submit this amendment on his behalf.

LARSEN: Correction, please.

HEEN:

> We, the people of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, and mindful of the ancient words of Kamehameha, that the law of the land shall apply equally to all the people, so that the aged man and the women and children, may forever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without fear, and, with an understanding heart towards all the people of this earth, do reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, you offer that as an amendment? Is there a second?

LARSEN: All right. I think Senator Heen is a little bit modest, so I'll offer that as an amendment.

LOPER: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Has this amendment been printed?

ANTHONY: It will be printed in just a minute.

CHAIRMAN: As I understand the amendment, taking it from the amendment which bears the name of Delegate Heen, in the third line after the word "shall" delete the words "be for the big, the small and," insert in lieu thereof the words "apply equally to all people so that"; and in the fifth line delete the word "molestation" and insert the word "fear"; so that starting on the third line with the word "shall," the printed amendment that we have before us will read, "shall apply equally to all people." "Shall apply equally to all the people, so that the aged man, the women and the children who may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without fear." Is that correct, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: Delete the word "who."

CHAIRMAN: Delete the word "who" in the fourth line, so that starting with the word "shall" in the third line, the amendment would read -- that portion of the amendment would read, "shall apply equally to all the people, so that the aged man, the women, and the children may walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without fear." Is that correct?

WOOLAWAY: How about the young adults?

CHAIRMAN: Is that correct?

HEEN: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: Now that amendment is before the committee. Is there any discussion?

LARSEN: It's just being passed out now, if there is any question.

IHARA: Where does the quote start?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ihara, that is now printed and is being passed out, so we'll have a moment's pause. Now the amendment is before the committee. Is there any discussion?

KAWAHARA: Is there any reason why the words, "a government of the people, by the people and for the people," is there any reason why those words shouldn't be in quotes? After all, all morning I've been hearing that these words have been taken from the speech, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. If that is true, I believe some due credit should be given to Abraham Lincoln. For that reason, I'd like to know whether Dr. Larsen intends to have those words in quotation.

LARSEN: Well, they were so well known and everybody knows who pronounced them and we weren't quoting the whole speech, but just a sentence that we didn't think quotes were necessary, but I'd like to ask Mr. Wist if he feels quotes would be necessary when we say, "of the people, by the people, and for the people"?

KAWAHARA: As I see it, then, in this preamble here we are ordaining and establishing a constitution for one or two or three or four reasons. As I can see it, one of the first reasons is we are grateful for Divine Guidance; next, the whole phrase there has reference to the words of Kamehameha; and the third section has some reference to the words used by Abraham Lincoln. Because of these reasons, we are ordaining and establishing our Constitution. Our Federal Constitution, in the preamble of our Federal Constitution, we go a little beyond that, and the preamble of our Federal Constitution was written quite long ago. I repeat that in our Federal Constitution, in our preamble, there is some reference to justice, domestic tranquility, common defense, general welfare, liberty, posterity, and so forth and so on. I don't know. I think this preamble here somewhat limits the activities of government. For that reason, I believe that we should not adopt this type of a preamble.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the amendment?

SILVA: I would like to speak against the amendment. The purpose, in my opinion, is you are using in this preamble, "mindful of the ancient words of Kamehameha," then you explain Kamehameha's law. That should not be the preamble, it should be in the report to this preamble, that whatever was gotten into the preamble was gotten because of the words of Kamehameha, in the report and not the preamble. I just want to point that out and I think that we're going off half-cocked here by getting the words of Kamehameha and using Kamehameha as an example because surely Kamehameha should not be set up as an example for democracy of the kind we have here. I do say that he may have, in his later years, come up with some law, some rule, but that is not the true life of Kamehameha. Kamehameha never lived in a democracy and to use -- it's all right to use his one sentence in his old age that he finally made a so-called law and in the report to show how this is put in the preamble. But surely not to cite Kamehameha as an example in our preamble.

APOLIONA: On May 19, 1950 at one of our Miscellaneous Committee meetings, Dr. Larsen appeared in person and spoke on the seal and on the preamble and this is his thinking. As far as the seal, he firmly believed that it was the one place in our Constitution, in the seal, where we could give recognition to old Hawaii and to Kamehameha. But on the preamble, he was of a different opinion. In the preamble, he was of the opinion that the preamble to the State of Hawaii would be totally different than that of any other state of the Union. I disagree with him. Our preamble here should be the same as the other states of the Union, same in thought, same in thinking. If you want to change the language around to make it a little poetic, fine, but the meaning should be the same. And he continued and added that the preamble should contain the meaning of the Constitution for the benefit of the people. Does this amendment contain the meaning of the Constitution for the people? I say no, and, therefore, I will again vote against the amendment.

AKAU: I think we all want a very good preamble. I think we also realize that the preamble does not necessarily have to stand up in a court of law. We're anxious to finish it up and we're anxious to do something. I raise this point for your consideration. We talk about King Kamehameha which the implication means or makes, the royalty, up here, shall we say, even autocracy. In the next breath, we talk about the people, "of the people, for the people, and by the people." The thing is incongruous. I would like to suggest, if I may, that we defer action on this particular thing, sleep on it, have a couple of people get together, perhaps early tomorrow morning, and draw something up that has the incorporation of justice and whatever have you, following somewhat our Federal Constitution. I think we want to do something, but we don't know how to do it. I therefore move to defer action.

LARSEN: Could I have just a word before that?

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

SAKAKIHARA: I would like to - -

CHAIRMAN: Are you seconding the motion?

SAKAKIHARA: No, I want to amend this amendment.

CHAIRMAN: I hear no seconds. All right.

SAKAKIHARA: I offer the following amendment to Senator Heen's amendment which is before the committee.

> We, the people of the State of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, and mindful of our Hawaiian heritage, reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and, with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of the earth, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara, is there a second to that?

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair wishes to state that in his opinion the motion to amend is out of order in that it incorporates almost in its entirety Committee Proposal No. 20.

LARSEN: Mr. Chairman.

SAKAKIHARA: I beg to differ from the ruling of the Chair. It is an amendment, nevertheless. Any more than the amendment here is a repetition - -

HEEN: The amendment here in substance is similar to the amendment originally offered by Delegate Larsen.

LARSEN: Could I have just one word. I feel we can take a vote very shortly. I don't think we have to go around the bush in this way. I would just like to answer, however. There apparently is some misconception. The idea that in this day and age when the great fight for dictatorial government or freedom is at stake, the idea of including Kamehameha was, he is the only dictator in history who at the height of his power suddenly realized that power or might did not make right, but that justice did. So his law, Mamalahoa Kaniwai, is considered by authorities as one of the greatest spoken documents on government in history. It recognizes justice instead of force. This goes right along the line with Abraham Lincoln. And our whole concept was, should we recognize one of the greatest spoken documents of our government that was spoken in Hawaii or shouldn't we. It's that simple. And I would like to suggest that we vote on this and we either accept it or else accept the one that Sakakihara has just suggested, but as I remembered, it was voted on this morning.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has ruled, and unless the delegate wants to call for the division of the house, the Chair has ruled that the amendment of Delegate Sakakihara is out of order.

ANTHONY: I move an amendment. That the "words of Kamehameha" be stricken.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

BRYAN: I may second it. I have a suggestion that the movant might accept. If you would put "mindful that the ancient law of the land applied equally."

ANTHONY: I accept that. The purpose of the amendment, I think there are a number of delegates here who don't like the glorification of one single human being. I know of no other constitution, American constitution, that does that. I think that's why some of us who are Jeffersonian Democrats don't like the idea of one single person being singled out.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, would you restate your amendment, please.

AKAU: I second Mr. Anthony's motion, if he wants to have stricken, "of Kamehameha."

CHAIRMAN: I'm asking for a restatement of the amendment, Delegate Akau, and then I'll recognize a second.

ANTHONY: The amendment was not amply stated. This is what I would move to strike, "words of Kamehameha that." The sentence would then read, "mindful of the ancient law of the land."

KING: I'd like to speak in favor of the amendment. I think we should incorporate in it the suggestion made by Delegate Bryan, so that it would be "mindful that the ancient law"; striking out the words, "words of Kamehameha that the," including "the" that Delegate Anthony didn't mention; "shall apply" and so forth.

Now, the only purpose in this is that Kamehameha when he conquered the whole of Hawaii was the first one to enunciate a general law for the protection of the old man, woman, child, and so forth. It is the first record in Hawaiian history of a law that would control the chiefs and the common people. The Hawaiian phrase, if one could read it in Hawaiian - - I have here an extract from "Ka Moolele A Kamehameha I," by S.M. Kamakau, written in the 1820's or 1830's, that gives a little of the background of that. In the Hawaiian he forbade any of the old men, women, children from being robbed or molested or beaten up or their goods taken away. There is quite a lot of language there. "Pepehi kanaka, aihue, pakaha, pauwale, powa, akole, aiahulu i ke akau" and so forth. So that they couldn't be molested in their goods, in the faith and in their free movement over the lands of Hawaii.

The only reason we want to preserve that sentiment is because that is the beginning of established law in these islands. However, I can understand that the reference to an individual might not be applicable if we are going to become a sovereign state of the Union and we're not going to live according to the ways of the old days at all. We are just paying our respect to it.

The point was also made by Delegate Tavares that a preamble is not substantial law. It isn't a part of the constitution. It is an expression of sentiment. So I feel that with the amendment suggested by Delegate Anthony, this preamble should be satisfactory and I am in favor of the amendment.

RICHARDS: I think in order to correct that amendment and make proper English we should on the second line, delete the word "of" and put in the word "that."

CHAIRMAN: I believe that has been read into the amendment.

ANTHONY: I'd like to state the motion again. Delete the following, beginning with the second line: "words of Kamehameha that the"; and insert after the word "land" in the third line "which applied"; and then in the fifth line, first word, strike out the word "may" and insert the word "might"; and then if I might read the sentence: "We, the people of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, and mindful of the ancient law of the land, which applied equally to all of the people so 'that the aged man, the women and children might ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside,'" and so on.

LARSEN: In line with the comments of Delegate --

CHAIRMAN: Is that the amendment that Delegate Akau has seconded?

AKAU: Not now, you see, because if we're going to use quotation marks, we can't change the wording. In other words, if we're going to quote, we've got to quote; otherwise, we take away the quotation marks. Now, if Mr. Anthony wants to take the quotation marks away, that's another story.

ANTHONY: I didn't mean to delete the quotation marks.

AKAU: Well, then, we may not change it. If we're going to quote, we have to quote verbatim or not at all. Otherwise, we take away the quotation marks. I don't second it.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

BRYAN: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been seconded.

KAUHANE: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kauhane, state your point of information.

KAUHANE: I'd like to have the matter clarified so that I will be able to vote intelligently. This morning by a vote of 28 to 26, we adopted the amendment offered by Delegate Sakakihara. And by a vote of 41 to 10 we adopted the motion to reconsider action on the amendment offered by Delegate Larsen. Am I to understand that - -

CHAIRMAN: May I correct you, Delegate Kauhane. The motion to reconsider was to reconsider our previous action on the amendment - - on the proposal.

KAUHANE: Well, then I misunderstood the motion put by the Chair, because I certainly wrote down the motion put by the Chair was to reconsider action on the amendment offered by Delegate Larsen - -

CHAIRMAN: No - -

KAUHANE: - - which I feel, that the motion made for the adoption of the amendment offered by Delegate Sakakihara is proper and is still active before this committee.

CHAIRMAN: The motion to reconsider was on the amended proposal which was nothing more than the action on the amendment offered by Delegate Sakakihara. Upon that motion being carried, Delegate Larsen withdrew his amendment, so that the committee proposal was once again before the committee. Number 20.

KAUHANE: It doesn't sound right, Mr. Chairman. I think it's putting the - - just like having the tail wagging the dog instead of the dog wagging the tail.

CHAIRMAN: I don't get the analogy.

SMITH: Anyway, without worrying about the persons who voted in the minority because of common decency for reconsideration, we're still of the view - - I'm speaking in opposition to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

SMITH: I believe thoroughly that all these arguments that are coming up -- I haven't got the number of hours that the committee spent and the reasons why we considered all these different preambles. We considered this morning on Dr. Larsen's preamble, practically the same one that was considered in the committee, and we felt that to be concise and brief and to state our pride in our Hawaiian heritage, that the statement as submitted by the committee was one that would carry all the requirements that were really needed.

I might state that if you look at the different constitutions and the preambles, a lot of them are just stock. "We, the people of the state of," whatever state it was, "grateful for Divine Guidance, do hereby ordain and establish this constitution for that state, to wit" and they then state the boundaries of that state.

With the voting this morning of 28 to 26, that should show that we had sentimentalities and considerations of kahunas and so forth. We were considering the people of Hawaii as of today and in the future, and that the people out of Hawaii will be reading our preamble. The children will be able to memorize it a little easier. With all those considerations we felt that the [Committee] Proposal No. 20 was sufficient.

TAVARES: I'm not going to offer this as an amendment, but as a suggestion maybe we could get together on. Instead of deleting the words suggested by Delegate Anthony, if we deleted the words in the second line "ancient words of Kamehameha" and inserted "first Hawaiian Bill of Rights," so it would read, "and mindful of the first Hawaiian Bill of Rights that the law of the land shall apply equally," wouldn't that satisfy the situation?

CHAIRMAN: I understand that to be a suggestion and not a motion?

A. TRASK: I speak against the amendment offered by Delegate Anthony and for several reasons. First, I cannot subscribe to the thought announced by Delegate Apoliona and apparently his committee that we are or should be just like the other states in our preamble. That is certainly not a fact. That is not a fact consistent with the program that we intend to launch.

SMITH: A point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

SMITH: I believe that if you examine the records, the statement just made by the last speaker does not conform with what Delegate Apoliona said.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed, Delegate Trask.

A. TRASK: The statement made, as I remember, was that we should not refer to any of our ancient edicts or anything like that, and he said we should be like the other states or something along that line. To me, there is only one Hawaii, and - - I have a right to speak against the amendment; I'm advised, of course, by President King.

The delegate lately from Pennsylvania said that Kamehameha should not be mentioned and I submit respectfully to him that when we quote a law or we quote a decision we refer respectfully to that particular court from which those words came, those words of wisdom.

There are very few people in the history of the world who have given edicts which the world has admired and kept. There are such people as Asoka; there are such people as Justinian; there are such people as Napoleon; there are such people as Edward of England and so forth. We're referring not so much subjectively to them as tyrants, but we refer to the words and thoughts that they express which humanity has accepted and honored.

Hawaii is launching itself, asking and trying to support itself and has gone to the legislature for money in respect to its tourist attraction. What is the tourist attraction? What is the question of the tourist attraction to people who come to Hawaii? Is it because Hawaii is like every other state? It is certainly not. It is our uniqueness. There is only one Hawaii. We are the most isolated community in all the world. We are separated uniquely, thousands of miles from any civilized community, and in Hawaii we have built a civilization that is unique.

The word "aloha" can be claimed by no other people but that of Hawaii. Consistent with the "aloha" is the expression from Kamehameha and no other ruler in all the world, and shouldn't he be given credit for this? Without naming Kamehameha, wouldn't you confuse the issue? Who is being quoted, is the first thing the scholar would want to find out. Shouldn't he be told? Shouldn't he be told with dispatch that it is Kamehameha?

A lawyer in court makes a statement. Immediately the judge says, "From what court are you quoting, from the jurisdiction of Wailuku or from the jurisdiction of Honolulu?" Immediately. And it does carry weight. Whether or not it is the judge of Honolulu or the judge from Hawaii or Maui or Kauai, the judge and the court carries weight, whether it's the Supreme Court or the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

So I cannot see, consistent with ordinary respectful characterization and giving credit where credit is due, if you take away the word -- the tribute to Kamehameha, you might just as well adopt the innocuous proposal of the committee and make it like the sovereign state, perhaps, of Kansas.

And in conclusion, let me invite the eyes of the delegates to all those symbols on the wall. Just walk along there and look at those symbols and what they represent. Look at the symbols from Oklahoma. It's a pipe of peace; it's the Indians' tradition that is symbolized, of which the Oklahomans are proud. Look at Virginia, "Sic semper tyrannis." "We shall always be against tyranny." Look at Connecticut, which Brother Anthony can quote. It's "Qui transtulit sustinet."

CHAIRMAN: May I remind the delegate that the five minutes is up. Would you conclude your report.

A. TRASK: In conclusion, it seems very clear that --

KAUHANE: Mr. Chairman.

A. TRASK: I'm not concluded, if you please.

CHAIRMAN: Would you conclude your remarks, Delegate Trask.

A. TRASK: Yes, I shall. That's all.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

KAUHANE: This morning I voted for the adoption of the amendment offered by Delegate Sakakihara. At this time I'd like to support the amendment offered by Delegate Larsen, without any consideration of any amendment that has been made to it. In support of the amendment made by Delegate Larsen, I'd like to read excerpts made by Kalanianaole who was then Delegate to Congress and appearing before a congressional body.

"The religion of my people was so highly developed. The laws were edicts of the king, commonly called tabus and the breaking of them was punishable. The tabu was in fact the ancient law of the Hawaiians; there were religious tabus, there were tabus which prohibited certain acts such as killing of man, eating together of husband and wife, the eating of certain fish, the eating of certain fruits by women, these were the king's tabu. Then, there were certain tabus which went to the land. For instance, the right to fish was recognized as a public right by the natives, the fish being the property of all. Still, the occupier of land upon the seashore had the privilege of naming certain fish in the adjacent waters as his own property. Many persons could fish upon the fishing grounds, but were forbidden to catch the fish named as the tabu fish. This system of tabu runs throughout history and is sacred to them. Even today, if you were to go down to the seashore while the Hawaiians were bringing in their nets, you would be entitled to a share of the catch, the natives are still maintaining the old custom that the fish, except the tabu fish, belong to all.

"Though Kamehameha the First may have appeared to be a heathen to the outside world, yet during a long and vigorous reign there were manifest in everything that he did, a superior intelligence and deep reverence for a power greater than he. With such an influence governing his life, he ruled his people, even those whom he had conquered, with justice. He it was who established the independence of the individual by that oral decree which reads -- "

ANTHONY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order decreed.

ANTHONY: I think I was called to order for referring to the distinguished warrior as a heathen this morning.

CHAIRMAN: Continue, Delegate Kauhane.

KAUHANE: "It was he who established the independence of the individual by that oral decree which reads, 'The old and feeble men and women, and the small child may walk and rest unharmed on the public highways of my kingdom and no one shall molest them. Death shall be the penalty.' He followed the examples of his predecessors and he divided the lands among the chiefs and followers, retaining the portion of which were to be cultivated by his own servants. He recognized the benefits of trading."

CHAIRMAN: One more minute.

KAUHANE: One more minute, we'll be finished. Again we find that the words of Kamehameha, sacred to the Hawaiian people, people of his race, should be made a part of the preamble of this Constitution. If we today have adhered to the old rule that was laid down by him, the tabu of fishing, that certain fishes around the seashore when caught should be left to the rights of the property owner, then if we respect that right of tabu, then we should certainly respect all of the rights and the laws of Kamehameha and his words should be made a part of the preamble. I, therefore, am in favor of the resolution that has been submitted by Dr. Larsen without any further adoption of any amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to call for the question of the amendment as offered by Delegate Anthony, specifically whether or not to delete the words in the second line, quote, "words of Kamehameha that the"; and on the third line the deletion of the word "shall" and substituted in lieu thereof the words "which"; and change the word "apply" to "applied," so that the amendment would read, starting on the second line, "mindful of the ancient law of the land, which applied equally, etc." All those in favor --

KAUHANE: I move that we table the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

DELEGATE: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: I understood that we had agreed not to table. I believe that the Chair will declare that motion out of order. All those in favor - -

MAU: Just one question. Did the delegate who proposed the amendment believe that his words meant to carry out the intent of the words that are quoted? Because it does say "mindful of the ancient law of the land, which applied equally to all of the people." That ancient law is the law as stated by King Kamehameha the First? Is that his intent?

ANTHONY: That is correct; I would leave in the quotes.

LARSEN: Could I ask Delegate Anthony, in place of "mindful of the ancient law of the land," would he be willing to substitute "mindful of the first Hawaiian Bill of Rights"?

ANTHONY: No, I don't accept that. That wasn't the first Hawaiian Bill of Rights.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will call for the question. All those in favor of the amendment as proposed by Delegate Anthony, say "aye." Opposed. The noes have it.

The amendment as submitted by Delegate Larsen now stands before the committee. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the amendment as offered by Delegate Larsen without amendment, please say "aye." Opposed. The Chair calls for a show of hands.

DELEGATES: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: There is a demand for roll call. All those in favor. Roll call is in order. The ayes vote in favor of the amendment, the noes defeat it.

ROBERTS: Will the Chair please read the amendment, what we're voting on.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment reads as follows.

J. TRASK: I find that the so-called Dr. Larsen's amendment is under the caption of Judge Heen's name.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, but Dr. Larsen made the motion and that is the reason the Chair has given him the credit. The amendment reads as follows:

> We, the people of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, and mindful of the ancient words of Kamehameha, that the law of the land which shall apply equally to all the people so that "the aged man and the women and children may ever walk the highways or sleep by the wayside without fear," and with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth, do reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, and do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution of the State of Hawaii.

The Clerk will please call the roll.

WOOLAWAY: I would like to state my reasons for my voting no. It doesn't include young men, that's why.

CHAIRMAN: The Clerk will please call the roll.

Ayes, 25. Noes, 30 (Akau, Anthony, Apoliona, Arashiro, Doi, Dowson, Fong, Fukushima, Ihara, Kage, Kam, Kanemaru, Kawahara, Kawakami, Kido, Lai, Luiz, Mau, Nielsen, Noda, Okino, C. Rice, H. Rice, Sakakihara, Shimamura, Silva, Smith, Woolaway, Yamamoto, Yamauchi). Not voting, 8 (Kometani, Lee, Phillips, Porteus, Sakai, Serizawa, White, Wist).

CHAIRMAN: The noes have it. The amendment is defeated.

LARSEN: I move that we now pass the recommendation by the committee.

CHAIRMAN: That one motion is already before the committee.

ROBERTS: I'd like to amend the proposal in the second line instead of "with pride in" the words, "and mindful of our Hawaiian heritage," and in line four, after the words "people" comma and, "with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth, do hereby ordain."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

APOLIONA: The committee accepts the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The committee accepts the amendment.

SAKAKIHARA: Will Delegate Roberts accept an amendment? On the third line, "of the people, by the people, and for the people, and with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of the earth."

ROBERTS: Yes, I accepted that before as a matter of style, but we'll accept it now.

APOLIONA: The committee also accepts it.

HAYES: May I have the whole amendment, so I will know what I am voting for?

CHAIRMAN: Will the Clerk please read the amendment?

LYMAN: May I add another amendment?

CHAIRMAN: There has been a request for the reading of the amendments so far. I believe the Chair can read it.

> We, the people of the State of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, and mindful of our Hawaiian heritage, reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, for the people, and by the people, and with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of this earth, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. Chairman, a correction. My amendment was "of the people, by the people and for the people."

CHAIRMAN: "Of the people, by the people and for the people." Can someone inform the Chair is that the correct quotation from Mr. Lincoln?

ANTHONY: That is the correct quotation.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. "Of the people, by the people and for the people."

BRYAN: I wanted to ask the movant a question. I'd like to know the reason for changing the words, "pride in our Hawaiian heritage." Is it that we should indicate that we do not have pride in our Hawaiian heritage, or what is the reason for changing that?

ROBERTS: I merely inserted the language which the Committee of the Whole had previously adopted on the floor.

ANTHONY: The reason for that is, it seemed a little presumptuous on the part of some of us to have the word "pride." It seems more fitting and dignified and with more humility if we had the word "mindful."

TAVARES: I agree with Delegate Anthony. When I was a boy, I memorized a verse which said, "Pride goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall." I think it is acting a little bit hookano for us to say we take pride. It's all right when we're here to do it, but to put it in a constitution, I really believe it presumptuous.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready for the question?

HAYES: Point of information. I feel that - - well, I've been trying to catch your eye so I can speak before the amendment was adopted, but I wasn't recognized by the Chair, because I feel that we owe some respect to King Kamehameha and that was defeated before I was recognized. Therefore, I feel that it is a great mistake for us to ignore Kamehameha when we in the legislature appropriate money and make Kamehameha Day a legal holiday and do decorate the statue of Kamehameha, and everything about Hawaii has been surrounded about Kamehameha. Therefore, I feel that I didn't have an opportunity to speak at the right time for me to further my remarks on the preservation of that great man.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair apologizes to the good delegate from the fourth district, and is very much in sympathy with her feelings, but I didn't see you, and in view of the fact that so many others were clamoring for attention, I think it explains itself.

Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the Committee Proposal No. 20 as amended, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

Please turn your attention to Committee Proposal No. 14.

ROBERTS: I don't think we have adopted the proposal as amended. May I therefore move that the proposal as amended be adopted.

SMITH: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: That was the question that the Chair put to the committee because of the fact that the amendments had been accepted by the committee, so the amendment is adopted as amended.

KING: If I am correct, the committee accepted the amendments, which made them part of the original proposal.

TAVARES: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, state your point.

TAVARES: The written proposal presented at this Convention is the proposal and until you adopt the amendment, the committee can't change it by simply accepting it under the rules of this Convention.

KING: If that is correct, I move now for acceptance of Proposal No. 20 as amended.

SMITH: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. Delegate Crossley.

CROSSLEY: That was what I was going to do so the Chair will be in order.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you very much. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Now, if you will please turn your attention to Committee Proposal No. 14 which has been deferred, and I think a motion would be in order to adopt the committee proposal to get it before the committee.

YAMAUCHI: I move that Committee Proposal No. 14 be adopted.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It is moved and seconded to adopt Committee Proposal No. 14. Now, as the Chair recalls, the reason for deferring action this morning was that Delegate Hayes had a drawing of the seal to present to the committee. Delegate Hayes, are you ready with that seal?

HAYES: I made my suggestions to Dr. Larsen, which he has accepted. Both Miss Ashford and I feel that some part of the old seal of Hawaii should be preserved, in that the old seal has the great feather cloak in the back of the seal. That is the only change we have recommended and Dr. Larsen has accepted that.

APOLIONA: Your subcommittee on the seal is in accord with some of the amendments that Dr. Larsen has proposed, and at this time I would like to have the honorable doctor stand up and fight for his seal.

LARSEN: Thank you, Mr. Apoliona. Mr. Chairman, may I have the floor?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Larsen, proceed.

LARSEN: I feel you don't have to fight for this. It's so evident that of course you will be all for it. There are two things here, it seems to me, first—and it seems to me that if we could do this perhaps we could speed it up. One, the first proposition I think is, shall we accept a certain change. Now, may I again call to your attention, it isn't a change in the coat of arms of Hawaii, it's merely a change in the drawing of the old coat of arms to bring it up to date in today's style of drawing and prepared by an artist, which the first one was not. I compared it with all the seals of all the other states and there is no question at all. I'm not claiming this as anything original. I am merely having one of our very best artists draw the seal in today's method. That's what is on the wall over there. Now the suggestion made by Delegate Hayes was that when we use the coat of arms—not the seal— when we use the coat of arms we use the old cape which is behind the coat of arms. When the coat of arms are used, you don't use this lei around it. Also, a small crown was suggested on top of the shield. My suggestion is, first, if we could have the motion, do we want to change to leave out the unnecessary details which is not good taste today any more than the bathing suits of 1896 aren't good taste today on the beach. That's purely a question of style. So my first suggestion is let's take a vote on, do we want to change it.

The second question is, and that should have another motion, do we want to put it as part of our Constitution? I will call your attention to the fact that although some 37 states have it in their constitutions, in Hawaii the seal of '96, the seal of 1900 were all adopted by the legislature in joint resolution. I have a copy of that joint resolution here and I have it translated into heraldic symbols in this here.

So, may I suggest we first vote, shall we make these minor changes; and, second, shall we refer it over to the legislature to let them adopt it as properly drawn by an artist.

CHAIRMAN: Then, Delegate Larsen, would you make a motion that it is the sense of this Convention that there be a change in the great seal of Hawaii.

LARSEN: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

HAYES: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the committee is that the sense of this committee is that there be a change in the great seal of Hawaii. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed say "no." The motion is carried.

The next motion, Delegate Larsen, if you would make, it is that it is the sense of this Convention that the provisions regarding the seal be in the Constitution.

LARSEN: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

HAYES: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen. The Chair is about to be corrected.

HEEN: If it's going to be in the Constitution, then the description of the seal should be spelled out. When the legislature adopted the great seal for the Territory of Hawaii it spelled out the form of that seal by Section 12941.

I might read some of this to you to show how difficult it will be to have it spelled out in the Constitution. "The great seal of the Territory shall be circular in shape, two and three-quarters inches in diameter, and of the design in this chapter represented; being more particularly described, with the tinctures added as the basis for the coat of arms, as follows: Arms. An heraldic shield which is quarterly; first and fourth, stripes of the national banner," and so forth and so on. It is a very difficult matter to spell out.

CHAIRMAN: You're talking then against the motion?

HEEN: I am talking against the motion because I don't think we can spell it out within the short time that we have on hand. However, if it's going to be left to the legislature, there will have to be provided in the schedule or in an ordinance for a temporary seal so that between the adoption of the Constitution and action by the legislature, the State of Hawaii will have a seal. That might be in the form of the article that is written now, until adopted or changed by the legislature. "The seal of the Territory of Hawaii, modified to bear the legend, 'The State of Hawaii' followed by the year," etc. That could be put into the - -

LARSEN: Point of order.

HEEN: So that the State of Hawaii will always have a seal.

CHAIRMAN: You're speaking against the motion?

HEEN: I'm speaking against the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Correct. Are you ready for the question?

LARSEN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Larsen, would you state the point of order.

LARSEN: It has already been carried that the changes that we are to pass on will be those that were suggested. May I call the Senator Heen's attention that the present seal remains the seal until changed by the legislature if we pass on the suggestion.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the committee is that it is the sense of the committee that the provisions regarding the seal of Hawaii should be in the Constitution. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed say "no." Noes have it.

Now, we have before us Committee Proposal No. 14. What is the pleasure of the committee?

CROSSLEY: We have just voted that this would - - that the seal would not be in the Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: No, we voted as to the sense of the committee. Now, I would like to dispose of Committee Proposal No. 14.

CROSSLEY: Well, the sense of the committee was that there should be no seal in the Constitution. Therefore, what we did in effect was vote to delete Committee Proposal No. 14.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, Delegate Crossley, but I think that the proper motion at this time is to delete the committee proposal. The motion was not as to the committee proposal. The motion was as to the sense of the committee.

CROSSLEY: Well, it was as to the substance of this. Therefore, if you want to vote on it again, I move that Committee Proposal No. 14 be filed.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

SMITH: I'll second it.

TAVARES: In connection with such filing I move that there be included in the committee report a recommendation to the legislature to adopt the suggestions proposed by Dr. Larsen.

CROSSLEY: I accept that, with the further statement that it was the consensus of this Convention that the seal be changed.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. Are you ready for the question?

YAMAUCHI: Before any action be taken, the committee got together and felt that they would like to withdraw the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN: You withdraw the committee proposal? The Chair is in doubt as to whether the committee proposal can be withdrawn at this time.

KING: I don't think that the. . .[inaudible] be filed and disposed of that way. It's a little difficult to withdraw after it has been submitted to the Convention.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the sense of the committee is pretty well - - I believe that a vote on the motion would accomplish the same thing.

KING: I would like to inquire whether. . .[inaudible]

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, your mike is off.

KING: That if it's sufficent to vote in Committee of the Whole that it is the sense of the Committee of the Whole the legislature shall adopt the seal along the line designated by Delegate Larsen, it seems to me a resolution might be presented to that effect by the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters at some later date. So I think that the Committee of the Whole might well take the action directing or instructing the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters to bring in the resolution to that effect and I so move.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion before the house, Delegate King. I question whether your motion - -

KING: I withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor - -

ROBERTS: Would you please state the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is that the Committee Proposal No. 14 regarding the provision for a state seal be filed with the understanding that the report of the Committee of the Whole will indicate a recommendation to the legislature to adopt the changes as proposed by Delegate Larsen. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

Now, before we move to rise I'd like to quote to Delegate Larsen from an old and ancient proverb that says, "When at last to seals they come, some turn to animals, some turn to documents and some turn to rum."

There is a motion in order to rise and report progress.

J. TRASK: I move that the committee rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again, and direct the chairman to prepare his report.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

[Motion carried.]

JUNE 28, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole come to order.

SILVA: I see quite a few of the delegates leaving this Convention. I don't know whether they have been excused or not; and if they have not been excused, surely their names should be mentioned as leaving this Convention without the authorization of the President.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, but I think we still have a quorum, Delegate Silva.

SILVA: Irregardless, I think it's much fairer to the other delegates' names, who have been mentioned this morning as being absent; in good faith to those that were absent this morning, those that are picking up their hats and moving out of this Convention, their names should be called out, too, as leaving the Convention without the authorization of the President.

CHAIRMAN: Well, we'll ask the Sergeant at Arms to corral any delegates that are outside the Convention Hall.

Yesterday and the day before in the meeting of the Committee of the Whole as relates to Miscellaneous Matters there were four committee proposals which met with no debate and were adopted. The purpose of bringing the report relating to those four before the committee now is to move this along, and those which were subject to discussion will be treated in a separate report. If you'll bear with me, I'll ask the Clerk to read the Committee of the Whole Report relating to Proposals No. 13, 15, 16 and 21. If it meets with your approval, we can adopt the report and have it printed and sent to the Committee on Style. Will the Clerk please read the report.

CLERK:

Your Committee of the Whole to which was referred Standing Committee Reports Nos. 54, 56, 57 and 65 of the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters and Committee Proposals Nos. 13, 15, 16 and 21, respectively, accompanying said reports relating to miscellaneous matters detailed below, having held meetings on June 26 and 27, 1950, and having fully considered said reports and committee proposals, begs leave to report as follows:

Committee Proposal No. 13, providing for a state flag, reads as follows:

> Section _____. State Flag. The emblem of the Territory of Hawaii, known as the Hawaiian flag, shall be the flag of the State of Hawaii.

Recommendation: Your committee recommends that this proposal be adopted.

Committee Proposal No. 15, relating to state boundaries, reads as follows:

> Section _____. The islands and territorial waters heretofore constituting the Territory of Hawaii shall be known as the State of Hawaii.

Recommendation: Your committee recommends that this proposal be adopted.

Committee Proposal No. 16 relating to civil service, reads as follows:

> Section _____. The employment of persons in the state civil service, as defined by law, shall be governed by the merit principle.

Recommendation: Your committee recommends that this proposal be adopted.

Committee Proposal No. 21, relating to equal rights, reads as follows:

> Section _____. Whenever in this Constitution the term "person," "persons," "people," or any personal pronoun is used, the same shall be interpreted to include persons of both sexes.

Recommendation: Your committee recommends that this proposal be adopted.

Respectfully submitted,
Alexander H. F. Castro, Chairman

LARSEN: May I ask, I have here—and I don't want to read it, I realize everybody is tired—but a history of the Hawaiian flag which most people don't know. It's gotten from 1880, 1886 and 1898. If we could incorporate it into the committee report under flag, because I feel as we get this for publication, we should include the history of this flag.

CHAIRMAN: You wish the - -

SILVA: At this time, I would suggest or I move that the explanation of the flag and of the origination of the flag be embodied in the report.

A. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the history of the Hawaiian flag be incorporated into the report of the Committee of the Whole. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed say "no." Carried.

Now you have heard the reading of the Committee of the Whole Report.

H. RICE: I move the report be adopted.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that the report be adopted. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

Is there a motion to rise and report progress?

SAKAKIHARA: I move that the Committee of the Whole rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again, and that the written report be filed.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

ASHFORD: I move that the committee report out this report and move its adoption carrying the second reading.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that's the correct motion. Is there a second?

WOOLAWAY: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor. [Carried.]

JULY 3, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole, please come to order. Turn your attention to Committee of the Whole Report No. 13. These are very brief reports, and your chairman has made each different item a subject of a separate report for the sake of handling.

This first one relates to the wording of the section on the seat of government, and the language, but not the sense, of the article was changed and it was adopted to read:

> Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, shall be the capital of the state unless otherwise provided by law.

Under the recommendations there is an indication that this is a change in language.

J. TRASK: I move for the adoption of Committee of the Whole Report No. 13.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded. Any discussion?

ROBERTS: I have a question on this section. When the language which we have adopted reads, "unless otherwise provided by law," would that permit the legislature to change the seat of the capital? As I recall, the purpose of the change when we were in Committee of the Whole previously was to take care in this section for the action which we've provided in the legislative article, which provides for the moving of the seat of government only in case of an emergency. As I understood it, this was to be a constitutional provision and not be subject to change by the legislature except insofar as provided in this Constitution. If I'm not correct on that, I'd like to be corrected.

CHAIRMAN: The report on page two was, if I may answer that, taken from the transcript in which the two points on the moving of the capital were discussed. The transcripts indicate that it was the sense of this committee that the words "unless otherwise provided by law" covered, 1) movement of the capital in the event of an emergency; and 2) the idea that the placing of the capital would not be a constitutional provision, that is, it could be changed by statute. The transcript bore that out. Now, as far as the delegate didn't get that understanding from the - -

ROBERTS: That certainly was not my understanding in the Committee of the Whole. I was of the impression that the capital was to be in Honolulu; that provision was made in the legislative article that in case of an emergency, it could be relocated; but that the change of the site of the capital could not be made merely by statutory law, it had to be by constitutional amendment except insofar as provided in the legislative article.

CHAIRMAN: I wonder if the chairman of the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters has anything to add to that.

YAMAUCHI: In regard to the proviso here "provided by law," it was brought up in Committee of the Whole, it was discussed that in the event that the legislature feels that the capital should be moved elsewhere, that the methods - - I mean that the provision be made that the legislature be allowed to do so, and the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters agreed that in a later period, maybe in a period of 10 or 20 years, if the people feel that the capital should be moved elsewhere, that it could either be done by constitutional amendment or by the legislature.

HOLROYDE: My interpretation was the same as given by Delegate Roberts, that Honolulu shall be the capital. However, under situations covered by the first line on page two of the Committee of the Whole report, this wording, "as otherwise provided by law" would allow the legislature to transfer it. I do not agree with the last sentence of the Committee of the Whole report.

TAVARES: It seems to me that the only reasonable interpretation of that language is that the legislature does have power to change. If it is the intention to limit that language, it should be made very specific. As I interpret that, without any committee report, it can mean only one thing, that the legislature does have power to change it by law; and that was my understanding when I voted for it.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair might add that the transcript of the proceedings of this committee in consideration of this particular section indicates a rather lengthy discussion on whether or not the legislature would have the right to move the capital of the state for reasons other than emergencies. And the transcript indicates that the sense of the committee was that it would, that the phrase "unless otherwise provided by law," could not mean one thing and mean another. So that I think the only thing this committee can do now is, if there are those who feel that they are not willing to accept that particular wording, then we will have to reconsider our action because - -

ANTHONY: I move that we do reconsider our action.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

ARASHIRO: Yes, I second that motion.

ASHFORD: I move that the matter be deferred until many of the delegates return.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion to defer.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded to defer. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Now if you'll turn your attention to Committee of the Whole Report No. 15, having to do with intergovernmental relations, you'll find that the section was amended in the second line, which is the last line on the first page of the report, with the addition of the words "on the part of this State and its political subdivisions"; and in the fourth line of the section, substitution of the word "their" for the word "its"; and also in the fourth line of the section, the deletion of the word "all" as it appeared before the word "matters." This was merely rounding out of the sense of the section. We are now prepared for a motion to - -

DOWSON: I move that we adopt Committee of the Whole Report No. 15 and recommend its passage on second reading.

KANEMARU: I second it.

SAKAKIHARA: I rise to a point of information. What committee report are we deliberating?

CHAIRMAN: It's Committee of the Whole Report No. 15.

SAKAKIHARA: We don't have any Committee Report No. 15.

CHAIRMAN: You have no 15?

SAKAKIHARA: No 14, no 15.

CHAIRMAN: Fourteen has not been distributed. Relating to intergovernmental relations, do you all have a copy on your desk? It's been moved and seconded that the committee report be accepted by the committee and that it recommend adoption to the Convention. Is there any discussion? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

If you will turn your attention to Committee of the Whole Report No. 16. The only change, after considerable discussion on the oath of office, the only amendment was in the seventh line. You'll find the change noted on page two. The words "my duties as" inserted in lieu of the words "the duties of the office of," and for the reasons stated there.

SAKAKIHARA: I move the adoption of the committee report.

ARASHIRO: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt the committee report.

KELLERMAN: A matter of information. In the last paragraph on the second page of the report where the committee is expressing the sense of the Committee of the Whole with regard to commissioners of deeds outside the United States, what exactly does the committee mean by the words "not an appointed citizen of the United States"? That isn't clear to me at all.

CHAIRMAN: I'm afraid that is a typographical error.

KELLERMAN: Is that intended to be just "not a citizen of the United States"?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, that sentence should read, "The example was given of a person appointed outside the Territory not a citizen of the United States." I don't know how it got this way in between the typewritten page and the making of the stencil. That should read "The example was given of a person appointed outside the Territory, not a citizen of the United States."

KELLERMAN: Oh, then the word "appointed" goes up after person.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

KELLERMAN: "Of a person appointed outside the Territory."

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

KELLERMAN: Well, you mean a person outside the Territory being appointed, do you not? You don't appoint outside the Territory.

CHAIRMAN: "The example of - -" now I'm mixed up.

TAVARES: As the one who is to blame for having injected this thought into the situation, may I move to defer, and I will try to assist the committee in putting into words the idea I had in mind which apparently is not clear to some here. I, therefore, move to defer till Wednesday.

CHAIRMAN: I don't - - Delegate Tavares, I really don't think it's necessary in the interest of expediting. It's really merely a misplacement of a word.

ASHFORD: Isn't that a point that's taken care of perfectly, in - - at the tail end of the sentence, "The example of a person outside the Territory, not a citizen of the United States, who might be appointed as a commissioner of deeds."

CHAIRMAN: That would handle it. If you just cross out "an appointed," "the example of a person outside the Territory, not a citizen of the United States."

ANTHONY: I move the report be amended by deletion of the words "an appointed."

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye."

ASHFORD: You can't cut off "an" without substituting "a." Substitute for the words "an appointed," the word "a."

ANTHONY: That's correct, that's what I had written.

CHAIRMAN: You agree to the amendment, Delegate Anthony? All those in favor of the amendment please say "aye." Opposed, "no."

KELLERMAN: As the sentence reads, you have no verb in it at all. Now that may be purely a matter of - - maybe it's entirely immaterial, but there is no verb in the sentence. Don't you mean - -

CHAIRMAN: As I indicated to you, that sentence originally read in the typewritten report, "The example was given."

KELLERMAN: Yes, well, that's omitted.

CHAIRMAN: I'm afraid in the rush to get this printed, we have ended up - -

KING: I move that after the word "example," the words "was given" be inserted.

ROBERTS: Second.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

It now reads, "The example was given of a person outside the Territory, not a citizen of the United States, who might be appointed as a commissioner of deeds."

Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: I'll wait till after the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: All right. Is there any further question on the motion?

CORBETT: This is a very minor matter, but as long as this section has to be amended anyway, could we please do something about the split infinitive in the first line of that paragraph?

CHAIRMAN: "Also to show," is that the way you'd like to have it read? That will be taken care of. Is there any - -

ANTHONY: I move the adoption of the committee's report together with the chastisement of the body to the Chairman.

HOLROYDE: Second, as amended, I guess, he means.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed.

Now I think there is a motion in order that we rise and report a certain amount of progress.

TAVARES: I didn't know that the amendment had been adopted. I thought we were just adopting the amendment because I wanted to speak on the amended section.

CHAIRMAN: Well, as a matter of fact - -

TAVARES: I should like the record to show that this is only an example, and I take it that's what it means. There may be other situations where, from the necessities of the occasion, we are unable to find an officer who is a citizen and we, therefore, have to appoint someone who is not a citizen. And in those cases, where it is otherwise legal under our laws, I take it this would mean that the prescription of the oath in this manner would not necessitate our asking an alien then to perform an act of disloyalty to his country. I think that is the general intent of the report, is it not?

CHAIRMAN: Correct.

DOWSON: I move that the committee rise, report progress, recommend passage of Committee of the Whole Reports No. 13 and No. 15 and No. 16 as amended, and to beg leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye."
[Carried.]

JULY 5, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole please come to order. May I ask the committee to turn its attention to Committee of the Whole Report No. 14. Number 14 deals with Committee Proposal No. 14 and Resolution No. 29, and I think if we turn our attention to the proposal first relating to a state seal. The proposal on the state seal, according to recommendation of this committee, is to be filed with a proper resolution drawing the attention of the first legislature of the State regarding the design of that seal.

The resolution is outlined on page one and the beginning of page two and a copy of the resolution has been circulated. You all have copies of that resolution. It's circulated and is with the title, Resolution No. 45. It is not Resolution No. 29, which is found in the latter part of the report.

LARSEN: Could I make one comment? During our discussion—I just want to make this clear so the members will remember—during our discussion, we suggested that in drawing the coat of arms to which this has no real relation, except that it goes with it and the coat of arms is always developed from the seal, we suggested—and I'm merely saying this so we get it in the record—that the coat of arms use, as the old coat of arms did, the royal cloak and the small crown above, which from the standpoint of decorative things, like skins and so on, is more colorful. And the idea is that I want the delegates to realize we did discuss this and it makes a colorful thing that will be made in color, but will carry this seal on as the coat of arms.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Delegate Larsen.

Now, I think a motion is in order to adopt Proposal No. 14.

WOOLAWAY: I so move.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion on the first half of Committee of the Whole Report No. 14, as to the adoption of Proposal No. 14?

WIRTZ: Proposal 14? Point of information. Committee Report No. 14 - -

CHAIRMAN: Pardon me. As to the resolution covered by Committee of the Whole Report No. 14.

WIRTZ: Which is supposed to be Resolution 45?

CHAIRMAN: Which is Resolution 45.

WIRTZ: I would like to move to amend the previous motion, not to adopt Committee Proposal No. 14, but Committee of the Whole Report No. 14.

DELEGATE: Second.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. Now, Resolution No. 45 is before the committee, as the first half of Committee of the Whole Report No. 14, relating to the enactment by the legislature of a law to provide a great seal for the State of Hawaii.

LARSEN: I move we adopt this resolution.

CHAIRMAN: That has been moved. Is there any discussion? Chair will put the question? All those in favor, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.
Now, as to Resolution No. 29, which is embodied in Committee of the Whole Report No. 14, relating to certain heraldic symbols, is there a motion to adopt the resolution?

YAMAUCHI: I move the Resolution No. 29 be adopted.

LARSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Resolution No. 29. Is there any discussion? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

HAYES: I'm sorry, I wasn't on my feet, but I wanted to - - on page three, it says "Maluna a'e o na lahui apau, ke ola ke kanaka." The translation there says, "Above all nations is humanity." I wondered, it's just a suggestion, I wondered if, instead of "Above all nations," we would say, "Above all things is life," instead of "humanity." Then it would go with the translation that we have there in Hawaiian.

CHAIRMAN: You are - - you want to make an amendment to that translation, Delegate Hayes?

WOOLAWAY: I move for reconsideration so she can do it.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

COCKETT: Second.

CHAIRMAN: There's a motion to reconsider Resolution No. 29 to allow Delegate Hayes to enlighten us on the proper translation of the Hawaiian words found at the top of page three.

HAYES: The Hawaiian words, the interpretation there, in Hawaiian is correct, but the interpretation, "Above all nations is humanity" does not go with the translation in Hawaiian; and the word "life"; "life" would go with the translation we have here in Hawaiian. It's a point I wanted to bring up. It's just a point I was just reminded of.

CHAIRMAN: So your amendment would make the translation read, how?

HAYES: "Above all things is life."

CHAIRMAN: "Above all things"?

HAYES: "Things is life." L-I-F-E, life, person, life of a person, life of a human being.

HEEN: I don't think that is correct.

HAYES: Well, I've been - -

HEEN: "Maluna a'e o na lahui apau." What's "lahui"?

HAYES: "Lahui" means - -

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry. Would you please address the Chair.

WOOLAWAY: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, I couldn't get your remark.

HEEN: I'm asking the last speaker what the word "lahui" meant.

HAYES: "Lahui" means the different races.

HEEN: So you left that out in your translation into English.

KAWAHARA: I thought there was a motion before the house to reconsider - -

HAYES: There is a motion before the house, but it's been reconsidered.

WOOLAWAY: Point of order. That vote was already taken. Delegate Hayes made a motion for amendment and I seconded it so that it could be discussed on the floor.

HAYES: It's just a suggestion and I've taken it up with those who are well informed on the translation of Hawaiian and English. I just wanted to correct it because this is a report of the committee and we want it correct. Just a suggestion, unless you - - most of you feel that "Above all nations is humanity" would be all right to stay in the report. It's all right with me. I just offered this.

CHAIRMAN: I beg your pardon, Delegate Hayes. I understood that you were making an amendment to the translation. Is that correct, or are you merely making a suggestion?

HAYES: Well, I think the translation from Hawaiian, "Above all nations is humanity," doesn't go with your Hawaiian translation.

CHAIRMAN: Well, would you enlighten the Chair whether or not you are making an amendment, because if you are not making an amendment, then there is nothing before the house.

HAYES: Well, then, I should like to amend it by putting the word, after "all," instead of "nation," put in "things is life." "Above all things is life." Unless that's not correct. I see many heads are shaking.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second - -

LARSEN: I think Senator Heen is right. As with all these Hawaiian expressions, they do have different meanings, but this was a translation that is considered authoritative and I think the - - it's not necessary, really, to make an amendment here, but to carry and get a double check on Delegate Hayes' suggestion.

ARASHIRO: May I defer this matter for a day or so that Delegate - - lady delegate from the fourth district may check this matter up?

HAYES: I've checked it already and if it's going to delay this report, I withdraw my amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has been withdrawn. I believe, then, the question - -

ASHFORD: I wish to offer another amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

ASHFORD: Substitute for the word "the" in front of the "translation," the word "a," because there is very apparently a possibility of more than one translation.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that amendment?

BRYAN: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that on the fourth line of page three, the word "the" be deleted and the word "a" be substituted in lieu thereof. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.
Now, I think a motion to adopt the - -

KAUHANE: I'd like to take up the question raised by Mrs. Hayes and ask that we take and move for a deferment for about 15 minutes to get the clarification of the Hawaiian translation into English. It certainly doesn't sound right when you use the word "humanity," when the Hawaiian word means "man," and when you use Hawaiian words "Maluna a'e o na lahui apau," which means, "Above all people the life of man is predominant." Here, "Above all nations is humanity" doesn't rhyme with the Hawaiian wording. I think if we can defer action on this matter and we call the Hawaiian translator from the Archives to come on up, I think we will be able to settle this matter today.

CHAIRMAN: There has been a motion to defer. Is there a second?

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion to defer.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded to defer attention to the Resolution No. 29. All those in favor please say "aye." "No." Carried.

KAUHANE: I ask that you instruct the Sergeant at Arms to call the Hawaiian translator from the Archives to come up so that we can get the English translation of this Hawaiian phrase.

CHAIRMAN: The Sergeant at Arms will please do so. I believe he is on his way.
Now, if we can get along here on Committee of the Whole Report No. 19.

DOWSON: I move for the adoption of the Committee of the Whole Report No. 19.

CHAIRMAN: And Committee Proposal No. 20, would you include that? Include in your motion Committee Proposal No. 20.

DOWSON: And Committee Proposal No. 20.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Dealing with the preamble, which preamble has been amended, the amendment to Committee Proposal No. 20 and the preamble that is before the committee would read as follows:

> We, the people of the State of Hawaii, grateful for Divine Guidance, and mindful of our Hawaiian heritage, reaffirm our belief in a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and with an understanding heart toward all the peoples of the earth, do hereby ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Hawaii.

Is there any discussion on the amended proposal or the report? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.
I ask you now to turn your attention to Committee of the Whole Report No. 20.

WOOLAWAY: I move the adoption of Committee Report 20.

LAI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Would you include in that, Committee Proposal No. 18, Delegate Woolaway?

WOOLAWAY: O. K.

WIRTZ: Point of information. As I read the report, Committee Proposal No. 18 is to be filed.

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole Report No. 20 is to be adopted and Committee Proposal No. 18 is to be filed. Isn't that the way the motion should read? Is there a second?

LAI: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.
For the information of the committee, Committee of the Whole Report No. 13, which dealt with the seat of government, there was a question as to whether or not the phrase —I don't have it before me, but I believe it's "unless otherwise provided by law"—had passed this committee. In going further back from the transcript but going into the recording, it was discovered that the motion to change the wording had not carried, although the transcript showed that it had, so there is a redraft of that Committee of the Whole report being prepared at the present time, and I think that we'll have to hold on discussion until then.
I think now we're ready to rise and report progress.

DOWSON: I move that we rise, report progress and recommend adoption of the Committee of the Whole Report on Proposal No. 14 and Resolution No. 45; and the adoption of Committee of the Whole Report No. 19 and Committee Proposal No. 20 as amended; and for the adoption of Committee of the Whole Report No. 20 for the filing of Committee Proposal No. 18.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

PORTEUS: I understood that they had - - that action had been deferred on Committee of the Whole Report No. 14, so I don't think that would be appropriate to include in the motion that we rise, report progress and recommend the adoption.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, Resolution No. 45.

PORTEUS: You could leave Resolution No. 45 to accompany the Committee of the Whole Report No. 14, because that handles not only the state seal, but it also handles this section with respect to the Hawaiian translation of the phrase, "Above all nations is humanity." Now, if you postpone a portion of the Committee of the Whole report, it seems to me, therefore, that you would postpone the whole committee report.

LARSEN: To speed up, I wonder if we could get Kauhane and Mrs. Hayes to accept the fact that this is a broad translation. It's true it says the life of all humans and so on, but that is humanity.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Larsen, we have a motion here. I'm trying to get the motion straight before we can - -

LARSEN: What is the motion, may I ask?

CHAIRMAN: The motion is as to what this Committee of the Whole shall report. We have already sent for the translator from the Archives and we have some other business here. This Committee of the Whole will have to meet once again, so I don't think that there would be anything gained by rushing it through at the present time, if you're willing to withdraw.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask the movant if he would accept the amendment that we rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan, I think we can get some of these things out of the way.

BRYAN: In reporting progress, it's up to the chairman to name what we have recommended.

CHAIRMAN: All right. Fine. Will you second the motion? All those in favor please say "aye." "No." Carried.

JULY 6, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole come to order, please.

KAUHANE: May we deviate from your schedule and take up Committee Proposal -- Committee of the Whole Report No. 14?

CHAIRMAN: You want to take Committee of the Whole Report No. 14 first?

KAUHANE: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the chairman of the Miscellany Committee had a different schedule.

KAUHANE: May I be given permission to state my reasons why?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, please.

KAUHANE: I think when we deferred action on that it was on the translation of the Hawaiian words that appear in the Committee Proposal No. 14. The fact is that I'd like to be excused immediately upon consideration of this matter. I beg an indulgence that we take up this matter now and settle it, the translation.

CHAIRMAN: Request is granted. The committee will turn its attention to Committee of the Whole Report No. 14.

KING: I think it's Committee Proposal No. 14, is it not?

CHAIRMAN: It's Committee Proposal No. 14, which is embodied in Committee of the Whole Report No. 14, by coincidence, the subject of Standing Committee Report No. 55 of the Committee on Miscellany. You will recall that we deferred action on the latter half of that report, which is Resolution No. 29, and the reason for deferring the action is to be found on page three of the Committee of the Whole report in the first section appearing there, which is Section 2, as to the translation of the Hawaiian words. Now, there was one amendment on the fourth line. The word "the" appearing before "translation" was deleted, and inserted in lieu thereof the word "a" to read "a translation." But there is still some difference of opinion as to what the translation in English should be. Now, has that been resolved?

KAUHANE: Yes, the translation is "Above all nations is the life or existence of man," whichever word you want to use, "life" or "existence" of man. That will be correct with the Hawaiian word that is now being used in this committee resolution. "Above all nations is the life of man." I would like to offer this.

CHAIRMAN: "Above all nations is the life of men" or "man"?

KAUHANE: "Man," M-A-N.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that amendment?

APOLIONA: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the English quotation of the translation read, "Above all nations is the life of man."

AKAU: I realize that is the literal translation, but I fail to see where "humanity" differs from the "life of man." Humanity, human, you have the first word, human, which means life and I wonder, would it be heresy to say "Above all nations is humanity," as was originally put in the report, since it actually means the same thing, I think?

HAYES: I believe I was responsible for this yesterday because my attention had been called by an authority that I thought was worthwhile considering, Mr. George Mossman; but since then the chairman of the committee, Dr. Larsen, did contact Mr. Mossman and they both have agreed that we should leave it alone and not amend it at all.

CHAIRMAN: You are speaking against the amendment?

KAUHANE: I'd like to differ with the delegate's question. Certainly if we are going to use the Hawaiian words and we are to translate its meaning in English, we should translate it correctly. We can't be saying things that don't rhyme with the Hawaiian words that are being used. If we want to leave the thing as it is, although some may say the word "humanity" means "the existence of man," then the Hawaiian words should be changed to take care of that. When we read the Hawaiian motto, "Ua mau ke ea o ka aina i ka pono," there is only one meaning, one translation in Hawaiian -- in English. We can't say, because we use one word which embodies a general meaning that it's perfect. I'd like to, as much as possible, if we are not following the wording of the Hawaiian language, to leave out any mention of Hawaiian words in the Constitution, so that we will not take the position to have Hawaiian words put in here that don't mean anything. If we really want to carry out its full intent, then the full intent is submitted here which has been translated by the expert that holds the position of Hawaiian translator in the Archives, and I think he is qualified under any jurisdiction in the interpretation of Hawaiian into English, English into Hawaiian.

HEEN: I don't think this Convention should have too much concern about this matter. It is only a resolution asking the legislature to enact appropriate legislation covering these various symbols or emblems of heraldry. Now, this is not binding upon the legislature, and the legislature can take time off to find out what the proper translation should be.

COCKETT: I think the translation here is correct. You know, sometimes Hawaiian words have many translations, many meanings. But here, it says "ke ola o ke kanaka," "is humanity," it means the same thing as "existence" or "life." So I think it's correct, this translation is correct.

YAMAUCHI: I think there's quite a bit of difference of opinion in regard to the interpretation of that word, the phrase over there. I would like to suggest, rather make a motion that the resolution pertaining to Section 2 be amended by putting a period after the word "kanaka," and delete the rest of the section and leave it up to the legislature to interpret as it is.

CHAIRMAN: You further amend the amendment. Is there a second?

IHARA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment was to place a period after the word "kanaka," quote, period, and delete the balance of the section. Any further discussion on the amendment? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt. All those in favor, please raise their right hand. Opposed. The ayes have it.

Now, then, the motion would be in order to adopt the resolution as amended.

YAMAUCHI: I move that Committee of the Whole Report No. 14 including Resolution No. 29, and Committee Report [sic] No. 14 be adopted.

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to adopt Committee of the Whole Report No. 14, which includes Proposal No. 14 and Resolution No. 29. Any discussion? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Now, if we can turn our attention to Committee of the Whole Report No. 13, regarding the seat of government. There was some difference of opinion as to what the record held on this particular report and the Chair might state that I took the original report from the transcript, but we discovered in listening to the tape that there were some changes. So in Redraft 1, we have a substantially different report. I'll ask the Clerk to read the report, please.

CLERK:

Your Committee of the Whole, to which was referred Standing Committee Report No. 53 of the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters and Committee Proposal No. 12 accompanying the same, having held meetings on June 26 and 27, 1950, and having fully considered said report and proposal, begs leave to report as follows:

The proposal relates to the seat of government and reads as follows:

> Section _____. The seat of government of this State shall be located at the city of Honolulu on the island of Oahu, unless otherwise provided by law.

Recommendation: Your committee recommends that the proposal be adopted.

The phrase, "unless otherwise provided by law," enables the legislature to move the seat of government to a temporary location in the event of insurrection, invasion, conflagration, epidemic, or for other emergency conditions resulting from an act of God. This phrase also authorizes the legislature to establish methods to be employed in determining the location of the seat of government. The intent of the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters was explained further to mean that the seat of government should not be permamently set in the city of Honolulu by constitutional direction, but it could be relocated by statute.

That Standing Committee Report No. 53 recommending the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 12 be adopted; and that said Committee of the Whole accordingly recommends that said Committee Proposal No. 12 pass second reading.

YAMAUCHI: I move the Committee of the Whole Report No. 13 be adopted.

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to adopt the report as read. Any discussion? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed.

ANTHONY: You called for discussion and I was trying to get recognition.

CHAIRMAN: I beg your pardon.

ANTHONY: I don't think it was the intention of this body to permit the legislature to otherwise provide by law for the seat of government in all cases. That's what this proposal does. Notwithstanding the nice language of the report, for any reason the legislature could move the capital. I think it was the intention of those that voted on this proposal that, in case of an emergency, where it was necessary to move the capital, that could be done. I, therefore, think that what we should do is to amend this proposal to state what was in the minds of the delegates here when they voted on it.

SILVA: I thought we voted on it, but anyway I was going to say I approve the committee report, because it meets my objection. I wanted it in Hilo, but since they've gone this far to allow the legislature to place the capital where it sees fit, it meets with my objection and I approve the report.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair might state, in response to Delegate Anthony's point, that I was also of the opinion that it was not the concensus of this committee, but in listening to the tape, we find that there was a question specifically asked as to what the provision meant and the explanation of members of the committee that it was not only for emergency purposes but at any time by statute, went unchallenged. The Chair asked Delegate Harold Rice of Maui, "Delegate Rice, does that answer your question?" And he said, "Yes," and there was no further objection. Hearing none, the Chair could only gather that it was the concensus of the committee. Now, if the delegate from the fourth district wishes to have that changed, I suggest that he - -

ANTHONY: I move an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

TAVARES: Reconsideration. We can't amend; we've already adopted.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

WOOLAWAY: We did not adopt - -

ANTHONY: You have not adopted, that's why I rose.

CHAIRMAN: We have not announced the vote.

ANTHONY: Do I have the floor, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, you have.

TAVARES: My point of order still stands. We have - -

ANTHONY: The Chair ruled I had the floor.

ROBERTS: On the point of order, the Chair did not announce the vote.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

ROBERTS: The delegate from the fourth is properly presenting an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. I ruled him in order and said that he had the floor. Proceed, Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: I move an amendment. Delete the period after the word "law" and the quotes and add the words "in cases of emergency."

HAYES: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. The motion has been made to delete the period and the quotes after the word "law" in the section and add the words "in cases of emergency," period, quotes. Any discussion on this?

TAVARES: In the first place, I still don't agree with the ruling of the Chair; and, in the second place, I think we're giving pretty poor consideration to the judgment of the legislators from Oahu who are going to control the House, when we think that this thing endangers Oahu at all. I think we're wasting time on this proposed amendment. We're looking - - we're forgetting to look facts in the face. This thing was discussed before, was amply discussed. It was voted here, and just because the Chair hadn't yet announced the vote, we're going through this whole rigmarole again. I think the amendment ought to be killed.

PORTEUS: I am inclined to believe that after the Chair has put a question, regardless of whether or not the Chair has announced the vote, that anyone is foreclosed from gaining the floor. However, let's not be too technical. Let's move along. I think that for the convenience of anyone who wishes to make an amendment, though I don't agree with it, I'll move to reconsider in order that the amendment may be put before us. We'll either vote it down or - -

ANTHONY: Point of order. The speaker is out of order. Question now is on the amendment, not on any question of reconsideration.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, the Chair might reconsider the ruling here. This section, actually, was passed upon previous to the writing of the Committee of the Whole report, so Delegate Porteus is correct. In order to allow your amendment, there should be a motion for reconsideration.

PORTEUS: In spite of the refusal to accept my proffered help, I'll proffer it once more. I move we reconsider our action on this matter.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

NIELSEN: I second that in order not to waste time.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded to reconsider Standing Committee Proposal No. 12. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. The motion to reconsideration is lost.

KING: We seem to be getting into a stymied position and the only question in issue is whether the right to change the capital shall be limited to times of emergency or not. Now, the chairman of the Committee of the Whole has already stated the tape shows it was definitely the desire of the Committee of the Whole to leave the right to move the capital unlimited. I have no fear as a resident of Oahu that the delegates from the other islands are going to move the capital to Hilo or to Kawaihao or to Wailuku. They may move parts of it, but they can't change the terrific investment that's already been made in the capital. I don't think the amendment is particularly necessary. But the Chair did recognize Delegate Anthony to make the amendment and it has been seconded. The motion to reconsider came after he had been recognized and the second has been recognized. I would like to suggest that we vote on this amendment and if we vote it down, then that's the end of it. Then vote on the other proposals unamended.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the Chair admits to being stymied. However, in view of the rather vehement vote against reconsideration, I assume that the amendment will also be voted down, correctly or incorrectly. However, if Delegate Anthony wishes to correct the sense of this Committee of the Whole report, the chairman would be willing to be instructed by the committee to correct the report, although I would invite any of those who feel that the report misstates the sense of the committee, to listen to the tape in one of your spare moments because it very definitely indicates that there was no argument with this point.

ANTHONY: The trouble with the report of the chairman is it doesn't conform to the language of the section. The report says it is the intent of the section to remove the capital in cases of an emergency. The section doesn't say any such thing. That's the only point. It's a small matter. I don't care. If you want to have that inconsistency between the actual thing that you are passing and what you say you are passing, that's all right with me.

CHAIRMAN: I suggest the delegate reread the report.

SILVA: I rise to a point of order.

KING: I would like to call attention to the fact that the report is correct. It says in an emergency - -

SILVA: Point of order.

KING: - - and later it says - - The Chairman recognized me, just let me finish. "This phrase also authorizes the legislature to establish methods to be employed - -"

SILVA: Point of order. There is nothing before the Convention - - before the committee.

CHAIRMAN: You're not recognized, Delegate Silva. Would you state your point please?

SILVA: I said there is nothing before this committee.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. Delegate Bryan.

BRYAN: Is it the Chair's ruling that there is nothing before the committee?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair thinks that there is something before this committee and I would like to state that the Chair has asked whether or not any member of the committee would like to have the sense of the report changed.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman.

SILVA: The Chair is out of order and I appeal to this Convention.

BRYAN: I'd like to speak to that something which is apparently before the body. I think it is the sense of the Convention, or I move that it be the sense of this committee that the seat of the capital shall not be changed by the legislature except in case of emergency. If I get a second to that, I'd like to speak on it.

ROBERTS: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded. Proceed.

TAVARES: I rise to a point of order. It's utterly inconsistent with the language of the section which clearly shows that there is a right of the legislature by law to provide for the change.

CHAIRMAN: Then you are speaking against the motion?

TAVARES: Yes, I consider it entirely out of order.

CHAIRMAN: I do not. Proceed, Delegate Bryan.

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order. I believe the Committee report of the Whole is the property of the Committee of the Whole and. . .[inaudible]

CHAIRMAN: I couldn't hear you.

SAKAKIHARA: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Would you speak a little slower, please?

SAKAKIHARA: The Chair is in error. The Committee of the Whole report is the property of the Committee of the Whole. You are merely the presiding officer and I believe that the Chair should inquire as to desire of the Committee of the Whole.

CHAIRMAN: That in effect is what the Chair has done and there seems to be some question as to whether or not the Chair - - the chairman of the Committee of the Whole had correctly stated the intent of the committee. The motion now is to get to that point, Delegate Sakakihara.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman, I think I have the floor.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan has the floor, unless you are rising to another point of order. Delegate Bryan.

BRYAN: My reason for making that motion, the reason I want to speak on it is that I believe that a state capital is just about as permanent as a constitution and, therefore,

I think it should be stated in the Constitution, unless, in a case of emergency, it shall be moved temporarily elsewhere. Now there has been some talk on this floor that the increase in the Senate and House is going to cause us millions of dollars to build a large capitol building. I don't think we want to build one on each island. I think if we have one, that would be permanent, at least until the Constitution - -

SILVA: Point of order.

BRYAN: I haven't spoken more than five minutes. I still have the floor.

SILVA: You're out of order.

BRYAN: I'd like to say one other thing. I would advise the chairman of the committee, unless he can get the delegates to refrain from using the microphone in voting, to call for a standing vote for the rest of this committee meeting. Also, to call attention to the delegates that when we have a roll call, it's very hard to hear them, but they use the microphone when they don't need it.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is in sympathy with those last remarks. Delegate Trask.

SILVA: Is that a motion? I don't know, is anything before the Convention?

CHAIRMAN: You're out of order, Delegate Silva. Sit down.

A. TRASK: I think the motion - - the expression by Delegate Anthony is a very earnest consideration. What I'm thinking about is this. Does any quality or kind of expression in a Committee of the Whole report, how far does that language go to change the intent of plain words in a proposal?

SILVA: I rise to a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of information.

SILVA: What is before this Convention?

CHAIRMAN: A motion by Delegate Bryan.

SILVA: What is the motion?

CHAIRMAN: That it is the sense of this committee that those words, "unless otherwise provided by law," relate only to emergencies and not to ordinary statutes.

SILVA: Then the motion is out of order.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has declared that it is in order. Delegate Trask, proceed.

A. TRASK: I'm concerned about the earnest effort here to determine whether or not the words "unless otherwise provided by law" are to be restricted in their judicial interpretation to the words "simply emergency," and that's why it seems to me clearly that if the court just looked at this plain expression, I'm sure the legislature would not be limited merely to emergencies. I think it's worthwhile to put it in.

SILVA: I move that the committee rise, report progress and beg leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: I don't recognize the motion. I think you are obstructing everything, Delegate Silva. Will you sit down and relax.

KING: Let me ask if Delegate Bryan would withdraw his motion to embody a restriction as to the sense of the committee and allow Delegate Anthony make his amendment. Let's vote on it. If it's adopted, then that's the sense of the committee. If it's voted down, then we'll have the proposal as originally reported. I ask Delegate Bryan if he will withdraw his motion and let Delegate Anthony present his amendment. I say, let's vote on the amendment. If this Committee of the Whole prefers the amendment, then that would be binding on the Committee of the Whole and would be an amendment to the proposal on second reading.

BRYAN: I'd be very glad to withdraw my amendment if the Chair - - my motion if the Chair feels that he can put the motion without being out of order.

CHAIRMAN: I think that possibly if Delegate Anthony wishes to put his amendment, he can call for suspension of the rules, so that we can proceed with the amendment.

WOOLAWAY: I move for the suspension of rules so that we can expedite matters here.

ROBERTS: I'd like to suggest that there is an honest difference of opinion as to what the thinking of the Committee of the Whole was prior to the report. I think that the chairman of the Committee of the Whole properly reported on the basis of the tape and the records that he had. I think, however, that there wasn't full understanding and agreement among the delegates as to what the intent of that was. I know that I, for one, felt that the language as we adopted it applied only to the emergency provisions in the legislative article. I think there can be an honest basis of difference of opinion with regard to the report. If we did not reflect our opinion, I think it's perfectly proper in the Committee of the Whole to refer to the chairman and to indicate to him that it was not the sense of the Committee of the Whole.

I don't think we ought to get excited about this problem. We can take it up tomorrow morning; I think we're all pretty tired; I think we ought to get a good night's sleep. Therefore, I move that we rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again tomorrow morning.

NIELSEN: Second the motion.

KING: Let me ask Delegate Roberts if the procedure I suggested wouldn't be equally applicable. We can vote on the amendment Delegate Anthony had suggested, vote it up or vote it down, and that moves the proposal out, and we'd be that much ahead. I don't think we're so tired we can't accept the amendment that the right to change the capital be limited to emergency or is unlimited. It is as simple a matter as that.

ROBERTS: I think that the reason I wouldn't like to get a vote now is that we're not thinking about the problem. We're all pretty tired and I think we're a little bit emotional. I think we can save it until tomorrow and give it a little bit of thought.

ARASHIRO: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: There has been a motion - -

ARASHIRO: For the same reason, I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion's been seconded, Delegate Arashiro. There has been a motion to rise and report a certain amount of progress. The Chair feels that we're all big boys now and can probably stick it out, but if that's the wish of the - -

PORTEUS: May I suggest to the body that Standing Committee Report No. 66 has not yet been acted on. If the body will give the opportunity to the chairman of the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters to present that report and ask that you adopt the committee report. That report only places various matters on file that were submitted to that particular committee. I think that if you will give him that opportunity to do that, he is prepared to make the motion, and I think we can pretty well round up our work on this miscellaneous affairs.

ANTHONY: As the author of all this chaos, I have no particular feeling one way or other, but I did really believe that it was the sense of the body when it voted upon the proposal that the capital could be moved as provided by law in cases of emergency. Now there's no need for anybody to get stirred up about it. I think that the suggestion of the President is a sensible one. I don't care whether the body votes for or against my amendment. I was just trying to clear up what I thought was an ambiguity among the delegates here. I suggest Delegate Roberts withdraw his motion. Let's take a vote on it and get rid of it.

ROBERTS: I withdraw the motion.

NIELSEN: I withdraw the second, and put everybody in order.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you. We have yet before us the approval of the report, as written. Is there any further discussion?

ANTHONY: I move an amendment to [Committee] Proposal No. 12. After the words, "unless otherwise provided by law," delete the period and the quotes and insert the words "in cases of emergency."

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

PORTEUS: I consider that entirely out of order. I made the motion to reconsider in order to give the gentleman the opportunity to present his amendment. He rejected my offer. I made another offer, made the motion to reconsider in order to put this thing properly before the body. The body voted on it and it was turned down. I don't see anything more before the body. All the chairman needs to do is rule that the matter was brought to a head on the motion to reconsider and was lost. The only way that anyone can get around that is by moving to suspend the rules.

KING: On the point of order raised by Delegate Porteus, I hate to differ with him but the motion to reconsider was out of order, as a matter of fact, because the Chair had already recognized Delegate Anthony and had already ruled that it was in order. So there wasn't any question of reconsideration. The Chair had legalized the amendment and the second to the amendment. Let's vote on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has recognized the amendment realizing we are in the Committee of the Whole, and I feel that there is an honest difference of opinion as to what the sense of this committee was. I feel that anyone who stands up on a formal parliamentary procedure is standing in the way of expediency. Now, the amendment reads to add the words after "law," "in case of emergency" period, quote. All those in favor of the amendment please - -

HEEN: I move an amendment to that amendment by striking out the words, "unless otherwise provided by law" and put a period after the word "Oahu." Leave the situation a fluid one. If Oahu becomes untenable, they are going to move out of Oahu anyway without waiting for the legislature to provide by law that you can move. That's what they are doing in South Korea. The government has moved two, three times from Seoul and they didn't need any legislation to do that. They'll move anyhow whenever the emergency arises.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

AKAU: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been seconded by Mrs. Akau.

YAMAUCHI: I'd like to speak in regards to the comment made by the previous speaker. If the speaker believes what he has spoken, why is it that the committee has that phrase about emergency location of the capital in the legislative article?

BRYAN: Would you read the pending amendment, please?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment is to delete the words "unless otherwise provided by law, in case of emergency," so that the section would read "The seat of government of this State shall be located in the City of Honolulu on the island of Oahu," period.

ANTHONY: I accept the amendment. So we needn't vote on the motion to amend my amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony accepts the amendment. All those in favor of - -

SAKAKIHARA: I demand roll call.

ROBERTS: Before we take the vote, I think we have a provision in our legislative article which makes an exception of this. I think the proper amendment should be "except as otherwise provided in this Constitution," which takes care of the emergency situation. Is that acceptable to the movant?

HEEN: In the article on the legislature, there is a provision that the sessions of the legislature shall be held in Honolulu, that is held as the seat of government; and if the seat of government becomes unsafe, the governor may direct that the sessions be held elsewhere. But the seat of government would still remain in Honolulu, and if it becomes untenable, they are all going to move out anyway.

CHAIRMAN: Any further discussion on the amendment?

SAKAKIHARA: I ask for a division of votes.

CHAIRMAN: You want a division of the house? Call for the roll call. How many want a roll call?

PORTEUS: I think division of the house would only require the chairman of the committee to ask for a standing vote.

CHAIRMAN: Correct. All those in favor of the amendment, please stand. Opposed. The ayes have it. 26 to 22.

SILVA: I ask for a roll call.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has already announced the results.

ANTHONY: Point of order. I move that the report be adopted as amended.

YAMAUCHI: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded that the report be adopted as amended. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it.

There is before this committee the Standing Committee Report No. 66.

YAMAUCHI: I move that the Standing Committee Report No. 66 be adopted.

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Yamamoto seconds. Any discussion on Standing Committee Report No. 66? All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

Now I think we're ready to rise and report progress.

DOWSON: I move that we rise and report progress and recommend the adoption of Committee Report - -

DELEGATE: Can't hear the delegate, Mr. Chairman.

DOWSON: I move that we rise and report progress and recommend the adoption of the Committee of the Whole Report No. 14 as amended with Resolution No. 29 rendition, the second rendition; Committee of the Whole Report No. 13, and Committee Proposal No. 12, as amended, and Standing Committee Report No. 66.

SAKAKIHARA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

JULY 7, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole will come to order. Delegates may sit at their ease. The Chair recognizes Delegate Wirtz.

WIRTZ: In order that we start out clean and fresh in this matter, so that there will be no technicalities involved, I now move for the suspension of rules and the consideration of this particular proposal.

PORTEUS: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: There has been a motion to suspend the rules. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried unanimously.

YAMAUCHI: I now move that we adopt Committee of the Whole Report No. 13.

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee of the Whole Report No. 13, Redraft 1, be adopted. Is there any discussion?

HEEN: I take it that if the committee report is adopted, it will contain the phrase "unless otherwise provided by law." Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

HEEN: I have an amendment. Delete the phrase "unless otherwise provided by law," and place the period after the word "Oahu" on the third line, and add to that, "In case Honolulu shall be unsafe, the governor may direct temporary removal of the seat of government to some other place."

CHAIRMAN: No, this is where we went off the tract yesterday. The Chair would like to ask of our parliamentarian, Mr. Secretary, whether it would not be correct now to move for a reconsideration of the section.

PORTEUS: I think the point of Delegate Wirtz motion- -

CHAIRMAN: Takes care of the rules.

PORTEUS: - - takes care of it. Now, you have before you a motion to adopt with an amendment, which is in order, which deletes and substitutes in lieu thereof.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair just wanted to make sure of that. Now is there a second to the - -

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Now, Delegate Heen, would you restate your amendment so that we know exactly what it is?

HEEN: Line three, substitute a period for the comma following the word "Oahu" and delete the phrase "unless otherwise provided by law"; and substitute for that phrase the following sentence, "In case Honolulu shall be unsafe, the governor may direct the temporary removal of the seat of government to some other place." May direct the temporary removal of the seat of government to some other place." That follows somewhat the language used in the article on legislature powers and functions with reference to the holding of sessions in Honolulu and that, when Honolulu becomes unsafe the governor may direct that any session may be held at some other place.

CHAIRMAN: Is the amendment clear in the minds of all the delegates? The sentence should read, after Oahu, "In case Honolulu shall be unsafe, the governor may direct the temporary removal of the seat of government to some other place." Is there any discussion?

YAMAUCHI: I'd like to speak in opposition to the amendment. When the Committee on Miscellaneous Matters took up this matter about seat of government, we were in accord that the seat of government should not be permanently set in one place. We felt that a provision should be added that in case that the capital is in danger and that it would be necessary to move the capital temporarily, it should be relocated in some other area, whether it be in the City and County of Honolulu or to some other island. But also, that it should provide the means, the method that could be employed in selecting the capital. Also, that in the event of the future growth of some other areas of the State of Hawaii, that it should be given the opportunity to be a capital if it fulfills the requirement. We feel that in later years, in some other areas of the State of Hawaii—that is, if we become a state—that it may grow to the extent where it may be not necessary but it will be for the benefit of the State to move the capital to some other area. For that reason, we felt that we would not like to leave the seat of government to be permanently set in Honolulu.

APOLIONA: The chairman of your Miscellaneous Committee is quite right. The committee felt that because of Honolulu now having all opportunities, and it is the largest city in the Territory, that Honolulu now shall be the capital. But in future dates, when any political subdivision within this State shall grow and prosper and become bigger than Honolulu, then the legislature may remove the seat of government to that particular subdivision. And also, the members of the committee agreed that in case of disaster or any emergency, the governor can remove the temporary seat of government from Honolulu to any place he so desires. That is to give the opportunity for other political subdivisions of this State if they become bigger, more prosperous, and have the facilities to hold the seat of government, then that particular subdivision should be given the opportunity of becoming the seat of government.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

DOWSON: May I say a word against the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

DOWSON: Honolulu is now the logical capital, location for the capital of the State of Hawaii. It might still be the most fit place for the location of the seat of government for a long time. However, can we preclude that some pestilence or something that might happen due to warfare, can we preclude that the place Honolulu might not be rendered unfit for use? We may - - due to the development in the use of the atomic bomb or the H-bomb or other bombs that might come, can we preclude that we may not have to build a city underground or a place where we can keep the valuable documents from being destroyed? We can't go underground here in Honolulu due to the closeness of the water. Therefore, I think we should leave to the future legislature the prerogative to move the seat of the capital.

BRYAN: I understand the arguments made by the various members of the committee quite well. However, I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee if it isn't true that any permanent change would be probably accompanied by a great many changes in other factors, as he mentioned, and in that event, wouldn't it be sufficient change to warrant a revision of the Constitution? That was the point I tried to make yesterday. It's quite a large move to move permanently the seat of government of the Territory or of the State, and I think that that should be accompanied by a rather serious change which would change the Constitution. I quite agree that as far as temporary removal is concerned, it could be done by the governor or provided by law by the legislature, it could be taken care of very easily in that manner. But a permanent change, I think, should require a revision of the Constitution. I'd like to get the views of the committee chairman on that point, if I may, please.

YAMAUCHI: In the constitutions of the various states, in some of the constitutions, they provide that the permanent seat be at a certain city. The committee felt that if we make Honolulu the permanent seat, by constitutional measures, we wondered whether if in later years when the Constitutional Convention is called, whether it would be possible to make the amendment once the permanent seat has been set.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that there has been sufficient discussion.

SILVA: I'm heartily in accord with the committee report, with the recommendation of the committee. May I cite that during the sessions that I've been in the territorial legislature, there have been several attempts, more as a joke than anything else, by my good friend Senator Capellas from Hawaii, calling Hilo God's country and so forth, to change the capital. Just an introduction of the bill, and it stays there and never got any further.

We realize that the House will be controlled by a vast majority of members from Oahu. Even with the outside islands, if Hilo would want to change it, then there would be the Maui or Kauai group to take it over to Maui, and then the Kauai group would like it over on Kauai. So that the chances are practically slim and impossible to change the capital to any locality unless there might be sufficient reason, and I wouldn't doubt that when that time does come in the legislature that the originators of the move to move the capital would probably come from Oahu because the island of Hawaii and the island of Maui or the other counties are less subject to attack. In all probability it would be the objectors rather than those that are being in accord to change the capital. The move would probably come from Oahu in the legislature to change the capital. So I see absolutely nothing wrong with the committee's report. Any talk to the contrary about how the outside island delegates are going to change the -- move the capital to Hawaii when Oahu has so much control over the House is, as the word goes in the Convention, facetious.

YAMAMOTO: I see that the amendment to this does not hold water because of the fact that it says "unsafe," because it is "unsafe" the capital should be moved temporarily to another locality. To me, at the present time in the present world situation, I feel that any city is always unsafe 365 days a year because of the fact we have in this atomic age the H-Bomb. You have seen on December 7, 1941, that your city was attacked and it was in a dangerous situation. You can see for yourself, because of the reason that we have our naval and army installations on this island concentrated, that means this city is most susceptible to attack from the air and sea and land. Now, therefore, because of the fact that we set our capital city in Honolulu, there is a possibility that you will not be able to move your capital to maybe Wahiawa or any other city on this island, and I therefore believe that this amendment should be defeated by all means. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN: Is the committee ready for the question? The question is on the amendment as offered by Delegate Heen. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. The Chair is in doubt.

DELEGATE: Show of hands.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please raise their right hand. Opposed. The Chair counts 21 for, 25 against. The amendment is lost.

PORTEUS: I suggest that the Chairman now put the motion to adopt the proposal and committee report.

A. TRASK: I move that a period be placed after the word "Oahu" and the balance of the words, "unless otherwise provided by law," be stricken.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

A. TRASK: Just a brief word. I want to assure the outside islands that this is not Oahu thinking. It's just a question of strict law. The question we are concerned with is how far can a committee report go to torture the language and meaning of plain words that are to be judicially determined. Let us understand plainly that the only time the courts will review the reports to divine the intention of this Convention is when there is any ambiguity of language. Now the words "unless otherwise provided by law," is not ambiguous. With what is it ambiguous? It's plain that the court would say, for any reason that the legislature may determine by law, so that there would be no reason to refer to the committee report. So the intention that the capital would only be removed in case of emergency would not be considered by the court at all.

CHAIRMAN: There has been an amendment offered to place a period after "Oahu" and delete the balance of the section. Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: I'll ask for show of hands. All those in favor please raise their right hand. Opposed. The Chair counts 27 ayes, 24 noes. The ayes have it.

J. TRASK: I move that Committee of the Whole Report No. 13 be adopted as amended.

NODA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded to adopt the committee report.

PORTEUS: I wonder whether the movant would mind making that to adopt the proposal as amended, and leave it to the chairman of the Committee of the Whole to rewrite the Committee of the Whole report.

CHAIRMAN: Correct. Will you so change your motion, Delegate Trask? It has been moved that the proposal be adopted as amended. All those in favor?

KANEMARU: Point of information, please. Did you say that was Committee Proposal No. 12, redraft 1?

CHAIRMAN: That's Committee Proposal No. 12 as found in Committee of the Whole Report No. 13, redraft 1.

KANEMARU: Then, if you put the period right back of "Honolulu, Oahu" it doesn't make sense at all as far as this redraft 1 is concerned.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. We're adopting only the proposal and the new Committee of the Whole report must be written. In other words, we're not adopting the report, we're adopting the proposal. All those in favor vote --

YAMAUCHI: Am I to understand that this amended proposal means that the seat of government will be permanently set in the city of Honolulu?

CHAIRMAN: That's what it says.

YAMAUCHI: On the island of Oahu?

CHAIRMAN: That's the understanding of the Chair.

All those in favor of adopting the proposal as amended say "aye." Opposed. Ask for show of hands. All those in favor please raise their right hand.

DELEGATE: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: Call for roll call. How many want a roll call? O.K. Roll call. The Clerk will please call the roll.

Ayes, 31. Noes, 27 (Apoliona, Arashiro, Ashford, Corbett, Doi, Dowson, Ihara, Kage, Kanemaru, Kawahara, Kawakami, Kido, Luiz, Lyman, Nielsen, Okino, Porteus, Sakai, Sakakihara, Silva, St. Sure, Tavares, Wirtz, Woolaway, Yamamoto, Yamauchi, Castro). Not voting, 5 (Gilliland, Lee, Phillips, Richards, Smith).

CHAIRMAN: The ayes have it. I believe now it's in order to move that we rise and report progress.

PORTEUS: I so move. That will give the chairman time to change his report.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. All those in favor --

HAYES: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

JULY 11, 1950 • Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole come to order. I'll ask the Clerk to read the amended report.

CLERK: Re Seat of government.

> Section _____. The seat of government of this State shall be located at the city of Honolulu on the island of Oahu.

Your Committee further recommends: (1) That this committee report be adopted; and (2) that Committee Proposal No. 12, as herein above amended, pass second reading.

Signed by the chairman.

CROSSLEY: I move the adoption of the committee report.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Trask seconds. Any discussion? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

CROSSLEY: I move the committee rise, recommending the adoption of the committee report.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor please say "aye." Carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on

REVISION AND AMENDMENTS*

(Article XV)

Chairman: TOM T. OKINO

JUNE 15, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole come to order, please. You may remove your coats, gentlemen.

There are three reports, I believe all of you are aware of that, filed by the committee members on revision, amendments, initiative, referendum and recall. There is the Committee Proposal No. 9 attached to Committee Report No. 48. The Chair feels that Committee Proposal No. 9 and Report No. 48 be considered first. What is your pleasure?

FUKUSHIMA: I'd like to make a brief statement, why I'd like to have Standing Committee Report No. 48 be considered first. We have before the Committee of the Whole now, three standing committee reports: Standing Committee Report No. 47, which has to do with the inclusion - - exclusion of the provisions of the initiative, referendum and recall; and we have Standing Committee Report 48, which deals with the method and manner of revising and amending our Constitution; Standing Committee Report No. 49 is a minority report filed on opposition to Standing Committee Report No. 47. Proposal No. 9 is a complete article on the method and manner of revising and amending our Constitution, and that is attached to Standing Committee Report No. 48. In order to avoid any confusion, I would like to have the permission of the Chair and the committee now to take into consideration first, Standing Committee Report No. 48 and Committee Proposal No. 9.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no objection from the floor or this assembly, the Chair will so rule that we shall proceed with the consideration of Committee Report No. 48 and the attached Committee Proposal No. 9.

FUKUSHIMA: Before proceeding, I'd like to make a very brief outline on the method and manner of revising and amending our Constitution. I shall labor under the presumption that the Standing Committee Report No. 48 has been read by the delegates, and laboring under that presumption, I will not go into the report or the proposal at any great length.

In drafting Committee Proposal No. 9, the committee took into consideration that there was an absolute need of a reasonable, workable means of amending and revising our Constitution. It also had in mind that the Constitution should not be easily amended and yet, at the same time, the procedure of amending the Constitution should not be rendered practically prohibitive or impossible.

Generally speaking, the constitutions of the states distinguish between two separate processes in the revision and amendment of such constitutions. The first process may properly be referred to as the initiation or proposal of amendments or revision, and the second process as the adoption or ratification of such proposed amendments or revisions. There are three methods of initiating or proposing amendments and they are (1) proposals by the legislature, (2) proposals by a constitutional convention; and (3) proposals by popular initiative. There are also three methods of adopting amendments. They are (1) adoption by the legislature; (2) adoption by a constitutional convention; and (3) adoption by direct popular vote.

Your committee was in general agreement that the method of adoption or ratification should be by a direct popular vote. However, with regard to the initiation or proposal of amendments, your committee firmly felt that there should be two prescribed methods; first, by the legislative method, and secondly, by a constitutional convention. There was, however, a minority which favored the proposal proposing a constitutional amendment or revision through the constitutional initiative. With the foregoing principles in mind, we drafted a complete article on revision and amendment which is Committee Proposal No. 9.

Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 9 provides for the procedure of proposing amendments or revisions to the Constitution by the legislature or by constitutional convention, leaving out the popular initiative method.

Section 2 deals with, specifically, revision or amendment by constitutional convention. There it provides that the question, "Shall there be a convention to propose a revision of or amendments to the Constitution" be submitted to the people by the legislature at any time. If the legislature fails to do this, then, within a period of ten years, automatically the State officer whose duty it is to submit such questions will certify the question to the public. That same section also provides that if the majority of the ballots tallied upon the question favors the holding of a convention, the delegates shall be chosen at the next regular election, unless the legislature provides for a special election for the election of delegates. It also provides, among other things, the qualification of delegates, and the determination by the convention of its own organization and rules of procedure.

Upon the question of ratification, there are two methods proposed. If at a general election, the ratification must be by a majority of the votes tallied upon the question, but such a majority must also constitute at least 35 percent of the total votes cast at such election. In the event that a special election is had for the ratification, then that majority must equal at least 35 percent of the total registered voters for that special election.

There is also a further restriction, that if the constitutional provision, or the amendment, provides for the reapportionment of the Senate, that majority must be a majority of the votes tallied upon the question in each of a majority of the counties. Here I'd like to state that there is a minority of two, Delegates Ohrt and Fong, who oppose, or who do not concur with this particular portion of Section 2.

Section 3 provides for the revision or amendments by the legislature. Here two alternatives or methods are proposed. If it's at a single session, it requires a two-thirds vote of the total membership of each house, and at least 10 days' written notice must be given to the governor for his consideration. The second alternative is that if the proposal by the legislature is at two successive sessions,

*Original name—Committee of the Whole on Revision, Amendments, Initiative, Referendum and Recall—has been shortened here to include only those subjects included in the Constitution.

then it requires only a majority of each house. Now, as to the ratification phase of that particular method of amending the Constitution, it's the same as Section 2.

Section 4 deals with the veto power of the governor. We have drafted it in such a manner that the governor's veto is inapplicable in revising or amending the Constitution.

I would suggest, at this time, that we take up the committee proposal, section by section, starting from Section 1 which relates to procedure.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any objection to the suggestion made by the chairman of this particular committee? If not, the Chair will rule that we shall take up Committee Proposal No. 9, section by section.

LAI: I move that we adopt Section 1 of Proposal No. 9.

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion? Are you ready for the question?

HEEN: I'd like to submit this question. This section provides that amendments or revisions may be proposed by the legislature or may be proposed by constitutional convention. That implies, I take it, that somewhere else in this article or committee proposal that the final determination of any amendment or revision must be voted on by the people.

FUKUSHIMA: That is what I tried to explain in my very brief resume. Section 1 merely provides generally what -- how the proposals should be initiated, that is by the legislature or by constitutional convention. The second phase is the ratification phase, and under both methods of initiation, we have provided that ultimately the amendments or revisions will be voted by the people, by direct popular vote.

ASHFORD: May I ask a question?

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, please. I believe the senator from the fourth district has still the floor.

FUKUSHIMA: To be more particular, I shall refer the delegate to page two of Committee Proposal No. 9, the last paragraph appearing on that page.

HEEN: That is in connection with a proposed amendment or provision submitted by the convention?

FUKUSHIMA: That is correct.

HEEN: Then later on, when the proposal is made by the legislature, you in effect use the same language?

FUKUSHIMA: That is correct.

HEEN: The ratification must be made by the people.

FUKUSHIMA: That's right.

ASHFORD: I would like to ask this question. If Section 1 of this article be adopted, will it not foreclose a consideration of the provision for initiative of constitutional amendments under the Minority Report No. 49?

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman of the committee be willing to answer that question?

FUKUSHIMA: Yes, the delegate from Molokai is correct. If we adopt Section 1, that will foreclose the proposals of any revisions or amendments through the popular initiative method. The Standing Committee Report referred to, which is No. 49, has to do specifically with statutory initiative and referendum, and also constitutional initiative. However, if we do adopt Section 1, it will mean that the proponents of the constitutional initiative in proposing amendments or revision will be foreclosed.

NIELSEN: Will that mean that the Minority Report 48 will be out of order?

CHAIRMAN: If Section 1 is adopted, and no amendment is made to this section by Delegate Ashford --

NIELSEN: There will be no initiative or referendum by the people.

CHAIRMAN: If it is not made at this time, the Chair feels that it will estop you from making such an amendment, unless there will be reconsideration of this Section No. 1.

NIELSEN: Well, then, I think we ought to take up the other proposals, 48 and 49, and dispose of them before we go into this, or postpone this section until they have been taken up.

FUKUSHIMA: In that event, perhaps it may be proper that we proceed to Section 2 and Section 3, and defer action on Section 1 for the time being and take it up after considering the minority report which is Report No. 47, because there you have attached to the minority report an amendment to Proposal No. 9 including the provisions of the initiative and referendum.

PORTEUS: I wonder if it would facilitate the action of the Committee of the Whole if we could proceed to adopt, reject or amend any of the sections with the understanding that when we have finished we would then give full consideration to the chairman of this committee and his presentation of his minority report. At that time, we would then determine whether or not these other sections should be further amended by the inclusion of amendments with respect to initiative, referendum and so forth. In that way, I think that we could move along on this and then bring up the minority report and have a full disposition of that. Could we proceed with that understanding?

CHAIRMAN: What is your pleasure, Delegate Fukushima, with the suggestion now made?

FUKUSHIMA: I believe that's perfectly proper, and I believe I'll accede to that, because I feel otherwise there may be some confusion.

CHAIRMAN: The chairman of the committee having consented to the suggestion made by Delegate Porteus, the assembly will proceed with the discussion of Committee Proposal No. 9 with that specific understanding, namely that after Proposal No. 9 is adopted, it will be considered again in the light of the amendment to said Committee Proposal No. 9.

NIELSEN: Well, wouldn't it be better to just defer action on this first, because then we'll have to vote for reconsideration on it, and --

CHAIRMAN: There was no second to the motion to defer action on Section 1.

PORTEUS: Under this understanding, it would not be necessary to move for reconsideration. You just make your -- offer your amendment.

NIELSEN: Well, that's all right then, if I don't have to move for reconsideration.

PORTEUS: So it would be in order to move, second and adopt Section 1 with the understanding that when we're finished with this, that we'll then take up the minority report and proceed with initiative, etc.

CHAIRMAN: Are we ready to vote on the question that we adopt Section 1 of Proposal No. 9 before the assembly? All those in favor of the motion to adopt Section 1 please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "nay." Carried.

Section 2.

ROBERTS: I suggest that the chairman of the committee go over this thing paragraph by paragraph so that we have a chance to get to the basic issues.

LAI: I move that we adopt Section 2 of this report.

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: The adoption of Section 2 has been moved and duly seconded. Are you ready for discussion?

FUKUSHIMA: Now that we have something before the floor, I'd like to accede to the suggestion made by Delegate Roberts, and take it paragraph by paragraph. First paragraph provides—shall I read it, Dr. Roberts?

> The legislature may submit to the people at any time the question, "Shall there be a convention to propose the revision of or amendments to the Constitution?" If any ten-year period shall elapse during which the question shall not have been submitted, the State officer whose duty it is to certify statewide public questions for submission to the people shall certify the question, to be voted on at the first general election following the expiration of such period.

MAU: May I ask if there is some provision authorizing an officer to so certify the question elsewhere?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fukushima, will you be willing to answer that question?

TAVARES: Maybe I can answer it as far as it can be answered. At this stage, we do not know what the final organization of the executive department is going to be. I believe it would be a matter for the Committee on Style later, or for reconsideration, if no such officer is provided for, that we bring the matter up again and name some officer, such as the secretary of state or some other proper officer. I don't think at this stage we can -- we are in a position to know, at least I haven't studied the executive article yet.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe that is the reason why it was left as a State officer. It could be the lieutenant governor, under the recommendations to be submitted by the Committee on Executive Powers and Functions, who may have that duty. Or it may be the secretary of state. So we have left that by merely stating "the State officer whose duty it is to certify statewide public questions."

HEEN: In order to take care of this situation, that clause starting with the words "the State officer" might be changed to read as follows: "Such State officer authorized by law for such a purpose shall certify statewide public questions" -- no, "shall certify the question to be voted on." In other words, change the word "the" to "such," delete the words "whose duty it is to certify statewide public question for submission to the people," so that -- and insert after the word "officer" "authorized by law for such a purpose, shall certify the question." Then that clause will read: "Such officer, authorized by law for such a purpose, shall certify the question to be voted on at the first general election following the expiration of such period." I move that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Is that a motion, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: Yes, I move that that clause be amended as stated.

ANTHONY: I second the motion, and I'd like to make a suggestion to see if it's acceptable to the movant.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

ANTHONY: I seconded the delegate's motion, and I'm offering this suggestion. In the line that reads "the State officer whose duty it is to certify," if you would eliminate the word "the" and insert the word "a"; and then after "whose duty it," strike out the word "is" and insert the words "shall be," I think that's all the amendment that is necessary. That sentence would then read, "A State officer whose duty it shall be to certify," then right on to the rest of the sentence. It seems to me that will leave the way clear, either by constitutional provision or by statute, to make the appropriate designation either in the Constitution or in the statutes. I don't know whether the Clerk got the suggestion or not, or whether it's acceptable to the movant. I'll read it again. That line after the word "submitted" would read, if my suggestion is agreeable to the Convention, "A State officer whose duty shall be to certify statewide public questions for submission to the people shall certify the question."

CHAIRMAN: That is just a suggestion. Am I correct in so understanding, Delegate Anthony?

ANTHONY: That's correct. I was suggesting that to the Convention and to the movant.

HEEN: I don't think that is a desirable suggestion. To leave it that way, then you will have to provide elsewhere in the Constitution, a provision that a certain State officer shall have that duty. The way I stated it, of course, would require legislation. Instead of using the word "such," the word "a" might be used for the word "the." "A State officer, authorized by law for such a purpose, shall certify the question to be voted on at the first general election following the expiration of such period." Under that language, legislation, of course, will have to be enacted.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, the Chair understands you to amend your own motion so that the word "such" shall be --

HEEN: I withdraw my previous motion and make it this way. Commencing after the word "submitted," have the remainder of that paragraph read as follows, "A State officer, authorized by law for such a purpose, shall certify the question to be voted on at the first general election following the expiration of such period." I move that that amendment be adopted.

CHAIRMAN: Then the Chair takes it, Delegate Heen, that your amendment is an amendment to the first amendment.

HEEN: I withdrew the first amendment.

CHAIRMAN: With the approval of the second?

HEEN: This is a new amendment.

MAU: I second this new motion.

ASHFORD: Perhaps I'm being small minded about this, but it seems to me that we have a provision for certification but we have no provision for putting anything on the ballot.

LOPER: May I ask the maker of the motion for an amendment, if his amendment means that if the legislature should fail to designate someone to do this work, it would not be done? Will you ask the delegate from the fourth district to answer?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura is requesting the floor. Perhaps he is willing to answer that question. If not, I shall recognize you later. Is there anyone, any delegate willing to answer?

LOPER: My question was directed to Delegate Heen.

ANTHONY: That is -- the statement of Delegate Loper is correct. In other words, it would have to be implementing legislation. It was for that reason I cast my suggestion in a form in which it would be a constitutional mandate, rather than requiring any implementing legislation. If you provide for a State officer to certify the question and then elsewhere in the Constitution, presumably in the executive section, you designate that State officer, then you have a self-executing constitutional provision, and no requirement of legislation is necessary to carry it out, other than appropriation.

LOPER: It was my intention to follow up with this suggestion. If it is the desire of this Convention to make constitutional provision for this to take place automatically, then would it not be sufficient to refer this to the Style Committee to insert the words "secretary of state," or the "lieutenant governor," whichever is decided upon after we act on the committee report on executive and powers and functions? Undoubtedly there would be either a secretary of state or a lieutenant governor and if it is the intention of the Convention to provide for this, it would be merely a matter of editing by the Style Committee to write in the name of the officer whose duty it is our intention to - -

ROBERTS: I believe it was the original intention, in the preparation of this article, that the proviso for a constitutional convention be self-executing. The original purpose and the original language provided that the secretary of state shall, so that the thing is kept out of the hands of the legislature. Since we couldn't put in the secretary of state because we didn't know whether the Executive Committee was going to propose one, or a lieutenant governor, it was therefore put in in the form of a State officer, whoever that person be. The language ought to be mandatory. It should not be left to the legislature to authorize such State officer to act.

SHIMAMURA: I was going to suggest that this clause be made as self-executing as possible, and be made certain. As I understand Proposal No. 22, that is Committee Proposal No. 22, my cursory examination of that proposal indicates that a lieutenant governor shall be appointed, or elected, in place of a secretary of state - - rather than a secretary of state. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: There will be a lieutenant governor to be elected by the people.

SHIMAMURA: Therefore, I believe that we would be making this clause entirely self-executing if we name the definite State officer. Therefore, I move that the amendment - - proposed amendment be amended by striking out the words on the fifth line of Section 2, "State officer whose duty it is to certify statewide public questions for submission to the people," and insert in lieu thereof the words "lieutenant governor."

CHAIRMAN: Your amendment is to the effect that the officer whose official title shall be designated as lieutenant governor be inserted?

SHIMAMURA: Yes, lieutenant governor. Make it definite, and then if there should be no lieutenant governor but a secretary of state instead of a lieutenant governor, then it's up to the Style Committee to insert the secretary of state.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

HEEN: I - -

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, please. For the purpose of records, who seconded that motion?

HEEN: I was just going to propose that the State officer shall be the governor, whom we know will be one of the officers to be elected. In other words, as I understand the proposed amendment, that amendment will read, "The governor shall certify the question." I withdraw my motion in favor of the motion made by Delegate Shimamura.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe the intent of the committee was in line with the suggestion made by Doctor Loper, and I believe if it's the intent of this Convention to follow the intent of the committee, then Delegate Shimamura's motion is the proper one now.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the table now is the amendment offered by Delegate Shimamura, that the officer namely, the lieutenant governor, shall be the person to thus certify, and so forth, as provided in the first paragraph of Section 2 of this proposal.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

ANTHONY: Could I have that sentence read as we are now debating it?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will request the mover of that motion to repeat his amendment for the benefit of the delegates.

SHIMAMURA: The second sentence of Section 2, under the proposed amendment, will read as follows:

> If any ten-year period shall elapse during which the question shall not have been submitted, the lieutenant governor shall certify the question, to be voted on at the first general election following the expiration of such period.

ANTHONY: I would like to make a suggestion to the movant. If he would accept the substitution of the word "governor" for "lieutenant governor," then at the appropriate time, after we've found out what the appropriate officer is going to be, we can insert the appropriate secretary of state or lieutenant governor, or whatever executive officer would have that function. It would be a little simpler, I think.

DOI: There seemed to be an expression of opinion on the floor that probably we're not definite as to what State officer should handle the job. In that case, why don't we leave it blank and leave it up to a Style Committee, or when we consider the executive branch, and make it an automatic filling of the blank when we decide so.

SHIMAMURA: I have no great objection to the suggestion made by the gentleman from the fourth district, Delegate Anthony. My only feeling is that the lieutenant governor or the secretary of state is usually the peculiar officer for this function.

CHAIRMAN: Then you refuse to accept the suggestion made by Delegate Anthony, is the Chair correct? Delegate Shimamura?

HEEN: As I understand it, the officer to be given this duty will be the lieutenant governor for the time being, so that last clause then will read, "The lieutenant governor shall certify the question."

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the amendment offered by Delegate Shimamura will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "nay." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: The next paragraph reads:

> If a majority of the ballots cast upon such a question is in the affirmative, delegates shall be chosen at the next regular election, unless the legislature shall provide for election of the delegates at a special election.

Following paragraph:

Any qualified voter of the district concerned shall be eligible to membership in the Convention. The Convention may provide for the filling of any vacancy due to death, resignation or other cause not otherwise provided for by law. The persons selected for such vacant office shall have the qualifications required for the original incumbent.

AKAU: I was wondering, "The Convention," second line there, "The Convention may provide," if an amendment might be added "as soon as possible," if that's legal terminology appropriate to this type of thing. My reason being that "The Convention may provide," there may be a time lapse there which may take six months or whatever it may be, and by putting in "as soon as possible," it kind of ties it down.

CHAIRMAN: What is the amendment you offer, Delegate Akau?

AKAU: The words, "as soon as possible." "The Convention may provide," and insert "as soon as possible." I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that amendment?

HEEN: That second sentence, I don't think is the proper way of treating this matter. It should be that "The governor shall fill any vacancy due to death, resignation or other cause ," the same as we have it now in Act 334, which created this particular Convention. If you leave it to the Convention, that Convention may not reach any agreement as to who should be the succeeding delegate.

WOOLAWAY: I'd just like to ask why the word "may provide" is used instead of "shall provide"?

LEE: Well, there are many points raised on this paragraph. I think all are pertinent and I have another to raise from the discussion back here. The phrase, "Any qualified voter of the district concerned shall be eligible for membership in the Convention." If I recall, there is an article in the judiciary which would prevent the judges of the courts from sitting in or being eligible for the Convention. So that this whole paragraph, I believe, needs re-drafting.

CHAIRMAN: That does not disqualify, but a judge forfeits his right to serve as judge.

FUKUSHIMA: When we dealt with that paragraph—as you know, we have Delegate Wirtz who is a judge from the circuit court on Maui present—we didn't want to accentuate the fact that a judge should not sit as a delegate to the Convention, and if the judiciary felt that he shouldn't, then we thought we'd let the judiciary take care of it.

WIRTZ: On a point of personal privilege, I'd just like to state that this committee was much more considerate of my feelings than the Judiciary Committee.

MIZUHA: I rise to a point of information. When would it be the appropriate time to amend the entire Section 2?

CHAIRMAN: At any time any one of the delegates so desires, Jack Mizuha.

MIZUHA: I propose an amendment to the entire Section 2.

CHAIRMAN: Paragraph?

MIZUHA: "Constitutional conventions may be called as provided by law."

SERIZAWA: I second the motion.

MAU: Speaking on the motion, if this motion is carried and that provision is placed in the Constitution, we may find ourselves in the same position as we have found ourselves in the last 40 or more years on the question of reapportionment. The legislature may do nothing about it, and I think it should be mandatory that the constitutional convention be called every so often. I think that with all the changing times, it's necessary that the people review their Constitution every so often, and if we adopt that amendment, we won't have that opportunity if the legislature will conduct itself as it has in the past on the matter of reapportionment.

MIZUHA: I believe there is another section on amendments to be proposed by the legislature. I believe the question of reapportionment could be taken care of in the legislative article in the Constitution.

TAVARES: I oppose the amendment. The reason for placing this provision in here was, first, we are allowing the legislature to propose a question to any election at any time. Then, to be sure that at every reasonable interval, whether the legislature acts or not, there will be submitted to the people again the question as to whether they want a constitutional convention, we placed this provision in. All that it means is this, if the legislature during any ten-year period doesn't submit the question to the voters, not of amending the Constitution in any particular respect, but, "Do you want a constitutional convention," that's all the people vote on. If the legislature doesn't do that, then the people have an opportunity at ten-year intervals to say whether they want a constitutional convention or not. That's all this thing does, and since we have voted against the initiative method of proposing amendments to the Constitution, we felt that this was a good concession to the people in general, so that they would be sure that at every ten years they had a right to vote on whether they wanted a convention or not, to consider revisions to the Constitution. It seems to me that's a reasonable provision, and if you just leave it up to the legislature as it has been said, there is a possibility that the legislature may not act for 20, 30 or 40 years.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak in opposition to the amendment proposed by the delegate. It seems to me that one of the basic purposes of a constitution is to make provision for the guarantee of certain rights and machinery for operation. It also ought to provide that as times change, the people have an opportunity in convention to decide whether or not the job that was done 10 or 20 or 30 years prior to that time is still the kind of constitution they want. It seems to me that providing language which merely authorizes the legislature to call for such a convention, completely misses the purpose of the original proposal. This proposal mandates, it requires that the people review periodically, in this section, every ten years, to examine their Constitution, to examine the interpretations, and find out whether or not the Constitution at that stage is still the kind of constitution they want. They have a chance to vote on it. If they find it satisfactory, then they vote "No," and the Constitution remains, no constitutional convention is held. But the people ought to have the opportunity, apart from the proviso based on whether the legislature wants it or not, to vote on that question periodically. I therefore hope that the delegates will vote against the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

RICHARDS: After the very simple explanation made by the last two delegates from the fourth district, I'd like to read an excerpt from the Essays of Montaigne. "How is it that our ordinary language, so simple for every other purpose, becomes obscure and unintelligible in a contract or a testament?"

MIZUHA: I believe I have the last say.

CHAIRMAN: You have the right to close on your motion.

MIZUHA: We've heard a lot of talk about a simple constitution, and right in this particular section we are writing in legislation for future State legislatures. Take, for instance, the method in which they will apportion the various delegates to the Constitutional Convention. They refer to Act 334 of the Session Laws of '49. It seems to me rather odd for a constitutional article to contain reference to a specific act of a territorial legislature. If you are not going to trust what our legislature is going to do in the future with reference to revisions, you have given them that power in Section 3 also for amendments to the Constitution. And yet you feel that -- we feel that every ten years that question must be settled by the people by a referendum. I believe that the legislature, if it feels that the question of revision or amendment to the Constitution is important enough, that they cannot handle by the regular sessions of the legislature under Section 3, then they will take it upon themselves to prescribe the method by which we will have a constitutional convention, just as it has taken it upon itself to call this Constitutional Convention for the future State of Hawaii.

So I submit to the delegates here assembled, that if we are going contrary to what we have believed our Constitution should contain by writing in specific legislation of this type with reference to the calling of a constitutional - -

ANTHONY: Point of order. We're not discussing that language at all, at this time. I object to that language also, but we're not discussing that particular language at this time, as I understand it.

TAVARES: Since the speaker in closing has done something unusual in bringing up some new points that he didn't bring up during the original argument, I believe that they should be answered.

In the first place, this provision is meant to be self-executing. We don't want any more situation where, as at present, for 50 years the legislature fails to do something that is supposed to be done. I don't agree with the method of reapportioning of the Organic Act, but I do say that for 50 years, almost, we didn't - - we weren't able to agree on anything. In this constitutional provision, as proposed, in order to make it self-executing, we say to the legislature, "You can provide for the method of apportioning the delegates, but if you don't, then what's going to happen?" Who's going to determine how many delegates are to be elected by the people from each district, if nothing is said in the Constitution about it? We say if the legislature doesn't do that, then you follow Act 334. That's a simple way of saying it. If you want to make it less simple, then you say - - you name the number of delegates from each district, and make it ten times as long.

MIZUHA: A point of order was raised. I asked the chairman whether it was the time for me to propose an amendment and I was informed that this was the time. That's why I introduced my amendment. But if it is felt that this amendment is proper when we reach the last sentence of Section 2, I shall propose it at that time. But if the delegates assembled here feel that they should tell the legislature how to have their constitutional convention every ten years and so forth, well, the question can be decided upon by the votes of the delegates here.

But my main reason for objecting to this detailed provision is the manner in which that constitutional convention should be called, when we have already the machinery written into Section 3 for the legislature to amend or revise our Constitution. I believe we should give the legislature leeway to provide for constitutional conventions by law, and not by constitutional writs here.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mizuha, for your benefit, the Chair will rule that the amendment is in order. The question before the assembly is Section 2 of this proposal. Are you now ready for the question? All those in favor of the amendment offered by Delegate Mizuha from Kauai. The amendment is, Section 2 shall read as follows, "Constitutional Convention may be called as provided by law." Shall the Chair put the question now? All those in favor of that amendment please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." The noes have it.

HOLROYDE: Twelve o'clock. I move this Committee of the Whole rise, report very little progress and ask leave to sit again at 1:30.

NODA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to recess -- no, to rise and report very little progress and beg leave to sit again please signify by saying "aye." Carried.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole will come to order. The last business matter disposed of by the committee is action taken on the amendment moved by Delegate Mizuha. That was an amendment of Section 2. The amendment was defeated. We are still on Section 2 of Proposal No. 9.

HEEN: We are particularly discussing the third sentence of Section 2. We took that up but did not complete our discussion upon it, when the amendment that was offered was -that was made by Delegate Mizuha was submitted. So we were then, at that time, discussing the third sentence of Section 2.

CHAIRMAN: There was an amendment which was carried, Delegate Heen.

HEEN: I don't recall whether that was carried or not.

CHAIRMAN: It was. That was the amendment moved by Delegate Shimamura providing, fourth sentence of first paragraph, Section 2, insertion of the words "lieutenant governor."

HEEN: That was the first sentence. Then we went on to - -

CHAIRMAN: Then the Committee of Revision and Amendments read paragraph two and paragraph three. Then there were several amendments made by you and Delegate Anthony. Amendments were withdrawn. Then there was next amendment by Delegate Mizuha from Kauai, and that amendment was disposed of. It was defeated.

HEEN: That's right, so that we are now, I think, on the third sentence, I mean the third paragraph.

FUKUSHIMA: Third paragraph, yes.

CHAIRMAN: Third paragraph.

HEEN: That's correct. I would suggest as one amendment the following, after the first sentence of that paragraph insert the following sentence: "No officer of the State shall be disqualified from being a member." That would take care of a situation affecting Delegate Wirtz of Maui. Is that all right? I'm waiting for Delegate Wirtz to second my motion.

CHAIRMAN: Will you address the Chair, please?

ROBERTS: Since the delegate is a little embarrassed, I will second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts seconded the motion.

APOLIONA: I'm speaking to the motion. It also includes that the honorable senator from the fourth district to have membership in that convention, too? Officer of the State?

HEEN: If a legislator is an officer of the State, using the term officer in a broad sense, in its broadest sense, then that would also qualify a legislator to serve in a constitutional convention.

TAVARES: In the first place, I think we must remember that we have adopted a judiciary article. We are here indirectly amending it. Let us understand that clearly. If that's what we intend, we are going to have to reconsider and amend that judiciary article. In the second place, while I agree with my colleagues in this Convention that the delegate who is a member of the judiciary has been a most valuable one, I want to point out the other possibility, and that is, we have provided in suffrage and elections that contested elections shall be considered by a court. Now if too many judges run, or even if one judge runs, it may be from a jurisdiction that has a contested election. That isn't necessarily fatal, there will undoubtedly be other judges who will be qualified, but I think that ought to be borne in mind.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kellerman. Would you - -

KELLERMAN: I did not wish to speak to that amendment. I want to propose a different amendment, so I will wait until this is disposed of.

FUKUSHIMA: The amendment as proposed by the delegate from the fourth district seems to be included in the first sentence. "Any qualified voter of the district concerned shall be eligible to membership in the Convention." That is an all-inclusive sentence and our reports show that that was the intent of the committee. I don't believe that the insertion of the amendment will serve any greater purpose than the first sentence that we have in the third paragraph.

ANTHONY: The purpose of the amendment, as I understand it, is to take care of the single exception, which is the prohibition contained in the judiciary article, which says that "No persons shall be appointed to the judiciary who shall hold an office of profit under the State." In other words, they could hold an office which was not an office of profit. I don't think that we ought to make any special exception here for the judiciary as much as I - - high regard as I have of the members of the judiciary, and specifically the delegate from Maui. It seems to me we ought to leave the thing as it stands. We had this debate on the judiciary article, let's let it go at that.

CHAIRMAN: Then you are speaking against the amendment.

ANTHONY: Against the amendment proposed by the delegate, the senior elder statesman from the Senate.

LAI: Before we vote on the question, may I ask Delegate Wirtz a question? Does he intend to run for the next convention? If not, then we can overlook this matter.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Wirtz, you may rise to a point of personal privilege.

WIRTZ: Personal privilege. I move to table the amendment.

H. RICE: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Who seconded that motion, to table the amendment? Delegate Rice, Harold Rice.

RICHARDS: I rise to a point of order. I thought that was not the way we were going to handle amendments in this Committee of the Whole.

CHAIRMAN: State your order, please.

RICHARDS: The point was that this Committee of the Whole has already stated that when they can vote on a particular measure, they vote on it, and the motion to table is out of order.

H. RICE: I withdraw my second to the original motion, so there's nothing before the floor, I understand.

HEEN: Well, to make it much more simple than that, I withdraw the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, you seconded Delegate Heen's motion to amend.

ROBERTS: I seconded the motion of the able senator from Oahu. I will withdraw my second, if the original movant wants to withdraw it. I would like to state, however, that in the passage of the judiciary article, I did not construe the language of the "person holding an office of profit," that you'd regard a person who runs for the constitutional convention having an office of profit. It would seem to me that the judge in the future could run for the convention.

TAVARES: I think perhaps I've been in error. I think the chairman of my committee has probably stated the correct rule. As I recall now, I think that if this provision is allowed to stand, "Any qualified voter of the district shall be eligible," there will be a question of conflict, possible conflict, between this section and the judiciary article. I think our report should make it clear just which interpretation we wish to adopt. If we mean by this that any qualified voter includes a member of the judiciary, then I think that the report of the Committee of the Whole should so state, and that would probably clarify the situation.

HEEN: If it's limited to that, that a judicial officer may be eligible for election to the constitutional convention, then I think it doesn't go far enough, because members of the legislature should be eligible to election to a constitutional convention. As you all know, the members of the legislature, both those who are serving now and who have become ex-members of the legislature, have, I think, contributed quite a great deal towards the deliberations of this Convention.

RICHARDS: That was a point that I was wishing to raise. Why limit it to the legislature? Now, I do not know yet what the proposal of the Executive Powers and Functions Committee is regarding employees of the state and political subdivisions.

ANTHONY: The suggestion made by Delegate Heen, I don't think quite reaches the point, for the simple reason there is no prohibition in the Constitution that a legislator may not hold another office. We have to await the coming in of the legislative article before that is determined. There is a direct prohibition against a judge holding an office of profit, and no manner of words that we will incorporate in any report is going to change that direct prohibition. The way to get about it is - - go about it is to make an express exception for the judiciary, if that's what needs be done, that's what the will of the body is. So far as the legislature is concerned there is no prohibition, there is no problem. The problem only exists with the judiciary at this point.

TAVARES: One more clarifying thought, I hope, and that is this. It was my opinion before the delegates ran for this Convention, that a member of this Convention was not an officer within the meaning of the Organic Act and that, therefore, legislators were eligible, anyhow. But to play safe we asked Congress to pass a law specifically approving that. There is a real question as to whether this type of constitutional convention, which only proposes but does not enact finally any constitutional provision, is an office. The people do the adopting finally. If the Convention is going to adopt the amendment and make it effective by its own adoption, clearly they would be officers. But as it stands now, there's quite a good argument that they are simply an advisory body, and, therefore, are not officers; and, therefore, it would be perfectly proper to put a construction in our Committee of the Whole report which would then indicate that they are not that kind of officers.

HEEN: The provision in the article on the judiciary with reference to this problem reads as follows, "The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the circuit courts shall hold no other office or position of profit under this State or the United States." Therefore, that particular judicial officer would be prohibited from becoming a member of the Constitutional Convention, if those members are going to be paid any compensation. Therefore, you must have a specific exception to take care of this situation. As to legislative officers or members of the legislature, as you all perhaps know, in every article of - - dealing with the legislative branch of government, there is a provision which prohibits a legislator from holding any other office under the State. And that's in the Organic Act, so far as the Territory is concerned.

TAVARES: I don't like to disagree with the senior statesman from the fourth district, but I, too, have been in government a long time, and I know that there were members of legislative committees or comissions created by law that went to Washington in the years of this Territory, and they were held by the attorney general not to be officers within the meaning of the Organic Act, although they had a function something like ours. They went to Congress under an act passed by the legislature, with expenses paid by law, and moved and asked Congress to pass certain legislation for us. And the attorney general of that time held that they were not officers within the meaning of the Organic Act. That exactly is a parallel that I submit between that situation and this, because the members of this Convention are performing no sovereign function. They are performing an advisory function which does not become final until a ratification by the voters of this State.

LEE: I don't care what the attorney generals in the past have ruled. The matter of a thousand dollars is compensation for profit, as far as I can see or read the English language.

ASHFORD: I'm in accord with Representative Lee. I also have served—Delegate Lee—I also have served in the attorney general's office and my experience there is that one attorney general very often overrules the opinions of an earlier attorney general.

TAVARES: I'd like it to be known that I was not quoting my own opinions.

MAU: Why don't the lawyers take a recess. Maybe we can get further.

DELEGATE: Second the motion to recess.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we recess, until called by the Chair. All those in favor of that motion please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. The noes have it.

ROBERTS: It seems to me that the problem which is really before us is whether or not we want, in future constitutional conventions, to have all individuals in the community run for office, and not discriminate against individuals merely because they are members of the judiciary or members of the legislature. It seems to me that we can state in the Constitution that we do not regard a delegateship to a constitutional convention as an office for profit, and it seems to me that as long as our intent is clear, we can make such a provision. I personally can see no objection to having members of the judiciary run, I can see no objection to having members of the legislature run, as long as we get delegates who represent the community at large, to write a constitution or to revise one. I, therefore, would like to suggest that in the report of our Committee of the Whole there be the sense of the committee that it is not the intent to deprive individuals who want to run for delegate to a constitutional convention, that we do not deny them that right merely because they hold an office, elected office, or an office for profit.

ANTHONY: You can't put any words in the report that are going to change the expressed language of the article. If it is the will of the Convention that judges shall sit in future constitutional conventions, it can be done very simply, simply by prefacing before this sentence, "Notwithstanding any other provision in this Constitution, any qualified voter shall," etc. If that's the will of the body, it's very simple, and that will include all officers of government.

ROBERTS: If the delegate will make that motion, I will second it.

ANTHONY: I will make the motion that the sentence reading "Any qualified voter" in Section 2, page two of the proposal be amended by inserting the words, before the word "any" "Notwithstanding any other provision in this Constitution to the contrary."

ROBERTS: I'll second that.

ASHFORD: May I speak very briefly on that? It seems to me that that is a very dangerous provision. We are setting up a new Constitution here with new courts, new everything, but when we have an established court and have a constitutional convention to amend the Constitution, the delegates will see what can happen. Suppose there are a lot of judges who are members of this Convention, and they were overridden in some particular, the construction of that Constitution and its amendments would be entirely in their hands and they might very well proceed with a background of bias in the construction of those particular provisions.

CHAIRMAN: For the benefit of - - Delegate Roberts, were you the one who seconded that amendment?

ROBERTS: Yes, I'd like to speak in support of the motion, if we're going to discuss it.

CHAIRMAN: You may proceed.

ROBERTS: It seems to me that the job of writing a constitution was a job which required the best that we could get in the community, of individuals who ran for office even though they might personally have liked not to run; people who normally don't run for office, who might be called in to do a job. The same limitations, it seems to me, which apply to the people who ran for this office will apply to individuals in the future. It seems to me that any person who has something to contribute and wants to spend the time and energy to run for office, to engage in such a project, it seems to me ought to be given opportunity to do so. I don't think, for example, that people who do run are going to hold grudges subsequently because they didn't happen to get the kind of thing they wanted, but might have a different notion or idea as to what should have gone into the Constitution. I, therefore, suggest that we get the best qualified people to run in the future, and that should permit any qualified voter who feels that he has something to contribute to run for that office. I'd like to get a show of support in favor of that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? The amendment offered is the addition of the following words, "Notwithstanding any other provision in this Constitution to the contrary," before the first sentence of the third paragraph of Section 2, which begins as follows, "Any qualified voter."

KELLERMAN: Could I ask a question before we vote on that amendment? What would this do to the provision that House Bill 49 as amended now requires concerning the Communist oath? Is that to go in the Constitution? And if so, does the phrase "Notwithstanding any other provision in this Constitution to the contrary, any qualified voter is eligible for this Convention"? They certainly are eligible, they are qualified voters.

CHAIRMAN: Have you completed?

KELLERMAN: Yes, I'm asking the question of whomever will answer that point?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony has offered to answer the question.

ANTHONY: It seems to me that if we're going to have that incorporated in the Constitution, which we apparently are, there should be added to the qualifications of officers, including persons who will be members of any future State constitutional convention, the requirement that they take the oath. Then, reading House Bill 49 as amended, together with any qualification of officers and this section, it would be perfectly clear, then, I think, that any delegate would have to take the oath prescribed, and no person who couldn't take the oath would be eligible.

CHAIRMAN: Has the explanation, Delegate Kellerman, answered your question?

KELLERMAN: I gather from Mr. Anthony's statement that we will need a further amendment to this provision, to write in a further qualification, then.

CHAIRMAN: It so appears from his explanation.

KELLERMAN: Well, on the basis of that, then I think we could go ahead on this.

ROBERTS: I suggest that perhaps the language of the article itself provides a partial answer to the question previously raised. The two paragraphs below in this section, there's a proviso that the convention shall determine its own organization and rules of procedure. "It shall be the sole judge of the qualifications of its members." It seems to me that if the convention decides that one of the qualifications of membership is not being a member of the Communist Party, then the convention can so act. Or, if it requires that an affadavit be filed, the conventions shall so specify. It doesn't seem to me that we need any further qualifications.

KELLERMAN: It seems to me that that would run the future convention into the same embarrassing and difficult situation which we've had to face. It would be far better to have a person who could not take that oath disqualified before he becomes a member of the convention than force the convention to adopt a rule to - - along that line, and then take action accordingly.

TAVARES: I think there's enough confusion now that's instigated by some of us so that we ought to postpone this for a little while. I move to defer it till the end of the calendar, unless sooner moved on, this particular sentence.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion to defer?

HEEN: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Will the second be recognized by Chair?

HEEN: Yes, I seconded that motion.

KAM: Before we take action on this, I just want to find out, as it now stands, who is eligible to become a delegate in any convention, in this constitutional convention.

CHAIRMAN: You are out of order, Delegate Kam. There is a motion to defer.

KAM: I was wondering - - I was just asking a simple question.

CHAIRMAN: Would you care to reply to that question, Delegate Tavares?

TAVARES: As I understand it, as it reads now, any qualified voter of the district which is going to elect the particular delegate would be eligible to run for membership in the convention.

KAM: I was just worrying about those judges. I was wondering, wouldn't it be much simpler to reconsider Section 7 of the judiciary report, and add a clause to that?

TAVARES: I think that's a matter now which is out of order. I think we can take it up with the delegate off the record, and perhaps work that out together.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair had ruled that Delegate Kam was out of order, but the Chair did extend him special privilege.

KAM: Personal privilege, thank you.

CHAIRMAN: Are you all ready for the motion to defer action on this particular paragraph three of Section 2? All those in favor of that motion to defer please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." The ayes have it.

HEEN: We are now discussing the second sentence of this same paragraph. I move to amend that second sentence to read as follows, "The governor shall fill any vacancy in such membership."

LEE: For the purposes of giving the elder statesman an opportunity to explain the amendment, I second the motion.

HEEN: You don't have to say whether that vacancy occurred by death, resignation or any other cause. If a vacancy exists, it exists, and that vacancy should be filled by the governor. It's the same as we have now in the present act which created this Convention.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Lee, do you now second that motion?

LEE: I already seconded the motion.

CHAIRMAN: You qualified that statement by saying if there was an explanation or something to that effect.

LEE: No, no, no.

CHAIRMAN: I wasn't sure whether you were satisfied with it.

LEE: I beg to correct you. The second was made and then there was a condition subsequent.

NIELSEN: I'd like to further amend that to indicate that it shall be from the same elective district, so the governor has to appoint the - - fill the vacancy from the very same district in which it occurred.

FUKUSHIMA: That is taken care of by the next sentence, the following sentence, Delegate Nielsen.

WOOLAWAY: I'd like to make a simple amendment, change the word "may" to "shall."

CHAIRMAN: Are you moving an amendment to the amendment made by Delegate Heen?

WOOLAWAY: "The governor shall." Yes.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment reads, "The governor shall fill any vacancy."

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: That is the first amendment. That has already been seconded by Delegate Lee. The Chair understood the word to be "shall." There's only one amendment at this present time, that amendment was moved by Delegate Heen, "The governor shall fill any vacancy."

H. RICE: Question, please.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of that amendment please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried. The ayes have it.

WIST: In the next sentence, there is one qualification that cannot be met, and that is the qualification of election.

CHAIRMAN: That is the last sentence of paragraph three. Is that correct, Delegate Wist?

WIST: That is correct. In other words, one qualification for the person who is to be a delegate to a convention is election; that is a qualification that cannot be made when the person is appointed by the governor.

TAVARES: I think, carried to its extreme, that is correct, but I believe that is the kind of a provision that can be explained in our committee report to mean the qualifications preceding election. Otherwise, you're going to get into a much more lengthy discourse about just what those qualifications are. This is a simpler method, and I would suggest that we leave that to the Committee of the Whole report to explain that that's what we mean.

WIST: The reason I raised that question is that that became quite an issue in connection with the Silva case. That question was raised. They said that he was qualified and that his successor was not qualified, and that has been an issue. That's why I raised it. I think it could be cleared up in the language here.

ASHFORD: I'd like to amend the amendment before the house by adding to it the amendment of the last sentence to read as follows, "Only a person eligible for election in the first instance shall be selected."

TAVARES: Then you run into the question as to whether, if he became a voter afterwards, he is eligible. You see, you're running into all kinds of if's and and's when you get into details.

SHIMAMURA: May I suggest this amendment which shall take in the last two sentences of the third paragraph of Section 2.

CHAIRMAN: Last two sentences, did you say?

SHIMAMURA: Yes. In other words, the one under discussion and the prior one. I think the delegate from the fourth district, Judge Heen, amended by stating that, "The governor shall fill any vacancy." Add on to that "by appointment of an elector of the same representative district, precinct, or combination of precincts." Then you've got everything, the qualifications of the man, he must be an elector, and he must be of the same district or precinct from which the prior member was elected. You have both qualifications filled in then.

NIELSEN: Was that a motion?

SHIMAMURA: I make it in form of a motion. I so move.

NIELSEN: I'll second it.

CHAIRMAN: Will you, for the benefit of the delegates, restate that amendment, Delegate Shimamura? And slowly, please.

SHIMAMURA: Yes. Add at the end of the previous section as amended by Judge Heen the following, "by appointment of an elector of the same representative district, precinct, or combination of precincts." The reason I add on "precinct or combination of precincts" is this. As I look down further, Act 334 of the Session Laws of 1949 is embodied in the next paragraph; therefore, it contemplates the election of convention delegates from a representative district or a precinct or a combination of precincts. You don't just elect delegates from the representative district merely. That's the reason.

LEE: Wouldn't the exclusion of the word "representative district" and just the word "district" include those three sets of circumstances that can be caused?

SHIMAMURA: I think the report should show that in the word "district" is included representative district, precinct, combination of precincts or any other such designated subdivisions.

ASHFORD: Does not that language that I suggested, will it not cover that? One eligible for election in the first instance?

LEE: In other words, Mr. Shimamura's motion would have the second sentence in that paragraph read as follows, "The governor shall fill any vacancy by appointment of an elector of the same district." Is that right?

CHAIRMAN: "The same representative district."

LEE: No, "representative" has been excluded from this motion.

CHAIRMAN: That was the original amendment offered by Delegate Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: I'm willing to accept that change.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, deleting the word "representative."

SHIMAMURA: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: So that it would read, "of the same district."

LEE: "From the same district."

CHAIRMAN: "From the same district."

TAVARES: Now, we have an illustration. It's necessary, now, to explain this in a report. That's all right for the new amendment, but it's not all right to explain the original committee's amendment in a report. The difference between twiddle-dee-dee and twiddle-dee-dum.

LEE: Has that motion been seconded?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, that motion has been duly seconded by Delegate Nielsen.

HEEN: I would suggest this, "The governor shall fill any vacancy in such membership by the appointment of a qualified voter of the district concerned."

CHAIRMAN: Will you restate that suggestion again?

HEEN: You will note in the first sentence it says, "Any qualified voter of the district concerned shall be eligible to membership in the convention." Using the same phrase, "The governor shall fill any vacancy in such membership by the appointment of a qualified voter of the district concerned."

TAVARES: I think that's satisfactory.

HEEN: I'm glad to hear the distinguished ex-attorney general say that.

NIELSEN: Question. Would that be a representative district?

CHAIRMAN: The word "representative" has been left out. It should mean any district.

WIST: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Now, the Chair would like to clarify the matter before the assembly. I understood that there was a motion first made by Delegate Heen to the effect that the governor shall fill any vacancy. In restating your motion at this time, you repeated that statement. I have been wondering - -

HEEN: With the consent of those who seconded my previous motion, I withdraw that motion and I now make a new motion altogether. That the second sentence - -

LEE: Point of order. I think the record will show that the previous amendment proposed by Senator Heen was passed, so the proper action would be to reconsider the action of the Convention, so that the new motion could be made, and I so move that we reconsider our action.

HEEN: And I so second.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

HEEN: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to reconsider the previous action taken in connection with sentence two of paragraph three will signify by saying "aye." All those opposed say "no." The ayes have it.

HEEN: I now withdraw that motion which is now up for reconsideration, with the consent of Delegate Lee who seconded it. The delegate approves of the withdrawal of that motion. Now, a new motion altogether. I move that the second sentence of paragraph three be amended to read as follows: "The governor shall fill any vacancy in such membership by the appointment of a qualified voter of the district concerned."

WIST: I second the motion for amendment.

TAVARES: I move to amend the motion further by adding "and that the next sentence be deleted."

CHAIRMAN: Which is the last sentence of paragraph three?

HEEN: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN: Am I correct, Delegate Tavares? You are referring to the last sentence of paragraph three?

HEEN: You can combine it in this section, or you - - I mean in this motion that I made, or you can make a separate motion later on.

TAVARES: Well, that's two motions. Let's save one motion, anyway. It's the same paragraph in which the other amendment occurs.

HEEN: O.K., I accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: You ready for the question? All those in favor of that amendment moved by Delegate Heen and duly seconded please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

ANTHONY: I have an amendment to the first sentence of that section, that paragraph. It presently reads, "Any qualified voter of the district concerned." I would amend that to read as follows - -

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, please. That has been already amended.

ANTHONY: No, it hasn't. It was deferred.

CHAIRMAN: Oh, yes, that has been deferred.

ANTHONY: I suggest this, "Notwithstanding any other provision of this Constitution to the contrary, any qualified voter of the district concerned who takes the oath prescribed by this Constitution shall be eligible." Now that does two things. First, it takes care of our friend the judge; and second, it makes a condition procedent that any person who is going to run for the office of delegate will have to take the requisite oath. I think that would cure the difficulty other than the difficulty of the delegate from Molokai.

ASHFORD: Is there any required oath?

TAVARES: I'd like to answer that, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: One moment. Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: The debate has proceeded upon the basis that this Constitution will incorporate in it the oath that has been referred to in the newspapers as required by H.R. 49, and that was the purpose of Delegate Kellerman's question, and, therefore, that is the purpose of the suggested amendment.

ASHFORD: I did not understand that H.R. 49 required an oath.

TAVARES: I think I can explain this. If the members will look at Committee Proposal No. 24, which is proposed by the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law, we have incorporated what H.R. 49 requires, and Section 1 provides that, "No person who advocates or who belongs to any party, organization or association which advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the government of this State or of the United States of America shall be qualified to hold any public office of trust or profit or any public employment under this Constitution." There's no oath mentioned there. It's a question of fact. I, therefore, still think we ought to defer this matter a little further.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. What was that committee proposal or report?

TAVARES: Committee Proposal No. 24.

HEEN: Attached to what report, if I may ask?

TAVARES: I don't have it at the moment, but it's in the list of proposals. It's easy to find it there.

H. RICE: The "Supreme Court" is all out of order.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

H. RICE: In the first place, he should have moved for reconsideration.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. Your point is well taken. Unless there is a motion to reconsider action taken on the first sentence of paragraph three, Section 2, we shall proceed with the next paragraph of Section 2. That would bring us up to paragraph four on page two of Proposal 9.

KELLERMAN: When I arose a few moments ago, at the same time as Senator Heen arose to discuss paragraph three, I had wanted to bring to the attention of the body a proposed amendment to Section 2, which we had passed. The second line of Section 2, "The legislature may submit to the people at any time the question," is the way it reads now. I would propose to amend that to read, "The legislature may submit to the people at any general or special election."

CHAIRMAN: That is the first sentence, is it not?

KELLERMAN: That's the second - - the first sentence of Section 2. "The legislature may submit to the people at any general or special election the question."

HEEN: I rise to a point of order. I thought we were discussing another paragraph altogether. It would seem to me that we ought to complete our discussion on that particular paragraph which is now under discussion.

KELLERMAN: I understood we had finished discussing paragraph three except for the deferred sentence, and were going to take up four. We had not yet taken up four, so I thought it would be in order to suggest an amendment in the preceding paragraph. If it should be done at the end of this section, I'm perfectly willing to do so.

CHAIRMAN: The explanation given by Delegate Kellerman meets with the approval of the Chair, unless the amendment or discussion which you, Delegate Heen, will pertain directly to paragraph three.

HEEN: What is the status of paragraph three at the present time?

CHAIRMAN: That has already been amended by the motion which you have made, seconded by Delegate Lee.

HEEN: No, I mean as to the first sentence of paragraph three.

CHAIRMAN: The action was deferred on that, and the motion to reconsider failed. No, a point of order was raised by Delegate Rice that unless there was a motion to reconsider the first sentence of paragraph three, we should not take action on that. The committee has already voted to defer action on the first sentence of that paragraph, and Delegate Kellerman is now referring to the first sentence of Section 2, which sentence has never been amended. The amendment offered is, as the Chair understands the addition, deletion of the word "time" and, in lieu thereof, the addition of the word "general or special election."

TAVARES: Since the delegate is out of order, since we've already approved this paragraph, I move to reconsider the first paragraph so that the delegate may present her proposed amendment.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to reconsider - -

BRYAN: I don't believe that we've approved that paragraph. We're still working on Section 2. One part of Section 2 was deferred. The rest of it is all under consideration in proper order.

CHAIRMAN: I think the question raised by Delegate Bryan is correct. We were not taking said Section 2 by paragraphs. There has been no formal action on the first paragraph. The only amendment made was to the second sentence of paragraph one, Section 2, and so the amendment moved by Delegate Kellerman, is in order without the necessity of reconsideration.

TAVARES: We amended a sentence of the first paragraph - -

CHAIRMAN: Second sentence.

TAVARES: Of the first paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, but not the first sentence of the second paragraph.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe I suggested at the very beginning this morning that we take it paragraph by paragraph, and I believe the first paragraph was approved as amended. We can certainly come back and take the whole section at one time, but I think we are confusing the thing. Delegate Kellerman could have amended the first sentence when we took up the first paragraph. We'll go along for anything that will speed up this matter. I think we are just confusing it by bringing up points of order.

KELLERMAN: I offered, if the Convention preferred, to take up the proposed amendment after having gone through the entire section. That's perfectly acceptable to me. My question was whether to bring it up now or bring it up at the end.

FUKUSHIMA: A motion to reconsider has been put and seconded. We should reconsider it without any other interruptions.

CHAIRMAN: For your information, Delegate Fukushima, the Chair is of the understanding that the first paragraph was not adopted as amended.

NIELSEN: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: And so it would be in order for Delegate Kellerman to make that amendment to the first sentence of the first paragraph, Section 2.

LAI: I second her motion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion to the amendment offered to the first sentence of Section 2?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment, please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." The ayes have it.

Now is there further amendment to paragraph three of Section 2?

SHIMAMURA: I wonder if the word "people" on the second line of Section 2, in other words, "The legislature may submit to the people," should not read "to the qualified voters." I raise that query to bring it to a discussion. I move that the word "people" on the second line of Section 2 be deleted, and the words "qualified voters" be inserted in its stead.

KAM: I second that motion.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask the learned judge if he would accept the word "electorate"?

SHIMAMURA: I certainly will, Mr. Bryan.

CHAIRMAN: Electorate?

LEE: Is that in place of "qualified voters"?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, Delegate Lee.

FUKUSHIMA: I think we're wasting a lot of time on style alone. That doesn't go to the substance. We all know in this Committee of the Whole that "people" means "voters." If the Committee on Style wants to change it to "electorate" or "voters," let them do it. We're just wasting a lot of time.

KELLERMAN: May I ask a question? Just what is the language of the proposed amendment now?

CHAIRMAN: As the Chair understands it, Delegate Kellerman, the first sentence will read as follows:

> The legislature may submit to the electorate at any general or special election the question, "Shall there be a convention to propose a revision of or amendment to the Constitution."

KELLERMAN: I will accept that amendment to my amendment but it's been called to my attention that in my language that I suggested, that "any general or special election," that I am indirectly authorizing a special election for the purpose of presenting the question. That was what I was trying to get away from in the use of the language "at any time." I therefore would like to change my amendment to read just "at any general election."

CHAIRMAN: You'll have to ask for reconsideration. A vote has been taken on your first amendment.

LEE: I think if Delegate Kellerman would wait until we act on the amendment proposed and seconded by Delegate Shimamura, then we can take it up. You'll have two amendments on the same sentence to be voted on.

CHAIRMAN: The first amendment moved by Delegate Kellerman has been voted on favorably already.

TAVARES: We are running into the pilikia we find when we try to take a matter up piece-meal without reading the rest of the section. Now this section was provided with very great care to provide for both special and general elections. If the delegates will read further down, they will find that we have a different proportionate vote, or different kind of a vote for a special election than for a general one, which is designed to discourage special elections. Now, without taking up that section, we are going to indirectly knock it out. I think it's dangerous to take it up that way. Let's wait till we get there, and then decide whether we want to eliminate special elections entirely.

WIRTZ: I move for a five-minute recess, so the boys can get together.

CHAIRMAN: Five-minute recess.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Now that you had the opportunity of conferring with each other, the Chair would appreciate it very much if someone would state in a compendious manner, the problem before the assembly. The amendment before the assembly is, the word "people" be deleted and in lieu thereof, the word "electorate" be inserted.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Are you all ready for the question? All those in favor of that amendment please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." The ayes have it.

FUKUSHIMA: Shall we proceed with paragraph four?

CHAIRMAN: We shall now proceed with paragraph four.

LOPER: I'd like to ask a member of the committee whether this next paragraph is necessary in view of the last paragraph of this Section 2, which reads: "The provisions of this section shall be self-executing, but the legislature shall appropriate money and may enact legislation to facilitate its operation." My question, to repeat, is this, is the reason for paragraph four to make it truly self-executing? Is there danger that it might not be so without paragraph four?

FUKUSHIMA: I'll attempt to answer the question. We included paragraph four to be sure that if a convention is called by the people, and if the legislature fails to act, then we will have at least something to go by. We have certainly in the last paragraph stated that the provisions of this section shall be self-executing. However, if the legislature fails to do anything, and fails to provide what sort of a convention we will have, what sort of - - how the delegates are to be elected, that in the absence of that, we will have Act 334 to go by. That's the reason why that's included, I believe.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee. I note in that paragraph that he just read, "the legislature shall appropriate the money." So that if the legislature refuses to act at all, as seems to be the reason for this previous section, where's the money going to come from to have the election anyway?

FUKUSHIMA: There you have in your last paragraph, "Provisions of this section shall be self-executing, but the legislature shall appropriate money and may enact legislation to facilitate its operation." The legislature is mandated to put up the money for the convention. That's self-executing.

ANTHONY: That's not an adequate answer of the question. You may mandate the legislature, but how are you going to make them dish out the money? That's the question. The answer is you can't do it.

FUKUSHIMA: Maybe that's why we need the initiative here.

CHAIRMAN: What is your pleasure as to paragraph number four of this Section 2?

LOPER: I move for the adoption of paragraph four.

APOLIONA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Apoliona seconded the motion.

BRYAN: I wonder if that motion is in order. Since we moved the adoption of this section in order to discuss it, can't we move on to paragraph five, and move the adoption of the whole section? That's the way we have been doing. Isn't that correct?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

BRYAN: I would ask the delegate to withdraw his motion.

CHAIRMAN: Would you be willing to withdraw that motion? Delegate Loper, would you be willing?

LOPER: I'm willing, but I don't understand the reason.

ROBERTS: May I suggest that in other articles that we take up, as in this section that has a number of paragraphs, that as we move from the first to the last paragraph and make amendments, that we tentatively agree to those paragraphs without adopting them, and then when we complete all the paragraphs, then we act on the entire section. It seems to me that there's no need to adopt each paragraph separately if we understand that we tentatively agree to them until we've gone through all of the paragraphs in each of the sections. I think if we follow that procedure, then we can move along pretty easily.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair felt that the procedure was slightly changed in discussing this Proposal No. 9 in view of the fact that Delegate Porteus made the suggestion to the effect that the amendment to this Proposal No. 9 was to be considered after having adopted the whole Proposal No. 9.

LOPER: In order to get this matter rolling, and in view of the fact that there is no amendment offered to paragraph four, I would like to withdraw my motion to adopt paragraph four and move that we tentatively agree to paragraph four.

ROBERTS: Second that.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of that motion please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

HEEN: While it is the understanding that this agreement is only tentative, I think we ought to have some discussion on that paragraph four. I don't like to see in any constitution of a sovereign state that any reference should be made to a statute of the territory, any session laws, statutes contained in the session laws of the Territory of Hawaii. Some other more general language might be employed in that particular paragraph.

FUKUSHIMA: As far as the chairman of the committee is concerned, and the committee itself, I believe we will not object to any other language being placed in there, but we felt there should be something specific; and in order to be specific, unless we referred to some specific act, we may have to draw an entire set of rules which will make the Constitution longer than we want to. I believe Mr. Tavares has an adequate argument for specifying Act 334 in the proposal. That was, I believe, his idea.

SHIMAMURA: I think the chairman of the committee is correct on that. Otherwise, you'll be having a very lengthy provision.

ANTHONY: The objection is referring to session laws in the Constitution, and the purpose, of course, of referring to session laws was to get certainty. Now, we can get the same certainty without referring to the session laws by simply referring to the Convention that is ordaining and adopting this Constitution. I think if the committee will take that under consideration and bring us back a revision of this section, the language can be found that will accomplish their purpose, namely, have certainty as to the delegation, and not refer to any session laws in here.

PORTEUS: Do I understand that the idea is that they can have the same certainty without any change really in substance? If so, then Style Committee can handle it. Let's leave it to Style if we agree that there is no change in substance.

WOOLAWAY: In light of this confusion, I would appreciate very much if Delegate St. Sure from Maui will escort the Honorable Senator Ansai from Maui to the rostrum.

KING: There have been several suggestions from the floor, but no one has made a motion that the Committee of the Whole can act on. The last suggestion was that the Committee on Style might change the language. Well, I think it would be in order to make some suggestions that the Committee on Style could act on. I would suggest for the committee report, rather than as an amendment at this time, that the language, "as specified by Act 334 of the Session Laws of Hawaii, 1949," be expressed in terms of this existing Convention; in other words, "as nearly as practicable, in accordance with the organization of the Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950." That seems to fit. That can be made as an amendment or could be adopted as instructions to the Committee on Style, whichever the Committee of the Whole desires.

HEEN: Whatever is done in amending this particular paragraph will have to be done very carefully, because if Oahu is going to be divided into nine districts where they have now only two representative districts, what are you going to do about electing delegates-at-large? How many to run at large and how many from combination precincts and so on down the line? How are you going to apply that law which created this Constitutional Convention? It would be very difficult to handle.

KING: If I may answer that query. The first clause answers that, "unless the legislature shall otherwise provide." The matter is open to the legislature in any case. We're arguing about something that doesn't really amount to a great deal, except that I do agree where the statement was made that no reference should be made to a specific act of the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii. But it says "unless the legislature shall. . . provide, the delegates to such convention shall consist of the same number, and be elected from the same area, as nearly as practicable, as the Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950."

CHAIRMAN: Is that a motion, Delegate King?

KING: Well, several of the delegates have suggested it be a motion, so I do move that the last phrase of this paragraph be changed to read—I can't get the exact words to tie it in, but—"Unless the legislature shall otherwise provide, the delegates to such convention shall consist of the same number and be elected from the same area, as nearly as practicable, as the Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950."

CHAIRMAN: You ready for the question?

KAM: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion please - -

LOPER: I have a suggestion, and I don't know, perhaps it should be an amendment to the amendment just made. It might be preferable to say that "Unless the legislature shall provide otherwise, the delegates to such convention shall consist of the same number as the number of representatives and senators in the State legislature and shall be elected in a similar manner."

ROBERTS: We discussed that problem, but since that question is going to be a pretty difficult one when we get to it, we just thought it would be better if we held off on the question of reapportionment at this stage.

LEE: I second the motion made by Delegate Loper.

KING: I didn't hear Delegate Loper make it as a motion, but if he has offered it as a motion, I'm perfectly willing to accept it in order to combine the two into one motion, if Delegate Loper will restate the language.

LOPER: I move for an amendment, that, "The delegates to such convention shall consist of a number equal to the representatives and senators in the State legislature and shall be elected in a similar manner."

FUKUSHIMA: If you want the 76 delegate convention, it's perfectly all right with the committee.

TAVARES: There's one other thing. Does that eliminate the provision, "Unless the legislature shall otherwise provide"?

CHAIRMAN: That is retained.

TAVARES: I see.

CHAIRMAN: Now, Delegate King, did you accept that amendment which was to be offered by Delegate Loper?

KING: Yes, but I would like the whole paragraph reread, so that we'll all understand just what it is. As I understand it, it cuts out any reference to the Constitutional Convention then. May the Clerk read the whole paragraph, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Will the Clerk read the - -

CLERK:

> Unless the legislature shall otherwise provide, the delegates to such convention shall consist of the same number and be elected from the same areas, as nearly as practicable, as the Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950.

CHAIRMAN: No, there was a subsequent amendment.

CLERK: Oh, then Delegate Loper's amendment was:

> Unless the legislature shall provide otherwise, the delegates to such convention shall consist of the same number as the number of representatives and senators in the State legislature and shall be elected in a similar manner.

KING: The language should be "shall otherwise provide" instead of "otherwise shall provide." I withdraw my motion to give precedence to Delegate Loper's motion and second his motion.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, please.

KING: I feel that language is better.

CHAIRMAN: But you would like to retain the expression "as the Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950"?

KING: No, I believe that the language offered by Delegate Loper is even better than that, and the reference then will be based on the organization of the legislature of the State of Hawaii.

KELLERMAN: May I ask a question? "And shall be elected in the same manner," it seems to me would mean a bipartisan election. It would mean a political election with primaries and general election with delegates running from - - representing Democratic and Republican parties. It seems to me that that is not what we would want for the next constitutional convention, and perhaps that language should be "from the same areas" or some such language as is used in the existing paragraph, but not "elected in the same manner."

ANTHONY: I move we defer this section. Let the committee work on this and bring us back a new draft.

CASTRO: Second the motion.

HEEN: I think the matter should be deferred so that the technicians can work on it.

CHAIRMAN: Who seconded that motion to defer?

CASTRO: I did. In seconding that, I might point out that the proposed amendment completely changes the sense of the paragraph as brought in by this committee with unanimous consent, with unanimous agreement. The thought of the committee was to pattern the representation of the constitutional convention upon the pattern set down very successfully by this Convention, and patterning after whatever the State legislature may develop into is not our idea. So in deferring this thing, I'd like to remind those who are working on this draft, that the unanimous agreement of the committee was that we should pattern the representation in future constitutional conventions after this present Convention, and reference to whatever State legislature you set up is going to defeat that idea.

KING: That might be very true, but nonetheless, the opening clause controls the whole paragraph. "Unless the legislature shall otherwise provide," which leaves it wide open. The committee may want to have tied it down a little bit, but the opening paragraph left the door wide open.

CHAIRMAN: Are you all - -

KING: I am completely in favor of deferring action until the committee may have an opportunity to bring in new language following the sense of this committee discussion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to defer action on paragraph four of this Section 2, will please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." The ayes have it. Paragraph four is deferred to the committee for improvement in language.

FUKUSHIMA: Is my understanding this, that this has been deferred so that the committee, which committee do you mean, this committee here sitting as a whole or the Committee on Revision and Amendments?

CHAIRMAN: Will the mover of the motion clarify that?

ANTHONY: I intended to have the standing committee that brought in this proposal. That was my intention.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has so understood.

FUKUSHIMA: As far as the committee is concerned, we feel that this is the language. The Committee of the Whole wants to change it, they can properly amend it. The language is clear enough; the substance is clear enough; the intent is clear enough. If they want something else, let the Committee of the Whole do it. They have proper machinery for it.

CHAIRMAN: I think since the question has been specifically raised by the chairman of the Committee on Revision, Amendments, etc., there should be a specific motion with reference to this deferment.

H. RICE: I should recommend that the chairman of the Committee of the Whole appoint a committee of five, a sub-committee of five, to bring an amended paragraph to take the place of section - - paragraph four.

CHAIRMAN: Is that a motion?

J. TRASK: Point of order, there is nothing on the floor at present. We've already deferred the matter.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, but the point was not too clear what it was to be - -

J. TRASK: Well, a proper motion was to reconsider the action.

CHAIRMAN: No, the motion to defer carried with it direction that it be referred to a committee. The mover of the motion explained that by saying that he intended the same to go to the committee which proposed this Committee Proposal No. 9. Question has been - - Issue has been taken by the chairman of this particular committee. The Chair feels that a specific motion clarifying that would be in order.

TAVARES: I think the proper thing to do is to simply take the sense of this Convention. Now on the point - - and there are some of us who will volunteer to draw the amendment, but not as a committee. I don't think this group should instruct our committee, which came out with the unanimous report, to do something it didn't want to do. If some of us want to volunteer to help somebody else draw an amendment, even if we don't agree with it, that's all right. If we can have the sense of this Convention so we're not doing a useless act, and if that's what the Convention wants, it wants to put in this idea, I think we should take a vote on it and then there'll be some of us willing to volunteer to put it into language. Now I therefore move to reconsider our action to defer for the purpose of taking that concensus so we'll know where we're going.

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Who seconded that motion?

CLERK: Holroyde.

LARSEN: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It was duly seconded.

PORTEUS: Has the motion to reconsider been put?

CHAIRMAN: It will be put unless you have - - All those in favor of the motion to reconsider action taken on this paragraph four will please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "nay." Carried by two-thirds.

KING: If the paragraph is still before the Convention, I move now that we merely defer action on it. I quite agree it should not be returned to the Committee on Amendments and Revision. That's practically shelving it, but the point is that it needs to be redrawn. We simply defer action on it, and proceed to the next paragraph. Is that correct?

TAVARES: No, my idea was in order - - to enable those of us who want to draw an amendment to know what this Convention wants, we ought to take a concensus, an informal vote to see whether a majority of this Convention prefers the distribution of this Convention or prefers the distribution of the total of the members of the legislature appointed. Then when we know that point, we'll know what kind of an amendment to draw. I move, therefore, that it is the concensus of this Convention that we adopt the Convention pattern, just for the sake of bringing this to a head.

CHAIRMAN: When you say "Convention pattern" do you mean the Constitutional Convention of 1950?

TAVARES: Yes. That's to bring it to a head.

WIRTZ: I second the motion.

HEEN: I move an amendment to that. I move that it's the sense of this Convention that the number of delegates to the convention shall be the same number as the number of senators and representatives in the State legislature, and that the candidates for election to the convention shall run on a nonpartisan ticket - - a nonpartisan ballot.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that amendment?

APOLIONA: I'm not going to second that motion. I don't think it's fair to the outside islands, when Oahu has about 33 members of the House and the outside islands only have a lesser number. I think it should follow the pattern of this present Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950. Let it stand as such. Mahalo.

DELEGATES: Question.

CHAIRMAN: There is no second to that amendment proposed by Delegate Heen. There is only one motion before the assembly and that is the motion to defer action on paragraph four. You ready for the question?

ANTHONY: I second Delegate Heen's motion.

CASTRO: As long as there has been a second, may I state that this is very unfair to ask that the delegates vote upon this thing when we do not really know what this Convention will decide is the representation in the legislature. Now I believe that the number of representatives from Oahu in comparison with the total number is the thing that separates the two patterns, and I don't see how we can intelligently vote on this particular pattern until we know exactly what the make-up of the legislature is going to be.

ANTHONY: I think possibly the delegate that last spoke has overlooked the fact that in any legislature, Oahu, for instance, will have the majority of both houses, and - - I mean of the two; they would have the majority of the human beings that are in the Senate and the House of Representatives. So one delegate, whether he's elected from a senatorial district or not, would have the same vote as any other delegate. Therefore in any future convention, Oahu would have the control.

BRYAN: I think that this Convention has hit a new high in going low on its subject today. I really do, and I think it's time we got down to work. Now if the delegate from the fourth district wants to question whether it's wise to have the representation in the convention on the basis of the legislature, vote against the amendment, but for gosh sakes, let's vote on something and get going.

CASTRO: I'm speaking against the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, the Chair doesn't recall whether there was a second to that amendment made by - -

CASTRO: There was a second by Delegate Anthony. The point I'm trying to make is that we have in our minds two different patterns of representation at the constitutional convention. One is definite as is borne out by the 63 delegates in their representation here. The other is indefinite and not known, and I say that I feel that the amendment should be defeated because it is unfair to ask us to pass upon a representation pattern that we have not yet arrived at.

LOPER: I'm speaking to the amendment and questioning the remarks of the previous speaker when he refers to the Convention pattern as being definite. If you tie it up with Act 334 or the Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950, and then come up with a new set of precincts, reapportionment, a different combination, how can you apply the 1950 - - 1949 law to those new precincts? It was for that reason that I thought that it might be well to tie it to the legislature of the new State.

NIELSEN: I think that first part of the sentence, "Unless the legislature shall otherwise provide," will take care of anything like that.

CHAIRMAN: Are you all ready to vote on the amendment? The amendment is to the motion made by Delegate Tavares. All those in favor of the amendment will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." The noes have it.

Then we shall come back to the original motion that was made by Delegate Tavares. The motion in substance is that the concensus of this committee is that we adopt the Constitutional Convention of 1950 pattern. You ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of that motion please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried. Ayes have it.

FUKUSHIMA: Shall we now proceed to the fifth paragraph? Fifth paragraph reads - -

CHAIRMAN: Before we proceed, the Chair should like to clarify this point. Now that we have acted upon the motion made by Delegate Tavares, is the matter to be left with the Style Committee?

TAVARES: I move to defer action now on Section 4 so that we can - - on paragraph four so that we can, if possible, try to devise a more acceptable wording to the Convention.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that motion?

LOPER: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Seconded by Dr. Loper, Delegate Loper. Are you all ready for the question to defer action on paragraph four? All those in favor of that motion, signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried. The ayes have it. Action of paragraph four is deferred.

We shall proceed with paragraph five.

FUKUSHIMA: Paragraph five reads,

> The Convention shall determine its own organization and rules of procedure. It shall be the sole judge of the qualifications of its members and, by a two-thirds vote, may suspend or remove any member for cause.

SHIMAMURA: I wish to move to amend paragraph five by inserting after the words "the sole judge of the," the words "elections, returns and," so that it shall read - - that clause shall read, "It shall be the sole judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its members." That is the same expression used in the Federal Constitution and in practically all state constitutions and it has been judicially construed.

MAU: I second for the purposes of discussion.

FUKUSHIMA: If we include the word "election," we will be determining something before the Convention is even convened. I don't see how we can do it. I think all election results should be provided by the legislature or by the supreme court, whichever way we decided on the proposal on committee - - as put out by the Committee on Suffrage and Elections.

CHAIRMAN: Was there a second to that amendment?

FUKUSHIMA: Yes.

CLERK: Yes, Delegate Mau.

TAVARES: Again I should like to point out that I think this will, by implication, affect the article we have already approved on suffrage and elections which says that "Contested elections shall be determined by a court of competent jurisdiction as provided by law." It seems to me that the main trouble will be taken care of by the language as the provision now stands.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready to vote on the amendment? All those in favor of the amendment please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. Noes have it.

ROBERTS: I move we tentatively agree on paragraph five.

LOPER: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of that motion please signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: Paragraph six reads:

> The convention shall provide for the time and manner in which the proposed constitutional provisions shall be submitted to a vote of the electors of the state, but no such proposal shall be effective unless approved (a) at a general election, by a majority of all of the votes tallied upon the question, constituting at least 35 per cent of the total votes cast at such election, or (b) at a special election, by a majority of the total votes tallied upon such question, constituting at least 35 per cent of the total number of registered voters; provided, that no constitutional provision altering this proviso or the representation from any senatorial district in the senate shall become effective, unless it shall also be approved by a majority of the votes tallied upon the question in each of a majority of the counties.

I'd like to call the Chair's attention that this proviso was the one that did not meet with unanimous approval, and Delegate Ohrt and Delegate Fong signed a non-concurrence proviso.

WIRTZ: I move that the -- Is this carried by general motion on the section or do we have to move on each paragraph?

CHAIRMAN: I presume the former.

LEE: Let's get some action here. I move that we delete the proviso at the end of the paragraph.

AKAU: I second the motion.

FUKUSHIMA: To bring this back to order, I shall now move that the sixth paragraph be adopted as read.

WIRTZ: I'll second the motion. That's why I asked the Chair whether this was covered by the general motion to adopt Section 2, which was seconded.

CHAIRMAN: I thought each paragraph would tentatively be agreed upon until we went through the entire section.

WIRTZ: Well, the only thing we're trying to do is to get this in order for discussion on the floor. What is the ruling of the Chair? Is it necessary to have a separate motion for each paragraph and second it before it can be discussed? Or is that covered by the general motion to adopt the entire section, which I understood the Chair so indicated a minute ago.

CHAIRMAN: That is the understanding the Chair has, and all action taken would be tentative until the entire section is fully discussed.

WIRTZ: I believe there is now a motion that has been seconded to amend this paragraph by deleting the last proviso therefrom.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

WIRTZ: The concensus, as I gather, of this Convention and of the Legislative Committee is that we should have two bases of representation in a bicameral legislature, one of the houses to be on the basis of a population as indicated by means of registered votes; the other to be on the basis of a combination of geographical and political subdivisions, more or less patterned after our present existing Senate, keeping insofar as possible the same ratio and proportion. Now the idea of having the two bases of reapportionment is to provide a truly bicameral legislature with balances and checks. The Senate is designed so that no county, no one county or no one senatorial district has control over that house; whereas, based upon population, obviously, in the House of Representatives the control will be at present in the County of Oahu. Now in order -- if we believe that this is a fair basis of reapportionment, and if we believe in a true bicameral legislature with proper checks and balances, I believe that this proviso is essential, because without it the whole work of this Convention in adopting that basis of reapportionment can be destroyed in one amendment.

I want to point out that this ratification procedure that applies to this section is the same procedure that is incorporated by reference for all constitutional amendments that are introduced in the legislature and submitted to referendum of the people. And it seems to me that to avoid the problem of getting in actuality a unicameral legislature with two houses, and by that I mean two houses based upon the same principle of representation, we have to put in this proviso so that—and this refers only to senatorial representation—it requires a majority of the counties whose representation is being affected to approve of such amendment.

TAVARES: Although I am a delegate from Oahu, I agree with the delegate from Maui. I have sensed, I believe, a feeling in this Convention that some amount of geographical representation for the outer counties is proper in the Senate and popular representation is desirable in the House. Now we've got to remember that the last census, contrary to what our reports -- one of our reports said on initiative and referendum, instead of 65 per cent, Oahu now has 70 per cent of all of the people in this territory, a condition that does not exist in any other state of the Union. Now if the principle of apportionment geographically in one house and according to population in the other is sound, unless you put in a stop like this, you are allowing the next constitutional convention, which will be controlled entirely by Oahu, to propose, and the people of Oahu almost by their own vote alone, to vote out that type of representation entirely from the Constitution. Now if the principle is sound, I think it's worth keeping, and I believe that in fairness and by way of reassurance to the outer counties that they are going to get fair treatment in the future, this is not an unjust and improper provision. I therefore hope that it will be sustained and that it will not be removed from this proviso.

HEEN: That is exactly the situation that exists now. The delegation from Oahu has the majority of the membership in this present Convention, and they have been dealing with this question on that basis.

HOLROYDE: Another point that I have in question on voting on this at the present time, until we know how many senators and what the district is going to be, how can we intelligently vote whether to keep that forevermore or not?

ANTHONY: I agree with the last speaker. This is a pig in the poke until we know what the redistricting is going to be. However, on the general proposition, the Oahu delegates, as Senator Heen has said, have the majority vote in this Convention, and I think that members of the -- delegates from the neighboring islands, before we get finished, will realize that we from Oahu want to be fair. I, for one, am in favor of recognizing the outside islands in the Senate, but I see no reason for binding in perpetuity future conventions. I think that they should be satisfied that their fellow delegates in the future will be just as fair as we're going to be here. Now I for one am going to vote in favor of a control of the Senate in the outside islands because I think that's a good balance, but I see no reason for freezing that thing once it is accomplished in the Constitution.

TAVARES: Something has been made about how fair we are being at this Convention. I would like to remind the delegates that in order to get this bill through our legislature, which I attended not as a legislator, but as a very interested observer and lobbyist, I received a very distinct impression that in order to get Act 334 through, definite statements were made by the members from Oahu that if Oahu was given control of this Convention as provided in that act, the outer islands would be treated fairly. That assurance was given, and I think it should be lived up to.

Furthermore, we must remember we haven't become a state yet, and the outer islands could kick up quite a fuss with Congress if they thought they were not being fairly treated. We are not going to have that stop or that protection in the future. From what I observed of some of the people who think it's politically popular to appeal to the voters of Oahu on the question of giving Oahu control of both houses, I'm pretty sure that it's going to be a very burning issue in the future elections, and that the people for the time can be inflamed over some trivial incident where Oahu may not have gotten quite what they considered a fair break, to the point they will be quite willing to be unfair to the outer islands on the principle of geographic distribution.

I want to say one more thing. The very fact that we on Oahu here are willing now, in this new Constitution, to give the outer islands in the Constitution control of the Senate, shows a certain amount of distrust, if that's what we're going to call it. In other words, instead of leaving it to the legislature to reapportion, which will be controlled even in one house only by the Oahu delegation, we are saying in the Constitution that until it's amended by the Constitution, Oahu shall not have control of one house. I say that if that principle is sound, it should be continued.

ANTHONY: The statement of the last speaker is a mathematical demonstration of the error of his position. He says that we on Oahu say that we are going to be fair. The very fact that we are saying we're going to be fair shows that we are distrusting the outside islands in the legislature, a complete non-sequitur.

WIRTZ: Apparently some of the delegates feel that this proposition of freezing representation in one house is something new. It isn't, and the Senate representation in the United States Congress is so frozen. It was done because at the time that the United States government was formed the 13 original states were sovereign states, and it became a compact between the states. We are not in a position to enter into a compact. However, this principle of reapportionment on two different bases has been recognized, and I believe if the concensus of this Convention is that it is fair, this amendment does do no harm - - I mean this proviso does do no harm. On the other hand, if we don't agree in this matter of reapportionment, then this proviso has no place in this section.

ANTHONY: The argument, the analogy of sovereignty, has nothing to do with the question. The County of Maui is not a sovereignty, but the original 13 states were sovereign. Now I think the members from the outside islands ought to be satisfield if we leave this Convention and we give control of the Senate to the outside islands. And they ought to be satisfied that the future revision of this State Constitution will likewise be fair.

WIRTZ: I rise to a point of personal privilege. I did not say that we were in the position of sovereignty, and that is the reason for this, approaching it this way. There was no contention on my part that Maui or any other counties were in the position of sovereignty.

LEE: I have a lot of respect for the opinions of the learned judge from Maui. I'd like to ask him this question, though. The reason I made the motion to delete this is because there was a feeling on my part—and I may be corrected, in which case I may withdraw the motion—the only thing is, isn't what you are trying to do in this proviso is to make a compact between Oahu and the outside islands, is that it, the neighbor islands?

WIRTZ: In substance, yes.

LEE: Because I don't see how this Convention can bind any future constitutional convention, and that's my whole question on this matter. Even if we agree with you in the principle, there shouldn't be any changes. When there is the next constitutional convention, what is there to prevent that convention from modifying this, from deleting this clause?

WIRTZ: I might answer that question. I'll invite the speaker to examine the proviso. It says, "provided, that no constitutional provision altering this proviso, or the representation of any senatorial district. . . shall become effective," unless it's passed by a majority of the votes of a majority of the counties. Now that does have that affect, Mr. Lee.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will now recognize Delegate Mau.

MAU: Part of the argument made by those who agree, even tentatively, to give control of one of the houses, assuming we have a bicameral legislature, and also to support this provision as being fair and sound, I think that their arguments are unsound. If they want to have a truly representative government, if they want to follow representative government based upon population, there's no question but that both houses and this proviso - - both houses should be controlled by Oahu and this proviso should go out. But if, on the other hand, they argue that if we want this Constitution to be supported by members of the legislature from the outside islands, if they argue that they want the people from the outside islands, the neighbor islands, to support the Constitution which we will send to the people for ratification, if they argue that from a matter of tradition, not soundness, not representative government, not fairness, but from tradition, then it's a different thing.

I am willing, of course, to support the proposition that one of the houses should be controlled by the neighbor islands in the way of representation. Otherwise, you will have a turmoil here, we'll never get home, and we will never get past the legislature. I would like to move now that the neighbor islands secede.

NIELSEN: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Mau, will you clearly state your motion?

MAU: I withdraw my motion.

NEILSEN: I'll withdraw my second.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak to the merits of the question. It seems to me that the purpose of writing a Constitution has been pretty clearly stated in our discussions. If we write something in the Constitution now which says that from here on in we can never change, under any circumstances, certain provisions of the Constitution, it seems to me we are not permitting changes when changes are needed. Now I think that the Bill of Rights one of the most important things in the Constitution. But I didn't stick a proviso in there saying that there can be no amendment to the Constitution with regard to certain articles in it. It might be a good idea, but it seems to me that you have to make provision for changes in the Constitution. This proviso says you can change everything in the Constitution except a provision dealing with certain procedures with regard to amendments on percentages and with regard to representation in the Senate. It seems to me that every provision in the Constitution is subject to change at such time when change is found necessary. Therefore, I believe we ought not to include any limitation in the Constitution which would deny change later on.

Now I'm in complete sympathy with the problem of reapportionment. It certainly isn't my intention, when I suggest its deletion, that we deny adequate representation to the outside islands. I think we should, and I think we will. But we can't bind ourselves and the future down on any subsequent constitutional changes. Thank you.

TAVARES: There is a great deal of force to what the last speaker just said. In the ultimate, we may not be able to prevent a Convention from forcing its will on the outer islands. That is possible. However, it seemed to me that a reassuring provision like that, at least pointing the way to a policy adopted at the outset, amounting to a moral assurance to the outer islands that they would always have representation, a control in one house, would be the kind of thing that would reassure the voters enough so that when a constitutional convention is voted on, or when other provisions come up, they will be more willing to vote for such a convention. I think it must be remembered, and of course we realize that too, that not always, maybe not necessarily will all the people of any one county vote the same way. To some extent that is a protection. But if they want an amendment to the Constitution and they don't have an overwhelming majority on Oahu, your outer island people are going to feel a lot more comfortable about voting for a constitutional convention if they feel that there is at least a moral obligation, a moral assurance, that those delegates will come to that convention without the idea of changing that reapportionment unless a majority of the counties approve. I think you will facilitate getting your constitutional conventions voted for, or amendments that come very close to the situation being authorized if you give that assurance to the outer islands.

One more thing, I think that the outer -- the islands of this territory are the nearest analogy to the relationship between the states that there is in this whole country. We have here counties that are separated by many, many miles of water. There is a county consciousness in this territory and a difference, it seems to me, in needs and requirements and conditions that is not found, in my opinion, in any other state. There is much more ground for having two houses of the legislature in this territory than in any state of the Union, in my humble opinion. The people on Oahu who are essentially an urban community, have very, very different problems from those on the outer islands, and they are so overshadowing to them that they are likely to overlook the needs of the outer islands, unless they have control of one house where they can bring that to the attention of the legislature and get adequate consideration. I submit that the history of this territory has shown that the influence of the outer islands has been beneficial upon Oahu. There have been a number of times when, because they were far away and could look at the matter objectively, they have voted reforms or voted against provisions which the people of Oahu at the time, because they were too close to the problem, could not see as objectively, and in so doing, have been a healthy influence on Oahu and vice versa. Oahu at times has been able to see objectively some of the problems of the outer islands, and with its -- even though it doesn't control with its large delegation here, has helped keep the outer islands straight. It seems to me that a counteracting influence of checks and balances ought to be maintained, and that we ought to give at least moral assurance in this Constitution that we intend to maintain it.

ANTHONY: I agree with everything the delegate has said in regard to the morality of the present proposition. I agree that we ought to have representation of the outer islands in the Senate. They would have control. I do not agree that we can sit here in our present wisdom to see in perpetuity that there should never be a time in which that situation should be changed. Jefferson said a good many years ago, "A revolution every twenty years is a good thing," and that's still good political philosophy.

Now what we're trying -- what we're talking about here is not a question of policy, not a question of good faith. We expect to settle that question of policy, we expect to exhibit our good faith to our friends in the counties by giving them the majority in the Senate, but I do not think that we should be thereupon called to -- called upon to freeze in this Constitution in perpetuity that control in the outside islands in the Senate, and that's what this is going to do. If it were only a matter of policy, only a matter of morality, I'd agree with it, but this is a matter of legal power, and we will get into the same morass that the State of Illinois is in. Those fellows there can't even amend their Constitution by reason of a phony provision in the section relating to amendments.

NIELSEN: I want to say that this Constitutional Convention would not be in session if it wasn't due to the lobbying and assurance of the people of Oahu that the outside islands would be well taken care of, because we had the vote in both the House and the Senate when the Constitutional Act 334 was drawn, and it was with the confidence that Oahu would treat the outside islands properly. If we delete this provision, then we will be losing the confidence that we placed in Oahu. I, therefore, am going to vote against this amendment.

WIRTZ: I just want to say one more word and that is to dispel this erroneous impression of freezing anything into perpetuity or preventing us from ever amending our Constitution. This proviso specifically refers only to one phase, and that is senatorial representation. And I'd like to point out further it is not an absolute freeze. It requires, in addition to the other restrictions that have been imposed for the passage of any amendment, on this particular one question, it has an additional restriction but not an impossibility like Illinois, as the delegate from the fourth district stated. It requires a majority vote in a majority of the counties.

BRYAN: There are two things I'd like to point out with respect to this last sentence. One is, we don't know how happy the territory is going to be with a Senate that may be provided by this Constitution. The second is, they refer to counties. We don't know how many counties there may be ten years from now. At the present moment, with four counties, it means that a majority would be 75 per cent rather than 51 per cent. And I think that, as was expressed by the delegate from the fourth, we are buying a pig in a poke when we take this. Now I would like to ask Delegate Tavares if this is actually as it is written, in his opinion no more than a moral obligation. If that's all it expresses, I might go along with it, but if it is legally binding forevermore, there is a serious question in my mind.

TAVARES: The reason I said that was to be intellectually honest. Before our committee, we had a witness who is writing a thesis in the University of Hawaii on constitutional amendments, and he pointed out to us a number of situations where, in spite of constitutional provisions like this, they had been disregarded and somehow or other the courts had refused to alter the result. His argument was that you can't tie down the people if they want to kick over the traces anyhow. We still felt that up to a certain point, the courts might enforce this, and certainly we would be in a position, those of us who were for it, of arguing with the electorate and with the delegates that this provision should not be violated. But I wanted to be honest in saying moral obligation, because that witness had pointed out that provisions like this have actually been violated, and they had gotten away with it in certain jurisdictions.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is willing to recognize Delegate Fong.

FONG: Delegate Fred Ohrt and myself signed the minority report opposing this proviso in this Constitution. If this was just a moral obligation, as Mr. Tavares says, I would go along with it, but this is not just a moral obligation. It is a contractual obligation, and if we pass this proviso, we'll be stuck in perpetuity. Now if you realize that we have now four counties, the County of Hawaii, the County of Maui, the County of Honolulu, and the County of Kauai, the majority of the four counties means three counties.

HEEN: May I point out an error there, if you don't mind. We have five counties. There's a County of Kalawao.

FONG: I presume this Convention probably will not recognize the County of Kalawao.

To me this proviso means that we're going to be stuck in perpetuity, and what Delegate Anthony says is correct. I don't think any constitutional convention that will be convened will be able to strike this proviso, even if the whole convention went ahead and said that this proviso shall be stricken, because when it goes back to the counties, one county will at least vote against it, and they will have the support of the other counties, I presume. As Delegate Roberts says, we felt in the committee that we are living in changing times that there is no assurance that what we do today will be done tomorrow; no assurance that what we think is correct today, will be correct tomorrow.

But we will like to say to the members from the outside islands that at the present time we are willing to concede them the supremacy in the upper house, and having that supremacy, I think they should be satisfied. They will have the supremacy in the upper house, and having that supremacy, I don't think that the Senate will pass on any constitutional amendment and have it go before the people if it were to take away from them the votes that they are now having. I think that we should leave it up to the members of the next constitutional convention, to future constitutional conventions, the question as to whether they will like to change the representation in the Senate. I feel that at the present time, I'm willing to go with the outside islands as far as the representation in the Senate is concerned, but to say that we should insert this proviso is like putting a clause in the will saying that we can't change our will. Never mind what we want to do. Our thinking at the present time is such and such, and we should not change it. I think that this is going to be a compact, a compact that will stand forever, and I for one certainly do not want this compact in this Constitution.

LOPER: I'd like to speak for the elimination of that last sentence, because I think we should have as much confidence in the Constitutional Revision Convention of 1960, '70 and '80 as the legislature had in us. We had a legislature, one house of which drew most of its members from the outer islands, and this Bill 334 providing for this Convention which provides for a majority of the members to be from Oahu, and this Convention is, I am convinced, going to provide for a legislature, one house of which will draw a majority of its members from the other islands. So it seems to me that there is already established a relationship of confidence that the other islands will be taken care of.

Furthermore, in one of the paragraphs that we considered earlier today, I believe it was voted to pattern the new conventions for revision of the Constitution after this particular Convention unless the legislature should provide otherwise. And that legislature, as it has been indicated, would have one house controlled by the other islands. I don't think we need to try to pin down the constitutional conventions of 10, 20, and 30 years from now.

ANTHONY: In order to exhibit our good faith in this, I think what the outside islands would like to know is, are we coming through with supremacy in the Senate, and, therefore, it might be a good idea to defer this until the matter of apportionment is thrashed out. Possibly that'll satisfy them.

SHIMAMURA: Some of the speakers, I think, have given an erroneous impression of the power of the legislature with respect to the adoption and ratification of this Constitution by the legislature. The legislature under Act 334 has no power of ratification or change of the Constitution. The only power the legislature has under that act, as I think some of the lawyers realize, is merely the submission of alternative or other provisions, but it certainly has not the power to disapprove of the Constitution.

ASHFORD: We haven't yet passed upon the Local Government Committee's report. We don't know what the situation is going to be as to counties. It may be that the power will rest in the legislature to create counties and also to provide that there shall be no counties; and if that power shall rest in the legislature as it now does, and counties are done -- counties could be done away with entirely and get away from the effects of this.

WHITE: It seems to me that this thing has almost the effect of freezing the county status as well. It will have that practical effect. Now as far as I'm concerned, I'm sympathetic with the viewpoint of the outside islanders, but I can't understand why any of the outside islanders should take something that the legislators happened to say as committing this Convention. They certainly had no power to commit this Convention for all time. I agree with Delegate Roberts that in changing times like this, who are we to know what the conditions are going to be 10 or 20 years from now, and whether even the representation that may be proposed by this Convention may not 20 years from now be unfair to the outside islands. I think it's very presumptuous on our part to take it upon ourselves to try to commit and limit the freedom of future conventions, and I'm definitely opposed to this.

KING: Without trying to close off debate, I think the two points of view have been pretty thoroughly explained. I suggest that we vote on the amendment, without making a motion to that effect.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment before the assembly is to delete the proviso contained in paragraph six of Section 2. Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." I think the Chair - -

DELEGATES: Roll call, roll call.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of a roll call, signify by - - There's more than ten. Roll call.

Ayes, 24. Noes, 33 (Apoliona, Ashford, Castro, Cockett, Corbett, Crossley, Doi, Fukushima, Ihara, Kage, Kanemaru, Kauhane, Kawahara, Kawakami, Kido, Lai, Luiz, Lyman, Nielsen, Okino, C. Rice, H. Rice, Sakai, Sakakihara, Serizawa, Silva, Smith, St. Sure, Tavares, Wirtz, Woolaway, Yamamoto, Yamauchi). Absent and not voting, 6 (Arashiro, Gilliland, Kometani, Mizuha, Phillips, A. Trask).

ROBERTS: Point of information. The language which is still in reads, "provided that no constitutional provision altering this proviso or the representation from," and so on. Am I correct in construing that language that the proviso has reference to the words "provided that" and does not have reference to the previous paragraph? To the rest of the paragraph preceding.

WIRTZ: Does the delegate wish me to answer that question?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, will you?

WIRTZ: It was clearly the intention of the committee that that word "altering" -- the word "proviso" as used after the word "provided" referred only to what followed the word "provided" and had nothing to do with the percentages or anything that's before.

NIELSEN: I now move that the paragraph be tentatively agreed to.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

ROBERTS: I'd like to raise a question and then propose an amendment, if I may. We have provided in this paragraph that it would require 35 per cent of the total votes cast to be cast in the affirmative on any question which would provide for a constitutional change. There have been two states, the State of Tennessee and the State of Illinois, that have had a tremendous amount of difficulty bringing about a constitutional change. Part of the reason in those states deals with the fact that it requires a majority, but it's not a majority of those voting on the proposition, but a majority of those voting in the total election. Now this provides for a majority of those voting on the proposal, but requires a 35 per cent vote in the affirmative. I'd like to suggest to the delegates that that percentage might be reduced somewhat. You have this situation, you have a general election, and you have a total popular vote, let's say of 100,000. When it comes to questions on constitutional amendment, you find that people either are not interested or don't quite understand the proposition and don't specifically cast their votes either for or against, and the experience of other states with the amendment procedure has been that it is extremely difficult to get in excess of 50 per cent of those who are eligible to vote. This, in fact, then would require 35 per cent of approximately 50, which would require close to 70 per cent of those total voting. If our experience turns out to be the contrary, that we have more people voting on these amendments, then we have a different proposition. But in other states, the experience has been that you cannot get in excess of 50 per cent of the total people who go to vote on individuals in general elections but don't cast their votes on constitutional amendments.

Therefore, I suggest that we reduce that 35 per cent to either 25 or 30. I'd like to hear from -- Suppose I move for 25.

MAU: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been duly seconded by Delegate Mau.

I think it's time for a short recess for the benefit of the clerks who have been --

SAKAKIHARA: I so move.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Carried.

(RECESS)

FUKUSHIMA: I move that the committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

HEEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again. All those in favor say "aye." Opposed. Carried.

JUNE 16, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole will now come to order. Before recessing yesterday afternoon, there was an amendment moved by Delegate Roberts pending before the assembly. Now the amendment offered was to paragraph six of Section 2. The amendment offered was that the number 35 per cent be deleted and in lieu thereof the percentage 25 be inserted. That motion to amend was seconded by Delegate Mau. Immediately after moving the amendment, the Chair requested a recess for the benefit of the clerks. When the committee was called to order, there was a motion to rise and make a report of progress and beg leave to sit again this morning. Delegate Roberts, would you like to speak to the amendment which you had offered?

ROBERTS: Prior to offering the amendment to change the word "35" to "25," I spoke at some length on the reason for offering the amendment. The experience of the other states has been that it is extremely difficult to get a large vote on constitutional amendments or on constitutional changes. Most of the states actually provide a majority of those voting on the proposal. We are making that tighter in our Constitution by requiring an actual number voting, and by requiring a percentage of votes in the affirmative. That in itself indicates that we regard a constitutional amendment as quite serious, and properly so. There ought to be a substantial showing of votes. I do believe, however, we ought not to make it impossible to modify or change our Constitution as the times and needs change.

I'd like to call the attention of the delegates to the fact that our Constitution, the one that we are drafting now, is going to be submitted to the people on the basis of a majority, a simple majority of those voting on the Constitution. It seems to me that if we are going to provide that our first Constitution is going to be submitted to the people on a simple majority vote, regardless of the number of people voting, that to make subsequent amendments and revisions based on a 35 per cent vote, which I indicated yesterday in most situations will mean a 70 per cent vote because of the number of a turn out, that we ought not to make it so difficult in the future to change or amend our Constitution. I recognize that we all think we're doing a wonderful job. I think we are, but we also ought to recognize that perhaps future generations may not think quite the same way that we do, and we ought to give them the opportunity as times change to make amendments and revisions to the Constitution.

PORTEUS: It isn't often that I differ with my brother from the same combination of precincts, but I do to a certain degree this morning. If you will just check these figures for the moment, you will see the point I want to make. You will put down 100,000, 100,000 voters in an election throughout the territory at a general election. Now if 100,000 voters go to the polls and vote, under the scheme as proposed now, if 35,001 vote affirmatively for an amendment to the Constitution, that amendment carries, 35,001, that's what it means. Now 100,000 people go to the polls, and 35,001 affirmatively for a matter can carry so long as not more than 70,000 have voted on the constitutional amendment. Now the amendment that is proposed would mean this, that so long as there was a majority vote of those voting on the constitutional amendment, that they would have to have at least 25,001. Now I think if 100,000 people go to the polls, if the people don't want to vote on the constitutional amendment, if they are not interested in having it, I don't think that 25,001 out of 100,000 should be able to put the idea over. I think there should be more affirmative support built up for a proposition than is advocated under the last amendment. I think the proposition as submitted by the committee to be a liberal one. You need only a majority of the votes cast on the constitutional amendment in a general election so long as that majority is equal to 35 per cent of the total votes cast. It seems to me a very liberal provision, and I don't agree with the 25 per cent figure which has been advocated in the amendment.

ROBERTS: May I ask the previous speaker a question, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: You may, Delegate Roberts.

ROBERTS: When you say 35 per cent of the votes cast, is it 35 per cent of the votes cast on the amendment?

PORTEUS: Thirty-five thousand votes, 35 per cent of the votes that were cast at that general election. That's what the provision says.

ROBERTS: Well, that's what I understood.

ANTHONY: It says "registered voters."

PORTEUS: No, it doesn't say registered voters.

ROBERTS: There are two provisos there.

PORTEUS: You are looking, I'm sorry, Mr. Anthony, at the special elections. If you'll look at "a," general elections. The committee made it more difficult to carry a constitutional amendment in a special election. We're talking about the general election under "a."

WIRTZ: There's one other thing I'd like to point out about the feature that I think is liberal in the proposal as submitted by the committee. You will notice it says "a majority of all the votes tallied." That eliminates spoiled ballots, unmarked ballots, and everything; whereas the limitation of 35 per cent is on the total votes cast.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. By using the word "tallied" in one place and the word "cast" in another place, is it supposed that there is a difference in the meaning of the two words?

WIRTZ: Is that question directed towards me?

CHAIRMAN: Would you be willing to answer the question?

WIRTZ: Yes, it was the concensus of the committee that "tallied" were the actual votes "yes" or "no" on a proposition and that were actually tallied in the booth, whereas votes cast included - - the total number of votes cast included spoiled ballots and so on.

HEEN: That's the way it's treated in the returns. If you will look at these official returns, you'll find one column says total votes cast and if you'll look at the number of votes cast in the various precincts, they tally, they come out the same.

WIRTZ: As I understand it, maybe the chairman would like to answer this, but my understanding was that we were going under the impression that spoiled ballots and blank ballots were counted as ballots cast in the election.

CASTRO: Recall that this section deals with the general election, and the supposition is that more votes will be cast for candidates than will be cast in the square relating to the amendment, so the majority refers to the tally upon the question, but the 35 per cent refers to the votes at the election. So that if 85,000 people voted on candidates, but only 70,000 people voted on the question, the 35 per cent would refer to the 85,000 rather than the 70,000.

FUKUSHIMA: I'd like to add a little to what Judge Wirtz has said. I think when you go to the polls, and you give your name and your name is scratched out, that is counted as a vote cast. Now, whether you submit a blank ballot or whether your ballot is checked off as being an illegal ballot, nevertheless, it's still a vote cast. I think that's correct. Is it or not?

SHIMAMURA: May I ask if that distinction is clearly brought out in the committee report so that there won't be any difficulty in interpretation and construction. I've been trying to look for that page but I can't locate it.

FUKUSHIMA: That is stated on page 6 of Committee Report No. 48.

SHIMAMURA: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN: For the purpose of record will you read that sentence?

FUKUSHIMA: It's page 5 and 6. "The reason for using the term 'votes tallied,' is to exclude blank ballots and spoiled ballots on the ratification question only, thus requiring the majority of the votes actually tallied for or against ratification."

APOLIONA: To me there is a great difference between the word "tally" and the word "vote" - - I mean the word "cast." For instance, a lot of voters will go to the polls to have their votes cast. That means they go in there, accept a ballot and have their name registered in the book as having cast their votes. But a lot of people do not vote, they give in a blank ballot, in order so that they save their name on the register for the next election. There's a big difference there.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that there has been sufficient discussion on the amendment offered. Are you ready for the question?

LOPER: May I rise to a point of information? I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee if the committee considered the advisability of basing it only on the total votes on the question, but requiring more than a simple majority. For example, counting only those voting for and against but requiring 60 per cent or two-thirds to carry it. Did the committee consider that?

FUKUSHIMA: I believe the committee did and we felt that the proposition as we advanced would be more feasible; more liberal, too, Dr. Loper.

CHAIRMAN: You ready for the question?

ROBERTS: I'd like the delegates to very seriously consider this question before the vote is taken. I think this is one of the most serious questions which has come before the Convention, even though its present impact is not felt. The question of constitutional amendment goes to the very heart of the things we are working on. Most of the states provide a majority of those voting on the question. That to me is a preferable procedure. What we're proposing here is an actual requirement of an affirmative vote. It may be true that the way the ballots are presently counted, all peoples' ballots when they are thrown in the box are counted. When we go to mechanical counting, that will not be the case.

I'd like to point out a very simple illustration in the case of the State of Illinois. They tried for years to bring about certain constitutional amendments. They were unable, even though substantial numbers of people went to the polls and voted on the question. They finally got to the point in 1932 when they tried to get a proposal to amend the amending provisions of the constitution, and they obtained a total vote in the affirmative on that constitutional amendment of over one million votes. There were only 200,000 against the amendment or a positive vote of 80 per cent in favor of changing the amending provisions of the constitution. But it required, on the basis of a majority of those voting in the general election, 1,700,000, and that amendment did not carry.

It seems to me, that this problem is extremely serious and we ought to have a procedure which would provide the opportunity for rectifying any mistakes which we may make, and I don't think that our Constitution is going to be so perfect that we want to tie the hands of future generations and future constitutional conventions to amend it.

ANTHONY: I am in accord with the statement of the last speaker. One of the greatest vices of state constitutions is the inflexibility of amendments, notably in Illinois, that was spoken of yesterday and again by, I believe, the last speaker. But in Illinois, they have been trying to get away from the system of elective judges for the last 40 years, and they can't even get enough people to pass on the constitutional amendment. Now I would favor a simple majority of those voting on the question, and I think an appropriate amendment should be drafted that will conform to that.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. What is the amendment now before the committee? Twenty-five per cent?

CHAIRMAN: Twenty-five per cent.

HEEN: I'd like to amend that so that that clause "a" there shall read, "At a general election by a majority of all the votes cast upon the question"; and delete the rest of that clause.

MAU: How about paragraph "b"?

ANTHONY: I second the motion.

ROBERTS: I will accept the amendment.

H. RICE: We withdraw our original motion, I understand, and accept this as the original -- as an original amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Then Dr. Roberts, by accepting the --

ROBERTS: I will withdraw the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, by accepting the amendment, you are not interested in making the change of 35 per cent to read 25 per cent?

ROBERTS: We'll withdraw in favor of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Will you restate the amendment offered, Delegate Heen?

HEEN: Amend the clause "a" to read, "At a general election, by a majority of all the votes cast upon the question"; then delete the rest of the language there in that clause "a."

CHAIRMAN: Do you retain the disjunctive "or"? That is to be retained, is it not, before "b"?

HEEN: That's right, leave that "or" there.

WIRTZ: Before we vote on the question, I'd like to state the sentiments of the committee, that we wished it to be flexible, that is the process of amendment. However, we did not want to make it so easy that the process became simply similar to amending a statute. Now we've heard a lot about Illinois, and I think in fairness to this Committee of the Whole, the delegate from the fourth district should point out that this provision as submitted is much more liberal than Illinois'. That is the proposition as proposed by the committee, and it was put in this way to take care of that situation of Illinois. Now it's the feeling of the committee that a substantial number of people should be interested to amend their Constitution, otherwise the amendment is really not necessary.

LAI: I think the amendment made by Delegate Heen is a little too liberal, and I think is too dangerous. Do you realize that if you have say, 20,000 votes cast on a question, and it takes only 10,001 to pass an amendment and I think that's too dangerous. We don't want anybody to amend our Constitution that way.

TAVARES: It's just been pointed to me that we don't even allow a minority in the legislature to pass an ordinary law. Here we are going to allow any kind of minority, no matter how small, so long as it's more than the people voting against, to change our basic law. I submit that if we are going to profit by the experience of other states, we must bear this in mind also. First, if an amendment to the Constitution, a proposed amendment, is very controversial, and there is reason for argument on both sides, strong arguments, a lot of people are going to get awfully confused by the arguments pro and con. They are going to be so confused that they are going to refuse to vote, and it means then that a very small minority can, in many cases, put through an amendment as to which many of the people, perhaps a large majority, have serious doubts.

I believe in a territory or in a state this small, we can educate our people sufficiently to see that we have the requisite majority and the requisite minimum number. This is a small state and our record of turnouts to elections is unusually high. I think that's another thing to be borne in mind in connection with the comparison with other states. Our people do take a greater interest in elections, on the average, than most states, and I'm sure than Illinois. And I believe that because of the smallness of this territory, it will be possible for us to do a better job of educating than it is in a large state with so many million people, like Illinois. I, therefore, believe that some sort of a minimum is reasonable and proper, and if 35 is too high, let's bring it down to 30. Perhaps that would be a good compromise, but I don't think we should go below that. I hope, therefore, that the motion to amend will not be adopted.

DOI: I feel that I need more time to study this, the question on the floor. Therefore at this time, I would like to move to defer the consideration of this paragraph till the end of Section 4. There's something I would like to talk over with some of the delegates on this question.

YAMAMOTO: I'd like to second the motion.

ROBERTS: I'd like to call one fact to the attention of the delegates before this question is put, before the deferment, so that they can think it over during the actual consideration. I assume that the purpose of deferment is to give these people an opportunity to think the question over. I'd like to call this to their attention so that they can give it some thought, if it's agreeable with the Convention; if it's not, I'll keep quiet.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready to vote on the motion to defer action on this question -- on the amendment?

ASHFORD: Let's hear from Delegate Roberts.

CHAIRMAN: I beg your pardon, Delegate.

ASHFORD: If this is being deferred for consideration, we should have before us every argument available. I think, therefore, that by unanimous consent, Delegate Roberts should be permitted to advise us as to the further reasons we should consider.

DELEGATE: Kokua.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

PORTEUS: And out of courtesy, anyone else who wishes to add anything.

HEEN: Absolutely.

SILVA: Well, ask him to withdraw the deferment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva, did he have anything to say?

SILVA: I would suggest that the person who made the motion to defer withdraw his motion.

YAMAMOTO: I'd like to withdraw my second, for the sake of Delegate Roberts.

CHAIRMAN: The second to the motion to defer action on the amendment before the table has been withdrawn by Delegate Yamamoto. Then the motion to defer will die due to lack of a second?

KAUHANE: I second the motion to defer.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kauhane seconded Delegate Nelson Doi's motion to defer action.

CROSSLEY: As I understand it, the second was withdrawn to allow Delegate Roberts to talk. I think, if there's no second made, there can be discussion on the subject until it's fully covered. Then we can fully proceed.

ROBERTS: The impression given in the previous discussion, in part implied that the question of an amendment to the Constitution would go to the people directly. That is not the procedure that is provided in this proposal. There are two procedures for amendment, to initiate the amendment. One is through the constitutional convention. No question is going to be put to the people until the constitutional convention has deliberated and made recommendations. Then it goes to the people on the vote. The second procedure for amendment is for amendments provided or proposed by the legislature, and it requires a two-thirds vote in both houses of the legislature first, before the question comes to the people on a vote. So you have your screening process before the question is put. It seems to me that is not leaving the question wide open to minority groups. That provides deliberate consideration by both or either a constitutional convention or the houses of the legislature. I think we ought to keep that clear in mind, that it's not a proposition put directly to the people without prior consideration either by constitutional convention or by a substantial majority of the houses of the legislature.

NIELSEN: Isn't there a motion before the house?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Nielsen, yes, there is a motion to defer action.

NIELSEN: I move for the previous question.

TAVARES: There's just one thing to be explained about this statement just made, and that is under the legislatively proposed constitutional amendments, proposed by our committee, there are two methods for the legislature to do it, one by a two-thirds vote of each house of the legislature at one session, or a majority vote of each house of the legislature at two successive sessions. I think that ought to be made clear.

ROBERTS: That's true, but after it's enacted by the legislature, then it goes to the people for ratification. So you have a double check on the specific proposal. It isn't a direct constitutional initiative; it provides for consideration by the legislature or by a constitutional convention. It seems to me that the deliberate consideration is given there, and when it subsequently comes to the people for ratification, just as our own Constitution is going to the people for ratification, it requires a simple majority. And it's quite possible, as Delegate Lai pointed out, that our present Constitution may be submitted on a vote which is extremely small. Suppose only 10,000 people go out to vote for the Constitution, it still will require only a majority vote.

HOLROYDE: Another point in that regard. When you have the legislature operating on a subject that may be a rather difficult one or one that is receiving a lot of public attention, knowing the fact that it's going to the people anyway, they will be inclined to vote in favor of it and let the people make the final decision. Then you come back to the point where only 10,000 people can make that decision.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

MAU: The impression has been given that any question put to the people would result in a very small vote. We've always prided ourselves in arguments for statehood, and we make it one of the best arguments we have, that the electorate goes out to vote full force. We always use the figure 80 per cent of the registered voters come out to vote. I don't think that there is a fear that only 20,000 people will vote on the question, not in the State of Hawaii. Even ourselves here in this Convention, we have a rule where those who are silent are considered to have voted in the affirmative. It seems to me that just because some of the people may not cast their vote on this question, although they vote in the general election for candidates, doesn't mean they are against the proposal. I think that the argument is not sound. It is not a factual argument, at least in my judgment.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will refuse to recognize any delegate, if the delegate is going to speak on the amendment. The motion before the floor is the motion to defer action.

BRYAN: May I ask a question?

CHAIRMAN: Information?

BRYAN: Information. If that is the Chair's ruling, I don't think it's a fair one. After all, we stood by to let a speaker speak on the question after the motion was made. I think that if one piece of debate is worthy of consideration while this thing is being deferred, all debate is worthy of consideration, and I ask leave to speak on the subject.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that the debate on the motion, on whether or not the amendment offered is sound, is different from the motion now pending on the floor, whether to defer action. It will not cut off any debate on the amendment. You ready for the question? The motion - - The question is on the motion to defer action on the amendment made by Delegate Heen and which was accepted by Delegate Roberts.

SAKAKIHARA: Point of order. First, I'd like to rise to a point of information. Who made the motion to defer and who seconded it?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Doi made the motion to defer action, Delegate Yamamoto seconded the motion. The second was withdrawn, but subsequently seconded by Delegate Kauhane.

Ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to defer action on the amendment will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded, "no." The ayes have it. The motion to defer action is carried.

FUKUSHIMA: I move that we take a short recess at this time.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor will signify by saying "aye." Recess.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee come to order, please. Have the delegates reached an agreement?

HEEN: At this time I withdraw my motion to amend.

ROBERTS: I'd like to move that in the sixth paragraph, the sixth line, the words "constituting at least 35," that the word "35" be changed to "25," and to leave the rest of the section as is.

CHAIRMAN: In other words, it would be tantamount to the original amendment which you had offered, Delegate Roberts?

ROBERTS: No, not identical, because it still leaves the 35 per cent in the special election.

CHAIRMAN: No, I mean as to "a."

ROBERTS: As to "a," 25 percent. That's correct.

KELLERMAN: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is to amend the sixth paragraph of Section 2, that particular clause of the sixth paragraph in Section 2, designated "a," wherein there appears the word "35," in lieu thereof the word "25" be inserted. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of that amendment will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no."

The Chair will ask the vote by the show of hands. All those in favor of the amendment will please signify by show of your right hand. 23 ayes. All those opposed. I'm afraid the vote is very close.

PORTEUS: There are other people that have come in. I wonder if you could call for a standing vote. That would be a little easier.

SAKAKIHARA: I make a formal motion that we have a roll call.

ROBERTS: Second.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is very receptive to that suggestion.

HEEN: Those who came in may not know what the question is. They wouldn't know how to vote. They are liable to vote for both ways.

LAI: Will you state the motion again for the benefit of the latecomers.

CHAIRMAN: I shall do that. Roll call has been suggested and the Chair is receptive to that suggestion, so, Miss Clerk, will you proceed with the roll call. The question is, shall that clause designated as "a" in paragraph six of Section 2 be amended so that the word "35" appearing therein be deleted, and in lieu thereof, the word "25" be inserted. Will you proceed with the roll call.

Ayes, 29. Noes, 30 (Apoliona, Ashford, Bryan, Crossley, Doi, Dowson, Fong, Hayes, Holroyde, Ihara, Kage, Kam, Kawakami, Kido, Larsen, Luiz, Lyman, Porteus, Sakai, Sakakihara, Serizawa, Silva, Smith, St. Sure, Tavares, Wirtz, Woolaway, Yamamoto, Yamauchi, Okino). Absent, 4 (Arashiro, Mizuha, Phillips, A. Trask).

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has failed to carry by two votes.

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that paragraph six be tentatively agreed to, as approved.

SAKAKIHARA: I second it.

ANTHONY: Point of information on the last vote. As I understand the rules, not voting is counted in favor of the motion. Is that not correct?

CHAIRMAN: They are absent.

ANTHONY: Oh, they were absent.

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

LAI: I second Fukushima's vote, I mean motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to adopt tentatively paragraph six of Section 2 will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: Seventh paragraph, which reads:

> The provisions of this section shall be self-executing, but the legislature shall appropriate money and may enact legislation to facilitate its operation.

I move at this time that we tentatively approve paragraph seven.

SMITH: I second that motion.

HEEN: I'd like to ask the chairman of that committee as to how will the provisions of the section be self-executing? What would be the mechanics with reference to that?

FUKUSHIMA: I'll ask Dr. Roberts to answer that question.

ROBERTS: The proposal for constitutional amendment, as I indicated before, was one of the most important provisions of the Constitution. You've got to provide some procedure for seeing to it that amendments are put, that constitutional conventions are held. As was pointed out by our eminent lawyers on the floor, you cannot mandate a legislature to do anything if they don't want to do it. I think, as they put it, you can't get a writ of mandamus to force them to do anything. However, a proviso in the Constitution, which in effect says that the legislature has a responsibility to do the job, carries with it certain moral force, carries with it the suasion of public opinion. It seems to me that a proviso to this effect indicates to the legislature that they are to carry out their responsibilities under the Constitution. If they do not do so, then, of course, they are subject to action by the people. There is no way of forcing them to do it. It is merely an indication of the Convention that they want them to do it.

Now, with regard to the other sections on the constitutional convention, we have provided a machinery for the holding of elections, we have provided machinery for election of delegates, and for the operation of the constitutional convention in case of amendments. The only self-executing problem that you bump into with the legislature is the problem of providing funds, and it seems to me that question, of course, still rests with the legislature. The intention is to indicate to them that they are to make appropriate provision for the carrying out of this section.

NIELSEN: It just states that they shall appropriate money which doesn't mean too much. And I would like to make the amendment to have that read after the word "shall," "make the necessary appropriations and may enact legislation to facilitate this operation." Then it is required that they make sufficient appropriation so that the thing can be carried out. I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that amendment?

SHIMAMURA: I second the motion.

HEEN: I'm not satisfied with the answer that was made by Delegate Roberts. Assume that the legislature does nothing at all, then how are these provisions to be executed on a self-execution basis? I'm rising for information, more definite information.

PORTEUS: I don't know that I have the information, but nonetheless, in the first paragraph of Section 2, insofar, I think just to reinforce some of the material that fellow delegate from "Q" has brought to your attention, if within the ten-year period the question hasn't been submitted to the people as to whether or not there shall be a constitutional convention, it is made the duty of an officer to certify this question for submission to the people at the first general election. Now, if that had been at a special election, the failure of the legislature to provide money could block that. However, if it's to be certified at a general election, then the money that is provided for the general election will help carry the expenses here, and it can be submitted to the people even though the legislature doesn't want the question submitted to the people.

I think that the provision -- The question was asked, who calls the convention. Once the people, however, have said that they want a constitutional convention, I don't think that the people elected to the legislature are going to hold out against the will of the voters by saying, now that you voted to have it, we're not going to come through with the mechanics of providing the money for the payment of the delegates and so forth. I think there is a good deal of compulsion on a legislature, once the people of the territory have indicated that that's the way they want it done. I think the phrase, if nothing else, at least is a threat over the heads of the legislature that if it doesn't pay attention to this subject, why, someone is apt to take it away from them, and there's apt to be action in any event.

LEE: I think that on most questions Delegate Porteus would be right, but, of course, we have that stock example in the Organic Act on reapportionment where it's never done and the so-called moral persuasive force of the Organic Act was evidently missing.

CHAIRMAN: I believe Delegate Ashford wanted to be recognized prior to the last speaker.

ASHFORD: I'm an enthusiast about the expression, "this provision shall be self-executing." I think perhaps the provision requiring the legislature to appropriate funds is not there -- is not properly there. I think perhaps it might just be, "the legislature shall or may take such steps as are necessary to fully implement the matter." But, I very much approve the provision that certain sections or the Constitution itself, insofar as possible, shall be self-executing, because it goes to the interpretation of the section and the intent of the Convention in writing it in and the people in ratifying. That is, that regardless of what the legislature does, that stands, and if there be no money for a convention, if they choose to sit without money, they can still amend the Constitution.

SHIMAMURA: May I add to the excellent exposition of our Secretary, that paragraph four provides the machinery for an election of the delegates to our constitutional convention.

TAVARES: It is true that we cannot mandamus the legislature to appropriate funds for this election, but I think of all uncontroversial types of things that can be in this manner at least morally mandated on the legislature, the one of appropriating funds is the most perfunctory. It is the type of thing that the legislature isn't very likely to get wrangling about very much. There will be an estimate as to how much is going to be needed for this thing, and in the ordinary course of events, that estimate will be somewhat approximated. It's a little different from requiring a legislature to reapportion itself. That brings up very, very highly controversial matter. I think, therefore, that there is some reason for leaving it to the legislature to appropriate the money.

However, if the members of this Convention think that it isn't sufficient, I'm quite willing to propose an amendment that all moneys necessary, are automatically appropriated out of the general fund of the territory. If the members of the Convention would rather have that, I'll put such an amendment.

NIELSEN: I'll accept that as an amendment. The reason I brought this up is the fact that I think the amount for this Constitutional Convention was just grabbed out of a hat. I don't think the cost of holding the election was even considered by the finance committee.

CHAIRMAN: That wasn't an amendment, Delegate Nielsen, and if Delegate Tavares --

TAVARES: I haven't yet proposed it. I'd like to hear a little more argument against the provision.

CHAIRMAN: Then your original amendment stands as it is, Delegate Nielsen. Is there any further debate relating to the suggestion just made by Delegate Tavares, that the language may be provided in the Constitution whereby the appropriation may be taken care of? Is there anyone who will suggest a recess?

LEE: No, I think we ought to proceed. There is a motion on the floor made by Delegate Nielsen to make -- there was a second by Delegate Shimamura, if I recall. I don't see what difference it makes --

CHAIRMAN: All right. Are you ready for the question, to vote for the amendment?

LEE: I'm not through speaking yet.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry.

LEE: But I was saying that I can't see much difference between the language posed by Delegate Nielsen, "shall make appropriation," compared with the language, "shall appropriate." I may be a little dense. Perhaps Delegate Nielsen can explain the difference a little more clearly than he has.

NIELSEN: Shall I answer him? When you just say they "shall appropriate" money, that doesn't indicate how much or how little; they can appropriate only half enough or any specific sum they care to. But if it says that they "shall make the necessary appropriation," why then they can make it -- if it's a special election, it's going to cost a whole lot more than if it's a general, and they'll appropriate whatever is sufficient for the purpose.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: You are now voting on the amendment offered by Delegate Nielsen. The amendment -- paragraph seven will read as follows with the amendment.

> The provisions of this section shall be self-executing, but the legislature shall make the necessary appropriations and may enact legislation to facilitate its operation.

All those in favor of the amendment will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." The amendment is carried.

CROSSLEY: I move that the paragraph as amended be adopted.

CHAIRMAN: Tentatively.

FUKUSHIMA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: That is the end of Section 2, but I believe that yesterday there was deferred the first sentence of paragraph three and all of paragraph four. The first sentence of paragraph three reading, "Any qualified voter of the district concerned shall be eligible for membership in the convention," that was not tentatively approved.

LEE: I believe, in order to bring the delegates up to a point where we can move, a question was raised by Delegate Kellerman concerning the oath, and I believe there was a difference of opinion among a couple of delegates as to whether or not there is anything which requires the oath. And they came to the conclusion, as I recall, that there is nothing which requires the oath, so that from there we can proceed. I believe Delegate Anthony had an amendment which read as follows:

> Notwithstanding any other provision in the Constitution to the contrary, any qualified voter in the district concerned shall be eligible for membership in the convention.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

LEE: I move for the adoption of the amendment as just read by myself which was proposed yesterday by Delegate Anthony.

CASTRO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion - -

TAVARES: I thought I called the attention of the Convention to a very serious situation that would exist in such a case. The article which we have proposed to comply with H.R. 49 makes a member of certain subversive groups absolutely ineligible to hold any office. And here we're going to, notwithstanding that provision, going to make him eligible to hold office in this convention, if it's an office, which seems to be the attitude of the members here. I think that one thing is going to destroy your compliance with H.R. 49.

LEE: I thought that was settled yesterday among our legal fraternity here, where Delegate Ashford pointed out that clause there. I think that Delegate Ashford might answer that question.

ASHFORD: Under the provisions of H.R. 49, no oath is required, but it is absolutely - - is required to be an absolute disqualification for office that anyone be a member of a subversive organization. In other words, I agree with Delegate Tavares that that should be written in here. There's no provision for an oath but there is a provision that our Constitution shall forbid the holding of office by anyone who belongs to any organization that's dedicated to the overthrow of government by force.

LEE: Well, can't we proceed and write that in? Is there any reason why we couldn't amend the first sentence differently then, to read somewhat along this line, in the sense of this thought? "Any qualified voter, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, of the district concerned shall be eligible to membership in the convention." I'm not saying the language is correct.

TAVARES: I think it would be - - if we leave it to the Style Committee, this would be all right, to have it read, "except as provided in Committee Proposal No. 24," and then the language that's been suggested. Then the Style Committee can substitute the proper article and section number when it's adopted.

CROSSLEY: I would suggest about a five-minute recess, so that the legal fraternity can get together back here on the proper rewording of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair declares a recess.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fukushima, are you ready to move an amendment?

FUKUSHIMA: I don't have an amendment, but I believe Delegate Anthony has an amendment to make.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, are you ready to - -

ANTHONY: In the paragraph under discussion, I propose the following amendment. We're discussing the line, "Any qualified voter in the district concerned shall be eligible to membership in the convention." I move the following amendment:

> Notwithstanding any provision in this Constitution to the contrary, other than Section _____, any qualified voter of the district concerned shall be eligible to membership in the convention.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that amendment?

NIELSEN: I'll second the amendment.

HEEN: I don't quite understand the clause, "other than Section blank." In other words, there may be some provision to the contrary, and that section blank is certainly contrary. Therefore, you leave it in when you say, "other than Section blank," which I understand is the one relating to communist affiliation.

ANTHONY: That is correct. The purpose of the proposed amendment is to exclude all other prohibitions in the Constitution other than the prohibition of any person holding an office who belongs to a subversive group.

HEEN: In other words then, as I understand it, that would permit persons holding public office or positions to run for election to the convention.

ANTHONY: That is correct; that would permit judges, legislators and other state officers, which might otherwise be prohibited from holding two offices, to hold an office as a delegate to any future constitutional convention.

FUKUSHIMA: Will the movant of the amendment accept the further amendment by stating "Section blank of Article blank"?

ANTHONY: That's accepted.

CHAIRMAN: Before the question is put, Delegate Anthony, the Chair assumes that the original amendment which you had offered is withdrawn? You had an original amendment which simply read, "Notwithstanding any other provision of this Constitution to the contrary." Would you withdraw that in favor of the amendment which you have now proposed?

ANTHONY: I do.

ASHFORD: Before we vote, may I explain my vote? I shall vote against this amendment because in my opinion it is a gross impropriety for the bench to sit in on a constitution of which they will be the interpreters.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment.

ANTHONY: I think - - I don't know whether that has been fully discussed or not, but - - Am I out of order?

CHAIRMAN: You have the floor, Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: We did debate that at great length in the judiciary article. And I certainly feel there's a great deal in what the delegate from Molokai said. It has been said in a jocular tone here that we were cutting Judge Wirtz out of future constitutional conventions. But it wasn't the person that we were debating. We were debating with the principle, whether or not a judge should sit in a constitutional convention and one of the considerations was the one which was just raised by the delegate from Molokai, and I think it is a valid consideration. We voted on it once in the judiciary article, and I'm inclined to think that we should not make the exceptions for judicial officers, whatever we do for other officers.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

YAMAMOTO: Will you please state the question.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment offered by Delegate Anthony to the third paragraph of Section 2 appearing on page 2 of the Committee Report No. 48 is as follows:

Notwithstanding any provision in this Constitution to the contrary, other than Section _____ of Article _____, any qualified voter of the district concerned shall be eligible to membership in the convention.

All those - -

HEEN: Point of information. I am in agreement with what was stated by the delegate from Molokai. Notwithstanding the fact that Delegate Wirtz has made some valuable contribution here in the deliberations of the Convention, a judicial officer, in my opinion, should not be a delegate to a constitutional convention because that judicial officer might be called upon to interpret the Constitution, as to whether or not some particular matter is constitutional or otherwise. I think that's a principle that should apply here, that no judicial officer should be placed in a position where he may have to interpret what he has done in a constitutional convention.

ANTHONY: In order that the delegates will not misunderstand my position, I was merely doing a job of draftsmanship here, because I thought it was the sense, judging from the debate yesterday, that they wanted judges to sit in future constitutional conventions. I still think, as a matter of principle, it's not correct.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, you requested the floor?

ROBERTS: I asked a point of information before.

CHAIRMAN: State your information.

ROBERTS: The two blanks that are left in the proviso, are they to be confined only to the blanks in the judiciary article?

CHAIRMAN: Will the mover answer that question?

ANTHONY: No, that will only refer to the section wherein there is incorporated, pursuant to a mandate of Congress, that no person shall hold office who belongs to any subversive group or the Communist Party or whatever it is.

ROBERTS: What I had in mind is when we get to the section on the legislative article, I feel that the legislators have as much to contribute as other individuals in the community on the constitutional convention. I don't want to be - - have that precluded when the question comes up.

TAVARES: It's my understanding that that "Section blank of Article blank" referred to in the proposed amendment refers to Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 24, and that the Style Committee will insert the proper numbering when that article and section are adopted.

RICHARDS: I can't see why all this hullabaloo about judges being in the convention. The fact is that he might be a judge today and a practicing attorney the next day, and any attorney that attends a convention is apt to be a judge the following day and still rule on the matter that was taken up in the convention. I don't see any difference at all.

CHAIRMAN: Are you all ready for the - -

H. RICE: I second Mr. Richards' thought on this matter. And don't forget, in spite of that it's the people that elect whoever comes to this convention, and they will decide whether he's fit to go or not, and I've seen judges disqualify themselves because they had. There are a lot of judges - - There are going to be lot of judges in this territory, and he could disqualify himself if necessary.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that paragraph three as amended be tentatively approved.

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of that motion will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

TAVARES: There was one other paragraph which was deferred. That was the fourth paragraph of Section 2, and I have an amendment to propose that I think will take care of the argument over that section. I'm having it mimeographed, but I will read it. I withdraw my amendment until it comes back, Mr. Chairman.

PORTEUS: Can we proceed with the other articles, and then at a later time, as soon as this is mimeographed, we can move back?

CHAIRMAN: Then we proceed to Section 3.

FUKUSHIMA: Section 3 has to do with the amendments proposed by the legislature. It reads,

> Amendments proposed by legislature. The legislature may propose amendments to the Constitution in the following manner: (a) By adopting the same, in the manner required for legislation, by a two-thirds vote of each house on final reading, after either or both houses shall have given the governor at least ten days' written notice of the final form of the proposed amendment; or, (b) by adopting the same, in the manner required for legislation, with or without such notice to the governor, by a majority vote of each house on final reading, at each of two successive sessions of the legislature.

I move at this time that these two paragraphs be tentatively approved.

HAYES: I second the motion.

AKAU: Point of information. "At each of two successive sessions of the legislature," I wonder if that can be clarified. Why do you need two?

FUKUSHIMA: I think that can be taken care of by the Style Committee.

TAVARES: I think the question was as to why we have to have two successive legislatures approve. The difference is this. The alternative method one, if at a single session, two-thirds of the members of each house vote for an amendment, it can be submitted right away. But if they don't get a two-thirds vote, then they must pass it by a majority vote in two successive sessions and then submit it to the people for ratification. The point being if it finds enough approval to get a two-thirds vote at one session, why it can be submitted right away. But if it can't find enough approval to have a two-thirds vote at one session, then it must have two successive sessions approve it by a majority vote.

AKAU: Pursuant to that same idea, supposing, for example, the same people were in one session and in another session, are you going to be tied both ways?

TAVARES: There is such a thing, you know, as people changing their minds or seeing the light in the two years between sessions, or between - - in the period between two sessions. It's quite possible they'll pass, inadvisably and hastily by a majority vote in one session, a provision that they would find after due consideration is not so proper. Or the people will educate them, or someone will, that it's not so proper.

ASHFORD: I had thought that Delegate Akau's question ran to another point, which I think should have some reference in the report of this committee, "two successive." Now one of the judges of the circuit court in Honolulu construed two successive as meaning three, on the theory that the first year was not a successive year. That was in the divorce court, if the chairman will remember. I think that some interpretation of that should be included in the report of committee.

TAVARES: I think that the clause that the delegate just spoken refers to was a clause that said, "published for three successive weeks." But we have said, "at each of two successive sessions." That covers it. "At each of two successive sessions." That only means two sessions.

HEEN: Addressing myself on paragraph a, does that involve the veto of the governor?

FUKUSHIMA: We have the following section, Section 4, where we say the veto is inapplicable. In other words, subparagraph a which the delegate from the fourth district is referring to will be adequately covered by Section 4. That takes care of that.

HEEN: That's correct. Now as to paragraph b, was it intended that reference to two successive sessions, that one might be a general, a regular session, and the successive, say, special session?

TAVARES: Yes. In my argument just lately, I mentioned two years. That's wrong. It's any two successive sessions. It could be one regular session and one special session, or it could be a special session followed by a regular session, as long as there are two successive sessions, or it could be two special sessions, yes.

CHAIRMAN: Are you all ready for the question? Tentatively approve?

SHIMAMURA: May I ask a question? I take it that under paragraph a the words "two-thirds vote of each house" means two-thirds vote of the entire membership of each house?

TAVARES: That is correct. On final reading, that means third reading.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, do you wish to be recognized by the Chair? If not, all those in favor of the motion to adopt tentatively the first paragraph of Section 3 will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: The second paragraph reads,

> Upon such adoption, the proposed amendments shall be entered on the journals, with the ayes and noes, and published once in each of four successive weeks, in at least one newspaper with general circulation in each senatorial district wherein such a newspaper is published, within the two months' period immediately preceding the next general election for members of the legislature.

I move at this time that this paragraph be tentatively approved.

KAWAHARA: Second that motion.

AKAU: Does "published" mean the same as circulated? We haven't the word "circulated" in there, and I was wondering, a newspaper could be published, could be in one house, but circulation, I think has a different connotation.

HEEN: The Star-Bulletin, the foremost paper in the territory, is published in Honolulu, but it has a circulation throughout the territory. Take the Maui News, it's published in Wailuku, but I don't think it circulates in Kauai. Therefore, it wouldn't be a good paper.

AKAU: Would it be in order then, since the delegate from the fourth district has explained the question of circulation, to amend "published and circulated" or "circulated"? Would that clarify that?

FUKUSHIMA: I believe there is a phrase, "published once in each of four successive weeks, in at least one newspaper of general circulation." I believe that would cover what the delegate from the fifth district has in mind.

LOPER: May I ask whether it was intended in the last line of this paragraph to exclude special elections? It reads "within the two months' period immediately preceding the next general election for the members of the legislature."

CHAIRMAN: Is that an amendment you are offering?

TAVARES: As I recall - -

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, Delegate Tavares.

LOPER: I was merely asking for information, whether it was intentional to leave out any provision for special election.

TAVARES: That was done with malice aforethought. The idea was that these legislators who passed this amendment are going to be required, at least those who are going to run again, to go before the electorate and explain that proposed amendment to the electorate at the general election where they are running, and not have it at a special election. The thought was that it would be more of an incentive to have them explain to the voters what the provisions were and what the pros and cons were of this proposed amendment. And perhaps get a better vote and a more intelligent vote on it than if it was held at a special election where the people might not be willing to carry the ball.

ANTHONY: I have an amendment to this paragraph, the paragraph under debate. The language which was just referred to by the Delegate Akau, "published once in each of four successive weeks, in at least one newspaper of general circulation, in each senatorial district," I think that's an unhappy expression, and I would substitute for that "in at least one newspaper of general circulation in the state," and delete "in each senatorial district wherein such a newspaper is published." In other words, if you publish it it in a newspaper of general circulation which is published and circulated throughout the state, that is the requirement. You don't care whether it's in the senatorial district or any other kind of district.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

HEEN: Second that motion.

TAVARES: It seems to me that in the case of a constitutional amendment, it should have a little higher degree of publicity than a mere law, which only needs to be published in one newspaper of general circulation throughout the territory. Therefore, if you do publish it in more than one paper, I don't see any harm in it. There should be as wide publicity as possible and the little extra expense required for that, it seems to me, shouldn't deter us from acquiring that extra publicity.

There is another matter and that is, it is a well-known fact that the rural newspapers in this country have a tremendous circulation that is not always tapped by the state-wide or nation-wide publications. They have their own editorials and they have their own subscribers who may not actually subscribe for the state-wide paper, and, therefore, I think it's a good thing if they have a newspaper of general circulation in each senatorial district, that they publish it in that newspaper in addition to the state-wide newspaper.

HEEN: If Oahu is going to be divided into two senatorial districts, and all the newspapers are published in the fourth district - - Still, it might have a circulation in the fifth. I think it's all right.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? You are voting on the amendment offered by Delegate Anthony. The words "the state" be inserted and the words "each senatorial district" be deleted.

ANTHONY: Although I think it's a good amendment, I'll withdraw it.

CHAIRMAN: Then I think a motion is in order to tentatively adopt paragraph two of Section 3.

FUKUSHIMA: I've already made the motion.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry. All those in favor will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: The third paragraph reads,

> At such general election, the proposed amendments shall be submitted to the electors for approval or rejection upon the ballot separate from that upon which the names of candidates appear.

I move that this paragraph be tentatively approved.

KAWAHARA: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: Fourth paragraph reads,

> The conditions of and requirements for ratification of such proposed amendments shall be the same as provided for in Section 2 of this article relating to ratification at a general election.

I move that this paragraph be tentatively approved.

KAWAHARA: Second it.

ROBERTS: I'd like to propose an amendment to this paragraph. The amendment is taken from the provisions of the New Jersey State Constitution which provides an identical procedure on amendment as set forth in this section, but the provision dealing with the approval reads as follows: "If the proposed amendment or amendments or any of them"– I'm having this mimeographed, and copies will be available for the delegates–

> If the proposed amendment or amendments or any of them shall be approved by a majority of the legally qualified voters of the state voting thereon, the same shall become part of the Constitution, on the thirtieth day after the election, unless otherwise provided in the amendment or amendments.

I move that paragraph four of Section 3 be amended by deleting the paragraph and substituting the language I just read.

MAU: I second the motion.

BRYAN: I think that we've already voted on the substance of that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will ask the mover of that amendment to read over what you have just read, apparently from the New Jersey Constitution.

ROBERTS:

> If the proposed amendment or amendments, or any of them, shall be approved by a majority of the legally qualified voters of the state voting thereon, the same shall become part of the Constitution on the thirtieth day after the election, unless otherwise provided in the amendment or amendments.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, Delegate Bryan here has raised a point of order, his grounds being that in substance the same is covered by the provision as set forth in this proposal. Will you - -

ROBERTS: May I speak to that, please. It seems to me that we have provided for two methods of amending this Constitution. All that we have voted on thus far is on the question of the provision for the calling of a constitutional convention. This section provides for amendments proposed by the legislature. It's a separate section, and therefore has separate provisions. I can see no objection to having separate provisions for ratification in those two sections. The only thing that we voted on in Section 3 - - excuse me, in Section 2, was not on the question of a majority vote, but on a question on a 25 per cent vote. It seems to me, therefore, that we shall be voting on an entirely different question and with different substance.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will resolve the doubt in favor of the movant and declares that the amendment is in order.

TAVARES: I agree that it is not out of order. I do believe, though, that it is out of line with what this Convention has already decided it wants for the constitutional convention type of amendment, and, therefore, I see no reason for departing from them. There is a further objection, I think should be pointed out, and that is the amendment itself proposed by the legislature may be one that the legislature itself in the proposal doesn't want to take effect in 30 days. That should be left to the legislature or to the people drafting the amendment as to when it becomes effective, and an absolute time to make it effective is inadvisable. I think the amendment should be defeated.

ANTHONY: On the assumed legal impasse that there would be a different date as provided in the contemplated act or amendment passed by the legislature and the proposed amendment, I don't see that presents any problem. If the legislature, for instance, would approve an amendment to take effect two years hence, then by operation of this, that amendment would take effect 30 days after the expiration of the two years as provided in the amendment. It seems to me that this is - - it will give an opportunity for the people by a majority at any election, if they vote in favor of a particular amendment, that that amendment would be put into the Constitution. It seems highly desirable to me.

PORTEUS: This is the argument that we had before. I don't know that we're going to change any votes. My opinion is the same as it was before. I think the method of adoption should be consistent. Because there are few of the outside islanders not here who voted against the other, I intend to ask for roll call on this matter and if at the end I think we've lost, I'll change my vote to have an opportunity to reconsider when the rest of the members are present.

NIELSEN: I believe that this is going to defeat what we voted on yesterday and that was that the outside islands should control the Senate. With this in the Constitution, why the proposed amendment might be on the reapportionment of the Senate and with this amendment in this section, why, it will kill what we did yesterday.

BRYAN: My objection to the proposed amendment is not on the basis of the majority, it's on the basis of the majority voting on the amendment; and we get back to the same old bugaboo of ten people voting on it, and if six people say yes, the amendment is ratified by the people. That is my objection to the proposed amendment.

ROBERTS: May I answer Mr. Nielsen's question? He raised the question as to whether or not this would nullify the action taken yesterday. It does not. The action yesterday indicates very specifically that there can be no constitutional change on that question, and, therefore, the question cannot be put in the amendment. If it is put, it has to carry all of the outside islands. So it seems to me raising that question does not go to this issue. That question was decided and, so far as I know, it has not been reconsidered. The only question here is on an amendment, which is proper, which requires a majority of the qualified voters voting thereon to approve it.

[The last part of Delegate Roberts' speech and the next twenty minutes of debate were not recorded. The following is taken from the minutes.]

Delegate Roberts stated the other proviso in the constitution had other limitations and that required a majority in each of the counties; that it seemed to him that question had no bearing on this particular proposal and the proposal would not take away the provision acted on yesterday.

Delegate Ihara stated that having voted in the majority on paragraph six of Section 2, he would move to reconsider action on that paragraph.

The Chair ruled that Delegate Ihara was out of order, that the committee was debating on the last paragraph of Section 3, and that the delegate was introducing entirely new matter.

Delegate Lai stated that he could not see any difference between amendments made by the convention or by the legislature, and he did not think there should be ratification of amendments by different methods.

Delegate Nielsen stated that he would like to hear from the legal staff here.

Delegate Heen stated that in connection with the remark about the famous proviso about not changing the makeup of the Senate, his statement in that regard was that one constitutional convention cannot bind a subsequent constitutional convention, and he felt that that provision had no validity at all; that it would be the same thing as one legislature passing an act and saying in that act, "This Act shall continue for ten years" and then another legislature comes along after that and repeals it; they cannot bind a succeeding legislature.

Delegate Wirtz stated that what the delegate from the second district wanted clarified was that this proposed amendment now would in effect, as to this type of amendment, differ from the procedures adopted yesterday by eliminating that proviso in Section 2.

Following considerable debate, Delegate Roberts stated that in order to clarify any misunderstanding there might be with the delegates from the outside islands, even though he had voted against the proviso which was in the first section, he would move a further amendment to include that proviso in the section so there would be no doubt in the minds of the outside island delegates that he wanted to take away anything which they obtained on the floor yesterday.

(RECESSS

The Chair called upon Delegate Roberts, asking if he had made an amendment to his original motion.

Delegate Roberts stated that the paragraph as it now reads, that it was not his intention to delete the proviso, and therefore he moved that the same proviso which was now provided in the paragraph also be included in his amendment so that the section before the committee would contain the same thing after the semicolon on page 2, "provided that no constitutional provision altering" etc., which was acted on earlier in the Convention, so the language would be the amendment plus the proviso, and he moved for a roll call vote.

Delegate James Trask seconded the motion.

Delegate Kellerman asked to speak against the first part of the amendment, not the proviso; that this amendment up to the point of the proviso was now reducing the number required votes to amend the Constitution which the committee had already approved, where the amendments were being proposed by a convention especially called for drafting amendments to the Constitution, and that it seemed to her that the reasoning was upside down.

Delegate Anthony stated that he thought the committee should take a firm vote on this, that this was the same question they had voted on a few minutes ago; though he was in sympathy with it, he thought it had been settled by the prior vote.

Delegate Ihara stated that regarding the question by the lady delegate from the fourth district, that was the reason why he had put that question about reconsideration.

Delegate Porteus asked the mover to read the amendment in its entirety.

Delegate Roberts stated that the amendment provides that "If the proposed amendment or amendments or any of them shall be approved by a majority of the legally qualified voters of the state voting thereon, the same shall become part of the Constitution on the thirtieth day after the election, unless otherwise provided in the amendment or amendments," and then the proviso that the committee had already acted upon, which is part of the previous paragraph.

A roll call being demanded, the motion was put and lost on the following vote:

Ayes, 13 (Akau, Arashiro, Corbett, Heen, Ihara, Kawahara, Kawakami, Loper, Mau, Nielsen, Ohrt, Roberts, Shimamura). Noes, 40. Excused, 10 (Fong, Kauhane, Lee, Mizuha, Noda, Phillips, Sakakihara, Silva, A. Trask, Yamauchi).

Delegate King advised the committee that he had granted permission to certain of the delegates to attend a meeting of the Holdover Committee of the legislature, and so if they did not answer, it was to be understood that they were properly excused.

The Chair thereupon put the motion to tentatively adopt the paragraph, which was carried.

Delegate Fukushima moved for the adoption of Section 3 as amended. Seconded by Delegate Lai and carried.

Delegate Fukushima then proceeded to read Section 4, and then moved that it be adopted. Seconded by Delegate Mau and carried.

Delegate Fukushima at this time moved that the committee go back now to paragraph four of Section 2; that the amendment proposed by Delegate Tavares had been distributed and was on the delegates' desks.

Delegate Tavares moved the adoption of the amendment, which he read, as follows:

> Unless the legislature shall otherwise provide, the delegates to such convention shall consist of the same number, and be elected from the same areas, and the convention shall be called and conducted in the same manner, as nearly as practicable, as were required for the Hawaii State Constitutional Convention of 1950.

Seconded by Delegate Nielsen, and carried.

Delegate Fukushima moved that Section 2, as amended, be adopted. Seconded by Delegate Lai, and carried.

Delegate Fukushima then moved that the committee go back to Section 1 which had been tentatively approved, so the opponents to this section and the proponents of the initiative could file their amendment if they saw fit.

The Chair stated that the committee would go to the amendment to Proposal No. 9, together with Committee Report No. 47.

Delegate Fukushima at this time stated that the committee had for consideration now Standing Committee Report 47 and the Minority Report, which was Standing Committee Report No. 49, which dealt with initiative, referendum and recall, and he stated that he would like to turn this matter over to his vice chairman, Delegate Lai.

Delegate Lai stated that he felt that the committee should take the two reports together, the minority report and the majority report, because they were on the same subject.

The Chair asked if it was the desire of the committee to go through the proposed amendment, and Delegate Lai suggested that the minority make their motion, and the matter could then be discussed.

Delegate Fukushima stated he would like to clarify the situation, and he believed the Secretary would have the same information, that Standing Committee Report No. 47 had to do with statutory initiative and referendum; that the standing committee had before it two proposals favoring the inclusion of the initiative and referendum, which were Proposals 113 and 148; that the majority voted on the question and decided to reject Proposals 113 and 148, and recommend the filing of those two proposals; that Standing Committee Report 49 had attached thereto a proposal in the form of an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 9; that this had to be done because of this situation. The minority could not come out with a minority report inasmuch as it was not a committee, being only a minority; they could not amend another individual proposal referred to the committee because that would violate one of the rules of the Convention which tried to discourage the adoption of any individual proposals; that therefore, in order to have their minority proposal considered, it was suggested by the Secretary, in accordance with the rules, that that amendment be appended to Committee Proposal No. 9, and so he believed the vice chairman was right, that if the proponents of initiative would like to amend Committee Proposal No. 9, they should carry the ball and take up the laboring oar.

Delegate Heen stated that it seemed to him that action should be taken on Committee Report No. 47, wherein it was recommended that two proposals be filed, they would serve no further purpose at all in this Convention, and he thereupon moved that Standing Committee Report No. 47 be adopted. Seconded by Delegate Smith.

The Chair stated that as he understood it, the suggestion was that the committee take up Committee Proposal 9 with the specific understanding that the amendments offered by the minority be considered afterwards.

Delegate Heen stated that the minority report was designed to amend Committee Proposal No. 9, and therefore had nothing to do with the proposals recommended for filing.

Delegate Fukushima stated that Proposal 148 was about the same as the proposal submitted by the minority.

Delegate Nielsen stated that that was correct, and asked if it would not be proper to go ahead and move without accepting this Report No. 47 and then the committee would be able to go on and let the minority amend the proposal.

Delegate Lai stated that if they adopted Report No. 47, that would foreclose any minority amendment, and the Chair agreed that that was how he felt about the problem before the committee.

Delegate Porteus asked if it would not be possible to proceed as the Chair had suggested, that the committee consider the question by the minority of the standing committee; that the burden was on them to stand up and make the motion and ask for passage, and it was now in order for them to be recognized and make their amendment.

Delegate Nielsen thereupon moved that the minority report and amendment submitted with the minority report be agreed to, with reference to Committee Proposal No. 9.

The Chair inquired whether he meant the whole amendment, and Delegate Nielsen stated that it could be considered section by section or the whole thing, and he again moved that the amendment be agreed to. Seconded by Delegate Kawahara.

Delegate Lee asked if that meant the amendment was in toto to adopt the entire proposal, and also asked if it would not be better to discuss the proposal section by section.

Delegate Anthony stated that he thought all the minority wanted was a vote on the simple issue whether or not there should be the initiative incorporated in the Constitution and he asked why the committee couldn't take a simple vote on that issue, rather than going through this step by step.

Delegate Lai agreed with Delegate Anthony, and felt that the matter should be discussed as a whole, instead of section by section.

The Chair thereupon asked if the minority would agree to that suggestion by Delegate Anthony.

Delegate Kawahara, in answer to the question, stated that the problem arises that some people were probably inclined to believe that some clarification of this proposal might be made, and if the committee took the proposal as a whole, probably it would not give a chance to those people to express their views, and he was inclined to believe that it would be better to take the proposal up section by section.

Delegate Porteus stated that as he understood, the suggestion was made that the committee attempt to determine now whether this Convention was in favor of a constitutional provision covering the initiative and referendum; that if it was indicated that they favored something like that, then the committee would go forward with this other matter section by section; that if the people don't want it, no matter how it was spelled out, the committee would be wasting a lot of time going over it section by section; that the idea was to get a concensus vote and then after that get down to the individual sections, if necessary.

Delegate Crossley stated that he believed the original motion that was originally made and seconded said exactly that, and would accomplish that purpose, the original motion was the adoption of the entire proposal of the minority.

Following some discussion, Delegate Nielsen stated that there was an understanding yesterday as to how this was to proceed, but if the committee were to vote on the major question as to whether there should be initiative at all in the Constitution, he thought it would foreclose the minority from presenting what they thought they had to sell to the Convention, and he stated he wanted to hear what they had, and he thought that they should consider it section by section.

[Recording resumed.]

LAI: To be technical, don't you think we should adopt Report No. 47 first, because that is the majority report from the committee, and that's what we are here to decide, to decide on committee reports. If the minority want to amend this thing, I think they should come afterward. I don't mind, I concede to the idea of voting on the subject first. If you all favor to have that in the Constitution, it's all right with me; then we go section by section, see. But I think the committee report should come in preference to any other report.

MAU: We had an understanding yesterday how this was to proceed. We're on the right tract in accordance with the agreement yesterday, but if we were to vote on the major question as to whether or not we should have initiative at all in the Constitution, I think it would foreclose the minority from presenting what they think they have, something to sell to this Convention, and I want to hear what they've got to sell. I think that even though that motion is to adopt the whole minority report, they should consider it section by section; otherwise, we cannot intelligently vote on this important question.

KING: The Standing Committee Report No. 47, which is the majority report, recommends that there be no initiative and referendum. If a motion were offered for the adoption of that report and seconded, then the minority could offer an amendment that Standing Committee Report No. 49 be considered in place of it. Wouldn't that make a clean-cut vote on the issue?

CHAIRMAN: Insofar as it relates to the subject matter of initiative and referendum upon statutory matters.

KING: Right.

TAVARES: Unfortunately, I think we ought to clarify what Committee Report No. 47 does. Committee Report No. 47 recommends against the initiative method of adopting statutes. Then Committee Report No. 48 refers back to Committee Report No. 47 insofar as 48 relates to constitutional amendments and says for the same reason stated in Report No. 47, we reject initiative - - the initiative method for constitutional amendments. I think the members should understand that so that if we adopt 47, we are only voting on the right to initiate legislation by the initiative method. That's all right with me, I'll vote either way.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is trying to ascertain what procedure the assembly would desire to adopt.

NIELSEN: If the delegates here have read the minority report and are ready to vote, that is the big question I have in my mind. I feel that with so many states allowing the people to initiate and handle legislative matters by initiative and referendum that this should be considered and that it really has a place in the Constitution if the people of the State of Hawaii are going to really be their government. Now in committee, five people decided that all the people in the territory should not have any right to initiative or referendum as to statutory measures. I think it should have further consideration than for just five people to decide that for the entire State of Hawaii. That's the reason I filed the minority report.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is still in doubt as to what procedure this committee may follow.

TAVARES: To clarify matters, I second Delegate King's motion that we adopt Committee Report No. 47, which will dispose of the question of statutory initiative.

HOLROYDE: Point of order. I think there is a motion before the house by Delegate Nielsen to adopt this as an amendment, his minority report. He made that motion and it was seconded.

CHAIRMAN: The order is well taken. There is a motion made by Delegate Nielsen and duly seconded.

TAVARES: Point of information. Does that mean that it's a proposed amendment to Committee Proposal No. 9? But it doesn't say where it will go and - -

KING: At the end of the Committee Report No. 49, it recommends the addition of this initiative and referendum proposal to Proposal No. 9. It is an amendment to Proposal No. 9. It seems to me the question is now before the Convention and can be discussed on the basis of Mr. Nielsen's motion that has been already seconded. I didn't make a motion, I only made a suggestion.

CHAIRMAN: That is the reason why the Chair felt that the suggestion made by Delegate Anthony was an excellent one, namely, we have taken up the constitutional revision and amendments, insofar as the majority - - committee proposal by the majority is concerned. Then the recommendation made by the minority is that the initiative method be applied with reference to constitutional amendments.

HEEN: The situation as it stands now is this. The motion, as I understand it, is to adopt the minority report and if that is adopted, it would mean the adoption of the proposal that was attached to that minority report, and that would be an amendment of Committee Proposal No. 9. So we can at this time debate that whole question as to whether or not Committee Proposal No. 9 shall be amended by this proposal submitted by the minority.

WIRTZ: I'd like to point out one thing in this connection, and that is that the amendment as submitted with the minority report applies to both constitutional and statutory matters. So that if it is adopted, it will, in effect, require us to reconsider everything we have done insofar as constitutional methods of amendment, because it changes the entire procedure and includes an additional method, namely, the initiative.

NIELSEN: May I speak on the amendment? The reasons are outlined in Standing Committee Report No. 49. I'm not going to take the time to read them, but the main thing that comes before the Convention at this time is the fact that we've made arrangements to amend our Constitution, but we've ignored the right of the people in any way whatsoever to initiate statutory measures. I think that possibly by amending the sections that we voted on this morning so far as the Constitution, it could be made to cover statutory matters as well as the Constitution. But whatever we do, as decided by the Convention, is entirely satisfactory.

In the amendment as proposed, there are some that do not like the direct method. They prefer the indirect method and that could be corrected if we went through the whole amendment section by section. However, by getting the sense of the Convention on a vote as to whether they want to give the people the right to initiate - - initiative or referendum measures as to statutory legislation, that will decide the whole thing and I have no objection if a vote is taken on that, on the amendment in that respect.

CHAIRMAN: Then, Delegate Nielsen, is the Chair correct in understanding from you that you would be willing to withdraw the original motion made with reference to the amendment and ascertain at this time the consensus of the delegates with reference to the question of direct initiative of constitutional amendment?

NIELSEN: That would be all right. I'd like a roll call vote on it.

CHAIRMAN: Then would someone make a proper motion to that effect, please?

MAU: Point of information. Do I understand that the minority now is willing to concede that they are - - that portion of their amended - - proposed amended proposal relating to constitutional amendment by initiative be dropped? Is that the idea? And that they are now merely advocating initiative insofar as statutory law is concerned?

CHAIRMAN: No, we are shortly to ascertain how the Committee of the Whole feels on the question of constitutional amendments by direct initiative.

MAU: No, I would like to have one of the members of the minority answer that. As I got it, that is their position. They are not interested now in attempting to amend the Constitution by initiative, merely pointing it to statutory law. Is that correct?

NIELSEN: That is correct. We have already devoted yesterday and most of the morning on the constitutional amendment. As to statutory amendments, we have made no provision whatever. Now, I would like to see a vote taken on whether statutory amendments shall be subject to initiative or referendum.

HOLROYDE: Wouldn't we be able to get at this if the minority moved for the amendment to Committee Proposal No. 9 as submitted by them in substance only, with the understanding that if they win approval by that vote, that we will go into the detail of their section thereafter?

DELEGATE: There is such a motion before the house, I believe.

HOLROYDE: I understand Delegate Nielsen withdrew his motion.

NIELSEN: No, I don't think I withdrew the motion, but I said that if they wanted to take a vote regarding initiative and referendum of statutory measures, why that would practically decide the same thing. As I understand it, at present we have a motion to adopt 47, which is to file initiative or statutory referendum. Now I have amended that to include -- my amendment would reverse that. It would include initiative and referendum by the people. Now if my amendment fails, why then, the people don't want initiative or referendum covering statutory measures.

ROBERTS: I think we are in the Committee of the Whole, the purpose of which is to get the sense of the Convention with regard to specific proposals and on specific questions. I for one, cannot support the article proposed by the minority. It covers initiative, it covers referendum, it covers statutory initiative, it covers constitutional initiative. It seems to me that we've got to have something to discuss specifically, not an over-all proposition. It would seem to me, therefore, that under normal procedures, the minority would ask that its report be substituted for the majority and you would get a straight out-and-out vote on the question one way or the other. In the Committee of the Whole, however, I think it's perfectly proper to get the sense of the Convention and to put the minority report to us, not on adoption, but for consideration, and then if any amendments are proposed on specific items, we then have the opportunity to vote on them. So something has to be gotten before our Committee of the Whole to discuss.

I would therefore suggest that instead of voting on the entire proposal, that the committee consider the proposal and see if any amendments are offered to that which might be acceptable to some, so that we get the sense of the Convention. Otherwise, if we vote this thing down, you're pau, and you have had no opportunity for others to express their opinion with regard to some modifications.

PORTEUS: I think what the delegate has said is perfectly true. There may be those in the Convention who have more or less made up their minds after the study of this subject, what they'd like to do. I've consulted with the representative from the -- delegate from the second representative district, who made a previous motion. He informed me that he would be satisfied to bring this matter to a head on a motion that this Committee of the Whole now proceed to consider statutory initiative and referendum. If that carries, we will then go into the subject. If it loses, it means that the Committee of the Whole does not desire any further investigation of the subject. He has informed me that he's willing to make a motion to that effect to bring this to a head.

CHAIRMAN: Is that the motion?

NIELSEN: That is the motion and I so move.

SMITH: I'll second it.

H. RICE: I'm surprised that three of the so-called neighbor islands should sign a minority report like this. With 70 per cent of the vote here in this City and County, what chance will the outside islands have in any matter of legislation? We are sunk.

SMITH: I believe that in the statement of Delegate Nielsen, he didn't think that five persons in a committee should be able to tell the whole territory whether we should have initiative or referendum or recall or not. He was asking, I believe, all he was asking was that a verification of the five be made by the Committee of the Whole.

CHAIRMAN: You ready for the question? All those desiring roll call will signify by the show of hands. Keep your hands up, please.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. What is the question?

CHAIRMAN: The question is the suggestion made by Delegate Porteus, which was accepted by Delegate Nielsen to be his motion, that the Committee of the Whole proceed to determine whether or not the committee favors statutory initiative and referendum. And if that is adopted, then we shall go into this amendment, section by section, relating to that subject matter.

ROBERTS: Point of order. I don't think that the question was that. As I heard the question, it was whether or not the Committee of the Whole wants to consider the question of initiative -- statutory initiative and referendum.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. The Chair stands corrected.

CROSSLEY: On a point of order, I believe that the previous motion made by the delegate from Hawaii should be withdrawn.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair understood that he was willing to withdraw that in favor of that subsequent motion.

LEE: Point of information. When the first motion was made to adopt Committee Report 47, it made sense. Now the motion has been changed, as I get it, whether or not the Committee of the Whole wants to take up the subject of statutory initiative. Actually, you have a better vote on the first motion than on your second. The second you say you don't even want to consider it, whereas the other one you say you are for or you are against it.

LAI: I think Delegate Lee is right. I think the vote should be on Report No. 47. If the opinion of the Convention doesn't want initiative and referendum in the Constitution, then let's vote for Report No. 47. And if you do want it, then vote against that. I think that's the proper way to do. The motion is already made and seconded; so if we take a vote on Report No. 47, that would clarify everything.

CHAIRMAN: There is a new motion before the Committee of the Whole now.

FUKUSHIMA: I think we're confusing a lot of things which are very simple. I move at this time, that it is the sense of this committee that we favor the inclusion in our Constitution of statutory initiative and referendum.

CHAIRMAN: Is that an amendment? There is a motion before --

FUKUSHIMA: Yes.

NIELSEN: Is it necessary for me to withdraw my previous motion? I so do.

DOI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: That will make one motion before the assembly. Will you state the motion again please, Delegate Fukushima?

FUKUSHIMA: I move that it is the sense of this committee that we include in our Constitution the provisions of statutory initiative and referendum.

CHAIRMAN: Second to that motion?

AKAU: I second it.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak to that question. It would seem to me that such a motion would prevent individuals who could support some provisions in the Constitution dealing with statutory initiative, perhaps not with the referendum, from getting to the question. The question is too broad; the question does not permit a show of the sense of this Convention with regard to the problem. I, therefore, would feel that I would have to vote against such a proposal, even though I could support, in proper language, a provision with regard to statutory initiative.

FUKUSHIMA: I withdraw my motion in that event and make a new motion. I move that it is the sense of this committee that we include in our Constitution the provision for statutory initiative.

NIELSEN: I'll second that.

LAI: I'm speaking for myself and for the members of this committee who signed a report against the inclusion of the initiative and referendum and recall in this Constitution. If you don't mind—bear with me for a few minutes—I will take up few main points from the report. Initiative and referendum are found in the constitutions of 19 states; most of these states adopted these methods of direct legislation between 1898 and 1918, and since then no other states have adopted them. This is because - -

MAU: What page are you reading from?

PORTEUS: I rise to a point of order. I don't think the speaker when making a speech, ought to be asked what page he's reading from.

LAI: No, this is my own words, to summarize the points.

MAU: Oh, excuse me. I'm sorry I thought he was reading from the majority report.

LAI: No, if you read that, we won't get home tonight. It's rather long, so I just want to summarize that.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed with your argument, Delegate Lai.

LAI: This is because the results were not as good as they had first claimed to be by those who believed that the cure for all of our ills was more direct democracy in all forms of government. Because of possible abuse, inherent defects of the system have become more apparent in recent years. And also because the legislative machinery has been modernized and improved by having more frequent sessions of the legislature, by adopting rules and procedure to expedite legislation, and to avoid ice-boxing of bills, and by having more adequate compensations, technical and other assistance to the legislators.

Proponents of initiative and referendum claim that people should be given more direct say in running our government. Delegates, you must remember our government is the representative type of government. It is the government of the people through elected representatives whose duty is to study problems and enact legislation that would be of greatest benefit to all the people. The legislature is the only branch of our government with its entire membership elected by the people. Initiative and referendum will tend to reduce the importance of the legislature and the responsibility of the legislators.

The use of the initiative eliminates deliberation, amendment and compromise usually necessary to produce sound and lasting legislation. The people must vote yes or no on the proposal once submitted to the electorate. In the legislature, a bill may be amended any number of times, and after considerable debate, its weaknesses are being disclosed, or opposition forces compromise between objections raised to its form or substance. After the initiative measure is submitted to the people, no matter how many weaknesses, evils or faults are discovered during the course of the campaign for or against its adoption, it cannot be amended; the people must take it or leave it as is.

Realizing this basic weakness, the proponent of the initiative have hit upon the indirect initiative as an alleged means of overcoming this defect. However, even this does not fully meet the situation. If an initiative measure appears to the legislature, to which it is submitted under the indirect initiative system, to be in bad draftsmanship, impracticable, or otherwise undesirable as to warrant its being entirely rejected, it is asking too much of human nature to expect them to spend days, perhaps weeks of study, debate and redrafting just to put the measure in as nearly perfect form as possible. The result would be submission of the original or some poorly redrafted substitute to the electorate to be voted on, without any further opportunity for amendment.

Initiative and referendum are expensive. The State must pay for the printing of petitions, ballots, information pamphlets, the cost of mailing such information to voters, other advertising costs, the checking of the petitions to see that they have been signed by requisite number of voters and the election expenses. Much greater expenses fall upon the sponsors and opponents of the measure. They must pay the cost of securing signers to the petition and underwrite an expensive campaign to inform and influence the voters on the issue. Your committee was given figures indicating the cost to defeat the Townsend pension plan in Oregon was $44,000. Recently, in California, because the taxpayer did not make available substantial private funds to oppose Proposal No. 4, which provided abnormally high payment to the aged, leaving insufficient funds for other government purposes - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Lai, you have two minutes more.

LAI: - - it was necessary to spend $900,000, imagine $900,000, to bring the subject before the electorate again and defeat it. Initiative has, according to some authorities, even produced professional publicists who, for stated fees of so much a head or other consideration, undertake to secure the required number of signers to any petition or to sway the election.

Say, I have a few more paragraphs to make. May I have unanimous consent to continue?

CHAIRMAN: You have one minute.

ANTHONY: I think the Chair should get the unanimous consent.

CHAIRMAN: You may proceed.

LAI: Thank you.

The small size of the proposed State of Hawaii having a population less than that of many large cities, with its less complex problems than those of most of the states which have a very large number of counties, make it possible for our legislators, because of personal knowledge and contact, to consider adequately and with reasonable promptness, all of the local and general problems which are likely to arise.

The fact is that, according to figures given to your committee, in a number of cases fewer persons voted on an initiative proposition than signed the petition. The small number of persons that often vote on such a question is further indication that the signing of an initiative petition is often procured without any real understanding of or interest in the measure on the part of the signer. This is because any possible opponent of the measure cannot be present at such time, and consequently is unable to expose false statements of fact, unsound arguments, half truths or to present countervailing arguments, facts or other pertinent information.

Referendum, independently of the initiative, for many of the foregoing reasons is also objectionable in the view of the majority of your committee. In addition it is believed that the referendum, whether compulsory or optional, tends to further weaken the legislature and to encourage it to pass the buck, and thereby avoid the responsibility to make laws, for which it is elected. A strong, responsible and responsive legislature can best be assured by giving it full and sole responsibility and holding its members thereto.

So, I therefore ask delegates here to vote against the initiative and referendum -- statutory initiative and referendum. Thank you.

H. RICE: Point of order. We've been considering yesterday and this morning Standing Committee Report 47 -- 48. It seems to me that Delegate Lai's first proposal was correct. If they have any amendment, they should amend that first section in Committee Report 48 and not switch over. And where are we going to end? Are we going to take another day and a half to talk over all these new proposals? I think we're wasting a lot of time.

CHAIRMAN: Strictly yes, but there was that explicit understanding before we considered the proposal submitted by the majority committee.

KING: If the amendment carried, the whole matter could be referred back to the committee to include in its final proposal a provision for statutory initiative and referendum. But the pending motion is only to approve of the statutory initiative, as I understand it. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: The motion pending before the Committee of the Whole now, it is that the sense of this committee that we include in our Constitution the provision of statutory initiative, period. All those in favor of that motion will signify by saying "aye."

DELEGATE: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: Will you signify by the show of your hands, how many of you desire roll call? Roll call.

Ayes, 19 (Akau, Arashiro, Doi, Fukushima, Ihara, Kauhane, Kawahara, Kawakami, Kido, Luiz, Mau, Nielsen, Roberts, Serizawa, St. Sure, J. Trask, Yamamoto, Yamauchi, Okino). Noes, 39. Excused, 5 (Mizuha, Noda, Phillips, Silva, A. Trask).

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that it is the sense of this committee that we favor the inclusion of statutory referendum.

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of that motion will signify by saying "aye," that is, for statutory referendum.

DELEGATES: Roll call.

ANTHONY: We don't need a roll call on that. I don't see why those in the minority don't recognize that.

CHAIRMAN: A request has been made. Will you signify by the show of your hands please, those desiring roll call. Three. All those in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." The motion is defeated. The noes have it.

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that we adopt Committee Proposal No. 47.

LAI: You mean the Committee Report No. 47.

FUKUSHIMA: That's right.

LAI: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of adopting Committee Report No. 47 will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe we have only one other thing to consider, so I'll make a motion at this time that it is the sense of this committee that we include in Section 1 of Proposal No. 9, popular initiative. I think that was the understanding. I'm not in favor of that, but in order that we may not foreclose the minority, it was understood when we passed Section 1. Now we voted merely on statutory initiative. Now the question is, we still have constitutional initiative. So I'll make a motion at this time that it is the sense of this committee that we favor initiating constitutional amendments, besides the initiation by the legislature and by constitutional convention, a third method which is popular initiative.

NIELSEN: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Will you restate that motion a little more clearly, please.

FUKUSHIMA: I move that it is the sense of this committee that we include in Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 9 popular initiative as the third method of initiating constitutional amendments.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded, "no." The noes have decidedly won.

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that we adopt Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 9.

CROSSLEY: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: Going back to the original proposal, Section 1, all those in favor of that motion please signify by saying "aye." All those opposed say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that we adopt the article on revisions and amendments in its entirety as amended.

LAI: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion.

BRYAN: I think the motion would be that when we arise, we report recommending --

FUKUSHIMA: I'm making that recommendation subsequently.

BRYAN: Is that correct? I retract my --

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of that motion, adopting Section 2 of this proposal as amended.

FUKUSHIMA: The entire article as amended.

CHAIRMAN: Oh! The entire article as amended, will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that we rise and report progress and when we do rise that we recommend the adoption of the article on revision and amendments as amended.

PORTEUS: I wonder whether it wouldn't also be appropriate to move -- include in the motion the adoption of the Committee Report 47.

CHAIRMAN: And Committee Report 48?

PORTEUS: And Committee Report 48 as well, and that 47 not be adopted. I mean 49.

HEEN: I would suggest that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again at a later date and in the mean time a written report be prepared when the committee sits again.

FUKUSHIMA: I'll accept that and I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor will signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no."

JUNE 24, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole will come to order, please. We have before us for consideration this morning Committee of the Whole Report No. 9. I'm sure printed copies of the report have been circulated and placed upon the desk of each delegate.

FUKUSHIMA: I move the adoption of Committee of the Whole Report No. 9 recommending passage of Committee Proposal No. 9 as amended on second reading.

DOI: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

FUKUSHIMA: I now move that the committee rise and report its recommendation, the adoption of Committee of the Whole Report No. 9.

KAM: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kam seconded the motion. All in favor of the motion signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded say "no." Carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on

ORDINANCES AND CONTINUITY OF LAW

(Article XVI)

Chairman: NELSON K. DOI

JULY 3, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole will now come into session to consider Committee Proposal No. 23 and Standing Committee Report No. 68. Is the chairman of the committee ready to proceed?

SHIMAMURA: Yes, Mr. Chairman, we are.

CHAIRMAN: Could Delegate Shimamura outline the procedure we should follow in considering this committee report and the committee proposal.

SHIMAMURA: I believe, if I may so suggest, that it will be preferable for us to consider each section as we go along, with some commentary on each section from a committee member.

CHAIRMAN: That is acceptable to the Chair, and I think we should follow that procedure.

SHIMAMURA: As to Section 1 of the Committee Proposal No. 23, I move for the adoption of the section.

SAKAKIHARA: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara has seconded the motion. It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 1 tentatively. Any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: Section 1 is adopted here. The delegates will recall that at the opening session of this Convention, a resolution was adopted adopting the Constitution of the United States on behalf of the people of Hawaii. Now Act 334, Section 3, requires such an adoption. Also Section 3 of H.R. 49, prior to its amendment by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate, also provided for such adoption. Now there is no mandatory requirement either in Act 334 or in H.R. 49 for incorporation of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States in our Constitution, but the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law felt that it would be a wholesome and a helpful thing to do; therefore the incorporation of Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any other discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to adopt will say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion to adopt Section 1 is carried.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 23.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 23. Any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: The purpose of this section is obviously to preserve existing rights, actions, proceedings, contracts, and so forth. The necessity of such a provision is also obvious. Unless we had such a provision, it may be that outstanding rights, obligations and contracts, actions may abate. Also, it is important that administration of law continue in spite of the change from a territorial to a state form of government. Also this section, as you will notice, in the second portion after the semicolon provides for the validity of all process previously issued in the name of the Territory of Hawaii. As everyone knows, under the Organic Act all process must run in the name of the Territory, and therefore, all process in the Territory, that is for the - - I think the laymen know what a process is, but as you know, process is any writ, warrant, summons, subpoena and so forth which is issued under authority of the courts. Now it validates, as I've said, all process issued prior to the admission of Hawaii into the Union as a state, even though such process may have been issued under the territorial form of government and by territorial courts. But this section, of course, does not seek to validate any defective writ; any writ which was defective, any process, that is, that was defective prior to the admission of the state into the Union will remain defective. For example, as I mentioned, in case a writ, a summons or an order to show cause omitted the style of the process, the Territory of Hawaii, then such a writ will not be validated merely by this section.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any other discussion? All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion is carried.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption, tentatively, of Section 3 of Proposal No. 23.

A. TRASK: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 3 of Committee Proposal No. 23. Any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: This section continues all laws of the Territory of Hawaii which are in force on the date of the admission of Hawaii into the states. It provides for the continuance of all laws which are not inconsistent with, or repugnant to, this new Constitution of Hawaii. And the term "laws" is intended to include all rules, regulations and ordinances of the City and County or counties having the force and effect of law.

Now as to the use of the word "mutatis mutandis" or "mutatis mutandis," if you like—some persons prefer the latter pronunciation—that means, as everyone knows, all changes, necessary changes being made, and those words were inserted at the suggestion of Miss Ashford, the vice-chairman of the committee, to take care of situations where the law may not be applicable by the use of the words, Territory or Territory of Hawaii or Treasurer of the Territory of Hawaii. But it is not intended by this, by the use of these words, that substantial changes should be made in the laws.

TAVARES: I take it that in line with the chairman's statement that this explanation is not exhaustive, there would also be included in the intent of this section the substitution of the proper officers or offices who may be the successors under different names even, entirely different names, of existing offices and officers. So that it will be implied that whatever function is transferred from an existing office to an office under the State will also be considered in the term substituting the proper names or terms for the ones existing beforehand.

SHIMAMURA: Yes; the statement made by the delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Tavares, is quite correct.

For example, we now have the secretary of state -- of the Territory rather, and in our new Constitution under the section on executive powers, we've included provision for the lieutenant governor. Now any function that is to be performed under our present laws by the secretary of Hawaii will be and shall be performed by the lieutenant governor.

TAVARES: There is one other thing. I believe I was probably overruled by the committee on this. I'm still a little concerned about the possibility of a hiatus by only continuing in effect the laws not inconsistent with the Constitution, and before the Convention is over, if I can think of any situations, I think they should either be covered by special ordinances or something else should be inserted to take care of any hiatus. I'm not going to make a point of it now, but I think we ought to bear that in mind. Something might occur to us under which merely continuing in effect the laws not inconsistent with the Constitution will leave a hole that isn't plugged.

SAKAKIHARA: I would like to -- I'm in accord with the statement made by the last speaker. That is the reason why I did not rise to second the motion to adopt Section 3. I think we should defer action on Section 3 so that Delegate Tavares, who raised this very question to the committee, it could be studied and adequate amendment could be offered.

TAVARES: I'm sorry. I did not intend to ask for delay on this but I felt that every member of the Convention ought to be directing his attention particularly to this section so that if anything did occur to him which left a hiatus or a hole that was not plugged, that it would be called to the attention of the Convention before it is over, and we can always reconsider. And as I say, I'm not sure enough of my ground to make a fight for it at the present time, but I think if we all think about possibilities we may find these holes and perhaps we can handle them by special provisions in another section of the ordinances.

HEEN: I believe that the use of this term "mutatis mutandis" will not take care of the situation where you have no secretary of state. Nowhere in any of the articles already presented to this Convention is there any definite description of the duties of the lieutenant governor. That will have to be taken care of by legislation and perhaps, as pointed out by Delegate Tavares, there may have to be somewhere in the schedule, or perhaps in the separate ordinance, that pending appropriate legislation the lieutenant governor shall exercise all of the powers and duties defined in the laws as to the secretary of the Territory who later on, of course, will become the secretary of state. There has been some discussion that all of these duties may be placed in the hands of the lieutenant governor and that he as such will be ex officio secretary of state. That is a point that has to be taken care of, as pointed out by Delegate Tavares.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion?

BRYAN: As far as our intent is concerned, the one with respect to the secretary of state, we have covered it in the committee report on executive powers which should be out and printed before we meet again, and that is specifically to the point of certification of returns for the election of United States senators and representatives. But I think also that intent would cover other situations.

SHIMAMURA: I think the point raised by the delegate from the fourth district, Senator Heen, is a good one. As a matter of fact, in considering H.R. 49, our special election -- our election ordinance providing for a special election, I mentioned the matter in the course of discussion here once and also have a proposed amendment to make under our provisions to comply with H.R. 49, namely to designate the lieutenant governor as secretary of state. I think we could well at the end of this proposal put in a clause that the lieutenant governor shall succeed to all the duties and powers of the secretary of Hawaii.

ASHFORD: I call to the attention of the Convention that by implication, at least, in another article the lieutenant governor is assumed to be the man who is going to look after elections because I think it's in revisions and amendments to the Constitution that it provides that in the event that a ten year period shall elapse without a convention that the lieutenant governor shall submit such question to voters.

SHIMAMURA: Also, if I may respectfully suggest, I believe the report of the Committee of the Whole could very well state that this section not only means the successor officer with the similar name, but shall also include successor offices like the lieutenant governor whose name is not the same as the present officer, to clarify that.

I should like to raise one point, that we didn't have adequate opportunity to consider in the Committee of the Whole a point which frankly occurred to me very recently. We have here in Section 3, "All laws of the Territory of Hawaii" and I'd like to have the considered thought of the other delegates as to whether that includes provisions of the Organic Act. If we said "All territorial laws of the Territory of Hawaii," probably that would not include the provisions of the Organic Act, but since the section reads, "All laws of the Territory of Hawaii," meaning such laws as may have been enacted by the legislature of the territory, that probably would not include provisions of the Organic Act, and if it does not, whether an interpretation should be included as to our intent in the report of the Committee of the Whole, so that provisions of the Organic Act not repugnant to this Constitution shall be included here.

CHAIRMAN: I would like to remind the last speaker that the Committee of the Whole report cannot contain a statement saying that it is the opinion of the Committee of the Whole merely because one delegate stated it so. I think we must come to an agreement on that, otherwise --

ROBERTS: I move that it be the sense of this Committee that the Organic Act be included in the general language, "All laws of the Territory" and that such be included in the Committee of the Whole report.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, did you say "included" under the --

ROBERTS: That the statement of the sense of the Committee of the Whole be included in our Committee of the Whole report.

HEEN: Does this --

CHAIRMAN: That the Organic Act be included --

ROBERTS: That the Organic Act is covered by the term, "the laws of the Territory of Hawaii."

HEEN: I don't think that will cure the situation. Technically speaking, the Organic Act is the law of the United States applicable to the Territory of Hawaii. That to me is distinct from saying the "laws of the Territory of Hawaii." As I interpret that term, "laws of the Territory of Hawaii" are laws passed by the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii. Therefore, this provision should read "All provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and all laws of the Territory of Hawaii in force at the time of admission."

ROBERTS: If the senator will make that in the form of a motion, I will second it.

HEEN: I so move, that after the word "all" in the first line of Section 3, add the words "provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and all." So that part of the sentence shall read: "All provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and all laws of the Territory of Hawaii," and so on.

ROBERTS: Second.

TAVARES: I'm sorry I must disagree. I believe that is too broad and if there's going to be such an amendment I think we should defer, because there are the land laws included too, and we have treated those specially. I'm a little afraid we might be incorporating a little too much by stating it generally in that fashion. There is a body of laws created under the Organic Act, under which we have acted, which would be carried over anyway as laws of Hawaii; but to incorporate all those laws of the Organic Act without a minute study, with all those provisions, I think would be a little too -- going a little too far.

HEEN: I might point out that later on in that same sentence, we have the clause "not repugnant to this Constitution," and there might be room for enlargement on that particular phrase, "not inconsistent and not repugnant to this Constitution."

TAVARES: I want to -- my idea is this. That there might be something we haven't mentioned one way or the other that we don't want to carry into effect; and if we haven't mentioned something contrary, then we would be incorporating it automatically, and perhaps without rereading very carefully that whole act, it would be unwise to do that.

ARASHIRO: Since there's a dispute in this thing and we are not clear as to the language of this thing, I move that -- no, I second that motion made by Delegate Tavares.

CHAIRMAN: Did you make a motion, Delegate Tavares? It has been moved and seconded.

TAVARES: I'll make that motion to defer to the end of this section, and then perhaps we can defer it further if we haven't come to some different conclusion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that consideration of Section 3 --

SAKAKIHARA: May I offer an amendment to the amendment, request for deferment until the end of the calendar day?

TAVARES: I'll withdraw my motion and let the delegate make his.

CHAIRMAN: Motion to defer has been withdrawn.

SAKAKIHARA: I rise at this time to ask that action be deferred on Section 3 till Wednesday.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second? The motion is to defer Section 3 until Wednesday.

SHIMAMURA: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to defer Section 3 until Wednesday, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion to defer Section 3 to Wednesday is carried.
Section 4.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 4 of Committee Proposal No. 23.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 4 of Committee Proposal No. 23. Discussion.

SHIMAMURA: This section relates to the disposition of all debts, forfeitures, fines, penalties and escheats accruing to the Territory of Hawaii or any public -- or any political subdivision thereof.

TAVARES: After further consideration, I believe that this section could be -- should be amended further, and I move to amend the section by adding after the word "forfeitures," the word "claims" in the first line; and on the second page in the first line, between the words "or" and "its," insert the words "any of"; and in the same line make the word "subdivision" plural, "subdivisions"; and in the next line or the last line of Section 4, change the word "its" to "such." May I repeat that again, Mr. Chairman. On the first page insert after the word "forfeitures," the word "claims"; on the second page, the first line, insert between the words "or" and "its," the words "any of"; and in the same line, make the word "subdivision" plural, "subdivisions"; and in the last line change the word "its" to "such."

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend Section 4 by inserting the word "claims" after the word "forfeitures" in the first line; and on page 2, in the first line, inserting the words "any of" between the words "or" and "its," and making the word "subdivision" into a plural; and in the second line, inserting the word "such" in lieu of "its." So that the amended form would read --

LAI: Would this section include taxes and license fees due to the Territory or the subdivisions?

CHAIRMAN: Would a member of the committee answer the question? Would you repeat the question, Delegate Lai?

LAI: Would this section include taxes and license fees due to the Territory or its subdivisions?

SHIMAMURA: No, this section does not cover taxes, but the next section covers that.

ASHFORD: If the amendment be adopted, I think "claims" might be broad enough to cover that. And may I suggest that as a part of the amendment, the second word "subdivision" in the second line on page two should be in the plural also.

TAVARES: I think I respectfully differ on that last suggestion. The word "any of its" is singular; "any" is singular and therefore "such" goes back to the word "any," and therefore it can be singular. I wonder if the delegate would agree with me in the light of that word "any."

ASHFORD: I don't agree, but I'm very amiable.

HEEN: I think the period at the end of the sentence should be changed to a comma, and the words "as the case may be" should be inserted there. We have used that term quite often in some other parts of the Constitution, as so far drafted.

SHIMAMURA: I think that's an excellent suggestion.

TAVARES: I'll accept that amendment. Yes, I'll accept that as an addition to my amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The suggestion is to add after the sentence, "as the case may be." Is there any more discussion on the amendment?

SHIMAMURA: I wonder if the delegate who moved for the insertion of the word "claims" on the first line after the word "forfeitures" will consent to its deletion, in the light of the fact that Section 5, I think, covers claims.

TAVARES: I would, except for the fact that this section goes to political subdivisions, and Section 5 only goes to the Territory.

SHIMAMURA: My draft here, if I may say so, I was going to amend Section 5 to include political subdivisions.

TAVARES: May I think that over just a second, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Is there any other discussion while Delegate Tavares is thinking it over?

HEEN: I think the word "claims" should remain in that Section 3, because we don't know, there may be some other claims outside the statutes. It's a catch-all word.

ASHFORD: May I suggest that Mr. Tavares, being a member of the committee who signed the report, would come over and join us here.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion?

SHIMAMURA: I'm quite willing that the word "claims" be left in.

CHAIRMAN: Then there is no dispute. Is there any more question on the amendment?

HEEN: I think Delegate Tavares should remain where he is, otherwise he might be guilty of association.

SAKAKIHARA: Delegate Tavares is a member of the committee; he has every right to be there to commit collusion or conspiracy.

CHAIRMAN: Is there more discussion? Are you ready for the question?

NODA: I move for the adoption as amended.

CHAIRMAN: No, it hasn't been voted on yet.

TAVARES: On the assurance that the matter will be covered in the next section as far as the word "claims" is concerned and it will be explained - -

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? The question is to amend Section 4 to read thus: "All debts, fines, penalties, forfeitures, claims and escheats which have accrued or may hereafter accrue to the Territory of Hawaii or any of its political subdivisions shall enure to the State of Hawaii or such political subdivision, as the case may be." All those in favor - -

PHILLIPS: That word "claims" still bothers me. I wonder if the delegate from the fourth district could give me an example of a claim of the Territory against whatever it might be. Could you give me just one example, please?

TAVARES: I can imagine a situation where somebody runs into a truck belonging to the Territory and is negligent; the Territory has a claim for damages against that person for damaging the truck. That's just one of many, many other types of claims. Or it could include even taxes, although I think that's going to be covered too. But "claims" is a very broad term; "claims" covers every type of right of action which might be made against any other person.

CHAIRMAN: Are you satisfied, Delegate Phillips?

PHILLIPS: May I continue my question by saying that I believe that that particular example would fall under Section 5. It strikes me that even the word "debts" doesn't have - - doesn't fit into this particular section; that fines, penalties, forfeitures and escheats are of a class, and that the words "debts" and "claims" fall very carefully and seem to be completely covered in Section 5. I feel that he's - - that there is a reiteration. Now if they want to leave in the two words, I don't think it's going to hurt anything, but at the same time, it would give for more clarity of understanding of this provision when it's referred to or any question comes up about it. The word "debts" and "claims" seems to not fall into the same classification of state matters such as fines, penalties, forfeitures and escheats.

TAVARES: I think that the liability to a fine is one kind of a debt, so that I think that that isn't necessarily incongruous. As a matter of fact, since we are - - these are catch-all provisions, I think it would be just as well to have - - to say too much rather than too little, and the Style Committee can always change it if we've overlapped too much.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? Question is on the amendment, motion to adopt the amendment. All those in favor of the motion to amend, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion to amend is carried. Are you ready for the - -

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 4 as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 4 as amended be adopted. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." It's carried. Section 4 as amended is adopted.

WOOLAWAY: I move for the adoption of Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second? It has been moved and seconded that Section 5 be adopted. Discussion?

SHIMAMURA: I at this time would like to move for the amendment of Section 5, line five, after the words, "Territory of Hawaii" and after the comma, the words "or any political subdivision thereof."

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to the motion to amend?

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded.

SHIMAMURA: I have some other - - if the delegate from Hawaii will please withhold his second.

SAKAKIHARA: I'll withdraw - - withhold my second.

SHIMAMURA: And on line six, after the word "Hawaii" and after the comma, "or its political subdivision, as the case may be." I'll repeat that. After the comma following the word "Hawaii" on line six "or its political subdivision, as the case may be," comma, and then in line seven, after the words "State of Hawaii," comma, "or its political subdivision," comma; and on the last line, after the word "Hawaii" delete the period, insert a comma in its stead and the words "or its political subdivision."

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion for an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend Section 5. Is there any discussion?

TAVARES: Inasmuch as this might involve some matters like title to property and so forth, which perhaps could be studied a little more in the light of the subdivisions being brought in, I think it should be deferred and I move to defer the matter until Wednesday.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to defer consideration of Section 5 till Wednesday. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." It's carried.

For the benefit of the Clerks, I would like to now declare a recess.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee please come to order. We have deferred Section 5 till Wednesday. Now Section 6 is up for consideration.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 6.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 6. Discussion?

HEEN: This is a little out of order, [but] I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee as to why - - as to whether or not they considered the provision contained in the Model Constitution, on page 21, as to existing laws. "All laws not inconsistent with this Constitution shall continue in force until specifically amended or repealed, and all rights, claims, actions, orders, prosecutions and contracts shall continue except as modified in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution." It seems to me that that simple language could take care of Sections 3, 4 and 5.

SAKAKIHARA: We're on Section 6. I think the delegate-at-large from the fourth is not talking on Section 6.

CHAIRMAN: That is right. The Chair will rule Delegate Heen out of order, but probably the suggestion is beneficial and if that is the case, we suggest Delegate Heen take it up with the chairman of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity. We may be able to reconsider it.

SHIMAMURA: At this time I move to amend Section 6 by deleting the words "county or City and County" of line three of Section 6 after the word "any" and insert in lieu thereof the words "political subdivision thereof" comma.

TAVARES: I second the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend Section 6. Is there any discussion on the amendment? Are you ready for the question? The motion to amend will delete in the third line the words "county or City and County" and insert in lieu thereof the words "political subdivision thereof." All those in favor of the amendment - -

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, I rose to get the attention of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: I'd like to know from the committee the difference between Section 6 and Section 4.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, or any member of the committee.

SHIMAMURA: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I feel that there is an essential difference between Section 4 and Section 6. Section 6 provides for the accrual of all debts, fines, penalties, forfeitures and claims and escheats to the Territory of Hawaii or any governmental or political subdivision thereof; whereas Section 6 provides for the continuance of all recognizances, bonds and obligations entered into or executed to the Territory or any political subdivision thereof. In other words, Section 6 is very essential to continue these bonds which - - For example, a surety bond may run to the Territory of Hawaii in the name of the treasurer of the Territory of Hawaii, but that bond would not necessarily continue running in favor of the Territory [sic] of Hawaii by the treasurer. Therefore it has to be continued so that the treasurer of the State of Hawaii will succeed to all rights thereunder.

ANTHONY: Well, I have a further question. If we adopted the simple language contained in either the Model Constitution or the New Jersey Constitution—the Model Constitution is Section 1401, page 21—why wouldn't that cover not only Section 4, but Section 5 and Section 6 as well? And Section 7, I might add.

SHIMAMURA: The committee had the provision of the Model Constitution under consideration. The committee felt that it was far too general and did not provide for many situations which would arise. Mr. Tavares has something additional to say on that.

ANTHONY: I'd like to have the particulars rather than the general statement. As far as I'm concerned, the simple language is broad enough.

TAVARES: In the first place, New Jersey is an existing state. The changeover is very minor. In the second place, a provision like the Model Constitution's drawn without particular regard to any particular jurisdiction, I think is always dangerous. I don't doubt that there are overlaps in these sections, but when you are transferring everything from one jurisdiction to another as drastically as changing over from a territory to a state, it seems to me that if your basket is a little too wide, it doesn't do any harm. All you have is a little empty space there. But when your basket is too small and you leave something out, then you have trouble. Therefore, I see no objection to having some overlap and some excess verbiage here rather than run the risk of having something left out.

ANTHONY: The chairman of the committee said that Delegate Tavares would supply the particulars; thus far I've heard no particulars. Therefore, I move that we defer action on this until Wednesday.

BRYAN: I think before we move to defer I'd like to ask the members of the committee one question, and that is, if the word "contract" in Section 2 would give adequate coverage to the material now under consideration.

PHILLIPS: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to defer Section 6 to Wednesday. All those in favor of the motion to defer, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The Chair is in doubt, and we'll call again for the ayes and noes. All those in favor of the motion to defer say "aye." Opposed, "no." The ayes have it.

AKAU: Point of information. All these matters on the ordinances so far have been matters which are very definitely the concern of our good friends the lawyers here, and I was wondering if it would be possible, let us say, not only for the committee, but for the lawyers to somehow get together—I'm just thinking of the time, and I'm not trying to be facetious either—if some of the lawyers could get together. We have 17 of them here. You people know what you want. We're just dragging along here trusting to luck that we'll guess the right word because we don't know these technical things; they are very definitely legalistic. Would it be in order, Mr. Chairman, to ask our members of the Bar Association, the 17 people, to get together and work this out so they can save the time? I'm just asking; I don't know.

ANTHONY: That could be done - -

ASHFORD: By way of preliminary remarks, I would like to say that the delegate quite apparently is not a member of the Committee on Style, which has eight attorneys on it, when she talks about getting together.

In this committee, we had two very brief articles to start with and the expansion of these sections was due to the suggestion of various attorneys.

CHAIRMAN: You will note that the committee is predominantly made up of attorneys also.

SHIMAMURA: We are trying to bring before all the delegates this article and to give all delegates here an opportunity to participate in the discussion, and any suggestions you may - - they may have, we welcome any suggestions.

CHAIRMAN: Section 6 has been deferred, Delegate Shimamura, to Wednesday.

ANTHONY: The same remarks I have go to Section 7. I really believe this whole thing can be boiled down to one simple paragraph or two, and therefore, I move that 7 be deferred.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would wish to rule that Delegate Anthony is out of order.

SHIMAMURA: I'm amenable to any - -

ANTHONY: I was not out of order, Mr. Chairman; Section 7 is before the house.

CHAIRMAN: Section 7 is still not before the house.

SHIMAMURA: May I make a statement, that I'm amenable to any suggestion the house may have. However, if we defer too many of these sections, that means that we'll have to take them up at a later date anyway. And may I also state that although the delegate from the fourth district has a point, that many of these sections may be boiled down, but as Delegate Tavares said a few moments ago, it's quite different in dealing from a transition or change or revision from a state to a state constitution, but here we have a transition from a territorial to a state form of government. And what may be adequate in providing for a revision or consolidation of a constitution is quite different from providing for the transfer and change in the form of a government. I may also add that the state constitutions which were adopted at the time of the admission of many western states to the Union make very elaborate provisions, as we have here, and we arrived at this after much deliberation and after much research. I move for the adoption of Section 7 at this time.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 7. Question. Rather, discussion?

TAVARES: I have an amendment of - - just a formal amendment to propose. In the fourth line of Section 7 the word "then," t-h-e-n, that it be deleted and that there be inserted after the word "pending" in the same line and before the comma, the words, quote, "at the time of such change," end of quote. So that that line would read "which shall be pending at the time of such change," comma.

[The tape recorders were out of order for several minutes. The following debate is from the minutes of the committee.]

SHIMAMURA: Second.

The Chair thereupon put the motion to amend, which motion was adopted.

ANTHONY: I move we defer action on Section 7 as amended, until Wednesday.

LAI: Second.

BRYAN: Is it the Chair's ruling that there will be no discussion on a motion to defer?

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

The Chair thereupon put the motion to defer action on Section 7, as amended, until Wednesday, which motion was carried.

SHIMAMURA: I move the tentative adoption of Section 8 of Proposal 23.

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

ANTHONY: I would like to know what is the difference between Section 8 and Section 2.

SHIMAMURA: Section 2 is a very general section. Section 8, in addition, specifically provides for the transfer of all pending civil cases to the courts of the state, which Section 2 does not.

ANTHONY: It seems to me there is a good deal of repetition, and I think if the committee were to get together this could be again boiled down, and accordingly I move to defer action on this section.

HEEN: I would like to know whether the term "civil causes" there means something else from cases in equity.

SHIMAMURA: We have defined the term "civil causes" in our report, and civil causes includes all causes at law, all suits in equity and all other legal proceedings other than criminal cases.

CASTRO: I would like to second Delegate Anthony's motion to defer.

FONG: I would like to state that in reading Sections 2 to 11, I am of the opinion that all of the sections could be boiled down into one paragraph of general language instead of having all these paragraphs.

[Recording resumed]

CHAIRMAN: The question on the floor is for the Chair to determine whether the consideration should be deferred. Therefore, the Chair would like to call again for the ayes and noes. All those in favor of the motion to defer, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The ayes have it.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 9.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

KAM: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 9 be adopted.

LAI: I want to amend the motion to include Sections 10 and 11 for tentative adoption.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to rule, for the sake of order, that we should consider these section by section. Would that be okay?

LAI: Well, I thought somebody was going to make a motion to defer the whole thing up to Section 11. It will save a lot of time to take up three sections at one time.

FONG: I was going to ask for a deferral of that section together with Sections 9, 10 and 11 on the same grounds, that Section 2 to 11 probably could be condensed into one paragraph.

ANTHONY: I'd like to second that motion, and I'd like to add in support of it, the same can be said of 12 and 13.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong, is that your motion, to defer Section 9?

TAVARES: I can't let that remark pass unchallenged. Section 12 is one of the things - - Well, I think that's out of order. I will subside, Mr. Chairman, but I think that's a rather uncalled for statement. Section 12 is very important to our public lands.

CHAIRMAN: I think the Convention - - the committee out of fairness should give the committee a chance to speak in defense of its committee proposal, and - -

FONG: I believe Section 12 and Section 13 are a little different. I think the committee also sees the possibility of condensing Sections 2 through 11. Is there a possibility, Mr. Tavares, of condensing Sections 2 through 11? Is there a possibility of combining all those sections?

TAVARES: There is a possibility of doing many things, if we take the time.

FONG: Well, with that statement from the member of the committee, I think we should defer action on Sections 8, 9, 10 and 11.

CHAIRMAN: Section 8 has been deferred.

ASHFORD: I'm just as much out of order as anybody else who has spoken after the motion to defer, but perhaps the Convention would just let me say something very briefly. We started with a very simple - - some very simple measures, and the attorneys who were members of the committee felt that they should be developed. Now, in my opinion, if this committee should report in its committee report that all of these sections were covered by a couple of brief sections, the same results would be attained.

SHIMAMURA: May I also add that as far as the committee is concerned, it has no pride of authorship at all. We don't care how the sections are amended. We put our best effort in it and took considerable time and made considerable research. If any member here wishes to go over the whole thing and overhaul it, it's perfectly all right. We only wanted to provide certain things with abundance of caution.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to - - Is there anyone - -

ARASHIRO: It is my opinion that when the delegate from the committee made a statement about a big basket, then I think that by having a shorter paragraph or a shorter section it would broaden the language and have a bigger basket than trying to itemize it, and then making the - - by itemizing it, I think we are making a smaller basket.

ROBERTS: I was going to suggest that when the motions to defer are made and the motion to defer to a specific time, that that motion is debatable and I believe that the members of the committee ought to be given the opportunity to state their position as to why we should take it up now.

SHIMAMURA: Also, when any committee - - any delegate here has any suggestions why should it be deferred, we should like to have the reasons for it, and if he thinks that the sections are similar, we should like to have it pointed out wherein they are similar. I feel personally that some of the sections are quite divergent and quite different.

ASHFORD: May I call the attention of the Convention - - of the Committee of the Whole to Section 11. In my opinion, that would not be covered, because those judges are appointed by the federal government under the provisions of the Organic Act and I think they would have to be carried on in office after we have become a state until their successors are appointed.

HOLROYDE: I wonder if those that are moving for deferment on these sections propose to bring in amendments on Wednesday.

SHIMAMURA: I think that's an excellent question, and I feel that the members who are moving for deferment should try and put some effort in this thing and bring in some counter proposals.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong, could you repeat your motion again?

FONG: On the premise that these sections could be consolidated into one or two or three paragraphs, I move that Sections 8, 9, 10 and 11 be deferred until Wednesday.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to inform you that Section 8 has already been deferred, and we'll have to, for the sake of order - - the record, we'll have to make a motion to adopt Sections 9, 10 and 11 first. There is a motion at the moment to adopt Section 9. Is your motion just confined to Section 9?

SHIMAMURA: I think there has been a motion, hasn't there? If not, I'll so move just to facilitate our getting on.

SAKAKIHARA: I'll second it.

FONG: I shall now repeat my motion, that we defer action on 9, 10 and 11.

SHIMAMURA: Pardon me, will the delegate who last made the motion withdraw that for a moment. I'd like to make an amendment before - -

FONG: Sure I will.

SHIMAMURA: On the fourth line of that Section 9, before the word "courts" I move to insert the word "state"; and also at the end of that section, insert the following new sentence: "Until the legislature shall otherwise provide, the courts of the Territory of Hawaii shall continue as state courts."

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

KAM: Second that motion.

SAKAKIHARA: Will the chairman of the committee restate the amendment?

CHAIRMAN: Will you restate the amendment, Delegate Shimamura?

SHIMAMURA: Add a new sentence to read as follows:

CHAIRMAN: After Section 9?

SHIMAMURA: Nine. "Until the legislature shall otherwise provide, the courts of the Territory of Hawaii shall continue as state courts."

FUKUSHIMA: I'd like to further amend that by inserting in the place of "continue," the word "function." It cannot continue as state courts; I believe we can function as state courts.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, is that amendment acceptable?

SHIMAMURA: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion on the amendment?

BRYAN: I'd like to ask the movant if he doesn't think it would be more appropriate, although it may be a matter of style, to place that after Section 11, rather than after Section 9.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, Delegate Bryan has asked you a question.

SHIMAMURA: I have no objection to that, either way. I think that's a matter of arrangement.

HEEN: It seems to me that it's not necessary to have this section at all. Go back to Section 3, you have there the term, "mutatis mutandis"; that will take care of this situation.

SHIMAMURA: I do not agree with the learned gentleman from the fourth district.

HEEN: Perhaps the vice-chairman of that committee has a different view upon this subject. She is responsible for the use of the term "mutatis mutandis."

SHIMAMURA: If I may answer the learned gentleman from the fourth district. The reason I think the third section doesn't cover this situation is that we must prevent a hiatus. In these sections we provide for the transfer of pending calls of action to appropriate state courts. Under the section on judiciary, there is no provision for definite state courts, and until such courts are organized, we should provide that the territorial courts shall continue as state courts. At first I personally felt that such a section was not necessary, but the more I thought about it, the more it appeared to me that such a section should be incorporated.

CHAIRMAN: Now the Chair would like to make a statement for the sake of saving time and that is, I believe there is going to be a motion to defer all Section 9, 10 and 11. If that is the case, this motion to amend has served its purpose of suggesting to the group what should be considered in their deliberations. Therefore, if there is no objection, probably the motion to defer is in order at this time. Unless there is another suggestion to be made.

NODA: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any second to the motion?

TAVARES: We have deferred so many sections relating to this, I think we ought to defer the others, and I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to defer Sections 9, 10 and 11 to Wednesday. All those in favor of the motion to defer please say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it. The motion is carried.

SHIMAMURA: I rise to go through the motion of moving to adopt Section 12.

NODA: I'll second that.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 12.

ASHFORD: I feel very disloyal in disagreeing with the chairman of the committee, but I spoke to him—after having signed the report—I spoke to him about a provision of Section 12 with which I do not agree, and we agreed that I would be permitted to disagree. That is the proviso which is the second section of the sentence. I think we should continue to homestead our public lands in the fullest manner possible. I therefore move to delete from Section 12 the last sentence which begins, "Provided."

KING: I'm very happy to second that. I do not think the State of Hawaii should declare a moratorium on homesteading for five years. I think they should go right ahead as lands become available and can be developed for that purpose.

TAVARES: In the first place, I think that the two delegates who advocate the elimination of this section are not giving full consideration to the fact that the only thing we are saying is that the legislature is not mandated. In other words, what we're trying to do, those of us who advocate leaving those words in, is this. Today you have a mandatory provision in your Organic Act that when so many homesteaders ask for 40 acres of land, they have got to get 40 acres of land; and that's one of the policies already decided by the Lands Committee, as I understand it, that 40 acres is too much in most cases for farming. The persons advocating leaving out those words are advocating that you force a mandate of the 40 acre and other large provisions now before we have a chance to take care of the other situation, unless our Constitution specifically provides otherwise, and I think that that is a very unfortunate thing to leave that mandate in. The legislature can provide if it wants to, as far as this section is concerned, but all we say is that the mandate -- it's not compulsory until the legislature otherwise provides.

KING: The legislature may remove that mandate by taking proper action in the first session after statehood is obtained, or attained. The mandate would only exist till such time as the legislature has provided for some other program. Also, be it noted that the homestead laws, while 40 acres are the maximum, are not always providing 40 acres to each homesteader. I'm familiar with a great many homestead areas where the lots are cut into ten and eleven acres and the homesteaders apply for that. It all depends on the character of the land. Some lands, five acres are more than enough to support a family with intensive cultivation under irrigation; other lands, ten acres might be ample; but there are other lands where 40 acres would make a very bare living under some types of farming. So I see no reason why we should ban any homesteading for a five year period. The sooner the legislature adopts appropriate legislation, that ban would automatically expire.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, and then I'll call on you, Bryan.

SHIMAMURA: I yield to Mr. Bryan.

BRYAN: I'm quite in sympathy with the feelings of the movant and the second as far as homesteading is concerned. I think that was evident when the Land Committee brought its report. However, I'm quite concerned and would like to state that I'd like to see this remain. I'd like to speak against this motion to delete that part, for several reasons. When the Land Committee discussed the present land laws, there was some question about whether there should be a change placed in the Constitution or a revision of the land laws attached in this section of the Constitution because there was some doubt of the status of many of our public lands under H.R. 49. That doubt has been renewed and emphasized in the last 48 hours or so, and that's why the five year period was placed here.

This provision would suspend the right of mandate to the legislature -- or to the Land Board, until the legislature took action. Whereas, if it were removed, the mandate would remain until the legislature took action. It was the feeling of the members of the Land Committee, that it was proper to do it in this manner, so that, should we find as a result of H.R. 49 that our public lands are fewer than we expect them to be, they won't be all used up under this mandate before the legislature has time to take care of it, or until the five year period of disposition that is set forth by the present provisions of H.R. 49 has a chance to operate. Therefore I would speak in favor of leaving this provision in the section.

SHIMAMURA: May I state that this proposal, this section originated in the Committee on Agriculture and Conservation and it was at the suggestion of the attorney general's department that this proviso was included. I may also state that there is one member of the committee who is absent today who feels very strongly about this proposal. Therefore, to give him an opportunity to be present and argue against it, and also in the light of certain amendments to H.R. 49, I move that it be deferred until Wednesday.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded --

TAVARES: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to defer consideration of Section 12. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it. Section 12 is deferred till Wednesday.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 13.

YAMAMOTO: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 13. Discussion?

SHIMAMURA: May I briefly state that this section provides for a revision commission, that is, a commission for the revision of laws to be appointed by the governor to take care of any laws that may be -- may not be in conformity with the Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion?

TAVARES: I might point out that this section sort of takes a leaf out of the notebook of Congress in dealing with Hawaii. When we became a part of the United States, a joint resolution provided for the creation of a commission to prepare an Organic Act for the Territory of Hawaii. As it turned out, the commission had two years, or had a sufficient time to do the job well, and they not only prepared an Organic Act, but they took the trouble to make all the necessary amendments to the existing laws of Hawaii. We're doing it now without sufficient time to do that second part of the job. Therefore, we feel that provision should be made to start as soon as possible after the adoption of this Constitution along the line of that revision, so that if we have left any holes, if there are any discrepancies, they will be discovered as soon as possible and the legislature will be aided in making the necessary amendments.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak in favor of the inclusion of this section. I'd also like to suggest a slight change in language which would provide that at least one of those five members shall be a layman. I don't know whether the subcommittee gave this matter consideration, but I am personally quite concerned about laws which are not intelligible to the majority of the lay people. I would, therefore, move an amendment in Section 13, where after the words, "of five members, at least one of whom shall be a lay person, whose duty it shall be" et cetera. May I have a second to that?

SHIMAMURA: Second it.

HEEN: I think the amendment should be the other way around, "At least, four of whom shall be lawyers."

HOLROYDE: I'd like to second that motion, and in doing so, I feel very sorry for the lay person.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend Section 13.

ASHFORD: May I ask General Roberts, the authority on style, whether "layman" is the correct word to use in that connection? "At least one of whom shall not be a lawyer," would that not be better?

ROBERTS: I didn't want any specific expression in opposition to lawyers. I like lawyers personally. My only purpose was to make sure that there would be one person on there who would be a lay person. Now, as far as the style is concerned, I think the intent is clear and we can handle that in the Style Committee.

ASHFORD: Isn't the true meaning of a "layman," one who is not a cleric?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen was standing up first. After Heen, I would - - Delegate Lee.

LEE: He has yielded to me, Mr. Chairman, if you don't mind. Is that all right? Thank you.

Being a lawyer I appreciate Delegate Roberts' sentiments. In fact I'll even go farther than he has. I suggest by way of elimination that the words be, "at least three of whom shall be attorneys or lawyers," or you can use the phrase "not more than three shall be attorneys at law." If you'll accept the amendment, I would suggest that, and you might have two laymen.

ROBERTS: I'll accept that amendment, since it comes from an attorney. Therefore, I can't be accused of being biased against lawyers. The language then would read that "no more than three shall be attorneys." Is that correct?

ANTHONY: I'd like to speak against the amendment. This has nothing to do with the substantive provisions of the laws. This is a professional and technical matter, and we don't want laymen fooling around with the laws. Whether Dr. Roberts thinks he could do a job or not, he is not equipped by training to fit in the various statutes in their proper place. Now, we've had commissions revising our laws ever since the Revised Laws of 1905, and they have done extraordinary jobs. I think - - I believe Delegate Tavares has had something to do with some of those commissions, but they have always been three lawyers, and I think we want to continue that. I don't care about putting any words in there, but any executive that knows what he's about, if he's going to have a job done properly, he's going to have it done by a professionally trained person.

ROBERTS: I am in complete sympathy with some of the observation made by the previous speaker. I think, as I recall, this Constitutional Convention is concerned with the very basic problem of writing a law which, I venture to suggest, is as important as some of the statutes which are on the books. I am not in accord that the greatest contribution made in this Convention has been by the lawyers. I think we have some very able and very competent men in this Convention, non-technical, non-trained in the legal profession. But it seems to me that the observation with regard to the contribution which can or cannot be made by lay people is a problem which I think deserves consideration and care by this Convention.

I would also venture to suggest that some of the lawyers of a past generation never went to a law school, Harvard or Yale or any other law school, and turned out to be quite competent lawyers. They know how to read; they know how to examine language; and I think they have some basic consideration as to the function of laws. It seems to me that this amendment is quite appropriate and lay people can make a contribution, not only to statutory law but also to constitutional law.

KELLERMAN: I'm in an in-between position. I once was a lawyer and now I am definitely a layman, but I have seen both sides of the question. I've seen it when I was practicing law, and I've seen it since. If you're going to have a bridge designed, you don't usually put laymen on the board to design an engineering project. This job of revision of laws is not a rewriting of the substance of laws; that would be the job for the legislature. It is a redrafting of the technical discrepancies between laws applying to the territory and laws applying to the state under the Constitution. It seems to me it is purely a technical job, and I can see no reason in the world why a person who is not trained in the technical legal language and the technicalities of law should be put on such a commission. It seems to me he would be of very little assistance and it would be just a waste of one position that might be of material assistance.

ASHFORD: While resenting the omission of the women of this Convention as having made a valuable contribution, I still am prepared to go along with the delegate who wants at least one layman on that board, and I do so by virtue of the education I have received in this Convention on the Style Committee, where extremely valuable suggestions have been made by laymen.

FONG: As I see it, as soon as the Constitution is ratified and Congress gives us the go ahead signal, your legislature is going to be elected and it will - - it is going to be in session. Now, this Section 13 to me is purely statutory. I believe that could be taken care of by the legislature, by a resolution by this Convention asking the legislature to immediately set up this commission to do the work, rather than cluttering up our Constitution with this very long paragraph. I'd like to move that we defer action on this section until Wednesday.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to defer action on Section 13 till Wednesday.

TAVARES: As I understand it, it's now understood that a motion to defer is debatable?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair was - -

ROBERTS: The motion to defer to a specific time is debatable.

CHAIRMAN: Go ahead, Mr. Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: I won't debate long. I feel this way, that we can't afford to lose any time in starting to revise our laws. It will take the legislature a certain amount of time to get organized, a certain amount of time to get up steam, a certain amount of time to get their committees and a certain amount of time to pass the bills, and by that time we've lost some valuable momentum. It seems to me that deferring for the purpose of putting this into a mere suggestion to the legislature is not wise. If we are deferring it for further study or for some other purpose, fine, but I don't believe the purpose of having the legislature do it is sound in this case. We need to go fast; there may be some very bad holes we want to start in right away on, and we can help the legislature if a committee is appointed right away and can have some suggestions ready as soon as possible. If the legislature does it, they've got to create the commission, then the commission's got to be appointed, and there is that much more time lost. As far as the layman is concerned, I don't object to a layman or so on the board. We'll just have to educate him. But if they want a layman on, o.k., we'll do that.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to defer Section 13 till Wednesday, please say "aye." Opposed. Motion is carried.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 14.

SAKAKIHARA: Sections 14 and 15 are very important, also. I ask that it be deferred till Wednesday along with the rest of them.

CHAIRMAN: To get the records clear, is there a motion to adopt Section 14 and 15?

WOOLAWAY: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Sections 14 and 15.

SAKAKIHARA: I now move that we defer action on Sections 14 and 15 to Wednesday.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

HAYES: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to defer action on Sections 14 and 15 to Wednesday. Debate? Would the committee like to express their sentiments on this question? The motion is to defer both 14 and 15.

SHIMAMURA: The committee defers to the Convention -- to the Committee of the Whole.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to defer action on Sections 14 and 15, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The ayes have it. Sections 14 and 15 deferred till Wednesday.

BRYAN: I move that we rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to rise and beg leave to sit again. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed. The ayes have it.

JULY 10, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee come to session, please. The Chair will now declare a recess of five minutes.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The last time the Committee of the Whole met to consider the proposals of the Committee on Continuity and Ordinances, it considered Committee Proposal No. 23. At that time most of the sections were deferred, and the Chair at this time would like to state those sections that were adopted. Section 1 was adopted; Section 2 was adopted. Section 4 was adopted with several amendments. All the other sections in Committee Proposal No. 23 were deferred. What is the wish of the chairman of the Committee on Continuity and Ordinances?

SHIMAMURA: If I may suggest, we'd like to start with Section 3, which was deferred.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair recalls that Section 3, before deferral, was amended. In the first line of Section 3, up to the first word "All," the following words were inserted, "provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and," so that the first line would read, "All provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and the laws of the Territory of Hawaii."

SHIMAMURA: The Chair will recall that some delegates spoke in opposition to the insertion of the amendment. The committee did not insert the Organic Act provision because it was felt that, as one of the delegates stated, that the public lands provisions in the Organic Act may come into question. The enabling act, that is H.R. 49, provides that "all territorial laws" of the Territory of Hawaii are amended by Committee Print C. Originally, the word "territorial" was omitted, and as I was saying, in Committee Print C the word "territorial" was inserted, I believe to distinguish it from any acts of Congress, the Organic Act also being an act of Congress.

CHAIRMAN: I believe Delegate Heen was the movant of the motion to amend. Would you care to say a few words in favor of your amendment?

HEEN: I don't recall that, but it seemed to me that the provisions of the Organic Act should also continue because all matters relating to public lands are found in the Organic Act. Therefore, those provisions should also continue until all this will be changed by the legislature itself, the legislature of the State.

The provision found in the Model Constitution to me is -- seems quite appropriate. "Existing laws. All laws not inconsistent with this constitution shall continue in force until specifically amended or repealed, and all rights, claims, actions, orders, prosecutions, and contracts shall continue except as modified in accordance with the provisions of this constitution." That would, it seems to me, cover everything.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion?

TAVARES: I take it we are discussing Section 3 now.

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

HEEN: That's correct.

TAVARES: I am sorry to say that as a member of the committee I have been somewhat derelict in that I have not studied the question since it was last considered. I am afraid that it is too broad. I must be frank about it, and yet in fairness to the chairman, I want to say I've given him no help and, therefore, I'm slightly embarrassed about having to admit I'm not prepared to say that that is not too broad.

HEEN: Just to the contrary, I think it's too restrictive instead of too broad.

ANTHONY: At the time this was last discussed, there were a number of proposed amendments and most of the sections, those indicated by the Chair, were deferred. I've just consulted the President and he tells me that this is the last order of business. I know that a number of us have proposed suggestions in regard to this schedule, and we have not, by virtue of our continued session with the legislative article, have not had a chance to perfect them. I am suggesting that it would be the part of wisdom and economy of time if we should take a recess until such time, say for an hour or for the rest of the morning, those amendments could be gotten together. I would therefore move that we rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again, if that's the sense of the body that that time could be --

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that this committee rise and report progress.

WIRTZ: I wonder if the movant would amend the motion. It's not necessary to report progress. We can take a recess.

ANTHONY: We could, but I didn't know what the wish of the President was. I don't see him on the floor.

CROSSLEY: I might say that if we do recess until say one-thirty or two o'clock, the Committee on Style has a lot of work, and therefore, if we rise, the Committee on Style could be delegated to go out and go to work, too. I think it would be proper to rise, report progress, beg leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: The question before the floor is that the committee rise and report progress. Is there any more discussion? All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Committee of the Whole will please come to session. When the committee rose this morning, we were considering Section 3. What is the wish of the committee?

SHIMAMURA: I believe that it will be convenient to all if we proceed with the discussion of Section 3. I think Judge Heen had made a point, and Delegate Tavares had made a statement, and if I may be permitted to say a few words now, I'd like to.

CHAIRMAN: Go ahead.

SHIMAMURA: Speaking to Judge Heen's amendment to insert the words, "the Hawaiian Organic Act," I personally have no objection; and as I spoke to Miss Ashford some time ago, I thought that it would be sound to include the Organic Act. But some members of the committee felt that we would be enlarging the continuation of present laws unduely if we include the Organic Act.

SAKAKIHARA: May I ask the chairman of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law, what effect will Senator Heen's amendment have upon the adoption of the Constitution. It's provided in the same section, fourth line commencing with "mutatis mutandis," all necessary changes to be made, "until they expire by their own limitation." Wouldn't the Organic Act of Hawaii expire by its own limitations when the statehood Constitution is adopted?

SHIMAMURA: I didn't quite get a portion of the delegate from Hawaii's statement, but if I understood the delegate correctly, he is referring to the words, "until they expire by their own limitation." Is that correct? Well, there are certain acts of the legislature now in the Revised Laws of Hawaii which have certain periods of termination.

SAKAKIHARA: Just a minute, Delegate Shimamura. My question is directed to the amendment proposed by Senator Heen, not the provisions of the law as enacted by the legislature. What effect will Senator Heen's amendment have?

SHIMAMURA: As I understand it, the delegate from Hawaii is referring to the insertion of the word "Hawaiian Organic Act." Is that correct?

SAKAKIHARA: That's right. "All provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act."

SHIMAMURA: As I said a few moments ago and I said previously, the insertion of the words "the Hawaiian Organic Act" was not made in the beginning. Although I personally thought it would be salutary to include that, some of the members did not think so, members of the committee, I mean. Now, by the inclusion of Delegate Heen's amendment, the words "Hawaiian Organic Act," all laws, or rather I should say, all provisions of the Organic Act which are in force on the date of the admission of Hawaii as a state will be continued in full force.

SAKAKIHARA: Won't that be in conflict with the following sentence, "Until they expire by their own limitation"?

SHIMAMURA: That's a good point, frankly, which wasn't raised in the committee. But this expression had particular reference to the laws, exclusive of the Hawaiian Organic Act. At the time this included, and I may say - -

SAKAKIHARA: That was my understanding from the committee.

SHIMAMURA: Pardon me?

SAKAKIHARA: That was my understanding from the committee.

CHAIRMAN: Will you please address the Chair so that we can get that straight.

SAKAKIHARA: That was my understanding from the committee.

SHIMAMURA: Is the gentleman referring to the words "Hawaiian Organic Act," that it was his understanding that those words would not be included? Is that his answer? Is that it?

CHAIRMAN: His question, I believe, was "What effect will the inclusion of the words 'provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and' have upon the clause 'until they expire by their own limitations'"?

SHIMAMURA: Well, there is no express limitation in the Hawaiian Organic Act. In other words, it's not like some statutes that have a termination date, if that's the point of the delegate's query. Now, on the other hand, if he means whether by the admission of Hawaii as a state, the Hawaii Organic Act ipso facto ceases to be effective, well, that's something else. But if that is his construction, we will continue it in force under this special provision. I don't know if I'm catching the delegate's exact point here.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara, has he answered your question?

SAKAKIHARA: He has answered my question.

CHAIRMAN: Any more discussion on this amendment?

HEEN: I did not move for any amendment at all to this section. I merely made some observations and a suggestion that perhaps there should be an amendment there so that the provisions of the Organic Act might be continued in force.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry. My minutes show that Delegate Heen moved and Delegate Roberts seconded the motion to amend the particular provision we are talking about now. Do you care to withdraw your - -

HEEN: Well, does it contain the language of the amendment offered, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, Delegate Heen. It says, after the word "all" insert the words "provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and." That was on July the third, Saturday, I believe.

HEEN: You sure it wasn't July 4?

CHAIRMAN: No, Monday.

HEEN: How would that read then, if I may ask.

CHAIRMAN: In its amended form, Section 3, the first line, will read thus: "All provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and laws of the Territory of Hawaii in force at the time of its admission into the Union," et cetera.

HEEN: That's all right. That seems to be adequate and sound.

ASHFORD: May I call to the attention of the Convention that if that amendment is made, two of the provisions adopted this morning in the agriculture article can be deleted; that is, the provisions as to sea fisheries and their condemnation.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on this question?

ROBERTS: It seems to me that the language of the section which provides that these things shall remain in force except insofar as they are repugnant to this Constitution; so that in actuality only those sections would remain in existence, unless they are contrary to the provisions of the Constitution, as we adopt it.

ANTHONY: This morning we took a recess designed to afford time to certain members who thought that this could be greatly simplified and present a simplified version of the continuity of laws, including the very question now raised by Judge Heen. It doesn't appear to me that we have given this enough thought to act on it intelligently. I was wondering if the chairman of the committee couldn't proceed with some other sections of this, get those out of the way, and then have a recess long enough to present something to the body, rather than try to do it on the floor, which is most difficult at this time, I believe.

CHAIRMAN: Your point is well taken. Is there any question?

SHIMAMURA: As far as I personally and the other members of the committee are concerned, we're willing and able to proceed with the other sections or this section. We have no difficulty with proceeding, although some other delegates may have.

CHAIRMAN: Well, in the absence of any motion for giving direction to the procedure of this committee, the section that is still before us is Section 3.

SHIMAMURA: I don't like to be talking too much, but I'd like to point out to the delegates at the Convention that this section and many other sections are taken from standard provisions from constitutions of states which were admitted from a territorial status, and those sections have been judicially determined.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

SAKAKIHARA: Will the Chair kindly restate the question.

CHAIRMAN: The question is the amendment to Section 3, which amendment will amend by inserting after the word "all" the words "provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and."

SAKAKIHARA: I'm against the amendment.

MIZUHA: I would like to ask the movant of the amendment a question. It seems to me the Hawaiian Organic Act is a Congressional law, a federal law, and we're not interested in that law. When we become a state, we have our own Constitution. The section as written at the present time refers to the statutory law of the Territory of Hawaii which will be enforced. I think that amendment is unnecessary because it is not a law of the Territory of Hawaii, but a law of the Congress of the United States.

ANTHONY: Beyond that, the Organic Act provides for the appointment of the governor by the President, the appointment of our judges. I do sincerely believe that we're acting too hastily on this and at this time I'll move to defer this section until the end of the calendar before this committee.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion to defer.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we defer this, the consideration of Section 3, to the end of the calendar. Is there any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: May I just briefly point out that what the last speaker said is quite true, but those provisions that are repugnant to the Constitution, of course, are not being carried forth. Wherever there is an appointment of the governor or any other tenure of office or any other method of selection of any of the officers, of course they would not be carried forth. There are definite advantages for inclusion of the Hawaiian Organic Act and some disadvantages, and that problem has to be recognized by the Convention and the Convention act accordingly. As far as I personally was concerned, I felt there were certain advantages in the inclusion but I also saw certain disadvantages, therefore did not press the point of inclusion of the Hawaiian Organic Act under this section.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? The motion is to defer Section 3 to the end of the calendar. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed. Carried. Section 3 is deferred till the end of the calendar.

WHITE: I wasn't here the other day. Could you as a matter of information, let me know what the status of Section 4 is?

CHAIRMAN: Section 4 has been adopted in this amended form. It will read "All debts, fines, penalties, forfeitures, claims, and escheats which have accrued, or may hereafter accrue to the Territory of Hawaii, or any of its political subdivisions, shall inure to the State of Hawaii, or such political subdivision, as the case may be."

WHITE: No provision is made in that as recommended in the -- by the Committee of the Whole, the addition to assume or to approve all of the acts of the legislature with regard to bond issues and so forth.

CHAIRMAN: Will the chairman of the committee attempt an answer?

SAKAKIHARA: Section 6 of the proposal takes care of that.

SHIMAMURA: If I understood the gentleman correctly, he was referring to the issuance of bonds, revenue bonds. Is that it? Territorial bonds for the raising of revenues?

WHITE: No, to approve all the acts of the legislature on bonds that had been issued, that had been authorized but not issued.

SHIMAMURA: That would be carried partly in the continuance of all laws of the Territory. Also we have a short clause later on in an amendment form, which is being prepared by the clerks, which provides for the signature by the governor of all acts requring the signature of the President and/or the Congress of the United States. I think that's what Mr. White has reference to.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford.

ASHFORD: Would you wait just a moment, Mr. Chairman, while I confer with the chairman of the committee?

CHAIRMAN: Anybody else like to do some talking?

ASHFORD: The section to which Delegate White has referred was recommended by the Committee of the Whole to be included in the article on ordinances and continuity of laws, but that was adopted after our first report was filed, and I think the committee felt that that should -- could be inserted as an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Point of information from the Chair. Amendment to what section, Delegate Ashford?

SHIMAMURA: It's carried in the new amendment which is being printed by the printing department. Oh, we haven't come to that section yet. It's the latter section, toward the end.

CHAIRMAN: Section 5. What is the desire of the Committee as regard Section 5?

ANTHONY: When I made my motion, I didn't intend to make it as restrictive as it was ultimately put and carried. The purpose of our recess this morning was to enable those of us who had a little different view on this to have a little time to get them together and get them before the body. That entire time that was thus supported by vote of the committee had to be taken up by the Committee on Style. That was all right, but the purpose of our adjournment -- our recess this morning was just that. I think it would be in order if we deferred these Sections 5 to 15 inclusive until the end of the calendar.

CHAIRMAN: The point is well taken. I believe on July third, when the Committee of the Whole sat to consider this whole proposal, that was the same opinion of the Committee of the Whole. They deferred most of these sections in the proposal for the reason that the members would have sufficient time to work over them. Then the question also came up as to whether Section 8, 9, 10, 11 should be telescoped. And I think this Committee of the Whole probably should take a sense vote on that, as to whether it desires to have it telescoped, so that this draft, whoever works on it, can follow the directions of the Committee of the Whole.

SHIMAMURA: May I state that if the delegates who wish to do some research in this matter would look at the constitutions of Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, and Oklahoma, no, Wyoming, they'd find that these sections are incorporated in their constitutions in practically identical form, and in some cases in similar or identical language.

WOOLAWAY: Is there a motion before the house to defer right now?

CHAIRMAN: No, I don't believe so.

TAVARES: I thought Mr. Anthony made the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, what was your motion?

ANTHONY: My motion was to defer the remainder -- the remaining sections until the end of the calendar.

CHAIRMAN: All of the remaining sections of the same proposal?

TAVARES: I'll second that motion. In so doing, I don't want to be obstructive, but I feel this way. Regardless of whether we adopt or don't adopt the sections remaining in the form which they are now in substantially, I am not satisfied and have gone over my notes and covered all the other things that ought to be covered in the ordinances and continuity of laws. My own feeling is we ought to put them all together in one big article, so that we can dovetail them all together rather than do it piecemeal. There are a few things, as the chairman has said already, and I think there are others we have not yet worked out; and since this is the last clean-up provision anyway, I think we'll save time in the long run if we try to get together now all of these things that the ordinances and continuity of laws are supposed to do and put them all together, dovetail them and submit it to this committee for one last look, and make it final at that time. Otherwise, I think we'll be reconsidering some of them in the light of new provisions that we may insert.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, when you say "we," who are you referring to, the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity?

TAVARES: I think the whole Convention as well as this Committee of the Whole. In other words, suppose we have to draw something else about what's to happen when this -- when we first became a state. Well, for instance, Delegate Shimamura's statement about who's to sign these bonds which the present law requires to be signed by the President and so forth. Various other things. We may find ourselves going back to amend other sections of this ordinance article to conform and I think if we wait a little later, we'll actually be making haste, more haste that way than reconsidering and rehashing the same things over again, some of them.

CHAIRMAN: As a matter of information, Delegate Anthony, your motion doesn't go to Committee Proposal No. 25, does it? And to Committee Proposal No. 24 from the same committee? Then we can continue our consideration on those and defer this.

ANTHONY: That's my suggestion -- my motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is to defer the rest of the sections in Article 23 -- Committee Proposal 23, rather. Any more discussion? All those in favor of the motion to defer please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

The Chair's in doubt as to whether this Committee of the Whole sitting here now can consider Committee Proposal No. 24. I believe the person who made the motion to resolve ourselves into Committee of the Whole was Delegate Kam. You just stated, "I so move." Did your motion include Committee Proposal No. 24, and No. 25?

KAM: Sure, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: It did?

KAM: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: Also Committee Reports 73 and 70? Is there any objection? Chairman Shimamura, what is the wish of the committee as to the order of consideration of Committee Proposals 25 and 24?

SHIMAMURA: Pardon me, Mr. Chairman. I'm sorry, I didn't hear you.

CHAIRMAN: Which would you like to consider first, Committee Proposal 24 or 25?

SHIMAMURA: Well, let's go to 25. I think that's practically all from H.R. 49, and perhaps we can find some area of agreement on this proposal.

CHAIRMAN: We are now considering Standing Committee Report No. 73 and Committee Proposal No. 25.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 25.

WOOLAWAY: I'll second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The entire proposal?

SHIMAMURA: May I ask leave to amend Committee Proposal No. 25. First, the title, after the words "A proposal relating to," strike out "an," a-n, insert the words "the initial"; strike out "ordinance," insert "in the state"; so that it shall read "relating to the initial election in the state."

Also, while on my feet, to conform to the title of the article, the following amendment. Insert the word "initial" before "election," the word "election" following the word "article." Strike out the word "ordinance." The reason for that is that Committee Print C as amended in the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate has deleted the word "ordinances" or the word "ordinance" whenever it appears, except in very limited form.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan, would you withdraw your motion for the sake of order here? Withdraw your motion? You moved to adopt the whole Committee Proposal No. 25, didn't you?

BRYAN: That's right. You want to take it by sections?

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

BRYAN: All right. I'll move the adoption of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 25.

CHAIRMAN: Just a second. We have Shimamura's motion on the floor.

DELEGATE: I think his original motion was correct.

CHAIRMAN: Whose original motion?

DELEGATE: Mr. Bryan's.

CHAIRMAN: Oh, yes, that's right.

BRYAN: Let's vote on the amendment suggested, and then I'll go on.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that, first, that the committee adopt Committee Proposal No. 25, and subsequently Delegate Shimamura moved to amend the title to read "Relating to the Initial Election in the State." Also, the words after "article" read "initial election," and cross out the word "ordinances." Is there any second to the motion?

BRYAN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded. Is there any more discussion?

SAKAKIHARA: If it's appropriate at this time, I would like to move to defer action on Proposal No. 25, Committee Proposal No. 24, Committee Proposal No. 23, to be taken up together so that we might make faster progress here. We might go over the proposal, Committee Proposal No. 25, section by section, and perhaps we might find ourselves in the same predicament we find ourselves in now with Proposal No. 23. I desire to move at this time that instead of making amendments at this time to different sections we'll take up Proposals 23, 24, 25 in a recess, and I think we'll make faster progress.

OKINO: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we defer action on Committee Proposals No. 23, 24 and 25. Is there any discussion?

PORTEUS: I might inform the body that I discussed this matter with the chairman of the Committee on Style, and if this plan is followed, he will not hold a meeting of Style this afternoon in order to let those that wish to get together with the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Laws in order to work this out. And that he'll call a meeting of the Style Committee tonight at 7:30. That would leave the rest of the afternoon open. The difficulty is that if we keep considering these other matters, at the end of the afternoon we will still not have found the time to permit these people to work on this thing together. So I think it would be desirable to rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: Point well taken. Now, is there any more discussion on the question to defer?

H. RICE: I'm wondering if Delegate Sakakihara can tell us where in Section - - in Proposal No. 25 we'd get stuck again?

SAKAKIHARA: My motion is in general terms, as we have deliberated on Proposal No. 23. I have a strong feeling that among the delegates present here in Committee of the Whole, they are bound to bring that question up. I think it might expedite the proceedings here if we would defer action on these three proposals and deliberate as a separate body and make for faster progress. It would also help the Style Committee, going into a meeting.

SHIMAMURA: This matter is entirely up to this body, but I don't think we'll make much faster progress by continuing all these proposals. Proposal No. 25 is taken almost word for word from H.R. 49 with necessary changes, and - -

H. RICE: That's my idea. I've worked on H.R. 49. That's my homework to keep in touch with that. It seems to me Proposal No. 25 is all in order. It's simply a matter of going through and reading it and understanding it.

PORTEUS: I don't think there's any question but that we are all agreed that we want to get at this and get it disposed of as fast as possible. The only thing is that it's now quarter past two. If we work for two more hours on these other matters, you won't have had any conferences on the earlier proposal on which there seems to be some difference of opinion. If we stop now, if there's any time left over they can go into these other subjects. I think we'll make time faster by taking time off to do it.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to defer action for consideration of Committee Proposals No. 25, 24 and 23, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

BRYAN: I move that this Committee of the Whole rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that this committee rise, report progress and beg leave to sit again. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

JULY 11, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Committee of the Whole please come to order. Delegate Shimamura, what is the wish of the Committee on Continuity and Ordinances insofar as order of procedure goes?

SHIMAMURA: If I may suggest, it might be preferable to take up Committee Proposal No. 25. I think that's least controversial.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no objection then, we'll proceed with consideration of Committee Proposal No. 25 and Standing Committee Report No. 73.

BRYAN: Again I move the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 25.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the motion was made yesterday and seconded, was it not? Then the Chair rules it's not necessary today.

SHIMAMURA: Has there been a second to that motion?

CHAIRMAN: The motion was made yesterday and seconded; therefore, the motion is still before the committee.

SHIMAMURA: Was my motion to amend the titles voted upon yesterday?

CHAIRMAN: No, the motion was made but not voted on.

SHIMAMURA: The change in the titles, as the delegates know, is to conform to H.R. 49 which has done away with reference to ordinances except in two particulars which do not pertain to the present section.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the amendments on the title of the article? Are you ready for the question? The amendment reads, after the word "a proposal," after amended it will read "Relating to the initial election in the state"; and after the word "article" it was moved to amend to read "initial election" and the word "ordinance" was deleted. All those in favor of the motion to amend, please signify by raising your right, rather, by saying "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

SHIMAMURA: May I point out for the convenience of the delegates, so that they may follow this article more easily, that the substance of it is taken from H.R. 49, Committee Print C, Sections 4 and 5.

I move in Section 1 to delete the word "that," the first word of the section, and capitalize "in" on the first line; also to strike out the word "President" on the second line, and insert the word "Congress"; the fifth line, after the word "President," insert the words, "of the United States."

HEEN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Just one second. Is there any more amendment you - -

SHIMAMURA: Yes, Mr. Chairman. If I may make these because these are in compliance with H.R. 49. On the eighth line - -

HEEN: What was the last amendment?

SHIMAMURA: The last one, Judge Heen, was the insertion of the words "of the United States" on the fifth line, Section 1, after the word "President."

CHAIRMAN: Could you proceed a little slower. Probably some of the delegates have difficulty following.

SHIMAMURA: On the eighth line, Section 1, first page, delete the words starting with "except those officers for which" down to the second line on page two, "temporary provisions." And also on the fifth and sixth lines on page two, Section 1, on the fifth line after the word "required," delete the words "by ordinance of this Convention" and down to the sixth line, "duly ratified by the people or." Those amendments, as I've said, are to comply with the amended form of H.R. 49.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to the amendments made to Section 1?

H. RICE: I second the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 1 be amended as stated by Delegate Shimamura.

TAVARES: I'm sorry I haven't discussed this with Mr. Shimamura since yesterday, but I was wondering if he would answer a question as to whether we couldn't leave the mention of the President of the United States in and instead of changing it to Congress, make an alternative, so that wherever we mention "President of the United States," we could add something like this, "or the Congress of the United States, if its approval is required," or some word like that, so that whichever way it comes out in conference, we'd fit either one without having to call another Convention.

SHIMAMURA: I think that's a good suggestion. I have no objection. I think it's a good suggestion.

CHAIRMAN: Could you make the suggestion in the amendment?

TAVARES: Then, I move an amendment of the amendment, so that in the second line instead of changing the word "President" to "Congress," it would remain "President," and then the third line after the word "States" meaning United States, insert a comma, "or the Congress of the United States, if its approval is required," comma.

CHAIRMAN: Could you please read that over again?

TAVARES: Well, with the amendment it would read this way. "In case the people of the Territory of Hawaii ratify this Constitution and the President of the United States, or the Congress of the United States, if its approval is required, approves the same, the governor of the Territory of Hawaii shall" and so forth.

CHAIRMAN: I believe the present suggested amendment is acceptable to the movant of the previous amendment.

SHIMAMURA: It's quite acceptable. In that connection, may I point out then that from the - - on the fifth line, the suggested amendment I made "of the United States" after the word "President" should go out, then.

TAVARES: Yes, I was going to suggest in lieu of that, insert after the word "President" a comma "or from the Congress, if its approval is required" comma.

SHIMAMURA: On that, may I respectfully suggest that H.R. 49 in all its forms has "President." In other words, that's the certification of the President.

TAVARES: That's only the President that has to certify?

SHIMAMURA: Yes.

TAVARES: Well, then, I'll withdraw my amendment as to that.

H. RICE: Then, I take it, Mr. Tavares feels that it may be changed again in conference. Otherwise, we are, by the original, the way it stood originally, you are following H.R. 49.

SHIMAMURA: Yes, but I have been led to believe that there is some hope that if our Constitution is received by the members of Congress and the Senate before the final vote, there is a chance of changing back to presidential approval because then they'll know what we are going to offer as a constitution. That was - - that's my impression that I get from talking to people who have communicated with members of the Congress.

H. RICE: Well, I hope that that won't occur because it's easy enough to have the statehood bill then die in conference.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the amendments? Are you ready for the question?

A. TRASK: The last remark from Delegate Rice is quite quizzical. I wish he would explain that further. Maybe it would assist further in the drafting of this particular Section 1.

H. RICE: Well, as I say, this H.R. 49 has been my night reading. I would hate to see this H.R. 49. I think we ought to go along with it the way the Senate has finally drafted it. If we do that, I think they'll be more liable to accept it right pronto. But if we leave that part in doubt and make either the President or Congress could endorse our Constitution, why I can see that the House, Congressional House, may not agree with the amendment made by the Senate and put the bill in conference and then let it die in conference.

TAVARES: This amendment will not have any of those results. It'll only prevent, for that purpose, another Convention being called, because in case it should be changed and we have Congress' approval in here, we will have to wait till Congress meets again and approves before we can become a state; whereas, if it should be changed back to the President approving, our Constitution fits either one. So I think it's an advantage to have both. That doesn't mean that Congress has to act that way. It means we're covering both possibilities and trying to avoid a further amendment of our proposed Constitution before we can become a state, depending on which way the Congress finally acts.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment proposed is as follows: the first word "that" is deleted; the word, first letter of the word "in" is capitalized; and on the third line after the word "States," a comma is inserted and the following words added, "or the Congress of the United States, if its approval is required," comma. And in the fifth line after the word "President," the words "of the United States" are inserted.

SHIMAMURA: Pardon me, Mr. Chairman. I did make that insertion at first, but I've withdrawn it since. The words "of the United States" should be withdrawn because on the second line the President of the United States is named.

CHAIRMAN: Then there is no amendment on the fifth line. In the eighth line, beginning with the word "except," the words following are deleted "except those officers for which"; and on the next page, "this Constitutional Convention, by ordinance duly ratified by the people, shall have made other temporary provisions," comma, they are all deleted.

ROBERTS: I'm generally in favor of the amendment proposed by Delegate Tavares. I do have some problem, however, as a matter of policy. If we put this language in—and it's desirable in line with H.R. 49 in its present state—suppose H.R. 49 is not acted on by this Congress. When we submit this Constitution at the next legislature of the United States we are in fact suggesting or implying that we think we ought to have approval by the Congress before this thing is put into effect. I think the amendment in H.R. 49 is highly undesirable. I don't see why we as a state have to go to Congress for approval when no other state coming in has had to do so. It's been acted on by the President. I do feel, however, we could get some general language, and broad, which would conform or indicate conformance to H.R. 49 in its present state in this session, but would not bind us in the future because the implication of this thing is that we have no objection to the Congress of the United States reviewing the Constitution. I think it's objectionable.

SHIMAMURA: I see the last speaker's point. However, there isn't anything that we can do except to comply with H.R. 49 which makes it mandatory to include these provisions, and the provision as amended says "Congress of the United States"; they have deleted "President," but we are leaving "President" in to take care of the situation which might arise necessitating only his approval.

TAVARES: I am gravely in doubt as to whether the next to the last speaker's statement is correct. I am very definitely of the impression that some states have been admitted under laws that did require the approval of Congress. That's my very definite recollection from previous study, and I think he is mistaken there. There are some statehood laws that have said Congress must approve; others have said only the President; so that I don't think it's correct that every state has been admitted only on presidential approval.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion?

ROBERTS: I have a suggestion which might meet that. I might say in reply to the previous speaker that I don't know of any states that have had to go and get their Constitution approved by the Congress. I would amend the second part, "or the Congress of the United States, if its approval is required under H.R. 49," so that if H.R. 49 is not passed in this session, then we do not suggest or imply to the Congress that we want to submit our Constitution to them for their approval. This election ordinance stays in our Constitution whether H.R. 49 passes or not. And if it should -- we should get no action on H.R. 49 in this session, we are, in fact, implying that we have no objection to the Congress reviewing our Constitution. I do.

TAVARES: Is the speaker finished?

CHAIRMAN: Are you through?

ROBERTS: Yes.

TAVARES: I think we are being -- we are acting detrimentally to the interests of Hawaii if we don't cover those possibilities. Anybody that thinks after this thing having been inserted in this bill, that the next Congress isn't going to notice it, is being naive, that's all. The same people that wanted that in the Senate bill today are going to want it in the next bill, and we're just closing our eyes if we think they are just going to overlook it the next time. I think we should cover both possibilities because otherwise if Congress still insists, then we'll have to call another convention to amend this before we can accept statehood.

HEEN: I have this suggestion to make. Have that clause read this way: "In case the people of the Territory of Hawaii ratify this Constitution and the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States."

DELEGATE: [Inaudible.]

CHAIRMAN: Could you please use your mike?

HEEN: "In case the people of the Territory of Hawaii ratify this Constitution and the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States."

ROBERTS: I'll second that if it's made in the form of a motion.

HEEN: I so move.

ROBERTS: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Is that amendment acceptable to the movant of the original amendment? If not, we'll have to decide on that first.

SHIMAMURA: I'm wondering if the Judge would -- Judge Heen would yield to a question? As I read Section 5, Committee Print C, it makes the provision of that section mandatory in language. I'm wondering if it's wise, as a matter of policy and also as a matter of law, to leave all reference to Congress out when it says that "said Constitutional Convention shall provide that in case of the ratification of said Constitution by the people and in the case the Congress approves the same," and so forth.

HEEN: I don't think it's inconsistent with that provision. If they should change it back to the President, this will conform, the language which I have just suggested.

TAVARES: May I ask --

CHAIRMAN: Are you through, Delegate Heen?

TAVARES: May I ask the delegate a question? At the expense of a few more words, couldn't we make that a little clearer by adding after the amendment suggested by the delegate, the words "whose approval thereto may be required"? So that it will read "and the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States whose approval thereto may be required." That takes away the mandatory requirement that Delegate Shimamura expressed some concern about.

HEEN: I think that further amendment is in order.

TAVARES: I'll withdraw my amendment, if the second will consent to it.

ROBERTS: I'll accept that amendment.

TAVARES: I mean I withdraw my first amendment.

CHAIRMAN: And could you repeat your last amendment so we'll get the records cleared?

TAVARES: The last amendment is, instead of inserting after the word "States," in the third line the amendment which I first moved, insert the amendments that Delegate Heen has moved with my further addendum, reading as follows, "and the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States whose approval thereto may be required," comma.

CHAIRMAN: There are some delegates that are requesting that it be read again.

TAVARES: I should have deleted some further words. As I understand it, instead of the words from lines two and three, "and the President of the United States" should be deleted, and insert in lieu thereof the words, "and the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States whose approval thereto may be required," comma, and delete the words "approves the same" in the same line, line three.

SHIMAMURA: That is acceptable to the committee.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to reread the present amendment offered. In the second line, after the word "and," delete the words "the President of the United States approves the same," to the third line, including the comma; and inserting in lieu thereof the words, "the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States, whose approval thereto may be required," comma. Is that correct, Delegate Tavares?

TAVARES: That is correct.

FUKUSHIMA: Then there should be the words "of the United States" following the word "President" in the fifth line.

SHIMAMURA: That is right.

CHAIRMAN: Are there any more amendments? The Chair would - -

ARASHIRO: If the above is amended as such, then I think we should continue and go down below where it says, "The Territory of Hawaii shall, within 30 days after receipt of such notification," insert a "such" before "notification," and delete "from the President," and then amend "certifying" by saying "certification of approval."

CHAIRMAN: Did the chairman of the committee hear the - -

SHIMAMURA: Yes, I did. I see the delegate's intention, but I think it's fully covered here because it says "within 30 days after receipt of notification from the President, certifying such approval," and H.R. 49 has not changed the fact that the President is the one to certify such approval, never Congress. Therefore, the notification portion remains the same.

ROBERTS: I think the words "certify such" or "certifying such approval" should be deleted, because in H.R. 49 the certification is the certification of action by the Congress, and since we've written this general language, I think certification has no meaning. I think that the amendment as proposed by Delegate Arashiro on the fourth line which reads "after receipt of such notification from the President"—that's notification of the approval above—"issue his proclamation," you can delete the words "certifying such approval."

H. RICE: Second the motion to strike out those three words.

CHAIRMAN: Is it acceptable to the committee?

SHIMAMURA: No.

CHAIRMAN: Just a second, let's get this straight. Delegate Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: Under H.R. 49, on the mimeographed copy, page 19, it does say that, "It shall be the duty of the President to certify such approval." Whether the Congress makes the approval, or to put it differently, whether the Congress approves or the President approves, it is incumbent upon the President to certify to such approval. Therefore, I think it's correct as it is.

HEEN: I have this suggestion to make. Starting with the clause "within 30 days after receipt of notification," have that clause read as follows, "within 30 days after receipt of official notice of such approval" period - - comma, rather.

TAVARES: I second the motion.

HEEN: My point is this. By using this general language, it may come from the Chief Clerk of the Senate or the House, or it may come from the President, or it may come from some other source; as long as it's official, that's all we need to worry about.

SHIMAMURA: We have no particular objection as to that. Only thing is, the word - - language of the enabling act on page 20 is "within 30 days after the receipt of said notification from the President."

CHAIRMAN: You have no objection to that, is that correct? Is it acceptable? Delegate Heen, could you please repeat the amendment again?

HEEN: Have that clause read as follows, "within 30 days after receipt of official notice of such approval," comma.

TAVARES: I think to make it clearer, we should delete the words in lines four to five, "notification from the President," with the addition "of the United States" which was previously moved deleted also, "certifying," and then we would only need to insert the words in lieu thereof, "official notice of." In other words, delete the words "notification from the President certifying," and any other amendments heretofore offered to that clause, and insert in lieu thereof the words "official notice of."

SHIMAMURA: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN: Is that suggested amendment acceptable to Delegate Roberts? I believe it conforms with the motion he made.

ROBERTS: Yes, it is; if it deletes the word "certifying." It does.

ASHFORD: Why use the word "notice"? "Notification" is used throughout in H.R. 49, and if they are the same, why don't we follow the language of the Congressional bill? "Notification" instead of "notice."

HEEN: That's satisfactory so far as I'm concerned.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Delegate Heen. Is there any objection to it so far as seconds are concerned?

SHIMAMURA: When the Chair is ready, may we have that read, as amended in final form?

CHAIRMAN: Yes. The amendments, so far, are as follows. In the first line, the first word "that" has been deleted, and the first letter of the word "in" has been capitalized. In the second line, the following words have been deleted, "President of the United" and in the third line, "States approves the same" have been deleted. In the fourth line, the word "official" has been inserted between the words "of" and "notification," and the word "of" has been inserted after the word "notification," and the words "from the" have been deleted. In the fifth line, the words "President certifying" have been deleted. In the eighth line, the words "except those officers for which " have been deleted. On the following page, in the first line, the entire line ["this Constitutional Convention, by ordinance duly ratified by the"] has been deleted and in the second line the words, "people, shall have made other temporary provisions," have been deleted. In the fifth line, the words

"by ordinance of this Convention" have been deleted. In the sixth line, the words "duly ratified by the people or" were deleted.

TAVARES: I think you inadvertently omitted an insertion after the word "Constitution" in the second line, or rather "and." After the word "Constitution" in the second line there was an insertion reading, "the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States whose approval thereto may be required." The first line - -

CHAIRMAN: Oh, yes, that's right.

TAVARES: - - second line, first page - -

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

TAVARES: - - after the word "and."

CHAIRMAN: The Chair stands corrected.

TAVARES: May someone now read the entire amended section as proposed to be amended?

HEEN:

Section 1: In case the people of the Territory of Hawaii ratify this Constitution and the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States whose approval thereto may be required, the governor of the Territory of Hawaii shall, within thirty days after receipt of official notification of such approval, issue his proclamation for an election, or primary and general elections, as may be required, at which officers for all elective offices provided for by this Constitution, and laws of this State, shall be chosen by the people; but the officers so to be elected shall in any event include two senators and two representatives in Congress, and unless and until otherwise required by this Constitution or laws of this State, said representatives shall be elected at large.

NIELSEN: I'd like to make a further amendment in the last line after the second word, "State," insert "one of" and then read on, "said representatives shall be elected from," and add the following, deleting "at large," "from Oahu and the other from any other island." I so move.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

NIELSEN: Is that acceptable to the Chairman?

SHIMAMURA: May I have that repeated, please?

NIELSEN: The last sentence in the last line, after the word "State," drop the comma and add "one of"; and then following the word "elected," the last - - the third from the last word, delete the words "at large," and insert "from Oahu and the other from any other island."

CHAIRMAN: The amendment has been moved and seconded.

TAVARES: These two amendments are so very different. One is non-controversial, the other one is.

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

TAVARES: I suggest that the movants withhold the motion until we vote on the clean-up amendments, which these first ones are, and then go on to the controversial one.

NIELSEN: That's entirely satisfactory, but I thought they were going to maybe approve this paragraph.

CHAIRMAN: I think that's fair enough.

ROBERTS: I have one question to direct to the chairman of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity. In the sixth line, reference is made to "election, or primary and general elections, as may be required." I'm not quite sure I know what the import of those words are. Is it the intent that there shall be special elections, or primary and general elections, at the wish of the governor?

SHIMAMURA: Yes, I think it's incumbent upon the governor to proclaim in his proclamation whether there shall be just one election, or a primary and a general election, and this follows the language and sense of H.R. 49.

ROBERTS: I'm still not quite clear. There's no mandate in H.R. 49 which requires any special types of elections. I would assume, in line with our previous policy of elections in the state - - territory that there would be primary and generals. I didn't know that it was the intent to provide that the governor of the future State can be elected at a special election, without any provision for a primary.

SHIMAMURA: There's a definite provision in Section 5, Print C, page 21 on the official copy, the fifth and sixth lines of Section 5, page 21 on the official copy. On the mimeographed copy, it's on Section 5, page 21, the fifth and sixth lines there also.

CHAIRMAN: Thirteenth line.

ROBERTS: I'm not quite sure what they mean. That's the point.

SHIMAMURA: Well, I think—as I said a few moments ago, I could be mistaken—but I think that's discretionary with the governor, whether he shall call just one election or a primary and a general.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on this question?

ROBERTS: What are the words "as may be required"? As may be required by what? By our statutes? I'm not sure of the meaning of that language and I think that in dealing with the election of the new officers of the state, that we ought to have a pretty good idea as to how they are going to be handled.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, the question has been directed to the committee.

SHIMAMURA: I think that's a good question. I had so far construed it to mean as may be required by the governor in his proclamation. I could be mistaken as to that. It is true that there is some uncertainty there, what exactly is meant by the language, whether it's meant by some requirement under our state laws or as required by the governor in his proclamation.

ROBERTS: In view of the statement, I would suggest that we be specific. I'm sure it was not the intention of the Congress in its statute, proposed statute - - bill, to tell us how to run our elections. I think we can indicate pretty definitely in our ordinance as to how we think they ought to be held, whether by primary and general, or by a special election, and I think we can write it in so there is no ambiguity. That would not be in contravention to H.R. 49.

SHIMAMURA: I think that's a good suggestion.

HEEN: There is a provision which the same committee will present to this committee later on reading thus: "All laws in force at the time this Constitution takes effect and not inconsistent therewith, shall be the laws of the State and remain in force, mutatis mutandis, until they expire by their own limitation, or are altered or repealed by the legislature." In other words, all the election laws will continue in force; and, therefore, those laws will be applicable at the time the elections are held, or rather this special election is held. Perhaps instead of having the clause read "as may be required," it might read "in accordance with law" —"for any election, or primary and general elections, in accordance with law." It fits the situation.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, how does that suggestion meet your problem?

ROBERTS: I have the general problem that we have never in the territory before elected any governor or lieutenant governor, and we have no laws dealing with those. We might put some language in here that the laws applicable to general elections shall also be applicable to the election of the governor and lieutenant governor. But we've got to make some provision in some way to handle it, because this will leave it completely in the hands of the governor to decide how he wants the election to be run.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, do you have a suggestion?

SHIMAMURA: I don't think there's anything applicable in our article on suffrage and elections. As I recall that article, it was just the general election that is provided for. Am I correct on that? I should like to be enlightened on it.

[Part of the debate was not recorded. The following is from the minutes of the committee.]

Mr. Tavares suggested, since there was doubt on the subject, that there be a short recess.

Mr. Bryan stated that it was his understanding that the chairman of the Committee on Executive Powers and Functions had been asked to write a statute covering the special election to be held for this purpose.

Mr. Shimamura stated that Committee Proposal No. 25 was the article to take care of the initial election.

The Chair declared a short recess.

(RECESS)

[Recording resumed.]

CHAIRMAN: It appears that the group that has been working on this problem has as yet not been able to come to some agreement. Therefore the Chair would like to suggest that we defer the consideration of Committee Proposal No. 25 until some time later in the day, and consider Committee Proposal No. 24.

PORTEUS: I move that the recommendation of the chairman be adopted, which would take us to Committee Proposal No. 24.

BRYAN: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we defer consideration on Committee Proposal No. 25 and consider Committee Proposal No. 24. Any discussion? All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, same sign - - "no," rather. Motion is carried.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 24.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 24 be adopted. Is there any discussion? Does the chairman of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity wish to say anything on the section?

TAVARES: Isn't that covered now by another section on suffrage and elections? I think it is. Just a minute.

SHIMAMURA: No. I should like to propose a couple of amendments to comply with the latest draft of H.R. 49, which is Committee Print C. Delete the word "Ordinances" and the following words after the word "Article," "Be it ordained by the people of Hawaii." That is done in compliance with H.R. 49 which has deleted reference to ordinances with respect to these particular provisions.

CHAIRMAN: How would the amendment read, Delegate Shimamura?

SHIMAMURA: After the word "Article" in the center of the page, delete the word Ordinances" and also the words, "Be it ordained by the people of Hawaii."

H. RICE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the - -

LUIZ: I would like to ask a question here. It doesn't state who will say that the party or the organization is subversive. Who will be the judge of that?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Luiz, could you please hold your question off for a few minutes until we've disposed of this proposed amendment? Delegate Shimamura, your amendment goes to the title below the word "Article." Is that correct?

SHIMAMURA: Yes, for the time being.

CHAIRMAN: And your motion is to delete the words "Ordinances" and "Be it ordained by the people of Hawaii." Is that correct?

SHIMAMURA: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend the title of Committee Proposal No. 24. Ready for the question? All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried. Amended.

SHIMAMURA: I now move to delete the word "that" on the first line of Section 1 and to capitalize the next word, "No"; and to insert after the word "who" on the first line, Section 1, "aids or"–"a-i-d-s or." In other words, it will read, "or who aids or belongs." I move for that amendment.

DELEGATE: Second.

TAVARES: I have grave doubt that the word "aids" by itself is unconstitutional [sic] I think it should be preceded by the word "knowingly." I think that is the way it has been interpreted in the recent communist trials, that it must be something done with knowledge, because sometimes people unwittingly aid organizations that they don't know are subversive. I think - - I read the instructions of Judge Medina to the jury that convicted those persons accused of subversive activities in New York, and he very clearly stated that it must be done with knowledge. I therefore move to insert the word "knowingly" before "aids."

CHAIRMAN: Is that acceptable to Delegate Shimamura?

SHIMAMURA: I have no objection to that insertion. I was just trying to comply with the exact language of H.R. 49.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Luiz, is there any question you wish to raise as regards the question - - section?

LUIZ: Want me to repeat the question?

CHAIRMAN: That's right. Is that a point of order you are rising to, Delegate Anthony?

ANTHONY: I want to speak to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Luiz, could you yield just a second? Confine our discussion to the amendment right immediately before us for the sake of order.

ANTHONY: I agree with Delegate Tavares that the proper construction of the incorporation provision which is mandated would include the word "knowingly," but I doubt the wisdom of modifying the language of the act of Congress. It would seem to me more appropriate to adopt the words of the act with our construction–which is, of course, the only supportable construction–that Delegate Tavares has just put upon it. In other words, rather than change the language of the act of Congress, let's interpret it to make it constitutional, and that would require implicit in that interpretation, the word "knowingly."

SHIMAMURA: I believe I would go along with that suggestion. I think it will be preferable to leave the words as specified by Congress, and leave that interpretation in the report.

TAVARES: I'll withdraw my amendment with that understanding.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the motion -- the amendment?

A. TRASK: Can the amendment be stated, please?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment is to delete the first word "that" and capitalize the first letter of the word, "No," and insert the words "aids or" between the words "who" and "belongs."

A. TRASK: Question on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of -- The word "knowingly" has been withdrawn. All those in favor of the amendment, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed, same sign -- opposed, "no." Amendment is carried.
Delegate Luiz.

BRYAN: In order that he can proceed orderly, I move the adoption of the section as amended.

CHAIRMAN: His question went to Section 1. You see, the chairman feels that the question raised by Mr. Luiz goes to another portion of the first section; therefore, that is not necessary. Delegate Luiz.

LUIZ: I am not speaking against this section, but I wanted to find out just who is going to determine whether the organization is trying to overthrow the government or is subversive in any way. Just who are going to be the judges of that?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, could you answer the question?

ANTHONY: In the first instance that would be determined by the officer who is appointing the particular person. Ultimately however, it would be determined by the ultimate, the proper court in which that question -- that would be a judicial question; but, of course, in the first instance, if there was a known communist, the governor couldn't appoint any person to any such office. It would be a prohibition against the governor in the first instance, and ultimately upon the courts.

TAVARES: May I supplement what has been said. There are two kinds of offices, elective and appointive. Insofar as the qualifications and so forth of elective officers are left as they are under this Constitution to a particular legislative body, that body would make the determination, as I see it. Insofar, however, as they are left to an appointive authority, he could decline to appoint a person on that ground or perhaps under authority of law could remove a person on that ground. If there is not due process of law involved, I presume then they would go to the proper courts for that determination. However, I don't think that would prevent our legislature from setting up loyalty boards as the United States government has and provide for a method of removal in that way without resort to the courts. Except, of course, that ultimately where due process is denied under any procedure, and some other constitutional right is infringed, of course, the courts are always the last resort. Except, of course, in election cases, where I think -- I mean election of legislators, where they are their own judges of their own qualifications, where the courts would not interfere with a finding.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the question raised?

ROBERTS: I have a question to ask the chairman of the committee. In the last line of that section, the words "or any public employment," those were not words which were in H.R. 49, were they?

SHIMAMURA: That is correct; it was not, but the committee felt that public employment as well as office of profit should be covered, but that is entirely a matter of policy up to this Convention.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the question?

ANTHONY: I think we're on safer ground if we just adhere to the language of the act. I had assumed that this was an attempt to copy the language of the act of Congress. I, therefore, would move an amendment to this section, to make it conform to the expressed mandate of the Congress, whatever that amendment may be.

CHAIRMAN: That would be to cross out the words "any public employment." Is that correct, Delegate Shimamura?

ANTHONY: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, on the question raised by Delegate Roberts, would it be conforming to H.R. 49 should we delete the words "any public employment"?

SHIMAMURA: Yes, it is -- it would be in strict compliance with H.R. 49 to leave out the words "or any public employment." The committee discussed the matter and some members of the committee felt very strongly that public employment should be covered.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the motion?

DELEGATE: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the words, "or any public employment," be deleted from the last line of Section 1.

ANTHONY: I just wanted to raise the issue before the body. It has been pointed out that the purpose is to prevent all persons belonging to a subversive organization from receiving any employment whatsoever under the State. I think under those circumstances I would withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: Motion has been withdrawn. Any more discussion?

HEEN: It seems to me that the words "of trust or profit" should be deleted. It might be an unpaid office, like the police commissioner, unpaid office, although it may be an office of trust, and I don't think we should have any limitation there at all. If it's a public office, it's a public office, and no communist should hold any public office or any employment of any kind.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, what is the committee's wish?

SHIMAMURA: I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman, but I didn't get the last few words of the senator.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen suggested that the words "of trust or profit" be deleted because the oath should apply to those in government work who do not receive pay as well as those who do.

SHIMAMURA: Well, as a matter of policy or principle I have no objection. We are just trying to follow the exact language of H.R. 49 which says "public office of trust or profit under the State constitution." That's page 9, Committee Print C, Section 2.

HEEN: You will recall the case of Judith Coplin. I don't think she held any office at all; I think she was only there as an employee in the State Department, and she was convicted of some offense, I think in connection with taking some secret documents out of the office in which she was employed. So I move that the words "of trust or profit" appearing in the fifth line of this section be deleted.

SHIMAMURA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the words "of trust or profit" in the fifth line be deleted. Is there any discussion of the motion?

A. TRASK: I'm opposed to that deletion. On Section 9, the Congressional act, H.R. 49, specifically uses those words and I think we should go along with the Congressional amendment, because it would be more specific and it wouldn't cast any doubt. I don't know whether or not the Coplin case is altogether in point when we don't know the precise language of the indictment under which and the law under which she was charged. I think it's altogether safe; it certainly is specific; it would take in some person in the commission where there is no pay, but it would be a trust as against another situation where there is money. The question of office, as distinguished from employment, would be a question of either pay or no pay, and I think these terms are all-inclusive, and it leaves no doubt, and I think we should conform at any rate with the Congressional amendment.

ASHFORD: I'm wholeheartedly in support of the amendment offered by Delegate Heen. I think the language cannot be made too broad. No one who is seeking to overthrow the government should hold any office or employment of any sort whatever, of the public.

KAUHANE: I'd like to second the motion made by the speaker before the last delegate, if the motion is in order.

CHAIRMAN: That has been moved and seconded, I believe, by Delegate Heen who has moved, and seconded by James Trask [sic].

TAVARES: May the records show that - - I think the records should show here that we are adopting this because, by taking those words out, we are broadening the class that can't hold office, and not restricting it; so that we are not only including offices of trust or profit, but any other offices. Therefore, there should be no objection to this amendment. We are complying with what Congress wants and more.

KAUHANE: I believe in the statement made by the first speaker before the last two was to the effect that he is against the amendment that has been offered, and I believe that was a point that he raised in objection to the amendment that has been offered. I'd like to second the motion to object to the amendment that has been offered. We have taken a position here, and I think we might as well take a definite stand, as to our intent and purposes. Much has been said about following H.R. 49 as much as possible so that we will not prevent the passage of H.R. 49 in the Congress, and it will only leave a question of doubt in their minds as to our sincerity in adopting this Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 24. Rather than see any hitch in preventing H.R. 49 to pass because of our undetermined stand on the question, I think the motion for the deletion, or objection to the amendment that has been offered is proper, and I think the second to that objection is proper, too. So I'd like to move the previous question opposing the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair - - Just a second, I want to clear this. I direct this question to the last speaker. Is it your understanding that Delegate Arthur Trask made a motion to delete?

A. TRASK: If it is the sense of the Convention that the words "any public office" are more elastic than the additional words "trust or profit," I would withdraw my objection to it. As far as I see the question," public office" refers to offices which are paid for, offices which are those of trust. I don't know of any other offices besides those which are paid for and those that are not. So, my objection at the outset to the deletion of "trust or profit" is that it is more inclusive and broad. But if there is any thinking, as Delegate Heen said, that any public office—and as supported by the lady delegate from Molokai—that the words deleted would make it more expansive, I would withdraw my objection and as a member of the committee urge the chairman to accept the amendment.

H. RICE: As the opponents of statehood are pointing out that we are communists here in Hawaii, I think the strengthening of this is - - this is stronger with that amendment suggested by Delegate Heen, and therefore I'll support the amendment.

FUKUSHIMA: If the intent is to make it elastic as possible, would not the words "under this Constitution," should not they be deleted and in place thereof insert the word "in this State"? I'd like to ask the question of the chairman of the committee.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, could you attempt an answer?

SHIMAMURA: May I have that question repeated again, please? I'm sorry.

FUKUSHIMA: If the intent is to make this provision as elastic as possible, would not the words "in this State" be more appropriate than the words "under this Constitution"?

SHIMAMURA: The language of H.R. 49 is "under this Constitution."

FUKUSHIMA: We may have in the future a new local government, maybe the County of Lanai, and if you have elective or appointive officers there, perhaps those officers will not be covered because they are not part of this Constitution. They'll be a legislative organ.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask that we dispose of the other amendments before we come down to that one, if that's all right.

HEEN: I think the point raised by Delegate Fukushima is worthy of some thought. Reading the language as it now appears, "under this Constitution," it seems at first hand it means offices created by this Constitution, or employment created under this Constitution. I amend further by deleting the words "under this Constitution" appearing at the end of that section and substituting for those words, the words "of or under the State."

ANTHONY: I would suggest "under the State or any political subdivision thereof." And by the elimination of the words "trust and profit," I might point out to Delegate Trask, that is an all-inclusive provision. In other words, no person, whether it's office of trust or profit or otherwise, could hold any office under the State or any political subdivision thereof.

ASHFORD: I am in accord with the suggestion to strike the words "under this Constitution," but I don't see the necessity of adding "under or by authority of the State" or whatever words were used by Judge Heen. When you say "public office," it means public office in Hawaii, and under the aegis of the State.

CHAIRMAN: What is the - - Delegate Heen.

HEEN: I withdraw my motion to amend in that connection and make this amendment. Place a period after the word "employment" in the last line of this section, and delete the words "under this Constitution."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, you were the movant of the motion to delete the words "of trust or profit." This last motion you make to amend, do you wish to incorporate in the original motion, so we'll get this together?

HEEN: Yes, Mr. Chairman, make it a package deal.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the amendment?

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the amendment please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried. Is there any other amendment to be made to Section 1? If not - -

A. TRASK: I move for the adoption of Section 1 as amended.

DOWSON: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 1 be adopted as amended. Is there any discussion? All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried. Section is adopted.

WOOLAWAY: I move for the adoption of Section 2.

A. TRASK: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 2 be adopted.

HEEN: I move for the deletion of the words "or her mode of" in the third line of that section.

CHAIRMAN: Could you read your amendment again, please?

HEEN: In the third line of that section, delete the words "or her mode of" because "his" refers to both sexes, and in another provision that has been agreed to.

A. TRASK: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to delete the words "or her mode of" in the third line of Section 2. Is there anybody who wishes to speak on this question?

WIRTZ: I don't know if I understood the amendment. Do you mean to strike the word "mode," too? Then it would read "of his of religious worship."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, could you please clear the question.

HEEN: By deleting those four words.

WIRTZ: Oh, all four.

HEEN: All four, yes. How many did you have, three?

FUKUSHIMA: I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee what the purpose of this section is. We have a Bill of Rights which prohibits any legislature to pass any act curtailing the right of religious freedom. Now, this is merely an ordinance. What is the purpose of this section?

SHIMAMURA: That's a good question. However, this is made mandatory under H.R. 49 and many of the western states which received statehood under a similar enabling act have provisions in the Bill of Rights section ensuring religious freedom, but also at the same time have a provision such as this which their enabling act, as well as ours, makes mandatory. They have included both sections.

J. TRASK: I notice in H.R. 49—there is some talk here about being consistent with H.R. 49. I noticed the words "toleration" and "sentiment" were stricken out, and it's not in our particular proposal.

SHIMAMURA: After this first amendment of Delegate Heen was voted upon, I was going to amend, and I have it ready.

CHAIRMAN: All right, just a second. I didn't get the closing remarks of Delegate Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: I have amendments to propose, that "toleration" be stricken, "freedom" inserted; "sentiment" be stricken, "worship " inserted; "that" be stricken in two places; and that "perfect" be capitalized.

TAVARES: May we have that read as proposed by Delegate Shimamura, so that we can - - reread slowly so we can make the changes in the right places.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, could you please read it slowly.

SHIMAMURA: The first "that" to be deleted; "perfect" to be capitalized; "toleration" to be deleted and "freedom" to be inserted in its stead; "sentiment" on the first line to be deleted, the word "worship" to be inserted; on the second line, the word "that" following "and" to be deleted.

HOLROYDE: I'd like to ask the chairman another question, along the same line as Delegate Fukushima. Admittedly the H.R. 49 says specifically that there should be a clause in similar to this one, but if that is covered elsewhere in our Constitution, is it necessary to repeat it again?

ANTHONY: I don't think that we ought to adopt this section in this schedule at all. We have got a section in the Bill of Rights, as pointed out by Delegate Fukushima, that complies expressly with the - - compares identically with the section of the Federal Constitution. The only purpose of this thing was to require an ordinance. Now, why do we need another section in the ordinances when we already have it covered in the Bill of Rights? I therefore move that this section be deleted.

HOLROYDE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to delete Section 2. Is there any more discussion? Ready for the question?

A. TRASK: I think it should be deleted also, but I think the report should express the statement of the chairman that this section, although deleted, was done for the reason that there is such a provision in the Bill of Rights, so that the congressmen will - - or Congress, which is going to approve this thing, under the present state of H.R. 49, will not feel a little too edgy about it.

SHIMAMURA: I know that there is a general clause in the Bill of Rights section on freedom of religion; but I'm wondering if the second clause is in the Bill of Rights section also, namely that "No inhabitant of this state shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his mode of religious worship."

ANTHONY: The Section 8 of the Bill of Rights is all-inclusive. It relates to aliens; it relates to citizens. We have an equal protection of the laws clauses, and I don't think there is any occasion for putting this in the Constitution. Certainly the framers of H.R. 49 didn't expect us to do something more than was incorporated in the Bill of Rights of the United States Federal Constitution.

FONG: As I understand, Section 1, Section 2 and certain of the other sections in this Committee Proposal No. 24, more or less reiterate what is contained in H.R. 49. Now, we have previously in the - - as far as the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, incorporated by reference, did we not? Now, is it possible here to incorporate it by reference rather than to repeat the same things that are in H.R. 49 and repeated in our Constitution? I was wondering whether that was discussed in the committee.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, did the committee give any thought to the question raised by Delegate Fong?

SHIMAMURA: If I understand the last speaker's question, he asked whether or not it will be wise to incorporate by reference.

FONG: Yes, due to the fact that we have already done it as far as the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act is concerned, whether we couldn't in this instance incorporate by reference to the various provisions.

SHIMAMURA: You mean refer back to H.R. 49?

FONG: Yes.

SHIMAMURA: Well, that may be done, but I personally, in my humble opinion, do not think it's good draftsmanship to refer to a document which may not come into existence. It's all right if H.R. 49 has been passed, and that's good draftsmanship to incorporate in an existing document or an existing law, but where it hasn't passed yet, I personally believe it's not very good policy or draftsmanship.

TAVARES: I think we can safely delete this section, provided we put in our report explaining the deletion that we consider it fully covered in every respect by the Bill of Rights. I wouldn't tie it down to any specific provision because there are several provisions in the Bill of Rights that touch on this, and we should state that the sum total of the protection granted by the Bill of Rights covers everything that this section would cover, and then I think we can explain to Congress and have the reasons why we did it so clear that I don't think they will object to it.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? Motion is to delete Section 2. All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed, "no." It's carried. Section 2 is deleted.

H. RICE: Same motion, that Section 3 be deleted.

ANTHONY: I second that motion; that's expressly covered in our own Bill of Rights.

CHAIRMAN: Does the chairman - -

SHIMAMURA: No objection.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 3 be deleted. Is there any discussion?

FUKUSHIMA: To make it conform to order, I move at this time the adoption of Section 3.

BRYAN: I second the motion.

KELLERMAN: To supplement Mr. Anthony's statement for the purpose of the records, Section 3 is covered in the Bill of Rights and in the article on education.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to clear up a little question. The Chair is under the impression that a motion was made to adopt the entire Committee Proposal No. 24. If that is the case, there is no necessity for adopting Section 3 first and then moving for a deletion. Such being the case, the question on the floor before this committee right now is the motion to delete Section 3.

TAVARES: Again I think it should be done with the understanding that the committee report will state the reasons given by Delegate Kellerman for striking this.

SHIMAMURA: What I'm saying may not be apposite to this particular section, but in the Wyoming Constitution, from which state comes Senator Mahoney, the chairman of the Committee of the Senate on Interior and Insular Affairs, Section 18 of that Constitution, under the Bill of Rights section, provides for religious liberty. "The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession" and so forth. Then under the schedule, under ordinances, Section 2, "Perfect toleration of religious sentiments shall be secured and no inhabitant of this State shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship." That same statement would apply to the section on education.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the motion? Ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to delete Section 3 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried. Section 3 is deleted.

SHIMAMURA: May I go to Section 4 now?

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 4.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

AKAU: In Section 4, when we mention the words, "debts and liabilities," shouldn't we also mention "obligations"? Or would obligations include all those? It seems to me that obligations is something separate and apart from debts and liabilities. I don't know. I just raise the question.

CHAIRMAN: Will Delegate Shimamura please attempt an answer?

SHIMAMURA: In my opinion, obligations would be included in debts and liabilities. This is the exact language of H.R. 49. Before the question is put, may I move to amend by striking out the word "that" and capitalize "the" in the first line.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the amendment?

TAVARES: I second it.

HEEN: You might put that question as to the amendment just offered by Delegate Shimamura, to delete the word "that."

ANTHONY: Style Committee can do that. We don't have to waste our time on those things.

HEEN: Well, would it make less work for the Style Committee if you do it right here.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, is it your request that we put the question first and then proceed later? All those in favor of the motion to amend by crossing out the word "that" and capitalizing "T" of the word "the," please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion is carried. Section 4 is amended.

HEEN: I'd like to ask the chairman of this standing committee as to whether or not the matter of the debts and liabilities of the political subdivisions have been considered.

BRYAN: I'd like to speak to that point.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan is going to speak to the point.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee. We haven't passed all the sections of Proposal No. 23, but I think much of the subject covered by this Section 4, Proposal No. 24, is covered by Section 4 and Section 5 of Proposal No. 23. It would also cover the point on political subdivisions raised by Delegate Heen.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, what is your answer?

SHIMAMURA: These are the debts and liabilities of the Territory, and the latter section was - - the last clause was inserted by the committee of the Senate. It was not in the original H.R. 49, but we've included it here to comply with H.R. 49, and I don't think any harm is done by including it here. One of the sections referred to by Delegate Bryan does not cover this particular situation.

HEEN: I think the first clause of Section 4 is in order; and the comma after the word "Hawaii" in the second line, that should be deleted and a period substituted for the comma. Then delete the rest of the words in that sentence following that period. In another article of this same standing committee, all existing claims, demands are supposed to - - and rights, titles and so on, causes of action, are supposed to "continue unaffected notwithstanding the taking effect of this Constitution... and may be maintained, enforced or prosecuted...before the appropriate or corresponding tribunals or agencies of or under the State or of the United States, in the name of the State, political subdivision, person or other party entitled to do so, in all respects..."

CHAIRMAN: That is merely a suggestion, Delegate Heen? Is that a motion? Could you please use the mike, Delegate Heen.

HEEN: I now move, that the comma appearing after the word "Hawaii" in the second line be deleted, and a period be substituted for that comma, and delete all the words following that period.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to the motion?

HAYES: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend as recommended by Delegate Heen.

TAVARES: Everything that Delegate Heen says is correct, but we don't even need the first part of that if he's going to be consistent. However, this happens to be a provision that was stuck in by the Senate. It's surplusage, it is covered by another section, but they particularly stuck in by special amendment in the Senate this provision about collecting debts. I think it's silly to assume that we wouldn't collect our debts anyhow, owed to us, but since they have put it in particularly—as I understand it at the behest, I believe, of the Interior Department—why not leave it there and have the report show that it is surplusage but we put it in anyhow because of this recent insertion by way of amendment in the H.R. 49. It does no harm. The last clause, as well as the first. The first clause will reassure the bondholders. We are reinforcing another section in another article which does cover it by general terms by this special provision, and I see no harm in it, particularly when it involves our bonds.

CHAIRMAN: Any discussion on the amendment of Delegate Heen? The amendment will insert a period after the word "Hawaii" in the second line and cross out all the words that follow in the section. All those in favor of the motion to amend please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The noes have it; the motion fails.

SHIMAMURA: May I now go to Section 5, and I move for the deletion of Section 5.

BRYAN: I second the motion.

J. TRASK: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Just a second.

J. TRASK: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Point of order is well taken.

J. TRASK: I move that Section 4 be adopted as amended.

WOOLAWAY: I'll second the motion.

J. TRASK: The first word - -

CHAIRMAN: Section 4 was amended.

J. TRASK: - - "that" was deleted. Wasn't the first word, "that," deleted, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: That's right. All those in favor of Section 4 as amended please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried. Section 4 as amended is adopted.
Section 5 is in order.

SHIMAMURA: May I now move to delete Section 5.

CROSSLEY: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to delete Section 5. Any discussion?

HOLROYDE: In doing so I suggest they refer to the Committee on Taxation, Section 9, and give that as their reason for deleting.

TAVARES: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion?

CROSSLEY: I don't know that that is the correct section on finance and taxation as it has come through Style. Is that - -

HOLROYDE: It may be changed.

CROSSLEY: Yes.

HOLROYDE: That's correct.

CROSSLEY: So I think it would be better not to refer to a section, simply to taxation and finance.

ROBERTS: That's correct, Mr. Chairman. That's Section 2 now in the article.

CHAIRMAN: All those in - - Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to delete Section 5 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion is carried. Section 5 is deleted.

SHIMAMURA: May I now go to Section 6, and move to delete that section inasmuch as it's covered by Committee Proposal No. 27 .

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded Section 6 be deleted. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to delete Section 6 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carried. Section 6 is deleted.

SHIMAMURA: May I now move to delete Section 7?

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

SHIMAMURA: The reason for that is that the entire provision has been deleted from H.R. 49.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion? All those in favor of the motion to delete Section 7 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried. Section 7 is deleted.

BRYAN: I move to delete Section 8 on principle.

CHAIRMAN: What's that motion?

BRYAN: I think my motion was clear.

ANTHONY: That section serves no useful purpose. The document speaks for itself. If something is irrevocable - -

SHIMAMURA: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: I'm not arguing about it.

SHIMAMURA: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 8 be deleted.

SHIMAMURA: I agree to that deletion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on that motion?

WIRTZ: I don't know, I've examined several constitutions and this is a compact with the United States. I think we ought to study it a little bit more before we decide to delete it. It appears in all the western states that I have examined, the constitutions of the recent states.

ASHFORD: The reason it appears in the western states is that the lands were given to the states by the United States. These are our lands.

BRYAN: I'd like to say further that this refers to things that we have deleted, and if we want it put in here that our Bill of Rights is irrevocable without permission of the United States that's one thing, but we've deleted the things it refers to.

ANTHONY: I think Delegate Wirtz has specific reference to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. Now, as to that section of the Constitution, there is a compact, and it's irrevocable without the consent of the United States, so that renders this particular section unnecessary here.

ASHFORD: I have a difference of legal opinion with my brother in law. I think it's absolutely invalid.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is to - - the question is to delete Section 8. Ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to delete Section 8 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried. Section 8 is deleted.

Section 9 is before the body.

SHIMAMURA: Since no one wishes to rise for the adoption of Section 9 that we renumbered 5, I move for its adoption.

TAVARES: I'll second the motion.

MIZUHA: I believe the committee report and proposal is before all of the delegates. I did not concur with Section 9 because of the fact that it gives the governor, the land commissioner, and the president of the board of agriculture and forestry too much power. At the time it was discussed in committee the suggestion was made that perhaps a portion of the 180,000 acres could be selected by any two of those Territorial officials mentioned in Section 9. To give them the power to select 180,000 acres with a single stroke of the pen within the interim period is granting too much authority. I believe, although it may not come to pass, it may, and that probability is such that we cannot take that chance. I believe when the selection of the 180,000 acres is made, it must be by a representative commission, agreed by the State legislature as to who those members are, and a selection made on that basis before we can insure to the people of the Territory the best choice of 180,000 acres. It is my suggestion that perhaps about 50,000 of the 180,000 acres could be selected instead of all of the 180,000.

TAVARES: That word about deletion sounds very good, but it also is dangerous. Here's the situation that can happen. If you have a governor of Hawaii—who is going to be appointed, remember, until we become a state, until we're actually admitted—and he doesn't like special sessions as some governors don't like, and he refuses to call a special session of the legislature before we elect our people and go into statehood, you are going to have a situation where, until the legislature acts, nobody is authorized to select any land. And remember, under the Organic Act as we are continuing it, there is still some possibility that the President or the governor may set aside some lands to the use of the United States. If they are threatening to do that, and we don't select those lands right away, we may lose them. Now, if I am wrong in my understanding of that, I'd like to be corrected, but that's my understanding. There is a slight possibility that the President might at the last minute, even after we become a state, set aside some lands to the use of the United States. If we could select those lands in time, we would take away his power to set them aside for the use of the United States, and we'll have nobody to do it. That's all I want to say.

A. TRASK: What is before the committee, please?

CHAIRMAN: The motion to adopt Section 9.

A. TRASK: In other words, the motion of Mr. Delegate Mizuha has not been seconded?

CHAIRMAN: Did you make a motion, Delegate Mizuha?

MIZUHA: I just made a suggestion as to the reasons why I did not concur with Section 9 in its entirety. May I reply to the delegate from the fourth district? It is my understanding from reading Committee Print C of H.R. 49 that there are several mandatory provisions in H.R. 49 that call for the election of state officers, and the convening of the first general session of the state legislature within a very short period of time after Congress accepts the State Constitution of Hawaii. If it is just a short interim, at most I believe it's about six months, I see no necessity and urgency for us to grant that authority to Territorial officers, to make that selection of 180,000 acres all within a period of six months. I do not believe that the Congress of the United States or the duly constituted authority of the federal government will say to the Territory of Hawaii, you must make this choice today or tomorrow. It will give us ample and sufficient time to make that choice, but I cannot conceive of them saying that you must choose 180,000 acres tomorrow. They might ask us, do you want 10,000 acres of these lands, or 15,000 or 25,000, but they won't just say to us 180,000 at one stroke of the pen. That is why I believe that the choice of the 180,000 acres must be made by the representatives selected by our State legislature and not by two - - any two men as this Section 9 says. Any two of them can make the selection, which is an odd way of placing this power.

BRYAN: I'd like to call the attention of Delegate Mizuha to the words "unless the legislature shall otherwise provide." If it is the feeling of the delegates present here that that provision or the authority to set those lands or to designate those lands must be granted prior to the meeting of the first legislature, then I think that this provision or one similar to it is necessary. If it is the feeling of the delegates that that provision need not be made until the first legislature meets, we could easily delete this and put the word "legislature" in there and amend it in that form.

ANTHONY: It doesn't depend upon the feeling of the delegates. The provision of the act of Congress gives us five years within which to make this selection, after admission. So why do we rush in and give this power to the governor and the board of agriculture. We've got five years. What's the haste? The very purpose of the five year period was to give ample consideration of what lands we wanted to select.

TAVARES: That statement illustrates the danger of speaking without adequate information. For the information of the delegates, and the one who last spoke, on page 13 of the amended H.R. 49, I want to read the second sentence of sub-paragraph B about public lands. This is during the five year period. "Such land and public property shall continue to be administered in accordance with the laws applicable thereto immediately prior to the admission of said State, until otherwise provided by Congress." And one of the sections of the Organic Act says that the President by executive order may set aside any of this public land for the use of the United States. Now, when your legislature meets, they have a little time to get organized—if they are split 50-50, they may take three weeks—and we are about to enter into a war maybe, and somebody will want 5,000 acres of our land on Oahu for a training ground, and the President will be asked to do it, and unless we select it quickly, there will be 5,000 acres taken as it was during the war. Now, that's not a flight of my imagination. That's actually what happened recently, and we're having a heck of a time getting it back.

ANTHONY: Brother Tavares, read far enough. Page 15, Committee Print C: "The State of Hawaii, upon its admission to the Union, shall be entitled to select, and the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to issue patents to said State, for 180,000 acres of public lands. . .The selection of such lands. . .shall be made and completed within five years from the admission of said State into the Union." Now, the whole purpose, the entire purpose of the debate that centered around the five year provision was that in all likelihood Congress wouldn't take any of this land; it wanted to give us ample time within which to select our 180,000 acres. So we are getting excited over nothing and trying to rush into something which there is no occasion for any rush.

HEEN: May I ask the speaker before the last a question?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, will you - -

HEEN: Does not the Organic Act also provide that the governor may set aside public lands for the use of the Territory of Hawaii?

TAVARES: That is correct, but remember that until the date when the United States grants us statehood and we actually become a state, the governor is going to be appointed by the President of the United States. It takes a little time, even for a governor elected by us to get to know the ropes and to get to act, and I can't see the governor, when there is a war on, and the military asks the President to set aside some land, even if he's elected by the state, absolutely with certainty saying, "Oh, I'm going to select that for some fictitious use of the Territory of Hawaii just to avoid the President setting it aside." I can't see that. Unless he's got a bona fide use for the Territory to make of that particular land at that time, he's going to look awfully unpatriotic to set it aside for the use of the Board of Water Supply, maybe, where it has no water, or for the use of some other department that has no use for it, just to keep the President from setting it aside for the use of the military. It's pure, what one of our attorney's used to call, "superfuge."

H. RICE: I agree; I think that this section should be deleted. There's nothing like the school of hard knocks, and I remember when they selected the Hawaiian Homes Commission lands. A lot of those that were selected, nobody but a few residents on those particular islands knew those lands. They went over and just said, "Well, here's Kahikinui, 10,000 acres, we'll take that." Why, they put Hawaiians on that land there to starve. That's the way they went around, you know that. Why select these lands quickly?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Rice, is that a motion?

H. RICE: I so move. Delete that section.

DELEGATE: Second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to delete Section 9.

BRYAN: I'd like to speak against deletion. I think the same purpose could be accomplished by amending the paragraph to empower the legislature, rather than to delete the paragraph entirely. I think that would be my second choice, rather than deletion.

TAVARES: I'm going to say one thing more and then quit, but I am greatly concerned about this. This section does permit the legislature, if it acts in time, to take away the power of selection from the governor or anybody else. It only provides for the possibility that if the legislature hasn't acted in time, and we have to act hastily, that the governor and these other designated officials may select.

Now, Delegate Mizuha had a provision. If you don't want the governor to select it all, cut it down to 100,000 acres or 50,000 acres or something like that, so that he'll have enough leeway to save that much in case the legislature hasn't quite acted in time. We had a provision like that worked out in the committee—I don't know if I have it here—but I think it could be taken care of by a proviso which can be changed by the Style Committee, because some people don't like provisos reading something like this. At the end of the section insert a semicolon instead of the period and say, "Provided that no such selection shall cover more than say 25,000 acres." That would give enough leeway to take care of any emergency.

ANTHONY: That has no relevance to the issue before the house. The issue in question before the house is on the deletion of the section.

CHAIRMAN: The point is well taken.

TAVARES: I beg to differ on that point of order. I am giving reasons why this shouldn't be deleted. It's very relevant.

CHAIRMAN: Yes, it may be, your statements are.

C. RICE: I'd like to say that any two members of this Convention can select 180,000 acres. There are so few good acres, it wouldn't be any trouble. You can't find 180,000 acres that are worth taking. I want to see this section left in because there won't be any dispute about it.

ASHFORD: Is it not possible that we might not be able to select piecemeal? That is, one year say, well, we'll take this 25,000 acres and leave the rest to be selected later. And we'd be in a jam if we did that.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion?

A. TRASK: I am against deletion of this section. I believe that the people most competent to know and determine where the good lands are, are these officers we have at the head of our government today. It seems they're most - - more qualified. I wonder whether or not those who are for deletion are saying, as they are certainly saying in fact, that there are other people more qualified and more to be trusted. It seems to me that the record and the evidence shows in this argument that we should trust those who are empowered and those most qualified with the situation.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the question to delete? You've heard reasons why it shouldn't be and you've heard reasons why it should be. Any more discussion on this is welcome. All those in favor of the motion to delete Section 9 please say "aye." Opposed. Noes have it.

SHIMAMURA: I'm somewhat amazed that in all this discussion no one has moved to delete a certain portion of this section. I refer to Section - - rather line 6 on page 4 of this section - - of this article rather, starting with the words "and interests in property, not disclaimed [or encumbered by the provisions of.]" I move the entire deletion on that line and the next line - - on the next line, the words down to "this Constitution." And on the fifth line the insertion of the word "in Hawaii " period, after "public property."

DELEGATE: May that be restated?

SHIMAMURA: First, on the fifth line, the insertion of the words "in Hawaii" period; deletion of the entire sixth line and on the seventh line up to the words "this Constitution."

TAVARES: I don't seem to find that, those amendments.

SHIMAMURA: Page 4.

TAVARES: Page 4. What line?

SHIMAMURA: Line 5. After the words "public property," insert the words "in Hawaii" period. Delete all of line 6 and the seventh line the words down to "Constitution."

TAVARES: What is the purpose of deleting the words "claims in the lands and other public property"?

SHIMAMURA: Well, H.R. 49 as amended, Section 2, paragraph numbered 7, provides for certain disclaimers to be made by the State of Hawaii and I don't think it's advisable for us in the light of that provision to speak of any disclaimer.

TAVARES: I agree, but the disclaimer comes after the words "lands and other public property and interests in property." I don't see any harm in leaving that in and just take out the words about disclaimer. I'm in hearty sympathy with that.

SHIMAMURA: All right, "interest in property" might be left in, and the words subsequent to that, "not disclaimed or encumbered by the provision of this Constitution" to be deleted; that's all right.

TAVARES: I'll second that amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Where did the words "in Hawaii" go?

SHIMAMURA: Delete that.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a period after the words "interest in property"?

TAVARES: I don't get that, "in Hawaii."

CHAIRMAN: That was his original motion to amend.

SHIMAMURA: I inserted that, but I've deleted it at this time.

CHAIRMAN: The amendment is in this form. In line 6, change the comma after the word "property" to a period and delete the rest of the sentence. Those words will be "not disclaimed or encumbered by the provisions of this Constitution."

SHIMAMURA: I move we recess till 1:30.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will declare a recess till 1:30.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, do you care to defend your amendment?

SHIMAMURA: I take it that's Section 9, is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: That's right, Section 9.

SHIMAMURA: Proposal 24?

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

SHIMAMURA: The sixth line in the - - portions of the sixth and the seventh lines were deleted, were they not?

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

SHIMAMURA: Isn't that what was proposed to be deleted?

CHAIRMAN: Yes. We haven't voted on that yet. That was only a motion by you.

SHIMAMURA: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion on the amendment? Question. All those in favor of the motion to amend please signify by saying "aye." Opposed, "no." Ayes have it. Motion is carried, motion to amend.

Is there any further amendment - - discussion on Section 9? If not - -

HEEN: I move that the words "or any two of them" appearing in the second and third lines on page 4 be deleted.

AKAU: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the section be amended in the second line on page 4 by deleting the words "or any two of them."

SHIMAMURA: I take it that that amendment goes to the fourth line from the bottom also? Same thing there.

HEEN: Also included in that amendment, I move that the same words "or any two of them" appearing in the eleventh line on page 4 be deleted.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that those words, "or any two of them" appearing in the second and the eleventh line be deleted. Is there any discussion on the proposed amendment?

MIZUHA: May I address myself on the entire Section 9 and some of the procedures involved with reference to the admission of Hawaii into the Union. Now, I believe there is some misconception at the present time here as to the procedure involved and I think it is essential that the delegates know about it, I know that many do not. Under the latest draft of Committee Print C—if anyone wants to rule me out of order at this time I'd be glad to accept that ruling, but I wish to make this point because it's an important point with reference to this general Section 9.

HEEN: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair didn't get just exactly what Delegate Mizuha was speaking about.

HEEN: I understand it's generally about this whole Section 9.

CHAIRMAN: He wants to what? Delete?

HEEN: Talk generally about Section 9 and I think with a view of having it deleted altogether; so at the moment I think he's out of order.

CHAIRMAN: That's right. The Chair rules you're out of order. Is there any discussion? All right, the Chair would entertain the motion to adopt the Section 9 as amended. All those in favor of the motion - -

ARASHIRO: Does this mean then this official can immediately upon the assenting of statehood go ahead and submit their proposition immediately, even before the legislature meets?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, could you answer the question?

SHIMAMURA: What was that, Mr. Chairman? I didn't quite hear him.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Arashiro, could you direct the question to - -

ARASHIRO: Immediately upon accepting by Congress and the President of the United States to make Hawaii as a state, can this official as designated over here immediately go into the dealing of the land, to set aside the land for the Territory - - for the State of Hawaii, even before the legislature meets?

HEEN: May I answer that question. They cannot do so until after Hawaii is admitted into the Union. Then they can act in making a selection of the 180,000 acres.

ARASHIRO: Thank you.

HEEN: I might state this, that as I understand H.R. 49, Committee Print C, after the Constitution, ratified by the people of Hawaii, is approved by Congress, then the governor of the Territory of Hawaii, shall by...[part of speech not recorded.]...things will happen before Hawaii becomes a State. The result of that election, notice of the results is given to the President, then the President by proclamation admits Hawaii into the Union. It's on the date of that proclamation when Hawaii becomes a State.

CHAIRMAN: Are you satisfied, Delegate Arashiro?

ARASHIRO: Then immediately upon the admission to the Union, this representative of the board or commissioner of public lands and commissioner of agriculture can immediately act upon this?

HEEN: In H.R. 49, Committee Print C, on page 22, after the election is held, the "governor of said Territory shall certify the result of said election, as canvassed and certified as herein provided, to the President of the United States, who thereupon shall immediately issue his proclamation announcing the result of said election as ascertained, and, upon the issuance of said proclamation by the president of the United States, the proposed State of Hawaii shall be deemed admitted by Congress into the Union." So the election takes place before Hawaii becomes a state.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question on the motion? Motion is to amend Section 9 by deleting in the second line on page 4 the words "or any two of them" and also on line 11 same words. All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed say "no." Carried. Section 9 is amended.

J. TRASK: No further amendment. I move that Section 9 be adopted as amended.

BRYAN: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 9 be adopted as amended.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. I'd like to know if the clause in the last -- in the fourteenth and fifteenth line has been deleted, the clause reading "as and at the times directed by the Congress of the United States."

CHAIRMAN: No, those words haven't been deleted.

HEEN: I move that those words be deleted. As I understand H.R. 49, we don't have to wait for any further action on the part of Congress.

AKAU: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: Could you repeat your motion again, please?

HEEN: My motion is to delete the words, "as and at the time directed by the Congress of the United States," appearing in the fourteenth and fifteenth lines, the last two lines of this section on page 4, and put a period after the word "Hawaii" in the fourteenth line, put a period there instead of a comma.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to --

J. TRASK: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: You care to withdraw your motion?

J. TRASK: I'll withdraw my motion to adopt Section 9 as amended.

BRYAN: I understand the second to that motion has been withdrawn. I'll second the motion made by Delegate Heen if necessary.

CHAIRMAN: It has been seconded by Delegate Akau. The motion before the floor is to amend Section 9 by deleting at the end of the section on page 4 the words, "as and at the times directed by the Congress of the United States," and inserting a period after the word "Hawaii."

ROBERTS: I have a question on this. As I understand it, the selection of the lands doesn't mean anything until such time as the Congress decides to give them to us. The section as it provides now with this deletion, it would merely go to the selection of the land.

TAVARES: May I answer that question. H.R. 49 in all of its forms has -- latest forms has provided that we have five years after the admission of the State within which to select 180,000 acres and present our claim for the rest of the land to Congress. We have an absolute right to select 180,000 acres at any time after we have become a state; and as to the rest of the land, we have a qualified right to appeal to Congress to give all the rest of it to us.

I think there is no objection to that amendment, but I believe that there is one other flaw which could be cured. If a special session of the legislature is called before we become a state, that would mean the legislature of the territory, it could pass a law which would direct otherwise as to the method of selection and the people who could select. To make that clear, I think we can do that by a further amendment in the eleventh to the twelfth lines from the top of page 4 where it reads, "The legislature shall otherwise provide," or really, "until and unless the legislature shall otherwise provide." I move to amend that by deleting the words "the legislature shall" and --

HEEN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Just a second; let's get this straight.

TAVARES: -- and have the last, the next two following words "otherwise provide" read "otherwise provided," and insert "by law" thereafter; so it will read, "until and unless otherwise provided by law." Then it will be clear; either the territorial legislature or the state legislature can change it.

HEEN: Point of order. There is an amendment pending? I believe --

TAVARES: Well, I asked --

CHAIRMAN: We will first vote on the amendment offered by Delegate Heen, and then go back to yours, Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: I thought perhaps the delegate would accept that as part of his amendment. I am agreeing with the rest of his amendment.

HEEN: I would accept it, but I don't quite understand it at the moment.

CHAIRMAN: If that is the case, let us first dispose of the amendment proposed by Delegate Heen.

MIZUHA: I would like to speak in opposition to the amendment. At the previous time when I sought recognition from the chairman, I was speaking on the general process of admission to the Union which was covered -- which Section 9 relates to, and the delegate from the fourth district ruled me out of order. But subsequently he rose and spoke on that same point that I was speaking, and I hope at this time that I shall have the opportunity to present my views on the subject.

PORTEUS: I'd like to offer, as the Secretary, my services to the delegate from Kauai in negotiating a treaty with those of us in the rest of this row to give him equal rights with the rest of the attorneys.

MIZUHA: Delegate Tavares just raised a point about the governor of the Territory or the governor of the State making this selection and so forth; but may I point out to the delegates present that my understanding of Committee Print C, H.R. 49, does not create the State of Hawaii until such time as Congress first approves our Constitution as ratified by the people of Hawaii. After the Congress approves our Constitution, under H.R. 49, we must hold a state election and when we elect our senators, our representatives, our governor and the officers of the State, then that governor, the governor of the Territory of Hawaii, must certify to the President as to the results of that election. Upon that certification, then the President of the United States will issue the proclamation admitting Hawaii into the Union as a state. Only until such time as we are admitted into the Union as a state can this selection of those lands be made.

Now it is apparent at this time, and there is nothing in the election -- in the ordinance submitted by the Committee on Continuity calling for a mandatory, special session the day after Hawaii is admitted into the Union by presidential proclamation, and it is proper that it should be done at that time. When the President issues that proclamation admitting Hawaii into the Union, under constitutional authority, we must hold our first session of the State Legislature of Hawaii. Then, the point that Delegate Tavares raised that if no provision is made, if we follow the provisions in our legislative article, or whatever article in which is contained the provisions for the general sessions of the legislature, we might wait a year or a year and a half before that legislature meets. That is why the point I raised that if we have that special session of the legislature convening in Iolani Palace, or whatever place it must convene, the day after we are admitted into the Union, legislation can be passed to secure a special commission to select these lands, the 180,000 acres. Certainly the gap that Delegate Tavares has in mind, which may be only one day or three days, to get a law passed by the State legislature is too short a time for us to be fooling around in a Constitution with a section like article -- Section 9. We have heard this body remark about the simplicity of a constitution, and we want a good document here; but making a provision like this here is asinine because of the provisions in H.R. 49. We can take care of it with a special ordinance that mandates the first legislative session of the State legislature meeting the day after the President issues the proclamation admitting Hawaii into the Union.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, could you enlighten me as to the status of Committee Print C that has just -- that is dated June 26. There has just been distributed and placed on the desk of the delegates, H.R. 49 which bears the date of June 29. I wish that somebody would tell us if there's any difference between that and Committee Print C.

CHAIRMAN: Could Delegate King, President King?

KING: I received yesterday the copies of H.R. 49 as filed in the Senate and on the Senate calendar, Calendar No. 1931. I haven't checked this H.R. 49 against Committee Print C. There might be some minor changes, but my understanding was that Committee Print C was the form in which the committee approved it, and when they filed it, it dropped the committee print and it comes out in the final form. This is the form in which it is pending on the Senate calendar.

ANTHONY: One further question of the President then. In our discussions, I then assume we should be referring to the printed copy now distributed and on the desks of the delegates. Is that correct?

KING: We should now refer to H.R. 49, Senate Calendar No. 1931.

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

TAVARES: I think that the argument of the speaker before -- the speaker from Kauai, is aimed at the adoption or non-adoption of the entire section. At the moment we are only adopting -- considering an amendment made by Delegate Heen, which I think is unobjectionable, namely deleting the words, "as and at the times directed by the Congress of the United States." That would be implied anyhow if Congress does direct any special time. Otherwise why it would take care of itself without those words. In any event I don't think there is any objection to deleting them. They are technical amendments, and after we take care of that, then I think -- and other amendments, then I think the basic provision of whether we shall adopt or not adopt this section would still be in order.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? On the amendment offered by Delegate Heen, all those in favor of the motion to amend please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

TAVARES: I now renew my motion. In the fifth line from the bottom of that section and the fourth line from the bottom, substitute for the words "the legislature shall otherwise provide," the words "otherwise provided by law."

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to the motion?

APOLIONA: I second that motion.

TAVARES: It's been called to my attention that a similar amendment should be made on the first page, on page 3, in the third line from the bottom, and I also move to amend the words, "the legislature shall otherwise provide" to read "otherwise provided by law." Does the second accept that?

APOLIONA: I do.

TAVARES: Now, I'd like to explain. I think that, leaving aside the question of the merits of the whole section --

HEEN: Point of information. What was that amendment again on page 3?

TAVARES: On page 3, in the third line from the bottom, delete the words "the legislature shall otherwise provide," and substitute therefor the words "otherwise provided by law." And a similar amendment as I've already made on the fifth and fourth lines from the bottom of page 4.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion on the amendment?

TAVARES: May I explain the reason for that? As this stands now without amendment, it might be contended that the word "legislature" there means the legislature under the new State, and by saying "otherwise provided by law," I am making it read so that if a legislature before we become a state passes a law saying that this group of three officers shall not have power to make this choice and selecting other people to do it, or providing whatever the legislature wants to do, it will then supersede this temporary provision. My concern is that a special session might not be called before we become a state and there might be a few days there where something could be lost; and this amendment actually assists Delegate Mizuha's contention rather than detracts from it, I submit.

MIZUHA: There is one point that bothers me, and I'd like to ask the previous speaker a question. Wouldn't it be possible in this ordinance to have that special session called immediately after the President issues his proclamation?

TAVARES: I don't see how we can do that unless Congress in H.R. 49 puts in an amendment mandating such a special session. At the present time we operate under the Hawaiian Organic Act, under which only the governor in his discretion can call a special session. If we adopt this Constitution, it is still not effective until Congress -- under the act of Congress we become a state. Therefore, until that time our Constitution, as I see it, has no efficacy and during that time a special session can't be mandated on the governor.

MIZUHA: It is my contention, under H.R. 49, that we can have our Constitution approved by the Congress of the United States and we won't be a state of the Union then. But if H.R. 49 provides that after approval of the Constitution of the State of Hawaii, special elections must be held in the territory providing for the election of all the officers provided for in our State Constitution, and for two senators and two representatives to the Congress of the United States, then the governor of the Territory of Hawaii must certify to the President as to the results of this election, and then he will issue the proclamation admitting Hawaii into the Union. The day he issues that proclamation admitting Hawaii into the Union, we will change over to a state status, and the governor who was elected in the interim will assume the office of governor and all the other state officers will assume their offices. My contention then is that is the time that we should have our session of the legislature automatically being called by some ordinance provided for in our Constitution.

ASHFORD: I am not in agreement with Delegate Tavares that that can't be done by this Constitution. I think we can write into our temporary provisions that immediately upon admission as a State, the legislature shall meet in special session.

TAVARES: I agree entirely with that. The delegate misunderstood what I said. I said that before that moment, we cannot mandate the governor of the Territory appointed by the President to call a special session, and I think the delegate will agree with me.

HEEN: That provision by way of an amendment can be made to the article on election ordinance. There you -- I have an amendment as to how long the members of the legislature shall serve after their election, at the initial election. And Delegate Okino has one in reference to the term of the governor and lieutenant governor, after their election at the initial election. Right there, following those two sections, or proposed sections, can be inserted another section providing that the governor of the State shall immediately call the legislature, the State legislature into special session.

ARASHIRO: I cannot think of a word to carry out my thinking, but I want to have something in this line -- in this thought, I mean. Where we put it in a way that, when the legislature has failed to provide, then we can authorize this representative to go ahead and deal with the land. But I do not want to see these people act before the legislature has the opportunity of acting on this matter.

TAVARES: It seems I still haven't made myself fully understood. Let me try again. This Constitution, in my humble opinion, will not take effect as a Constitution until the day when the President certifies that we are a State; he admits us to statehood. Well, now we all admit that in this Constitution we can mandate a special session after that. That's clear. But what I'm thinking about is the interim between now and the time we are actually admitted as a State, as to whether, if there is not a regular session in the meantime, we may be able to persuade a governor appointed by the President to call a special session of the territorial legislature to pass some laws to take care of this situation. If he doesn't call such a special session, I don't think we can mandate him before the date we become a State, unless Congress amends H.R. 49 to put that mandate in, in which case it would supersede our Organic Act and make it mandatory. Now we haven't done that, and I don't think at this late date we can ask the Congress to make that drastic change. So there is just this interim between now and the time when we are admitted as a State when, if there is no regular session of the territorial legislature, the governor may refuse to call a special session, and we can't make him.

Now after we become a State, if we put it in our Constitution, it is true the governor then will have to call a special session if we have said he must, because at that date the Constitution will become effective and binding. Now my amendment are these few words, which again is only a technical amendment and doesn't relate to the merits of the whole section, will make sure that if a regular or a special session of the territorial legislature happens to be held before we become a State, that that legislature can supersede this provision by making another provision. So my amendment actually aids Delegate Mizuha and Delegate Arashiro in taking care of that interim situation. It gives the territorial legislature power to make laws changing this, as well as the State legislature after we become a State, because on the date we become a State, if our territorial legislature has passed such a law, it will be carried over under ordinances as an existing law and be effective.

ROBERTS: I am more and more convinced as we go into this article that it ought to be deleted. We don't get the 100,000 acres -- 180,000 acres until we become a State. When we become a State, we have our legislature. After we -- they are properly elected, it seems to me that they have five years in which to do their job. We don't have to make any provisions or ordinances. I think the section as amended ought to be deleted.

CHAIRMAN: Would you care to make a motion?

ROBERTS: I will so move.

ANTHONY: I second that motion.

MIZUHA: I am in sympathy with Delegate --

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, do I have the floor?

CHAIRMAN: Just a second till I get this motion cleared.

ANTHONY: There's been a motion made, and I'd like to second it.

CHAIRMAN: The motion is to reconsider --

ANTHONY: No, motion is to delete.

CHAIRMAN: There was a motion previously to delete Section 9.

ROBERTS: Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: That was prior to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: It was repeated. That's right, that's right.

ROBERTS: This is a motion to delete as amended.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion on the floor at this time to delete Section 9 as amended --

MIZUHA: I rise to a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: -- and that motion has been seconded. Delegate Mizuha.

ANTHONY: I thought I --

MIZUHA: Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, didn't I have the floor? I moved to second it and I asked for the floor.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: I think we are wasting an awful lot of time about this section, and it all arises over whether or not we've got to select the 180,000 acres within the next 15 minutes. Congress has given us five years within which to do that thing, so why should we fool around with the minutia of how it should be done here. We've got five years to do it. Everybody knows upon admission of this State to the Union, the legislature is going to be promptly called into session, and appropriate legislation will be enacted. So I therefore feel that Delegate Roberts' motion should carry.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the motion to delete?

TAVARES: I'm not going to say any more. I've warned this Convention, and if they want to vote that way, O.K. I'm going to vote against it.

MIZUHA: I, as the delegate who did not concur with Section 9 in committee, I wish to point -- make my point clear that there must be something in the section on continuity of laws to call for a special session the day or the day after the President admits Hawaii into the Union as a state.

SHIMAMURA: Will the gentleman yield for a moment? We have such an amendment ready.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

The motion is to delete Section 9 as amended. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries. Section 9 as amended is to be deleted.

TAVARES: Point of order. There was a motion to reconsider and not a motion to delete and it requires 32 votes.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair wishes to inform Delegate Tavares that there was no motion to reconsider. The motion was to delete Section 9 as amended.

TAVARES: We voted on that once, and it was out of order, and I make the point of order that it was wrong to put such a motion without reconsideration.

ANTHONY: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, state your point of order.

ANTHONY: We already straightened that out.

CHAIRMAN: I can't hear you.

ANTHONY: We already straightened the point of order out before the vote was taken, namely that the present motion to delete was on a different section, the section as amended.

TAVARES: I appeal from the ruling of the Chair to the Convention. I think it's wrong - -

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has ruled that the motion to delete Section 9 as amended was in order.

TAVARES: I appeal from the ruling of the Chair to the Convention.

CHAIRMAN: All right. Those of the - - How shall I state this?

SAKAKIHARA: I move for a recess.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of a recess say "aye." Opposed. Motion is defeated.

SAKAKIHARA: Then I demand roll call.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair declares a short recess for five minutes.

(RECESS)

TAVARES: I withdraw my appeal from the ruling of the floor on the point of order.

CHAIRMAN: That being the case, Section 9 as amended is deleted.

J. TRASK: I wonder if it would be in order at this time, to renumber the sections, if we are through with the entire proposal. So I move at this time, if there's no other amendment - -

CHAIRMAN: I see one on my desk here. Delegate Shimamura, do you have an amendment to propose to Committee Proposal No. 24?

SHIMAMURA: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I should like to have a new Section 6.

CHAIRMAN: Could that be numbered 10?

SHIMAMURA: Pardon me?

CHAIRMAN: Could that be numbered 10?

SHIMAMURA: Yes, as originally proposed it's No. 10, but in the light of the deletion of several paragraphs this will be a new 6. The 9 deleted would be - - oh, the 9 having been deleted, this will be 5. A new Section 5, but I have circulated it prior to the deletion as number 6.

CHAIRMAN: Let's call it number 10 because number 5 was another section.

SHIMAMURA: I've had this circulated as - -

CHAIRMAN: Number 6.

SHIMAMURA: - - relating to Committee Proposal No. 24, a new Section 6, but it might be called 10. It's on the desks of all the delegates. This refers to taxes. This reads as follows, if I may read it:

> No taxes shall be imposed by the State upon any lands or other property now owned or hereafter acquired by the United States, except as the same shall become taxable by reason of disposition thereof by the United States or by reason of the consent of the United States to such taxation.

This tries to - - I move for the adoption of this amendment first.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the section just read by Delegate Shimamura, Section 10, be an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 24.

SHIMAMURA: The purpose of this amendment is, as the delegates see, to try and comply with a portion of paragraph 7, Section 2 of H.R. 49.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the proposed amendment?

TAVARES: All this does is to state what the law is anyhow. We can't tax lands of the United States but we can tax them after they dispose of them. It's simply a statement of what the law is and there's no harm in it. We don't go as far as the literal language of the H.R. 49 - - amended 49 would do, and I think it's as far as Congress has a right to ask us to go, and I think they'll recognize that.

RICHARDS: I raise the question, I understand that there has been considerable work done in Congress by certain of the states that have large federal installations, trying to get Congress to permit the taxation of those. Will this preclude the State being able to tax, if this is in the Constitution?

H. RICE: The Delegate Monte Richards is dead right, and it would make a big difference to particularly the City and County of Honolulu. If any provision like this went through, it would mean a difference of $8,000,000 a year, I understand.

TAVARES: If the delegates would only read the amendment, they would see the answer to their question. The amendment says, "No taxes shall be imposed by the State upon any lands or other property now owned or hereafter acquired by the United States, except as the same shall become taxable by reason of disposition thereof by the United States or by reason of the consent of the United States to such taxation." That answers itself.

HEEN: Instead of the words "now owned or hereafter acquired by the United States," I would suggest that you use the word "while." "While," w-h-i-l-e; substitute the word "while" for the word "now" in the second line and delete the words "or hereafter acquired"; so that clause will read: "No taxes shall be imposed by the State upon lands or other property while owned by the United States."

CHAIRMAN: Is that amendment acceptable to Delegate Shimamura?

SHIMAMURA: The committee attempted to comply as far as possible with H.R. 49. I don't have any particular objection to that; the sense of it becomes the same.

TAVARES: There is a grave defect. Lands while owned by the United States can be leased and they are still owned by the United States and then we won't tax them. The other amendment took care of it better; this way exempts totally lands while owned by the United States.

RICHARDS: There is another point involved - -

CHAIRMAN: Is that on the same point? Delegate Richards, is that on the same point?

RICHARDS: It's on the same point - -

CHAIRMAN: Raised by Delegate Heen?

RICHARDS: Yes, the fact is the United States might acquire the property in the middle of the year, and according to our laws here and the way the tax office operates, taxes are still payable up to the end of that calendar year.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, do you still insist on making that your amendment?

HEEN: I think my suggestion or motion is not in order. In order to take care of leases that might be made of these lands, I withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, did you - - are there any more amendments? Any discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Committee Proposal No. 24 by adding a new Section 10, as read by Delegate Shimamura, please signify by saying "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried. We'll add a new Section 10 to Committee Proposal No. 24.

If there is no other amendment to Committee Proposal No. 24 - -

J. TRASK: I move for the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 24 as amended.

DELEGATE: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 24 be adopted as amended.

SHIMAMURA: Prior to the time that the Chair put that question, I'd like to serve notice that I have two other amendments to those sections, and at this time, if the movant will withdraw his motion, I'd like to move for another amendment.

J. TRASK: I withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion to adopt as amended is withdrawn.

SHIMAMURA: At this time I'd like to propose an amendment of a new section to Proposal No. 24, which would in the order of numbering at present would be number 11, but would be a new Section 7.

CHAIRMAN: Section 11 is the title given here.

SHIMAMURA: A copy of the amendment is on the desks of all the delegates. It reads as follows, to identify it:

> All provisions of the act or resolution admitting this State to the Union, or providing for such admission, which reserve to the United States jurisdiction of Hawaii National Park, or the ownership or control of lands within Hawaii National Park, are consented to fully by the State and its people.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 24 be amended by adding Section 11 to it. Is there any discussion?

ASHFORD: I'm inclined to think that that is covered by a provision in the agriculture section, referring to all lands set aside for the use of the United States.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Richards, would you care to answer the question? Could you use your mike, please.

RICHARDS: I believe that's taken care of in both Part II and Part I of the agriculture, conservation and land.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, have you checked on the question raised by Delegate Ashford?

SHIMAMURA: That may be correct, I may be under misapprehension, but I thought Hawaii National Park was not specially covered by Part II. I may be mistaken.

CHAIRMAN: What is your desire, Delegate Shimamura?

SHIMAMURA: Might we do this to facilitate matters. If the Convention is willing - - If the Committee of the Whole is willing, why don't we adopt this and if there is a duplication, then strike it out in Style.

ROBERTS: The article which we adopted on agriculture and conservation provides in Part II that, "The United States shall be vested with or retain title to or interest in or shall hold the property in the Territory of Hawaii set aside for the use of the United States." I think that is covered.

TAVARES: I respectfully differ with the last speaker. This relates to jurisdiction more or less for court purposes and things like that, and I don't think it's covered by that language; jurisdiction for service of process and passage of laws regulating, the municipal legislation of the area, and so forth. I believe that it's a little different. H.R. 49 has a special provision about that for national park lands, and I don't think it's covered by the merely ceding title to the United States. We can cede title and still reserve jurisdiction to serve process.

ROBERTS: The full article, Section 1 says: "...set aside for the use of the United States and remaining so set aside immediately prior to the admission of this State, in all respects as provided in the act or resolution admitting this State to the Union." It's already covered in that section.

TAVARES: It's a question of title there, but we are talking about jurisdiction of courts and so forth. They are two entirely different things and merely transferring title to the United States does not do that. I might point out some history here, and that is, the territory today has a right to serve process in Pearl Harbor although the United States owns that land. There are certain lands owned by the United States where we actually have jurisdiction to serve process even though the United States owns that land, and only to the extent that Congress takes away that jurisdiction should we agree to it. If we don't agree to it, the laws will carry over, and we will still have that jurisdiction which is very important, the jurisdiction to tax and the jurisdiction to serve process.

SHIMAMURA: I think the last speaker is correct. I think we should adopt this section.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of amending Committee Proposal No. 24 by adding the new Section 11 please signify by saying "aye." Opposed, "no." The amendment carries.

SHIMAMURA: At this time, I'd like to ask leave to add another section, No. 12 I think in the present order. I have circulated it as new Section 8. I move for the adoption of that new section.

> All those provisions of the act or resolution admitting this State to the Union, or providing for such admission, which reserve to the United States judicial rights or powers, are consented to fully by the State and its people; and those provisions of said act or resolution which preserve for the State judicial rights and powers are hereby accepted and adopted, and such rights and powers are hereby assumed, to be exercised and discharged pursuant to this Constitution and the laws of the State.

DELEGATE: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 24 be amended by adding a new Section 12. I believe copies of this amendment have been circulated. Delegate Shimamura, would you care to discuss this amendment?

SHIMAMURA: H.R. 49 reserves certain judicial powers and rights to the United States and this section consents to that, to such reservation; and we also state that as to such rights to be exercised by the State, that is, judicial rights and powers to be exercised by the State, we accept them.

ANTHONY: Point of information. What is this designed to accomplish, I'd like to know?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: I didn't hear that.

ANTHONY: You can't take the jurisdiction away from the United States upon admission to the Union. I'd like to know what this is designed to accomplish.

SHIMAMURA: We're trying to comply as far as possible with Section 2, paragraph numbered 7, which contains a disclaimer which we have rejected. We have as far as possible to comply with paragraph 7, insofar as it does not prejudice the rights of the people of Hawaii. This reservation of powers is contained in H.R. 49 and we're just accepting it. I don't think - - perhaps it isn't necessary but we want to show Congress that we're trying to comply as far as possible with the requirements of the seventh paragraph of Section 2. It doesn't do any harm.

ANTHONY: There are a lot of things that don't do any harm, but that doesn't mean we should say it two or three times. We said once that we - - in the conservation and lands article, that we will comply in all respects with the provisions of the act or resolution admitting this State to the Union. Now thus far I've heard nothing that would lead me to the conclusion that this will do anything different than we've already agreed upon.

SHIMAMURA: If the last speaker would read the new Section 8 as proposed, it has nothing to do with lands.

ANTHONY: The other section didn't either. We said that we would comply in all respects to the provisions of the act of Congress admitting us to the Union.

CHAIRMAN: Any more discussion on this amendment? Are you ready for the question?

TAVARES: I think, if I'm not mistaken, this amendment was very carefully prepared by the assistant attorney general. Am I correct? She feels that it is important and complies as far as we properly can, with due regard to the interests of the people of this territory, with the requirements of that Section 7 as proposed to be amended in H.R. 49, Calendar No. 1931, and I see no objection to having it adopted here.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Committee Proposal No. 24 by adding a new Section 12 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carried.

SHIMAMURA: Now may I move for the adoption of the entire Proposal No. 24 as amended?

HOLROYDE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 24 be adopted as amended. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: If it's agreeable with the body, I should like to go into the consideration of Committee Proposal No. 25, where we left off.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any objection?

A. TRASK: Move for recess.

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: Chair declares a recess of five minutes.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Committee come to order. We are now considering Committee Proposal No. 25.

SAKAKIHARA: What is the status of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 25 and the various amendments?

CHAIRMAN: The amendments made by persons other than Delegate Nielsen were being discussed and not yet voted on, and we agreed to hold off the amendment made by Delegate Nielsen until the other amendments are voted on.

SAKAKIHARA: So the amendments proposed by Delegate Tavares and others have not been acted upon?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

SHIMAMURA: Point of information. May I inquire if the words on line 4 at the end, and line 6, "election or," were those words deleted?

CHAIRMAN: Line 4. Are you talking about page 2?

SHIMAMURA: Page 1, section 1, fifth and sixth lines, at the end, "and"; on the next line, "election or."

CHAIRMAN: No, that question hasn't been - - There was no amendment to that question raised by - -

SHIMAMURA: I move at this time to delete the word "and" on line 5 at the end of the line, and the words, "election or" on the following, sixth line. And also to delete the words on the sixth line, "as may be required," and insert in their stead, "as hereinafter provided."

CHAIRMAN: And insert what words?

SHIMAMURA: "As hereinafter provided."

ASHFORD: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend further Section 1 by deleting the words in the fifth line, the word "and"; and in the sixth line, the word "election or," at the beginning of the line; and in the sixth line, delete the words "as may be required" and insert in lieu thereof, "as hereinafter provided."

TAVARES: May we have that read now so that everyone can see how the whole thing reads.

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

> Section 1. In case the people of the Territory of Hawaii ratify this Constitution and the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States whose approval thereto may be required, the governor of the Territory of Hawaii shall, within 30 days after receipt of official notification of such approval, issue his proclamation for primary and general elections, as hereinafter provided, at which officers for all elected offices provided for by this Constitution and laws of this State shall be chosen by the people; but the officers so to be elected shall in any event include two senators and two representatives in Congress, and unless and until otherwise required by this Constitution or laws of this State, said representatives shall be elected at large.

DELEGATE: Question.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor - -

HEEN: In the article on suffrage and election we have a provision there on general election and special election. Now this initial election is to take place at a time other than the general election provided for in the article on suffrage and election, it would not be a general election. It would be something else. It will be a special election or perhaps an initial election.

ASHFORD: The words used by the chairman of the committee, "as hereinafter provided," had that in mind; and the words "general election" it is contemplated will be defined for the purposes of this article in that subsequent section, so that it may be either a general or a special election.

TAVARES: I think, carrying out Delegate Ashford's explanation a little further, just in case it happened that this election could be called to coincide with a general election, it would be in fact a general election. In case it came at another time, it would be possibly a special election. I think that's what Delegate Ashford meant and that's why it calls for a later definition. But I think there would be no objection under those circumstances.

HEEN: Perhaps it's not at all right at this moment, but in the general statute relating to primary and general elections, when a special election is held, then the law relating to primary elections does not apply. Nominations must be made in some other manner, and I'm just wondering whether they have taken care of that situation.

TAVARES: We are providing for a primary election expressly; that takes care of it. The election following it naturally is not a primary. I think by taking the - - expressly mentioning primary election, we've taken care of that situation.

ARASHIRO: I have a question to ask. On page 2, line 3, what is the necessity of the insertion of the word "in any event"?

CHAIRMAN: Whether we should keep those words?

ARASHIRO: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, a question has been raised. On page 2, line 3, at the end, whether it is necessary to keep those words "in any event."

SHIMAMURA: That follows the language of H.R. 49. The previous clause provides for "officers for all elected offices provided for by the Constitution and laws of said State." Now Congress contemplated the situation that we might not elect some other officers, then they say, in any event such officers to be elected shall include two senators and two representatives to Congress.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

HEEN: Line 2 on page 2, you have the words "shall be chosen." Just wondering whether or not, in view of the fact that you are going to have a primary election, that those words should read "shall be nominated and chosen."

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, what is your - -

SHIMAMURA: I have no objection. H.R. 49 says "chosen"; but I'd just as soon have - -

HEEN: It seems to me this would be an improvement on H.R. 49 because you don't choose at a primary election; you nominate at a primary election. I move that after the word "be" on line 2, on page 2, the words "nominated and" be inserted.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, I believe you made the original motion to amend this section; therefore, if you wish to incorporate this further amendment, it would be all right. To facilitate matters.

SHIMAMURA: Point of information. What was the exact amendment now of Delegate Heen?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen's amendment was on the second line, page 2. After the words "shall be," insert the words "nominated and."

HEEN: That's a new motion, altogether. I have no previous motion pending.

CHAIRMAN: You have one motion made this morning, I believe. The motion to amendment - - amend was made early this morning and subsequent amendments have been added to it and you've accepted it.

TAVARES: Why can't we vote on one at a time?

CHAIRMAN: All right.

TAVARES: In connection with Mr. Shimamura's amendment, I'd like him to set forth a statement - - a suggestion made by Delegate Kellerman- thought she wasn't going to get up and mention it—it's use the word "final" for "general" election. I wonder how the chairman feels about that. "Final election" instead of "general election."

SHIMAMURA: That's all right, I have no objection. The Act 334 uses the word "final" instead of "general," but H.R. 49 uses the word "general."

TAVARES: Well, my suggestion would be then that we define the word "final" to mean what we are going to define "general" to mean later on. That would include either a general election, if it came at the date of the general election, under the suffrage article, or a special or some other kind of an election, as long as it was the final one by which these people were to be elected.

SHIMAMURA: That may be less confusing, to use the word "final."

CHAIRMAN: Agreed to use the word "final."

BRYAN: I'd like to ask the last two speakers if they wouldn't rather use the words "nominated and elected." In other words, "for a nomination and election." I think that would be more precise.

CHAIRMAN: How does it strike you, Delegate Shimamura?

SHIMAMURA: I have no objection, but I think we are putting undue emphasis on nomination and election because the statute usually speaks of election and not nomination.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, how does it meet with you?

TAVARES: Again, aren't we mixing up two amendments; the nomination and election comes on the next page, does it not?

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

TAVARES: Couldn't we leave that till later? I think that's a good suggestion and I don't see on page 1 where that will come in.

CHAIRMAN: In lieu of the words "primary and general," Delegate Bryan suggested the words "nomination and election." Is that correct?

BRYAN: "Issue his proclamation for nomination and elections"?

TAVARES: No; you've got to designate the primary election day and the final election day. I think it wouldn't be appropriate.

BRYAN: Primary election is not an election. That was my point.

TAVARES: It is a primary election, if it's called such; and if you say nomination, it wouldn't mean what a primary election would mean. You have to define it further.

HOLROYDE: Under the legislative article, they can only be finally elected at a general election. Why don't we stick to this term "general" right through. That's the only suggestion that I have.

CHAIRMAN: The Chairman will rule that we'll take a vote first on this amendment made by Delegate Heen, to facilitate matters. The amendment is on page 2, second line. After the words "shall be," the following words are inserted, "nominated and." All those in favor of the amendment, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Amendment carried.

Now as to the amendment offered by Delegate Tavares. What is your final amendment?

TAVARES: I think Delegate Shimamura made the motion, and I don't know if he accepted the word "final" in place of "general" or not.

SHIMAMURA: I accept that. I think it's an improvement and I think that does away with some confusion.

CHAIRMAN: The word "final." All those in favor -- are you ready for the question, the amendment made by Delegate Shimamura that would change the word "general" in the fifth line to "final." All those in favor of the motion to amend please signify by saying "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion is carried.

TAVARES: Had we already voted on the deletion of the other two portions? I didn't know that we voted on it. Delegate Shimamura moved to delete on page 1.

CHAIRMAN: No, as I stated at the beginning of this session this afternoon, consideration of Committee Proposal No. 25, I believe we did not. Then there is some insistence that we clear matters step by step. Therefore, that's the procedure we've been following.

TAVARES: Well, Mr. Chairman, as we started this afternoon, the first part of Delegate Shimamura's motion was to delete the words "an election or" in the fifth line and "as may be required" in the same -- in the fifth and sixth lines, and "hereinafter required" in the sixth line.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will put the question now. Delegate Shimamura's amendment, motion to amend in line 5, by deleting the words "and" at the end of the line; and on line 6, deleting the words "election or"; and in the same line 6, deleting the words "as may be required" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "as hereinafter provided." All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carried.

J. TRASK: I move for the adoption of Section 1 as amended.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Trask, with this understanding, that Delegate Nielsen will be given a chance to make his motion to amend the very last clause of Section 1. Is that agreed on?

J. TRASK: I accept that proviso.

CHAIRMAN: To clear the floor.

APOLIONA: I second that motion to adopt.

CHAIRMAN: Section 1, with leave for Delegate Nielsen or the floor for consideration of the last portion of the section.

HEEN: Before we get to that stage, I would like to bring up this question. As the section now reads with all the amendments which have been made, it provides for the election of "officers for all elective offices provided by this Constitution and laws of this State." Now the laws of this State provide for the election of members of the board of supervisors and other city and county officials. Will they have to be re-elected or elected again under this provision? Seems to me that they'll have to run, be nominated and elected under this provision.

TAVARES: I don't think that follows. The laws of the State will be carried over, and what those laws say will be -- will have their effect, if they don't say to run at this election, people won't run. That's the situation; I don't think there is any trouble at all.

HEEN: It says "for all elective officers under this Constitution and laws of this State," and the laws of this State provide for the election of city and county officials.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the section as amended so far? Care to make a motion?

HEEN: Personally, I don't think they need to run for election, under this particular section. I would suggest this amendment to the last line of page 1, before the word "elective" insert the word "State." I move that as an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to it?

HAYES: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that on line 7, between the words "all" and "elective" insert the word "State." Ready for the question?

J. TRASK: For the sake of the record, I'll withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

J. TRASK: I renew my former motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 1 be adopted as amended, with leave for consideration of the last portion of this section to be left open.

BRYAN: Point of information. Why is it necessary to give leave for further amendment? Is the amendment not ready now? Is that the complication?

CHAIRMAN: The amendment is ready, but there is some question as to whether the amendments made this morning have been really adopted. Therefore, we would like to clear the floor, make it definite and adopt those amendments made, and then proceed to the consideration of Delegate Nielsen's amendment.

BRYAN: O.K.

CHAIRMAN: That is merely to facilitate matters, to clear any ambiguities. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion is carried.

NIELSEN: I move that the following amendment be made to this section. You all have printed copies on your desks. On the last line of the last sentence, delete the words "said representatives shall be elected at large" and substitute therefor the following: "said senators shall be elected at large; and said representatives shall be elected in the following manner, one from that area comprising representative districts 11 to 17, inclusive, and one from that area comprising all other representative districts in the State."

LUIZ: Second the motion.

NIELSEN: The reason that I have offered this amendment is that if we do not do something like this, all -- both senators and the two representatives will all be elected from Oahu without hardly any question, on account of the registered votes. Now if we split it in this manner we gain two things. We do district for representatives as most states do, and on a fairly equitable basis because districts 11 to 17 have approximately 65,000 registered voters and all the other districts about 60,000. Also it will give us rural representation in the Congress, and I think that's very necessary because of the rural development and the agricultural nature of a large part of our territory. While the other senators and representatives will give us kokua, I think that a man that is definitely elected by the rural areas will be vitally interested in serving them.

HEEN: I believe that under the law with reference to election of representatives to the Congress, representatives and senators to the Congress of the United States, they are elected on the basis of population, straight population. I'm not too certain about that. I know this, if it is on the basis of population, the districts 11 to 17 inclusive will have a population, under the 1950 census, of 347,440 and the rest of the state would have 145,908. I don't know whether that will meet the requirements of the method of equal proportions.

NIELSEN: So far as equal proportions, the states are left to set up their own districts. There's no law on that. According to the population of the states, equal proportion is set up but not as to the districting within the states; they have never been successful in doing that in the national Congress.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the proposed amendment?

BRYAN: I've been very much in favor of rural representation all the way along. I think I'm going to draw the line on this one. My reasoning is this. The actions taken and the representation that the citizens of the State would want is on an over-all basis, and I think that there's very little concerning the territory in Congress that would go to local, or strictly local, problems. For that reason, I would rather have a toe-hold on two representatives, even if it was a small toe-hold, than I would have an arm-lock on one of them, if you get what I mean.

ASHFORD: Like the delegate who has just spoken, I'm very much in favor of the rural areas, but unlike him, I think it highly desirable to have a representative in Congress from those areas. The necessity for harbor developments and various conservation projects are apt not to receive the full value of need and of service to the territory unless we have somebody specifically representing us.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion?

KING: One difficulty about putting congressional districts in the Constitution is that we never know how many congressmen we are going to have in the future. Reapportionment of the Congress of the United States might decrease our representation in the House of Representatives from two to one, or might even increase it from two to three. Now ordinarily all of the states have allocated to them a certain number of representatives; then they leave it to the state legislature to apportion or redistrict the states. Many states have in the past two years, that is when I was in Congress in 1940, gained two or three representatives, and in some cases, lost one or two. Right after 1950 there'll be another reapportionment and there'll be a further allocation of representatives to the 48 states and to Hawaii, if we are a state by that time.

Now H.R. 49 arbitrarily allocates us two representatives at this time and says that those two shall be in addition to the present fixed number of representatives of 435 for the whole 48 states, but immediately after the reapportionment that will take place in the next Congress, we might very easily be reduced to one, particularly in view of the recent shrinkage in population of the territory. As I recollect, the ratio was 300,000 people or a major fraction thereof for each representative, but we are right on the edge now. They may raise the ratio from 300,000 to 350,000 or a major fraction thereof, and we would lose one in the reapportionment that will take place in 1950. I therefore feel that this matter is a statutory matter and not a constitutional matter. The number of representatives allocated to the State of Hawaii should be apportioned by the legislature of Hawaii as they are made.

ASHFORD: May I call to the attention of the delegates the fact that this really is just a representation at first. It is subject to subsequent action by the legislature.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? Roll call.

ROBERTS: I wonder whether an amendment to the amendment would be in order.

CHAIRMAN: Chair rules it's in order.

ROBERTS: In the third line of the amendment -- sorry, the second line at the end after the word "elected," delete all of the material in that amendment and substitute the words, "at large, unless and until otherwise provided by law." So that the amendment would read, "said senators shall be elected at large and said representatives shall be elected at large unless and until otherwise provided by law," which would make sure that if subsequent increases or decreases are brought about, it will be possible to allocate on the basis of the suggestion made by Delegate Nielsen for representation to other areas. I'd like to move that as an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

ASHFORD: I was hoping to speak before a second came in. I hoped that the second wouldn't then be necessary. The way it reads now is, "and unless and until otherwise required by this Constitution or laws of this State"; so that provision is in the section already.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, what is your reaction to the point of Delegate Ashford?

ANTHONY: Beyond that, you can't change the districting in the senate which Delegate Roberts would endeavor to do by statute.

ROBERTS: If I may answer the first question, first. This does not apply to senators, state senators. The proviso in the Constitution applies only to state senatorial districts; there's no application to senators to the Congress of the United States. On the -- I yield, Professor.

HEEN: I wasn't going to ask a question, but I was going to point out under the Federal Constitution the senators to the Congress of the United States are elected at large in any event.

ROBERTS: That's the reason I repeated the language which applies only to representatives. I don't intend it to apply to senators. The senators must be elected at large. "Said representatives shall be elected at large unless otherwise provided by law." That's the purpose of my amendment, to separate senators from representatives.

ANTHONY: Aren't we getting a little complicated here? We've got an amendment on an amendment. I understand that's not in order.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair ruled that it was in order.

ANTHONY: That's contrary to the previous rulings of the Committees of the Whole, as I understand it.

CHAIRMAN: I think that an amendment on an amendment is proper under rules of parliamentary law.

ASHFORD: I would like to ask Delegate Nielsen if he would accept an amendment to his amendment, striking out the words "said senators shall be elected at large and," then the rest of it would fit in with the remainder of the paragraph which cares for the senators before this provision which he has deleted.

NIELSEN: Yes, that's satisfactory.

PORTEUS: I hope we don't introduce too many elements of confusion. It's my understanding that when somebody has suggested an amendment and someone else has in turn proffered an amendment to that amendment, I think the subject matter is beyond the power of the original maker of the motion.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

CROSSLEY: It seems to me that if we could vote on the issue, that the language could then be worked out. In other words, if we could vote on the issues as to whether or not we want to give Oahu one senator and Hawaii one senator -- I mean representative, then we could settle this, we can settle the language.

SAKAKIHARA: I don't think that's correct. What delegate Crossley meant to say was one delegate to Oahu, and part of Oahu together with the neighbor islands.

HEEN: The delegate from Kauai said one was to be elected -- one representative was to be elected from Oahu and the other from Hawaii. I'd rather have him elected from Kauai.

CHAIRMAN: The present status of the amendments are -- I'll call on Delegate Lyman.

LYMAN: Sometime ago I think there was a little bit of misinformation to the effect that districts 11 to 17 control the population of 350,000. That is not true. Eleven to 17 is the City of Honolulu, and that is approximately 50 per cent of the population of the present territory.

CHAIRMAN: The status of the amendments are as follows: Delegate Nielsen amended Section 1 by deleting the words "said representatives shall be elected at large," and inserting in lieu thereof, "said senators shall be elected at large, and said representatives shall be elected in the following manner, one from that area comprising representative districts 11 to 17 inclusive, and one from that area comprising all other representative districts in the State." Then Delegate Roberts amended Delegate Nielsen's motion to amend by deleting in the second line of the proposed amendment the words, "in the"; and in the third line following "manner" and all the rest of the words that followed; and in lieu thereof inserted the words, "at large unless and until otherwise provided by law," period. Are you ready for the question? We are voting on the amendment proposed by Delegate Roberts. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion to amend fails.

PORTEUS: May I ask for a division of the house? I'm afraid we weren't quite prepared on that. I wasn't sure exactly when to join in on the yes vote. I wonder if the Chair --

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will call for a division of the house. All those in favor will please stand. Delegate Roberts' motion. Opposed. Stand please. Motion fails.

We have now before us Delegate Nielsen's motion. Ready for the question?

SAKAKIHARA: Wasn't that amendment, Mr. Nielsen's amendment, further amended by Delegate Ashford?

CHAIRMAN: No.

ASHFORD: That suggestion which was accepted by Mr. Nielsen would strike out the words in his quoted amendment, all the first line.

CHAIRMAN: Could you renew that suggestion?

ASHFORD: I suggest that the first line of the proposed amendment be stricken out, with the result that there is substituted in the section for the words "said representative shall be elected at large," the words "said representatives shall be elected in the following manner," and so forth.

CHAIRMAN: Is that acceptable to Delegate Nielsen?

NIELSEN: Yes, it's acceptable.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE: Call for a division of the house.

CHAIRMAN: I beg your pardon.

DELEGATE: Call for a division of the house.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of Delegate Nielsen's motion to amend Section 1 will please rise.

SAKAKIHARA: Roll call.

DELEGATE: Show of hands.

CHAIRMAN: Request for roll call. Will the Clerk please call the roll. All those in favor of Delegate Nielsen's motion to amend Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 25 will say "aye," and those opposed will say "no."

Ayes, 21. Noes, 32 (Akau, Anthony, Apoliona, Bryan, Castro, Cockett, Corbett, Crossley, Dowson, Fong, Fukushima, Hayes, Heen, Holroyde, Kam, Kanemaru, Kauhane, Kellerman, King, Lai, Larsen, Noda, Ohrt, Porteus, H. Rice, Richards, Shimamura, St. Sure, Tavares, A. Trask, J. Trask, Wist). Absent, 10 (Gilliland, Kage, Kometani, Lee, Loper, Mau, Mizuha, Okino, Phillips, White).

CHAIRMAN: Motion fails. Section 1 as amended is still before this committee.

ASHFORD: I move its adoption as amended.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to it?

HAYES: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 1 as amended be adopted. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carried. Section 1 is adopted as amended.

PORTEUS: Just as a matter of the record, what was the vote? 21-30 what?

CHAIRMAN: The vote was --

CLERK: 21-32-10.

CHAIRMAN: 21-32-10.

PORTEUS: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN: Section 2. Shall we proceed?

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 2.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

SHIMAMURA: I move to amend Section 2 by inserting after the word "said," first line, first word, the word "primary"; and that from line 3 on to 6 the words starting with "or if the primary election" down to the word "governor" on line 6, be deleted.

CHAIRMAN: Could you repeat that again?

SHIMAMURA: From the third line, after the words "ordering the same," the words "or if a primary election is to be held" and so forth down to the word "governor" on the sixth line, line 6.

CHAIRMAN: Be deleted?

SHIMAMURA: Yes. And also, while I'm on my feet, to strike out the word "general" on line 6 and insert the word "final" to comply with the former amendment as originally suggested by Delegate Kellerman.

AKAU: Did somebody second that already?

CHAIRMAN: Would you hold -- He's still amending it.

SHIMAMURA: On line seven, after the word "such," delete the words "election or"; and on the second to the last line, in that section, the word "hereinbefore" should be deleted.

BRYAN: I'll second that motion.

SHIMAMURA: And insert the words after -- or before "with respect to," second to the last line, Section 2, "by Congress."

CHAIRMAN: After the words "respect to"?

SHIMAMURA: Before the words "with respect to."

CHAIRMAN: "By Congress"?

SHIMAMURA: Yes. And to conform to H.R. 49, on line 10 and on line 11 down through line 12, the word after "except," starting with the words "as otherwise provided" down to "ratified by the people" to be deleted.

TAVARES: As I understand it, the word "except" also goes out?

CHAIRMAN: Is that correct? Delegate Shimamura, does that word "except" also go out?

SHIMAMURA: Yes, that's right.

TAVARES: And the comma?

SHIMAMURA: Leave that in for the time being. I have another amendment to make which is a little more involved than the others, so I shan't make it at the present time, but I should like to have the word "except" in.

CHAIRMAN: Would you care to insert those words now; otherwise that paragraph won't make any sense.

SHIMAMURA: Very well, that may be. After the word "except" insert "that voters shall have resided in their respective representative and senatorial districts for not less than three months immediately preceding the time at which they offer to register." May I repeat that again?

CHAIRMAN: Yes, go ahead, slowly.

SHIMAMURA: "That voters shall have resided in their respective representative and senatorial districts for not less than three months immediately preceding the time at which they offer to register."

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the amendment made?

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 2 be amended as read by Delegate Shimamura.

HOLROYDE: One suggestion to the movant. I think the words "and senatorial district" can be stricken. They can't reside in their representative district and not reside in their senatorial district, I don't believe, for three months. These are surplus words.

CHAIRMAN: What is your answer to that, Delegate Shimamura?

ANTHONY: While he's thinking that one over, wouldn't it be in order to have a rewrite of this thing? I'm sure I can't follow these piecemeal amendments here. If they've got any more like it, I suggest that we take a recess and let them rewrite it. Let's take a look at them.

SAKAKIHARA: That's why I rose. Will the Chair direct the movant of this amendment to have the amendments reduced to writing. There have been numerous deletions from this section at various points which makes it very confusing, and additions that he has inserted. I believe that in all fairness that it should be reduced to writing so that we may intelligently analyze the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Suggestion is well taken.

BRYAN: I might ask the movant while he is having this reduced to writing, if he would think of the idea of just applying the normal election laws or requisites for voting, rather than putting that last wording in there.

SHIMAMURA: The article on suffrage and elections has no provision as to residence within a representative district, nor does the article on legislative powers and functions have the qualifications for electors to either house.

ROBERTS: That's met by the state laws dealing with qualified voters. I don't think we have to write that into our ordinance section, as long as they are qualified to vote, and we have in this section that they shall be qualified. "Qualification of voters shall be as prescribed by this Constitution and the laws of this State." As long as they are qualified voters, it seems to me we've met the problem.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair at this time would like to state, before any more debate is carried on in regards to Section 2, that the suggestion made by Delegate Anthony and Sakakihara is well taken, and would like to --

SHIMAMURA: I shall have it printed.

CHAIRMAN: The chairman shall have this printed and have the section deferred temporarily, until we have the printed form before us.

SHIMAMURA: Before we do that, may I make one observation. I don't see any definition of qualified voter in our constitutional provisions. I may be mistaken, but on the provision of the article on suffrage and elections, there is no residential requirement within a representative district. That's the only provision which was left out.

TAVARES: I think I can -- perhaps I can throw some light on that. The election laws provide for registration, and in Section 178 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii, 1945, in the affidavit on application for registration—which law will be continued in effect on the carryover—is the affidavit which has to be sworn to by the voter: "I have resided in the territory of Hawaii not less than one year preceding and in the representative district not less than three months immediately preceding this date." Now, the state is going to be substituted for the territory, and I think that will take care of it.

SHIMAMURA: I don't think it will.

CHAIRMAN: The chairman would like to entertain a motion to defer Section 2.

ANTHONY: I move we defer Section 2.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

ASHFORD: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to defer Section 2 to the end of the calendar, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

ASHFORD: I now move for a very brief recess to give the chairman of the committee a chance to get this on the printing press.

CHAIRMAN: Chair declares a short recess of five minutes.

(RECESS)

KING: I'd like to make a motion at this time, that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that this committee rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

JULY 12, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee please come to order.

HEEN: I move that this committee take a recess subject to the call of the Chair. During the recess I would suggest that those who are more or less familiar with the various proposals now pending before this committee to get together with the chairman and the members of the Committee on Continuity of Law. Perhaps by doing that, we can expedite the work of this committee. As you know, Mr. Chairman, yesterday we had quite a number of separate proposals to consider and I don't know just where they come in and where they are supposed to go out--all this and that. By having a small group to work on these various proposals, I think we can expedite the work of this committee.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to the motion?

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this committee recess subject to the call of the Chair for purposes of having several members of this committee interested in suggesting amendments and making additions meet with the Committee on Continuity and Ordinances to expedite matters.

SAKAKIHARA: I am wondering what progress we'll make. I recall a few days ago similar steps were taken by this committee. Subsequently, after the committee met, only a handful of the members or those who were interested in the matter met, and we made very slow progress. I might suggest that the Chair appoint a special committee from among the members of the Committee of the Whole, assigning those also who are interested in the matter, to convene -- meet with the Committee on Continuity of Law to work on this matter, rather than make a general statement that those who are interested in the matter meet with the committee.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the motion?

RICHARDS: I wonder if we can have some sort of indication as to when the Chair is apt to call.

CHAIRMAN: I cannot say.

ARASHIRO: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of information.

ARASHIRO: What is before the house now? Is it that special committee that you are going to appoint or the voluntary committee?

CHAIRMAN: The question on the floor is the motion to recess subject to the call of the Chair.

ARASHIRO: And the people that are interested in this Proposal 23, 24 and 25 will meet. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN: That is the understanding.

CASTRO: Some of us have matters of private business which we might take care of if the recess is going to be for the balance of the morning. We would appreciate it if the Chair could state a time when the committee would be called back into session.

CHAIRMAN: The best person, the person who might know best on that question might be Delegate Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: My personal opinion, I don't think we should take more than half an hour, or an hour at the most.

ASHFORD: It is my view that as a result of this meeting we will have a choice, and that it can be very briefly disposed of by the Committee of the Whole, that is, to choose between one thing or another. Now if that be so, the morning would be very well spent. I myself don't think a half hour is quite long enough. I would suggest that the morning be dedicated to this so that retyping can be done, and go back to the Committee of the Whole at half past one prepared to take immediate action.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts has been begging the floor.

ROBERTS: I think the setting aside of at least two and a half to three hours for this group to work on the redraft of the section on ordinances and continuity will be well spent. I think when we get back in session we can recess till one o'clock, and then go back to Committee of the Whole and take up the proposals as submitted and as printed, so that we have the opportunity to spend our afternoon completing the article on ordinances and continuity.

J. TRASK: In view of what Delegate Ashford said, I want to amend the motion to recess until 1:30, instead of subject to the call of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: Is it acceptable to Delegate Heen, the movant of the amendment?

HEEN: That is accepted.

CHAIRMAN: The motion before the committee is for a recess to 1:30. Any more discussion? All those in favor of the motion to recess till 1:30 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carried. Committee will be in recess till 1:30.

The Chair might suggest at this time that all those interested, please work with the Committee on Continuity and Ordinances.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Regarding Proposals 23 and 24, there is much difficulty that has to be resolved; therefore, they are taking -- they need more time. That being the case, the Chair would like to entertain a motion to recess further until 3:30, at which time we'll have all the amendments printed and ready.

SAKAKIHARA: I move at this time that we take a recess till half past three.

SHIMAMURA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that this committee recess until 3:30. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried. Recessed till 3:30.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee come to order.

KING: This committee was to reconvene at 3:30. But it's obvious that the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law will not be ready at this time, so I now move that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the committee rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

Evening Session

CHAIRMAN: Will Committee of the Whole please come to order.

CROSSLEY: What preference does the Chair have in wanting to take these up, so that we can move for the adoption of the sections?

CHAIRMAN: Yes. Before we go on to that, the Chair would like to say that there have been two amendments circulated. The amendment relating to Committee Proposal No. 25 is good. That amendment relating to Committee Proposal No. 23 should be ignored because another printed form will be circulated in a few minutes. I believe at this time we should proceed with consideration of Committee Proposal No. 25.

CROSSLEY: I move the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 25.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any second to that?

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: For purposes of clearing the record, probably we should first reconsider our previous action on Committee Proposal No. 25.

CROSSLEY: Have we taken final action?

CHAIRMAN: We have adopted one section of Committee Proposal No. 25. Therefore, the Chair would like to invite a motion to reconsider.

CROSSLEY: I move that we reconsider our action on Proposal 25.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we reconsider our action on Committee Proposal No. 25. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion is carried.

ASHFORD: May I ask that the chairman of the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Laws have preference in recognition?

CROSSLEY: I beg your pardon, Madame Delegate. I didn't see him here at the time. I rose to expedite the work.

ASHFORD: No reproach to you, but I mean in the consideration of these amendments, I think he should be the man heard from, as the chairman of other committees have been in the past.

H. RICE: I suggest that he take the chair up here next to -- one of your chairs, so we don't all have to turn around here.

CROSSLEY: I move that we adopt—I'm almost afraid to do it—Proposal No. 25.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any second to the motion?

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we adopt Committee Proposal No. 25.

HEEN: I move an amendment to that, we adopt each section separately.

SHIMAMURA: May I explain this section, all sections?

HEEN: There is a motion pending at the present time.

WOOLAWAY: I'll second the motion of Delegate Heen.

CHAIRMAN: Could you repeat your motion, please, Delegate Heen?

ASHFORD: Delegate Heen was not recognized. Delegate Shimamura was.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that the chairman of the committee should have recognition in this case. Therefore, the Chair recognizes Delegate Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: May I explain the first section? The first section as amended --

HEEN: Point of order. There is nothing before the committee.

CHAIRMAN: There is nothing before the committee, Delegat Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 1, just to facilitate matters.

LARSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Your motion was to adopt --

SHIMAMURA: Section 1.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion to adopt the whole Committee Proposal No. 25. The Chair does not feel that it is necessary.

CROSSLEY: I'll withdraw my motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded.

SHIMAMURA: May I explain Section 1? Section 1 is practically identical with Section 1 as amended prior to our recess and adjournment. The only change is on the second page.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Are you speaking to an amendment that is not before the Convention yet -- committee? Nobody has made a motion to amend Section 1 as yet.

WIRTZ: To put the whole thing in order, I move the adoption of Section 1.

ROBERTS: The chairman of the committee has already moved for the adoption of Section 1, which was seconded. Section 1 is properly before us, and I believe that the problem is on the adoption of this first section.

ANTHONY: As one of those who has spent four or five hours trying to get this thing straightened out, let's not get bogged down on something that's not before us. Let's take a look at this. If there is any question about this, let's go to that PORTEUS: I think that the point that the various delegates are trying to make is as follows. That there has been a motion to adopt Section 1. The motion to adopt Section 1 would be the section of the committee proposal as brought out by the standing committee. It is now proposed to amend that section. I think Delegate Shimamura would now be in order to move for the amendment of Section 1 because that's what you are presenting at this time, an amended Section 1.

HEEN: That's not correct. What we are doing now is this, to amend the committee proposal itself, and not attempting to amend various sections of Committee Proposal No. 25.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to make a statement. The Chair understands that in this meeting of the subcommittee, the special subcommittee, it was understood that the proposed amendment to Committee Proposal No. 25 was to be proposed in its entirety to the whole Committee Proposal No. 25.

BRYAN: I think it would clear the floor if the delegates would realize that in voting to reconsider we voted to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 25, and I think the move that should have been made on the floor is to move that the original proposal be amended by this piece of paper here, and I so move. It would clear the house.

KING: It seems to me common courtesy would let the chairman of the committee present the case. After all, this special group that discussed it was headed by the chairman of the committee, and the Chair recognized Delegate Shimamura. We haven't given him a chance to explain the situation. Now I think the Chair did right in recognizing Delegate Shimamura to present the matter before the Convention. I suggest we allow Delegate Shimamura to go ahead and explain what is before the Convention.

CHAIRMAN: The status of the matter before this committee is that a motion was made and seconded to adopt Committee Proposal -- Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 25. Now, Delegate Shimamura.

SHIMAMURA: I move that Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be amended, the amendment being on the desks of the various delegates.

SECTION 1. Elections. In case the people of the Territory ratify this Constitution and the same is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States whose approval thereto may be required, the governor of the Territory shall, within thirty days after receipt of the official notification of such approval, issue his proclamation for primary and final elections, as hereinafter provided, at which officers for all state elective offices provided for by this Constitution shall be nominated and elected; but the officers so to be elected shall in any event include two senators and two representatives to the Congress, and unless and until otherwise required by law, said representatives shall be elected at large.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be amended, as written in the Committee Proposal No. 25 proposed amendments.

SHIMAMURA: May I state that this Section 1 as amended follows substantially, almost identically, the Section 1 as amended the other day by the entire Convention.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Committee Proposal -- Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 25.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be adopted.

SHIMAMURA: I move to amend Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 25 according to the amendment which has been circulated to the delegates.

SECTION 2. Said primary election shall take place not earlier than sixty days nor later than ninety days after said proclamation, and the final election shall take place within forty days after the primary election. Such elections shall be held, and the qualifications of voters thereat shall be, as prescribed by this Constitution and by the laws relating to the election of members of the legislature at primary and general elections. The returns thereof shall be made, canvassed and certified in the same manner as prescribed by law with respect to the election for the ratification or rejection of this Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be amended as written in the amended forms circulated. Is there any discussion?

AKAU: How did the committee arrive at the 40 days? Was it an arbitrary thing or did they base it on something? I'm referring to the fourth line in Section 2. "Take place within 40 days after primary election." I wonder if the chairman or somebody in the committee could tell me.

SHIMAMURA: That's in compliance with the very language and requirement of H.R. 49.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend --

WIRTZ: Point of information. Are we voting on the amendment that's contained in the combined circular or the separate amendment?

CHAIRMAN: In the combined circular. It has three pages to it.

WIRTZ: I'm not so sure. There's another amendment here that has 40 days. The other one has 60 days.

CHAIRMAN: The one on the single page, please ignore. Are you ready for the question? Delegate Shimamura, is there anything more you would like to clear up? Is there any more discussion?

SHIMAMURA: No.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to amend Section 2 as written in the amended Committee Proposal No. 25 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion is carried.

BRYAN: I'd like to keep the parliamentary order straight and move the adoption of Sections 1 and 2 as amended.

DELEGATE: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Sections 1 and 2 of Committee Proposal No. 25 as amended be adopted. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 3 of Proposal No. 25.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 3 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be adopted.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 3 as amended.

SECTION 3. When said election shall be held and the returns thereof so made, canvassed and certified, the governor shall certify the result thereof to the President.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 3 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be amended as is written in the amended form.

SHIMAMURA: May I just state that Section 3 as amended is substantially identical with Section 3 of the Committee Proposal No. 25. It has been abbreviated somewhat.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Section 3 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

BRYAN: I move the adoption of Section 3 as amended.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to adopt Section 3 as amended please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

SHIMAMURA: I move to amend -- to adopt Section 4 of Proposal No. 25.

CROSSLEY: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 4 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be adopted.

SHIMAMURA: I move to amend Section 4 in the form that has been circulated.

SECTION 4. Upon the issuance by the President of his proclamation announcing the result of said election and the admission of this State to the Union, the officers elected and qualified under the provisions of this Constitution and the laws of this State shall proceed to exercise and discharge the powers and duties pertaining to their respective offices.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 4 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be amended in the form in which it has been circulated. Is there any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: Section 4 is substantially similar to Section 4 as originally proposed. Only thing, "ordinances" have been deleted - - references to ordinances have been deleted, and it has been abbreviated somewhat.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? All those in favor of the amendment please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

CROSSLEY: I move the adoption of Section 4 as amended.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 4 as amended be adopted. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

DOWSON: I move for the adoption of Section 5.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 5 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be adopted.

SHIMAMURA: I move to amend Section 5 in the form circulated.

SECTION 5. The governor and secretary of this State shall certify the election of the senators and representatives to the Congress in the manner required by law.

For this purpose, the lieutenant governor of this State shall be deemed ex officio secretary of state.

PHILLIPS: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 5 of Committee Proposal No. 25 be adopted in the form in which it was circulated.

ROBERTS: I have a question on the second paragraph of this section which is the amendment. The language provides that the lieutenant governor of the State shall be deemed ex officio secretary of state.

WOOLAWAY: There is only one section in Section 5.

ROBERTS: It's been amended by the chairman of the committee to include the new section which includes a second paragraph.

SHIMAMURA: May I answer that question? H.R. 49 provides that the governor and the secretary of state shall certify to the election of the United States senator and the representatives to Congress. Now, as the delegates will recall, we have no provision in our Constitution for a secretary of state. We, however, have a lieutenant governor, and therefore, to prevent a lack here of an officer we have to designate someone to act as secretary of state for this purpose.

ROBERTS: I understand the purpose of the amendment. I just want to know why we make him an ex officio secretary. Why can't we say for this purpose the lieutenant governor of the State shall act as or be considered secretary of state. Why do you have that be an ex officio?

SHIMAMURA: My amendment as originally proposed read, "shall be designated secretary of state." But some other members of the subcommittee felt that "shall be deemed ex officio" was an improvement.

HEEN: First paragraph, Section 5, says, "The governor and the secretary of this State." I think it should read, "The governor and secretary of state," instead of "secretary of this State." "Governor and secretary of state shall certify." The next paragraph, next to "lieutenant governor," "secretary of state." I move an amendment.

ASHFORD: I think perhaps the chairman of the committee will accept that amendment.

SHIMAMURA: I'm willing to accept it, to prevent debate and argument, but H.R. 49 says exactly that.

HEEN: In the second line delete the word "this," so that that clause will read, "The governor and secretary of state" instead of "secretary of this State."

CHAIRMAN: I understand Delegate Shimamura has accepted the suggested amendment.

ASHFORD: May I refer to the language of H.R. 49? "The governor and secretary of said State."

CHAIRMAN: The question raised by Delegate Roberts is still before this floor.

TAVARES: May I offer this as my explanation. I think that whether you say that the lieutenant governor acts as a secretary of state or whether you say he is ex officio secretary of state, I think the result is the same. By virtue of his office, ex officio means by virtue of his office as lieutenant governor he is secretary of state. Whether you say he is or acts as secretary of state, he is acting by virtue of his office as lieutenant governor; therefore, ex officio I think is correct.

ANTHONY: I think it's just a matter of style. If Brother Roberts wants to change that in the Style Committee, he can.

ROBERTS: I was going to ask you if it's a matter of style.

ANTHONY: That's all it is. You're right.

ROBERTS: If it is, then we take care of it.

ANTHONY: That's all it is. That's all.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Section 5 in the form circulated please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carried.

CROSSLEY: I move the adoption of Section 5, as amended.

DOWSON: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded Section 5 be amended and adopted. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

WOOLAWAY: I move for adoption of Section 6.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded - - rather, the Chair feels that in this particular case the Chair should call on President King.

KING: This seems to be new material. I think we could call on the chairman of the committee to explain the provisions in the proposed amendment that adds Sections 6, 7, 8 to the original proposal.

TAVARES: That's why I think if we could let the chairman of the committee make it, he'd make the motion in the proper way. We're not moving to adopt Section 6. We're moving to amend the article by adding a new Section 6.

SHIMAMURA: I move at this time to amend Committee Proposal No. 25 by adding a new section numbered 6, thereto which reads as circulated.

SECTION 6. Ten days after the admission of this State to the Union, the legislature shall convene in special session.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 25 be amended by adding Section 6 as circulated. Is there any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: This Section 6 was circulated as amendment to Committee Proposal No. 25 under date of July 11. It was an unnumbered section at that time. I think the delegates have read it. This is to facilitate the first session of the legislature after the election.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Committee Proposal No. 25 by adding Section 6 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: I move to amend Committee Proposal No. 25 by adding thereto it a new Section 7 as circulated.

SECTION 7. The governor and the lieutenant governor, elected at the first election, shall each hold office for a term beginning with his election and ending at noon on the first Monday in December following the second general election.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 25 be amended by adding Section 6 as circulated.

SHIMAMURA: This section - -

CHAIRMAN: Seven rather. Correction, Section 7.

SHIMAMURA: This section provides for the termination or the duration of the term of the governor or lieutenant governor after their first election.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Committee Proposal No. 25 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the amendment of Proposal No. 25 by adding thereto a new section numbered Section 8.

SECTION 8. The term of office of the members of the legislature elected at the first election shall be as follows:

Members of the House of Representatives shall hold office for a term beginning with their election and ending on the day of the second general election held thereafter.

Members of the Senate shall be divided into two classes. The first class shall consist of the following number elected with the highest number of votes from their respective senatorial districts: first district, 3; second district, 1; third district, 2; fourth district, 3; fifth district, 2; and sixth district, 2. Members of the first class shall hold office for a term beginning with their election and ending on the day of the third general election held thereafter. The remaining members elected to the Senate at such election shall constitute the second class, who shall hold office for a term beginning with their election and ending on the day of the second general election held thereafter.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 25 be amended by adding Section 8 in the form in which it has been circulated.

SHIMAMURA: Briefly this Section 8 provides for the term of the first representatives and senators of Hawaii, that is to our legislature. And the second paragraph provides, as you see, for the term of the members of the House, and the third paragraph provides for the staggered terms of the members of the Senate.

LEE: I'd like to address a question to the chairman on the last paragraph—the division of the members of the Senate in the two classes. My question is, under this theory, those who have been elected to the territorial Senate, no matter when the State - - statehood comes into actual being, even though that member was elected for the territorial Senate for a term of four years, his term would be cut short by two years. Is that right, as far as the holdover senator is concerned?

SHIMAMURA: As to the senators in the first class, I believe that they will serve slightly more than the four-year term for which they would ordinarily serve.

LEE: No, that isn't my question. My question is, as I understand it that once we become a state all people must run then. In other words all officers then - -

SHIMAMURA: That's right.

LEE: - - upon becoming a state. Is that the premise that had been accepted in this proposition?

SHIMAMURA: You mean the present territorial legislature ceases to function?

LEE: Yes.

SHIMAMURA: Yes, that's true.

LEE: So all the offices of the Territory including from the governor and all of the legislature ceases. Is that correct?

SHIMAMURA: That's correct.

LEE: Has there been a study made as comparison to the holdover senators of other states which were admitted to the Union? Was that the same practice that was followed?

ANTHONY: H.R. 49 specifically requires us to elect our senators and representatives to the State legislature. In other words, those present senators who may have a holdover term, were it not for the admission of the State in the Union, are going to get short-changed. They are going to have to run for election.

LEE: Well, that's what I wanted to know. Now, the second question.

ANTHONY: That's exactly it.

LEE: Thank you. The second question goes to this idea of creating two classes, to be designated. The first class, the highest number of votes will fall in the first class. Was there any consideration given to running for long term and running for short term? I don't think this accomplishes that because with this you run all at one time and the fellow who gets the highest vote, the highest votes fall in the first class. Is that correct?

SHIMAMURA: The senators in the higher class serve a slightly longer term than those in the second class.

LEE: I understand that, but my question was posed as to why wasn't the -- say the matter of the term of the Senate set so that those who would file for election would run for the long term and those who desire to run for the short term, for the short term. I know that was discussed by the Legislative Committee and that matter wasn't too fully considered, as far as I was concerned, but I wondered how this committee reached the same conclusion.

BRYAN: I'd like to answer that. I think that in all fairness we should say that Delegate Shimamura inherited this from the Legislative Committee. Is that not correct?

SHIMAMURA: That's right. Delegate Heen introduced this. May I state that you cannot put down a definite term because we don't know when this election will be held and by the very terms of H.R. 49, it's indefinite. It says within 30 days after the State of Hawaii is admitted to the Union, the governor shall by proclamation call the election of all such officers. It's necessarily indefinite and uncertain.

BRYAN: I think that possibly the delegate who raised the question might have been absent at the meeting when there was a vote taken in the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions as to whether it would be run on this manner with the one receiving the highest vote going into one class and the others in another class, or whether they would declare before they filed for nomination or their papers, and the vote that carried was the vote to do it in this manner, in the Legislative Committee.

LEE: There's no such section in the legislative proposal, is there?

BRYAN: That is true, but this was referred to the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law by the Legislative Committee.

LEE: Do you mean there was a mandate addressed to the Committee on Ordinances that such should be included in the ordinance?

HEEN: May I answer? There was no mandate. We had in mind that some such provision of this -- such as this should be included in the schedule. So bearing that in mind, we prepared this particular provision and then had it introduced as a proposal on the article or the schedule relating to continuity of law and so on.

WOOLAWAY: I made that particular motion in committee and it carried. I don't believe Senator Lee was present at that time.

TAVARES: May I further answer Senator Lee's query. We were shown this afternoon in the informal committee which was working out here on this redrafting that it is customary in the case of states -- senators to the United States Senate to decide by lot after the senators are elected which should be long term and short term, so this is not an unusual situation even for the United States Senate. What's good for the United States Senate, I believe, should be good enough for us.

LEE: Well, now will the learned delegate yield to this question? Did he find from his investigation that there were other states who, when admitted to the Union, ran for the long term Senate and there were those who ran for the short term Senate. In other words, it could be just as well advised so that the persons who would run would know whether or not he was running for long term as compared to running for a short term, rather than leaving it helter-skelter, depending on whether or not he would have the largest number of votes.

ANTHONY: He'll know soon enough after the returns are in. This is a very simple method. Those that get the highest number of votes are in the first class, any others will have to take second place, the short term.

LEE: Well, now, I might state this --

ANTHONY: They all have to run together.

CHAIRMAN: Will you please address the Chair when you're speaking?

ANTHONY: I was addressing the Chair.

LEE: I might state that it's very obvious that those who will get their largest number of votes will fall in the first class. That's exactly what it says; that's pretty obvious; nobody needs any explanation. My point goes to the matter of determining at the outset whether or not it would be better procedure for those who would be running for the State Senate, those citizens who are desirous of running for the State Senate would declare that they are running for the long term Senate as compared to running for the short term Senate. It seems to me that would be better practice rather than saying now we're all running for the Senate; and then for the first time, those who have the largest number of votes would fall in the first class, the ones who fall the last would fall in the second class. It seems to me you're defeating the very purpose on which elections are run. You will, when you run, declare for the office that you seek. It seems to me it's just as logical that you declare for the term of office that you seek. That's my opinion.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion? Are you ready for the question?

J. TRASK: I would like to ask the committee, how did they arrive at giving the third district two senators and the fourth district three?

HEEN: That was done at a meeting of the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions.

BRYAN: I think that you are referring to the present fourth and fifth districts on Oahu. I believe that's what he is referring to. I think that it was the feeling of the committee that the third district -- he is talking about the fourth and fifth districts, aren't you? Mr. Chairman, may I ask that question of the last speaker?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

BRYAN: You're speaking to the fourth and fifth district? The feeling of that committee was that the fifth district with five senators got a little bit of a break and we gave the fourth district a little bit of break on this part of it to make things even.

FUKUSHIMA: I think there is considerable merit to what Delegate Lee has stated in declaring first what class of senators you want to belong to, the two-year class or the four-year class, because certainly if you were campaigning for two-year class, you wouldn't spend as much for your campaign as if you were running for four-year senator. I believe there should be some segregation made at the outset. Otherwise, you'll have all running at large, everyone trying to outdo the other, outspend the other to get the four-year term by getting the highest votes. It seems to me it's pretty inequitable.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? Is there any more discussion?

NIELSEN: Under this I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee how many senators are going to be elected for the second district.

KING: It's stated there; there are two senators from that district, one would run for the long term and one for the short term. Whoever gets the highest vote would serve for the long term; whoever gets the second highest vote would serve for the short term. It says "second senatorial district, one." That would be for the long term.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question?

C. RICE: Talking along the lines of Delegate Fukushima and Senator Lee. You know when there has been a death of a senator, take Senator Pedro died, then they had election and they had nominations for the short term and nominations for the long term. This way is all right if you want to take your chances, but there is going to be a lot of plunking. You are to vote for your favorites. I just want to point that out.

H. RICE: Do you think that - - I'd like to ask that special committee, do you think it would be too long if, for instance, you said, the first district, three should run for four years, two run for two years; and go along that way?

HEEN: Because on the first election it's not going to be four years or two years, they are going to run at a special election which will make the term a little more than two years, and the other term a little more than four years. You can't say four years and two years.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Committee Proposal No. 25 - -

LEE: I'd like to offer an amendment. I haven't got it prepared now, but the essence would be to amend it so that the - - I'd be satisfied with a sense vote. If we fail on this, we might as well proceed.

CHAIRMAN: I can't hear you.

LEE: In other words, I'm willing to make a motion that the last paragraph be amended so that the candidates would declare whether they would seek the longer term, as well as the short term; and if that motion passes, I will prepare the proper amendment. If, however, it fails, I'm just as willing to let this go on tonight. I make that in the form of a motion.

YAMAMOTO: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no objection from the committee as to the - - that Section 8 be amended in the sense so that the senators running for office will be able to select at the outset for either the long term or the short term. Is there any objection to that being put before this committee, without the language in its proper form?

KING: I have no objection to putting the motion, but I'd like to speak against its adoption. It's only for the first special election, and it just adds more language and more difficulty in the Constitution to specify that three from the first district shall run for the long term and two for the short term, one from the second district for the long term and one for the short term, right down the line to designate the whole 25 senators. It seems to me they can all run at large, 25 senators. Those who get the highest votes in their respective district will serve for the long term, and those who will get the lowest votes serve for the short term.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any discussion?

RICHARDS: I agree with the last speaker. We're only talking about the first election. We have talked about the democratic principles that we wish to follow here and the point is that you might have two or three of the most popular people. By popular I do not mean necessarily personally popular, but the most qualified people running from one section, for either the long term or the short term; and, therefore, the State would not be able to have their most qualified representatives. Therefore, I am against this amendment as I feel that the people who are most qualified will be elected if they are all running.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? Question is to further amend the amendment, Section 8, by changing it so that the sense will be that the senators may select at the outset of the election whether they want to run for the long or the short term.

J. TRASK: Point of information. I would like to know if there is any provision in the Constitution now that might take care of an emergency outside of a special election, that Senator Rice has just spoken about. In the event that one of the senators should die, whether they should have any election for the unexpired term; I wonder if there is any section in the Constitution that takes care of that now?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Heen, could you answer that, please?

HEEN: There is a section in the article on the legislative powers and functions. In case of a vacancy, that vacancy shall be filled as provided by law; or, in the event there is no law, then by appointment of the governor for the unexpired term.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend the amendment which adds Section 8 to Committee Proposal No. 25 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion to amend is defeated.

Ready for the question on Section 8? All those in favor of the motion to amend Committee Proposal No. 25 by adding Section 8 in the form in which it has been circulated, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion is carried.

DOWSON: I move for the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 25 as amended.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: What are you rising to, Delegate Fukushima?

FUKUSHIMA: To the motion to adopt Proposal No. 25 as amended.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 25 be adopted as amended.

FUKUSHIMA: I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee what observation was made as to the two United States senators. As I understand it from this proposal, both senators will run at large, but it doesn't state whether one should run for two years, the other for six; because as I understand it, the senators of the United States also have staggered terms.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, could you answer that question?

ANTHONY: That is governed by a section in the Federal Constitution which provides that the state's legislature may provide for the method of electing senators and representatives. Now, in connection with whether one is by long term or by a short term, that is done by lot in the United States Senate. Our legislature, of course, could enact a law regulating that matter afterwards. But there is no occasion to go beyond the present status of the situation, which is as I have stated.

FUKUSHIMA: But the election of the United States senators are held before the election of the State legislators. Isn't that correct?

ANTHONY: Same time.

FUKUSHIMA: In the same election?

ANTHONY: Same election. Same election as the governor.

FUKUSHIMA: Then the legislature of that State will then provide for which senator will have a two year term and which six. Is that correct?

ANTHONY: No, the Senate of the United States will decide that.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion on the motion to adopt?

BRYAN: There are two minor points. One is that I would ask the Chair again to request that the delegates refrain from using the microphone in voting.

The second point is that I think Section 6, am I correct in my understanding that this refers to the State legislature, and that the State will not be admitted to the Union until the appearance in Washington of our representatives? Is that correct? That would clear that point.

ANTHONY: No. The State is admitted to the Union after the election has been had and the President has notified by proclamation of that -- has been notified of that fact. That's specifically in H.R. 49, page 21, I think.

BRYAN: Well, that means that this -- there'll be no doubt but what this referred to the State legislature.

ANTHONY: This is the State legislature.

ROBERTS: I don't think that Delegate Fukushima's question has been answered. I think the question is still there. We elect two senators. The answer was that the Congress determines who shall be the long and who shall be the short term?

ANTHONY: Not the Congress but the Senate of the United States. But the legislature does have the power by appropriate legislation. That can be done after the legislature convenes. But for the initial election, that will be done under the Federal Constitution by the United States Senate.

ROBERTS: I think it's perfectly appropriate for us to determine who shall be the long term and the short term, the same as we've done for our own. I think an amendment is perfectly appropriate that the person who gets the highest vote could be the long term and the person who gets the second vote be the short term.

TAVARES: The trouble is that those of us, in the short time we had, who looked this matter up, looked up different parts of the same question. I called Deputy Attorney General Watanabe to look the matter up, and he came back with a statement that there seemed to be on the one hand some provision that the legislatures of the states should fix the time of election of senators. But we were shown books by the Legislative Reference Bureau, a little later, which said that upon the initial election, the Senate determines it by lot. That's as much as we were able to get from the authorities and since it's not too clear, we just leave it that way. Apparently it has been done by lot in the United States Senate and it will take a lot of research for us to go through all the authorities to see if the state legislature actually can do that. So if we leave it that way, apparently, it has been done and will be done.

ROBERTS: I have no objection to having it done by lot.

KING: It might be pointed out that when we come into the Union of the states, it will be the first state to be admitted to the Union since the popular election of senators. Heretofore, every state had been admitted to the Union, then the new state legislature has elected the senators and has more or less designated which one shall be for the long term or the short term. So we'll be the first state that has come in since the popular election of senators and it leaves us at a little bit of a loss how to designate who shall have the long term or the short term. It does seem a simpler solution to leave it to the United States Senate to decide it by lot. We will elect two senators and they'll go there and draw lots. One will get six years, the other will get two years.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to adopt Committee Proposal No. 25 as amended, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

If there is no objection, we will now consider Committee Proposal No. 23. Recollection of the Chair is that --

SHIMAMURA: May I move to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 23.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we reconsider our action on Committee Proposal No. 23.

ASHFORD: We were told that a new version of the printing was to be issued. Has that been done?

CHAIRMAN: That is right. There are four pages to that new amended form. The wrong one has three pages.

CROSSLEY: One Proposal No. 23 of mine reads "Proposed amendments to Committee Proposal No. 23." The other reads, "Amend Committee Proposal No. 23 to read as follows."

CHAIRMAN: The latter is the correct form.

WIRTZ: Which one?

CHAIRMAN: The latter.

CROSSLEY: The one that is titled, "Amend Committee Proposal No. 23 to read as follows"?

CHAIRMAN: That's right and there are four pages in it. The other has three pages. Do we all have that? The question before the committee is to reconsider our action on Committee Proposal No. 23. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: I move to adopt Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 23.

J. TRASK: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we adopt Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 23.

SHIMAMURA: This is identical with the Section 1 as originally proposed.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

SHIMAMURA: At this time I move to adopt Sections 2 to 10 inclusive of Committee Proposal No. 23.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we adopt Sections 2 to Section 10 inclusive of Committee Proposal No. 23.

ROBERTS: I think we ought to go through this thing paragraph by -- section by section, so that we can read it.

TAVARES: May I explain in seconding that motion, that we have compressed Sections 2 to 10 into the next section of the proposed amendment and that's why we are doing it. We think we've covered them all.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

ASHFORD: I don't know whether the chairman of the committee wants to move this amendment. I know that he felt that the expanded Sections 2 to 10 were a more satisfactory method of dealing with subject. But I believe that he is now satisfied that they are all covered by Section 2, particularly if this committee report so declares when it is filed. I, therefore, move the amendment of Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 23 to read in the form submitted to the delegates on their desks.

SECTION 2. All laws in force at the time this Constitution takes effect and not inconsistent or incongruous therewith, including, among others, acts of the Congress relating to the lands in the possession, use and control of the Territory of Hawaii, shall be the laws of the State and remain in force, mutatis mutandis, until they expire by their own limitations, or are altered or repealed by the legislature.

Except as otherwise provided by this Constitution, all existing writs, actions, suits, proceedings, civil or criminal liabilities, prosecutions, judgments, sentences, orders, decrees, appeals, causes of action, contracts, claims, demands, title and rights shall continue unaffected notwithstanding the taking effect of this Constitution, except that the State shall be the legal successor to the Territory of Hawaii in respect thereof, and may be maintained, enforced or prosecuted, as the case may be, before the appropriate or corresponding tribunals or agencies of or under the State or of the United States, in the name of the State, political subdivision, person or other party entitled to do so, in all respects as fully as could have been done prior to the taking effect of this Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to the motion?

ASHFORD: The amendment should be to substitute Section 2 as appears on the desks of the members of the Committee of the Whole for Sections 2 to 10 of the original committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to that?

WOOLAWAY: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend Sections 2 to 10 inclusive by substituting for those sections the Section 2 in the form circulated. Is there any discussion on this?

SHIMAMURA: I should like to add a word to what Miss Ashford has said. The committee felt that Sections 2 to 10 as originally proposed covered adequately, fully and sufficiently the subject matters of those sections. I personally feel that the amendment has merely one merit, one improvement, and that is that it's been abbreviated and considerably. But I feel that it has been overly abridged and overly abbreviated with the result that certain sections of it are ambiguous and uncertain. But as Delegate Ashford has stated, if it is the sense of this committee that it be incorporated in this report, that Sections 2 to 10 are identical as originally proposed in meaning, I have no objection. I may add that the subcommittee that worked on this matter did not attempt to add one matter more than was originally incorporated in Proposal No. 25 [sic]. It was only attempted to assimilate the original sections proposed into this Section 2.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

ASHFORD: May I ask that there be included in the report of this committee the conclusion of the committee that Sections 2 to 10 are fully covered by Section 2 as now adopted.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no objection, suggestion will be incorporated in the committee report.

WIRTZ: I'd like to amend that suggestion, "among other things that Sections 2 to 10 are included," because I think the objection originally raised was that we wanted a bigger bread basket.

CHAIRMAN: Committee report will so include.

SHIMAMURA: I move to amend, rather I move to adopt Section 11 of Committee Proposal No. 23.

DELEGATE: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 11 of Committee Proposal No. 23.

SHIMAMURA: I move that Section 11 be amended in the form it appears as Section 3 in the amendments to Committee Proposal No. 23 as circulated.

SECTION 3. Except as otherwise provided by this Constitution, all executive officers of the Territory of Hawaii or any political subdivision thereof and all judicial officers who may be in office at the time of the admission of this State into the Union shall continue to exercise and discharge the powers and duties of their respective offices until their successors shall have qualified in accordance with this Constitution or the laws enacted pursuant thereto.

DOWSON: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 11 of Committee Proposal No. 23 be amended in the form in which it appears in Section 3 of the form circulated. Any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: Section 3 in amended form does not change the substance of Section 11, but merely incorporates the same matter in somewhat different language.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to amend Section 11 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

CROSSLEY: I move the adoption of Section 11 as amended.

YAMAMOTO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 11 be adopted as amended.

ANTHONY: Shouldn't that be, Section 11 be renumbered Section 3 and as renumbered and amended be adopted?

CROSSLEY: Correct.

CHAIRMAN: Correct. The Chair stands corrected. All those in favor of the motion, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

SHIMAMURA: At this time I move for the adoption of Section 12 of Proposal No. 23.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 12 of Committee Proposal No. 23 be adopted.

SHIMAMURA: It is the feeling of the members who worked on this matter that Section 12 should be deleted, adequate provision having been made in Section 2 as amended. Therefore, I move for the deletion of Section 12.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

BRYAN: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 12 be deleted. All those in favor of the motion to delete Section 12, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 13 of Committee Proposal No. 23.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 13 of Committee Proposal No. 23 be adopted.

ROBERTS: I have an amendment to propose to Section 13.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, would you - - Are you rising to a point of order, President King?

KING: Yes. I'd like to ask if the chairman has an amendment first to the section - - proposed section.

CHAIRMAN: That's what the Chair intended to ask the - -

ROBERTS: As far as I know there has been - - is no amendment by the committee.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts, would you hold your amendment off for a few minutes until we hear from Delegate Shimamura?

ROBERTS: I'll hold it.

SHIMAMURA: There is no amendment to Section 13.

ROBERTS: That was my thought.

ANTHONY: I move that it be deleted.

ROBERTS: I rose and I was recognized by the Chair. I yielded for a question. I believe that the motion to delete is out of order until I've put my amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct. Delegate Roberts has the floor.

ROBERTS: Section 13 provides for the appointment of a commission dealing with revision of existing laws to conform with the Constitution which we adopt. At the time this section previously came up, I moved that at least one of the individuals appointed to that commission should be a layman. It was suggested on the floor, it would more properly be put in the form that no more than four attorneys shall be appointed to that revision commission. I will, therefore, move that no more than four attorneys be on that revision commission of five.

SILVA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend Section 13 by inserting this sentence, that no more than four attorneys be on the commission.

WIRTZ: I have a question to ask the movant. Simply this. Was this amendment proposed to the committee that was appointed by the Chair to consider the question of these proposals?

CHAIRMAN: Did you hear the question, Delegate Roberts?

ROBERTS: I don't think I'm in a position to answer it. I know that there was no change proposed by the subcommittee.

WIRTZ: As I understood it, the chairman of this committee asked everybody who was interested to attend the meeting of the subcommittee of Committee of the Whole that was appointed by the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: That is right.

WIRTZ: I'm simply asking the question whether this amendment was proposed and considered by this subcommittee that met all day long in Room No. 2.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Shimamura, could you?

SHIMAMURA: The answer is no.

ROBERTS: May I speak to that? I noted in that question an implication of criticism. It may well be that the speaker of the amendment has been negligent in his duty. I understood the function of this subcommittee was to try to bring together the many sections which could be combined. I did not think it was the intention of setting up that committee to have the movers of amendments to go in there to put them in. I thought the amendments were perfectly proper on the floor. This is not a question of drafting, it's not a matter of style, it's a matter of substance and I believe the amendment is perfectly proper here.

ANTHONY: This whole thing was a matter of substance and we worked on it now for about six or seven hours. I'd like to move an amendment to Delegate Roberts' motion that no lawyers be on this committee.

ROBERTS: I think that amendment is out of place.

CHAIRMAN: There is no second to the amendment.

TAVARES: I was the strongest supporter of this section and I believe I was the one responsible for getting it in originally. It was shown to me in the committee, informal committee, that since we were providing for a mandatory special session to be called immediately after we became a State, the legislature could act very soon. It would take several years for the commission to act anyhow. Therefore, I agreed that I would withdraw my support of the entire section and agree to it going out entirely. That's why the motion is going to be made to delete it, leave it to the legislature.

ROBERTS: I believe that the commission is still in order. No special session of the legislature which meets ten days after is going to be in a position to revise and to amend all of the laws to conform to the Constitution. A commission is needed and desirable. I'm not speaking against that. I think it ought to be done. The only point I make is that laws are written for people, not for lawyers. It seems to me that it is perfectly proper that the people who are governed by these laws understand them; and in order to understand them, it seems to me that layman ought to know and ought to have some understanding of them and ought to see to it that the people understand them as well.

HEEN: Mr. Chairman. It seems to me that - -

ROBERTS: Mr. Chairman, I haven't finished.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts has the floor.

KING: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts has the floor.

ROBERTS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
I believe that the point has very well been presented that lawyers serve a useful function, most of the time. I believe that lawyers have a tremendous amount to contribute to the orderly function of government. But there is one responsibility which it seems to me they are short of, and that is a realization that the operation of laws and their proper functioning depends on a full and complete understanding by people, normal people, by people who are not generally accustomed to dealing with detailed and complicated statutes. It seems to me that lawyers ought to welcome the opportunity to work with laymen and to see to it that the laws are properly understood and sold to the people. I am at a loss to understand the attitude of some attorneys that the laws belong to them. These aren't their laws. They are laws belonging to people and governing them. It seems to me that they ought to welcome the opportunity to have some laymen serve with them, though the task may be extremely difficult and perhaps undesirable from the point of view of a layman.

BRYAN: I'd like to ask several points of information. One is, did the Chair rule that amendment of the present motion made by Dr. Roberts, to the effect that the section be deleted, would be out of order?

CHAIRMAN: No, I think that is in order.

BRYAN: I feel that if the motion to delete carried, the present discussion regarding lawyers and laymen would be more or less academic. Therefore, I move that we delete the section or I amend the motion to read that we delete the section.

DELEGATE: I'll second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we delete Section 13.

NIELSEN: If we vote to delete this, does this mean that we're putting a rubber stamp on everything that happened in that special committee this afternoon? We can't make amendments from the floor?

TAVARES: Not to prolong this, the point is, I was responsible for getting this thing in the article, and it was pointed out to me that two things can happen. Either the territorial legislature, if it gets a chance to meet before we become a state, can pass a law creating such a commission, which will then be some use and be able to do some work beforehand; or if the legislature doesn't get to meet and do that, the territorial legislature, then we are not saving much time if we wait till the State legislature does it because it will take about two years to do this job, and the State legislature meeting at the first session will only set up a commission. That's the point I make, and the commission will still have to work for two years. Now if we could in this Constitution, before we become a state, mandate such a commission, I'd still be for it because then the commission could get to work right away and start working now and by the time we become a state have something to offer to the State legislature. But since we can't do that, I think we might as well leave it to the legislature and, therefore, I agreed to the deletion.

KING: I wanted to call attention to the fact that Delegate Roberts' amendment was quite in order. Section 13 was before the Convention. No motion to delete had been made. There is no proposed amendment stated in this four page sheet of amendment, so I think that Delegate Roberts had every right and the Chair ruled correctly to recognize his amendment. Now the motion to delete is going to be made. Perhaps we should vote on that first. Nevertheless, if the motion to delete fails, then I certainly would like to support Delegate Roberts' motion. When this was pending originally, our Proposal No. 23, Delegate Roberts made that point and his amendment was discussed on the floor, then the motion to defer action was accepted. So that his proposed amendment is certainly in order unless it's superseded by a motion to delete.

I would, however, like to call attention to one more fact. We have pending, perhaps in the very next legislature, another commission to revise the laws. Our present Revised Laws of the Territory of Hawaii are dated 1945. If I recollect correctly, they are revised every five years. Is that correct? May I ask one of these attorneys. Every ten years? Well then, that point doesn't pertain. But, in any case, certainly if the motion to delete fails, the motion offered by Delegate Roberts is in order.

WIRTZ: I don't want anybody to construe my question or my remarks as intending to rule Delegate Roberts out of order nor to carry the implication that this is a rubber stamp Convention. I address the question solely on this premise, that in an effort to save time this special committee was formulated and sat and worked all day long, and that was the only reason I asked the question whether that amendment had been suggested to this committee for their consideration.

WOOLAWAY: There are two motions before the assembly. One is to amend, the other is to delete, and I'm rising on a point of information. Does the motion to delete carry precedence over motion to amend?

CHAIRMAN: The motion to delete will be put first.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak in opposition to the amendment to delete. It seems to me that the purpose of this section when originally introduced, regardless of who introduced it, that the purpose of this section is still valid, and I believe that it ought to remain in the Constitution. If we make no provision for a commission to examine carefully over a period of a number of years existing laws and assuring that those existing laws are examined in the light of the Constitution, it seems to me that we will have an opportunity to permit piecemeal modification and amendment and changes of the law without careful consideration and study by individuals who are assigned the specific job of dealing with the revision of the laws. There is no indication that the legislature, when they meet, will create such a commission. Constitutions that have been adopted recently have very carefully made reference to such action and have assured that the laws would be integrated with the amendments or revisions of specific constitutions. The section, it seems to me, has a very definite place in our Constitution, and I, therefore, urge the delegates to vote against the amendment to delete.

ANTHONY: Delegate Roberts, speaking as to what there is indication of the legislature doing, apparently doesn't realize that the legislature had continuously appointed just such commissions. This is a piece of statutory matter pure and simple. It has no place in the Constitution.

CHAIRMAN: Ready for the question? The motion is to delete Section 13. All those in favor of the motion to delete please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: I move at this time to add a new Section 4 to Committee Proposal No. 23, as circulated.

> SECTION 4. All acts of the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii authorizing the issuance of general obligation bonds by the Territory of Hawaii or its political subdivisions are hereby approved, subject however to amendment or repeal by the legislature, and such bonds may be issued by the State and its political subdivisions pursuant to said acts. Whenever in said acts the approval of the President or of the Congress is required, the approval of the governor shall suffice.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend Committee Proposal No. 23, by adding Section 4, in the form circulated. Is there any discussion?

TAVARES: I am sorry that after having worked with the committee and been responsible for inserting the words "general obligation" in lines two and three, I have now lost heart and believe that it was a mistake, and we ought to take the words "general obligation" out because it casts an implied doubt on other bond acts that are not general obligation bonds. It's been pointed out to me that it might cast doubt on our revenue bond acts, and therefore, I move to delete the words "general obligation" in lines two and three, with apologies to the other members of this committee.

SHIMAMURA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to further amend Section 4 by deleting the words "general obligation" in lines two and three of Section 4. Is there any further discussion?

SHIMAMURA: May I just briefly point out that this Section 4 substantially incorporates the suggested alternative, amendment 14, which was previously circulated.

BRYAN: I think if the chairman of the committee would accept this amendment, we wouldn't have to vote on it.

CHAIRMAN: Would the chairman of the committee accept the amendment made by Delegate Tavares?

SHIMAMURA: I do.

CHAIRMAN: If that is the case, there is only one amendment before us. That is Section 4. Are you ready for the question? New Section 4. Ready for the question? All those in favor of amending Committee Proposal No. 23 by adding a new Section 4 in the form circulated, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: I now move that a new Section 5 be added to Proposal No. 23, and I so move.

SECTION 5. Unless otherwise provided by law, the lieutenant governor shall exercise and discharge the powers and duties of the secretary of the Territory of Hawaii.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 23 be amended by adding a new Section 5 in the form circulated. Are you ready -- Is there any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: This section was inserted to take care of the situation where in our Constitution for the State of Hawaii, we have provided for a lieutenant governor, but have not provided for his functions or his duties or powers; whereas, in our present territorial form of government, we have a secretary of state, so called.

HOLROYDE: I have a question of the committee. Doesn't this Section 5, if adopted, make the second paragraph of Section 5 in No. 25 unnecessary? No?

SHIMAMURA: I didn't quite hear the last statement.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Holroyde.

HOLROYDE: O.K., never mind.

FUKUSHIMA: Why is that the secretary of the Territory of Hawaii?

SHIMAMURA: At present, we have a Secretary of Hawaii who is equivalent to the lieutenant governor in the mainland states, in several states that have the lieutenant governor; for example, in Massachusetts. Now, as I said, there is no provision made in our Constitution as to the powers, duties and functions of the lieutenant governor.

WIRTZ: A question of the movant. Does the scope of the duties of secretary of the Territory of Hawaii include being president of the Senate?

SHIMAMURA: No.

HEEN: As you know, under the provisions relating to the first election, that first election will take place before Hawaii becomes a state. The secretary of the territory had various duties in connection with elections. Therefore, someone will have to perform that duty.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Bryan, did you care to speak?

BRYAN: I'd like to make a note. Perhaps the Style Committee can take care of it. I think it should read, "the powers and the duties heretofore delegated to the secretary of the Territory."

SHIMAMURA: I'm sorry, I didn't quite get that.

BRYAN: Under the Constitution, there will be no secretary, and no duties of the Territory of Hawaii.

FUKUSHIMA: I was made to understand earlier in the evening that all the elections would be held together. The governor's election, the legislators' elections, and also the United States representatives and senators. I think it's all twisted around as it appears now.

SHIMAMURA: I didn't quite hear the last speaker's remarks, but I said, our Constitution provides for a lieutenant governor and not for a secretary of state. We have not defined anywhere in our Constitution, State Constitution, the duties and the powers and functions of lieutenant governor, whereas we now have a secretary of the Territory of Hawaii with certain defined powers and functions.

FUKUSHIMA: I understand that. The article on executive powers and functions states that the lieutenant governor shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law. Now this Section 5, as I get it, is merely to take care of the first election, certification of the first election, does it not?

ASHFORD: I think the purpose of Section 5 is not to take care of the first election solely. That has been taken care of in earlier matters. That is, the first election is handled by the secretary of the territory, but the certification of the election of the senators and representatives are to be by the newly elected governor and secretary of state, and as we have no secretary of state, the lieutenant governor is made ex officio secretary of state. But this provision is to transfer those duties and functions which now exist in the secretary of the territory, the largest, the most important of which, in my opinion, are those of caring for the elections. In other words, if this transfer were not made, if we became a state, and before those functions were committed to the lieutenant governor, if they were not so committed here, and we had for any reason to have an immediate special election, there would be nobody to look after it.

FUKUSHIMA: If what the delegate just said is the intent of Section 5, I believe it's a proper section.

ANTHONY: Well, if Delegate Fukushima will look at Committee Print 23, seventh line, I think he'll find his answer.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

GILLILAND: When Hawaii becomes a state, we won't have any more Territory of Hawaii or secretary of the territory, so reading this Section 5, I take it, reads as if we shall also have a secretary of the Territory of Hawaii and a lieutenant governor at the same time.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Gilliland, that is the very point Delegate Bryan just spoke to.

BRYAN: I spoke to the chairman of the committee a minute ago, and he says that he believes that can be taken care of in the Committee on Style.

ASHFORD: I think so. I think, for instance, if the language were used, "shall succeed to the powers and duties," it would be taken care of.

TAVARES: May I add a further explanation? As I see it, this provision, "unless otherwise provided by law," was purposely made very broad so that even before we become a state, if the territorial legislature sees fit to pass a law saying that the duties of the secretary of the territory shall be exercised by some other officer than the lieutenant governor when we become a state, that will then supersede this provision. But if they don't do that, we have no provision in the Constitution to take care of the secretary's duties, then this will take care of it. But the legislature before we become a state, or the state legislature afterwards, can change it to allow the lieutenant governor -- I mean to allow somebody other than the lieutenant governor to perform those duties. In the meantime, however, to be dead sure that the certification to Congress, and so forth, of elections will be carried out, we have another provision, which we've already approved, that for the purpose of certifying those elections, the lieutenant governor shall be deemed secretary of state. So we've covered two different things there.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

GILLILAND: This is double talk. Why should we have it in the Constitution?

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to amend Committee Proposal No. 23 by adding new Section 5 in the form in which it was circulated, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: At this time, I move to amend Committee Proposal No. 23 by adding a new section numbered 6, thereto.

SECTION 6. The legislature shall within three years from the time the first legislature convenes, allocate and group the executive and administrative offices, departments and instrumentalities of the State government and their respective functions, powers and duties, among and within the principal departments pursuant to Article

If such allocation and grouping shall not have been completed within such period, the governor, within one year thereafter, by executive order, shall make such allocation and grouping.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend Committee Proposal No. 23 by adding a new Section 6 in the form in which it was circulated. Any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: This section substantially follows the proposed amendment to this proposal numbered 16, which was circulated to the delegates on July 10, day before yesterday. This section provides for the consolidation, grouping and allocation of departments, which was discussed at the time the matter of the, I believe, either the executive powers or the legislative article, the executive powers and functions, yes, was discussed.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Committee Proposal No. 23 by adding a new Section 6 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: I move to amend the Committee Proposal No. 23 by adding thereto a new section numbered 7.

SECTION 7. Requirements as to residence, citizenship or other status or qualifications in or under the authority of the State prescribed by this Constitution shall be satisfied pro tanto by corresponding residence, citizenship or other status or qualifications in or under the authority of the Territory.

DELEGATE: Second the motion.

TAVARES: Before we go into that, I think - - may I ask unanimous consent. The Committee of the Whole report should show that notwithstanding, in case the legislature slips up on some of this apportioning under Section 6 within the three year period and the governor does make the apportionment, notwithstanding that, the legislature of course, can always change it. That's understood. We agreed in the committee that that was implied under the legislative powers.

CHAIRMAN: If there is no objection, the statement or the suggestion made by Delegate Tavares will be inserted in the Committee of the Whole report.

BRYAN: May I also ask the unanimous consent to ask one question on that section which was passed. These sections which go in under schedule or ordinance, can the legislature amend them?

CHAIRMAN: Will somebody please answer the question? Delegate Ashford.

ASHFORD: I think the answer is clearly no, but this is, for example, this is not a - - this requires certain things to be done, but after they are done, there is nothing to prevent the legislature, for example, to make a reallocation, but it must be, as I see it, within that number of departments which is required by the Constitution.

SHIMAMURA: This Section 7 provides that wherever there is any residence requirement or requirement of citizenship or any other qualification for office or otherwise, that the period during which the candidate or the person was residing in the Territory of Hawaii shall be tacked on to the period required under the statute for residence, etc.

TAVARES: For further purposes of the record, this would include, for instance, such provisions as that in order to be appointed a judge, a person must be admitted to the bar of the State for say either five or ten years, I forget which. Now that would mean, under this, that would be a status, and the status under the territory of having been admitted to the bar for say six years could be added to four years more under the state; or if you have ten years under the territory already, why it would count as admission to the bar of the State - - supreme court for that period. That would be included among other things under this section.

CHAIRMAN: You ready for the question?

ASHFORD: May I say something that I think should go into the report on this section? This starts out very simply, and was drafted and redrafted to meet the intent of the committee and what we felt would be the intent of the Committee of the Whole. It is directed primarily to time; that is, time of residence, time of status and time of citizenship required as qualification. The Style Committee may be redrafting it to emphasize that element of time and I think the element of time might well be mentioned in the report.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question?

BRYAN: One more bugaboo. Shouldn't that also carry the words "until otherwise provided by the legislature," then?

ASHFORD: No, I think not, because, for example, we have fixed certain requirements under the Constitution. The classic example, of course, is the period of ten years membership of the bar. Now the legislature can't change that. But if it referred only to membership of the bar of the State, we couldn't have any judges.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Committee Proposal No. 23 by adding a new Section 7, the form in which it was circulated, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: I move to amend Committee Proposal No. 23 by adding thereto a new section, Section 8.

SECTION 8. Until the legislature shall otherwise provide under Article ____ of this Constitution, the chief justice, justices of the supreme court and judges of the circuit courts shall receive as compensation for their services the sums of $17,500, $17,000 and $15,000 per annum, respectively.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 23 be amended by adding a new Section 8 in the form in which it was circulated. Is there any discussion?

ANTHONY: This is a section that is absolutely necessary to incorporate in the schedule for this reason. If we didn't have this in the schedule, if we did not fix the salaries of judges in the judiciary articles, and if we did not have this in the schedule, our judges would not get paid for the simple reason that their salaries come from appropriations from the federal government, like the salary of the governor and the salary of the secretary of the territory. The only thing that is contributed to the salary is something like $250 a month. So it is absolutely essential that we have this in the schedule to preserve the salaries of our judges.

I invite the body's attention to the fact that it is wholly within the legislative discretion to alter or amend the amount of the compensation when the legislature meets.

NIELSEN: I'd like to ask a question. Why those salaries? Are those the present salaries of the judges in the different courts?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Anthony, will you please answer the question?

ANTHONY: What was that question again?

NIELSEN: Are the salaries mentioned in Section 8 the present salaries of these different justices?

ANTHONY: No, it is not.

NIELSEN: How much smaller are they?

ANTHONY: They are larger.

NIELSEN: How much larger then?

ANTHONY: The present salary of the chief justice is $12,500, and the present salary of circuit judges is $10,000.

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Just a second, Mr. Tavares. Are you through, Delegate Nielsen?

ANTHONY: Twenty-five hundred of that is contributed out of the territorial funds; $10,500 of the chief justice's salary is payable by act of Congress. Now what happened is this. When there was a general increase in judicial salaries by the Congress of the United States—in which the justices of the Supreme Court of the United States got $25,000; justices of the Circuit Courts of Appeals, $17,500; and judges of the Federal District Courts, that is the trial courts, got $15,000—our own judges were completely left out in the cold. In other words, they took in the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, I believe, but left out Hawaii. This will simply bring us, more or less, on a parity with the federal system.

NIELSEN: One other question. If we set these salaries, can the first session of the legislature change them? I understand these judges, some of them are elected for eight years.

ANTHONY: They can't increase or decrease the particular judges that are appointed, but the legislature after the term, of course, can change the salaries of the judges.

NIELSEN: But if they are in for a term of eight years, then it would be eight years before the legislature could change the salary here.

ANTHONY: Six and seven.

NIELSEN: Six and seven. They will be - -

ASHFORD: May I answer that question?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

ASHFORD: I don't think that that is quite a correct statement. I think the first legislature could fix those salaries at anything they wanted to, they could fix them at $8,000 a year if they wanted to, but that $8,000 fixing would not apply to the judges who had been appointed by the first governor before the legislature passed such legislation. If one of those justices or judges resigned, that act fixing a salary would instantly apply to his successor.

FUKUSHIMA: I believe the statement made by Delegate Anthony is partly correct. I believe that circuit judges in the outlying islands get a little less, don't they?

TAVARES: Yes, I think they get only $7,000 or at least it's something like that. It's less than the circuit judges in the first circuit.

FUKUSHIMA: In line with that, I have an amendment to offer which reads:

> Until the legislature shall otherwise provide, the chief justice, justices of the supreme court, circuit judges of the first judicial circuits, and circuit judges of other judicial circuits shall receive as compensation for their services the sums of $17,500, $17,000, $15,000, and $12,500 per annum respectively.

I move the adoption of the amendment.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend Section 8. Could you please read that amendment over, Delegate Fukushima, slowly?

FUKUSHIMA:

> Until the legislature shall otherwise provide, the chief justice, justices of the supreme court, circuit judges of the first judicial circuits, and circuit judges of other judicial circuits shall receive as compensation for their services the sums of $17,500, $17,000, $15,000, and $12,500 per annum respectively.

CROSSLEY: Will the last speaker yield for a question.

CHAIRMAN: Will you state your question?

CROSSLEY: Does that amendment mean that the circuit judges on the outside islands, the neighbor islands, would get the lower figure? Is that what the amendment is?

FUKUSHIMA: That is the amendment; that is the intent of the amendment.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to speak to the amendment. I'm opposed to that amendment because the qualifications for office still remain the same regardless of whether he serves on a neighbor island or here, and I think that it's pure discrimination against the judges on the neighbor islands, and I'd be against the amendment.

ASHFORD: I would like to speak against the amendment because of what has seemed to me a gross and growing injustice. I think all of us, particularly all of us who are members of the bar, have observed how often the judges either of the supreme court or of the first circuit bench are absent from the bench by reason of illness, by reason of vacancy or some other reason. And what happens? The judges from the other circuits are summoned away from their homes to live in Honolulu and do the work of those first circuit judges or the supreme court judges for a pay that is less than the circuit judges here. Now I think all of us who know the judges of the other islands know how often they have been imposed upon in the last two or three years particularly.

SILVA: I'd like to point this out to Fukushima who probably does not realize that in Oahu we've got more than one circuit court judge. If it was true that Oahu would have just one circuit court judge as compared with the outside islands, then I'd probably say maybe the circuit court judge down here does a little more work. But they have about five or six circuit court judges on Oahu as compared with the outside islands of one judge apiece. Now, I've seen the reports—the reports come before the legislature—and I can assure you that the circuit judge of the circuit of the County of Hawaii, known as the third circuit, does about twice as much work as the individual judge in Honolulu does, and I say it is unfair. I think that in all probability that the outside circuit judges should receive more compensation than those of Oahu for the work done.

TAVARES: Leaving aside the question of discrimination against the outer islands, let's look at it from a more realistic standpoint. Every circuit judge presides in cases meaning life and death to somebody, and you want the best man you can get to preside over cases that are going to help decide whether a man shall hang or not, and I say that a man who has that responsibility should be the best man you can get for the money, and I don't like to see you hold down the outer islands to a $12,000 man to put a man to death and pay $15,000 to a man in Honolulu to preside over the same kind of case. They may do more cases, but the responsibility is there.

Under this Constitution, as it is under our present laws, the outer island circuit judges can be assigned to duty on Oahu, and they are assigned to do that. They can be kept busy and made to earn every bit of their salary, and they are being made to do it now and have been in the past.

Under those circumstances, I think it most unfair, first, to the people who are going to come before those judges, to try to put inferior men in their place—and they haven't been inferior, thank God, in the past—but if you're going to make a discrimination like that, you have the implication that a man in the outer islands is not worth quite as much as a man in the first circuit; and, secondly, as I say, he's going to earn his money plenty.

Now let me show you the one -- reemphasize again the disparity between the federal salaries today and our salaries. In the courts of Alaska, the district court judges appointed by the President do the work of our circuit courts. They are not only federal courts, they do circuit court work, too, so they correspond to our circuit judges here, and they get 15,000 a year. Down here in Honolulu, these U.S. district court judges, and I mean no detriment to them, don't want to distract from them, who do the work for the United States that corresponds to the work our circuit courts do for the states, are getting 15,000 a year today. They are certainly not doing more important work than our supreme court. Our supreme court justices ought to be paid more than a U.S. district court judge, because our supreme court, after we become a state, is the court of last resort in murder cases of life and death, because from those cases you can only appeal to the United States Supreme Court if there is a federal question. Today, because we are a territory, you have an automatic appeal to the ninth circuit court and then a chance to get up to the United States Supreme Court from there, but, after we become a state, you will not appeal to the ninth circuit court of appeals, you will only go up to the United States Supreme Court if there is a federal question, and many, many of those cases do not involve federal questions. Therefore, as I say, the amount should be -- we shouldn't object to that amount. It should be higher than the federal district judges are receiving today.

AKAU: While comparisons may be odious, the judges and the lawyers consider themselves in a category up here. I'd like to say that the teachers who go to the rural section and go to the other islands are trained as well as our teachers who teach here in the city, and they receive the same salary, and that is a unique aspect of Honolulu and the Territory of Hawaii. Now I think that the same thing might prevail as far as the judges are concerned, although I know the lawyers are probably turning up their noses.

RICHARDS: I have a couple of suggestions here. This $17,500, $17,000, $15,000, the governor is only going to get $18,000. Now we just have listened to the last appeal for a man's life as being a judge. I am afraid that that is incorrect. The governor is the last appeal, and now there is only $500 difference. There is something here that stinks as far as I'm concerned, as far as this particular salary scale is concerned. If you want to put down this kind of a salary here, the governor should get $25,000 and the lieutenant governor $20,000, instead of 18 and 12.

FUKUSHIMA: I think that whether you hang by a judge who is getting paid $15,000 or 12,500 feels the same. I therefore at this time withdraw my amendment.

PORTEUS: Insofar as the compensation of judges is concerned, I don't believe that we have as yet correct information. My recollection is that under the Organic Act, the chief justice of the supreme court of the Territory of Hawaii is entitled to a salary of $10,500. I think the justices are entitled to salaries of $10,000. I think the judges of the circuit courts of this island are entitled to $7,500, and the judges of the circuit courts of the other islands are entitled to $7,000—$7,500 on this island and 7,000 on the other islands.

Now then, to go back to what the legislature has done. The legislature recognized that not sufficient compensation was being paid a number of officers, including the office of the governor, the judges, chief justice and the judges of the supreme court, the judges of the circuit courts, and the secretary. I think you will find, if you look at the Session Laws of 1945, that you will find that an act on page 358, the particular act being Act 261, Series E, 216, in subsection 3, it is provided that the treasurer of the Territory "is authorized and directed to pay to the several judges of the supreme court and to the several judges of the circuit courts ...upon warrants...the sum of $250 a month as additional compensation for their services." That makes a total of $3000 a year. Therefore, the chief justice of the supreme court of the Territory of Hawaii is entitled to $13,500, the other judges -- If the Organic Act provides for $10,500, and if the legislature provides for $250 a month, $250 a month according to my arithmetic is $3000 a year, and $3000 a year plus $10,500, in my arithmetic is $13,500 despite the gentleman from the fourth district who told me "no" and still shakes his head. Oh, he shook his head up and down now. Well, that's much better.

Now then, quite apart from the governor and his perquisites, which the attorney who arose seems much concerned about, I'd like to go on with my own speech, if I may. That is that I want to find out whether under this amendment, when I agree that a designation of compensation is fair enough, since the compensation is set by the Organic Act—I thought we continued the Organic Act until we're able to repeal or change some of the sections—but quite apart from that, there is the question of whether or not the judges will receive anything more than $250 a month when we become a state. Now that's a gap that should be filled in. I agree, but I do not agree that we should specify amounts in this schedule so that when the first state legislature meets, and the governor says "Senate, let us proceed with the appointment of the chief justice of the supreme court of the Territory and the justices of that court, and proceed with the appointment of justices of the circuit courts," that we then find, those that are in the legislature, that for the next six or seven years, depending on the term, that the legislature is powerless to decrease the compensation from $17,500 or $17,000. It's fair enough to write in to this schedule what the compensation will be until otherwise changed by the legislature, but it is not right to tie the hands of the legislature if you intend really to permit the legislature to fit or set a fair schedule of compensation.

Now, I want to know whether under this, as suggested, if the state legislature fails to pass a salary bill for judges before the judges are appointed, whether those judges then sit for the next six and seven years, receiving the compensation designated here, or do they get the compensation provided by law of the state legislature? If they are to get the compensation as designated here, then we had better know that fact and debate whether or not we wish to set for the first six or seven years compensation in the amounts as specified in this amendment. I think that we are entitled to an answer as to whether or not in that first six and seven years, the legislature has the right to change these amounts. If it has the right to change them, I think we could safely go ahead, but if it has not, I'm against this amendment.

TAVARES: In order to make that clear—I think that's reasonable—I move an amendment to Section 8 as proposed by adding - - by changing the period to a comma at the end thereof and adding the following words: "which may be initially increased or decreased by the legislature during the terms of office of the initial appointees to said office, notwithstanding the provisions of Article blank," meaning the judiciary article.

FONG: I'd like to make an amendment to the amendment proposed by Delegate Fukushima to read as follows - -

CHAIRMAN: The amendment made by Delegate Fukushima has been withdrawn, and the amendment proposed by Delegate Tavares has as yet not been seconded.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded - -

WOOLAWAY: May we have that amendment read again before we - -

CHAIRMAN: We would like to have Delegate Tavares' amendment stated clearly. Will you please read it slowly?

TAVARES: Change the period to a comma at the end of the section, and add thereafter the following words: "which may be initially increased or decreased"—it's been suggested I say "diminished." I will change that word "decreased" to "diminished" and read it again. "Which may be initially increased or diminished by the legislature during the terms of office of the initial appointees to said offices."

I understand Delegate Ashford has a suggestion. I'll yield to Delegate Ashford.

ASHFORD: My suggestion of the amendment is as follows: "which shall - -"

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: What is your point of order?

KAUHANE: A delegate behind here was trying to get recognized so that he could insert an amendment. The delegate just got through reading his amendment - -

CHAIRMAN: The Chair understands that - -

KAUHANE: - - and then he yielded his position to another delegate to fill in something.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair understands - -

KAUHANE: There is nothing before this house so that he can yield such a position.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair understands that Delegate Ashford is only attempting to perfect Delegate Tavares' amendment, and that Delegate Fong has an amendment which is different in substance from that proposed by Delegate Tavares. Therefore, I believe Delegate Ashford is in order.

KAUHANE: But, Mr. Chairman, I believe when you asked the delegate from the fourth district to restate his amendment, and that's what he was supposed to do, restate his amendment, which - -

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

KAUHANE: - - he did restate his amendments. Certainly a delegate who has asked recognition, was once recognized by you, and you in turn allow the delegate to read his amendment into the records here, which he has done, he certainly cannot yield a position to someone else.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will rule that some informality will be allowed.

ASHFORD: Mr. Chairman, have I the floor?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Ashford, will you please make your suggestion?

ASHFORD: I make - - This is the suggestion I make for the amendment: "which shall, notwithstanding the provisions of Article blank of this Constitution"—and that would be the article on judiciary permitting the increase or decrease of salary during term of office—"which shall, notwithstanding the provisions of Article blank of this Constitution, be subject to increase or diminution by the first session of the legislature of the State."

TAVARES: I accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: May we have it read slowly?

ASHFORD: Changing the period at the end of - - after "respectively" to a comma and adding the following words: "which shall, notwithstanding the provisions of Article blank of this Constitution, be subject to increase or decrease - - diminution"—but decrease is better—"subject to increase or decrease by the first session of the legislature of the State."

TAVARES: I second the amendment if that is - -

FONG: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: For purposes of clarity, the Chairman would restate the motion, then we'll recognize Delegate Fong. Will that be O. K?

FONG: It hasn't been seconded yet, has it?

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded - -

FONG: Has not been seconded.

CHAIRMAN: Has been seconded.

FONG: Under those circumstances, you will preclude me from making an amendment, won't you?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will allow - -

FONG: I rose specifically to intervene the second from jumping up.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair still will allow Delegate Fong to amend if he desires. Would you state the reasons why you made this point of order, in effect?

FONG: Due to the fact that if I were not recognized, judging from previous rulings, I would not be able to make an amendment to an amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Because of the peculiar situation we are in, the Chair, I think with the consent of the whole committee, will allow another amendment by Delegate Fong. If there is no other objection, Delegate Fong may make his amendment.

FONG: The amendment shall read as follows:

SECTION 8. Until the legislature shall otherwise provide under Article____of this Constitution, the chief justice, justices of the supreme court and judges of the circuit courts shall receive the same total compensation received by them on a date of the admission to statehood of the Territory of Hawaii.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to the motion?

KAUHANE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Now, Delegate Fong, will you restate your motion slowly?

FONG:

Until the legislature shall otherwise provide under Article____of this Constitution, the chief justice, justices of the supreme court and judges of the circuit courts shall receive the same total compensation received by them on a date of the admission to statehood of the Territory of Hawaii.

H. RICE: It seems to me that this is ridiculous. If we're going to -- This Constitution, if H.R. 49 passes, is going back to have the Congress review it, and here the people, it says in their own Constitution, they are satisfied with the salaries they are getting at the present time, even though we have tried to get our justices raised here in the Territory. To me, if we send something back, we want to show them that they haven't been paid adequately, and we should give them adequate -- we should write in the Constitution the adequate compensation for those judges.

ROBERTS: I'd like to speak in opposition to that amendment. It seems to me that the opportunity we have here to recognize that our justices do serve a very valuable function in the community, and we ought to get the best kind of justice and we ought to attract the best people to those jobs. One of the difficulties in most of the states has been that the justices have been underpaid, and we have not been able to get the best qualified and the most competent individuals to serve in our courts. I think we ought to recognize and pay them the best salaries that we can in terms of what we pay other officers and in terms of their function to the entire community. I therefore am opposed to the amendment.

SAKAKIHARA: I beg to differ with the delegate from the fifth district. I think in the past sessions of the legislature we petitioned to the Congress for an increase in the salaries of our judges, supreme court justices, and circuit court judges, including the compensation -- an increase in the compensation for the federal judges.

ANTHONY: There are two things, Mr. Chairman and members of the Convention, that are essential to a good judiciary. One is a correct system of appointment with decent tenure. We've got that. And the other is adequate compensation. Now for the last 10 or 15 years, we have been beating our brains out at the doors of Congress trying to get decent salaries for our judges, so that we can attract and keep the highest caliber of men on the bench. On one occasion, I was one of a committee of the bar that wrote a brief and submitted it to the 79th Congress, I think it was. We had a hearing. We pointed out in that brief that historically Hawaii, on the day we became a territory, had well-paid judges. [Part of statement not recorded.] . . . appointment of judges. They held office, incidentally, during good behavior. The chief justice at that time received $12,500. Immediately upon the enactment of the Hawaiian Organic Act, his salary was cut in half. Since then, throughout the country, throughout the federal system, the salaries have gradually been gotten up to where there is a decent salary for a judge, where a man is perfectly willing to forego the opportunities of private practice and seek a judicial career. But what have they done for our judges here in Hawaii? They have done nothing. As a matter of fact, gentlemen, it's a serious question, the validity of that $250 a month, because you have a federally paid officer, and I doubt very much the competence of the legislature to add or detract from the salary of a federally paid officer. There are differences of opinion about that, but that is a question. But nevertheless, here you have judges sitting over there in the Post Office Building getting $15,000 per annum, judges right across the street getting 10,000, 7500 as augmented by the territorial legislation.

Now I think that it is only fair, it is only just that we get this Constitution started off on the right foot. Let's make no discrimination between judges in the outside islands and the judges in Honolulu. Their duties are just as important. Let's give them decent salaries, and the legislature can thereafter do what it feels proper in the circumstances. The amendment that Delegate Fong is offering here will perpetuate the gross injustice that presently exists between your judges on the outside islands and the judges of the circuit courts in Honolulu, for which there is no rhyme or reason, and I say we ought to put an end to it right here.

RICHARDS: There seems to be some slight misunderstanding regarding my remarks of a few moments ago regarding the payment of judges. I am all in favor of seeing that they are adequately compensated, but I do not feel that the executive branch of the government should be discriminated against. I feel that this particular amendment does discriminate against the executive branch of the government because with a salary of 18,000 for the governor, 12,000 for the lieutenant governor, and your department heads are going to have to get less than your associate justices and your judges of the circuit courts, because of the way the laws work as far as the head of the department getting so much and getting so much on down. If this goes through, I'm perfectly willing to vote for it, but I want to see the executive department's salaries reconsidered.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Kauhane, did you --

ANTHONY: Will the last speaker --

KAUHANE: That's right --

ANTHONY: I wanted to explain something, Mr. Chairman, to the last speaker, if I may. I just want to --

CHAIRMAN: You'll be next recognized. Mr. Kauhane was asking for recognition for some time.

KAUHANE: I just want to bring a word of caution to this Convention, that it's the taxpayers who are going to carry the load in the increase of salaries. The salaries that they receive today could be well carried out until the first session of the legislature, and whenever the taxpayer, the common man, is able to meet the increase, then only can the legislature accord the judges the increases that are now being asked. If we are going to increase the judges' salary so that we may have qualified and capable men, inducing them because of the salaries to take the position of chief justice, then certainly the governor's salary should be increased, as mentioned by Delegate Richards, to the sum of $25,000 and your lieutenant governor to 20,000. So, too, we can have the best man run and seek office as governor of Hawaii. We have to consider the taxpayer who is going to carry the load.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will declare a recess of 10 minutes. The clerks are just worn out.

(RECESS)

WIRTZ: I'd like to have the Clerk note in the record that since discussion has begun on this section, Section 8, I have been off the floor; and I wish to further note that I do not wish to participate in the deliberations nor the vote and I ask leave of the Chair to leave the floor because of my peculiar situation in the matter.

CHAIRMAN: You are granted the leave you beg for. Delegate Lee, I believe was begging for recognition.

LEE: I wanted to raise the question, there were two amendments. Which one will the Chair put first?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong's amendment first.

LEE: I see. Well, I'd like to speak against the amendment. I believe that the proposal which sets out the salaries and provides the legislature with power to increase and decrease after their term of office is proper. I believe we've heard enough debate on the matter, and I believe we're ready to vote on the question. I might state that my reference to the legislature was during the term of the judge's appointment.

HEEN: The statement made by the last speaker as to change by way of increase or decrease after the term -- during their term of office is not correct.

LEE: It's absolutely correct. You can't change it during the term of their office.

HEEN: But under the amendment made by Delegate Tavares that may be changed by way of increase or decrease during their term of office.

LEE: At the first session.

HEEN: That's correct.

FONG: I understand Miss Ashford has a new amendment. Is that right, Miss Ashford?

ASHFORD: Yes, I was having it run off so it could be shown to the delegates. In this amendment, as a result of the suggestions from numbers of the delegates, the amount is slightly diminished and the amendment I suggested is also written in.

FONG: Under those circumstances, I withdraw my amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong's amendment has been withdrawn. Delegate Ashford, do I understand you wanted to modify your --

ASHFORD: Yes. May we have this deferred for a few minutes, Mr. Chairman, and go on to something else until this amendment comes in?

CHAIRMAN: Yes.

KING: The amendment being suggested by Delegate Ashford or the one that was already offered by her, and I think accepted by Delegate Tavares, had some language that would exempt this initial salary from ban on an increase or decrease. Delegate Ashford is having that typed and it has been suggested that included in that proposed amendment be a change in the salary rate from 17,500, 17,000 and 15,000 to 15,500, 15,000 and 12,500, and that would be a minimum to start off with. Then it would be up to the legislature to raise it if it seems desirable to do so.

TAVARES: Mr. Chairman.

KING: I haven't yielded the floor.

CHAIRMAN: President King has the floor.

TAVARES: Point of order, though. I did not accept that amendment and I do not accept it.

KING: I didn't say you had accepted the figures. I said you accepted the amendment suggested by Delegate Ashford with regard to the ban on raising or lowering the scale, and that additional amount has come in and Delegate Tavares can do as he pleases. But I'd like to suggest that we stick to a figure that's comparable to what is being paid now, or not in excess of what we have asked Congress to pay our territorial judges. No one seems to know exactly what the sum was that we asked Congress to pay our judges, but the assumption is that it was somewhere in the neighborhood of $15,000.

Now, the ratio between 17,500 and the governor's pay is too low, and at present the governor gets approximately $16,000 and the chief justice with territorial and federal pay combined gets, I believe, 15,000 or 15,500. The schedule in here leaves a ratio -- a difference of only $500 which seems a little bit as between the chief executive and the chief justice. It seems to me that the sum of 15,500, 15,000, and 12,500 as a minimum to start off with, with the legislature empowered to raise it if it sees fit to do so at its first session, might be more agreeable.

I'd like to call attention to the fact that we have argued this question already about three quarters of an hour, and the only thing is to bring it to a head and vote the lower figure or the upper figure and go on about our business.

HEEN: I would like to point out that the governor will receive not only $18,000, but he will receive perquisites in the way of a home, and about $5,000 a year tax-free money as allowance. As far as the lieutenant governor is concerned, he will receive $12,000, but he is only in office as a matter of decoration only.

ANTHONY: Delegate King said there has been an awful lot of debate on this. The first mention that I've heard of the sum of $15,000 was by himself, and I am opposed to it. Now what that's going to do is to perpetuate the inequality between federal judges and our territorial judges. There is no getting around it, the judges in the United States District Court for Hawaii do the same kind of work, they are trial judges, as the circuit judges. Therefore, our state circuit judges ought to get the same pay.

Moreover, the supreme court judges are of a higher grade in a hierarchy of the judiciary than the Federal District Court, so it is certainly reasonable and proper that they should get an increased salary over what the circuit judges get, over the $15,000, over what circuit and federal court judges get. I would like to invite the delegates' attention to the fact that justices in the Supreme Court of New Jersey get the sum of $24,000 per annum, and the governor of the State of New Jersey gets $20,000 per annum.

The governor's salary in Hawaii is only a minimum. It can be increased. The judges' salaries in Hawaii cannot be increased during their term in office. They cannot be diminished during their term in office, and what we're fixing here is the initial salary. Now let's get this thing off on the right foot. We've been trying to get our salary schedule fixed up for years. This is a chance to do it, and let's get started off right, and if the legislature wants to change it as soon as they meet, let them go ahead and do it.

RICHARDS: I think the last speaker made a slight misstatement. He said that the other salaries could be changed. The governor's salary cannot be increased or decreased during the first four years, as this Convention states. Therefore, the governor is frozen at 18, and the supreme court justice will be -- chief justice will be at 17,500, and the supreme court justices at 17. The justices of the supreme court will remain for six years or seven years, and the chief justice will remain for seven years, and the governor will remain for four years, regardless of what the previous speaker said. Now, if they wish to have the governor's salary a chance to up, the supreme court's salary a chance to up, I'll go along with it, but I do not feel that one branch of the government should be subservient to another.

KING: While the amendment is being printed, I'd like to reply to two points made by the two previous speakers before Delegate Richards. In the first place, the governor's perquisites exist now. The difference that I was pointing out was the differential between the governor and the chief justice today is about $3000, and they are now making it less, say $500. There is no argument about the perquisites. He's going to get those with the increase in pay as he gets now. The governor gets from the federal government 12,500 and from the territorial government -- [Inaudible statement made from the floor.] Not from the federal government? Well, he gets 15,000 from the federal government and a small sum from the territorial government, and the differential between the governor and the chief justice is even greater than I thought, so the argument of perquisites has no point in it.

Now, the other thing. I have no particular brief about this. I don't care if it's 17,500 or a larger sum or a lower sum, but there has been expressed a good deal of opposition to the larger sum, and I suggested this lower sum and recommended it to Miss Ashford to be incorporated in her amendment, giving the legislature the authority to raise or lower it in that first term, which the legislature will not have with regard to the governor. And if the legislature raises it, splendid. There's certainly no reason why I should protest it. The point is that if it goes in here now as 17,000, it's going to be frozen at that for seven years. That's the point.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state that the status of the question on Section 8 is presently the Tavares amendment. Delegate Ashford as yet has not offered any amendment. I believe a form is being circulated at this moment.

ASHFORD: I will offer the amendment that is being circulated at the present moment.

SECTION 8. Until the legislature shall otherwise provide, the chief justice, justices of the supreme court and judges of the circuit courts shall receive as compensation for their services the sums of $15,500, $15,000, and $12,500 per annum, respectively, which shall, notwithstanding the provisions of Section ___ of Article ___ of this Constitution, be subject to increase or decrease by the first session of the legislature of the State.

FONG: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Delegate Tavares' motion be amended in the form in which you find it in the Section 8 which is being circulated at this time.

ANTHONY: Point of order. What is before the house is Section 8 which fixes the salary of the chief justice at 17,500, associate justices at 17,000, and circuit judges at 15,000. To that has been made an amendment. Now I don't think it's proper for us to have any more amendments. Let's vote on Delegate Tavares' amendment, and then if that is carried, that will clear the parliamentary situation.

CHAIRMAN: The point is well taken.

SHIMAMURA: Point of order. This amendment incorporates Delegate Tavares' motion. Therefore, it is not an amendment on an amendment.

ANTHONY: Point of order. Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: The point Delegate Anthony just stated is well taken. Question will be first put as regards Delegate Tavares' amendment.

KING: Since Delegate Anthony is going to make a point of order, an amendment to an amendment has been accepted right along here. If Delegate Ashford doesn't want to sponsor this, I propose this as an amendment to Delegate Tavares' amendment. Let's vote on the lower figure first, and if that fails, then we can vote on the higher.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair understands and recalls that only Delegate Fong was given leave to put an amendment on an amendment on an amendment, and, therefore - -

KING: May I speak to that point of order? There's no necessity for our heat, I suppose. The only argument is whether the sum shall be 17,500, 17,000, 15,000; or 15,500, 15,000, and 12,500. Delegate Fong only withdrew his amendment to make way for this. Now, if this is not going to be accepted, then Delegate Fong's amendment is accepted as an amendment to Delegate Tavares' amendment. I ask Delegate Fong if that's not correct.

CROSSLEY: Would you please state the question on which we are voting. As I understand it, we're voting on a new section which is Section 8. That's not an amendment, that's a new section.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will again rule that we are voting on Delegate Tavares' motion to amend the previous amendment, which was Section 8 as circulated, and the amendment - - Delegate Tavares' amendment reads: "Until the legislature shall otherwise provide under Article blank of this Constitution, the chief justice, justices of the supreme court, and judges of the circuit courts shall receive as compensation for their services the sum of $17,500, $17,000 and $15,000 per annum respectively, which shall, notwithstanding the provisions of Article blank of this Constitution, be subject to increase or decrease by the first session of the legislature of the State." All those in favor of the motion - -

J. TRASK: It is my understanding that outside of the figures mentioned here, that Delegate Tavares had accepted the amendment stated by Delegate Ashford.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares - - The Chair would state Delegate Tavares had only accepted the suggestion made by Delegate Ashford to perfect his amendment.

TAVARES: That's correct, and my amendment was to an amendment already proposed by, as I understand it, Delegate Shimamura, and I simply added to it. My amendment was an addition, so my amendment is an amendment to the amendment, and this is a further amendment, proposed amendment to it.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Fong, did you want recognition?

FONG: I want to ask a point of information. Now if we vote on the Tavares amendment and that carries, does that preclude the amendment by Miss Ashford?

CHAIRMAN: Right.

FONG: I want a ruling on that before I vote.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will rule yes. If you do not agree with the sums stated, then vote no because the only difference between the Delegate Ashford's amendment and Delegate Tavares' amendment is the amounts.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to talk to that, please.

FONG: May I ask again that if the Tavares amendment carries, that will preclude amendment by Miss Ashford?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

FONG: Then, in order to get Miss Ashford's amendment on the floor, we'll have to vote against Mr. Tavares' amendment.

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

PORTEUS: I believe the situation is that Delegate Tavares has only offered an addition of words. I think his amendment is a good one. It is, "notwithstanding the provisions of Section blank of Article blank of this Constitution, be subject to increase or decrease by the first session of the legislature of the State." I think that is an amendment that is pending to an amendment. If we vote on that, that is eliminated. There will then only be an amended amendment before the house. There will be one amendment pending. In that case, I think it will be in order to make further amendments to the amendment.

KAUHANE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: It would appear that further amendments would be permissible and yet the Chair feels that the subject matter of the amounts would have been already passed on. Therefore, it will be out of order.

PORTEUS: Mr. Chairman, may I point out that Delegate Tavares' amendment does not set any change in amount; it only adds words.

FONG: Will Mr. Porteus yield?

PORTEUS: I do.

SHIMAMURA: In order to facilitate matters, I accept Delegate Tavares' amendment to allow Miss Ashford to move on hers if she wishes.

CHAIRMAN: That clears the deck. Delegate Ashford.

ASHFORD: I now offer the amendment to Section 8 that has been distributed and is on the desks of the delegates.

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to amend the amendment which was Section 8, in which Section 8 was amended to add to Committee Proposal No. 23. Roll call has been requested. How many of you are desirous of a roll call? More than ten "roll calls." We are voting on Delegate Ashford's amendment

SAKAKIHARA: I rise to a point of information. That amendment proposed by Delegate Ashford fixes the compensation for the supreme court, 15,500, 15,000 and 12,500 for circuit court judges?

CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

Ayes, 20. Noes, 31 (Akau, Anthony, Apoliona, Castro, Corbett, Crossley, Fukushima, Heen, Kage, Kawakami, Kellerman, Kometani, Lai, Larsen, Lee, Loper, Lyman, Okino, C. Rice, H. Rice, Roberts, Sakai, Serizawa, Shimamura, Silva, Smith, Tavares, J. Trask, White, Wist, Doi). Not voting, 12 (Absent: Arashiro, Hayes, Holroyde, Ihara, Kawahara, Luiz, Mau, Mizuha, Phillips, St. Sure, A. Trask. Excused from voting: Wirtz.)

CHAIRMAN: The amendment fails.
Are you ready for the question on the Tavares amendment? The motion is to amend the Committee Proposal No. 23 by adding a new Section 8, which Section 8 is as accepted by Delegate Shimamura.

H. RICE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: At this time, I move for the adoption of Section 14 of Proposal No. 23 - -

CROSSLEY: Second the motion.

SHIMAMURA: - - amended to be numbered Section 9.

SECTION 9. The provisions of this Constitution shall be self-executing to the fullest extent that their respective natures permit.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 14, Committee Proposal No. 23, amended to be Section 9.

SHIMAMURA: May I state briefly that the purpose of this section is to make the Constitution self-executing without the necessity of passing any enabling acts by the legislature. In other words, where there is doubt as to the effectiveness of any constitutional provision without any supplemental legislation, it is the expressed intent of this section that the Constitution shall be construed as being self-executing without an enabling or supplemental legislation.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries. Section 9 is adopted.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of Section 15 of Proposal No. 23, to be renumbered Section 10.

SECTION 10. This Constitution shall take effect and be in full force immediately upon the admission of Hawaii into the Union as a state.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to adopt Section 15 of Committee Proposal No. 23, to be renumbered Section 10. Is there any discussion?

SHIMAMURA: This section obviously provides for the effective date of the Constitution, and it is the date upon the admission of Hawaii to the Union as a state. Under H.R. 49 the State of Hawaii is admitted into the Union upon the issuance of a proclamation by the President of the United States after the election of all state officers.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion to adopt Section 10 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

SHIMAMURA: I move for the adoption of the entire Proposal No. 23 as amended.

DELEGATE: I second the motion.

CROSSLEY: May I amend that? The way it previously was, "and renumbered."

CHAIRMAN: Is that acceptable, Delegate Shimamura, "and renumbered"?

SHIMAMURA: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the committee adopt Committee Proposal No. 23 as amended and renumbered. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

J. TRASK: If there is no other business - -

CHAIRMAN: I believe not.

J. TRASK: I move that we rise - - the committee rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again.

CROSSLEY: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the committee rise, report progress and beg leave to sit again. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

JULY 14, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee please come to order? The Chair will now declare a recess of five minutes. We might be able to have committee reports circulated in the meantime.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee please come to order. It is now ten past twelve. I suppose - -

LEE: I move that we recess until 1:30.

SAKAKIHARA: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the Committee of the Whole recess till 1:30. All those in favor of the motion - - The motion now on the floor is to recess till 1:30. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the Convention - - rather, will the committee please come to order. The Convention resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole to consider Committee Reports 68, 70 and 73 and Committee Proposals 23, 24 and 25. You will find on your desks the Committee of the Whole Report No. 25 relating to Committee Report No. 68. You will find Committee of the Whole Report No. 26, Committee of the Whole Report No. 27 relating to Committee Report 70 and 73 respectively. Now what is the desire of the Convention - - committee, rather?

SAKAKIHARA: I move for the adoption of the committee report and pass on second reading.

H. RICE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: What committee report are you referring to?

SAKAKIHARA: Committee Report No. 25, Committee Report No. 26 respectively.

CHAIRMAN: And 27?

SAKAKIHARA: Twenty-seven.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee of the Whole Report Numbers 25, 26 and 27 be adopted and that it pass second reading.

ASHFORD: The reports have just been placed upon our desks and for reasons of which the Chair is aware, I think we should have the chance to read those reports before they are adopted. I therefore move for a brief recess.

SAKAKIHARA: Second it.

CROSSLEY: Before we take the recess could we amend the last motion to take these up—for reasons which you would appreciate—to take these up individually? I think there might be some changes in one or two and there is no use holding up those that are - - will go through. I'd like to amend the - -

CHAIRMAN: Is that acceptable to the movant?

SAKAKIHARA: I want to go home.

CROSSLEY: That we take them up individually? Thank you.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Sakakihara, would you care to rephrase your motion so that it will be to adopt Committee Report No. 25?

SAKAKIHARA: Will the chairman of the Committee on Submission rephrase it for me. I wasn't paying attention to his remarks.

CROSSLEY: I second Delegate Sakakihara's motion that we take up Committee Report No. 25 at this time.

TAVARES: I think it's in order to have the recess requested by Delegate Ashford. I think that's reasonable.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will declare a short recess of about five to ten minutes.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: When we recessed we had a motion before us, which motion was to the effect that we take up Committee of the Whole Report No. 25. Before we proceed any further with any discussion on this report, I would like to inform the delegates of one mistake in the proposal section of Committee of the Whole Report No. 25. The proposal section is numbered Committee Proposal No. 23. If you turn to page 3 of Committee Proposal No. 23, you will find in Section 6 that the first sentence should be deleted and that the sentence should read - - the sentence that follows that should read: "The legislature shall within three years from the time the first legislature convenes allocate and group the executive and administrative offices, departments and instrumentalities of the State government and their respective functions, powers and duties among and within the principal departments pursuant to Article _____ ." The "Section ____" is deleted.

TAVARES: May I explain that mistake. In preparing the report for this - - the draft for this report I felt - - I was assisting Delegate Doi and I felt that there was an omission in Section 6 which ought to be supplied and I intended to move to reconsider this at this time to insert that extra sentence and revise the section to read as it now reads by mistake in the printed proposal. Unfortunately, that was used as the final draft instead of what the Committee of the Whole had already approved. But to bring that to a head, I move to reconsider our action in order that I may present this amendment and have the consensus of the Convention as to whether it's needed or not.

NODA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we reconsider our motion on Committee Proposal No. 23.

TAVARES: Just Section 6, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: And particularly to Section 6. Is there any discussion on it? All those in favor of the motion to reconsider please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

TAVARES: I now move to amend Section 6 to read as set forth in the proposed amendment of Committee Proposal No. 23 which is being or has been just circulated.

> SECTION 6. The provisions of Section ____ of Article_____ shall not be mandatory until four years from the date of admission of this State to the Union. The legislature shall within three years from said date of admission allocate and group the executive and administrative offices, departments and instrumentalities of the State government and their respective functions, powers and duties, among and within the principal departments pursuant to said Section ____of Article____.
> If such allocation and grouping shall not have been completed within such period, the governor, within one year thereafter, by executive order, shall make such allocation and grouping.

NODA: I second the motion.

TAVARES: The reasons for that, I might state - -

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, just a second. It has been moved and seconded that Section 6 be amended to read as printed before correction. Delegate Tavares.

TAVARES: I now move to amend that section to read as set forth in the—is that it?—in the printed - -

CHAIRMAN: You have already made the motion and it was seconded.

TAVARES: I might explain to the members of the Convention, the attorneys are not all in agreement with me on the need for this. I'm just warning the delegates and I'm not going to argue too long. I just want to present the problem. The executive article in one of the sections—I think it's Section 6—provides that the various executive and administrative departments and instrumentalities of the government shall be grouped in 20 principal departments by law. Now, in the Committee of the Whole report on that article it was stated that the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law would make provision in a special section to give the legislature four years or to allow four years to comply with this article. Well, the Committee on Ordinances and Continuity of Law produced what was approved as Section 6 of Proposal 23 at our last meeting under the belief that it did comply with that Committee of the Whole report on the executive article. My own feeling is that it did not quite and that there is a hiatus there and that we should say - - we should add the first sentence which I proposed to add that this provision should not be mandatory until four years from the date of admission of this state to the Union.

Now, the difference I think is this. I was afraid that it might be contended that if the legislature didn't group those departments immediately there would be some sort of invalidity to some department that wasn't grouped in here. I don't know really what happens if the legislature doesn't do what it's supposed to do about grouping, whether the department becomes a nullity or just what happens. But at any rate, this would give us a clear four years to do it. Now other people contend that by saying the legislature, in this special section of the ordinances and continuity of law, that by saying that the legislature shall do it in three years and if they don't, then the governor shall do it in the last year, that we are taken care of by implication. If that is correct and we get a consensus vote on that I will withdraw my amendment. But I think it should get in the record.

WHITE: As a matter of information. This proposal that I have on page 3 and the amendment that has just been passed around, it seems to me are identical.

CHAIRMAN: That's right. The Chair, previous to the amendment, explained that the section -- there was an error in Section 6 insofar as the original section was concerned; that therefore the Chair informed the group that certain corrections should have been made. For example, the deletion of the first sentence and several corrections in the following sentence. Then Delegate Tavares moved and it was seconded to amend Section 6 to read as it is printed in this form before you,

WHITE: And as it is in the report?

CHAIRMAN: No, that's not correct.

WHITE: Well, on my Committee Proposal 23, it's identical.

CHAIRMAN: No, that's being -- the report does not incorporate the wording proposed by Delegate Tavares; therefore, the statement made by the Chair that the original Committee Proposal No. 23 as you see it before you should have been corrected.

ROBERTS: May I suggest that if the delegates want to see the section as it was adopted by the Committee of the Whole, that's to be found on page 7 --

CHAIRMAN: That's right.

ROBERTS: -- of Committee of the Whole Report No. 25. That is the Section 6 as we adopted it. The error came in using that in the article itself, changing it so that the amendment is to Section 6 on page 7 of the Committee of the Whole Report No. 25.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Roberts' suggestion is well taken. If you will refer to page 7 of your Committee of the Whole Report No. 25, you will see and find Section 6 as it came out of the Committee of the Whole two days ago. Is there any more discussion on the proposed amendment? Are you ready for the question?

ROBERTS: This section was discussed off the floor. I opposed its inclusion on the ground that you place a sentence in there which says that these sections shall not be mandatory until four years later. The section that we adopted required the legislature to take action within a certain period of time. If they didn't act, then the governor had certain responsibility to carry it out. It seems to me that the requirement in our section is complete and adequate. It's just as mandatory with the sentence in as it is with the sentence out. We say that the legislature shall take this action; if they fail to take it within the period of time specified in the Constitution, then certain things flow from that. I can see no value in adding the sentence. However, if it makes some feel that there's some value in it, let's put the additional sentence in.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to amend Section 6 please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

TAVARES: There are some slight typographical errors, one on page 4 of the report, in the eighth line of the double-spaced first paragraph on that page. That line reads, "if not continued in effect, would have a hiatus in our local or." I move to substitute for the word "have," the word "leave"; so it would say "would leave a hiatus." I think that they couldn't read our writing in typing this, or my writing. On page 4 of the Committee of the Whole Report No. 25 -- Committee of the Whole Report No. 25, page 4, the eighth line, change the word "have" to "leave."

SHIMAMURA: Would the delegate accept the word "cause"?

TAVARES: Yes, I'll accept it.

CHAIRMAN: I didn't get that suggestion.

TAVARES: The suggestion is that we substitute instead of "leave," "cause" for the word "have" in that line.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to point out a point of order, and that is Section 6 as amended has not yet been adopted.

TAVARES: I move to adopt Section 6 as amended.

SHIMAMURA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 6 be adopted as amended. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

Now a motion to adopt Committee Proposal No. 23 as amended is in order.

TAVARES: I so move.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

SAKAKIHARA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 23 as amended be adopted.

TAVARES: I move for the amendment of the Committee of the Whole report.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

TAVARES: I now move for my -- renew my motion to amend page 4 of the Committee of the Whole Report No. 25 by substituting in the eighth line the word "cause" for the word "have."

ARASHIRO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we amend the Committee of the Whole Report No. 25 on page 4 on the eighth line of the explanation section by deleting the word "have" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "cause." Is there any discussion on the motion? All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

TAVARES: I must apologize to the Convention, but Mr. Doi and I had to work till way past midnight last night to get this out and didn't have a chance to check it before printing. I have one more typographical error on page 9 of the Committee of the Whole Report 25, in the paragraph starting in with the words, "The article referred to in this section." Near the middle of the page in the third line of that paragraph I move to insert between the words "and" and "makes," the words "this section," so that the sentence will read, starting at the beginning of that paragraph, as follows: "The article referred to in this section is the judiciary article, which prohibits any diminishing of compensation of a justice or a judge during his term of office, and this section makes it clear," and so forth.

OKINO: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee of the Whole Report No. 25 on page 9 be amended in the paragraph starting with the words, "The article referred to," in the third line of that paragraph, by inserting between the words "and" and "make," the words "this section." All those in favor of the motion to amend please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

SAKAKIHARA: I rise to a point of information. Then Committee Proposal No. 68—Is that it?—23, has it passed final -- second reading as amended?

CHAIRMAN: I believe all the amendments have been already made.

SAKAKIHARA: I rise to a point of information.

CHAIRMAN: Could you state it over again, please?

SAKAKIHARA: Committee Proposal No. 23 as amended has not passed second reading yet, has it?

CHAIRMAN: No, it hasn't passed second reading. It has been adopted by this committee.

TAVARES: In view of the amendment adopted to Section 6 I move that page 7 of the Committee of the Whole report be amended to conform.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to it?

C. RICE: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that page 7 be amended to conform to the amendment made to Committee Proposal No. 23, Section 6. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

TAVARES: That page has been printed and was the one which was erroneously put in by mistake, and it can now go in properly. I now move that the committee report be adopted and that the Committee Proposal No. 23 as amended pass second reading.

OKINO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee of the Whole Report No. 25 be adopted and that it pass second reading.

BRYAN: Point of order. I think it should be that we rise recommending that action.

TAVARES: Yes, I stand corrected and I amend my motion accordingly.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that when the committee rise, it recommend the adoption of Committee of the Whole Report No. 25 and that it pass second reading. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carries.

We have before us now Committee of the Whole Report No. 26.

SAKAKIHARA: I move for its adoption.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second to the motion?

OKINO: I do.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee of the Whole Report No. 26 be adopted. You ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The motion carries.

TAVARES: I move that when the committee rises, it report progress and recommend the adoption of this committee report and proposal on second reading.

SAKAKIHARA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that when the committee rise, it recommend the adoption of Committee of the Whole Report No. 26 and that it pass second reading. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Carried.

We have now before us Committee of the Whole Report No. 27.

SAKAKIHARA: I move the adoption of the Committee of the Whole Report No. 27.

NODA: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee of the Whole Report No. 27 be adopted.

LAI: I have a very short amendment to Section 7 of Proposal 25. Therefore I move to reconsider Section 7, Proposal 25.

SAKAKIHARA: I second.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded to reconsider Section 7 of Committee Proposal No. 25. Delegate Lai, would you care to state your purpose for asking for reconsideration?

LAI: Well, I wanted to make an amendment to the fourth line in Section 7, delete the word "second" and insert in its place "third." In other words, the line will read as follows: "In December following the third general election." I feel that the first governor and the lieutenant governor of the State of Hawaii should have the benefit of the longer term as the long term senator as we have provided in this section. This will induce more and better men to run for the -- these two offices. This being the first election of the governor and the lieutenant governor by the people, people certainly would like to pick one from the best material available. You must remember too that the campaign expenses will be very high because of the area they have to cover and a short term will not justify this high cost of campaigning. The long term will not mean very long; it will just mean about a few months to a little over a year longer than the terms we have provided for in our article on executive powers and functions. In your committee report, on page 7, it says as follows: "Although this section provides that such term shall begin with the election of each, it is quite obvious that they will not commence to exercise their official functions until the actual admission of the State to the Union. This may mean six months to a year." And we might take a chance of electing a governor and he being in office for less than two years. Now we're not sure when we're going to get statehood. I think it's justified to give the prestige to the first governor and first lieutenant governor of the longer term.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion to reconsider, please say "aye." Opposed, "no." The Chair is in doubt, will call the question again.

DELEGATE: Division of the house, please.

CHAIRMAN: I beg your pardon?

DELEGATE: Division of the house by hands.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will call a division of the house. All those in favor of the motion to reconsider will stand up. All those in favor of the motion to reconsider will stand up, please. All those who want to stand up on this question, please stay up. Some of you have risen later and -- All those in favor of the motion to reconsider, please stand up.

MIZUHA: Reconsider what, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: Committee Proposal No. 25, particularly Section 7. It has been already stated once before. All those in favor of the motion to reconsider, please stand up.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, will the delegates take their seats.

CHAIRMAN: All opposed to the motion, please stand up. All opposed to the motion to reconsider, please stand up.

BRYAN: Will Delegate Anthony please take his seat?

CHAIRMAN: The motion to reconsider carries. The vote is 25 to 24.

LAI: I move to amend Section 7. On the fourth line, delete the word "second" and insert in its place the word "third."

H. RICE: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: Moved and seconded to amend Section 7 on the fourth line by deleting the words - -

HEEN: I would like to find out from the movants, how long would the governor serve if he is elected at a special election, if that term runs until the third general election.

LAI: It depends on when we get statehood. We might hold a special election say next August or September.

HEEN: Under the provisions of one of these articles here somewhere, a special election has to be called before Hawaii becomes a state. After the Constitution is adopted here, but before we become a state, we hold a special election. Therefore, if that occurs, if that election occurs, how long would the governor serve if he serves until the third general election following that special election?

LAI: If we get statehood this session and we call for a special election now, I don't think we would become a state until Congress certifies our Constitution and certifies the election of officers.

BRYAN: I'd like to answer that question. I think it simply means that the governor's term will be a minimum of four years, and a maximum of six years for the first term, that's all. If the special election comes immediately after a normal, regular general election, territorial election, or any normal period for election, it means his term will approach six years. If a special election is held just prior to a general election, then his term will be slightly over four years. So it's a little less than six or a little more than four, and anything in between.

LAI: The term will be the same as the long term senators, that we have provided for in this section. That's the same thing. I think the governor shouldn't be discriminated against that term.

HEEN: The governor does not rate as a long term senator.

LAI: What I mean is just the term.

HEEN: State senator, I mean. Now the movant stated that the governor should have a long term, that it's necessary that he should have a long term so that we will elect a competent governor. There's no assurance we're going to elect a competent governor at the special election. He might not be competent and we'd like to get him out as soon as possible.

PORTEUS: As I understand it, the governor will be accorded the same right as a long term senator. The long term senator can stay in from four to six years. As I understand the person who presents the amendment, he feels that a governor is entitled to stay in office just as long as the long term senator. Now the long term senator is given a term of four years, normally, and the governor has a term of four years, and perhaps there's not any great reason why the two shouldn't be treated consistently, except that there is only one governor, and there will be at least 13 long term senators.

LAI: Mr. Chairman.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Lai.

ANTHONY: He's spoken three times on this, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: That is correct, and then he being the movant, the Chair thought probably he should - - in this case he yields. Delegate Anthony.

ANTHONY: The argument that you ought to give the governor the same as a long term senator doesn't hold water. You've got 25 senators and one bad senator might not make the whole barrel rotten. But if you get one bad governor, you don't want any long term, so I don't think the analogy is apt at all.

TAVARES: My own opinion is that this being the inception of Hawaii into statehood, we are going to elect just as good a governor as we've elected a good Convention. I think we've elected a good Convention, and I don't think there is any ground for feeling we won't elect a good man as governor. I think the longer term will enable him to carry out the difficult transitional period which we are going to have, changing from a territory to a state, in a little better way than a shorter term. I'm for the amendment.

SHIMAMURA: I'd like to except myself from the general statement made by the last speaker at this Convention, in the first place. What I especially rose for is this. That there is good reason for having the initial senators serve for a term of six years because we have staggering of terms. But that situation doesn't apply to the initial governor where one officer is elected, one executive officer is to be elected. I agree with the other speakers who have taken the proposition that we shouldn't enlarge upon the term of the initial governor. We give subsequent governors four years, and the initial governor in a transitional period, we give him six years, or almost six years theoretically.

MIZUHA: I rise to a point of information. Does the first election, the word "first election" in the second line in Section 7 refer to the special election or the first election after the State of Hawaii is admitted into the Union?

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Tavares, will you please answer the question?

TAVARES: Since each of these sections, the provisions says that the term shall start with the time of the election, I think it obviously means every general election after that is to be counted as one of the general elections intended. Otherwise, you'll give a man an inchoate term of any number of years before we get statehood. I think it obviously means that you ought to count every general election which means - - every general election under the territorial law or under the state law that's held every two years is a general election, in November. You'll have to count that; otherwise you are going to get into trouble in figuring out what you mean by first, second and third election, general election.

MIZUHA: If it is Delegate Tavares' interpretation that that first election in Section 7 means the first general election, if we have a special election for the governor prior to our admission as a state, he might serve for a year and a half before we reach the first general election. Then we will have the first general election, and then he will have two years. That makes three and a half years. Then we will have the second general election, which will be another two years, which will make five and a half years. Then we will hold a third general election which will make him eligible for election seven and a half years after we elect him in the first special election for governor.

TAVARES: I think the gentleman misunderstood me. If we have a special election, the first general election that could be held under the laws as they will be continued over under the State or as they may be just before we are actually admitted as a state, will be the first general election. I think there is no trouble there. It can't run over six years and it might be less.

MIZUHA: I'm just pointing it out that it could be one and a half years before we have our first general election.

KING: I'd like to reduce this to a hypothetical question. Assuming that we elect our State officers and our new Congressional delegation at a special election some time next year, the middle of next year or latter part of 1951 or possibly in early 1952; and the Constitution is accepted by Congress, has been accepted by Congress; the only remaining formality is the proclamation of the President admitting Hawaii into the Union as a state. Then these new officers take office and the first general election will be the one held in the fall of '52. Then the second general election would be held in the fall of '54. A governor then elected in 1951 or the early part of '52 would serve perhaps as little as two and a half years or three years. But I see no impropriety in that. Otherwise you might give them too long a term of office in the first election. If he does his duties properly, why he can run for re-election in 1954, and catch that with the regular four year term. So I feel although the amendment is amended in good faith, and does correct a shortness in the term of the first executive, that we ought to leave it as it was and I'm opposed to the amendment.

BRYAN: First, I hope the delegate who spoke on the mathematics of this is reviewing what he had to say. Between three general elections brackets four years and no more, no less, which sets the upper limit of six years. Now I think the merit of this argument, one way or the other, lies not in the comparison between the governor and the senator but just on how long a term the first governor should have. The way it stands now, his minimum term could be two years; according to the amendment, his maximum term could be six years. I would more favor taking a chance on the six year maximum than putting up with the two year minimum, because I think two years may be too small and I don't think six years would be too large, and those are the outside limits. Therefore, I'm in favor of the amendment.

TAVARES: May I ask the delegates to read what the Committee of the Whole report on page 7 says about this, which was our understanding of what the Convention intended. If it's not, then it should be corrected. I think it explains the theory of what is the first general election and the second general election after the election of the governor, and the rather anomalous situation of saying that the governor shall hold office. We explained there that obviously he doesn't actually begin to discharge the functions of his office until we are admitted to statehood. But he does in a general sense hold an inchoate office beginning with that date of that election. We explained it that way, and I think that takes care of Delegate Heen's misgivings on the matter.

CHAIRMAN: Is there any more discussion? Delegate Lai, would you care to close the debate?

LAI: I just want to find out. Suppose we have statehood this session. All right, we'll run an election say 30 days or 60 days from now, I don't know when it's going to be. All right, your first general election this November is counted as the first. The 1952 general election would be the second. According to your committee proposal, the first governor, if we have the election this year, will hold office only for two years. And he's not going to exercise his powers of his office until maybe six or seven months or a year from the election date.

CHAIRMAN: All those in - -

SHIMAMURA: To clear up the point, did I understand the last speaker to say that the first special election will be considered the first general election?

TAVARES: No, that was not what I intended to say, and I didn't think I said it.

CHAIRMAN: That's not what Delegate Lai said.

LAI: I mean if you have a special election, say in September, then your general election falls in November, that's your first general election, that counts as first. Then your general election in 1952 will count as the second general election. So, therefore, if you have the election of governor this August or September, then his term will expire in 1952. That will be awfully short for a governor.

ARASHIRO: The next general election, as far as I can see, will come in 1952 and no other year, and then the next general election will be 1954. The coming fall election will be a territorial general election, as we should be admitted as a state. After that, then the general election will never come at an earlier year but 1952. If that is correct, then there is going to be a special election and the governor's election will come in 1954, as far as my interpretation is. If that paragraph means something else, then I'd like to have that explained to me.

TAVARES: It is obvious that we are not going to have any special election unless Congress or the President, as the case may be under H.R. 49, finds that we have complied with the statehood act and we are going to be admitted as a state. We are going to know that before we hold any election. So when we hold that election it will undoubtedly, in almost all probability, be a special election. And that special election, if it doesn't coincide exactly with the date of the territorial general election, I submit, will then make it necessary to count territorial general elections after that plus state general elections in computing the second and third election, general elections mentioned in this proposal. That is the only reasonable interpretation.

ASHFORD: I think Delegate Arashiro is quite correct. In other words, if we are not admitted as a state prior to the general election here but nevertheless we have an election, that is not the first general election that is referred to. The first general election would be in 1952.

CHAIRMAN: All those in - - The Chair will put the question. All those in favor of amending Committee Proposal - - rather Section 7 of Committee Proposal No. 25 by deleting the word "second" in the fourth line of the section, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "third," will please say "aye."

DELEGATES: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: How many of you request roll call? Roll call will be made. The Clerk will please call the roll. All those in favor of the motion to amend will say "aye," and opposed will say "no."

Ayes, 26. Noes, 28 (Akau, Anthony, Apoliona, Arashiro, Cockett, Corbett, Fong, Heen, Ihara, Kanemaru, Kawahara, Kawakami, Larsen, Luiz, Lyman, Mizuha, Noda, Ohrt, Okino, Phillips, Roberts, Serizawa, Shimamura, A. Trask, White, Yamamoto, Yamauchi, Doi). Not voting, 9 (Castro, Holroyde, Lee, Loper, Maui, Nielsen, Smith, J. Trask, Wist).

CHAIRMAN: The motion failed.

The Chair will at this time invite a motion to adopt Committee Proposal No. 25.

SAKAKIHARA: I so move.

NODA: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 25 be adopted. All those in favor please say "aye." Opposed, "no."

TAVARES: I now move that when the committee rise, it report recommending the adoption on second reading of Committee Proposal No. 25 and Committee of the Whole Report No. 27.

CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

NODA: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that when the committee rise, it recommend the adoption of the Committee of the Whole Report No. 27, Committee Proposal No. 25, and that it pass second reading. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion carried.

The Chair would like to invite a motion to rise.

SAKAKIHARA: I move that the Committee of the Whole rise and report progress.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second?

NODA: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the Committee of the Whole rise. All those in favor of the motion please say "aye." Opposed, "no." Motion is carried.

Debates in Committee of the Whole on

DISQUALIFICATION OF FRANK G. SILVA

Chairman: CABLE A. WIRTZ

APRIL 20, 1950 • Morning Session

CHAIRMAN: Will the committee please come to order. We will now consider Resolution No. 25.

A. TRASK: I move the following amendment of the resolution, namely, "Resolved, that Frank G. Silva, by reason if his," insert the following words, "contumacious conduct and citations for"; then continuing, "contempt."

CHAIRMAN: Would you repeat that amendment, please.

A. TRASK: "Contumacious conduct and citations for" being the insertions, an interpolation.

In support of this amendment I would like to inform the delegates of the Committee of the Whole that the mere words, "of his contempt," does not fully express [the situation] and the evidence that came before your special committee handling this matter, because there were many evidences, including letters, statements made, oral statements made before the committee - -

HEEN: I think before making any attempt to amend the resolution, we should proceed with a hearing wherein Mr. Silva may present his views upon this resolution. And depending upon the findings to be made by the Committee of the Whole, then we can tell just how this resolution may be amended, if it is to be amended. I hope the delegate will follow that procedure.

A. TRASK: I willingly accede to Judge Heen's suggestion.

CHAIRMAN: Does the delegate from Kauai wish to present anything to the Committee of the Whole? The Chair at this time will recognize Delegate Silva from Kauai.

F. G. SILVA: The Secretary of the Convention had delivered to me a copy of the report of the special committee adopted by this Convention, stating that unless by eleven o'clock today I purged myself of contempt or showed cause for failure to do so, the Convention would act upon the resolution expelling me from my seat in this Convention upon the ground that by reason of contempt of the House UnAmerican Activities Committee I am declared disqualified to sit.

It is improper for this Convention to request me to purge myself of contempt. I am not in contempt; only Congress can say that I am in contempt, and then it becomes a case for the courts to determine whether Congress acted correctly. The House Subcommittee merely stated it would recommend to Congress that I be cited for contempt. I am not in contempt of Congress, and my lawyers advise me that what I did by refusing to testify was clearly within my constitutional rights and does not constitute contempt.

I might also add that I am informed that many a congressman has sat in the Congress of the United States, passing laws for all the people in our country, even though he was under a criminal indictment. I understand this situation existed within the last few months. If a congressman can sit in Congress even though under an indictment until the outcome of his trial, certainly I have the right to sit in this Convention when I am not charged with having done anything wrong.

When this Convention completes a draft of our Constitution, it will have a provision that no person can be required to testify against himself. Now you are saying, even before you write the Constitution, that if I exercise that same right given to me by the Constitution of the United States, I am not a fit person to sit in this Convention. The findings of the special committee has this statement:

> No witness who testifies before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee can be prosecuted for any crime which his testimony may divulge, save and except the crime of perjury.

I pointed out in the statement I previously presented to this Convention that on the basis of the false testimony of Izuka I was liable to an indictment for perjury if I stated I was not a communist before the committee, even though I am not and have never been a member of the Communist Party. Also, my lawyers say that the finding of the special committee that no witness can be prosecuted for any crime which his testimony may divulge is wholly incorrect.

I was elected to sit in this Convention by people who have known me since the day I was born. I was elected by people who have faith in my honesty and who feel in their hearts that I know what the word democracy means; that's why they sent me here.

I ask all of you before voting to again have read to you the statement that I made to the special committee and also the statement made by Delegate Trude M. Akau. Delegate Akau's statement so clearly points out that what you are about to do is wrong that in my heart I cannot believe that any of you who read her statement could possibily vote against me.

I have faithfully served my country; I have done no wrong; my conscience is clear. I am an American citizen. I have fought in the service of my country, and will fight again if need be. I have been elected by a majority of my people to represent them here in this Constitutional Convention. I have pledged myself to work toward a truly democratic Constitution for the people of Hawaii.

I came to this Convention determined to stand for, protect, defend and secure the American rights and freedoms which we have under the Constitution of the United States of America and which we must surely have under the Constitution for the new State of Hawaii, when that day comes. I will not betray those who elected me. I will not allow myself to be frightened or intimidated by the threat of expulsion. I refuse to bow to hysteria and fear. For somewhere there must be a voice of courage and honesty.

What has this Convention asked me to? Purge myself. Purge myself of what? Purge myself of my right as a free American to remain silent. Purge myself of my right as a free American to follow the dictates of my own conscience. Purge myself of my courage, my determination to defend the principles of free speech and free expression. Purge myself of the mandate of those who elected me. Purge myself of my honesty, my integrity, my sincere convictions. Purge myself of conviction in the right which carried me through the last World War and through the terrible campaigns at New Guinea and the Philippines.

I say to you today, it is not I who needs to purge myself. Remember, rather it is this Convention which must, if it is to write a Constitution with any of the traditional American rights which have made us the strong and beloved nation we are today, that must purge itself. This Convention must purge itself of fear. Fear runs through the ranks of the delegates here. Fear of the Big Five, fear of standing up in the face of pressure for those principles which some of the delegates know to be right, fear of losing jobs, fear of taking an unpopular stand at this time in our history, fear of speaking the truth, fear of acting on conviction. This Convention must purge itself of fear.

There are only two in this entire assemblage who dared to speak out. I give my thanks to those two. History will honor those two. It was an act of real courage, an act of devotion to the principles which have made democracy great.

There are those in this Convention who are not motivated by fear. They are motivated by hatred. They are the ones who have blacklisted me since my youth, when I was first fired out of the plantation for union activities. They are the ones who would blacklist anyone who would dare to stand up and speak on behalf of the working people, the majority of the people of Hawaii. They are the plotters, the politicians, the Big Five lawyers, the unscrupulous, the callous, and the UnAmericans. They are the ones who falsely pretend that this is a bipartisan Convention. What nonsense. This is no bipartisan Convention. This is a Republican-dominated and Big Five Convention.

I know, as I have known since the first day that this Convention appointed a "select committee" that this Convention is determined to expell me. The Convention is not concerned with me as an individual.

If this Convention is to create a sound and healthy Constitution, can it find honest ground for expelling me? If this Convention is to write a Constitution containing the traditional American rights of free speech, which also means freedom to remain silent, can it honestly expel a delegate for exercising that very right?

This Convention has said they will give me an opportunity to "show cause." Show cause for what? Need an American show cause for fighting for American rights and principles? Need a delegate to this Convention need to show cause for his determined fight to defend the very democratic principles which this Convention must write into the Constitution of the State of Hawaii?

Is it wrong that I should believe so sincerely in my responsibility to the people and to my own honest conviction that I should take an action knowing that it holds with it the possibility of imprisonment on false accusations? How easy it would be to get down on my knees and crawl. How easy it would be to fall into the soft web of hoomalimali of the Big Five representatives. How easy to save myself at the expense of principle and justice. But I was not elected to be a delegate in this Convention to take the easy way. I was not elected here to build my own political fences, to sell cheap the principles on which I was elected to my own benefit.

It is because I am a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, not in spite of that fact; it is because I have fought for American principles all my life, on the battlefield and in public and private life; it is because I know that to retreat in the face of a battle is to lose the fight forever; it is because I know the sound of bullets, and the need to go forward without regard for personal life; it is for these reasons that I cannot, I will not, I shall not let the sniping of the public press, the mortars of the radio, the batteries of the Big Five guns turn me back.

I stand squarely on my constitutional rights. Are you going to tell me that I should not do so? Are you going to tell the people that the price of fighting for the rights in our Federal Constitution shall be expulsion from this very Convention which professes to be engaged in writing a Constitution containing those same rights and democratic principles?

Your action here today will stand in history. I face the judgment of time and history; I face the people who elected me, confident and secure in the profound conviction that I have served them well and honestly. Can you here today say with a clear conscience and a free heart that you too can face the people who elected you and the judgment of history?

HEEN: If the delegate who has just spoken has a written form of that statement I would suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, that you ask that that be filed with the Clerk; and following that that mimeographed copies be made immediately for the use of all the delegates here. It's a lengthy statement and we should be in a position to study it carefully before taking final action.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your suggestion. I was just about to ask the delegate from Kauai if he wished to place his statement in the record. If he does, please hand it to the Clerk.

C. SILVA: I would just like to make this short statement. I have heard the Big Five mentioned several times. I'd like to inform the delegates to this Convention and the people of the territory that I'm only influenced by two people, that is, my God and my conscience, not by the Big Five.

CHAIRMAN: Before we proceed, what is the pleasure of the committee? Should we have the statement of the delegate from Kauai that has been filed, printed and distributed among the members?

MAU: So moved.

ANTHONY: Second.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that the statement of Delegate Silva be ordered to print and distributed among the committee.

A. TRASK: May I amend that motion to include any other documentary evidence which Delegate Silva desires to submit, anything that he may have with him be included.

CHAIRMAN: Do you accept that amendment?

MAU: I do.

SAKAKIHARA: Point of information. The action which we are about to take is a very, very serious one. This Convention appointed a special committee of eleven to constitute an inquisitorial party to inquire into the qualifications of the gentleman from Kauai. Undoubtedly that committee has a transcript of what has transpired before that special committee. That committee, pursuant to the hearings, numbering some seven meetings, has reported to the Convention with certain findings and recommendations. I was not a member of that committee. I feel in all fairness to myself to sit here in judgment of this man as a jury and as a judge, I would like to inquire of the chairman on the special committee or the vice-chairman of that committee if that transcript could be made available for the information of the members of this Convention.

CHAIRMAN: I'll recognize the chairman of the special committee, delegate from the fourth district. Point of information has been put, Mr. Wist, do you understand the point?

WIST: Yes, we can secure a transcript of that for you. Our secretary has the minutes of the meetings, if that's desired.

CHAIRMAN: The motion that's before the house at present is that the statement of the delegate from Kauai be printed together with all other documentary evidence that he wishes to present.

SAKAKIHARA: I feel that in view of the fact that that transcript is available and being the property of this Convention, I now respectfully move that such transcript be printed and made available for the information of the members of this Convention.

CHAIRMAN: May I ask the delegate from Hawaii whether he is making a further amendment to the original motion?

SAKAKIHARA: I do, sir.

CHAIRMAN: Any second?

MAU: I second the motion.

ANTHONY: I would like to speak to that motion. I don't think the delegate from Hawaii quite appreciates what the order is. That's a huge transcript, only three or four pages of which are relevant. Wouldn't it serve the delegate's purpose if the transcript were brought in here—the Clerk must have it—and read. There are only two or three pages that are pertinent. Wouldn't that meet the delegate's requirements?

CHAIRMAN: The delegate from Hawaii has been asked a question from the floor.

SAKAKIHARA: I am here with an open mind. A fellow American is on trial. I am firmly convinced that in order to give this man a fair and impartial hearing before this Committee of the Whole, that I cannot see myself justified to proceed without this full transcript before us.

CHAIRMAN: May I ask the delegate from Hawaii whether he wants the full transcript of all the hearings of the House UnAmerican Activities [Committee] or does he just want the transcript that relates to the delegate from Kauai?

SAKAKIHARA: Just the transcript relating to the delegate from Kauai.

CHAIRMAN: Just that portion of that - -

SAKAKIHARA: Upon which a report and findings and recommendations have been submitted to this Convention.

FUKUSHIMA: I am inclined to go along with the delegate from Hawaii. The special committee did meet and did come back with the finding of fact that Delegate Frank G. Silva was guilty of contemptuous behavior, and as a result of that finding, the Convention here was asked to vote on the resolution to give him another chance. We did vote. The affirmative vote was sixty. There were two dissents.

Now we come before this Convention today, not following the resolution which we adopted two days ago, and introduce another resolution which says that we should expel the delegate because he is guilty of contempt, and I agree with Delegate Silva that he is not, and the amendment which is proposed by the delegate from the fifth district is a correct one.

I'd like to ask the chairman of the special committee, why we should even have resolved ourselves into a Committee of the Whole to give Mr. Silva another chance when they themselves, a committee of eleven, have made these findings and ask this Convention to vote on those findings and this we did. I am rather puzzled at the procedure.

CHAIRMAN: May I remind the delegate from the fifth district that the resolution that is before the Committee of the Whole is a very same resolution that is incorporated in the committee report. It was the desire of the Convention at the time the resolution was put, in accordance with the committee report, that we resolve into the Committee of the Whole.

FUKUSHIMA: I still have the floor, I believe.

That resolution may be the same, but there has been a finding of fact which is presented to this Convention and on those findings of fact, we voted, and I did vote myself, and now we are here again to ask Mr. Silva to present his side of the case and also to present whatever documentary evidence he has. Then we are to decide as a Committee of the Whole what, if any, findings we should make. There has been a finding and we adopted the findings of the special committee, and I'd like to ask the committee chairman, why is this procedure being followed today if there has been a finding already?

CHAIRMAN: Does the delegate from the fourth district wish to answer?

WIST: I'd like to point out that the special committee did not request that we go into a Committee of the Whole. That was a motion put on the floor of this Convention and acted upon by the Convention. There seems to be a little confusion here, too, with respect to the motion made to provide a transcript. If I understand the motion there, it was to provide the transcript that we had available to us, on the basis of which we made our findings. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN: That's my understanding.

HEEN: I was the one that moved to resolve the Convention into a Committee of the Whole. It is true that I voted to adopt the report that was presented by the special committee of eleven delegates. Upon further analysis of the contents of that report, I'm not certain in my mind whether or not the finding of facts as reported by that committee is correct, and I wanted to have the privilege of ascertaining the facts for myself; and by resolving ourselves into a Committee of the Whole, we'll have the opportunity to ascertain those facts. There is grave doubt in my mind, that this finding of fact, that Delegate Frank G. Silva is guilty of contempt, is a correct finding of fact. That determination, as to whether or not he is guilty will be determined by Congress and later on by the courts. We are not in a position at this time to say that he has been guilty of contempt of this sub-committee of the House of Representatives of the Congress.

Therefore, I think it is my privilege, and it is the privilege of all the other members of this Convention who were not on that committee, to determine for themselves what the true facts are. We are not bound by the finding of facts made by the committee. Therefore, it seemed to me that this is the method by which we can ascertain those facts or any other facts that might constitute grounds for the explusion of Senator [sic] Frank G. Silva.

CHAIRMAN: As far as the Chair is aware, I have permitted this discussion to go on. There has been no second that I know of to the delegate from Hawaii's further amendment that the transcript that was before the committee and formed the basis for their report be printed and distributed to the members.

MAU: I did second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: I stand corrected, Mr. Mau. We have before the house at this time a motion, original motion that was made, that the statement of Delegate Silva just read to the committee be printed and distributed. It was further amended to include any other documentary evidence he may wish to include with it; and a further amendment that it include the transcript that was before the committee, the special committee, and formed the basis for their - - that is, it was used by them as a basis for their report.

A. TRASK: I want to get this thing straightened out in my mind, prompted by the expression for my fellow colleague from the fifth district. By accepting the report of the special committee, that is adopting, of course, the findings of that committee—and the only question before the Convention is really the vote on the resolution as indicated at the end of the report—now, is it proper in our proceedings here, to reconsider that acceptance of that report before we proceed with the inquiry, as Judge Heen desires?

I want to say this because as Dean Wist, who was chairman of the special committee, indicated, your committee wrestled with the proposition of whether or not this Convention, it be recommended to resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole or whether it should consider this matter as Convention delegates. After much consideration, we decided that we should throw the whole thing to the Convention as a convention rather than a committee. So I pose a question. Should not, Judge Heen, the acceptance of the report, and therefore the findings therein, be first maybe at this time reconsidered in respect to the procedural order.

CHAIRMAN: May I point out to the delegate from the fifth district, there is some confusion in the report. I do not see in the findings any statement of contempt. Finding No. 4 is simply to the effect "That Frank G. Silva, by his refusal to answer the questions put to him by the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, has forfeited his right to sit in this Convention." However, the resolution that was incorporated in the committee report goes on to state contempt.

LARSEN: May I have the floor. It seems we are missing the point. We are only interested in one thing here, and that is the success of statehood, the success of this conference. The only fear that I've seen in anybody's mind here is the fear that we might not succeed. We have the right to decide whether any one of our members possibly will block that success. It seems to me we're not passing on judgment. This man has a right to belong to any party he wants to. If, however, we feel because he has aligned himself and expressed himself in the terms of certain people who would destroy our great democracy and we, therefore, feel perhaps that might be inimical to statehood, it seems to me we are perfectly in our rights to accept this committee report.

And I know from hearing the members speak how hard they worked to give justice. They tried in every way that American democracy asks for to give this man every chance to become a unit with us in trying for the success of this conference, and it seems to me they are accusing him of nothing here. They merely say, because of his various actions they feel he shouldn't sit with us, and I am inclined to agree with them.

KAWAHARA: I rise to a point of personal privilege.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry, the Chair couldn't hear you.

KAWAHARA: I rise to a point of personal privilege.

CHAIRMAN: Very well, state your point.

KAWAHARA: The discussion seems to center around the report made by the special committee appointed by Chairman King. My reason for opposing the report of that particular committee was not because of the fact that I favored or condoned or was in direct favor of the actions of Delegate Silva. My reasons for opposing the report of the special committee was this, that in the event that we do accept the report, it might turn out that somewhere along the line we shall have to go on record as to challenge the qualifications of Mr. Silva, Delegate Silva. I felt that the report itself was insufficient for me to say that Delegate Silva was in the wrong, if you might use that term.

This morning the resolution was handed to me and I signed that resolution which stated that Delegate Silva shall be expelled from this Convention. I did that with no reservation except for this point, that I feel that if we are to sit here as judges of the life of one man, I feel that all the facts pertaining to that man should be presented to us. I don't know that I can sit here and decide for myself whether or not Delegate Silva was in contempt of Congress or not. I feel that perhaps we should wait a little bit more, and wait until a higher body, the Congress of the United States, shall pass and render a decision saying that Delegate Silva acted in contempt of Congress. For that reason I feel that we should further request the findings and the proceedings of the special committee.

A. TRASK: I raised a question as to procedure and order. Will the Chair rule or inform me and the delegates as to what the answer is to that question, whether or not the committee should now reconsider its adoption of this report before we go into a Committee of the Whole? Procedurally, isn't that proper?

CHAIRMAN: We are in a Committee of the Whole.

HEEN: I think Delegate Arthur Trask is technically correct. We did adopt that report and in doing so, we adopted the findings of fact set forth in that report and adopted the recommendation set forth in the report. If we are to reconsider our action in connection with that report, then we will have to resolve ourselves out of the Committee of the Whole and have the Convention itself reconsider the action taken upon that report. However, perhaps in the interest of expediting our work in this connection, perhaps we can waive that for the time being in order to proceed with the hearing to determine what the facts are.

KAUHANE: In view of the fact that many requests have been made for documentary evidence to support Frank Silva, documentary evidence which should be studied by the members of this Convention, since that request has been approved and the documentary evidence and all other documentary evidence that has never been requested and which will be submitted during the course of the hearing to be held by the Committee of the Whole, I move that we take a recess until all of the informative matters are on the desk of each and every delegate sitting here in this Convention.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to remind the committee that there has been no vote taken yet, and the Chair at this time will place the last amended motion that the transcript or that portion of the transcript that was before the special committee be ordered to be printed and distributed to the members. Are you ready for the question?

HEEN: In order to expedite matters, I, as the original movant for the printing of the original document which was amended to include other documents and also pertinent parts of the transcrpit of the testimony, I accept those amendments; then put the motion with those amendments.

CHAIRMAN: Very well, if there is no objection from the floor.

MAU: Point of information. My understanding of the motion by the delegate from Hawaii was that the transcript and all data and minutes of the special committee be made available to the delegates. Am I correct in that?

CHAIRMAN: All minutes, did you say?

MAU: Yes.

CHAIRMAN: I don't recall "minutes" were used. Will the delegate from Hawaii clarify that?

SAKAKIHARA: I made no reference in my motion to any minutes.

CHAIRMAN: That's the Chair's recollection.

SAKAKIHARA: While I am recognized, I would like to call the attention of this Convention - - of the Committee of the Whole, that under Rule 39 of this Convention it provides thus: "A motion to reconsider any vote must be made before the end of the second convention day after the day on which the vote proposed to be reconsidered was taken and by a delegate who voted in the majority, and the same majority shall be required to adopt the motion to reconsider as was required to take the action to be reconsidered."

CHAIRMAN: May the Chair ask the delegate from Hawaii to what he is referring in the motion to reconsider?

SAKAKIHARA: Referring to the remarks of the delegate from the fifth district, Delegate Arthur Trask.

CHAIRMAN: Well, the Chair understood that the suggestion was made that in order to expedite things, that the technical objection would not be raised.

FUKUSHIMA: I don't believe it's a matter of expediting things. If we are going to do it correctly, for the record, let's do it correctly. If we are going to reconsider the matter, let's reconsider it. So at this time, I move that the Committee of the Whole rise to reconsider the adoption of the resolution which we adopted two days ago.

LEE: Second the motion.

HEEN: The proper motion would be that the committee rise and report progress, and I so move that this committee rise and report progress.

SAKAKIHARA: I second that.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved - -

KING: I would like to speak in opposition to that motion. The motion that resolved the Convention into the Committee of the Whole was to act on the resolution which was a part of the recommendation of the special committee that discussed and considered the qualifications of Delegate Frank Silva to retain his seat. So far as I know, the findings have not been brought into question until this morning, and the motion of the - - to return to the Convention and reconsider the action on the special committee seems to me ill-timed and unnecessary. The proceedings, in my opinion, should go ahead on the consideration of the resolution.

Now, if the resolution is wrongly phrased, the Committee of the Whole may, by proper motion, adopt an amendment and then rise and report to the Convention the adoption of the resolution introduced this morning in carrying out the recommendations of the special committee with amendment, which may suit the technical point. Unless the Convention wishes to go back to the original finding, which seems to be desired by some members, it seems to me unnecessary to reconsider the action taken the other day in adopting the report of the committee.

I sat in on two hearings of that committee and they made a very exhaustive inquiry into the matter and had before them the transcript of the evidence before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee. Nevertheless, in the finding the committee reported that that was in part extraneous matter, that the issue depended upon the action of Delegate Silva in declining to testify and not with any regard to the evidence that might have been produced in that committee charging him with being a communist, which, of course, he has denied.

Now, he has made his statement in his own defense in this Committee of the Whole. The statement is available, and I presume the Chief Clerk is having it stenciled now so that copies may be made available very soon. I would prefer to suggest that the Committee of the Whole rise to provide for a recess, but not for a reconsideration of the findings of the special committee. I, therefore, suggest that the motion do not carry.

C. SILVA: I think there is a motion on the floor. A motion to go out of the Committee of the Whole into regular session is always in order. That motion has been made and duly seconded.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. I understand that it is not debatable or amendable.

HEEN: Are you referring to the motion to rise?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct, and report progress.

HEEN: Report progress and ask leave to sit again. I don't think we can recess; it's only the Convention itself that can recess to a later time.

CHAIRMAN: There is before the committee a motion to rise and report progress with leave to sit again. All in favor signify - -

LEE: In order not to preclude any further debate on this subject, since I seconded that motion, I'd be very happy to withdraw the second in favor of any who may desire to speak on this particular motion. It is a rather important subject, particularly in view of the fact that before reconsideration can take effect under the rules, as pointed out by Mr. Sakakihara, two days notice must be given. So should there be any desire by any of the delegates, I'll be very glad to withdraw my second.

CHAIRMAN: The second has been withdrawn.

TAVARES: I thank the delegate for his courtesy. It seems to me that we are being a little over technical in this proceeding. The purpose of a meeting of the Committee of the Whole is informality and the first thing we run into when we get into the Committee of the Whole is a lot of technicalities. Now, it seems to me we are, as I say, over-emphasizing those technicalities.

In the first place, if we have a hearing here and we are convinced at that hearing that some of the facts stated in the resolution or conclusions stated in that resolution were not correct, what is there to prevent this committee as a Committee of the Whole, which cannot take final action, recommending to the Convention that we suspend the rules and reconsider. There is nothing to prevent us from doing that. In the meantime we can become informed on these matters. I think if we go back into the Convention and the formal hearing now, or the formal meeting of the Convention, we will not have the opportunity to be as well informed and as fully informed as we can in this Committee of the Whole.

Now there is one other matter I'd like to suggest and that is, if we are going to wait for a transcript and it is going to take a long time, unless we can take up that time in useful information being given by various members, we ought to then rise and ask leave to sit again for that purpose; and I, for that reason, am opposed to the motion to rise and sit again, if it is for the purpose of reconsidering our action. Because I think this Committee of the Whole can more fully decide whether that is proper in a Committee of the Whole than we can in the Convention sitting formally. But if it's for the purpose of allowing us time to wait for that transcript, then I'm in favor of it.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair would like to state that since the second to the motion to rise has been withdrawn, that the motions that are before the house—and the movant has accepted all the amendments as to the printing of the statement and other documentary evidence, including the transcript—would assist this committee regardless of any ultimate ruling as to whether we are considering purely the resolution or are, as the delegate from the fourth district indicated, going to report back that we reconsider our action on the committee report.

The chairman would like to place that motion on the floor and ask if you are ready for the question. This is the motion to have printed the statement of Delegate Silva and any other documentary evidence he has to offer and the transcript. Are you ready for the question?

NIELSEN: There's one thing that I'm not clear on and possibly it could be handled at the same time, that is, whether we have the right to expel this delegate. I think that if in going into these other things that some legal advice could be given on that, why we would be a whole lot clearer in our thinking regarding this expulsion. Now according to Cushing, why you can only expel after two weeks and we're supposed to follow Cushing when it's not in our own rules, and I'd like that to be considered, too.

CHAIRMAN: Act 334 setting up this Convention specifically puts the usual provision that this body is the sole judge of the qualifications of its members.

AKAU: Will you please tell me what we're voting on? We've gotten so involved with technicalities, I'm not sure if we're voting on the resolution. Are we voting on to have the printing done, or just what? Would you clarify that please?

CHAIRMAN: We are voting on the motion that's been twice amended and accepted by the original movant. First, that the statement read by Delegate Silva just a few moments ago be printed and distributed to the members; and that he be allowed—and the Chair will ask him if the motion is carried—if he wishes, to submit any other documentary evidence, which in turn would be printed and distributed to the members; and thirdly, that the transcript that was available and used by the special committee of this Convention be likewise printed and made available to the members. Is that clear?

HEEN: My understanding of that is that only parts of the transcript be printed.

CHAIRMAN: Only the portion that refers to the testimony of the delegate from Kauai at the UnAmerican Activities Committee. That's correct.

MAU: Let's dispose of the motion before the house as amended. I move the previous question.

CHAIRMAN: Are you ready for the question? All in favor signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. Carried unanimously. The Clerk is instructed to carry out the provisions of the motion.

I recognize the delegate from the fifth district, but before that I'd like to ask the delegate to yield a moment. I'd like to ask Delegate Silva if he has any other documentary evidence that he wishes to submit. He says there is - - he has nothing further and the Chair would like to point out that his previous press statement has already been distributed to the members. His statement to the special committee has likewise been distributed to the members and a letter pertaining to this matter written by Mr. Hall of the I. L. W. U. has been distributed. So I think we have all the information now.

I'd like to recognize the delegate from the fifth district. I asked him to yield for a moment.

MAU: Although we're sitting informally as a Committee of the Whole, from the discussion past, we are going to make certain findings of fact and go into facts. The delegate in question is on trial. It seems to me proper, and other bodies like this one have rules to provide for it, that the delegate be provided counsel from amongst the delegates in this Convention. I think that is proper to protect his rights. And, therefore, I move that the Chair appoint Delegate William H. Heen and Delegate J. Garner Anthony to act as counsel for Delegate Silva in this Committee of the Whole and in the Convention, if necessary.

SAKAKIHARA: Mr. President.

C. SILVA: Mr. President.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize the delegate from the fourth district.

HEEN: I am in accord with the suggestion made by the previous speaker, but not to the extent that the lawyers who are delegates here represent Mr. Silva. We are going to act upon the resolution or some other resolution in reference to any attempt to expel him from the Convention. I would amend the motion made by the previous speaker that he be allowed to have his own counsel. He's entitled to it.

SAKAKIHARA: Is that a motion to amend?

CHAIRMAN: That's a motion to amend.

MAU: That's acceptable to me, but, of course - -

KING: Before the Convention went into session - - was called to order, I discussed this very question with Delegate Silva and told him that I felt sure that the Convention would be happy to have him represented by counsel of his own choice, if he desired. At that time he said counsel was present in the audience and if he felt he needed it, he would perhaps ask the Chair to permit the counsel to be with him. Delegate Silva just a moment ago was on his feet. I gathered from what he told me that he did not desire counsel. I suggest that he be asked whether he wishes counsel.

CHAIRMAN: I was going to recognize the delegate from Kauai. Do you wish to state anything to the Chair or to the committee on this question?

F. G. SILVA: If I am going to have counsel, I would like to have counsel of my own choosing.

MAU: A point of information. The delegate didn't say whether he wanted counsel. Would you put that question to him?

CHAIRMAN: I asked him whether he wanted - - whether he had anything to say on the question. I'll ask this then. Do you wish to have counsel in this hearing, Delegate Silva? You do? The Chair will rule, however, that any attorney who is a member of the committee is automatically disqualified as he himself will have to pass upon the merits of the proposition.

MAU: I'd like to call your attention to this tradition and procedure, Mr. Chairman. Of course, under our rules, by a majority vote we can suspend our rules which includes Cushing's Manual and all the rules stated therein. Ordinarily in a body like this, counsel is selected from within the group but I am very happy if the delegates will vote so that Delegate Silva will have counsel of his own choosing. I would be for that 100 per cent.

CHAIRMAN: There was a motion before the floor; the Chair overlooked it. There was a motion that was amended to permit Delegate Silva to choose his own counsel and I believe that has been duly seconded.

HEEN: I suggest that he accept that amendment; that the previous speaker accept that amendment. I understood him to say that he would accept the amendment. That is then, that the motion is that Delegate Frank G. Silva be authorized to choose his own attorney to represent him in this hearing before the Committee of the Whole.

CHAIRMAN: Then the Chair's remarks will be considered out of order. Are you ready for the question? All in favor signify by saying "aye." Contrary minded. The Chair informs you, Delegate Silva, that you are free to select an attorney of your own choosing.

HEEN: I now renew my motion that this committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

SAKAKIHARA: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this committee rise, report progress with leave to sit again. Are you ready for the question? All in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. We will now recess as a Committee of the Whole.

Afternoon Session

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole is now in session. The purpose of the Committee of the Whole, as you all know, is to consider the resolution which is on the floor of the Convention. At the time that we reported our partial, or made a partial report before the noon recess, the Chair ordered that all the documentary evidence, statements of the delegate from Kauai, and the pertinent portions of the transcript be printed. I'll ask the Clerk if that has been done.

CLERK: That has been done and it has been distributed.

CHAIRMAN: And distributed. At that time the Chair likewise asked the delegate from Kauai if he had any further documentary evidence to submit and he said no. At this time the Chair would like to ask the delegate from Kauai if he has anything further to submit to the Committee of the Whole.

F. G. SILVA: I haven't anything more to submit, but I would like to notify the Chairman that my counsel is Mr. Myer Symonds and Harriet Bouslog.

CHAIRMAN: Will the record note that fact. Then I think under our rules, which incorporate Cushing's Parliamentary Procedure, it's proper at this time that the delegate from Kauai withdraw from any further deliberations of the committee. If there is no opposition to that statement of the Chair, the Chair will request that the delegate from Kauai withdraw from the further deliberations of this committee.

HEEN: Is it clear in the record at the present time that the delegate from Kauai, whose seat in the Convention is under question at the present time, has no further evidence to present?

CHAIRMAN: That is the Chair's understanding. I asked the delegate from Kauai that question and he said he had nothing further to present but he wished to notify the Chair that his counsel was the firm of Bouslog and Symonds. Is that correct, Mr. Silva?

HEEN: I would like to ask whether or not the delegate in question has any further statements to make.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will direct that question to the delegate from Kauai. Do you have any further statements you wish to make to this committee? The delegate from Kauai has replied in the negative.

MAU: May I inquire if the delegate's counsel is present? We'd like to proceed with the business.

CHAIRMAN: The delegate from Kauai has indicated that his counsel is present, I assume in the assembly hall somewhere.

ANTHONY: I would like to make a statement in connection with the debate on the resolution and address myself particularly to the one statement of law contained in the report of the special committee; and since I must read from several documents, I'd like to request the permission of the Chair to sit down.

CHAIRMAN: You may, but before we proceed to that, will the gentleman of the fourth district yield the floor for a moment. I have asked the Convention, if there is no objection to the statement of the Chair, that it is proper under parliamentary rules of procedure that the delegate whose seat is questioned to remove himself from any further deliberations of the committee. There being no objection I'll ask the delegate from four - - from Kauai to absent himself from any further deliberations of the committee.

I will now recognize the gentleman from the fourth district who yielded to the Chair.

KING: May I make a point of order? I think the delegate from Kauai, Mr. Silva, should withdraw, not only refrain from participating in the discussion, but as I understand the rules of order, he should leave the assembly.

CHAIRMAN: Well, that was my understanding. I used the term "absent" but I meant it in the term of withdrawing from the assembly. Will the - -

MAU: I'm wondering whether or not facilities - - physical facilities shouldn't be arranged so that the delegate and his counsel could be right in front of this Convention. I think that ought to be offered to them.

CHAIRMAN: Are you questioning the parliamentary procedure?

MAU: No, no; I'm just saying that a space should be set aside, a table set up and chairs there where they can sit.

KING: Another point of order. That's not the ordinary procedure for a parliamentary body or a legislative body. The gentleman whose qualifications are being questioned has stated that he has no further evidence or testimony or statement to make and he is requested to withdraw from the assembly. He may take a seat in the audience and his counsel is present, they can advise him, but they are not going to argue a court case. This is a case of a legislative organization deciding as to the qualifications of one of its members.

CHAIRMAN: I think your point is well taken. That's my understanding of parliamentary procedure. The statements on behalf and all the evidence on behalf of the delegate under question have been submitted to this committee.

SAKAKIHARA: I have a resolution at this time which I desire to offer.

CHAIRMAN: Oh, perhaps I was in error in recognizing the gentleman from Hawaii as Mr. Anthony had yielded the floor to the Chair at the outset. So at this time the Chair will recognize the delegate from the fourth district.

ANTHONY: May I sit down?

ASHFORD: I rise to a point of order.

KING: I still make the point of order that the gentleman from Kauai has not withdrawn from the assembly.

CHAIRMAN: Oh, I thought he had.

F. G. SILVA: In order to make use of my attorney, I believe that I should be sitting next to my attorney.

CHAIRMAN: You have that privilege, Mr. Silva, but under our rules and the rules that were adopted by this Convention, the rule is that the member whose qualifications are challenged is to remove himself after he has made and presented to the committee all of the evidence he has to offer. He is to remove himself from deliberations of the assembly.

FUKUSHIMA: I rise to a point of order. If we are to do this correctly, I think we should follow Cushing's Rules of Parliamentary Practice. It does not make it mandatory for the member to withdraw. He may be asked to withdraw - - I withdraw that. If he does not do so of his own accord, then the delegation here may ask him to withdraw, but if he makes an offer, he may be permitted to remain. If that is explained to the Convention, I think we could do it expediously and do it correctly.

CHAIRMAN: I would like to read from Cushing the proposition that the Chair bases its ruling on. Page 5, Section 8. "Question of membership. When a question arises involving the right of a member to his seat, such member is entitled to be heard on the question and he is then to withdraw from the assembly until it is decided. But if, by indulgence of the assembly, he remains in his place during the discussion, he ought never to take any further part of it." I prefaced my remarks by asking whether there was any objection to the Chair's statement. There being none at the time, I requested the delegate from Kauai, having completed his statements and his evidence, to withdraw. I will now recognize the delegate from the fourth district.

ANTHONY: To bring this issue to a head, apparently there is some difference of opinion among the delegates. I see no objection to Mr. Silva retaining his seat but taking no part in the deliberations of this Convention, and I so move. If he wants to bring a chair in for his counsel, let him bring a chair in.

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

SAKAKIHARA: I second it.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that by indulgence of this Convention, or this committee that the delegate from Kauai be allowed to remain on the Convention floor accompanied by counsel. Are you ready for the question?

FONG: Point of information. As I understand it, the delegate from Kauai has already submitted everything that he desires to be submitted to this Committee of the Whole. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

FONG: He has submitted all his documents. He has no further statement to make. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN: He was so asked, and he declined - - stated that he had no further statement.

FONG: Well, if that is so, then in my mind it seems now that the deliberations are only the deliberations as far as we are concerned. We are now sitting as jury or as judge upon this man who has already been given his day in court. I see no purpose could be accomplished by allowing him and his attorney to sit before us here, because he has already said his say, he has been given all opportunity to say what he wants to say. He has been given an opportunity to be represented by counsel and he has nothing further to say and there is nothing accomplished by having him remain here with his counsel.

ANTHONY: I think the point is well taken and I'll withdraw the motion.

F. G. SILVA: Point of order. I was asked if I wanted counsel. I have brought my counsel here with me. I have no more written statements to add, but if you want to hear legal arguments, my attorneys are here.

CHAIRMAN: Well, I wish to point out also that is not customary parliamentary procedure except by permission of the Convention - - of the legislative body so-called. No one other than a delegate is permitted to speak on the floor except by invitation or consent of the Convention. However - -

KING: Point of information. The motion that was originally put by Mr. Anthony was wrongly phrased by the Chair, I believe. The motion was that the delegate in question, the delegate from Kauai be allowed to sit in the assembly with his attorneys but take no part. Now the difference between the assembly and the audience is a matter of a railing there. It seems to me there is no point in having the delegate seated on the floor of the Convention with his attorneys if they are refrained from taking any part of it. This is not a court of law and there is not going to be any arguments pro or con. The delegates are going to discuss among themselves the qualifications of this delegate to be seated, Since Delegate Anthony has withdrawn his motion, it seems to me the business before the Convention is to have the delegate from Kauai leave the floor of the assembly.

SAKAKIHARA: I have a very important resolution here which I would like to see acted upon.

CHAIRMAN: In the meantime I will have to ask the - - since there is no objections to the Chair's statement of Cushing, I'll have to ask the delegate from Kauai to leave the assembly floor.

Mr. Anthony, the delegate from the fourth district, will you yield for the purpose of this resolution? I've asked you many times to yield in the course of what was going on here and I feel that you should be heard first if you so desire.

ANTHONY: I would like to, Mr. Chairman, because I think, I know what is in the resolution and I don't think it's necessary. If I may proceed.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair, Mr. Sakakihara, in line with its previous rulings feels that Mr. Anthony had the floor first and yielded to the Chair. I assure you, Mr. Sakakihara, that you will have the floor next for your resolution.

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of information. It seems that the delegate from the fourth district knows everything that is contained in the resolution that the delegate from the first district intends to introduce here. If that is somewhat of a closed and a two man affair, then I think the rest of us who sit here as delegates to decide the question should not be present and let him, the delegate from the fourth district, decide everything. Let us hear what the delegate from the first district has to offer in his resolution.

ANTHONY: I yield. Let's get along with the business.

CHAIRMAN: Do I understand the delegate from fourth district to yield his position? Very well. Clerk, will you read the resolution?

CLERK:

Resolution. Resolved by the Hawaii State Constitutional Convention that the attorney general of the Territory of Hawaii is hereby requested to render an opinion as soon as possible as to whether the delegates assembled in Convention have the power to expel a fellow delegate under the provisions of Section 2, Act 334, Session Laws of Hawaii 1949.

SAKAKIHARA: I respectfully move the adoption of the resolution.

HEEN: I move that we defer action upon this resolution at the present time. After the deliberation on the part of the Convention, based upon the evidence that has been presented to it, it may not be necessary to ask for the advice of the attorney general. After we have acted upon the original resolution, if there is any question as to the authority of the Convention to punish the delegate from Kauai, then I think it would be proper time then to ask for the opinion of the attorney general. Therefore, I move that we defer action until later on in the proceedings on the resolution that has just been read.

SAKAKIHARA: May I offer an amendment to the resolution?

CHAIRMAN: There has been no second.

SAKAKIHARA: Instead of an opinion to be rendered as soon as possible, and in lieu thereof, that the attorney general is hereby requested to attend the meeting of the Committee of the Whole forthwith.

GILLILAND: We have two former attorney generals here. What more do -- Why do we want another one?

CHAIRMAN: I take it that was a point of information from the gentleman from the fifth district.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion to defer.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that we defer action on the resolution. Are you ready for the question? All in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. It appears to the Chair that the ayes have it. The resolution be deferred.

Now, Mr. Anthony, the Chair will recognize the delegate from the fourth district.

ANTHONY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Fellow delegates, in the first place I think we all should appreciate the very heavy responsibility that rests with this body in these deliberations, and I think a particularly heavy responsibility rests upon those members of the body who are members of the bar. I would like to explain the legal situation in regard to the right that Delegate Silva has asserted before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, not to testify upon the ground that it might tend to incriminate him. And in that connection, I would like to call the committee's attention to a statement in the report of the special committee on page 2. That statement that I wish to call attention to reads as follows:

> No witness who testifies before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee can be prosecuted for any crime which his testimony may divulge save and except the crime of perjury committed in the course of such testimony.

Now, I would like to call the Convention's attention to the privileged section of the Criminal Code of the United States which is Title 18, Section 3486, which reads:

> No testimony given by a witness before either House, or before any committee of either House, or before any joint committee established by a joint or concurrent resolution of the two Houses of Congress, shall be used as evidence in any criminal proceeding against him in any court, except in a prosecution for perjury committed in the giving such testimony. But an official paper or record produced by him is not within such privilege.

What I would like to call to the attention of the delegates is this, that the immunity that is granted by the section that I have just read is not an absolute immunity. In other words, if there is in that committee hearing, the UnAmerican Activities Committee hearing, evidence produced which might lead to the introduction or the discovery of further evidence that the witness before that committee is guilty of a crime, that might be an avenue for the discovery of a criminal act and yet that would not be using his testimony. In other words, there may be some basis for the contention of Mr. Silva that he is within his constitutional rights in declining to testify on the ground that it would incriminate him. That is the question which I would like to have very clearly in mind before this committee votes on his qualifications.

Now there is one other thing. You are all familiar with the so-called Hollywood Ten Cases. Those cases involved those persons in the moving picture industry in Hollywood who were summoned to appear before this same committee and declined to give any testimony but said they would remain silent, standing on their rights guaranteed to them under the First Amendment, which is free speech. That particular case went to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, that contempt case, and the conviction of contempt was affirmed. Certiorari was denied in the Supreme Court of the United States.

There in no doubt about the validity of the constitution of the UnAmerican -- House UnAmerican Activities Committee. There is also no doubt that they can compel testimony, but the precise issue that is raised by Delegate Silva has not been adjudicated by the courts. In fact, there is a decision rendered in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, on the fourth day of February 1950, in which a witness was asked the same question, whether or not he was, or is, or ever was a communist, in a grand jury proceeding, and he declined to answer that question on the grounds that it mind tend to incriminate him. His refusal to so testify was affirmed by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Now the basis of the position of such persons refusing to testify is simply this. They contend that in view of the trial of the communists in New York under the Sedition Act, any person who will admit membership in the Communist Party, or who will disclose evidence that he may have been a member of the Communist Party, is liable to prosecution under the Smith Act. So the precise question that is now raised by Delegate Silva has not been passed upon by the courts. My own view is that the probabilities are that he would have a privilege if he answered the question.

There is one other thing that has not been brought out. A witness claiming a privilege can testify, he can give certain answers, and then he can interrupt his testimony at any point he chooses, and say then at that point, "I decline to testify further." But I think the important thing to bear in mind in these deliberations is that there is a possibility that the very question that was propounded of Mr. Silva may be a privileged question. In other words, it may be in violation of the Fifth Amendment which prohibits the compulsion of testimony tending to incriminate persons.

Therefore, it is entirely possible that if Mr. Silva later be cited for contempt by the House committee, the same Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals might hold that in view of its decision in the Alexander case, which I just referred to, this particular question was privileged; and therefore, the finding of contempt cannot stand under the Constitution. That is the reason why I took up with the President this morning the matter which has been the subject of some discussion here, because the statement in the committee report was a dogmatic statement of the law which I do not believe, after careful examination of the authorities, I care to subscribe to.

There is the further question, however, whether or not the conduct of Mr. Silva, he as a delegate to this house now engaged in the business of trying to draft a constitution for the State of Hawaii, is such that, such a contumacious conduct that he is now disqualified from sitting as a member in this body.

On the question that is the subject matter of the delegate from Hawaii's request for an opinion, I doubt very much if that is necessary. Act 2, the last sentence, creating this very Convention provides the Convention shall be the judge of the election returns and qualifications of the delegates. It doesn't make any difference whether or not this is in fact contempt, whether or not this committee in the future does cite him, whether a court will find him guilty, we are the sole judges of the qualifications of our members. That is not only true under the statute but is true as a matter of general law.

But the thing I did want to bring home to the body, all the delegates who are going to vote on this problem, is that his refusal to testify cannot be brushed off as just sheer recalcitrance on the part of Delegate Silva. It may be that he has a valid constitutional position, and I think that in our deliberations we should remember that. The reason that I am bringing this to the attention of the Committee of the Whole is that I am persuaded that we should follow the meticulous and scrupulous care, affording this man every reasonable opportunity and a fair trial in this matter.

That's all I have to say, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize the delegate from the fifth district.

AKAU: Thank you. I wondered, pursuant to the delegate from the fourth district's statement, if I might make a short statement which is in line also with the resolution submitted by the special committee.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

AKAU: Today this Convention is on trial. Delegate Frank Silva is a conscience of this Convention. Repeating Mr. Anthony's statement, this Convention is the sole judge of the qualifications of its members, but once it designates itself as judge, it must automatically bear a judge's responsibility. As an American judge sitting in the case of Frank Silva, this Convention is bound to observe and follow the simple rules of American justice and procedure.

The question is, it seems to me, is Frank Silva guilty at this point? I say, no. Every person is presumed to be guilty until he has proven himself innocent. It doesn't say that, it says just the opposite. Then the trial begins. Who must prove the case? The defendant? No. The burden of proving a man guilty falls upon the prosecutor and the accuser. In Russia, Delegate Silva would be purged without a fair hearing and trial. Of what is Frank Silva guilty? Is he guilty of contempt of Congress? How many delegates know that Frank Silva is only liable for contempt of Congress and is not guilty of contempt? How many delegates know that a majority of the members of Congress must vote yes on the committee's resolutions to indict Delegate Silva before he can be indicted? How many of you realize that if indicted, Mr. Silva must be on trial in a local federal court of law, before a jury? How many of you know that only proper and admissible evidence may be submitted to the court? The question is, is Delegate Silva now at this moment guilty of contempt of Congress? In my lay mind, I say not legal, in my lay mind, I say no.

Delegate Silva was recently presented with a Convention ultimatum to either purge himself of contempt before the committee or take the consequences. I ask you, delegates, what contempt? There is no contempt. Is Mr. Silva guilty of perjury? In my lay mind, no. How has he perjured himself? Delegate Frank Silva is guilty of no felony or misdemeanor, no violation of law or qualifications. Is he guilty of anything? Why does this Convention then, without actual proof, without admissible evidence, continue to persecute and falsely accuse him of guilt? I keep asking, guilty of what? It is the peak of irony to realize that this Convention while attempting to write an American Bill of Rights into its Constitution, if you please, now totters dangerously on the fatal brink of being the first to violate its own Bill of Rights.

Again it is admitted that this Convention is the sole judge of Delegate Silva's qualifications. But I ask, what are those qualifications? If you have read Act 334, the first qualification is that a delegate must be elected by a majority of the votes cast within his election area. Delegate Silva has fulfilled this particular qualification. The citizens of his community elected him to be their delegate to the Convention. The only other major qualification cited in Act 334, which all of us -- each of us have received, is that he sign a loyalty oath. This he did just as you and I did. He has subsequently reaffirmed this oath in writing, verbally, and in the press. Does Act 334 state that each delegate must, as a qualification, appear before the UnAmerican Activities if he is requested to do so? Does Act 334 require as a qualification that each delegate must answer the questions of the committee? Does Act 334 state that a refusal to answer or to speak before this committee amounts to a disqualification? What is the purpose of Act 334? What are laws for in America? Can an elective body, such as this Convention, legally or morally move outside of the scope of the specific powers granted to it by law? In my lay mind, I say no. Frank Silva is, and has been qualified, to sit and participate in this Convention. And why? Because he meets the qualifications set forth in Act 334. Beyond this act it's my personal feeling, and I'm not a lawyer, that the Convention cannot go.

If this Convention, on its own accord, is permitted to conjure up false and arbitrary qualifications of delegacy outside of Act 334, then every delegate seat in this Convention is in jeopardy—yours and yours and yours. What do the people of Hawaii want us to do in the case of Delegate Silva? The man or the woman in the street? The worker in the cane field? Or the pineapple field? My good friends, this is the supreme test of the Convention. If we fail in this test, then this Convention, it seems to me, is but an empty gesture. We all know in our hearts as good delegates, what the majority of the people really want us to do.

I want to quote just a short statement from the Bible. "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with whatsoever judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged."

A. TRASK: I presume that by now the delegates have reviewed the transcript, pertinent parts of which the delegate from Hawaii had requested. I think they are all on the desks. I think the delegates have read the last letter from Mr. Silva.

I move at this time in view of all the evidence before this body, this committee, that the resolution before this committee be amended to read as follows: At the end of the first line after the words "by reason of his," insert the following words, "contumacious conduct and recommended citations for." Again, the amendment is as follows: After the word "his" on the first line, insert "contumacious conduct and recommended citations for."

The reason for the amendment is to afford the members, in view particularly of Mr. Anthony's remarks, that we have perhaps not a legally justifiable contempt as considered as such according to the law books. We have, however, as judge, and it is our responsibility without fear to judge, irrespective of quotations from the Bible. Our courage has been attacked. We are all supposed to be hoomalimali artists of the Big Five. We are supposed to be assisting in the sniping by the public press. We are motivated by fear and hatred. We are "plotters, politicians, Big Five lawyers, unscrupulous, callous and unAmerican." We are fearful of facing the Big Five. These sundry remarks in the last statement of Mr. Silva makes him persona non grata before this body.

We are here to consider, not so much as a court of law, whether or not he is in fact guilty of contempt before this committee; but we are to consider broadly all the evidence in hand and then to pose the question, is this person in truth a person who could aid us in our fight and determination for statehood. Obviously not. He is defying by his conduct the very Congress to which we are beseeching, recommending, working night and day in our entire history, 50 years of working for this one moment of admission at the bar of Congress. And in our midst we have a person who defies the power of that very body. I say, therefore, that we should use the broad base, and I move the amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Any second to that?

CASTRO: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

CASTRO: Relating to the suggested amendment of the delegate from the fifth district, the words "recommended citations for." The information I seek is, have the recommendations for citations been made by the House committee?

CHAIRMAN: I'll ask the gentleman from the fifth district to answer the question.

A. TRASK: I think President King could answer that.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. President, do you wish to answer that?

KING: Frankly, I am unable to answer that as a matter of absolute fact. Merely the press report that the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities said they were going to cite Mr. Silva for contempt of court.

CHAIRMAN: Does that answer your question?

CASTRO: I believe in view of that answer and my own knowledge of the situation that the recommendations have not yet been made by the Congressional body in question, I would like to suggest—although I am hardly in accord with the spirit of the amendment—that the delegate to the fifth district consider a rewording, in view of that fact.

HEEN: In order to act intelligently upon the amendment proposed by the delegate from the fifth district, I would suggest that that resolution as amended be written out in full so that we can study it and analyze it to see whether or not it's going to meet the situation as it appears in the evidence at the present time.

It is my understanding from listening to the delegates who have already spoken upon this subject that the Convention will not use as a ground for punishment, whether it be by way of expulsion or some lesser method of punishment, will not consider the question as to whether or not Delegate Frank G. Silva has committed contempt. I think some time this morning during a meeting of this committee I pointed out the fact there has been no finding of guilt of contempt up to this stage of the proceedings. It may be that he has been cited or will be cited to answer a charge of contempt, but certainly there has been no finding of contempt. Eventually there may be a finding that he is not guilty of contempt.

Now, have we in the evidence here before us any facts which might constitute grounds for expulsion or some lesser method of punishment? It would seem to me that we should analyze the evidence now before this committee to determine and find from the evidence those facts which might constitute grounds for punishment. It may be that the charge that he has made reflecting upon the integrity, the honesty of the members of this Convention, that those charges might constitute grounds for some form of punishment.

I refer particularly, Mr. Chairman and members of this committee, to the statement made by Delegate Frank G. Silva appearing on page 5 of the written statement that he presented to the Convention, or rather to this committee this morning. The third paragraph on that page, "There are those in this Convention who are not motivated by fear." It may refer to me, it may refer to you, I don't know to whom he refers to particularly; but there is this charge that is a cloud upon every member of this Convention. "They." Who? The members of this Convention. It may be you, it may be me. There's no specification who they are. "They are motivated by hatred." Then he says again, "They"—the members of this Convention—"are the ones who have blacklisted me since my youth." Speaking for myself, I have never blacklisted Frank G. Silva. I did not know him before he came to this Convention. But there must be others, in view of that statement, delegates of this Convention who have blacklisted Delegate Frank G. Silva since his youth, that is at the time when "I was first fired out of the plantation for union activities." "They"—the delegates of the Convention, who they are I don't know—"They are the ones who would blacklist anyone who would dare to stand up and speak on behalf of the working people, the majority of the people of Hawaii." "They." Who are they? Every member of this Convention is placed under a cloud because he says, "They are the plotters, the politicians." All the members of the legislature who sit here in this Convention, all the members of this Convention who were at one time members of the legislature, they are placed under a cloud because every person who is a member of the legislature very often is called a politician. There are all kinds of politicians. Some are good, some not so good, some are peanut politicians. "The Big Five lawyers, the unscrupulous." They, the delegates of this Convention are "unscrupulous, callous and unAmerican." "They are the ones"—the delegates here—"who falsely pretend that this is a bipartisan Convention. What nonsense. This is no bipartisan Convention. This is a Republican dominated and Big Five Convention." Therefore, all the members of this Convention are under a cloud. We are here under the domination of the Republican Party, and I deny that, speaking for myself. And that we are dominated by the Big Five, and as to that, speaking for myself again, I deny that.

That is to me the picture in a nutshell as to whether or not, if we find that he has been loose in the use of his language in placing a cloud upon every member of this Convention with language such as he has used, those constitute grounds for punishment. Then I say, let us proceed, and determine that question.

ASHFORD: May I read in connection with the remarks made by the delegate at large from the fourth district some of the statements made in writing and submitted to the special committee and again through that special committee submitted to the Convention.

CHAIRMAN: You may.

ASHFORD: Presented by Frank Silva in person.

CHAIRMAN: You may and you may resume your seat for ease of reading, if you wish.

ASHFORD: If you please. On the second page of the mimeographed statement attached to the report.

> 2. That my request to testify before the committee would be a recognition that the committee is conducting the hearings for a valid purpose, whereas it is obvious that:
> a) The hearings were timed by Governor Stainback and Big Five interests to coincide with the Convention hearings in order to defeat statehood;
> b) The hearings are for the purpose of destroying the I. L. W. U.

It has always been my position, it still is, that the real reason for the disqualification of Frank Silva to sit as a delegate in this Convention is that he is contemptuous of the very forces of order, the very operations, duly organized legislative organizations and governmental organizations for which he is here to write the basic law. I fully concur with what the delegate from the fourth district has said about the charges concerning this Convention itself. If we were the attorneys for the Big Five, a lot of us would like to see the color of the retainer.

I, too, would like to quote from scripture. "Render unto Caesar that which is Caesar's and unto God that which is God's."

AKAU: I'm not refuting any arguments and I'm not making apologies for Mr. Silva. As I told you the other day, I never saw him before the first day of the Convention. In answer to the delegate from the fourth district, the delegate at large, I simply offer this. That some of us have had an opportunity for more formal education, some of us have been fortunate in having university training and that sort of thing. The rest of us may not have had that. In the writing of a statement it isn't always easy for a man who has gotten his education the hard way to put it down just as somebody who has had attorney training, law training or educational what-have-you. I'm simply interpreting that the words that have been used—and again I say, I'm not apologizing—that they may have been collective, that they may have been used quite innocently or unintentionally. And again I say, it may be due to not so much formal education. Thank you.

SHIMAMURA: May I be permitted to address myself to a point of law raised by a previous speaker, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN: You may.

SHIMAMURA: The speaker stated that we are proceeding under Section 2, Act 334 of the Session Laws of 1949. I submit that we are proceeding under that section, "The Convention shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of the delegates." And as the members here know, similar provision is found in our Organic Act and also in Article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, which I believe is Section 5. "Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members." Under those provisions, as many members of the Convention here know, the courts have held that the convention or the house, as the case may be, is the sole and final judge of the qualifications of its members. And further, that the power for removal and expulsion had by the house under such a provision remains throughout the convention or throughout the session of the legislature.

On that point, 49 American Jurisprudence, page 252, states as to the position and power of the legislature. "The legislature, or each branch thereof, usually has complete control over the conduct of its members, which includes the right to remove them. . . Such body has the power also to expel a member, and on such expulsion his privilege from arrest on mesne process ceases." In short, the authority of the legislature—speaking of the legislature, that is,—"in such a matter is well nigh absolute and the courts have no power to control, direct, supervise or forbid its exercise by either branch of the legislative department."

I'd like to emphasize the fact, as I've already stated, that the power of this body to control its members, that is to inquire into the qualifications of its members, remains throughout the session of the Convention and does not cease by merely seating the member at the inception of the session.

PHILLIPS: I have sat here all afternoon and a great deal of the morning, and I've heard uncountable law cases and everything else quoted, but I can't help but say that when I came here to this Convention I came with a love of government. It is government that I came here for, and I was hoping that we would continue with government. We have already carefully shown that the delegate is not eligible to a chair on at least one count, and that count I will state in my motion later, but I say this that the object of this Convention is to produce a state constitution. I think we have wandered terrifically far from our track. I might even say that I remember recently where I read that the most remarkable thing about the Federal Constitution was the amount of time that the 55 delegates who put it together took, and they didn't'have $40,000 worth of clerks either.

I might say at this time that we do not need the law, we are here for government, we are here to let the Convention run. This man, if—and it's all been so well adduced by everybody, Delegate Ashford, the delegate from the fourth district, and other delegates—that the individual has shown his incapacity to work with this Convention, has shown that he does not care to work with this Convention, or he would not entertain in his heart the thoughts that he was careful enough to put on paper.

Therefore, I move that in view of the attitude demonstrated by Delegate Silva that he be removed from the Convention on the grounds that his own accusations against us could not possibly permit him to work toward the Constitution we have all dedicated ourselves.

CHAIRMAN: Will the delegate from the fourth district kindly repeat his motion in full? Have you that in writing?

PHILLIPS: Yes, I have.

CHAIRMAN: I've asked the delegate to repeat his motion for the benefit of the entire floor. I don't think that they heard it in full.

ANTHONY: I was going to make the suggestion that we recess in order that any other delegates that have similar ideas may -- recess until the call of the chairman --

MAU: I second the motion.

ANTHONY: -- and present that to the Chair.

CHAIRMAN: The Committee of the Whole, as I understand it, cannot recess. We can again rise and report progress.

ANTHONY: My parliamentarian tells me otherwise, Mr. Chairman.

KING: A point of order. I think the Committee of the Whole can recess. It carries out the regular rules of the Convention and may not recess beyond a day, but it may recess for a few minutes. I'll second Delegate Anthony's motion that we recess to the call of the Chair.

C. SILVA: I think in courtesy to the person who made a motion first, you should give time to anyone wanting to second the motion. If there isn't any second, then you should recess right after that. I think that some of the members jumped the gun. There's a motion made that --

CHAIRMAN: The Chair asked the movant to repeat his motion because it came in the body of a speech and I don't think that all of us understood when the motion began. Before we entertain the motion to recess, I will ask the delegate from the fourth district to please repeat his motion in full so that the members can grasp the significance of it.

PHILLIPS: I apologize for being so rapid. I move that in view of the attitude demonstrated by Delegate Silva that he be removed from the Convention on the grounds that his own accusations against us could not possibly permit him to work toward the Constitution we have all dedicated ourselves.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion before the house to recess, then to consider the two motions that have been put, one of them by the delegate of the fifth district and one by the delegate of the fourth district. Are you ready for the question? All in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. We will stand at recess subject to the call of the Chair.

(RECESS)

CHAIRMAN: The committee will reconvene. At the recess there were two motions pending before the committee, one offered by the delegate from the fifth district, the other offered by the delegate of the fourth district. At this time the Chair will recognize the delegate from the fifth district as to his motion.

A. TRASK: At this time I desire to amend the resolution and strike everything after the word "Resolved" and have the Chief Clerk read the following.

CHAIRMAN: Have you submitted the written amendment to the Chief Clerk?

A. TRASK: I have, that's correct.

CHAIRMAN: Miss Clerk, will you read the amendment, the resolution in total, as amended.

CLERK:

Resolved, that Frank G. Silva, by reason of his contumacious conduct before and toward the UnAmerican Activities Committee of the House of Representatives and this Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950, is hereby declared disqualified and unfit to sit as a member of this Convention and that he be and is hereby expelled; that his seat be declared vacant; and the governor be requested to fill the vacancy in the manner provided by law.

GILLILAND: I move that the resolution as amended be adopted by this Convention.

PHILLIPS: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Where is the second? Will you please rise?

NIELSEN: Before voting on that I think that possibly we should ask Mr. Silva if he wishes to make any further statement, as this resolution reads entirely different than the original. I so move.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved that Delegate Silva be given an opportunity to speak before this committee acts upon the amendment.

A. TRASK: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: There was a second; two or three seconds. It's been duly moved and seconded that the delegate from Kauai, Mr. Silva, be given an opportunity to address this committee before the committee acts upon the main motion amending the resolution. Are you ready for the question?

MAU: Do I understand that in the event that this committee does not pass the resolution as amended that the committee members still desire to have a statement made at this time?

CHAIRMAN: That was the Chair's feeling, that perhaps the motion to have the delegate from Kauai present is premature as there is no change at the present time until there is a vote taken on the motion to amend.

MAU: Well, maybe we need not get that technical. I'd like to amend the motion to include the words "and/or his attorney." I make that as an amendment.

TAVARES: A point of order. Until we have voted on the amendment, that question as to a change of the original wording of the resolution is not before the house. And therefore, the proper time to make this second motion is after we have adopted a motion, if we do, to adopt the amendment.

MAU: That's what I thought. I'll yield to that.

CHAIRMAN: That is the court's feeling, too. Will the delegate from Hawaii withdraw his motion?

NIELSEN: I'll withdraw the motion at this time.

CHAIRMAN: Very well, We have before the committee a motion to amend the original resolution in the language read by the Clerk. If anyone has any question as to the language, I'll ask the Clerk to read it again. There being no questions on that point, the motion has been duly seconded. Are you ready for the question? All in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. The Chair feels that the ayes have it.

MAU: This morning the Convention had passed a motion consenting that Delegate Silva be represented by counsel. I believe that when we were in Committee of the Whole and the chairman asked Delegate Silva to leave the floor he had remarked that he would like to have his counsel speak. The Chair ruled that that was not the usual procedure in such bodies as this, but that that could be done upon invitation or with the consent of the committee. If no opportunity is given to the delegate to have his counsel address this committee, I believe that the motion made this morning that he be given the privilege of representation by counsel will mean nothing.

We heard a very excellent statement of the propositions of law involved in this case by Brother Anthony. I believe, in my opinion, that to be a correct statement of the law in the case. However, counsel for Delegate Silva may deem otherwise or counsel for Delegate Silva may wish to make a summation of the facts.

Now we come with an amended charge including contumacious conduct before this body, the Convention itself. It seems to me fair and proper that Delegate Silva or his counsel be given an opportunity to address this committee. I would like to move that we permit Delegate Silva or his attorney to address this Convention on this new charge.

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

CASTRO: I would like to amend that motion by adding "for a period not to exceed one-half hour."

PHILLIPS: Second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The motion has been made and duly seconded for an amendment that the time limit of one-half hour be made. Was there a second to the amendment? There was a second.

MAU: Many times during the Convention and in this committee the statement has been made that we are faced with a very serious problem, and it is serious. Let's not hamper the proceedings, let's not be over-technical. If they have cause to use more than a half-hour to present their case, let them do so. We cannot shut off anything that the members of this Convention or the members of this committee could properly receive as a part of this case. I am strongly opposed to the limitation of time suggested by the motion to amend my motion.

CASTRO: I withdraw my motion but I must say - -

CHAIRMAN: Do you withdraw your amendment?

CASTRO: I withdraw my amendment but it was made in all good faith, not as an attempt to gag anyone but merely to try to get the argument out of the way and possibily to hear whoever else might want to speak. The hour gets late.

CHAIRMAN: The motion to amend has been withdrawn. The motion before the floor is - -

KING: I'd like to speak in opposition to that motion. It seems to me that the case is closed. The gentleman from Kauai, Delegate Silva, has had his opportunity, has had his day in court, and the Convention, the committee has been sitting on the evidence and has brought in a resolution, or at least an amendment to the pending resolution. I see no occasion to be addressed by an attorney, especially for an unlimited time. The facts have been pretty well defined by members of this committee, and I will say that the special committee went very thoroughly through the whole circumstances and did so on one occasion when Delegate Silva was represented by counsel. On another occasion, counsel did not accompany him but that was of his own choice. He could have had counsel there had he wished.

The new language in the resolution does not necessarily depend upon the statement made this morning but can refer to the press release and to the further statement submitted to the special committee on the afternoon of the day before yesterday when Mr. Silva last appeared before that special committee. So I feel that the motion to grant a proceeding that is out of all order and out of all parliamentary procedure, to be addressed by counsel for an unlimited length of time, is not called for at all.

It has been said we have been leaning over backwards in this case, and I would say that we have been leaning so far over backwards that we're likely to fall on the back of our heads. It seems to me it's time to close the case and vote on the resolution already made, and I would like to make a motion that the last motion be tabled.

CROSSLEY: I second the motion to table.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the motion to invite the delegate from Kauai or his attorney to speak to the committee be tabled. Does everybody understand the motion that's before the house? Are you ready for the question?

PORTEUS: Ayes and nays.

CHAIRMAN: Pardon? Ayes and noes? All those who wish the ayes and noes raise their hands, please. More than ten have requested the ayes and noes. Clerk, will you call the ayes and noes on the motion to table the motion to invite Delegate Silva or his attorney to further address the committee.

Ayes, 19 (Apoliona, Cockett, Crossley, Dowson, Fong, Fukushima, Gilliland, Hayes, Kanemaru, Kauhane, Kido, King, Larsen, Ohrt, Phillips, Porteus, Smith, White, Woolaway). Noes, 42. Not voting, 2 (Luiz, F. Silva).

CROSSLEY: I now amend the motion that the time limit be a half-hour to the representation or the time given to Mr. Silva or his counsel to speak.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair didn't have an opportunity to announce that the motion to table failed, so the original motion is still on the floor. It has now been moved that that be amended to provide a time limit of a half-hour. Any second?

CASTRO: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the time limit of a half-hour be imposed upon the privilege of the delegate from Kauai or his attorney for addressing the house.

HEEN: I don't think it's in order to amend the motion that's already been carried. It should be a new motion all together.

CHAIRMAN: The vote was just taken on the motion to table. The original motion is still before the floor.

ANTHONY: I want to speak on the matter of the limitation of time.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed.

ANTHONY: I am opposed to limiting the time. It's more important that we do this with care and fairness than we sit 15 minutes or a half-hour or any other time. I, therefore, think the motion to invite counsel and Mr. Silva should be left within the future sound discretion of this body without limit as to time.

NIELSEN: I move that the motion to table be tabled.

CHAIRMAN: Do I understand the gentleman from Hawaii that you move that the motion to limit the time be tabled?

NIELSEN: Correct.

J. TRASK: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that the motion to limit the time is tabled.

TAVARES: A point of information.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

TAVARES: It's my understanding that the rules now limit speeches by any one person—and I would presume that would mean a person in their behalf—to 15 minutes. So the half-hour motion actually gives them 15 minutes more than the rules allow, I think. It's actually an extension of the time now permitted. And if they need more time they can ask unanimous consent or ask consent of this Convention for more time.

CASTRO: Call for the previous question.

AKAU: I'd like to go along with the former speaker of the fourth district. I think this is a very serious matter and I think while we've been most generous, the whole body here has been very generous and always leaning backwards as I said before.

CROSSLEY: Point of order.

AKAU: I have the floor, Mr. Crossley.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, please. Mr. Crossley, state your point of order.

CROSSLEY: The motion to table is not debatable.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct. The motion to table is not debatable.

AKAU: I'm not debating on the motion to table, I was just making a statement of information.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion to table before the committee and that takes precedence. Are you ready for the question? The motion is a motion to table the amended motion - - the motion to amend the original motion fixing a time limit. If the motion to table carries, the original motion inviting the delegate from Kauai or his attorney to address the committee is still on the floor. If the motion to table fails, then we still have to vote on the amendment as to time limit. Are you ready for the question? Is there a request for the ayes and noes? All in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Carried.

NIELSEN: I now move for the previous question.

MAU: Second the motion.

C. SILVA: I move that we allow Mr. Silva or his counsel a half an hour and upon the expiration of a half-hour he be notified and if necessary another half an hour be given to him until the Convention - - in other words, the power would be left to this Convention.

CHAIRMAN: Any second to that? I can't hear you.

HAYES: I second that motion.

CHAIRMAN: You second that motion?

HAYES: Mr. Silva's motion.

CHAIRMAN: That is a motion to amend the original motion again.

MAU: I rise to a point of order. There was a motion for the previous question. It was seconded. I don't believe the amendment is in order.

C. SILVA: Your previous question needs two-thirds vote. I just want to know - -

CHAIRMAN: I can't - - We can't hear you, Mr. Silva, unless - -

C. SILVA: You have to have a 31 vote in this Convention - - a 32 vote in this Convention for the previous question?

CHAIRMAN: Mrs. Clerk, was the motion for the previous question seconded?

CLERK: Yes, Sir.

CHAIRMAN: I will then rule the motion out of order.

CROSSLEY: Point of order. The motion for the previous question was put by the gentleman from Hawaii; you then recognized another gentleman from Hawaii, who made a motion, without having recognized a second to the motion.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair has ruled that the motion for the previous question prevails. Are you ready for the question?

J. TRASK: Will you state the question, please?

CHAIRMAN: The question is the original motion that the delegate from Kauai or his attorney be invited to address this committee. Presumably the rules of the Convention, which likewise apply to the committee, as to time limit will apply. Are you ready for the question? All in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. The ayes have it.

Mr. Bailiff, will you -- Mr. Sergeant at Arms—I can't get out of the court atmosphere—Mr. Sergeant at Arms, will you invite the delegate from Kauai to appear and address the committee if he so wishes, or his attorney.

May I ask the delegate from Kauai whether if it's his wish to address the Convention or does he wish his attorney to speak on his behalf?

F. G. SILVA: I want my counsel to speak first, and then I would like to speak for not more than five minutes.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed. Will you let your counsel use the microphone that's attached to your desk. You now have the floor, Mr. Symonds.

HEEN: A point of information. I would like to inquire whether or not counsel has been furnished with a copy of the amended resolution? Why I ask for that information, he might then confine himself towards talking upon the resolution as amended.

SYMONDS: Yes, Mr. Chairman. However, I would like the privilege of sitting in the chair that you now occupy in order to say what I have to say to this body.

CHAIRMAN: I didn't realize, Mr. Symonds, that you were going to sit down to speak. You can assume this chair if you so wish.

DELEGATES: No! No! No!

SYMONDS: What I want to say I have to face everybody. I can't - -

CHAIRMAN: What are the wishes of the committee?

DELEGATES: No!

CHAIRMAN: I might advise counsel that unfortunately these microphones have to be held fairly close to the mouth, so if you wish to be heard by all, why bring the microphone closer.

SYMONDS: I, of course, Mr. Chairman and delegates of the Convention, wish like every lawyer, that I had ample time within which to prepare to speak upon what I consider to be a most serious and important question. However, I realize that the delegates have devoted all of the afternoon session to the matter of Frank Silva. Of course, correctly stated, it would be "devoted the afternoon to correcting a grave injustice and error admitted by this Convention."

However, I also realize that the hour is late; that the Convention must move on with its business, and therefore while the special committee was in recess, I drafted some notes and from them I want to make clear my views and those of my partner Harriet Bouslog and those of Frank Silva.

I was asked approximately a week ago by Frank to appear with him before the special committee set up by this body. I did so appear and I noticed that there were approximately four or five lawyers sitting on the committee of eleven. I informed that subcommittee that Mr. Silva had a constitutional right to do what he did before the UnAmerican Activities Committee. I placed them on notice at that time. They were lawyers. They are presumed to know the law. I was indeed shocked when Mr. Silva brought to me Special Committee Report No. 3, in which I noticed in the "Findings," two statements on page 2, and I quote, "No witness who testifies before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee can be prosecuted for any crime which his testimony may divulge save and except the crime of perjury committed in the course of such testimony." I had informed the subcommittee that that statement of law was not true. I might also say that Mr. Anthony this afternoon in reading from the Alexander decision by the Ninth Circuit Court at San Francisco only two months ago, which decision is binding upon any court in this Territory - - A copy of that decision had been given by me to every one of the witnesses that I represented before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, and I told them to read that decision and then be guided themselves as to what they wanted to do. The decision by the Ninth Circuit is squarely contrary to the statement I find in the "Findings." Also, "That Frank G. Silva, by his refusal to answer the questions put to him by the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, has forfeited his right to sit in this Convention."

I told Frank that in my opinion it was an injustice for any group that was elected to draft a Constitution to say to him that because he stood on his constitutional grounds, that he therefore had forfeited his right to sit in this Convention.

I then noticed the recommendations. "1. That Delegate Frank G. Silva be given to and including Wednesday, April 19, 1950, within which to purge himself of contempt of the House UnAmerican Activities Committee or to show cause, if any, he has why this Convention should not vote on his qualification to hold his office as a delegate." And then I observed the form of the resolution that this body was going to pass upon in the event he did not do as directed. "Resolved that Frank G. Silva, by reason of his contempt of the House UnAmerican Activities Committee in the recent proceedings of said committee conducted at Iolani Palace, Honolulu, Hawaii, is hereby declared disqualified to sit as a member of this Convention, and that he be and is hereby expelled by this Convention, that his seat be declared vacant, and the governor be requested to fill the vacancy in the manner provided by law."

Why am I reviewing this special committee report? Because it leads up to the letter which Frank Silva wrote to this Convention this morning. When I read that resolution I told Frank that it was an injustice to him; that it was not true that by reason of his contempt of the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, that there had been no contempt; that first of all, the subcommittee had to get the approval of the full committee in Washington, that then the recommendation of the full committee had to go to the floor of Congress, and each and every one of the 39 who were going to be cited for contempt must each have their case taken up separately, and that then and only then after the House of Representatives, if it so decides to hold him or cite him for contempt, would pass the matter on to the United States Attorney General who would then refer it to the local Attorney General and then he would then have his day in court, and that I was satisfied that the case would be thrown out, if it ever got that far. But the statement, "that by reason of his contempt," was wrong. I didn't know what else to say to Frank. I knew there were four or five of what I have been informed were outstanding attorneys in the Territory sitting on the subcommittee. I was shocked, I was unable to understand the language. I am sure the resolution was drafted by a lawyer who heard my statement and there was nothing else for me to do but to say, "Frank, you are being taken to slaughter. The resolution is erroneous as a matter of law, the findings are erroneous as a matter of law and they have absolutely no right legally on the basis put forth in this committee report to do what they are doing to you." What would your reaction be, if you were Frank Silva, to the situation?

Frank Silva, in my opinion, had a flash-back, he had a flash-back to about ten years ago when he had another situation confronting him which is very similar to that which we are dealing with here today. At that time he was blacklisted for union activities on the Island of Kauai. He took his case to Governor Poindexter under the provisions of law provided for such situations. Governor Poindexter being absent, Acting Governor Charles Hite, after a committee report, recommended that Frank Silva be reinstated to his job with back pay. Mr. Silva then went to see Mr. Waterhouse, President of Alexander and Baldwin, who told him that the law could make all the findings it wanted to, he wasn't going to have his job back.

Gentlemen, if you were Frank Silva and you had that experience with the law and then in the iterim you had served almost five years in the Army, three of which were served in active participation in campaigns in the South Pacific, and if you came out of the war a staff sergeant, and you had participated in two of the most vital invasions of the war, and you then returned to your home town and found you were still blacklisted; and the people you have known since childhood elect you as a delegate to the Convention and when you come down to the Convention to serve and you are confronted with a stacked deck of cards by this special committee report and that is exactly what the situation was. Mr. Anthony admitted it this afternoon. What Mr. Anthony said to you this afternoon in his statement of law is identical with what I was going to say to you, had I been given the privilege of taking the floor. Mr. Anthony said in the exact words what I would have said to you. And so what happened, after making what amounts to a confession that this august body was doing Mr. Silva an injustice, then it becomes necessary to save face.

Mr. Silva, after being informed by me of what I thought of Special Committee Report No. 3, then drafted a letter. That letter in draft form was brought to me in my office this morning. It seemed rather lengthy and garbled. At about twenty minutes of eleven I telephoned to the Sergeant at Arms of this body and asked him to confer with Mr. King and say that Mr. Silva was with me and that he would be up to the convention hall no later than 11:30. The reason was I wanted to go over that statement. About two minutes later I received this reply. "Mr. King says the order of business will go on as stated at eleven o'clock." Now gentlemen, what kind of a statement is that? And that is the reason you had the letter probably in the form you got it. You will notice that the letter has spaces at the bottom of various pages. When I received such a rude report on such a serious matter, I got the three secretaries in my office and I said, "Take this as is; each of you take so many pages and write it." I ran, I did not walk, I ran to the garage where I had my automobile; I got my automobile and I brought Frank Silva to this Convention at exactly eleven o'clock. I did not read the letter on the way over, I was driving the car.

That, gentlemen, is the situation. What about the letter? I think it is in bad taste. But, gentlemen, you share more responsibility for that letter than does Mr. Silva. The treatment that Mr. Silva has received at the hands of this body was sufficient to provoke him to most anything. He has been persecuted and those lawyers who are sitting here who have committed one error, at least should recognize the situation regarding provocation and say to the other delegates, "The law recognizes provocation as a basis for leniency." If you vote to expel Mr. Silva from this Convention, you are in effect placing upon him the hardest and harshest penalty that you can inflict for something that you provoked. That is the situation, gentlemen.

I notice in the resolution the word "contumacious." I don't have a dictionary present, but I assume that means he acted disrespectfully, not toward the UnAmerican Activities Committee—and incidentally one of the delegates said that by his statement in his letter this morning that he had shown he was unfit to sit—not only because of his attack upon this body, but because of his attack upon the House UnAmerican Activities Committee.

Now Mr. Silva was told to either purge himself or to show cause. Though some of you present may say, "Well, he should have explained to us under the order to show cause provision why he did not purge himself." But Mr. Silva, in his statement which he read or had read to this body yesterday, showed cause at that time and Delegate Trude Akau also showed cause for him.

There was nothing further left for him to do. He showed cause at that time and if in face of his statement which came from the bottom of his heart and the courageous statement of Trude Akau, this body voted 60 to two for the resolution, then it was obvious Frank Silva either went before the committee and said "Gentlemen, I bare my breast, beat me to death," or he wouldn't sit in this Convention as a delegate. The decision was that clear, that concise, and you gentlemen admitted this afternoon that you had no right to say that to Frank Silva. Mr. Anthony made that quite clear and that is why we have the resolution in its present form.

I am through now, but I want to leave this thought with you. You have as much guilt on your shoulders for the adoption of the resolution as Mr. Silva may have on his shoulders for having presented a letter which was not very tactful. And I say to you in conclusion, bear that in consideration, that you must share that responsibility and that you must not inflict the supreme penalty of expelling him from the Convention, but that you must follow the ordinary rules of law, and recognizing your own provocation and your own persecution, show leniency to Mr. Silva.

CHAIRMAN: Delegate Silva. You indicated to the Chair before your counsel began that you wished to conclude the remarks with a few of your own. Do you still wish to do so?

F. G. SILVA: Yes, Mr. Chairman. Delegates, to me this is one of the most important things of my life, whether I sit here as a member of this Convention or not. I don't want to apologize for my actions, but I'm willing to go this far; and I say, if the committee is willing to withdraw its illegal action, I am willing to withdraw my attacks upon the committee.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize the delegate from the fourth district.

KING: Mr. Chairman, may I interrupt on a point of personal privilege?

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Anthony, will you yield the floor? I recognize the delegate from the fifth district.

KING: The counsel for Delegate Silva has referred to me and my rude reply to his request for an extension of time. The Sergeant at Arms told me shortly before 11 o'clock that Delegate Silva's counsel had requested the convening of the Convention a half an hour late. Frankly, that wasn't possible without inconveniencing all the members of the Convention. I had no desire to be rude, no desire to rush the proceeding, but I simply sent the word back by the Sergeant at Arms that the Convention would meet on time, that a certain amount of business would come before the Convention prior to the time when, under special orders, Delegate Silva's case and the pending resolution would come up.

Now, I'd like to say further that the committee that was appointed to review this case consisted not only of lawyers but of other persons of character, integrity, standing in this community. The chairman was Mr. Benjamin C. Wist, delegate from the fourth district. The vice-chairman was J. Garner Anthony, one of our prominent attorneys. Another member was Miss Marguerite Ashford, an attorney who has served as attorney of the Senate of the territorial legislature. Another member was Mr. Alexander Castro; another member, Mr. Luiz, an official of the I. L. W. U. representing a local from the island of Hawaii; another member, Mr. Chuck Mau, a liberal Democrat and an attorney; another member, Mr. Frederick Ohrt, who has a long number of years back of him of splendid public service; another member, Mr. Tom T. Okino, an attorney, county attorney of the island of Hawaii for many years, a man of outstanding character and respectability in his own district; another member, Mr. Harold S. Roberts, a student of government and political philosophy, a university professor; another member, Mr. Arthur K. Trask, another attorney, Democrat, and perhaps also a liberal; another member, Mr. Arthur D. Woolaway, of Maui, a businessman and respected in his community.

That committee of eleven did not attempt to persecute or prosecute Mr. Silva. I sat in at two meetings of that committee, all of one afternoon when Mr. Symonds was present and also all of one evening when neither Mr. Symonds nor Delegate Silva were present. On that first meeting, Delegate Silva was assured that the committee was very friendly, that the committee desired to get at the root of the matter and find every occasion for treating Mr. Silva with consideration. At that time, Mr. Symonds made the statement that his advice to Mr. Silva, should he refuse to testify before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, was because he would be prosecuted for perjury and probably found guilty in the state of hysteria in the world or in America today. I challenged that statement and Mr. Symonds immediately modified it and brought it down in a more moderate tone. But the first statement, I understood him to say, was that he did not feel that Delegate Silva, if he had testified before the UnAmerican Activities Committee, would get justice in the courts of Hawaii or the United States.

Furthermore, Mr. Silva had an opportunity under the point of personal privilege to submit to this house, when the original proposition was brought, a personal statement. He submitted his press release, made immediately after he was subpoened as a witness before the UnAmerican Activities Committee and very evidently prepared beforehand. A copy of that release was signed by him and is on file in this proceeding, and that release says in one paragraph, "As an elected official of the I. L. W. U., it seems clear to me that the UnAmerican Committee is in Hawaii at the request of elements who want to destroy our union"—his union. "I am certainly not going to aid them in that purpose. The second purpose of the committee's investigation is to kill statehood, despite all their protestations to the contrary. As a native born resident of this Territory, I am concerned about this attempt . . ."

Now in the afternoon meeting that I did not attend, Mr. Silva handed in a written statement, if the Convention will bear with me, I'll find it. Statement of Frank Silva, dated April 17. "This subcommittee has asked me to consider three matters." The subcommittee or special committee had asked him to consider whether as a matter of protection of the reputation of this Convention and of this territory and the efforts we are going through now to draft the Constitution that will be accepted by the people of Hawaii and by the Congress of the United States, he might not resign. If he felt that he could not testify before the UnAmerican Activities Committee on certain grounds, constitutional grounds, he had involved this Convention into his private difficulties and problems, and we asked him if he wouldn't consider resigning. And, if I remember correctly, that suggestion came as a suggestion only and not as a recommendation from Mr. Chuck Mau. He was further asked that would he not purge himself by going before the committee and saying, "I want to testify that I'm not a communist, never have been a communist, don't intend to be a communist."

In this letter of April 17, he declined to take any of those suggestions and he said in here, statements that I consider have rendered him disqualified and unfit to sit with this body. "The hearings were timed by Governor Stainback and Big Five interests to coincide with the Convention hearings in order to defeat statehood." That's sub-paragraph a of paragraph 2. "b. The hearings are for the purpose of destroying the I. L. W. U. No further proof of this statement is necessary than the revival of the 'Dear Joe' letters in the Advertiser. Everything I have accomplished in life I owe to the union, through the I. L. W. U. I have acquired dignity as a human being, something I never have acquired from any company on Kauai, all of whom blacklisted me."

Now, we asked him in this committee meeting, in which I attended as an ex officio member without a vote, if he didn't feel that his obligation to Hawaii, to this Convention, to the United States, wasn't higher that his obligation as an official of the I. L. W. U. Apparently he doesn't think so. He has spoken about the people who had elected him to office. He was elected with a narrow majority over his competitor in one zone district of Kauai.

I told Frank in my office, I have a great deal of consideration for him as a human being. I believe that he's wrongly advised and wrongly directed by his counsel and by those who are giving him advice. I told him then, I said, "Don't forget, Frank, that besides the people who have voted for you, you're representing the people who didn't vote for you; you're representing the people who voted for your opponent; you're one of six representatives from the island of Kauai; you're representing all the people on Kauai; and you're representing the people of Hawaii, the 550—or 540,000 people of Hawaii; and indirectly you are representing the people of the United States because we are aspiring to draft a constitution that will admit us into the Union as a sovereign state," and Frank didn't seem to consider that a point.

Now, in regard to the statement this morning, maybe it was hurried. Maybe some of the language in there was not intended. Nevertheless, it was a statement prepared for him by his counsel and submitted to this Convention and the language in that is, I say, most contumacious. But that hasn't been included in this resolution. This resolution refers to the data before this Convention prior to the statement and to the data before the special committee. And that special committee rendered a unanimous report. There were some who desired a stronger report. There were some who might have desired a less strong report. Nevertheless, there was a meeting of mind and those eleven gentlemen, ten gentlemen and one lady, signed that report and submitted it to this Convention as their considered judgment.

Now, I fail to see where Delegate Silva has not received a square deal from this Convention. We've leaned over backwards, as I said a moment ago, when I made a motion to table the other —maybe that motion was not called for, maybe what we've heard here will help the Convention come to a good decision—but, nevertheless, that resolution is very simple, "Resolved, that Frank G. Silva by reason of his contumacious conduct before and toward the UnAmerican Activities Committee of the House of Representatives." Don't you believe this press release is contumacious conduct? I don't listen to the radio very often—I've been too busy with the affairs of this Convention—but, nevertheless, I've heard the same and stronger statements have gone over the air during the past few days. Don't you believe that this other statement that he made on April 17 is contumacious conduct both toward this Convention and toward the Committee on UnAmerican Activities of the United States Congress? And this resolution goes on further and says, "toward the UnAmerican Activities Committee of the House of Representative and this Constitutional Convention of Hawaii, 1950." I consider that the two statements that he made to this committee is contumacious conduct towards this Convention. We almost begged him to come clean.

There was another witness that was accused, wrongfully or rightfully, who went up there and took the oath and said, "I am not a communist and have never been a communist." Now if he has committed perjury, he can be tried for it or not, but certainly he cannot be taken back to Congress, with the request that he be cited for the contempt of Congress, and this young man has done that.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I don't want to take up too much time. I'm speaking on the point of personal privilege but I'm also speaking to the adoption of this resolution. I certainly haven't been rude to Mr. Symonds or to Mr. Silva. The Convention has a fixed hour. It was fixed yesterday. I have no right to postpone it, and we met at 11 o'clock, and if he had not been ready, I'm sure that somebody on the floor of this Convention would have moved for a recess. As a matter of fact, I told the Sergeant at Arms that possibly such might happen. But I didn't feel that it was up to me to say, "Yes, we'll hold the Convention up a half an hour while you complete your statement." And don't forget in the recommendations to this committee, he was allowed something like 48 hours to prepare his reason to show cause why he did not consider he had to purge himself of contempt.

That completes my statement, Mr. Chairman. As far as I'm concerned, I would like to move the previous question but I will not do it if others wish to speak. I hope that the Convention will realize that my aggressiveness is through no animosity toward that young man. I think he's the most unfortunate young man, who in his devotion to labor has allowed himself to become tainted by his association. I would say this, that in this United States of America today, we have communists infiltrating the labor movement to serve the purposes of the Communist Party. And we have loyal and well-meaning labor men being infiltrated or being indoctrinated and engulfed by the communist movement in their desire to further the cause of labor. I would like to see the labor leaders disassociate themselves from those who are tainted with communism and stand for, swear as labor men only with no affiliations and no associations that are inimical to the safety of the United States.

Thank you.

ANTHONY: Inasmuch as counsel for Mr. Silva has directed his remarks principally toward the report of the special committee, I want to say here and now that the members of that committee, and Mr. Silva himself, will realize that that committee extended to Mr. Silva every possible courtesy, every possible hearing, that could be extended to any person. When Mr. Symonds first came to the special committee, he came there in a belligerent attitude. It was not until the deliberation had progressed for quite sometime before we even heard Mr. Silva. I believe that it was at my insistence that we heard Mr. Silva rather than hear his attorney, because Mr. Silva was the delegate under question, not Mr. Symonds.

Now as to the statement that he has charged that we have corrected an error. I don't consider there is any legal error in the committee report. I was the one that was responsible for raising this issue early this morning for the reason that I wanted the members of this body to make sure that the question that Mr. Silva was raising here before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee was not the identical question that was in the Lawson case. When Mr. Symonds says that the recent decision in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals is on all fours with the conduct of Mr. Silva before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, he is not just telling the truth as to what that decision is. That decision involved a grand jury proceeding. It did not involve the right of a Congressional committee to interrogate witnesses. Persons summoned to appear before a grand jury will have no immunity. Persons who are summoned to appear before a committee of a Congress have a statutory immunity.

It is true there is still an open question whether or not he could assert this constitutional privilege. But it is my firm conviction that the only thing that Mr. Frank Silva could be tried and convicted of is perjury in the course of that proceeding and that was the only issue raised by my brother Symonds when he appeared before the special committee. In other words, he was saying, just as your President had related, that people were in such hysteria here, no person, in the event of a perjury indictment, could get a fair trial in our courts.

I believe that the committee has been fair to him. I believe that the conduct is contempt and it doesn't make any difference whether it has been adjudicated as such or not or even if the Congress of the United States elects to forego it. If a member of this house were guilty of bribery, it would make no difference whether the criminal courts of this Territory would so find him guilty. We would be perfectly within our powers to oust him for that misconduct if proved.

As I see it, the sole issue before the body is whether or not his conduct before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, and not before this body, is of such contumacious nature that would warrant us adopting this resolution. I, for one, would not vote on any resolution that would oust Mr. Silva from this Convention by reason of the things that he has said and done in the heat and battle of his defense. That is a privilege of every defendant. That is the privilege of Mr. Silva. I know it's in bad taste, it's erroneous; we're not a bunch of stooges for anybody. We're here trying to do a job for these islands and the people of Hawaii. I resent it deeply, but nevertheless I would not vote on that basis for his expulsion.

CHAIRMAN: Clerk, is there a motion on the floor?

CROSSLEY: I'd like to speak on the motion. I believe there is a motion on the floor.

CHAIRMAN: I just want to clear the record. Is there a motion pending before the floor, Miss Clerk, on the amendment to the resolution?

KING: Point of information. Did not the introducer of the resolution move its adoption?

A. TRASK: No, not as yet. I thought there, as much discussion should be allowed the membership until we come to it. I might at this time say, for the benefit of the membership, the word "contumacious" has to do - - Do you yield, Mr. Crossley? Thank you. The word contumacious, I'd like to give you the dictionary meaning of the word. It's "disregard of the requirements of rightful authority." That's one definition. Another definition is "intentional disobedience to a rule or order of court or legislature." "Insolent and stubborn perverseness; incorrigible obstinancy." There is no further discussion.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is not clear whether the motion for the amendment of the resolution was seconded or whether it's on the floor.

A. TRASK: I would like to move at this time for the adoption of the amended resolution.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to second that.

CHAIRMAN: Just a moment, I recognize the delegate from Kauai.

CROSSLEY: I'd like to speak on personal privilege.

C. SILVA: Will you second the motion first, or what is it?

CHAIRMAN: Will you yield for a second to the motion for adoption?

C. SILVA: I yield. Was the motion seconded for adoption?

CHAIRMAN: The delegate from Kauai has yielded the floor to the delegate from Hawaii for the purpose of seconding the motion.

J. TRASK: Mr. Chairman, I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Will you yield to that?

CROSSLEY: I yield to that, then I can speak on the motion.

CHAIRMAN: Very well.

CROSSLEY: Or under personal privilege, either one.

C. SILVA: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: The gentleman is speaking on the point of personal privilege.

C. SILVA: Point of order first, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: What is your point of order?

C. SILVA: Point is this Convention as seated cannot adopt the resolution. It can recommend that when we go out of committee that it be adopted.

CHAIRMAN: I believe that point is well taken. You will amend your motion?

A. TRASK: Yes, I'll accept the correction.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will now recognize the gentleman from Kauai on the point of personal privilege.

CROSSLEY: I have sat through a number of days of debate, a number of evenings of discussion on this subject; I have read all of the exhibits that have been forced upon us; and when I got up a while ago to limit, to first of all prohibit counsel from coming in, it was because I had in mind that the counsel would continue the same sort of an attack on this body as had been underway for some time. I then wanted to limit the debate for the same reason. I had no desire to shut off Frank Silva from stating, as has been well indicated here.

I listened to the letter this morning. I've heard lots of letters like that, but there is one statement in particular on page 2 of Mr. Silva's statement to the committee during its deliberations. He says under paragraph b, "Through the I. L. W. U. I have acquired dignity as a human being, something I would never have acquired from any company on Kauai, all of whom blacklisted me because of union activity before and after my three years of combat duty as an infantryman." That is a deliberate misstatement of fact. I have a company on Kauai. Frank Silva has never applied to me for a job nor has he ever been blacklisted. I asked another delegate from Kauai, who conducts a business there, if he had ever turned Mr. Silva down or had he ever had a request from him for a job. He stated that he had not. It's just such all inclusive statements as this, the all inclusive statements that have put us all under a cloud, as so ably presented by the delegate at large from the fourth district.

Someone in his behalf said, "Well, he's a self-educated man." I asked what education he had had, and then I recalled in the testimony before the UnAmerican Activities Committee they had asked him had he ever attended the California Labor School and he refused to answer, but in a press release he admitted to having had that education, whatever it is. I resent deeply the implications that have been cast upon me as an employer on Kauai and upon this body, and it is for that reason that I would like to state for the records, that the statement made under section b is not a true statement.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that - -

HEEN: According to the language of this amended resolution, it says, "That Frank G. Silva by reason of his contumacious conduct, before and toward the UnAmerican Activities Committee of the House of Representatives and this Constitutional Convention is hereby declared disqualified."

What disturbs me is this. Have we here in evidence, any showing of any conduct towards the Convention itself that might be regarded as being contumacious. My impression is, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, that when this investigation was started, it started on the basis of his conduct before the UnAmerican Activities Committee. I take it that the investigation that was conducted by this special committee was made upon that basis. I would like to have someone here point out, not only to me but to the other members of this committee, what in the evidence is there of anything that makes him guilty of contumacious conduct towards the Convention itself.

I know that every delegate here would like to be fair in this very serious matter. I know that it is very serious in the mind of Delegate Frank G. Silva. Therefore, we should not be too hasty in coming to a conclusion on what we should do in regards to this amended resolution. If there is any evidence showing contumacious conduct on the part of the delegate that can be used as a basis, that is, contumacious conduct towards the Convention itself, that these can be used as the basis for this resolution, I'd like to be shown.

Now, it is true that this morning I discussed these statements made by the delegate in his written statement and oral statement which cast a reflection upon every member of this Convention. But we are not trying him on those statements, we are trying him on something else altogether. So that, if we are going to set aside what he did before the UnAmerican Activities Committee, then I say that we have, I believe, grounds for charging him now in the light of what he has said in his written statements while attempting to defend himself, that he is guilty of casting a cloud upon every member of this Convention where he is no longer fit to remain as a delegate to the Convention.

C. SILVA: I'll even go beyond that. As far as I'm concerned I'm willing to forgive Mr. Silva's charges against myself as probably a stooge of the Big Five or anybody else. I'm even willing to forget that point. What I would vote upon is this, upon Mr. Silva's failure as a delegate to testify to the satisfaction of the UnAmerican Activities Committee. He was then asked by this Convention to return before that same body to clear the suspicions created by his actions. Failing as a delegate to do so, in my opinion, is sufficient reason to suspend him indefinitely.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that this Committee of the Whole recommend to the Convention that the resolution as amended and as read by the Clerk be adopted.

H. RICE: I think the motion should read that when this committee rises, it reports recommending the passage of the resolution in amended form.

CHAIRMAN: In amended form? Will you accept that amendment, delegate from the fifth district?

SERIZAWA: Delegate Anthony has stated in his last statement that he did not agree with certain qualifications in this resolution before us. I believe he had implied that the section reading, "unfit to sit as" - - no, I'm sorry, "and this Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950." I believe you made a qualifying statement there. Mr. Anthony is an attorney. I'm a layman. I have no knowledge as to what constitutes legal statements and I believe earlier today delegate from Hawaii made a motion, or was it a resolution, that we have the attorney general here for his opinion on various phases. I, myself, because of my lack of knowledge of legal terminology, I would like to have the advice of an attorney as to what is legal here and what is not. The attorneys here can proceed on their own knowledge with confidence, but I'm afraid I cannot, and I would like to point that out to other laymen in this delegation.

CHAIRMAN: The Chair will call upon the delegate from the fourth district to see if he can clear up that point, Mr. Anthony.

ANTHONY: To bring the matter to a head, what Brother Heen has been talking about, or Delegate Heen, rather, has been talking about is the charges against his offenses against this Convention. I stated in the course of my remarks that I, for one, would not vote for it by reason of that, however bad taste it is and however unfounded. And therefore, I think we should confine ourselves to his failure to appear before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee. He had a duty to speak if he felt anything for this Convention or for the people of Hawaii. His loyalty was to the people of Hawaii in this Convention.

To bring the matter to a head, I move that the amended resolution be further amended by the deletion of the word, "and this Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950." So after the amendment the resolution would read:

> Resolved, that Frank G. Silva, by reason of his contumacious conduct before and toward the UnAmerican Activities Committee of the House of Representative is hereby declared disqualified.

BRYAN: I wish to second that motion.

C. SILVA: That is the point. I wish Mr. Anthony could put it in the words I'd like to say. I have no reference to Mr. Silva's first appearance before the UnAmerican Activities Committee. The reference that I had is when this Convention requested him to return to the UnAmerican Activities Committee. That was the request by the Convention. Failure to do so is reason sufficient to unseat Mr. Silva, indefinitely. Not the first appearance before the Convention -- before the committee; it was after. This Convention had requested that he appear before the committee. Failure to do so is sufficient reason. I just don't know just exactly how you would put that in the resolution.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion before the House.

HEEN: I would suggest that this committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again. We are so involved here as to what language should be used, and we are not too certain in our own minds what the reasons are for holding that he has been contumacious towards the UnAmerican Activities Committee. If the last amendment offered is adopted, that the reference to contumacious conduct towards the Constitutional Convention is eliminated, then the only thing we have left would be that he was guilty of contumacious conduct towards the UnAmerican Activities Committee, to another body altogether, not towards this body. I am not certain in my own mind that we can use the conduct of a delegate towards another body as being the grounds for the expulsion of a delegate from this Convention. That's why I think that we ought to take time out and give this problem a little more serious consideration because it is a serious problem.

BRYAN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN: I recognize -- Have you completed --

HEEN: No, I have not. I started by saying that I would suggest that the committee rise. In order to bring that point to an issue, I now move that this committee rise at this time, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: Is there a second to that?

NIELSEN: I second the motion.

SAKAKIHARA: Before this motion is put to rise and report progress and beg leave to sit again, I have a grave doubt in my mind as to the power of this Convention under Act 334 to expel any member. I have a resolution lying on the table of the Clerk. I would like to ask that this Convention act on that resolution so that we may obtain an official opinion from the attorney general on that question.

CHAIRMAN: Are you asking the senator -- the delegate from the fourth district to yield on this motion?

SAKAKIHARA: Will Senator Heen yield to that motion?

CHAIRMAN: The motion to --

SAKAKIHARA: Then we may act on your motion to rise and report progress and leave to sit again.

HEEN: I am willing to yield but I think it's premature at the present time to ask the attorney general that particular question. I have no particular objection to it. If the committee would like to act on it at this time, I will withdraw my motion for that purpose.

SAKAKIHARA: I now move that the resolution which is now on the Clerk's desk be adopted.

CHAIRMAN: I'll ask the Clerk --

NIELSEN: Point of order. Won't that have to be adopted in the regular session and not in the Committee of the Whole?

CHAIRMAN: Where is the resolution? I believe the point of order is well taken. The resolution is by the Hawaii State Constitutional Convention.

NIELSEN: I think now it's in order to move to the previous question to recess and ask to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: The delegate from the fourth district had withdrawn. Do you renew your motion?

HEEN: I now renew my motion that this committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

CHAIRMAN: It's been moved and seconded that this committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again. Are you ready for the question? All in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Roll call has been demanded.

KAUHANE: But, Mr. Chairman, haven't you arrived at the decision before you put the question for roll call?

CHAIRMAN: Pardon?

KAUHANE: Are you debating as to whether the ayes or the noes prevail?

CHAIRMAN: I saw at least ten hands go up demanding roll call.

KAUHANE: No, prior to that. The vote was put. The ayes had spoken, the nays have spoken. Are you deliberating as to whether or not the nays prevailed or are you somewhat in doubt?

CHAIRMAN: I'm in doubt.

AKAU: Point of information. Could you tell me, please, what the value would be in the Committee of the Whole; or not in the Committee of the Whole, for this next action. I'd like that explained. Perhaps I'm naive.

CHAIRMAN: I'm sorry. I don't quite understand your question.

AKAU: What value, I'd like to just have some clarification, what value would it be one way or another to sit as a Committee of the Whole or not. I don't understand why. I'd like to know why.

CHAIRMAN: We've already progressed in considering this matter and we're not in a position to make a report to the Convention, a complete report, because there has been discussion about considering the amendments offered to the resolution. Clerk will call the roll on the motion to rise and report progress and ask leave to report again.

Ayes, 18 (Ashford, Doi, Heen, Ihara, Kage, Kawahara, Kawakami, Lee, Mau, Mizuha, Nielsen, Sakakihara, Serizawa, C. Silva, St. Sure, J. Trask, Yamamoto, Yamauchi. Noes, 43. Not voting, 2 (Luiz, F. Silva).

CHAIRMAN: The motion to rise, report progress and beg leave to sit again, or in other words, the motion to recess has been defeated.

WOOLAWAY: As a delegate of this Convention, it seems to me that the sole question before this body is nothing more than whether Mr. Silva as a delegate to this assembly has placed this body in disrepute with the body of the Congress of the United States whom we will ask to ratify the Constitution of the forty-ninth state and therefore, I move the previous question.

HEEN: I rise to a point of information. It seems to me that we have a motion pending, a motion made by Delegate Anthony to the effect that the amended resolution be further amended by deleting from that amended resolution the words, "and this Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950." That offer to amend along those lines was seconded. Therefore, there is a motion pending.

KING: I rose to a point of information. Was Mr. Anthony's motion seconded?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is not clear on that. Mrs. Clerk, was that motion to amend seconded?

KAM: I admire Mr. Garner Anthony's remarks, but Mr. Silva's refusing to testify before the UnAmerican Activities has done this Convention a great harm; and I believe that by refusing to testify has done each and every delegate a great harm. I, therefore, amend Garner Anthony's motion - - to table his motion.

CHAIRMAN: You move to table the motion to amend?

KAM: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: Incidentally, the Chair in the meantime has ascertained that that motion to amend offered by the delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Anthony, was duly seconded.

KING: I second the motion to table the amendment. I'd like to state the reason. It is not often a good idea to second a motion to table, but it seems to me the resolution does embody the two thoughts, some of the delegates lay more stress on one than on the other. Some of the delegates feel that the behavior of Mr. Silva before the UnAmerican Activities Committee was sufficient grounds or is sufficient grounds to disqualify him from holding a seat in this Convention. Others feel that his attitude towards this Convention may be the prevailing factor. This resolution embodies both conditions, and those who would vote for it on one ground and not the other may do so with a clear conscience, and the other, the corollary is true. Those who did not wish to support one stand are free to support the others. It seems to me the resolution as drafted embodies the sentiment of this Convention and I believe the amendment should not be accepted.

HEEN: I'd like to ask the delegate who has just spoken whether or not he will yield to a question.

KING: Yes, of course.

HEEN: The question is this. I would like to have you point out in the record whether or not there is anything in the evidence tending to show that Delegate Frank G. Silva has been guilty of conduct contumacious towards the Convention itself.

C. SILVA: I rise to a point of order.

HEEN: In other words - -

CHAIRMAN: I recognize the delegate from Kohala.

C. SILVA: There's a point there, Senator Heen. A motion has been made and seconded to table. Unless Mr. King withdraws his motion to second, I'm afraid we can't have any debate.

HEEN: I don't think there was any second.

C. SILVA: Mr. King seconded the motion.

KING: I seconded the motion, but I - -

HEEN: To table?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair's understanding was that the delegate from the fifth district yielded for the purpose of a question.

KING: I withdraw my second temporarily in order to yield for a question. If the delegate from the fourth district has completed his query, may I ask him, may I reply by asking the question, does he include in that question the remarks of or the statement of Delegate Silva submitted to this Convention or this committee this morning?

HEEN: No, I do not. All the statements that he made in defense of himself are not the grounds that were considered by the Convention or by this special committee as grounds for his expulsion. I would like to satisfy my own mind as to whether or not there is evidence to the effect that he has been guilty of conduct contumacious to the Convention itself. If someone can state those facts, I think it would then support the final action to be taken by the Convention if that action is to expel the delegate.

KING: If I may answer the question since it was directed to me. I consider the second statement made by Delegate Silva to the committee and submitted to the Convention by the committee as an appendix of its report is contumacious towards this Convention. That statement reads in several instances, language which I consider contumacious towards this Convention. Now if that does not satisfy Senator Heen, I would suggest that the statement he made this morning, and he has been given a second opportunity to be heard since that statement was made, is very contumacious to this Convention.

May I state while I have the floor, I feel that we should not lose ourselves in legal technicalities. The resolution is based on the circumstances as outlined by Delegate Woolaway, and I, therefore, feel that the amendment is unnecessary and would like to remake my second to Mr. Kam's - - Delegate Kam's motion that the amendment be tabled.

ANTHONY: I must disagree with the President as to the statements made by Mr. Silva in the heat and blood and battle of his defense. I don't think that cuts any ice on the issue that's before us. What I do think is important is, here he is an officer of this territory, a delegate to this Convention. We have got to go - -

CASTRO: Point of order.

ANTHONY: I'm answering the question that was propounded by - -

CASTRO: There is second to - -

CHAIRMAN: I'll recognize the delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Castro. State your point.

CASTRO: There was a second to Mr. Kam's motion, and I have not heard that the seconder has yielded to my colleague, the delegate.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion before the floor to table the motion to amend, and that takes precedence. The point is well taken.

ANTHONY: Will the second yield to an explanation of Senator Heen's position?

KING: In order not to prevent anybody from speaking, I am willing to yield. But I would like to say the question was directed to me and not to the delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Anthony, and I answered the question as well as I could. Now, if Delegate Anthony wishes to complete the answer for the satisfaction of Senator Heen - - Delegate Heen, it's perfectly agreeable to me and I withdraw my amendment temporarily.

CHAIRMAN: Withdraw your second?

KING: My second.

CHAIRMAN: Very well, Mr. Anthony, you have the floor.

ANTHONY: That's what I would like to endeavor to do. The delegate to my left here wants to know what is the contumacious conduct before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee. It is simply this. We are drafting a Constitution. This committee is duly authorized by the laws of the United States to conduct an investigation. It has come down here to conduct an investigation on the charges of alleged subversive activities. He, as a witness, has been subpoenaed duly to testify before that committee and he has refused to do so. That, in my judgement, casts a shadow over this Convention. That is bringing this Convention in ill-repute throughout the nation. That is sufficient basis for our dear friend Senator Butler to announce in the headlines of the afternoon paper that this is a communist infested community. In other words, his very conduct in failing to appear before that UnAmerican Activities Committee is bringing us in disrepute. It is jeopardizing the very thing that we are set out to do here, and I say that alone is sufficient for us to hold him guilty of contumacious conduct.

Now, he has chosen to stand on what may, after a legal battle, turn out to be his constitutional rights, but he has some obligations in addition to his constitutional rights, and those obligations are to the people of this community. I think that if he places his loyalty to his I. L. W. U. and his insistence upon his own constitutional rights above the welfare of this entire community, so that he has brought us in public disgrace, so to speak, that that is a basis for this resolution. That alone.

CHAIRMAN: Does the Chair understand Mr. Anthony, that he is now withdrawing his amendment?

KING: No, Delegate Kam made an amendment and I seconded that amendment - -

CHAIRMAN: No, I meant the - - KING: - - I second the motion to table Delegate Anthony's amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Well, I'm asking Mr. Anthony if by his statement he is now withdrawing his motion to amend the amended resolution.

ANTHONY: I am not.

CHAIRMAN: Very well.

ANTHONY: I want to put it on the single ground of his conduct. I don't care what the language is that you use, but he has been charged with what he did before or failed to do before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, not what he's done here.

CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Mr. Anthony.

KING: I've yielded twice, Mr. Chairman. It seems to me that we should continue the procedure - -

CHAIRMAN: Do you now second the motion - -

KING: I now second Mr. Kam's motion to table the amendment offered by Delegate Anthony.

FUKUSHIMA: May I ask the President to yield a third time?

KING: I'm unable to deny my colleague, Delegate Fukushima's request and I do withdraw the amendment temporarily, withdraw the second.

CHAIRMAN: You yield again?

KING: Yes, sir.

CHAIRMAN: Mr. Fukushima, you have the floor.

FUKUSHIMA: I'm also inclined to agree with Delegate Heen and Delegate Anthony. I feel that the conduct of Delegate Silva is contumacious conduct before and towards the UnAmerican Activities Committee. However, I do not feel that his conduct towards this Convention is such a conduct as to authorize this Convention to expel him. Whatever he said before this Convention in the heat of battle, as has been aptly put, would have been done by any of us put to a defense. All these remarks about we being the stooges of the Big Five, et cetera, has no bearing whatsoever before this Convention, and if we know for ourselves deep in our conscience that we are not, what shadow of clouds did he put upon us. I ask at this time from the delegate from the fifth district to withdraw his motion to table.

CASTRO: Would the President yield further?

CHAIRMAN: I should have recognized the President first.

KING: May I state this is the last time I'm going to yield.

CHAIRMAN: This is the last time.

KING: Yes.

CASTRO: In my estimation, with all due respect to the attorneys of great ability here, the debate in the last few moments is the jabberwocky of jurisprudence. I submit to you this one final point. On April the eighteenth at approximately half past eleven in the morning, the Convention adopted the report of this special committee wherein the schedule of its further activities was clear to all, including Mr. Silva and the public. The plea on the part of Mr. Silva's counsel that this statement which has been put in our hands this afternoon has been written in the heat of battle, and the sad story about the running and the driving of the automobile, I, as an individual with very little background in the laws of evidence, find very hard to believe, because I am aware, as I think every delegate in this room is, that Mr. Silva has been in contact with his counsel in all of the waking hours of the 48 since the time that this report was accepted by the Convention. I submit then, that the contumacious conduct towards this Constitutional Convention, if the gentlemen find it difficult to find in any other document, is found here in this last document, this last statement. Now I believe this as an individual who is more interested possibly than many in seeing that Frank Silva gets a break. But I would like to see us get to the heart of this problem and quit quibbling. I would like to have the President now second and call for the vote.

KING: I now second the motion of Delegate Kam.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved and seconded that we table the motion to amend the amended resolution. The effect of the motion to amend the amended resolution offered by the delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Anthony, is to delete from the amended resolution any contemptuous conduct towards the Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950.

DELEGATE: Roll call.

CHAIRMAN: Roll call has been demanded. How many desire the roll call?

WIST: Point of order. Did you state that correctly? As I got it you stated it exactly opposite of the delegate from fourth's position.

CHAIRMAN: The delegate from the fourth, as I understand it, moved to amend the amended resolution by deleting therefrom the words, "and this Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950," which means that the resolution would show no contumacious conduct towards this Convention. The motion to table, if carried, would defeat that amendment. If defeated, we will then vote on the amendment. Is that clear?

The ayes and noes have been demanded. Mrs. Clerk, will you call the roll?

DELEGATE: Aye is to table?

CHAIRMAN: Aye is to table.

Ayes, 33. Noes, 28 (Akau, Anthony, Ashford, Bryan, Doi, Fukushima, Heen, Ihara, Kage, Kam, Kawakami, Kellerman, Lee, Mau, Mizuha, Nielsen, Noda, Okino, Roberts, Sakai, Sakakihara, Serizawa, Shimamura, C. Silva, St. Sure, J. Trask, Yamamoto, Yamauchi). Not voting, 2 (Luiz, F. Silva).

CHAIRMAN: The motion to table is carried.

We now have before the committee the amended resolution which has been duly moved and seconded, the motion being that we rise, when we rise to report, we recommend the passage of the resolution in the amended form, which I will now ask the Clerk to read before we proceed to the question.

CLERK: Resolution.

Resolved, that Frank G. Silva, by reason of his contumacious conduct before and toward the UnAmerican Activities Committee of the House of Representatives and this Constitutional Convention of Hawaii of 1950, is hereby declared disqualified and unfit to sit as a member of this Convention and that he be and is hereby expelled; that his seat be declared vacant; and the governor be requested to fill the vacancy in the manner provided by law.

CHAIRMAN: You have heard the motion; it's been duly seconded. Are you ready for the question?

WIST: I'd like to call attention to one sentence that appears on page 3 of the report submitted by Frank G. Silva to the special committee and which was in the hands of this body yesterday before it acted on the resolution or on the report of this special committee. And that sentence is, "Every member who votes to refuse me the right to serve those who elected me will live to regret this action." I raise the question as to whether that is or is not contumacious.

C. SILVA: Maybe I won't live that long, so I'm not too worried about that.

ANTHONY: I am addressing myself to the resolution. The question is whether or not the resolution shall be recommended out by this committee, as I understand it.

CHAIRMAN: In the amended form, as just now read by the Clerk.

ANTHONY: In the amended form. What I want to call to the attention of this body is the fact that Frank G. Silva is not being tried here by reason of his misbehavior in this house. He has said a lot of things; he said it to the committee, and I might say he was very bitter to the committee at times, despite our impartiality and fair treatment of him. But the simple fact remains is that we have not charged him with that. Now, are you going to vote on something that the man has never been charged with? All you've heard is the statement of his lawyer to the effect that - -

C. SILVA: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

C. SILVA: There is nothing before the house as yet. That question has been answered; those that voted no agreed with Mr. Anthony; those that voted aye have a different point of view. I would just like to - -

ANTHONY: Am I out of order, Mr. Chairman? If so, I'll sit down.

CHAIRMAN: I believe you are.

ANTHONY: Mr. Chairman, is debate on this resolution foreclosed?

MAU: Absolutely.

CHAIRMAN: I understood you to be debating on the question that the house has just voted on, namely, your amendment.

ANTHONY: Not at all. I am addressing myself as to whether or not the resolution should pass.

CHAIRMAN: Very well.

ANTHONY: Those who may have voted against my amendment may still vote against this resolution.

CHAIRMAN: Proceed, then.

ANTHONY: What I am calling attention to now, is what I consider a basic defect in the charge. Now you can say all you want that this is legal mumbo-jumbo, but under our system of law, a man is charged with certain definite things. You don't - -

KAUHANE: I rise to a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point.

KAUHANE: I believe that the question now raised by the delegate from the fourth district has been answered, that is, by the vote that has already been taken. If I am correct, the same subject matter cannot be brought up again once it's been defeated by a vote that was taken. Therefore, the delegate from the fourth district is not in proper order at this time to repeat or have any inference to the vote that was taken which defeated the purpose of his amendment.

CHAIRMAN: Unfortunately the question, the subject matter of the delegate's argument, applies to both. As he stated, those that felt that it should have been amended may now feel that they shouldn't vote for the resolution in the amended form. I will rule that Mr. Anthony is still in order.

ANTHONY: If I may continue then without further interruption for a minute.

CHAIRMAN: I can't guarantee that, but proceed.

ANTHONY: The difficulty with voting on this resolution is that Frank Silva has never been charged with any misbehavior before this house. He has been charged by this house of doing something outside of this house, and I say, therefore, we should not adopt this resolution having as our basis something that is done within the house, something that he's never been charged with, he's never even had a hearing on that.

KAUHANE: I again rise with a point of order.

CHAIRMAN: State your point of order.

KAUHANE: My point has been stated heretofore, and Mr. Anthony is still repeating the statement where a vote was already taken in defeat of the amendment that he had offered.

CHAIRMAN: He is now trying to defeat the resolution.

KAUHANE: He is now trying to take up and devolve himself around the subject matter that has already been acted upon by a vote.

TAVARES: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN: The question is moot. Mr. Anthony has yielded the floor. I now recognize the delegate from the fourth district, Mr. Tavares.

TAVARES: It seems to me that the delegate from the fourth district rose in opposition to the motion now, is in error. If, as he contends, this resolution in this form charges Mr. Silva with something more than the conduct before the UnAmerican Activities Committee, then he is thereby admitting that it is a charge against Mr. Silva for the other activities before this Convention. Yet in the same breath, he says we haven't charged him. He says we have charged him for one purpose but we haven't charged him for another. I submit that that is an inconsistent statement in itself. If it is two charges, Mr. Silva was given a second opportunity to answer them and through his counsel and he has availed himself of that opportunity. So that if there are two charges here, he has had the American opportunity to defend himself against both charges; and, therefore, he has had everything coming to him. I submit that the objections of the delegate are not well taken.

PHILLIPS: I would like to speak in support of what the delegate from the fourth district just said, insofar as Frank Silva made the statement to the Convention that if they were to apologize - - I mean if they would put him back in the Convention, then he would apologize for having said what he said.

A. TRASK: I am wrestling with the thoughts that Mr. Anthony and Judge Heen have issued, but it comes down again to what has been in my mind for some time, namely, this. Frank Silva is in a very unhappy position. He is seeking to serve two masters. He is an official of the I. L. W. U. on one hand; he is a government official on the other. It's a question of a choice, and he's made his choice.

What is contumacious conduct but disregard of the requirements of rightful authority. Is the Congress of the United States rightful authority? The right for legislative committees to investigate to promote the welfare of the people is a time-honored right and it won't be loosely disregarded by any sane and respectable citizen. If Frank Silva were not an official of this Convention, we would not be concerned with him, would we? It is only as he has official capacity as a governmental representative that we are concerned. We are mightily concerned; we are gravely concerned; we are critically concerned. We ask him, as the delegate from Kohala said, to go before the committee and purge himself. He has defied the order of this rightfully constituted body. He persists in his defiance of authority. He is in a difficult position. He cannot serve two masters. He should make up his mind and if he doesn't make up his mind, it's our grave responsibility to make up his mind for him. But he did say, all that he is and all that he hopes to be he owes to the union. The people of Hawaii, as far as he is concerned, in his official capacity to obey lawful authority, may be altogether disregarded. We do not feel that his conduct is such that it can be condoned and condoned any longer.

And so I say, that this intentional disobedience to the suggestion and order of this Convention to purge himself before the UnAmerican Activities Committee is a defiance of this Convention and certainly we shall not tolerate this; we shall not stand and have another delegate attack the integrity of this body [and subject it] to public odium and ridicule. Throughout the nation this Convention is in the spotlight of ridicule and odium. We shouldn't delay action on such a vital issue. I move the question.

MAU: I want to know so that I can vote on this last motion on the floor concerning this resolution. The second delegate at large from the fourth district did not say outright whether there are two charges in this resolution, but he did state that if there are two charges, that an opportunity had been given to Delegate Frank Silva to answer it this afternoon. As a lawyer, many times he has asked for time to prepare his case. If there are two charges in this resolution, then have we given the man due process, given him enough time to prepare? We gave him a half-hour on this charge. Is that sufficient? If you say there are two charges in this resolution, and I believe as drafted there are two charges, contumacious conduct before the UnAmerican Activities Committee and the same type of conduct mentioned against this Convention. So there are two charges, in my judgment, and I want to know, if that is so, whether or not we have afforded the delegate who is in question a fair opportunity to defend himself on the second charge.

TAVARES: I don't like to speak too long but since the question has been addressed to me, I'm glad to answer it. As I understand it, the amended resolution was amended before Mr. Silva spoke, before he and his counsel had the opportunity to speak. They were shown the charge, they had the opportunity to read it, and as I recall, the attorney for Mr. Silva addressed himself as if there were two charges. He actually defended his client against both charges, so that he had that opportunity to do that.

Now, the delegate says that the charge is not - - apparently he says it's ambiguous. But if the delegate wants to be technical, then the first charge is defective also. If the first charge is good enough to vote on by reason of his contumacious conduct before and towards the UnAmerican Activities Committee, without specifying it, why isn't the charge that his contumacious conduct before this Convention is also sufficient. There was no misunderstanding of what was meant as far as Mr. Silva and his counsel were concerned. They addressed themselves to every possible charge that could be raised and defended themselves against it. So that I say that they have had their day in court, they have fully defended themselves against all possible charges that we have raised on this floor. And therefore, I think when we vote we are not depriving him of any opportunity to be heard.

ASHFORD: May I add my five cents worth of free advice which is usually worth just what's paid for it. If Mr. Silva had appeared without counsel, I would be wholeheartedly in accord with the delegate at large from the fourth district whose motion to delete a part of the resolution was defeated. I was opposed to the form of the resolution before the appearance of Mr. Silva and his counsel. But his counsel appeared and made no objection upon that grounds and if there was any objection, it was clearly waived.

CHAIRMAN: There is a motion - -

KAM: I second Delegate Trask's motion.

CHAIRMAN: On the previous question?

KAM: That's right.

CHAIRMAN: It has been moved, the previous question. Are you ready for the question? Does everybody understand the motion that is before the house? All in favor say "aye." Contrary minded.

The motion, that when we rise and report progress we recommend the adoption of the resolution in the amended form, it has been carried.

The Chair will now entertain a motion to - -

PORTEUS: I rise for a point of information. Did not the motion to the previous question carry?

CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

PORTEUS: And is not now the motion before the house to rise, report progress, etc. ?

CHAIRMAN: The Chair is getting groggy up here. I correct myself. Are you ready now for the question?

H. RICE: The motion was that when we rise we recommend the passage of the resolution. Right?

CHAIRMAN: That's the motion that's now before the - -

H. RICE: We recommend the passage of the resolution.

CHAIRMAN: That's correct, and that's the motion that's now before the house. Are you ready for the question? All in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. It's carried by ayes.

The Chair will now entertain a motion to rise and report.

DELEGATE: I so move.

DELEGATE: Second it.

CHAIRMAN: All those in favor say "aye." Contrary minded. Carried.
